The Imprisoned Heiress

The Spectre of Egremont.

CHAPTER XIX.

Her hair was plentifully sprinkled with gray, and her eyes were sunken, but her mouth had a brave and cheerful expression, as if, through all the sufferings she had undoubtedly known, she had kept up a cheerful and courageous heart.

Her mouth broke into a broad smile as she continued to regard the heiress but she did not speak or move, evidently waiting to be addressed.

She was still waiting when the Lady Alexina's maid entered and gave into the hand of her mistress her purse, withdrawing immediately.

The heiress twirled the thin gold chain impatiently, and opened and shut the well-filled velvet bag that served as a dainty receptacle for gold and bank notes, annoyed that her visitor did not address her in the suppliant manner common to menials.

"Is it possible?" interrupted the heiress, with a laugh. "How ridiculous! What an antiquated couple they will make."

"You are!" exclaimed the woman, her smile deepening, and then fading, and giving place to an anxious, puzzled look. "You are the Lady Alexina, I suppose," and her voice trembled. "You don't remember anything of me—your old nurse?" and her eyes filled with tears, as no look of pleasure came into the face of the heiress. "I was your mother's foster-sister, brought up with her almost like an own one, and I was her child's nurse. Don't you remember me? But then you were so small when I married and went away. You cried then, poor little motherless bairn—"

"Why, it's Janette!" exclaimed Lady Egremont, arising and coming forward, a strange look upon her face. "Why, where have you been all these years?"

She held out her hand, and Janette took it, holding it but a single instant. "I have been mostly in one place my lady," she said, quietly, wiping away her tears. "When I left Egremont it was to be married to a farmer who had a nice place he had leased down at the South of England, and we lived there till my husband's death two years since. He left me almost unprovided for, and we had no children. I have done sewing since, and just managed to get a living."

Every eye turned upon the heiress who had never before felt so awkward and ill at ease.

She felt as if something more were expected of her than she could give, but what it was she hardly knew. She surely could not be expected to kiss this humble woman who had been her mother's foster-sister and her own nurse, and the idea was utterly repugnant to her.

She looked up, encountering the keen, bright gaze of her betrothed, and he seemed to read her vain, frivolous soul to its utmost depth, and she almost fancied that his lip curled at the result of his scrutiny. She looked at her guardian and his wife, and both were pale and anxious, and both looked at her pleadingly. She looked too at the Lady Loean, whose countenance expressed wonder at her delay, and at Lyle, and then she imagined that she understood what was expected of her.

With the utmost condescending air she turned to her old nurse, who had been her mother's loved friend and companion and said:

"I am sure I am very glad to see you, Janette. Of course, I don't remember you, for I was but a little child when you went away from Egremont, but, although I don't recognize you, I don't doubt your words at all."

I suppose you came to me for assistance?" and she opened her purse and slipped her jeweled fingers into the aperture.

"Not for assistance, my lady," and the woman's voice was full of sob. "but for permission to remain with you and attend upon you. Oh, my nursing, my pretty birds, that I have loved all my life—"

"That is all very right and proper, my good woman," interrupted the heiress. "You can stay at Egremont if you like. You say you are a seamstress, and my maid shall see that you have plenty of work. Just touch that bell."

Before Janette made a movement to obey, Lady Egremont said, in a tone of hearty kindness:

"Consider this your home, Janette. I know that the late Lady Egremont would have provided for her had her life been spared, and it shall be my pleasure and duty to care for your remaining days. I will give orders to have a comfortable room prepared for you immediately, and you must not see unless you really desire it."

"Thanks, my lady," and Janette's eye kindled. "You are very kind—far kinder than I expected. I will stay, for no other place would be so like home to me. I had hoped that my nursing—my Lady Alexina—would have welcomed me for her mother's sake, if not because I love herself, but I was mistaken. She does not seem to be what she promised in her pretty infancy," she added sadly. "She was such a delicate little thing, with a glint of gold in her hair, and with eyes as soft, sweet, and tender as an angel's. She was such an innocent, loving, pure little child—but I beg your pardon," she said, interrupting herself, as a dark frown appeared on the brow of the heiress. "I forgot myself. Your ladyship is very good to allow me to stay."

The Lady Alexina bowed superciliously, and reached out her hand for the silver call-bell upon the table. Its clear summons was answered by the waiting servant.

"Toppa," said Lady Egremont, quietly, anticipating the order of Alexina, "have a hot breakfast prepared for Mrs. King immediately. It can be served in the small reception-room."

The servant retired to deliver the order, leaving Janette still standing. "I will go with you to the house-keeper, Janette," then said her ladyship, kindly, "and will see to your room. Come!"

