CHAPTER VI
IN SILK ATTIRE.

"He's only a boy," said Cynthia, in common justice.

Her ladyship grinned maliciously. "Villains are made when they're young, my girl; in fact, they are born so." She was silent for a moment. Then she said meditatively:

"His father, Spencer, is the best of a bad lot; for he's an open scoundrel and ruffian, and doesn't wear a mask; perhaps he is too much of a fool to do so."

She mused again, then with a movement of irritation she burst out with: "Goodness, child, don't stand there staring at me like a Gorgon! Here, go and find Parsons and tell her to take you somewhere, to a circus, if there is such a thing; she'll know there. Go, go!"

Later in the afternoon, Percy, having distinguished himself at the Young Men's Philosophical Society went slowly to the parental home.

It was one of the smallest and dingiest of houses in the square; in fact, it was just round the corner of a street leading out of it, but he and his father always gave their address as Eaton Square.

He let himself in with a latchkey went down a narrow passage, and opened the door of a room. The scent of a strong cigar issued out to meet him. Wherever Lord Spencer was there also were the acrid fumes of a strong cigar, and generally an odor of equally strong whiskey.

His lordship was reclining on an old and battered sofa; he was in his shirt sleeves, he wore breeches and garters, and held a sporting paper in his hand.

He looked across between a respectable groom and a trainer. He had once been handsome and was still good-looking, but a long course of strong cigars and equally strong spirits had told upon the human face divine and bestowed upon it a dissolute appearance.

He turned over on his side as his son entered yawned and said:

"You're back then, Percy. Been to see the old Griffin? All teeth and claws, I suppose, as usual. Had your lunch, I suppose? By George, and paid for it, I should imagine! I would rather take a meal along with a shrew than with the Griffin."

"Aunt Gwen was not alone," said Percy, going to the window and looking out at the view with a thoughtful and serious air. "There was a young girl there, Cynthia Drayle."

"Cynthia Drayle?" said Lord Spencer, with another yawn. "Drayle! That must be Emily's child. What's she like, Percy?"

"Rather a nice sort of girl," replied Percy, in the tone of one addressing an equal in age. "She's pretty, but—er—er—quite rough and uncouth."

"She would be," commented Lord Spencer musingly. "Emily married beneath her, I believe. She's come on a visit, I suppose?"

"No; she has come to stay," said Percy quietly.

Lord Spencer swung his legs from the sofa and sat bolt upright.

"What!" he exclaimed. "You don't mean to say—you don't mean to tell me that the old Griffin has adopted her? Percy, this is serious! This will put your nose out of joint, my boy. Why, this beastly girl will come between you and the old woman's money! The old harridan! She has done it to spite us. By George, Percy you'll have to look out!"

A faint smile curled the lad's lips and his eyebrows went up.

"Yes, I shall have to look out, sir," he said, with such significance, with such a cold-blooded, evil expression in his light eyes, that his father stared at him and continued to stare until Percy sauntered from the window and out of the room.

CHAPTER VII
AFTER THREE YEARS.

One morning some three years later a young girl ran down the broad stairs of Lady Westlake's house in Belgrave Square.

She wore a perfectly fitting riding habit, a regulation bowler hat, and carried a gold-mounted and jeweled whip in her hand. She looked radiant, and she hummed the air of the latest in drawing-room ballads.

From the corridor above Parsons glanced over and looked at her with a loving air of worship and proprietorship, as if she had made her.

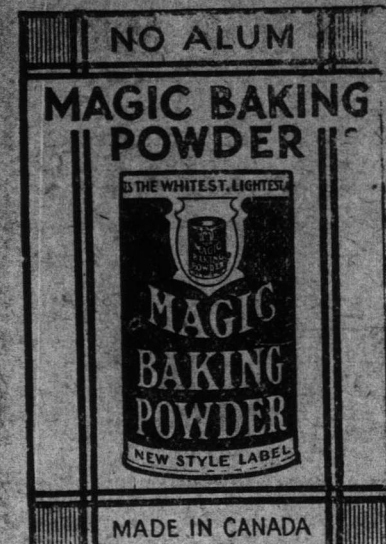

It was difficult to recognize, in this glorious specimen of young womanhood, the Cynthia Drayle who had sobbed her way to London as Lady Westlake's ward.

But Time works wonders, especially when such a person as her ladyship has the control of it. Prompted by a sneaking and reluctant fondness for the girl and pride in her beauty and grace, or by a desire to spite and exasperate the Spencer Standishes, Lady Westlake had certainly carried out the promise she had made to Cynthia's father, and had given to Cynthia all those advantages which fall to the lot of a girl of rank and position.

Cynthia had had rather a strenuous time of it; Lady Westlake did not approve of boarding schools, even of the most aristocratic and exclusive kind and, therefore, masters had been engaged to educate the girl in accordance with her ladyship's views.

To general knowledge the Griffiths attached little or no importance.

