CHAPTER XV.

UNDER FOREIGN SKIES.

"Plenty," said the captain, and led the way to the boat.

The horseman dismounted, flung the bridle across his horse's neck, and followed the captain.

As he passed the dark-looking youth on the gang-plank he cast a glance and half stopped, as though he recognized his face.

But a longer look convinced him that he did not, and, with a courteous inclination of the hand, a sort of upward wave peculiar to the Cape, he passed on.

The youth turned and looked after him.

Since he had first come in sight he had not taken his dark eyes off him. He seemed fascinated—drawn as if by a magnet—and even then, when one would think he had gazed long enough, he bent forward to get another glance at the stalwart figure as it stood upright as a dart in the lading boat.

Presently, after the barter had been made—wine, sheep, and corn for English goods and tools—the cattle-runner and the captain returned—the captain with a satisfied smile on his face, talking agreeably; the cattle-runner listening, his face grave, uninterested, and absent.

They approached the youth, still standing where they had left him.

"Hello, my lad!" said the captain; "I'd forgotten you."

Then, turning to the horseman, who had stopped, too, he said:

"Look here, you don't want anything of this sort up at the Corner, do you, Laury?"

Wild Laury, as he was called, glanced keenly and critically at the slim youth, who, by the way, blushed deeply under the scrutiny, and shook his head.

"No," he said; "I think not."

Then, addressing the youth, he added:

"Are you looking for a situation at a station?"

"I am looking for employment of any sort," replied the youth, in a soft, musical voice that in some way moved the cattle-runner, for he half started and stared at the still blushing face.

Then he thought a moment.

"You are too slimly made for hard work," he said, kindly. "Can you read?" Then, as if anxious not to hurt the lad's feelings, added: "Of course, though; and write?"

"Oh, yes!" said the captain, answering for him. "He can read and write well enough, and figure, too."

More Food Released.

The Government, recognizing the great food value of "Skippers," has released the supplies kept in bond for emergencies, and has granted shipping facilities for importing more "Skippers." Once again everyone can enjoy delicious "Skippers" in olive oil.

Weight for weight, "Skippers" are more nourishing than meat, and the valuable phosphates and fats which they contain will repair the wear of war on brain and nerve.

Your retailer will supply you with a tin of "Skippers" are bracing with good points.

had pointed them out with a few curt, quick but not unkind sentences.

When they came in sight of the farm-house, that rose from the plain of flowers, he turned to the youth, who was staring with delighted eyes, and said:

"That is the station. It is beautiful, at least I thought it so when, a year ago, it broke upon my vision; but even too much beauty palls upon the senses."

"Oh, not this; not this!" exclaimed the youth, in his musical accents, raising his dark, sparkling eyes to the stern sun-tanned face, but lowering them timidly as they caught the grave regard of the stern eyes.

"Well, it may not be so with you," said the runner; "but I told you, not to point out its beauty, but to warn you that we are nearing our destination. That's the station—your home if you decide to accept service there."

The youth flushed eagerly and was about to speak, but the other went on:

"You are young and, as I conjecture, unused to rough life. You will get nothing but rough life yonder. It is as well you should know it before you enter upon it. Not that there is ought to fear," he continued, seeing the youth's face pale slightly as if with alarm. "I said rough, not savage. The men are wild but honest, rough but true. This is the end of the world, this out-station here, and you may miss the comforts and the luxuries. Think ere you decide."

The youth looked up timidly, then flushed and knit his brows with determination.

"I thank you," he said, "but I've already decided. If your master will accept me, I will accept service."

"So be it," said the runner, and, spurring his horse, he galloped up to the door.

Beneath the porch the settler was smoking his long pipe. He rose and, pushing a group of negro children aside, went up and nodded a salutation.

"Hello, Laurence! Back? Got the tools? And who is this?"

"A youngster I found at the quay," returned Laurence, curtly. "He reads, writes, and keeps accounts. You said you wanted a book-keeper. If he suits he is willing to stay."

Stewart looked at the youth and held out his hand.

"Come inside, young sir, and we'll talk matters over. Come you in, too, Laurence," he called out, for Laurence had turned his horse's head and was riding away already.

He swung back like an arrow, though, and leaping down at the door followed the others into the room.

As usual the bottle was brought out and the glasses filled, but the youth drew back.

"I—I—can not drink it," he said, flushing, then turning pale.

The settler stared.

"Don't like French brandy?" he said, with a laugh. "I reckon you'll soon change that song. Well, here's your health! Laurence, the other glass is for you."

But the runner shook his head and turned aside, and, strange to say, the settler made no remark at his refusal.

"Well, it's to be hoped you can keep accounts better than you can tittle," said the settler, in his rough but not unkindly way. "Look here, my lad, can you make anything of these?" and he took a pile of long account-books from the cupboard and threw them on the table.

The youth picked up one and frowned at it, as was his wont when anxious.

It was one mass of jumble and confusion.

He shook his head rather mournful.

The settler burst into a hearty laugh and threw himself upon the table.

"Now," he said, when he regained breath, "that's a good one! If you'd said you could, I'd 'a' packed you off to the Bay to-morrow, for I know there ain't a clerk in the whole world as could make anything of them blamed books. I tried and they drove me mad. It ain't difficult, neither. It's only a matter of entering and checking. So many hundred come in, and so many hundred gone out, and the price they fetched. Here, Laury, show the youngster, your method."

Laurence took a book from a shelf and opened it.

"There, look at that. Can you manage that?" asked the settler.

The youth took the book and his face cleared.

HOW YOU CAN TELL GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all.

There is only one Aspirin, that marked with the "Bayer Cross"—all other tablets are only acid imitations. Look for the "Bayer Cross"! Then it is real Aspirin, for which there is no substitute.

Aspirin is not German but is made in America, and is owned by an American Company, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government.

Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" have been proved safe by millions for Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages, can be had at any drug store.

Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monocetecalcidester of Salicylicacid.

The Bayer Co., Inc., U.S.A.

"Oh, yes!" he said "this is simple. I have only learned to keep books while on board the ship, but I could manage this I am sure."

"Then you'll do," said the settler, and then he looked hard at the youth and thought a moment.

There was something about the bearing and the voice of the lad that told the astute Mr. Stewart he had another eliver fish in the net.

"Yes," he said, "you'll do. Now as for all the rest, I'll turn you over to Laury," and he sauntered out.

The youth turned to Laurence, who was seated on the table, his head bent down, his eyes fixed on the floor.

He started as if from a reverie as the settler spoke and, lifting his eyes, said:

"What is your name?"

"Cecil," replied the youth, dropping his eyes beneath the cold, calm gaze.

"Cecil," repeated Laurence. "It's a pretty name."

Then he spoke of the wages.

The boy was as indifferent to them as he himself had been, but stipulated for a room and some sort of office apart from the other men, and Laurence, promising he should have these, left the question of salary to the settler.

Then he took him upstairs, showed him a bedroom—there were plenty to spare—fixed upon the armory as an office for him, and telling him the hours for breakfast, dinner, and supper, left the room.

The youth stared after him as he strode down the stairs, and then ran to the window to watch him as he mounted his horse and rode off across the prairie.

For Wild Laury, as his fellow runners called him, seldom spent a night at the farm.

He knew no fatigue, no physical weakness. If the cattle came in at night, he was off again by the light of the moon, to sleep far away at some one of the out-stations, solitary and silent, at the base of some huge mountain or the center of one of the dark forests.

Solitude was dear to Wild Laury. He never shunned danger, but he was given to shunning men.

A fortnight passed, and the youth, Cecil, had become used to his duties and his home.

Bolsheviks Attack Poles in Force.

Aeroplanes and Armored Trains Being Used--English Cloth Will Clothe German Police--French President Fell From Moving Train--Morganatic Marriage of Greek King Reported--Prince of Wales Sails for Melbourne.

HARD FIGHTING GOING ON.

WARSAW, May 20. Bolsheviks are attacking in waves on the northern fighting front in a thrust to break the Polish lines and open communication with East Prussia. The fiercest fighting in months is raging along a ninety mile battle-field. Villages are changing hands daily and the lines are swaying to and fro. Fighting has mostly been infantry encounters through open swampy country. The latest statement says the Bolsheviks are suffering heavy losses in men killed. The fighting spirit of the Poles was stimulated by the finding of bodies of Polish soldiers, who it is declared, had been wounded and then killed by the Bolsheviks with rifle bullets. The Bolsheviks were aided in fighting by aviators, two of whom were brought down by Polish fire. The Bolsheviks also brought up armored trains. All trains on this front are reported to be officered by Germans with many trained machine gunners.

TRADING WITH ENGLAND.

BERLIN, May 24. Germany's "Green Boys," as the members of the military police force are popularly called in reference to the color of their uniform, are in future going to wear English cloth, the government having placed an order to the value of about a million and a half marks with a British textile firm. This fact was disclosed by the Vostische Zeitung, which accompanied the announcement with violent denunciation of what is called "this absolutely incomprehensible circumstance."

FRENCH PRESIDENT MEETS ACCIDENT.

MONTARGUES, France, May 24. Paul Deschanel, President of the French Republic, fell from the window of his train when it was a short distance from here last night. The train was moving at the time, but after his fall Deschanel walked a mile and a quarter in darkness until he met track workers. The workmen accompanied him to a signal station nearby and telephoned to this city for an automobile, which arrived within half an hour. Deschanel, upon his arrival here, received first medical attention some two or three hours after the accident. Physicians found he had suffered no injuries sufficient to cause anxiety although he was bruised and lacerated.

ARMS CONGRESS TO ACCEPT MANDATORY.

WASHINGTON, May 24. President Wilson to-day asked authority from Congress for United States to accept mandate over Armenia. The President told Congress that he thought the wish of the American people was that the United States should become mandatory for Armenia.

GERMAN PARLIAMENTARY PROBLEMS.

BERLIN, May 24. The German Republic's first parliament went out of existence at noon yesterday, for although its mandate is effective until the new Reichstag is evoked, it will not sit again unless summoned as a result of some great emergency. The closing hours of the session were marked by acrimonious party strife, which resulted in the Bill providing for the abrogation of military courts being life in abeyance. Obstruction by reactionaries delayed the final vote twenty-four hours and Konstantin Fehrenbach, president of the chamber, afterwards was unable to muster a quorum. The Government was subjected to a second embarrassment by being forced to ignore Thursday's vote, which was jammed through by the Independent Socialists with the aid of Majority Socialists, demanding that the state of siege throughout the country be raised.