She approached the door, but the woman paused, hesitated, and then timidly approached the heiress, and held out her hand.

Annoyed and confused, Alexina held out hers in return, but she did it so coolly as to show that she did not do it willingly.

It might be that Janette wished to kiss her, but the handsome face of Alexina was not sufficiently tempting or encouraging to induce her to state her wish, and she reluctantly relinquished the lifeless hand, murmuring tearfully as she turned away:

"Her whole nature has changed. She is not at all like the little child I nursed—not at all like her angel mother! It's a wonderful change!"

The heiress flushed angrily as she heard the comment; Lord Egremont paled, and Lord Ashcroft looked grave and thoughtful.

Janette did not linger, following Lady Egremont from the room.

Home-made, but Has No Equal For Coughs

Makes a family supply of really dependable cough medicine. Easily prepared, and cures about 80%.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficulty breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup, and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any drug-gist can supply you with 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour this into a 15-cp. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes 16 ounces of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a business day. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat-tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that you will be astonished.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Essex Co., Toronto, Ont.

After the installation, appropriate speeches were made by the officers. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a silver cake plate to the retiring W.M., after which a number of visiting Brothers and Sisters from the city Lodges spent a social hour. The singing of the National Anthem brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

Great Britain and France

"Augur," who writes on foreign affairs in the Fortnightly Review, has some caustic comment upon the "sowing of dragon's teeth" by British policy. He claims, not without reason, that: By our clumsiness we forfeited the friendship of France, and it will take a long time to get it back. People must not imagine, because there has been a change of Government in

Premier Makes an Announcement on Labrador Boundary Question

Dominion Matters Will Not be Handled Through Foreign Office -- Protective Cruisers Outnumber Rum Runners by 3 to 1.

CONFIDENT OF SETTLEMENT.

MONTEREAL, Dec. 19. While he was unable to disclose what had happened at the conference held "in camera" this week between members of the Newfoundland Government and the Quebec and Federal administrations, Hon. W. S. Monroe, Prime Minister of Newfoundland, this evening expressed the confidence that an amicable arrangement would be reached among the negotiators and that such an agreement would be satisfactory to all concerned. The occasion was a dinner given this evening to the Newfoundland delegation by their compatriots in Montreal. Mr. Monroe dealt with the present political situation of the Island and outlined the events that had led up to his assuming office after the failure of Mr. Warren to form a Government following the disclosures of the Royal Commission presided over by T. Hollis Walker, K.C., Recorder of Derby, England. The motto of his Government, said Mr. Monroe, would be to clean up the administration of the country and to keep it clean. They had found corruption in many places, there was stealing in the Post Office and they were determined to eradicate it even though it took them the remaining four years of his administration. The Prime Minister was optimistic over the present state of industry in Newfoundland. The Armstrong, Whitworth Company, he said, had spent nine million dollars in cash on the island and there was plenty of money in circulation. Dealing with the Labrador Boundary question, Mr. Monroe said that Newfoundland had its case ready for the Privy Council long ago but the Canadian case had not yet been put in. It was hoped that as a result of the present pour parlers the matter would be settled without recourse to the Imperial Privy Council. Hon. W. J. Higgins, Minister of Justice, said that Newfoundland did not want dominion status, the Island had been offered it but had turned it down. It had been a colony of the British Empire long before Canada and it would remain so. Mr. Higgins also dwelt on the Labrador question. He believed that they would return to Newfoundland with an acceptable proposition. In Labrador, he said, Newfoundlanders had fished the coast for centuries. "That coast is ours," he said. "The only question is how far that coast extends. We say it extends to the height of the land; Quebec and Ottawa say it does not extend so far; but I say now that in fixing the Boundary the rights that Newfoundlanders have enjoyed for centuries will not be forgotten."

GOT AWAY WITH $1000.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 19. At one o'clock to-day a lone unmasked man presented a slip of paper to the teller of the Bank of Nova Scotia branch, at Davie and Grenville Streets, reading: "Hand me over $7000." The teller had counted out $1000 of it when the robber impatiently grasped the money and ran out of the bank.

THE FOREIGN OFFICE AND THE DOMINIONS.

LONDON, Dec. 19. (Canadian Press)—The Canadian Press learns on good authority that the British Government has not the least intention of handing over dominion affairs to the supervision of the Foreign Office. The Dominions will continue as formerly regarding the foreign policy of the Government. The difficulty in taking their opinion on matters of sudden emergency is recognized, but a keen endeavour will continue to be made to take opinion in advance of any sudden crisis concerning the ministry. For better communication between the Government of Britain and the Governments of the Dominions, the British administration is prepared to fall in with any measure which the Dominions may submit after consultation among themselves. It is understood that the Baldwin Ministry received the full opinion of the Dominions concerning the recent crisis in Egypt over the assassination of General Lee Oliver Stack, Commander-in-Chief of the Egyptian Army, and the support accorded the Government from overseas was extremely valuable.