"It doesn't matter how badly a lady spells," she had informed Cynthia, "so that she can say what she wants to say, and say it like a lady. History and geography and all the other kinds of things they teach the lower classes in the board schools are of no earthly consequence to you. What does it matter what happened hundreds of years ago? It's what is taking place to-day concerns us. And as to geography, who cares where a place is? you go to those absurd people, Cooks, they find out the place, and give you a ticket. I know nothing of these things; but I have been able to hold my own in the world, and so will you. As a rule, men hate clever, well-educated girls. They are afraid of them, and small blame to 'em. No; what they want for a wife is a girl who can play the piano, talk French, sit a horse as a lady should, preside at the dinner table, and talk commonplace. An intellectual woman is out of it. Men, who are mostly fools, don't want to spend their lives in the company of a superior mind. The maternal woman is out of it, too, though two or three foolish mothers have tried to set the fashion of babies, and brought them into evidence. You can hire a superior nurse, who has gone through a proper training and knows all about children, and you leave them to her, and don't neglect your husband and your friends, and get dowdy and slipshod as the old-fashioned, early Victorian and extremely stupid wife used to do."

So, as Cynthia had no choice in the matter, she devoted herself to music, dancing, French, and riding; and strange to say, she did very well. For she had inherited her father's intelligence, and was suddenly awakened to an eagerness to take advantage of the opportunities offered her; she was also quick to take the tone of her surroundings. And half unconsciously she caught the intonation of voice, the little mannerisms of the aristocratic set to which Lady Westlake belonged.

For instance, she, who was one of the most restless of girls by nature, had acquired the art of standing and sitting still; an art which sounds easy enough unless you have achieved it by practice, or it has come to you by birth and breeding.

During the three years Cynthia had seen her father two or three times. She had paid one visit to Summerleigh, and it must be confessed that she would have found it dull but for her father. Darrel was away.

The place seemed half asleep compared with the rush and ceaseless stir of London; there was nothing to do and she missed the visits of her various professors.

Once or twice her father had come up to see her in Belgrave Square, but his visits had been short ones of a few hours only. He had borne himself with the ease and self-possession which never deserted him, and Lady Westlake had treated him with a kind of amused and tolerant respect; but he hated the life of Belgrave Square and soon set off on his roamings again.

However, he approved of all that had been done for Cynthia, and was grateful.

"It's all going smoothly, my dear Cynthia," he told her. "They are making a young lady of you, and I rather fancy they will turn out quite a superior article. They are doing what I should never have been able to do, and what it is only right I should have done for you; for, after all, you are your mother's child and belong to these people. But, look here, Cynthia, don't let them polish and polish away until there's no heart in you; there's nothing to be something behind a fine lady, and that's the woman."

At this, Cynthia had thrown her arms round her father's neck and hugged him in the old fashion, so that Bradley Drayle had gone away satisfied.

Of Darrel Frayne, her old comrade and playmate, Cynthia had seen and heard nothing—he had been at Sandhurst when she went down to Summerleigh—but she thought of him often. Indeed, the old times she had spent with him were still vivid and precious in her memory.

The other youth, Percy Standish, she saw frequently; he was at Oxford now, quite a promising light there, and paid frequent visits to Belgrave Square during the vacations. He had grown into a handsome and striking looking young man, his voice was softer, and, if anything, more musical, and his manner as polished and ingratiating as ever.

Though Lady Westlake treated him with sarcastic tolerance and spared him no gibe or taunt, she allowed him the run of the house, and Percy met her insolence with his old bland equanimity, and was careful not to forfeit his privileges.

He expressed a profound admiration for Cynthia and paid her devoted attention, and the old Griffin looked on him with an amused grin, which she did not take the trouble to conceal.

Sometimes Cynthia, who was just a young person, took Percy's part, and once she remonstrated with Lady Westlake on her treatment of the young man, for Cynthia was not afraid of the Griffin; but her ladyship had only grinned and shown her teeth.

"You're a little fool," she said. "You don't know the Standishes as well as I do; you don't see Master Percy's little game. He's as cunning as a monkey, and so he's 'hedging,' as his precious father would say, and is making up to you. And he'll get you, if you don't mind. But you'll be a fool if he does. For he's half monkey and half tiger, like all the Standishes. You need to keep both eyes open when you are dealing with them. Beware of Master Percy, my girl!"

Cynthia had blushed a little and laughed a little; for, to her young mind, love-making and marriage seemed a very, very long way off, so far away as not to be worth thinking of.

Besides, she happened not to like Percy Standish, though she had sometimes spoken in his defence.

Kidney Disease and Gravel Caused Keenest Suffering—Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. W. Smith. That disease of the kidneys cause the greatest suffering is well known, and when stone or gravel is formed in the bladder the torture is almost beyond human endurance. The disease should never be allowed to reach this dangerous stage. Pains in the small of the back, pain in smarting when passing water, frequent urination, loss of flesh and weight tell of the need of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to regulate and invigorate the kidneys and restore these organs to health. Mr. W. Smith, Fort Dalhousie, Ont., writes:—"For some years I was afflicted with kidney disease and gravel in its most severe form, having often a stoppage of water, accompanied by the most dreadful agony. As the disease wore on me I became reduced in flesh and passed sleepless nights. No doctor was able to do much for me, and I used many medicines without obtaining more than temporary relief. My attention was directed to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and by using this treatment the disease was eradicated from my system in less than six months. I have gained in weight, sleep well, and feel better than I have for twenty years." Pendulums.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

When we try too hard for some one thing, it occasionally happens that we defeat our purpose by the blind intensity of our desire.