JUST HIS CHOICE.

PARIS, May 24. King Alexander of Greece is reported here to have been married morganatically to Mile. Manners, who is a daughter of the foreign aide de camp to his father, King Constantine. The marriage was neither confirmed nor denied by officials. King Alexander's marriage is said to have been the culmination of boyhood friendship and occurred before he was in direct succession to the throne and while his chances for succeeding to his father appeared most remote.

PRINCE SAILS FOR AUSTRALIA.

LYTTLETON, N.Z., May 24. The Prince of Wales to-day concluded his visit to New Zealand. He went on board the battle cruiser Renown and the vessel sailed for Melbourne at daybreak. Prior to his departure Prince Edward sent a message to Premier Massey, in which he expressed his thanks and appreciation to the people of New Zealand for the splendid reception accorded him.

MOLASSES CARGO SUNK.

BOSTON, May 24. The British schooner John M. Wood has been rammed and sunk by the steamer Lake Elash, which later picked up the crew, according to a wireless message intercepted here early to-day. Position was not given. The schooner left Barbados for St. John's, Nfld., on April 17th, with 600 puncheons of molasses. The loss is estimated at $90,000 and is partly insured. The loss of the schooner was received by wireless by her owners, Adams and Knicker, Lunenburg, N.S.

CARRANZA WAS ASSASSINATED.

EL PASO, Texas, May 24. President Carranza, of Mexico, was assassinated by his men, according to a telegram from General Alverno Obregón, of Mexico City, received by revolutionary agents here.

Opera "Iolanthe."

Under the auspices of the G.W.V.A., Gilbert and Sullivan's Comic Opera "Iolanthe" will be produced about the latter part of June. This opera was produced in Regina last year by Mr. Moncrieff Mawer, and drew record houses. Rehearsals have already begun. The cast includes a number of war veterans, Major O'Grady taking the leading part. A speciality, which is particularly fine, is the male chorus. Under the direction of Mr. Mawer, a first class performance is assured.

Many Excursionists.

Some eleven hundred excursionists purchased tickets at the railway station yesterday and Sunday for points along the line, while many more went out and paid their fares on the trains. In addition to those who entrained there were some thousands out on the country roads and to Bowring Park. Not many were left in the city. The day was a perfect one and yet tired citizens took full advantage of it. If there are any trout left in the nearby ponds and rivers—well, it speaks well for their breeding powers.

Child Knocked Down.

A trout party's horse, passing along Hamilton Street, Sunday morning, knocked down a six-year-old lad named Tizard, and inflicted a wound in his head. The little fellow attempted to cross the road in front of the horse and was struck by the front wheel and thrown, fortunately, clear of the wagon. He was picked up and carried to a doctor, who was obliged to put several stitches in the wound. After being treated the child was driven to his home.

The first name should read Tapper, friends of the unfortunate young man at Torbay having been notified to this effect.

$1,700 for Tag Day.

As a result of Tag Day, conducted by the W.P.A., for the benefit of The Child Welfare movement, the sum of $1,700 was realized. This splendid result was due to the untiring energy and zeal of the young ladies who from early Saturday morning to late in the evening, kept tagging every one in sight.

Fishermen from this port were on the grounds Saturday, doing well with hook and line. The fish caught were fine and large, and very steep prices were charged for them in the coves. It is said that, in future, the fishermen in the coves will sell their fish by the pound.

CHAPTER VII.

SIGHT SEEING AT NEW YORK.

A thousand points of interest attract the visitor's attention, in such a metropolis as New York, and at every turn there is something worth while to be seen. Among these to which we devoted our attention we were greatly interested in the Aquarium, not so much because of its present purpose, as the fact that it is the place formerly known as Castle Garden. In the early history of America, before the Revolution, and in the beginning of New York proper, as an American city after the Revolution, the waterfront known at that date as Castle Garden, was the principal landing place of the emigrants, who came across the sea to make their homes in the New World. For fully two generations this was the case, and tens of thousands of emigrants first stepped ashore at this particular place. The Castle Garden was a familiar term in the home-land, and many a yearning heart and wistful eye, looked far towards the west and longed to be there. Thither came thousands of English emigrants, and also thousands more from Ireland, and likewise goodly numbers from Scotland.

All these people found their first breathing-place in the New World, within the boundaries of Castle Garden. Here a thousand hopes were realized, and hands long parted clasped, and the absence of years spanned. It was because of these tender associations that Castle Garden occupied such a big place in the affections of the people, and in song and story was renowned; and it was this same feeling that drew us to it, as being one of the first places worthy our attention.

In those early days of emigration, the voyage across the Atlantic was long and dreary; and it was not unusual for the passage to occupy one, and two, and even three months; and even after the introduction of steam there were long sailings, and late harbourings; but amid all the suspense, and through all those vicissitudes, the coveted spot sought, was Castle Garden. Men who had left their all in the old country to try their fortunes in America, had toiled for years in order to save sufficient funds to get some loved one out to share their lot. Husbands sent for their wives, fathers sent for their children, and families far scattered, sought reunion on this side of the water. To many of those people New York was the chief centre, it was the Mecca of America, and the goal of their ambitions.

As we viewed the site and listened to the people of different nationalities, who stood around, we thought upon those early voyagers and what they endured. The majority of them landed just as they stood. Their luggage was limited to a bundle or a bag, and their all lay in the future. Their finances were what their hands could earn, and they considered themselves fortunate if they got work to do. They were casting in their lot with their fellow colonists, and by their industry they laid the foundation of the America of to-day. Since their time a vast change has set in, and the buildings which they considered great are now comparatively insignificant. A greater New York has supplanted the old New York. The narrow streets of the early Dutch settlers are reminders of small beginnings; but the wider streets of the greater city tell of enterprise and greater development. The modern architecture ascends higher in the air; but it does not stand so high in art. The old architecture reveals taste and soul, but many of these designs are lost in the modern sky-scraper. By this it is not meant to disparage or discredit the architecture of the newer city—it is very fine; but the buildings are so large, and their storeys so many, that there does not seem to be that chance for the finer art which some parts of the old city present. The Churches and Cathedrals, which in the past were the principal objects of structural architecture, are now quite in the shade, and their tallest towers seem to droop within the shadow of the commercial blocks. In this respect commerce appears to have outgrown religion. Formerly the higher architecture was confined to the places of worship, but now the reverse is the case, and the cathedrals of commerce have surpassed the cathedrals of religion.

This is particularly the case with such structures as the Metropolitan, the Equitable, and the Woolworth, the latter being sixty storeys. What would the fathers of the city have thought of such buildings? They of course, would not have understood them; but to-day the expansion of trade is so great that these high buildings are really necessary, and because of this, the best talent of the engineers, and the best designs of the architects, are devoted to the construction of these vast buildings. Such at least were our impressions as we saw the city of New York, and such also were our opinions as we indulged in sight-seeing at other places. (Continued on Thursday.)

See How It Pays To beautify the teeth

All statements approved by high dental authorities

Millions of people now employ a new teeth cleaning method. Millions of white teeth show the results of it. This is to urge a ten-day test, to show what it means to you.

They fight the film

This new way combats film—that viscous film you feel. That is what clouds teeth and what wrecks them. Most tooth troubles are now traced to film.

Film clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. If not removed it hardens. Then month after month, between your dental cleanings, it may do a ceaseless damage.

It is the film-coat that discolors—not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve film, so the tooth brush leaves much of it intact. Thus very few people escape tooth troubles, despite the daily brushing.

Now dental science has evolved a film combatant. Five years of tests have amply proved its efficiency. Leading dentists now everywhere advise it. And it is embodied for your daily use in a dentifrice called Pepsodent—an ideal modern tooth paste.

Sent on request

A ten-day test of this new method is supplied to all who ask. Thus millions have seen the results of it.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digester of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

Pepsin must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. So this method long seemed barred. But science has discovered a harmless activating method, so active pepsin can be every day applied.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coat disappears.

See the results and let our book explain them. Then judge for yourself what is best for you and yours. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

White Pole Idea for Street Cars

Will Stop Only at White-painted Poles, in Future.

The Electrical Co. has in mind the installing of the White Pole Stopping Idea for the street car system, and places are now being made. This scheme, which is in vogue everywhere outside Newfoundland, provides for the stopping of street cars at certain white-painted telephone poles. Passengers alighting from or boarding cars will have to do so at a pole. The cars will not stop between poles and the proper thing to do, when wishing to take one, is to wait at the nearest stopping pole. The poles to be painted white will be varied distances from each other—to suit the passenger traffic, of course. Thus, the distance separating poles from Riverhead to the Station, for example, would be greater than from that downtown.

It is likely, also, that the Inspector General will institute regulations regarding street traffic at stop-poles—regulations similar to the ones now enforced at Adelaide St. Thus, horses and autos will have to stop while passengers are boarding or leaving the street car.

The Company is to be congratulated upon its decision, which will be sure to result in greater satisfaction to the travelling public.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

LOFTY AND STANDOFFISH OR—

RUTH CAMERON

A friend of mine went on a week-end trip lately with a party of some 20 or 30 people. Among these was another friend whom I had always thought the first friend would much enjoy when some such chance should throw them together.

When the first friend came home from the trip, I at once asked her how she liked Mrs. R.

She tossed her head. "I think she's terribly lofty and standoffish," she said. "She never spoke to me the whole trip."

"Did you speak to her?" I asked.

"Dollars to Doughnuts. She looked taken aback. "Why no," she said, "I don't know as I did. She seemed so standoffish."

Now, as I happen to know, Mrs. R. is not in the least standoffish. In fact, she has a very friendly disposition hidden under a shy exterior, and I'd bet dollars to doughnuts she was waiting for the other woman to speak and has gone home feeling that she was "terrible lofty and stand-offish."

I base that bet on personal experience.

Just What They Thought About Us.

One summer we spent two weeks at a little Inn. Among the other guests were a young couple who looked interesting, but seemed to be very aloof and exclusive. Ten days of our two weeks passed without our meeting them. On the eleventh certain circumstances threw us together willy-nilly, and we found them so delightful and congenial in the three short days that remained that we continued the acquaintance afterwards. Sometime later we were moved to tell them our first impressions of them—"as interesting looking but dreadfully exclusive." "Why, that's just the way we felt about you!" they said.

Over and over again I think what we take for pride is really only shyness. And what we take for aloofness and exclusiveness is really only diffidence, or a desire not to intrude.