30 POLICE WATCH 13 RUM RUNNERS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19. Indications that the rum runners spread out of the New York and Jersey Coasts are in for a tough Christmas, and that many of their customers ashore would suffer a dry Yule Tide, were contained in announcements made to-day that the prohibition craft now outnumbered the liquor vessels more than two to one. Fifteen speed boats, ten scouts, and five destroyers, each with a speedster on deck, are watching the thirteen liquor craft scattered along the row, it was said. Coast guardsmen stated that already there is evidence of the success of the blockade in the continuous mournful but vain signals from the sirens of steam vessels calling "come and get it."

ROBBERS SET FIRE TO TOWN.

FORTWORTH, Tex., Dec. 19. Bank robbers set fire to the town of Valleyview early to-day after wrecking the State and National Bank and carrying away two safes.

ALBANIA APPEALS TO LEAGUE.

GENEVA, Dec. 19. Albania has appealed to the League of Nations asking its intervention at Belgrade to secure cessation of the formation of armed bands on Jugoslav territory from which raids into Albania are conducted, according to an announcement made to-day by the permanent Albanian delegate to the League. The Albanian Communiqué claims that the present unrest in that country has resulted from the invasion of bandits organized in Jugoslavia. It insists the situation constitutes a grave menace to the general peace of the Balkans.

COLD WAVE IN WEST IS OVER.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 19. Alberta is to-day enjoying a pronounced respite from the cold of the past week, which has been the bitterest during the past twenty years. In Saskatchewan the severity of the cold has been sustained. France and because relations have improved, that the old friendship has revived. The Bloc National, on which M. Poincare based his power, was a war product and had its roots in war associations. The policy of M. Poincare and of the Bloc National, in spite of bickerings on both sides and of rebuffs from us, was decisively pro-Entente, and could not be otherwise. The Bloc des Gauches which is now in power wants really to take up the thread of international relations where it was torn off by the War; the whole trend of its political action is towards an economic understanding with Germany.

There are people in Britain who foolishly imagine that they have a right to intervene in a Franco-German economic arrangement and to dictate the conditions on which it may exist. They are quite right when they speak about the danger to British industrial welfare; they are correct when they proclaim our right to act as arbiters in the matter. Alsace Lorraine is a necessary element in Our Dumb Animals.

Report of Chief Agent For Week Ending Dec. 19th, 1924.

Attended to the landing of some cattle from the Sable I. Also attended a sale of cattle at the Abattoir Company's premises. This week has been a hard week on horses. Some teamsters do their best to keep their horses rugged. Others are terribly neglectful. It looks a poor sight to see the horses of some of the business firms of the city standing until late at night without rugs on them. Regarding a country horse which was out on a street until late at night without protection from the weather. I had the owner summoned for doing so. He was fined $5.00, with a warning to all others not to follow his example. I have, in the past, been called from bed at midnight, about horses being left out until a late hour. In future, all persons not properly protecting horses with rugs will have to appear in court. I am very thankful to the police for their assistance in these cases. I have received complaints of dogs being left out all night by residents of LeMarchant Road, which cause great disturbance, especially in the vicinity of St. Clare's Hospital. To sick people this is very annoying and I hope the owners of such dogs will be wise and take warning, to house their dogs at night, or I shall have to force them by law to do their duty to their dumb animals. Winter weather in Newfoundland is too severe for clipped horses. Some even clip their horses and do not even rug them. I am now watching all animals that are not properly rugged, and will bring to court all owners. Animals must have somebody to look out for their interests in some cases where wilfully neglected—they cannot speak for themselves. I appeal to the public to send me reports so that the animals will get a square deal.

Demand for Penny Postage
ACTION BY ALL CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE.

The need for reduced taxation and an early return to penny postage as a practical step to help industry was emphasized at a conference at the Hotel Victoria, Northumberland-avenue, V.C., of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, which represents business interests throughout the country. The association's executive council was authorized to take every possible step to bring about a penny postage immediately. In his presidential address Mr. Stanley Machin said that one of the chief causes of unemployment was excessive taxation. When they realized that today we were paying Imperial taxation of more than £16 a head of the population, as against £4 5s. 6d. before the war, the extent of the burden could be appreciated.