In no direction is this so true as in the bringing up of children.

Over-indulgence is not the only way to spoil a child. Over-intensity in trying to make a child develop desirable qualities sometimes results in making a child go to opposite extremes.

Most of us are pendulums by nature. The more violently we are pushed in one direction, the more violently we ultimately swing in the other.

An acquaintance of mine who is the mother of a very pretty little girl of sixteen, is excessively anxious that her daughter shall be very quiet and refined in her intercourse with the other sex. Of course that is a natural desire for any mother, but in this woman it is a mania and drives her to an excess of severity. She is always scolding this lively little girl for some outburst of her natural vivacity. She is always forbidding her some pleasure in which her companions are freely permitted to join.

And of course the harvest of such severity is ripening for her sad reaping. Her daughter is rapidly growing deceitful. If she cannot have a good time with her friends openly, she will have it secretly. And as everyone knows, the pleasures that must be

NATURE'S LAWS.

Nature's laws are perfect if only we obey them, but disease follows disobedience. Go straight to Nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries there, some of which we can fathom for you. Take the bark of the Wild-cherry tree, with mandarin root, Oregon grape root, stone root, queen's root, bloodroot and soldicea seal root, make a scientific, glyceric extract of them, with just the right proportions, and you have

DOCTOR PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists and pharmacists, many months of hard work experimenting to perfect this vegetable alterative and tonic extract of the greatest efficiency.

Mr. C. W. PAWLEY, of Millsville, Calif., writes: "I wish to tell you that I have used your 'Golden Medical Discovery' in my family for twenty years. We have had a doctor called in but once during that time. I have a family of ten children, all well and hearty, for which, to a great extent, we owe thanks to you and your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Felix', which we use when sick."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

Household Notes.

Never throw a good tailored coat down carelessly if you wish it to preserve its shape.

A bit of cold chicken will make a good sandwich with a leaf of lettuce on pepper grass.

In making tea the pot should be hot before the boiling water is poured on the tea leaves.

Dates and figs are both much improved if thoroughly washed and then allowed to drain.

Sold clothing should be always put in a hamper, preferably away from the sleeping room.

Rice cooked with raisins makes a very palatable, simple dessert served with hard sauce or cream.

Never, when wiping meat, allow it to stand in cold water. The water drains all the juices out.

Nuts when bought ready shelled should be scalded, dried in the oven and put away in glass jars.

Brown bread spread with butter in which paprika has been mixed also makes very good sandwiches.

The perfect kitchen utensils are those of aluminum—easy to keep clean and very light to handle.

To cut thin silk satisfactorily, lay it between two pieces of tissue paper and cut with very sharp scissors.

Two big eyelids worked in the opposite corners of the kitchen towel are better than loops to hang it up by.

Staged Real Duel.

Opera Singers Settle Differences in Third Act of Carmen, One Being Killed.

Madrid, March 22.—The stage of the little theatre at Argamassilla de Alba, in the Province of Ciudad Real, was the scene of a duel of death last night.

The opera was Carmen. The baritone, Pedro, took the part of the Torreador Escamillo, and the tenor, Martinez, filled the role of Don Jose. Between these two singers there was intense rivalry over a love affair, and they resolved to settle their differences with the sword.

They decided, however, to defer the combat until the end of the season. This closed with Carmen last evening, and the audience were horrified when a real duel was interpolated in the third act. The men fought savagely and Martinez received a sword thrust from which he quickly succumbed.

English News Notes

Last in the Air.

A manifesto issued by the British Aerial League points out the grave peril to which the Empire is exposed through the inadequacy of aerial development, and that while Germany has at least ten airships, England possesses the remains of one baby airship and the framework of another.

The Boat Race.

While Oxford won, Cambridge rowed with a longer, cleaner and more virile stroke, and if it had not been for two new men in the boat would have won easily. As it was Cambridge led all the way, but could not respond to the final "spurt."

Anti-Vaccination League.

The seventeenth annual meeting of this League was held recently in London and reported satisfactory progress. One step was that the Board of Education now discouraged any reference to vaccination in the medical inspection of children. Dr. Robert Bell stated that the enormous increase of cancer and the death-rate from that disease, which had gone up 200 per cent. since he began practice, 43 years ago, was due to the enactment of compulsory vaccination. Vaccination had a most prejudicial effect on the after life of vaccinated individuals.

Taste For Needles.

Forty needles have emerged from different parts of the body of a young girl who swallowed a packet of needles in Paris.

England's Poor.

Mr. Philip Snowden gave a dark picture of England's poor in the Commons last month. Members of the House, he said, spent last session nearly £8,000 on wine of 10s. a week for 400 members, double the sum that 2,000,000 families in this country can afford to spend in food; 32 per cent. of the adult men received less than 2s. a week; 22 per cent. of general labourers earned less than 20s. per week. In spite of these conditions there were 700,000 persons in daily receipt of poor-law relief. The purchasing power of wages was 34 per cent. less now than five years ago. Mr. Snowden's remedy was the minimum wage, and the nationalisation of land, railways, mines and other monopolies.

London's Water.