Help People Over the World.

A great many people who really long to be social are doubly hampered by their diffidence. The impression of aloofness which they unintentionally and unconsciously create, builds a wall about them and they are doubly shut off—first, by their own diffidence in taking the first step, towards acquaintance, and second, by this wall of false impression.

It is a good thing to try determinedly to conquer this diffidence in yourself, and a kind thing to be on the alert to recognize in others and to lend a hand to help them over the wall.

Getting Even.

The following story is told about Alexander Kochitz, the conductor of the Ukrainian National Choir.

It seems that just before the War he was touring Europe with a musical company of about forty artists, and while at Frankfurt he received an invitation to dinner from the wife of a German baron.

He accepted the invitation, but soon afterwards it came to his knowledge that the lady had invited a number of her friends to be present "to hear Alexander Kochitz."

This did not suit the famous musician at all, so he wrote making some excuse for cancelling the appointment. The baroness thereupon wrote back explaining what she had done, counting on his presence, and ending her note: "But I still hope for the pleasure of your company."

To this she received the following unexpected reply:

"I have given your kind message to my company, but I regret that only twenty-three of them will be able to accept your invitation, the rest having appointments elsewhere."

THE REAL VIRTUES.

Man is not bound by law or rule.

To win the favor of the throng; He is not taught in any school.

That honor only crown the strong. A willing hand and kindly heart.

A voice that soars to tell a lie. Are virtues which all skill and art and all religions glorify.

There is on earth no chosen few. The humblest toiler here can be as manly and as brave and true as any king beyond the sea.

Rich men and poor, and dull and wise. Master and servant, day by day Dream of the self-same Paradise.

And for the self-same mercy pray.

Riches and fame are not the things Which truly mark a man's success. Despite the joy which conquest brings, The jewels and the costly dress, The test of manhood desper goes.

One may have served a humbler plan. And missed the pomp which glory knows. But still have been no less a man.

He is not only great who hears The plaudits of the fickle throng. And none deserves another's sneers For merely failing to be strong.

For he who keeps his faith in God Is honest, kind of heart and true. Though forced in humbleness to plod, Does all that any man can do.

Hints to Telephone Users.

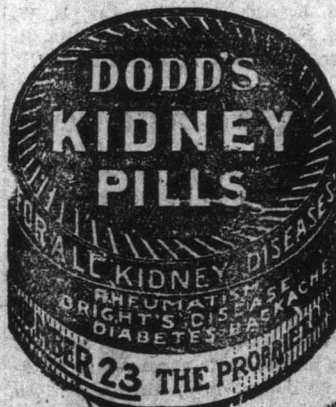

When you use a telephone speak in a low voice. There is no need to put one's mouth close to the receiver, and then shout as if speaking from a second-storey window. Shouting only sets up an echo, which makes it difficult for your auditor to catch your message.

Just try whispering instead. A whisper carries well over the wire, and has no echo. Remember, too, that the telephone is a substitute for shouting. If you listen to the operator you will notice she asks for your number in a normal tone. Just copy her example. Moreover, don't think that, just because you are speaking over a telephone, you must be as curt as possible. A few courteous words of greeting should be exchanged before the message is spoken. It is a mistake to think that the 'phone is for business only, and brusqueness is bad form.

In actual conversation we have the advantage of facial expression. A smile may make a curt remark or a refusal pleasant. Over the telephone there are only words and tones of voice which can convey expression.

Trees That Give Light.

There is a most remarkable tree or shrub in a small gulch near some springs about twelve miles north of Tuscarora. It is about six or seven feet in height, with a trunk which, at its base, is three times the size of a man's wrist. Its remarkable characteristic is its foliage, which, at certain seasons of the year, is so luminous that it can be plainly distinguished on the darkest night for a distance of more than a mile, while in its immediate vicinity it emits sufficient light to enable a person to read the finest print. Its foliage is extremely rank, and its leaves resemble somewhat, in size, shape, and color, those of the aromatic bay tree of California. The luminous property is evidently parasitic, and consists of a sort of gummy substance, which upon being transferred by rubbing to a person's hand, imparts to it the same apparently phosphorescent light, while that on the leaf entirely disappears. The only reasonable explanation for this phenomenon that we can imagine is that the leaves possess some quality which either generates or attracts phosphoric matter.

YOU KNOW HER.

MARY MASON

The stately domestic is frequently seen; she's grand and majestic, patriotic her mien; with hauteur she dishes the loaves and the fishes; and how to her wishes and hall her as queen. This daisies' resplendent in ermine is shod; so blamed independent she quits at a nod; then nothing will stay her, disuade or delay her, and when I would pay her it takes all my wad. She's boss of the hovel wherein I reside; before her I grovel, and drop all my pride; she sits in a rocker and reads a cheap shocker, and she is a mocker when grub should be fried. To movies she prances whenever she likes; to blow-outs and dances she gaudily hikes; no dinner is stewing, no coffee is brewing, for rags she is chewing with Peters and Mike. She flies into rages, throws fits in the hall, and says that her wages are needlessly small; she soon must be earning more money for burning, or she will be turning my map to the wall. I do not desire her, I find her a curse; but if I should fire her the next would be worse; and so she goes spilling the grub in the boiling, while I'm sadly toiling, her wage to disburse.

Fads and Fashions.

Daytime frocks feature a new wool. The black skirt is an important item in the summer wardrobe.

Blue foulard with a small white dot has been revived successfully.

The shawl collar of crisp organdie is not only tucked, but is corded.

Short suit coats of plain, dark materials are worn with pleated skirts.

A frock of brown and gray striped taffeta is frilled from neck to hem.

Bits of lettuce-green fringe ornament a youthful frock of coral velours.

A most effective color combination is of bright blue, jade green and scarlet.

On the afternoon gown one should wear a boutonniere of metal or gauze flowers.

Dainty dresses of mauve organdie are embroidered with large ribbon flowers.

A snug-fitting taffeta bodice tops an overskirt of taffeta edged with ecru lace.

Will Sue St. Pierre Firm.

Sydney, N.S., May 22.—That they will sue for the refund of their passage money, was the declaration of a number of Canadian workmen who arrived from St. Pierre on the steamer Pro Patria, which reached North Sydney to-day. The men claimed that they were hired at eight dollars a day to work on construction of the new cold storage plant at the French colony, but when they got there the place was tied up by a strike of French laborers who want the same rate as the Canadians got. There was nothing for them to do, so they were forced to return and will sue the American Construction Company. The Pro Patria brought twenty-five passengers and mails.

Two Notable Objections.

There are many grounds of objection to Mr. Coaker's Bill relating to the export of fish, but two at least that notably demand the opposition of every right-minded lover of representative government. The measure proposes to take from the Legislature, and vest in the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the absolute control of the one most vital resource of the dominion, to play with as he pleases, and to destroy in the playing; and it also proposes to give him control of an annual revenue not less than a half million dollars derived from taxation upon fish exports. The practice of empowering the Governor-in-Council to make Orders-in-Council, and of authorising various Ministers and Boards to make rules and regulations, having the force of law, has gone very far of late, due largely, to the laziness of legislators, or the ambition of Ministers, though the scope of such orders and regulations has been confined generally to matters of detail. But in this new Bill it is proposed to empower Mr. Coaker to say who shall ship fish, and who shall not, what the price shall or shall not be, and what shipments shall be allowed, and when and how. The whole life-giving trade of the dominion is thus to be placed at the mercy of the man who is President of the F.P.U., and His Majesty's Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

In the expenditure of public monies hitherto, the House of Assembly has always been more jealous of its right to appropriate than of any other power it possesses. This right has been regarded as the peculiar safeguard of a free people from uncontrolled autocracy. Kings have been in subjection to it and pretenders have failed because of it. But this new Bill proposes to permit Mr. Coaker to spend half a million dollars annually, of public money sweated out of the fishermen by the tax on fish exports, at his own sweet will and pleasure. Whom he wishes he may employ. Whom he wishes he may discharge. What shall be done, or left undone, he shall say. No longer will the power of appointment or dismissal be vested in the Governor-in-Council, but instead in Mr. Coaker, if this Bill goes through. And who can doubt in the light of recent happenings and is daily happening, that misuse will be made of this autocratic power to bolster up a blasting and searing autocracy. In this contingency what will the Legislative Council do? What will the Opposition in the House of Assembly do? It will be gratifying indeed if the second chamber would establish in the public mind a belief in its inherent independence and latent usefulness, by saying a thunderous NO to this latest and most monstrous proposition.

But there are not wanting sceptical critics who say that independence is foreign to the make-up of the Legislative Council, that its members are either sycophants or partisans, and that while some of them will talk against the Bill, a majority of them will find pretexts for voting in its favor. There is, however, no doubt about the solemn duty of the Opposition. They have a righteous responsibility cast upon them, to uphold the essential powers of the Legislature in general and the House of Assembly in particular. They may not be able to defeat the measure, but they can, at least, delay it until shocked public sentiment has been aroused, and they can, in an effort to arouse that sentiment, thunder their denunciations and acquit themselves of any shadow of responsibility for its becoming law. They are the lineal descendants of those dead and gone patriots who gave Newfoundland Responsible Government, and in the present moment of peril they should prove worthy of their great and grand heritage.

A Gratuitous Insult.

According to the Honorable W. F. Coaker, the fish merchants of St. John's, "know less about fish than any other class of men in the country," and "it is a rule for them to denounce outside what they have voted for inside"—that is, that they are both ignorant and deceptive. It is impossible, perhaps, to feel much sympathy with the merchants, so classed by Mr. Coaker, for this assault upon them, for as a class they aided and abetted the Coaker-Squires combination last fall, and again in January, when the outcome of their return to power could be seen to be just what it has been by men of thought, not blinded by self-seeking or prejudice. But, nevertheless, it is not true that the merchants know nothing, individually, of the fish trade, any more than the assumption is correct that Mr. Coaker himself is really a well informed man about fish.

There are amongst the merchants men who export, and most of them know all that is necessary to know about their business. Practically it is Mr. Coaker himself who is the real know-nothing, because his past connections have not been with trade, but most of them with the service of the Government, and therefore his knowledge of fish is confined to whatever has been told him added to his experience in trade during the last few years. As to the deceptiveness of the merchants and their lack of independence and truthfulness; Mr. Coaker, at least, is no safe authority. He has, himself been everything by turns, and nothing long. He has alternately abused and fawned upon every man in public life: he has swallowed every profession he has ever made, and his inconsistency and cynicism are by-words. He is to-day as an export fish merchant practising deep deception upon the fishermen, the sharemen, "the underdogs," in order that he may act the autocrat and the dictator.