It was alarming to see that while in 1913 the total expenditure on national services amounted to £68,000,000, in 1922 the figure had reached above £271,000,000, of which only £89,000,000 was spent in war pensions. More Taxes, Less Income. Local expenditure amounted to £79,000,000 in 1913, and £161,000,000 in 1923. The enormously increased expenditure had to be met out of an income which was shown to be 20 per cent. less in 1923 than it was in 1913. No step that Mr. Churchill could take would tend more to improve trade and develop confidence and enterprise than a substantial reduction in the income tax. The Sheffield and Leicester Chambers put forward a composite resolution urging the restoration of the penny postage in this country and in the British Empire and the removal of the restrictions on the transmission of the halfpenny post, and requesting the Executive Council to take every possible step to achieve these ends.

Mr. Winston Churchill in his election campaign, said Mr. T. G. Jameson (Sheffield), had expressed himself in favour of the penny postage, and they ought to hold him to it now that he was Chancellor of the Exchequer.

We had six Postmasters-Generals in about five years and no business could be properly run where the directing head was changed so frequently.

Lord Southwark said we could easily have the penny postage before Christmas if the Postmaster-General and the Chancellor of the Exchequer got together and agreed that the matter was ripe for settlement. They could then go to the Cabinet and ask permission to put it into immediate operation.

Sir Arthur Balfour (Sheffield) said the need for penny postage was past argument, and on his suggestion, the association authorized the Executive Council to take every step possible to bring it about immediately.

Mr. Walter Raine, M.P., proposed a resolution, which was carried, urging the restoration of such pre-war postal and telegraphic facilities as might be practicable. Large centres, he said, were much perplexed by this question and were suffering seriously from the continued curtailment of facilities.

Mr. Doncaster (Sheffield) moved a resolution, which was carried, drawing attention to the enormous increase in the cost of civil administration and urging the necessity of further reductions in expenditure. He said the Civil Service alone now cost nearly the whole of the national expenditure of the country in 1913.

Families and Children

Mrs. Asquith writes in the London Magazine: "Families may quarrel like cats, but if any of your relations turn up in any quarter of the globe, you feel a sort of happiness difficult to account for; at least, we Scotch do.

You can say clever things about almost anything but home, and to describe this there is no language. Its structure is laid on sure and early foundations, and depends upon the mother for its success more than upon the view or the elevation. You may see it in slums, cottages or castles, but, in spite of the fashionable science of eugenics or birth-control, you are most likely to find it after struggle and separation—in the large families.

When people say there are too many children born, I reply that the joy and the hope of life lie at the feet of the children. If the population of countries depended on the rich, every country would be clamouring—like France is—for Security, and I think it safe to say the selfishness of the rich can be depended upon not to produce the large families of past generations. It is through children, and children alone, that man and woman are enabled to fight every inch of the way to despair.

If, instead of birth-control, everyone could preach drink-control, you would have less poverty, less crime and fewer illegitimate children. It is not crimes of fraud so much as crimes of violence that fill the prisons. I speak feelingly; for as my brother, Harold John Tennant, and I were the last of twelve children, it is more than probable we should never have existed had the fashion of birth-control been prevalent in the eighties. Sickly children bring out the best qualities in love and science, and, if it is a question of poverty, let anyone out of kindness of heart (and belief in birth-control) offer to take a child from an overburdened mother and see what the mother will say. It may be bad for many reasons to have too many children, but it is worse to have too few, and only children have nothing like the same chance in life as those who have brothers and sisters.

The Empire an Economic Unit

Ottawa Citizen: Col. N. W. Ponton, of Belleville, spoke with broad vision at the meeting of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce in Toronto. In urging a national policy of preference, for trade between the nations within the British Commonwealth, he asked why Canada should lie down under the high tariff walls which foreign countries had built against it. "Are we afraid of being great?" he inquired. "Let us sink up with the Motherland and try to make the Empire an economic unit."

Herring Fishery

Schrs. Louisa B. Silva and Hazel Hines loaded with herring at North Arm recently and sailed, the former for Gloucester and the latter for backport.

Herring continues plentiful at North Arm, but at Middle Arm the fish are not very plentiful.

The herring packing stations at Middle Arm are being supplied by herring from North Arm, where there has been good fishing practically the whole season.

Barry Bros. have a schooner at North Arm for frozen herring. We understand this is the only vessel here so far for frozen cargo.

The schr. Mary II., Capt. McCarthy, is at North Arm to load herring for Boston.—Western Star.

Varnished Golden Bars

10,000 WORTH GONE—LEAD IN ITS PLACE.

The theft of virgin gold worth 10,000, which was abstracted in transit from Rhodesia to London from a consignment valued at £500,000, has been reported to the London police, and the information cabled to where the robbery is believed to have taken place in South Africa.

The consignment was made up in 24 boxes, each a foot square, at Salisbury, Rhodesia. It was only when the boxes were being opened in London that the loss was discovered.