The King opened the new London reservoir on the 15th March. The completion of this wonderful engineering feat makes impossible a drought in East London like that which occurred in 1898. The reservoir holds 3,000 million gallons.

BABY GIRAFFE.

An interesting event occurred at the Zoo last month when a baby giraffe was born. Only three births have been recorded since 1850.

Policewomen.

The proposal of adding policewomen to the force in America is being watched in London by various authorities, and it is anticipated that in the near future uniformed women will be installed in the London Parks and public places for special duty, such as the care of children.

Tariff Reform League.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain handed over to the League £5,700 which had been subscribed by his admirers on his birthday, for the furtherance of its objects—the promotion of Imperial Preference and Tariff Reform.

Parliament's Wane.

The admitted decline of public interest in the doings of the House of Commons was discussed in the House last month, and Mr. Asquith agreed that the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the procedure was desirable. Lord Robert Cecil raised the question.

Prince of Wales.

The Prince was at his first banquet at Buckingham Palace on March 13th. He is now a Lieutenant in the Navy.

Rolling Round the World.

Mr. George Schiller, the American athlete, is making a second attempt to walk around the earth, pushing and rolling a globe which forms his home. If he succeeds he wins a purse of $15,000.

Livingstone Centenary.

This was celebrated by a national demonstration at Royal Albert Hall, with the Archbishop of Canterbury presiding, while earlier in the day a service was held at explorer's grave in Westminster Abbey. The London Missionary Society are raising a special centenary fund with the idea of establishing a Livingstone Memorial Station in Central Africa.

Financial Kite-Flying.

MR. GOODRIDGE'S WARNING TO THE GOVERNMENT.
The reckless financial measures of the Morris Government have alarmed political friends and foes alike, and nothing they have done has undermined their political power to a greater degree. The extraordinary reversal of financial policy as set forth in the two last speeches of the Minister of Finance, is the biggest "give-away" that has ever occurred in the history of budget-making in Newfoundland. Last year, the Minister of Finance declined to assume responsibility for a big and general reduction in taxation as was set before the country in the Manifesto of Sir Edward Morris in 1912. This year he assumes responsibility. Last year he preferred the policy of collecting the taxes on these articles, of having plenty of money for the extravagances of the Government, and for the distribution of surplus in ways which he believed would catch the political support of voters. Last year he laid down the principle that the reduction of taxation should be gradual and not in one fell swoop which was calculated to dislocate trade. This year he sets his words and files traders with dismay and disgust, which even Government supporters in the Legislative Council like Hon. Mr. Winter, do not hesitate to express freely and frankly.

Now what has brought about this reversal of policy? The extravagance and largeness of the previous four years had undoubtedly filled the country with contempt for their rulers. The Government is as unpopular as a government can be. Something had to be done, and the something determined was the carrying out of the Morris pledge to reduce taxation on the tea, sugar, &c., which had been discarded in four budgets and its obsequies performed by Minister Cashin in his Budget speech of 1912. The pledge was retracted in the hope of redeeming somewhat the unpopularity of the Government. The reversal of the policy is political bait to catch votes, and was so regarded at the Sealers' meeting in the T. A. Hall. These voters had their eyes open and characterized the bait as stale and useless to catch votes.
But though useless for this purpose it seriously jeopardises the financial standing of the Colony, as may well be gathered when an experienced and experienced statesman like Mr. Goodridge advises caution and strongly urges the utilization of any surplus, as a Sinking Fund to meet any crisis and to keep up the credit of the Colony. We append the part of Mr. Goodridge's speech in the Legislative Council which bears on this risk.

Hon. Mr. Goodridge—Perhaps I may be excused here in saying that it behoves our Finance Minister to be cautious and remember that severities of our revenue is derived from Customs duties on imports, that about two-fifths of our imports are duty free and comprise to a great extent the necessities of life, and about three-fifths from dutiable goods comprising a great deal of luxuries, and any reverse may be serious as in the event of low seasons luxuries would not be imported to any great extent and the revenues drop off. Every country is liable to such changes and particularly ourselves to a greater extent than others, where our fisheries are the mainstay and so subject to fluctuation. I do not by any means look on the gloomy side. I believe the revenue of the Colony will be kept up and if it falls it will not be for some years. But, I submit that the Minister of Finance should act with great care. I would suggest that the Government invest the surpluses in a sinking fund which would be as a security to debenture holders and to stabilize our credit; if in the future the Colony had to call for a loan.

SPECIAL TO EVENING TELEGRAM.
LONDON, To-day.
A despatch to the Chronicle from Vienna, says that King Nicholas of Montenegro, has resigned chief command of the army besieging Scutari.

LONDON, To-day.
Mrs. Pankhurst, who is on a hunger strike in Holloway Jail and who has been forcibly fed, according to the Express, is in a comatose state. Her condition is considered serious; she has refused food, and resists all efforts to feed her.

HAVANA, To-day.
Rudolph B. Warren, son of Jere Warren, a prominent American sugar planter, died in hospital here from the effects of a pistol wound in the abdomen which he received in a duel with Hannibal Mesa, a member of a wealthy Cuban family. The young men were reputed as rivals for a woman's affections.