Doomed to Disappointment.

In the reply of His Excellency the Governor to the members of the Opposition, published in another column to-day, the confident hope was expressed that a local Commission of a satisfactory kind will be appointed, and which in any case will have the personal confidence of the Governor himself. With all deference to this expression of His Excellency's, we are of the opinion that his hope is doomed to disappointment. Trade and business connections, prejudice and interest—commercial and otherwise—and the local environment combine to make it impossible, combine to make it impossible for even generally, satisfactorily the public, no matter how much they may enjoy the confidence of a Governor who is un-informed with reference to many local things.

There are local men who enjoy excellent reputations, and who could possibly discharge a duty such as, the commissioners will be called upon to perform, with belief on their own parts that they would act impartially, but friendly, or political, or trade interests or inherent prejudice and many other influences, will not, in reality, allow them to discharge such a duty with public confidence. His Excellency advances the expense and delay of bringing a commission out from England as a reason for not accepting a suggestion made by the Opposition, but much delay has already occurred, and greater harm will be the result of appointing a local commission than would follow from a long delay. In the long run it will be much more expensive to this country to have it suffer under the fierce storm of partisan passion, which is likely to follow a report by a commission locally constituted, than the mere dollars and cents which would have to be paid to an English Commission.

Western Notes.

Schooner owners at Channel, strongly protest the enforcement of Quarantine Dues, charged by the Customs on arrival from Sydney, and claim that the same should not be applied to the port of Channel, any more than to Rose Blanche, Burgeo or any other outpost. Having to pay every trip is most vexatious and local skippers say that while this iniquitous and unjust tax is imposed upon them for the sole purpose of paying private individuals, they will not undertake coal charters from Sydney to either Channel or Port aux Basques. If the tax is to be adhered to, Channel people will find it difficult to get coal supplies.

Schr. Cedella, Capt. George Genge, which sailed on a sealing trip from Channel in April, arrived a few days ago with 90 young and 240 old harps. The vessel being leaking somewhat caused the abandonment of the trip. The fat will be taken to Sydney and sold, the schooner after discharge, going on dock. Capt. Genge is to be congratulated on the success of his venture.

While bait is adequate for daily needs, Codfish and Halibut are very scarce. A change of weather may bring better results, but many fishermen have given up for the season and are seeking a change of occupation. Many of the men about Channel and vicinity have already entered new services.

N. F. Customs Officers

HUNTING LIQUOR SMUGGLERS.

Sydney, N.S., May 22.—Two Newfoundland customs officers were in the city a few days ago, and it is believed their visit was for the purpose of investigating rumors that a schooner had landed a cargo of St. Pierre water at a point on the Whitney Pier waterfront a short time ago. The men were Inspector Deo and Sergt. Kelly, and while here they paid a visit to police headquarters and made minute enquiries as to the provisions of the local temperance laws. Chief McCormick says he does not know whether such a cargo was landed or not. An Italian steamer which was in port a short time ago, is reported to have sold considerable quantities of Italian wine while lying at her berth on the waterfront. The chief of police reports that his men looked into this case and found the report without foundation. If so, their report is at direct variance with that of other reputable citizens. It is stated that the matter was so notorious it was brought to the attention of a city alderman who visited the place, told the men on the ship that their action was against the laws of the country and ordered them to stop selling on pain of being denounced to the authorities. The selling was then stopped.

Glencoe's Passengers.

The following first-class passengers arrived in the city last night, having arrived at Port aux Basques from the Glencoe:—W. Kelly, P. M. Lewis, J. S. Brice, W. Howell, J. R. and Mrs. Ewing, A. J. Empire Day Celebrations

CARBONEAR.

This historic town was on fête at an early hour yesterday morning. Flags of all sizes and colors were flying to the breeze from the masts of the shipping in the harbor and from the tall staffs along the waterfront, and from public buildings and private houses. The weather being ideal, car after car of visitors sped rapidly through the streets, unloading at their various destinations. The centre of attraction was the Orange Hall, the Carbonear Lodge having arranged for a monster parade, and thither town and visiting brethren hied themselves. Forming up in professional order the members paraded to the Methodist Church for Divine Service, Rev. Mr. Robb officiating and preaching a very fine sermon—one appropriate to the times, and a master-piece of instruction to all Britshers. After leaving the sacred building, the line of march was taken up through Water Street, and across the Beach to the South Side Church, return to Hall being made via the same route. The parade mustered some three hundred members of all the degrees and was accompanied by the Society's Band which discoursed sweet music. Joy guns were fired at intervals by enthusiasts. The parade was a splendid success. At night an open meeting was held in the Hall, when speech and song kept a large audience thoroughly interested.

BRIGUS.

The very pretty little township of Brigus was the stopping-off place of quite a number of St. John's people who spent the day there. Brigus is probably the prettiest town in Conception Bay and was at its best yesterday. The Cabot Hotel provides accommodation for visitors, and the place abounds with things of interest worth seeing. A deep cave at the water's edge, a tunnel possibly used by smugglers away back, "Devil's Hill"—which contains the "authentic" footprints of that darkly august personage—"Molloy's Island," all are well worth visiting. Most of the visitors returned by the train at evening. As the train picked up party after party of trouters, some good catches were learned of, and the day was clearly proved to have been a good one for the disciples of the inimitable Walton.

Capt. George Spracklin, Ship's Husband, R.N. Co., Mr. G. A. C. Cooper, London Salvage Association, and Mr. Fred H. Ellis, of the Tug Co., arrived back in the city Saturday night from Bonavista, where they left the Cabot, fearing further delay owing to ice conditions. Their mission, which was of that surveying the Dundee, was successfully accomplished, and it is quite likely that salvage will commence soon.

Some Particulars of S. S. Permanencia.

1500-Ton Concrete Ship Launched at North Sydney.

The Permanencia will have a speed of nine knots. The engine room is aft, after the fashion of the Lake boats. Her hold is 64 by 12 by 26, and she has cargo space for about 600 tons of general cargo. About eight or nine men will be required to make up her crew. She has three keels, the main and two bilge keels, reinforced by steel rods running the entire length. The ribs and the main body of the ship have steel rods running through them to ensure greater strength. In the main body the rods run longitudinally, and diagonally as well, and provision was made for adjusting these so as to secure the greatest strength in construction. Vessels of this class are first built with wooden floors, the steel rods being put in place and concrete pouring in; after this sets the wood is removed. E. R. Gilliard has had charge of the construction throughout.

AT CHILD WELFARE MEETING ON FRIDAY NIGHT.

Your Excellency, My Lord Bishop, Ladies and Gentlemen.
The people of St. John's must already have a pretty good idea of what we mean by Child Welfare, though Miss Haslam will explain to-night the developments that are necessary in this work if it is to be a real success. I want to say a few words regarding Child Welfare from a somewhat different point to that we have approached before, but an all important one. Unhappily we have to face the fact that in many homes cruelty and shocking neglect are inflicted upon babies and young children. Our Community Nurse wrote to the Women's Patriotic Association in January last stating she wished to draw their attention to the need for protection of children. She enumerated 24 bad cases of neglected babies. Hungry, naked, and sick—or "otherwise in need."

We've got to do something to meet this state of affairs. Our Nurses have laboured unceasingly in trying to bring about a better state of things, but there are those who seem to have hearts of stone and to whom a child's sufferings and wants are as naught. In England we have a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children which meets such cases. Attached to the Society are inspectors, men of high character and tact, whose business it is to visit homes that are suspected of harbouring unhappy and neglected little children; they have the law behind them and are pathetically called the "Children's Men." If they find cruelty and neglect they warn the parents it must stop; their visits to the homes, their persuasion, tact and sympathy often have the desired effect, but if no amount of patient visiting improves matters then the Society takes legal steps; as a rule the mere fact of this being possible will induce many a careless mother to alter her ways.

In England, Ireland and Wales, last year, 100,000 children were reported to the Society as requiring the help and intervention of the Inspectors. These statistics have been recently sent me by the Director of the Society, to whom I am partly indebted for what I am saying to-night. We have got to remember that neglect of Child Life is a national evil of the greatest kind—if we ignore it we do so at our own cost and to the nation's peril. Never let it be forgotten that the root of almost every social ill is sown when a child is neglected. Mental deficiency, physical defects, moral obliquity, are things that have to be paid for. Blind children, crippled children, have to be maintained. To consider it from a lower level, the relief to rates and taxes, the reduction in the claims on the charitable, which would follow the stopping of child neglect, can hardly be estimated. We cannot rest content with what we are doing. Neglect, cruelty, ignorance, intemperance, are bad, then any attempt to prevent these things is indeed good, and I say with all earnestness, it is our business, yours and mine, to combat this evil as Christians, citizens and patriots.

The destiny of many tiny children is in our hands. The men whose lives we mourn, whose friendship we miss, went out to fight a common foe and they won; they died in doing it and left a gap in our midst. For their sakes we have to live and fulfil our obligations to their country. We want a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children here and legislation to support it—we cannot do without the latter, it creates just that fear that will influence a cruel or neglectful woman to tend a little child in her care, because of the consequences if she does not do so. And a further step—we want supervision and registration of those women who take charge of helpless, unwanted babies, far more "Children of Sorrow" than what they are usually called.

I do not want to appear as asking too much of the Government—I know they are overburdened just now with many matters, and I am already under a great debt to the Prime Minister and his colleagues for kindness, sympathy and consideration in carrying out one of three schemes in which I have been very interested; therefore I would ask them if they do not see their way to give us legislation regarding these two matters this session, they would still give the matter their early consideration. Meanwhile, we can still form a Society for the Protection of Cruelty to Children, and if you, kind friends, will help us, we may start an Inspector or two without waiting for Legislation.

But this extension of our work for Child Welfare will require funds, and I will in conclusion remind you that to-morrow is the Children's "Tag Day."

The more we are able to collect the better work can we do for the children.

I have just received from the President of the G. W. V. A. a cheque for $50, our first "Tag Day" donation, a very gracious and kindly gift.

"Vigornia,"
May 19, 1920.
Dear Lady Harris.—I should be so pleased if you would accept the enclosed cheque from the returned soldiers and soldiers as a very small token of their appreciation of countless benefits received during the Great War, from the women of Newfoundland.