The consignees were the London branch of the Standard Bank of South Africa, and all the boxes were placed in an iron-bound compartment of a train which made a four days' journey to the coast. When the consignment arrived at Cape Town it was certified correct, and upon removal of the gold to the Armadale Castle for the voyage to Southampton, the specie room was locked and the keys handed to an official. Madetra was the only stop on the voyage.

In England precautions to guard the consignment were not relaxed, and the gold was protected by an armed guard until it reached the bank.

When the boxes were opened at a gold refiners one was found to contain lead instead of gold. Two other boxes also contained lead.

There was no suspicion that anything was wrong with the boxes, which are made of thick wood clamped with steel bands on which the seals are fast, had been burst open.

Shortly afterwards the rifed boxes were removed to Scotland Yard.

Spider-Web Secrets

The spider's web is remarkable in several ways. It is the only trap, save the net, that any animal builds.

The manufacture of this essential accessory to the spider's life is performed by a series of actions in which intelligence takes no share. Such typically instinctive actions depend on the inherited structure of the nervous system and not on the inheritance of intelligently acquired habits.

A spider in the corner of its web is stimulated to rush out and attack an emmeshed insect by the vibrations of the silk threads. It will attack a spinning-fork that is used to shake its web in the same way, for a certain time. On each occasion that it runs out to the fork it is performing an instinctive action, but when it refrains from running out it is exhibiting intelligence. In its capacity to learn it shows itself, to that extent, intelligent. In an hour or so, however, it will attack the fork again.

In the act of spinning a web a spider shows no sign of profiting by experience. It never spins more quickly or more symmetrically, or in a series of better and better-chosen places. It never improves. Therefore the spinning may be an unconscious act, an act that makes no contribution to experience and thus affords no data by which the individual spider can profit.

Purple Zircons.

The zircon, at its best, is a hard and sparkling stone, almost rivalling the diamond, and of considerable value. But the zircon differs from the diamond in being very common and widely distributed, though fine specimens are rare. Tiny grains of discoloured zircon, recognized under the microscope by the clear-cut outline which their sparkle or retringence gives them, are found everywhere. Their hardness gives them long life; they may be washed out of one rock as it crumbles away, and go to the forming of another; they may survive many "cycles of denudation." Dr. W. Mackie has drawn attention to the wide distribution of zircons of a purple colour and typically ovoid shape, throughout the rocks of Scotland, from the oldest to the newest. The source of these, now scattered, zircons has been found in the oldest rocks of all the grey, hummocky Lewisian gneiss of the far North-west Highlands.

KEARNEY'S

Washington Letter

(By Our Own Correspondent)
The immediate fate of the third party movement in the United States will in all likelihood be decided at a conference which opened here to-day at the national committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action. If it is decided to go ahead with a third party organization, then full plans will be made for a convention in January. If the decision is contrary, the conference may never be held. The indications at present are that a third party talk will arouse little enough enthusiasm.

"As intolerable as the action of the Kaiser in telling us where and how we could sail our ships" was the characterization given in the Senate yesterday by Senator Reed of Missouri to the pronouncement by Winston Churchill on the question of foreign debts. The gentleman from Missouri wanted to be shown how the United States could escape the undignified and unpaying role of goat in any game of debt cancellation that the powers might be foolish enough to indulge in. Mr. Reed was of opinion that direct or indirect interference by Great Britain in debt discussions between this country and France could not be tolerated. The Treasury Department on the other hand accepts Mr. Churchill's statement as "obvious and logical."

During the present session of Congress your correspondent has been getting his first glimpses of doings in the Senate and House of Representatives. One of the results of attendance at the sittings of these legislative bodies has been a vastly increased respect for the Legislature of our own much-abused Newfoundland. Let Newfoundlanders who are inclined to despise their native Assembly or belittle the dignity of their Upper House first attend the sessions of the Senate or House in Washington and their feeling towards the home legislature will unquestionably become one of intense pride, not merely because of the general decorum which often there than not marks the proceedings of the Newfoundland Assembly as compared with the prevailing disorderliness of legislative proceedings in the Capitol, but also because of the superior intelligence which the average legislator of the homeland displays in deliberations of a serious nature. This must surely seem an exaggeration to those who have not had the questionable privilege of witnessing sittings of the American House or Senate but it is a fact, for all that.

To describe a session of the House is not within the power of the ordinary individual. It might be anything from an enthusiastic club session to a gathering at the races. The members apparently do everything under the sun but listen to the unfortunate who happens to be trying to make a speech. The volume of "hot air" that is daily wasted in that chamber would suffice to keep the dirigible Los Angeles in the clouds indefinitely. In the Senate, while the rules are strictly "go as you please," a speaker has a much better chance of being heard because the din of other voices is necessarily greatly reduced by reason of habitually negligible attendances of members.