PORT OF SPAIN, To-day.
Princess Louise of Schleswig who is making a tour of the West Indies was ceremoniously received upon arrival here and was met by the Governor, Government officials and prominent citizens and escorted by a guard of honour. On account of the period of mourning in the British Court all arrangements for public entertainments have been abandoned.

ST. PETERSBURG, To-day.
Another gross Slav demonstration occurred here to-day, but on this occasion the police did not interfere. The climax was reached when a crowd of fifty thousand appeared before Anichkov Palace, the residence of the Dowager Empress, and sang the National Anthem, and displayed banners inscribed with "Down with Austria, and Scutari for Montegrins."

WASHINGTON, To-day.
Setting aside precedents more than a century old, President Wilson will deliver the first Legislative message in person and announces his intention to go upon the floor of the House, convened for Tuesday, here to give that body his views on the tariff. This decision of the President evoked much comment among Congressional leaders. He will be the first President of the United States to appear officially before either branch of Congress in a deliberative session since John Adams in the first few years of the last century.

LONDON, To-day.
Rioting suffragettes held a meeting in Hyde Park, which becomes regular Sunday afternoon, on Sunday. A crowd which numbered 15,000 became hostile, and only a big force of police prevented the rioters from handling the women roughly. Two suffragettes talked half an hour, but were unable to make themselves heard above the uproar of horns and hooting. Misses of various kinds were thrown, and Miss Brackenbury was struck in the face. The mounted police finally escorted the suffragettes from Hyde Park, while the police on foot kept the crowd from following. Similar disturbances occurred at Wimbledon Common, where Ann Kenny attempted to speak, but was howled down.

BAY CITY, Oregon, To-day.
Twenty-two men, including the ship's captain, President of the Wrecking Company at Portland, and representatives of Marine Underwriters were trapped in the hold of the German ship 'Mimi' which capsized off the Beach here, after having been hauled off a reef on which she had been fast for months. How many perished is not known. A heavy sea is pounding the wreck, and life-savers refuse to attempt rescue until it moderates. Life-savers were camped on the Beach last night watching for a chance to reach the wreck. The 'Mimi' was in ballast for Valparaiso, and left here on Feb. 1st. She was hauled on the rocks at high tide and at last it was determined to take her into deep water. Once she was anchored off the Beach, when a rising wind and sea whirled her over.

CETTINE, To-day.
The little kingdom of Montenegro has thrown down the gauntlet to the six great Powers, and declines to yield to the demand of the Powers to abandon attempts to gain possession of Scutari, has announced there will be no departure from the attitude which conforms to it, and that the State war existing between allies and Turkey. The international fleet comprising France, Germany, Britain, and the United States, is blockading Montenegro port of Anzivari, there include warships of Austria-Hungary, Italy, Britain, Germany and France; Russia is not represented by warship but has acquiesced in naval demonstration. On Saturday the British Admiral sent the following message:—Montenegro, Premier Dr. Tomassavics, I have the honour to inform you that the international fleet is assembled in Montenegro waters as a protest against non-fulfilment of the wishes of the Great Powers. I desire to call Your Excellency's attention to the presence of the fleet as a proof that the Great Powers are acting in concert and request their wishes be fulfilled without delay. Please inform me immediately that if your government is ready to carry out the wishes of the Great Powers. To this the Montenegrin Premier replied in a note expressing regret at the presence of the fleet which he considered a violation of neutrality proclaimed by the Powers at the beginning of the war and detrimental to Montenegro. The Premier continued, despite the pressure which the presence of fleet implies there will be no departure from the attitude which conforms to and necessitates state of war existing between the allies and Turkey. A brigade of Austrian troops from Cattaro have been manoeuvring near the Montenegrin boundary, customary notices have not been given the Montenegrin Government Austria's action is considered unfriendly and menacing.