I need not say how very much we are in sympathy with the "Child Welfare" movement or how clearly we see the necessity for such an undertaking, and our earnest hope is that your efforts will be crowned with success.

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) A. E. BERNARD, Lt. Col.

Auto Ditched, Then Took Fire.

Occupants Had Narrow Escape—
Trwon Several Feet When Car Struck Tree.

S. Noah, S. Faour and J. Murphy came near death on Sunday morning when the auto in which they were driving on Portugal Cove Road became ditched and took fire. The car was going along at a fairly good speed, Noah driving, when the latter, seeing a bad section in the road ahead, endeavoured to skirt it and turned the car in. In doing so, however, he turned her in too far and she crashed into the ditch at the side of the road, passing over several young trees and bringing up against a spruce with great impact, and the occupants were thrown out over the hood to the ground. Faour and Murphy were rather badly hurt and lay stunned for a few minutes. Noah, the driver, however returning to the car, found her in flames, the fuel tank having taken fire. With the help of the other two, who soon recovered sufficiently, Noah saved the car from complete destruction. Murphy and Faour were later driven to town to receive medical attendance. It will be a few days before they will be able to get about again. The damage to the car amounts to several hundred dollars.

Objects to Sneers.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—The Plaindealer on Saturday last made some sarcastic references to Messrs. Shortis, Morris and Condon, contributors to the Evening Telegram, which I feel should not be permitted to go unanswered. I feel safe in saying that the Public appreciate the writings of the three gentlemen referred to by the Plaindealer, a great deal more than they do some of the twaddle recently published in that paper. Mr. Condon wrote what I consider a very fine paper on our fisheries, and gave very valuable information for which he ought to receive our thanks and that he undoubtedly does. Mr. H. F. Shortis has for many years devoted his talents to reviewing the happenings of the past, and many a dull hour has been passed reading his very entertaining and instructive papers. Mr. Isaac Morris on numerous occasions has wielded his pen in defence of our Country, and when he takes a trip around our Island, or pays a visit to Canada or the States, takes notes, and gives the readers of the papers graphic descriptions of what he saw on his tour. What objection then can the Plaindealer offer to the writings of the above named gentlemen? If the Plaindealer would try to induce such writers to contribute to its columns it would be doing something sensible, but to offer sneers, is simply lessening its standing as a respectable paper. Conduct like the Plaindealer has been guilty of, has the effect of keeping men from contributing to the press. This practice should be discontinued for we have too few local writers.

To Messrs. Shortis, Morris and Condon I would say "carry on."

Yours truly,
READER.

Child Missing Since Sunday.

Yesterday afternoon the police received a telephone message from Portugal Cove saying that a 2 year and 8 month's old child had been missing since Sunday evening. The little chap who is a son of Stephen Miller, Miller's Pond Road, was walking with his grandfather not far from home, when the old man left the child for a few minutes to go into his house, and on returning, could find no trace of the "little fellow." A search party of 40 men was organized and with lanterns, scoured the neighbourhood, keeping the search up all night. During all Monday and up to 10 p.m. no trace of the missing child could be found. Two Constables from the city went to the place yesterday afternoon to assist in the search.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mr. Arthur Ash left Tuesday morning for Port au Port, where he will be employed this Summer.

The many friends of Mr. Eli Stowe will learn with regret that he is now confined to his bed, suffering from a severe cold. It is to be hoped that he will soon be O. K. again.

Mr. Luke Fallon, of the Militia Department, St. John's, was in town this week on a visit to relatives and friends. Luke was one of the boys who went across the sea with the first draft of "Ours," in response to his nation's call, and served through the Dardanelles campaign, and was also one of those frost-bitten in that never-to-be-forgotten November storm. He was later sent to France, with the rest of his dauntless comrades, where he gallantly upheld the traditions of his country and was wounded. The only regret of the many friends of this young gentleman is that his stay was so short, and all express their pleasure in meeting him in the best of health.

A local farmer here is selling his stock of potatoes (it is believed some 100 barrels) at $13 per barrel, at which figure none but the well-to-do can touch them, and it is to be regretted that so-called "men" can wait till the market is so high to take advantage of it. Those potatoes were in the cellar since last fall, and could have been sold for $8.00 per barrel—which God knows is enough for so insignificant and yet absolutely necessary articles—and still be making a reasonable profit thereon. But at $13.00 it is an outrage, and absolutely unnecessary. The Food Control Board should look into this and fix the price of potatoes at $8.00 the barrel. Great Scott! but $13.00 is something! for a barrel of spuds.

Produce and Provisions.

(From Saturday's Trade Review.)
CODFISH.—Trade in codfish is very dull both at home and abroad. The exports this week amounted to only 2,227 qts. to West Indies and New York. The quantity held in Quebec from Nfld. this week was 57,806 qts. with 11,457 qts. consumption. The holdings in Nfld. have now been reduced to about 150,000 qts., the greater portion of which is held in the outports North and will come forward next week to St. John's, ice permitting.

COD OIL.—The export of Common oil this week was 27,189 gals., all to New York. $305 per ton has been paid in the local market for this kind of oil all the Spring, dealers do not expect that this price will keep up. The manufacturers of leather have been active in making sure of their supply for the Summer since March, and this was the chief factor in keeping up the price. A lull now appears to be setting in and it is not likely that this season's common oil prices will be as well sustained as they have been all the Spring. There is only a small quantity of 1919 oil now on hand.

COD LIVER OIL.—Manufacturers should not hesitate to go in for refining oil the coming season, especially those who already have the outfit and understand the business. We believe that the price will be satisfactory next August and the following months, though not of course anything like the prices that prevailed during the war. If the price is around $2 per gallon, which it is expected it will be, this will pay manufacturers at the lower prices for which livers will be selling this year. With Common Cod Oil under $300 a ton, it will pay better those who have the outfit to refine their oil.

PORK.—There has been no change in the Pork market during the week. Mess is $49 per barrel wholesale, Fat Back and S. Clear, $46.00, Family Mess, $55.50, Short Mess, $57, and Ham Butt, $56.00. Production is increasing in the United States and export to European countries is falling off, therefore Pork products of all kinds are steadily accumulating on Packer's hands. During the War the U. S. Government encouraged the production of Pork and now that the distribution is hampered by the cause above referred to, it is natural that prices should continue to weaken. If it was not for the large American consumption due to prosperity, prices would show greater decline. The stocks on hand are ample.

BEEF.—The higher grades of Beef show no change in prices, but the cheaper kinds which have been neglected for some months by the consuming public, show a weakening tendency. Boneless is down $29 per barrel wholesale, Special Family, $37.50, Extra Flank, $35, and Pate, $37.00. It is thought that prices of both Beef and Pork will likely prevail at about present levels during the Summer. In nearly the whole list of food commodities, it is recognized that Beef is about the best value in food stuffs at the present time, we fail to understand why pork prices do not correspond to the decline in barreled beef.

FLOUR.—8,494 barrels were imported this week. Local prices are $17.25 wholesale for leading brands, and $16.75 to $17 for under grades. The total recent advance per bushel made in Canada on wheat was 35 cts. or $1.55 per barrel, the full effect which has not yet taken place on flour here, but when it does in a few weeks, flour here will be $18 a barrel wholesale for leading grades. Fishermen flour charged to Summer's account will therefore not be much under $20.00.

SUGAR.—The latest report from Cuba shows that the crop has been reduced by about 250,000 tons and the Raws have advanced 2½ cents, making White Granulated about 23½ cents. There is no longer any prospect of getting 25 cent sugar this Summer owing to this late advance in raws. During the week 1500 barrels and 500 bags were imported to St. John's. The stocks on hand are sufficient to keep the trade going till next arrivals.

MOLASSES.—The 'Russel M Zinc' arrived here this week from Barbados with 329 puncheons, 48 barrels, and 51 half barrels of molasses. The 'Elizabeth Fearn' also arrived with 525 puncheons, 92 barrels, and 125 half barrels, total about 930 puncheons, which added to 1486 which had arrived up to May 15th the grand total will be 2416 puncheons. This is only about one-fourth of our yearly supply and so far only 500 puncheons are said to have been secured to order. The price of Fancy in puncheons is $1.90 per gallon, and Choice $1.75.

POTATOES.—The general price in St. John's this week for imported potatoes is $14 per barrel, but it appears that the crop has not been reached. The Minister of Agriculture, whose cables have been securing Canada for good seed potatoes, showed the Trade Review a telegram from St. John, N.B., where he located some on Tuesday, saying that the dealer who had them was willing to fill an order for 500 barrels. Dr. Campbell's figuring showed that they would cost $18, per barrel to those who want them here. 7733 sacks came in by the S.S. Canadian Aviator.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, April 12, 1920.

PRINCE'S BACHELOR HOME.

Advantage is to be taken of the absence of the Prince of Wales to make some extensive alterations in York House, his residence adjoining St. James's Palace. York House is neither a large nor a pretentious place. It makes, indeed, a poor comparison with many very ordinary West End residences, and the Prince, as a bachelor with a small domestic staff, occupies only a few rooms. Even these few are furnished with a splendour very different from the popular conception of a royal residence. The forthcoming alterations will add a few more apartments to the suite, and when the Prince returns from his tour he will be joined at York House by Prince Albert, whose growing duties now necessitate more personal freedom than is possible while he remains at Buckingham Palace. When Prince Albert moves his present quarters, a tiny flat in the Palace will be taken over by Prince George.

ABOLITION OF STAFF DRESS.

Red Tabs and the gold scroll on the peak of the cap, the distinctive badges of the Staff, are to be abolished. This decision has been reached by the Army Council as a result of the recent conferences held at the War Office on Army dress reform. Only officers of the rank of brigadier general and above will retain the familiar red tabs and "brass" hat. All other Staff officers will wear ordinary regimental uniform with a distinguishing badge upon the arm. In army quarters the abolition of Staff dress is hailed as a welcome reform. It has never been the custom in the Navy for staff officers to be dressed differently from their comrades in the ward room, and during the war the red tabs and gold scroll upon the cap of the British Army Staff officer can hardly be considered to have become emblems of popularity. However hard-working and conscientious a Staff officer may be, the distinctive badges of his office inevitably "hit the eye" of his mud-caked colleague in the trenches. For a long time a strong school favored the retention of special dress for Staff officers as marking the hand of authority, but this party has now lost the day.

PIPE SMOKING ON THE INCREASE.