On Monday of this week we went to the Senate to hear the discussion on the Moose Shoals Bill. It was supposed to be an important piece of legislation and the speech of the sitting was in progress. Out of the ninety odd members there were not present throughout the whole afternoon more than a score of senators, nor was this number to be found occupying their seats at any one time. The speaker who was doing his utmost to convince nobody in particular of the immense benefits that must accrue to the American people if the Government decided to operate Moose Shoals, wandered about the chamber as he harangued the busts of dead and gone statesmen which adorned the walls. And if his efforts had nothing else to recommend them they at least had plenty of comedy. There was also earnestness discernible in his address and one of his remarks was that the thing he was so strenuously advocating would "give the country something that it needed par excellence."

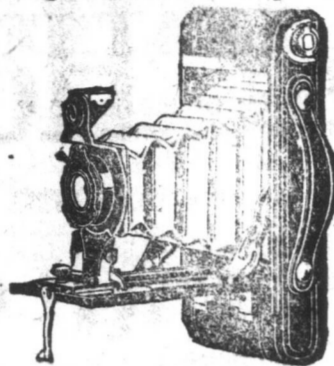

As it was in the Senate with the members so was it with the officials. The reporters had not, evidently, to confine themselves to any particular space in which to catch the words of senatorial wisdom. Rather did they attach themselves with dog-like tenacity to the speaker and whither he moved they moved, which was usually all over the chamber. One wise remark was made by a senator with a mournful countenance who interrupted the speaker to say that he never yet knew of anything in the nature of an industry operated by a government being of benefit to anybody except those who had advocated such a course.

Washington is having a visit from a Russian Grand Duchess, the wife of Grand Duke Cyril of Russia who would have succeeded Czar Nicholas II had things gone right in that country during the past few years. Although she received no official recognition on her arrival in the capital this "scion" of banished Russian nobility was greeted most enthusiastically by Washington society to whose democratic days a title is ever dear.

An announcement was made yesterday by the Army Air Service here that a flight had been made from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast in the amazing time of twelve minutes. This was staggering until it was added that the flight had been made in the Panama Canal Zone. Nevertheless, the planes which made the flight registered a speed of 180 miles an hour.

Thomas Atkins, Esq.

The current Blackwood's contains an animated account of the adventures of "A Scalawag Command" at Sennah in Persian Kurdistan. The Command found the poor of Sennah starving as the result of exploitation by profiteers, and set them to improve communications, paying them good money and organizing special bakeries. Among those so employed were nearly 2,000 starving women. The narrative proceeds: Personnel to supervise this was, of course, a great difficulty, as to be of any value it could not be entrusted to Persian officials. At last the right man for the job was discovered, one

Private Ridgeway, of the 14th Hussars. Monsieur Ridgeway, as all the local people called him, was one of the most singular products of the British Army. He had knocked about the world a good deal during his service, had acquired an unusual fluency in soldier French and soldier Hindustani, and was now learning soldier Persian very rapidly. He was a tiny man, a thorough Cockney, with the true Cockney mental agility, while with it all he obviously had strongly developed paternal instincts, for certainly he was a father to those poor wretches. In a few days there was nothing he did not know about the thousand odd Amazons. He could tell you all about their morals—which were keeping straight, which were likely to get into trouble, and which were "a bit flighty, but with no real harm in them." He knew which were beginning to respond to better feeding and put on a bit of flesh, and he took it almost as a personal insult if any dared not to look better after she had been for a few days under his charge. It was really embarrassing at an inspection of the labor corps to be asked to poke a respectable-looking lady in the ribs, and to be asked if one did not think that she had put on a bit more flesh since one was last round. And yet the good old thing resented it not a bit from Monsieur Ridgeway, whom they all adored. I asked him how he managed to get them to look as clean as they did, for cleanliness is not normally one of the virtues of the Persian poor. "Oh," he said, "I learned them to wash in the river, and a rare difficult job it was too. The first time I took them down to the stream not one of them would touch water, so I jumps in myself and shows them how. It weren't long before they followed me, and now we all does it first thing every morning." I always meant to attend one of Ridgeway's bathing parades, but somehow I never could summon up the necessary nerve. Nothing like that ever troubled Ridgeway, however, and I am sure he owed a great deal of his influence among them to his complete lack of anything approaching self-consciousness.