The Coal Seams.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—I was an interested listener at Mr. Howley's lecture on the coal fields of Newfoundland, and have since been expecting to see some correspondence in the press relative to the same, but beyond a short note in the different newspapers the following day and a brief letter from some citizen, which appeared in the Daily News, no further notice has been taken of what should be to us a burning question (pun not intended). To my mind Mr. Howley's lecture appeared to be a very lame one and entirely lacking in scientific interest beyond the mere elementary statements with which the lecture was introduced. The genesis of the coal fields was intentionally omitted, for what reason it is hard to say. I am not going to impute any ulterior motive to Mr. Howley's action in that respect, but I cannot help remarking that the leaving out of that the only truly interesting part, robbed the lecture of its chief interest and to a solution of the vexed problem. Of course nobody doubts the gentleman's word, when he tells us of the existence of certain outcrops and seams of coal as indicated by drill cores, we are willing to believe him without a shadow of a doubt, and in fact he has the proof of their existence, but whether they are extensive enough to be properly worked is another question. Why did the Reids abandon the working of the coal seams near Grand Lake? is a question that should be answered and answered plainly. The abandonment of the work by the Reids has given a terrible setback to the work of developing our coal areas, and a complete and satisfactory reason should be assigned for it. Asks of his opinion on this matter, Mr. Howley said that, well, he did not like to express himself, but went so far as to say that he was sorry the Reids ever had anything to do with it. It may be that the seams would not pay to mine, but that does not affect the position I have taken, and that is an explanation is due to us, why that information is withheld from the public is a matter that deserves ventilation. If we have workable coal seams it is time that we knew it, and if we have not, well, it is time that we knew that also. Morris has done nothing in the matter since he assumed control, though he promised to have the question settled forever, and unless I am mistaken, not a single report has issued from the Geological office since 1909. Mr. Downey, member for St. George's, explains an excuse for Morris's non-fulfillment of his promise, that the coal seams of Newfoundland, be they ever so rich, could never, on account of their position, be worked at a profit. There is evidently something fishy here and should be cleared up. Let us return to Mr. Howley and his lecture and hear further what that gentleman had to say. A very important question was put to the lecturer by Mr. Gosling. That gentleman wanted to know if the stratigraphical position of our coal seams was chronologically equal to that of the Cape Breton coal seams, or in plainer words, if the rocks of our coal series were the same as those of Cape Breton. He answered, undoubtedly, they are the same. I cannot at all agree with Mr. Howley as to that, and now he came to make that statement is a puzzle, when it is considered that in our museum are exhibited fossils which prove the contrary. The coal fields of Cape Breton are by many geologists, referred to the Permian system, which came in after the close of the carboniferous period. Fossil evidence goes to prove that in Newfoundland are only the very lowest members of the carboniferous series, which would leave a gap of eight or ten or more thousand feet between the two, leaving out nearly the whole of the carboniferous strata. Mr. Howley exhibits among other fossils, certain reeds or calamites. These calamites died out in the Barren or middle Coal Measures, and existed from the base of the outshell in the upper Devonian or Old Red Sandstone period, which would prove my assertion that in this country we have only the lowest members of the order. He also showed a fern, but as he did not tell us the specific name of it, and as I have not examined it, it is impossible for me to say to what group it may belong, but as it is found with calamites, it is likely that fern which is known as sphaeropteris and belongs to the older strata with the calamites. Likely enough Mr. Howley made the false statement without due reflection, and in the quietest hours that followed his lecture, must have seen the mistake. I speak of it here with the sole motive in view of correcting a very wrong impression that must certainly have gotten abroad among the earnest listeners at that lecture, especially as the statement was made in reply to a direct question by Mr. Gosling. As the lecture is to be published in full very shortly, I will leave further comment till we will have had a chance to see the details in print. It is to be hoped that the geology will not be omitted, as that is very important. Maybe it would be well to publish the log of the boring operations near Grand Lake, at the same time. OBITUARY.

MRS. E. A. FENELON.

Yesterday morning, a figure well-known in the charitable and philanthropic circles of St. John's, passed away in the person of Mrs. E. A. Fenelon, widow of the late Hon. Maurice Fenelon. The deceased lady was eldest daughter of the late Wm. Kitchen, Esq., and last survivor of a very large family, had reached the ripe age of seventy-nine years. Some few decades ago there was no more ardent church worker than Mrs. Fenelon; she took a most prominent part in the bazaars for the Christian Brothers, St. Patrick's Hall, Belvedere Orphanage, and her purse was ever open to any worthy cause whether of a public or private nature. She also held the Secretaryship of the St. Vincent de Paul Society for many years. After her husband's death, she spent some time in England, where her son, John Fenelon, was studying for the Bar. Of late her weakening health necessitated her withdrawal from public functions, but the kindness of her disposition remained unimpaired to the end. Sunday morning the final summons came, and fortified by the rites of the Church, without pain or struggle, she breathed her last in the arms of her son, to whom we tender our respectful sympathy in his great bereavement.

Sagona's Fine Trip. Bonaventure With 13,000

The S. S. Sagona, Capt. Samuel B. Winsor, who brought the Fogota in loaded first last year, arrived here this morning from the icefields with what is virtually a load of prime young harps mixed with about 1,200 beaters (old seals). The ship has the weight of 24,000 prime seals and has room only for about 1,000 more. She struck the first patch on the 15th of March about 75 miles E. N. E. of the Grois Islands with the Stephano and Newfoundland and secured 17,000 harps after about two weeks work. A few days after the ship struck the beaklammers and killed 1,500 mostly with the gun. The men say they would have secured more but that the Bellaventure "cut them out." Except for colds all the crew are well. We congratulate Capt. Winsor on his success.

Freight Embargo. Curliana.

Over a Hundred Cars Side-tracked Between North Sydney and the Narrows. North Sydney, April 3.—The Bruce arrived yesterday at 4 p.m. bringing forty-five passengers. She sailed again at midnight with passengers and a quantity of mail. The new steamer Lintrose is expected to leave St. John's at 2 p.m. to-day and should arrive here about 9 o'clock. The Bruce, it is expected, will go in dry dock after the Lintrose has begun her regular sailing schedule. Large Amount of Mid. Freight. There will be plenty to do for the stevedores on the Newfoundland service during the next few months. At present there is no less than 413 cars of freight sidetracked between here and Christmas Island awaiting shipment to Newfoundland. The embargo has not yet been raised although an occasional shipment is being sent through. A few days ago two carloads of cattle were shipped by the Harris Abattoir Co., of Sydney to a St. John's firm. As soon as the Gulf is sufficiently free of ice, the Reid Co. will no doubt place every available ship on the route between here and Port aux Basques to relieve the congestion.—Sydney Record.