Tobaccoists tell me that there is a tendency to a revulsion of feeling against the cigarette-smoking habit that developed its highest vogue among both sexes during the years of the war. The decline in the sale of cigarettes is not attributed so much to the advancing prices as to the absence of the enervating times of the war period, when the most harmful form of smoking was the most readily practised. Pipes are now coming more into fashion, and the present demand for them is abnormal. Cigar smoking is also more favored than formerly, and manufacturing firms are introducing brands at moderate prices to meet the more cultivated tastes of the humbler smokers.

A RELUCTANT RETURN.

Londoners returned to work reluctantly after the Easter vacation, and business everywhere was slack. The holiday period can have satisfied very few, and those who have come back from the coast resorts seem to have got little in return for their expenditure. All complain of chilly weather, and not a few of rapacity by hotel and lodging-housekeepers. It might be well if the professional hosts took serious stock of the situation before Whitsuntide, five weeks hence, and the beginning of the summer holidays. True, the prices of foodstuffs are high, but rents have not materially advanced, and some of the charges for board and lodging narrated to me are undoubtedly exorbitant. Mine host—and hostess—seem to assume that money is of no consequence to holiday visitors. They are likely to overreach themselves and make a Witsun or a summer holiday impossible to people who cannot afford to be fleeced. London seems to have had an unusually large incursion of holiday-makers from the provinces this Easter, and many of them have not gone back yet, or are going by the latest trains. Good weather they could not have counted upon here at this season, but they were entitled to hospitality at a reasonable cost. I hope they got it; but the Londoner, who complains loudly of seaside extortionists, is not free from the vice of avarice. The days of inexpensive holidays anywhere have gone for ever. The only really happy people about just now are those who kept their money in their pockets and stayed at home.

GERMANS SEEK PATENTS HERE.

German inventors are showing activity in applying for British patents, and the Patents Office is unusually busy. Most of the German specifications so far received relate to machinery, but one large firm at Charlottenburg is seeking to protect new processes for the manufacture of glycerine. Swiss, Italian, and American applicants for British patents have come forward with devices for prolonging the life of boots and shoes and with substitutes for leather. English inventors are not behindhand, but curiously few women are among them. For every 2,000 men-applicants only ten women ask patents.

FIGHTING INFLUENZA.

Health authorities are fully alive to the possibilities of another influenza outbreak, as indicated by the official statistics from the 96 chief towns of the United Kingdom. These show a rapid rise in the number of influenza deaths during the period January 31st to April 3rd of from 66 to 392. Profiting by the experience of earlier visitations of the scourge, the Ministry of Health are already prepared with various preventive measures. It has been considered expedient, as regards England, to leave the local authorities with full powers to administer to the needs of the districts under their control upon the lines laid down in leaflets which are being issued to them by the Ministry. No effective cure having been found, these leaflets recommend the public to observe the usual care in adopting domestic precautionary measures. The suggestion that all doctors should be "empannelled" and have allotted to them specified infected districts has been abandoned in favor of a scheme whereby local authorities will appoint special committees to carry out whatever steps are deemed necessary to fight the plague. The compulsory wearing of masks has been shelved, on the ground that there is not sufficient evidence to justify such legislation as would be required.

ENDING THE LOTTERY REVIVAL.

Lotteries are illegal in this country, but sweepstakes and the new development (things indistinguishable from lotteries), have been running without let or hindrance until now, when the police are at last interfering with them. The war saw a big increase in these veiled gambles for big prizes.

there generally being an ostensible charitable object for the balance of the money raised. The largest thing of its kind known in this country—the Golden Ballot—has been booked for months past, and in the end tickets of the face value of five shillings ($1.25) each were sold to the total amount of $1,250,000. The first prize was a sum of $12,500, and there were motor cars, pearl necklaces, a London house, a month's free dinners at the Savoy and other prizes, all dependent of course upon drawing lucky numbers. The bulk of the money was to go to the aid of disabled soldiers and sailors and to be spent on some scheme for a fully equipped sanatorium and grounds. Eventually the promoters apparently got wind of coming police action, because the ballot was closed down suddenly a month before its specified date, the prizes distributed, and the rest of the money paid over for the sanatorium, all in 48 hours. When it was all clear the police raided the headquarters and issued a summons against the lady who was the organizer of the scheme, always, as carefully mentioned in the advertisements, under the patronage of Earl Beatty and Earl Haig. A great many sweepstakes have been run for this country from addresses on the Continent, and especially in Switzerland. These have been the frankly illegal ones, prizes being offered for the winners of horse races, football matches, etc. As a result of recent prosecutions several of the gentry organizing these schemes have been arrested in this country, tried, convicted, and lodged in gaol. They were found to be frankly swindlers. Football betting has become a violent craze in this country. It is conducted by correspondence and means the filling in of coupons and the depositing of a fixed sum per coupon with the organizer of the scheme, usually a sum of sixpence or a shilling (12-25c.). The winner is the competitor who fills in the largest number of winning teams out of the total First League clubs playing each Saturday. Some of these are frauds and some are honest, but all alike are being rendered illegal by recent legislation.

Race Conflicts

Old and New.

How long can the predicted clash between the white and the colored races be postponed? The race question is far from new. It hung over the ancient peoples like an obsession. It faced the Greeks who campaigned with Alexander in the East and met again the Romans when they pushed out to the conquest of the world. The middle ages knew it; Spain, France and England shouldered its burden in the nation building; and when Europe poured forth her populations overseas well-nigh every colonist who ventured forth from the mother country found he had a race problem on his hands. It is the shadow in the Pacific to-day. It still hovers over the dark continent like a spectre that will not down.

And the new fears about race are but the old anxieties writ large. Stoddard's "Rising Tide of Color" gives a fresh and vivid setting to things that have long been said. Ten years ago B. L. Putnam Weale sounded the same note in his "Conflict of Color," a book which, though dealing with pre-war conditions, made a sensation in its time. Almost a decade earlier, in an equally notable work entitled "National Life and Character," Prof. C. H. Pearson dipped impressively into the future of race. He looked forward to a globe girdled with a continuous zone of the blacks, yellows and browns, no longer under tutelage or too weak for aggression, but practically independent, monopolizing the trade of their regions and circumscribing the commerce and industry of the white man. "We were struggling among ourselves," wrote Prof. Pearson, "for supremacy in a world which we thought destined to belong to the Aryan nations and the Christian faith. We shall wake up to find ourselves elbowed and hustled, perhaps even thrust aside, by people whom we looked down upon as servile and thought of as bound always to minister to our needs."

In the 20 years that have elapsed since that prediction nothing has occurred to give promise of its early realization. The greatest exponent of the "race peril" was the Kaiser himself, and the test of the world war dissipated it. When our essentially white civilization was attacked, black, yellow and brown men rallied to its defence. The colored troops of France and the United States joined the men of "the Aryan nations and the Christian faith" that freedom might live; India contributed an army of her own, and China devoted many thousands of her laborers to work in France. Maoris and Filipinos helped on war contributions and liberty loans. Shall not those memories count against any "Armageddon of race"? Grant that ambitions have been aroused and that new aspirations call for adjudication. Surely this old world is equal both to the danger and to the duty.—Boston Sunday Herald.

This Week's Wisdom.

The less a man knows the more he wants to tell it.

Girls are true friends when they cry together in sympathy.

Some girls sing like nightingales and others sing like gales in the night.

A woman's argument is never in vain if she is able to convince herself.

Nothing makes a girl so weary as to have a young man ask her for a kiss.

The man who calls a spade a spade at all times has more enemies than friends.

Some women derive as much pleasure from weeping as some men do from laughing.

The homely girl with one beau usually gets married sooner than the pretty girl who has half a dozen on the string.

HOME-MADE BREAD

Home bread-making reduces the high cost of living by lessening the amount of expensive meats required to supply the necessary nourishment to the body. The increased nutritious value of bread made in the home with should be sufficient incentive to the thoughtful housewife to give this important food item the attention to which it is justly entitled. Bread made with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other.

In the Prize Ring.

WILDE PUTS IT OVER DYSON.

Lawrence, Mass., May 6.—It took Jimmy Wilde of England, the flyweight champion of the world, but two minutes and twenty seconds of the first round of a scheduled twelve-round battle to knock out Bobby Dyson of New Bedford, the New England bantam-weight champion, here Saturday.

A few seconds before the knockout the British boxer sent Dyson to the canvas with a sturdy left hook. The latter took his time coming up, taking a count of nine, while Wilde coolly stood waiting for him to regain his feet. Wilde immediately attacked, shooting a slashing right to Dyson's chin and a quick left hook to the body. Dyson went through the ropes and was counted out.

Mrs. Wilde sat at the ringside. Jimmy kissed her just before he stepped into the ring. When the battle was over he turned at once to her and waved his hand.

Fifteen thousand fans saw the contest. Both boys weighed in at 116 pounds ringside. They were under weight with their clothes on. Dyson, who is but 19 years old, usually fights a few pounds more than this figure, and the weight may have hurt him somewhat.

It was generally expected that Dyson, who is a brilliant southpaw boxer, would give Wilde a vigorous battle. The ending was a tremendous surprise.

At the bell, the men stepped to the middle of the ring and Dyson led a right left to Wilde's body, which was partly blocked. They clinched and Wilde reached Dyson's face with a few left jabs. The boys seemed to be settling down for the milling when, like a flash, Wilde let go a fierce left hook to the jaw and Dyson went down. Wilde stepped away and gave him plenty of chance to get set. Then he shot the right and left that counted the New England boy out. Harry Ertle of New Jersey was referee.

TOMMY BURNS CHALLENGES BECKETT.

London, May 11.—Tommy Burns, of Calgary, ex-heavyweight champion of the world, has challenged Joe Beckett, winner of last night's bout with B. Wells, and Beckett has accepted. They will fight for the championship of the British Empire. Burns, who has been training secretly for some time, says he is willing to stake $5,000 on the result of the fight.

CRITICS LAUD FRENCHMAN.

New York, May 8.—Since Georges Carpentier has made his first appearance here, and started off on his tour that takes him to Montreal on May 12, critics are lauding the Frenchman to the skies and many concede him more than a chance to whip Dempsey.

Georges is a perfect picture in action if ever there was one, writes one critic. Indeed, Carpentier's boxing is about as artistic a treat as we've had in many a day. He is all that was picturesque in Stanley Ketchell and then some.