Mixing Rubber and Water

Considering the well-known water-proofing qualities of rubber, this would appear to be an impossibility; yet we are told by a writer in The India Rubber World (New York) that by the proper procedure rubber and water may be combined to form a smooth, creamy mixture. The rubber, of course, is not dissolved in the water, but its globules are "dispersed" through the liquid, much as fat globules are dispersed in ordinary cream. This method of preparing rubber, we are informed, has great industrial possibilities, and is already used to some extent in current manufacturing processes. We read:

"What takes place when a mass of rubber is dispersed in water is indicated by picturing the conditions as follows: Crude rubber may be considered to consist of massed minute shrunken globules with shriveled exteriors, interlocked and cemented together by non-rubber substances. It is comparable, by way of illustration, with a mass of dried prunes. In the case of the latter, the rubber globules can be pulled apart, separated and dispersed under conditions which allow the entrance of water to swell the rubber globules and break the cohesive or binding force of the cementing non-rubber materials.

"Absorption of water is effected by means of a suitable water carrier mixed with the rubber. Glycerol or colloidal clay functions effectively to convey the water into rubber and disperse the rubber globules under suitable mechanical treatment. This treatment consists of working the rubber by mechanical pulling which permits the wet glue or clay to penetrate and loosen the grip of the massed rubber globules. "Very many successful water dispersions have been made experimentally of pure rubber and rubber compositions. Also a beginning has been made in actually applying water dispersions in the manufacture of certain lines of rubber goods. The preparation and use of water-dispersed rubber mixings is now in daily routine factory practice for certain proofed fabrics and surface coating of adhesive tape. In the latter instance glue is incorporated with rubber and reclaim in the mixing.

"In certain eastern rubber factories water dispersions of rubber are being made and used in a number of routine manufacturing procedures. "Manufacturing possibilities of water dispersions of rubber are evident in leather shoe work now using 100 or more solvents containing rubber cements for which water dispersions may be substituted.

"In the paint manufacturing industry water dispersions have already shown startling results experimentally, eliminating turpentine. "Water has been called the universal solvent, and it would seem to be no less universal as a dispersing medium. The development of this process will be followed with interest in many industries."

CODFISH BALLS.
(You can prepare them in advance and keep them on ice until you are ready to fry them.)
2 cups fresh mashed potatoes.
1 cup shredded codfish.

Mix thoroughly with a fork mashed potato, codfish and pepper salt if necessary. When thoroughly mixed, add well beaten eggs. Let cool. Form into balls with hand about the size of a tennis ball. SKATING SEASON OPENS.

Hundreds of Skaters Attend Opening of Prince's Rink.

The Prince of Wales Rink was opened for the season last night, and large numbers of skaters were present thoroughly enjoyed themselves to the music of Bennett's Orchestra. Many of the hockey players from all the teams were present to get skating practice in preparation for the season's games. In order that the skating public may have every opportunity to enjoy the excellent pastime the Rink Management have made new regulations for the coming year, which they hope, ice conditions permitting, to carry out during the winter.

There will be general skating on Monday and Friday nights at the conclusion of the League Hockey matches and on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday nights, beginning at 7:30; there will be eight full bands. On Monday, Friday and Saturday afternoons, at 3 o'clock, and on Wednesday afternoons there will be general skating at the conclusion of the League game. The games will be played on Monday and Friday nights, beginning at 7:30 and on Wednesday afternoons, at 3 o'clock. Special arrangements will be made for the playing of Commercial and Bankers' League games, but will not interfere with the hours for general skating. Hockey practice will begin on Monday, the Guards going on the ice at 6:30 and St. Bon's at 10 o'clock. It is hoped by the skating fans that "Jack Frost" will be generous during the coming months.

NFLD. CURLERS EXTEND CHALLENGE TO MONTREALERS.

(Montreal Star). There will be a distinguished company of curlers at the Caledonia Curling Club next week who will, in effect, open the new granite curling season in a very appropriate manner. The Premier of Newfoundland, Hon. Walter Monroe, with two of his Cabinet Ministers, and another staunch curler, has expressed a desire to have a set to at the "roarin' game," while in this city and the Caledonia curlers here are going to accommodate the party.

Some of the finest players in the local club have been selected for the occasion and, whatever the result of the game, the quality of the curling will be high. The present weather is of the ice making variety and the two sheets at Caledonia were flooded yesterday and will receive another flooding to-day. If the cold spell continues there will no doubt be the match ice to which the local talent is accustomed. The rink selected by Caledonia is a balanced aggregation capable of beating any other quartette in the city at a pinch.

Those who know the personnel of the following team can easily arrange a rink that would give food for thought to the best, namely, Dr. Phil Holliday, C. W. T. Nicholson (Gordon medal winner), Peter D. Lyall and President W. P. Simpson, of the Caledonia Curling Club, one of the members of the Gordon Medal winning team.