Pirates.

Some pirates are found on the ships; they hold up the tourists for tips; extending a hand from the time they leave land till the passengers go with their grips. Some pirates are in hotels, responding to tinkling of bells; they touch you for plunks for manhandling your trunks, for showing guests up to their cells. A pirate's in charge of the lift; his notions are eager and swift if you hand him two bits; if you don't, he'll throw his, and upward will suddenly drift. A pirate's at hand when you eat, and if you don't tip and repeat, he'll see that you tea is as sour as can be, and make sure that you vinegar's sweet. Trap pirates for victims await, and if you would travel in state, you'll dig up your purses (with a few, smothered curse) and shell out the pieces of eight. Alas! We are such easy marks! In taverns, on railways, in bars, we stand for it all, with our backs to the wall and hand out our coin to the sharks! Some day we must rise in our might, and for our palladiums fight; we must cleave to the lips this foul monster of tips, and put all the pirates to flight.

Large Funeral.—The funeral of the late John Clarke, which took place yesterday afternoon, was largely attended. The Masonic fraternity, of which deceased was a member, were present in a body. The remains were enclosed in a handsome casket and interment was at the General Protestant Cemetery.

CAUSE OF DEFECTIVE DISTRIBUTION.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Will you please publish this letter as it points out an error in our city water supply system, which is the cause of defective distribution here. My letter, calling attention to hydraulic distribution, appeared in one of our city papers about sixteen years ago, after I had first acquainted the Municipal Council that the whole trouble of their not being able to keep the water constant up to the higher levels, all the time, was on account of hydraulic errors in the water system; for our water supply was then more than ample for city needs. Since that time our city water supply has been increased and improved, and it was generally reported that after improvements would be completed there would be an end to all future water distribution defects.

This is the first winter after improvements to our water system have been finished, and to hear again this winter the complaint of former winters, of "no water to the higher levels," was no surprise to me, because the hydraulic errors were not corrected at the time of last improvement, for maximum distribution or discharge, sixteen years ago, was greater than our present supply of water. Consequently the water inspector is still needed, especially in winter, to try and keep the water as high as possible in the city mains by checking the minimum discharge of water by citizens.

I did not blame those in charge of our water supply in my first letter, neither do so now, for our Municipal Council has at different times got hydraulic engineers to come here, to inspect the whole water system, so as to remove the cause of defective distribution—but so far they all failed to do so; and why, when correct hydraulic rules if used, would give us correct distribution—puzzles me.

Those Hydraulic errors occur in nearly all other city water supplies, and are most noticeable in cities built on hilly ground, by giving more trouble with water distribution than in cities situated on level plains. Some hydraulic and civil engineers when estimating or drawing plans for water supply to drive turbines for industrial requirements, nearly always make the same hydraulic errors, and generally resort to rule-of-thumb method, by experimenting with water supply plant before it is finished, by running water through it to find out ratio of inlet and outlet to get size of turbine.

While most engineers not taking this precaution first, generally find the first turbine too large by not developing as much power as altitude of water supply warrants, and commence altering plant, by installing smaller turbines until fairly satisfactory results are obtained.

The former method, resorted to by engineers, is needless and misleading to most who use it to get correct results, as other calculations are needed to get correct data for estimating out let, and are less likely to contain errors, than the latter "guess method," which has put some companies to much extra expense for alterations under the name of improvement, which could and should have been avoided, by first using correct hydraulic rules. A few peculiarities of our water supply and distribution, the results of hydraulic error, can be understood clearly, for when frost-weather sets in, and to prevent the water supply from freezing, the pipes are run through their taps continuously, which causes the water in the city mains to sink below the higher levels and citizens up there are thus

Compelled to go to lower parts of the city for water, although that very time the maximum supply of water is coming through the main to the city, and it is the only time it occurs. When winter is past, and water taps are only kept open to supply city needs, when more water is required than in winter, the water then rises in the city mains up to the higher levels, when only the minimum supply of water is coming to the city, which is many times less than maximum supply, and higher up the water gets in the city, less water is coming through the supply mains. It can be clearly understood that maximum supply cannot be as much as maximum discharge or distribution, which when full open cause the water to sink below the higher levels.

But minimum discharge or distribution based on a liberal supply of water for city needs, is approximately from ten to fifteen per cent. of maximum supply, and the reason hydraulic engineers and others recommend greater supply is only on account of hydraulic errors, which make it only possible for the city to utilize any more than about twenty per cent. of maximum supply for city use, and under the most favorable circumstances our distribution will be getting shabby, give trouble before thirty per cent. is utilized, therefore the greatest waste connected with our water supply and distribution as now managed, is that seventy per cent. more or less of our full supply cannot be utilized for city requirements. The only control or check our Council has over distribution, is in the waste water inspector, a control if executed at its best, is imperfect to accomplish its purpose and is not dependable, leaving it to comply with the bye-laws against waste, a state of affairs caused by errors remaining in our water supply. As long as maximum discharge, which is many times more than supply, is put in control of so many citizens, etc., unsatisfactory distribution of water must continue, especially in winter, regardless of a greater supply of water. To extend water distribution without rectifying errors is not wise and may invite disaster. By correcting the errors in the supply mains alone, the full supply of water would reach a higher altitude than can be got now; a very important improvement considering the needs of higher levels. For years after the city was first supplied with water from Windsor Lake, the supply was not adequate to meet the needs of the city, which was stopped as soon as it interfered with distribution in other parts of the city. A distribution was extended with the growth of the city. The excess of citizens for years to let their supply run in winter to prevent it from freezing was found to interfere with distribution by causing the water to sink below the higher levels. To stop this waste in the future was the chief cause of employing