Carpentier is far more graceful in the ring than good old "Steve" was, but he does many things that remind you much of the handsome "Assassin." Carpentier has Ketchell's odd way of missing with one hand or another and then immediately shifting and putting just double the force into the punch that follows.

There is no doubt about the Carpentier punch. He has a habit of falling in with his punches, this being helped by the fact that he boxes high up on his toes. He comes from this position with the grace and speed of a cat of the forests as he drives in a punch and lands it with all the force and added weight of his body—with both feet off the ground. When he goes off those toes and shoots his punch he arrives, fast and all, with a dull sickening thud. He delivers the blow with a swift downward twist of the body. That's why he's a hitter of extraordinary effectiveness. That is why in the opinion of the old guard, men like Humphries, Corbett, Lewis, Jeannette, etc., he has a chance against Dempsey.

FRENCH CHAMP MAKES GOOD IMPRESSION.

New York, May 10.—Georges Carpentier has finally shown himself in public with gloves on his hands. The spectators at the 71st regiment armory Sunday night did not see a great deal of the French champion, but what they did see cost Georges no prestige. Carpentier was not a disappointment. In fact, he showed to better advantage than was generally expected by those who had seen him in his street clothes only.

So many European champions have failed to make good over here that boxing followers discount most of the advance stuff sent out about a newcomer. Carpentier proved to be an exception, for it is plain that he is fast and as clever a boxer and as effective a hitter as reports have made him out to be. There is no doubt that if Dempsey lands squarely on Carpentier's body or jaw he will not have to repeat the blow, but it has never been said of Carpentier that he is an iron man when it comes to taking punishment.

Carpentier looks like a better man than Billy Miske, and Dempsey could not hit Miske squarely, although they met twice. Georges is much faster and a much better boxer than Miske. He is also a far better hitter, but he is not as rugged as the man from St. Paul.

Carpentier will require plenty of training to put him into fighting condition. His wind is surprisingly poor for a man who looks so fit in other respects. It is certain that months of show work and one night stands will not help him to any extent. The circus ruined Willard as a fighter and it may do the same for Carpentier.

Fans Ask Questions.

Signs are not wanting that Georges will eventually suffer in another way from so much show work. Already boxing fans are beginning to write in asking questions that might embarrass Georges to answer.

One fan wanted to know what they would say in Europe if one of our boys went across and demanded a fortune for exhibition work at the same time refusing to fight, although challenged from all sides. Would he receive the freedom of the city or a Laurette Taylor welcome? he asks.

Another fan thinks he can name at least fifteen men who can beat the French ring idol, and he calls upon Georges to fight and prove his worth before posing as an all conquering hero. Prominent among the men the letter writer names as sure to take the measure of Carpentier are Mike O'Dowd, Ray Smith, Gene Tunney, Bob Martin and Fred Fulton. He adds that as O'Dowd, Smith and Tunney have war records they are as much entitled to the respect of boxing followers as Carpentier is and that the latter should be forced to fight one of them before he goes any further.

Carpentier may blow up quickly if he ever faces Dempsey, but so far as O'Dowd and men of his own size are concerned he has nothing to fear. If the Frenchman were satisfied to stick to his own division he would be able to win the world's championship without much trouble. A man of his weight can match him in speed, skill and hitting ability, while he is rugged enough to take what punishment would come his way.

With a little more experience Tunney might beat him, but O'Dowd is too small, while Smith and Martin are not experienced enough to have a chance. But whether Carpentier can beat Dempsey or Fulton there is some reason to doubt.

FULTON MAY MEET DEMPSEY.

New York, May 8.—Although Lloyd Fitzsimmons, the Benton Harbor promoter, who intends to hold a Jack Dempsey battle there on July 5, named Fred Fulton, Willie Meehan, Billy Miske and Bill Brennan as the leading contenders only one of the bunch has shown any desire to meet the champion. Fulton says he is agreeable and will not demand more than a reasonable amount for his services.

The mention of Fulton, Meehan, Miske and Brennan as the leading contenders show how meagre is the field just now. Dempsey already has knocked out both Fulton and Brennan. Miske is a sick man and no one takes Meehan seriously even though he did win a referee's decision over Dempsey shortly before the latter won the title.

Although the lanky Fulton was knocked out in a few seconds when he met Dempsey two years ago, the tail plasterer appears to be the only man worth matching against the champion.

BECKETT STOPS WELLS IN THE THIRD.

London, May 10.—Joe Beckett knocked out Bombardier Wells in the third round of a match for the heavyweight championship of England to-night.

The fight took place at Olympia and an enormous crowd assembled to witness the contest, which was expected to prove a grueling one.

Both men looked fit. Wells forced the pace at the outset and had some what the better of the first round. In the second Beckett drove his opponent to the boards with a left jab for a count of nine, but Wells, on Beckett's strength prevailed over hard.

In the third round, Beckett again adopted rushing tactics, only to be met by Wells' famous left. But Beckett's strength prevailed over the science of his opponent, and finally he landed a terrific right to the jaw, flooring Wells, who was counted out.

ATTENTION!

Do you know that about SEVENTY PER CENT of the coal used in your house is wasted, and that you can prevent a large proportion of waste?

Coal is wasted in two ways. It goes up the chimney in smoke and soot. It is left unburnt in the form of cinders.

COALOX prevents the escape of smoke, and by providing an additional supply of oxygen burns up most of the soot and cinders.

Persons who have not used Coalox say that it is all very well in theory but it never works out.

LISTEN! One customer who used COALOX regularly during the past six months had the Sweep in the other day. They knew they were getting more heat from the coal used, but they did not know why until then. There was not a day's soot in the chimney and the Sweep's fee was easy money for him.

YOU TRY IT and find how it will save YOU money.

A can costing $1.20 treats 1 1/2 tons coal. Also in $2.50 sizes.

WILLIAM FREW, Water St.

"Then."

A scheme has been proposed by a learned Scientist to divert the Arctic Current in the Straits of Belle Isle. This would be done by means of an enormous breakwater and, it is thought, would have the effect of altering the climate of Newfoundland and the Maritime Provinces of Canada, so as to make them warmer. Perhaps the following might result:

The Professor had a brain-wave and promised to divert That chilly Arctic Current—well, to where it wouldn't hurt; And thus it was all things were changed (so history relates) Because that old Professor dammed those damned old Belle-Isle Straits.

In several years the weather grew appreciably hot. And summer followed summer, while of winter there was naught; The spring we used to curse so much we couldn't curse again, For spring now rivalled August in the very South of Spain.

We grew bananas, nuts and grapes where once the fish flakes stood, Revoked the Prohibition Law (when Coaker said we could), In order that our rarest wines could find a sale abroad,— For now, alas, affairs were such we couldn't export Cod!

Some wines, of course, we "salted down" upon our cellar shelves, And some, (ah, breathe it lightly) we just had to drink ourselves! Our cafes were world-famous, our bars known far and wide, And millions from the U.S.A. to N.F. yearly hid.

St. John's became a fairy-town of palm-trees and of smells, (Perhaps I should say "frangrances") where dark-eyed Southern belles Par-tied in the mid-day sun beneath their parasols, Or took their swains to bull-fights close outside the city walls.

The stores were filled with silken wares, with spices and with rum, And Water Street, yes, Water Street, incessantly would hum With all the busy life you find in little Southern towns Where lovely Signoretas shop in multi-coloured gowns.

In spring the bold Letharios would pluck their gay guitars When serenading lady-loves all underneath the stars; All sorts of feathered creatures, too, each May would pipe their trills, While lambs would do a Morris-dance upon the Southside hills.

No more the fogs of yesteryear! No more the icy flocs! No more the isolation of the old-time winter snows— But sunshine—And, just think of it, our Southernizing dates From when that old Professor dammed those damned old Belle-Isle Straits!

—H. A. ANDERSON.

THIS FEEBLE AGED WOMAN

Tells How Vinol Builds Up Strength and Vitality For Old People.

She says: "I am seventy-three years of age and suffered from a weak, run-down, condition, and was so feeble I could hardly get around; my daughter induced me to try VINOL, and it gave me a good appetite, I sleep well, am stronger and healthier in every way, so I can get around and do all my house work." The reason VINOL is so successful in such cases is because it contains the tissue building and medicinal elements of cod's livers, aided by the blood-making, strength-creating, properties of tonic iron, beef peptone and hypophosphites.

Thus in a natural manner it increases the appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood with thousands of red corpuscles and imparts strength, health and vitality to every organ, muscle and tissue of the body. If feeble old people only realized the good VINOL will do them, our druggists would not be able to supply the demand.

Strikes and Prices.

The strike of the longshoremen in St. John's has been settled and for a time matters of labor will run smoothly. Strikes are bad for all concerned, working around in their results to give with one hand and take with the other. The longshoremen in an effort to better their condition by securing an advance in pay, decide to strike. First, they make a demand, coupled with a notice that if the demand is not complied with in a given time, a tie-up will take place. The demand is refused, the tie-up comes, and after considerable delay and no little loss, employers give in; strikers are elated over the success of their strike, and they settled down to work at the increased rate of pay. Next, the employers do some figuring by which calculations are made that the tie-up caused them a loss in trade—delay in getting their goods, and inability to fill their orders in time. Besides these actual losses, the employers reckon that the tie-up entailed other losses, such as calculating what would be given the strikers in increased pay, extra hours making up the figures, and sundry all and various other items of expense. Then up goes the price of goods that the strikers handled after and before the tie-up came on. To offset the 15 per cent. increase in pay, 15 per cent. is added to the sales price of all articles in stock, goods that may have been imported and handled months before the strike came on, and in such cases the odd money is always added, not taken off. Then the strikers, after considering the increase in the prices, again go on strike for an increase of pay, and the programme is again gone over. Strikes do not pay in the long run. The worst feature of the city strikes is that the whole country suffers from the strikes directly and indirectly. If the prices in the city were only affected, the outport people would not be concerned, but the increased cost of handling the goods in St. John's has to be added to the first cost, and dealers and the public have to pay the price for the strikers of the city longshoremen. The result must be in the end that the outport dealers in an effort to protect themselves and their customers will have to import direct, to loss of city and the longshoremen. —Hr. Grace Standard.

Insane Man in Boat.

HALIFAX POLICE OFFICERS HAD TRYING TASK.

Shortly after eleven o'clock last night a telephone message reached the Police Station that a man was acting queerly in a boat near the North End Slip. Officers John Weston and Raymond Mitchell went to the Dockyard and got in a boat and rowed to the man whom they soon ascertained was insane. He was standing up in the boat and with a plank was trying to break it up.