A Waste Water Inspector. The city is still faced with unsatisfactory distribution, and similar difficulties in other cities has caused them to employ experts, who by using instruments can detect small leaks in mains, pipe or water waste in houses. Water meters are used to prevent waste, which it does to a certain extent, but its only true merit is it is a "just taxing machine"; its use cannot correct hydraulic errors, which cause the water to fluctuate in the city water mains. By using right hydraulic rules, correct ratio of inlet and outlet of any size supply pipe for any altitude of water can be got either for living buildings or for city distribution. The former may need one or two outlets, but the latter must be divided for streets and sub-divided for houses. As distribution is extended, the record is made of what percentage is already given to supply water and what is left for future use of maximum discharge, which for safe protection against fire can be set to any standard of percentage governed by environments.

Respectfully yours,

THOS. T. STICK.

Stafford's Liniment!

Numerous testimonials have been received in reference to Stafford's Liniment. Below we publish a few of them:

"I have used almost two bottles of your Liniment and I must say it is all out of my system."

"I have used your Liniment and have found it to be the best Liniment I ever used."

"We have used your Liniment in our home and find that it is as represented."

"I can highly recommend your 'Queen of Liniment.' My mother has used it for years, and it has raised it more than any other remedy she ever used."

"We have used a great many bottles of your Liniment in our family, and are selling dozens. We use it in our home and everyone that uses it says 'he same.'"

The above testimonials are the exact words copied from a few of the letters which we have in our possession, and can be seen by calling at our Drug Store, Theatre Hill, St. John's.

Bellaventure Arrives

A POOR FARE.

The S. S. Bellaventure, Capt. J. Kneeb, arrived back from her sealing cruise north at 8 o'clock, Saturday night, reported for 9,000 seals, which will barely cover the expenses of the ship.

On March 15th the Bellaventure struck the seals E. N. E. of the Funks. This was the patch that contained 80,000, as reported by the Stephano. All the steel ships and the Bell, Diana, Eagle and Newfoundland were into this patch. The Bell got 7,000 out of it. This amount was killed and stowed down in two days. The third day the patch was cut up and Capt. Kneeb shaped his course to N. W. and then S. S. E. She was in company with no other ships. The Bell was out on the Grand Banks but Capt. Kneeb failed to locate the main body of seals. Early last week Capt. Kneeb went in quest of the old ones. She steamed into a large patch of hoods about 150 miles E. S. E. of the Funks, 1,800 seals were secured out of that patch under adverse conditions. There was a strong wind blowing and the ice was breaking up. If the Bellaventure had any guns aboard she would certainly have got a good trip of old seals. Later she went to the eastward and got 300 old hares. On Friday last Capt. Kneeb bore up for home about 50 miles east of the Funks.

The present spring was the worst for forty years at the icefields. One member of the crew, named St. John, of Conception Harbour, was sick of pneumonia during the voyage and has been removed to hospital. The Bellaventure commenced discharging this morning at Job's premises.

Kite Has Crew of Boys

According to the seelers who have lately returned from the icefields, the S. S. Kite, Capt. Yetman, has practically a full crew, but inexperienced. All stowaways, some of them strange young fellows who went out in the different ships, have stowed on the little steamer which had only ten hands on deck or nineteen men all told when she left St. John's. The Kite now has over seventy seelers. She was spoken to by the Bellaventure on March 15th when the first patch of seals were struck. The Kite was alongside but jammed, being powerless in the heavy ice. It is likely the Kite will get a load of old seals.

To-Night's Comedy.

"Whose Baby" if it can be judged by the number of times it has been produced, is extremely funny and ought to commend itself to our theatre-goers who wish to laugh and grow fat. It is said to be one of the most ludicrous and laughable farce comedies ever produced. The scene is laid in the home of a young Mr. Melville and his wife, Josie. Residing with them are the giddy maiden aunt of the husband and the fifty old bachelor uncle of the wife. There are also two servants, who although hired as single, are in reality married. A baby and a little dog figure in the complications which are fast and furious. This comedy will test the versatility of the company, for it is claimed it is seldom that a company capable of good legitimate dramatic work appear to the same advantage in comedy. But we are ready and more than willing to be convinced, and judging by the good work already done, to give our verdict in favour of the company.

THEY KNOW WHICH IS BEST.

A little while ago we drew your attention to a clipping, showing that out of 13 Motor Cars in a Garage at Harrogate, 10 Cars were using

MICHELIN TYRES.

Would you infer from this that the owners of these ten cars are fools, or in other words that 77 per cent. of these motorists are devoid of sense while the other 23 per cent. are full of reason?

Of course you would not—such a verdict would be absurd.

It simply means that 77 per cent. know MICHELINS are the BEST TYRES. The others will soon get to know.