They approached closer and they saw he had picked up a knife. By persuasion they got him to permit them to tow him to the shore. The man then became ugly and tried to use his knife, but officer Weston knocked this from his hands and it took both men to hold him down in the bottom of the boat, which rocked and was in danger of upsetting.

They finally succeeded, with the help of a civilian, to place the man in custody. In court to-day the man "carried on" so violently that it took three officers to hold him. He gave his name as Fred Way, of Newfoundland, and he was remanded till Friday. He will be sent to Mount Hope. Acadian Recorder, May 12.

A Great Entertainment.

When last year for a week the Christian Brothers' boys, under Prof. Hutton, delighted capacity audiences at the Casino by their almost professional rendering of Gilbert and Sullivan's most popular Opera—The Mikado—musical critics felt that the climax for youthful performers had been reached, but last night's faultlessly rendered Opera "Dorothy," showed that new laurels awaited the St. Patrick's Hall and Holy Cross boys. Perfection appears to be their slogan, and certainly the delightful entertainment produced by them last night was a feast which left nothing to be desired by the music lovers who formed their large audience. The boys of these schools have long been noted for their fine chorus singing, but in those of "Dorothy" they surpassed all previous efforts. The Huntsman's Chorus is such that no person with any music in his composition should miss. W. Ryall, who was a capital Yum-Yum in the Mikado, was even a more perfect Dorothy. His singing, acting and make-up must have made many of the fair sex almost envious. G. Kennedy, Jas. Warren, W. Galgay and Stan Carew, as Lydia-Phyllis, Mrs. Pri-vett and Lady Betty, respectively, could not have performed their various roles more faultlessly. S. O'Leary made as good a Squire Bantam as a Mikado last May; P. Dobbin and W. Wallace went one further on their previous high records—W. Wallace's "Queen of My Heart" was particularly acceptable. The inimitable Percie Jardine was entirely at home and Lurcher kept the audience merry to the finish. The dances for which Mrs. Cleary was responsible, were thoroughly enjoyed and reflected much credit on her and her performers. Of the orchestral parts it is sufficient to say that they were in the hands of Messrs. McCarthy, F. Bradshaw, L. Marshall, A. Stafford, A. Duley, P. Fitzgerald, F. Skinner, J. Cronin, Mrs. Pidgeon and Hon. A. Meera. The performance will be repeated to-night and Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights.

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir,—I have often heard it said that most of the working women in Newfoundland work a good deal harder than the men; and that in the fishing industry carried on in the Outports, the women do all the hardest and most unpleasant part of the proceedings. Besides helping strenuously with the fish, they have their houses and children to look after, and help in the fields and vegetable gardens as well. As a general thing they toil longer hours than their husbands, but if the latter—or the children—are asked, "What does your mother do?" in nine cases out of ten they will reply, "She doesn't do anything; she stays at home and minds the house." This is the value placed on woman's work—the honor and respect paid to it. It is all part and parcel of the same injustice that classes women with lunatics and convicts politically, and from the standpoint of citizenship treats them as slaves. This may sound strong language, but people who have to obey laws which they have had no voice in making, are slaves, to all intents and purposes, so one is justified in using the word.

But there is now an opportunity to remedy the political grievances under which women have so long existed, and let us hope there will be no obstacles placed in the way of doing so. It is said that there are a good many women in Newfoundland who do not want to be enfranchised. But is that any reason for not giving the vote to the women who do want it? At the close of the Civil War in America there were slaves who did not want their freedom, but this was never construed to be an argument in favour of slavery! Furthermore, the vote is not compulsory, and women who do not want it can stay away from the polling booth. It is not necessary to wait until everybody is in favor of a reform before carrying it through. There are plenty of women in all classes in Newfoundland to-day who are heart and soul in favour of enfranchisement for their sex, and who will do their utmost to secure it, and to use it wisely and for the good of the community and the country, when it is granted.

Yours truly,
 VOTELESS.

MRS. ALICE GRESHAM DODD mother of the first American soldier killed in France, who gives entire credit for recovery of her health to the well-known medicine Tanlac.

The following remarkable endorsement of Tanlac was given recently by Mrs. Alice Gresham Dodd, at the Gresham Memorial Home, Gavin Park, Evansville, Ind., which home was presented to her by the patriotic people of Indiana, as evidence of their appreciation of the services rendered to his country by her son, Corporal James B. Gresham, the first American soldier killed in France. Expressions of sympathy were received by Mrs. Dodd from all parts of the United States, and the newspapers of the country carried the story of the first "war mother."

The shock of her son's death resulted in the serious breakdown of Mrs. Dodd's health, but everyone will learn with interest and pleasure that she is now in splendid health again. When seen at her home recently she made the following statement, giving the entire credit for her recovery to the well-known medicine, Tanlac.

"After my dear boy's death, I had a general breakdown in health," said Mrs. Dodd. "At first it was just indigestion. My food used to upset me and I had to diet myself very carefully, which wasn't much hardship as I lost all desire to eat. Then I had an attack of rheumatism, with severe pains in my shoulders, back and arms. Sometimes I used to suffer a great deal, and my joints would get all swollen up and stiff. I was able to do very little about the house, and at times couldn't even cook a meal. I got very nervous and restless, and at night would lay awake for hours, and lost many a night's sleep as a consequence.

"A friend of mine had received a great deal of help from Tanlac, and it was she who advised me to try it. I am so glad I did it for it proved the best medicine I have ever taken. It soon gave me a good appetite and seemed to settle my stomach so that I was no longer troubled with indigestion. I don't know what it is to have rheumatic pains now, the swelling and stiffness has all gone out of my joints and I am able to do the work of the house with the greatest ease. My nerves are now steady and strong, I sleep fine at night, and I feel better in health than ever before in my life. I shall always be grateful for what Tanlac has done for me, and shall recommend it every chance I get."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors; by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle.—adv.

The Woodford-Squires Charges.

The following correspondence has taken place between the members of the Opposition in the Legislature and His Excellency the Governor, and speaks for itself:—

St. John's, Nfld.,
May 21st, 1920.
His Excellency Sir Chas. Alexander Harris, K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., &c.,
Governor of Newfoundland.

Your Excellency:—
Referring to the allegation of misconduct on the part of Your Excellency's Prime Minister and others in connection with the recent Election Petition against the return of Mr. Wm. Woodford, we regret that the circumstances compel us to have to again address Your Excellency on the subject.

Your Excellency will call to mind that shortly before the opening of the Legislature you received from us a statement in writing detailing the facts, asking that the charges against your Prime Minister be investigated, and pointing out how undesirable it would be for that officer to occupy the position of Leader of the House whilst these charges remained unrefuted.

It is now five weeks since an official pronouncement was caused to be published informing the public that Your Excellency was appointing a Commission to inquire into that matter; that this Commission would be presided over by the Chief Justice and would act without delay. The Legislature opened in due course; and on several occasions when the question of the appointment of this Commission was brought up by the members of the Opposition, Your Excellency's Attorney General replied intimating that the course outlined with regard to the Commission was being followed. It is some weeks since announcement was made that the Commission would consist of the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Kent and Hon. R. K. Bishop. About ten days ago in answer to an enquiry by the Leader of the Opposition, the Attorney General informed the House that the matter was progressing, and that he could see no reason why the Commission could not sit in the course of the following week. On Wednesday last, in answer to the Opposition, the Attorney General announced that the Commission which had been issued proved abortive, as the Judge, while prepared to take evidence as to the facts were unwilling to make any finding on these facts. Upon being further interrogated yesterday your Attorney General stated that no Commission had been issued at all; that the matter had never got any farther than the preparation of several affidavits of a Commission, none of which had ever been adopted, and none of which was now in existence.

These briefly are the facts. Whilst emphasizing as strongly as possible that this matter cannot, in the public interest, be allowed to drop, we have to respectfully direct Your Excellency's attention to the position that it will be impossible to select a local Commission outside the Judges that will be satisfactory. The only alternative, therefore, that would seem to present itself is to secure an investigation by a person not resident in Newfoundland, or in any way connected with it. We submit that such appointee should be a man of judicial experience and repute and preferably should come from England.

We are advised, however, that there would be no necessity for a Commission at all if their Lordships the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Kent sitting as an Election Court on the hearing of the petition against Mr. William Woodford could see fit to exercise the jurisdiction that they possess and inquire into and deal with the matters arising out of the motion made for the withdrawal of the petition, although that motion was never proceeded with, and from the strictly technical position was not made in accordance with the procedure laid down by the Court.

It is unfortunate that there has been so much delay in this matter; and we feel it our duty, not alone to the public, but to Your Excellency yourself, to reiterate our determination to spare no effort to leave nothing undone to have this matter fully and properly investigated; and with that purpose in view, if there be any way in which we can be of assistance to Your Excellency, we gladly place ourselves at Your Excellency's disposal.

We have the honour to be, Your Excellency's obedient servants,

May 21st, 1920.

Sir,—I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 21st instant respecting the unfortunate delay which has occurred in the issue of a Commission to enquire into the circumstances surrounding the affidavit made by Mr. William Woodford, and the allegations contained therein.

No one deplores more than His Excellency the fact that there should have been a series of delays, but I am to explain that the allegations made are serious and that it is in His Excellency's opinion essential to arrange the strongest and most independent enquiry within his reach. He believes that he is on the point of obtaining a Commission which will certainly have his own confidence, and he will ask you to exercise patience a little longer in a matter which cannot be of more anxiety to you than it is to him.

As regards your suggestion that a Commission should be brought from England, that was obviously a course which might have been taken but it appears to His Excellency as at present advised, that the delay and expense of such a course would be quite unjustified.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,

Private Secretary.

The Most Beautiful Car in America

A New Development in Light Sixes

Before we began experimental work on our new six-cylinder motor three years ago, we made a very thorough investigation of the light six field.

We found out just what qualities car owners desired in the power plants of their motor cars and then we designed an engine to meet these requirements.

The wisdom of our method is attested by the unanimous approval given our five-passenger "Glenbrook" model. With its first appearance, it immediately won the enthusiastic support of motorists.

And, by its dependable and economical performance, it has so clearly demonstrated its high character as an investment value that our production schedule is already proving unequal to the demand.

The "Glenbrook" is a truly remarkable development in five-passenger cars. Won't you arrange for a demonstration while our dealer is in position to meet your requirements as to delivery?