Newfoundland Team. Newfoundland's representatives will be J. C. Jardine, Hon. Walter Monroe, Hon. W. J. Higgins, and Hon. J. R. Bennett.

A very enjoyable smoker and social evening was held at the Caledonia Curling Club last evening, and the news of the Newfoundland challenge was warmly received.

Royal Montreal and Thistle Curling Clubs open their social season to-morrow when the first of the regular Saturday luncheons will be held with the newly elected presidents in the chair.

Newfoundlander Honoured

A son of Newfoundland, George F. C. Taylor, was elected to the Board of Aldermen of the city of Chelsea, Mass., on Dec. 9th, in one of the most hotly contested elections ever held in that city.

The alderman-elect is the first Newfoundland ever elected to office in that city, although the number of former residents of Newfoundland is large, and several have aspired for office there on former occasions.

Mr. Taylor was born in St. John's some 34 years ago and came to Chelsea when a young lad. He is married, his wife, Miss Georgia Pike, was a native of Carbonar. The couple have three children. Mr. Taylor's mother, Mary L. Taylor, makes her home with her son in Chelsea.

The fight for municipal honors was one of the bitterest ever known in Chelsea. Revolvers were in evidence, stiletto encounters were frequent; intimidation was rampant, and vote "repeaters" gathered in numbers from outside towns.

Twenty-two men were arrested as "suspicious characters" but were afterwards released.—Boston Newfoundland Weekly.

Colleen Moore Scores in New Film

Devotees of the silent drama who dote on good crook pictures for their screen fare can ill afford to miss this new Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan product. The story is unraveled neatly and rapidly and proves engrossing from the first flicker to the final fade-out.

Colleen Moore, who is featured, has come to the fore rapidly in the last few months, but it is unlikely that she has ever appeared to such excellent advantage as she does in the role of Mary McGinn, daughter of a convict whose mother attempts to shield her from the past by sending her to a fashionable and exclusive girls' school just outside of San Francisco.

Surrounded by daughters of aristocracy and wealth, Mary lives a contented life until circumstances lead her to assisting "Boston Blackie," notorious crook who has just made a daring break from San Quentin prison. Mary helps the convict in his dash back to the outside world and as a result her father's history is revealed and the girl is requested to leave the school. The manner in which she acclimates herself, once back in her mother's home in Frisco's underworld, and later causes "Blackie" to give up his life of crime and follow the straight path, provides a series of thrills that probably never have been eclipsed on the screen.

The big thrill comes when "Blackie" sets out to do one more job before going straight. An unexpected twist ensues, leading to the most realistic no-quarter fight in darkness ever filmed. The action is located in and around San Francisco's famed Chinatown and underworld, and much of it takes place under cover of darkness, thus revealing some striking photography.

crowded condition of the place. This complaint is not a separate fault in the system, but is the direct result of the other and will be cured as soon as a vigorous routine of exercise and employment is instituted.

While the public as a whole cannot be held blameless for this disreputable state of affairs, the conduct of the authorities who have been directly responsible is most reprehensible. Their attention has been called to the matter both by the Superintendent and by the Judge of the District Court time and again, and no doubt the clergy, who visit the institution regularly and must be aware of the conditions, have impressed upon them the need for action.

Such action does not necessarily mean, as the authorities may infer, costly extensions to the Penitentiary, but the introduction of a system which will tend to reduce the number of inmates, and to lessen the chances of contamination of the comparatively innocent prisoners.

Sentenced to Six Months' Imprisonment

At the Magistrate's Court yesterday afternoon, Judge Morris delivered judgement against Robert Sears for the wounding of Cyril Power, and sentenced the prisoner to a term of six months' imprisonment. The judgement as delivered by Judge Morris reads as follows:—

"You are charged with the offence that you did on the 9th of October, 1924, unlawfully and maliciously wound one, Cyril Power, with a knife. The evidence goes to show that from the beginning, Power was the aggressor, he challenged you out to fight, you voluntarily accepted the challenge and you went outside the rink and participated in the fight. The evidence shows that you were knocked down three or four times by Power and in getting up the last time you were seen to take your knife from your pocket, open it and clinch with Power and stab him in the left and right sides with the knife. Up to that time, it is true, you were getting the worst of the fighting and must have been suffering pain but you were not in jeopardy of your life in danger and you could have given up the fight if you choose to do so. You must have intended to do Power bodily harm because you deliberately took your knife from your pocket, opened it and stabbed Power twice.

"It has been urged in extenuation, by your Counsel that you were under the influence of drink and did not know what you were doing. This is no excuse or justification; you were not so drunk that you were incapable of having the intent; you did not warn or threaten Power that if he struck again you would use the knife to defend yourself, but you clinched with him, wounding him very seriously with the knife. Mere drunkenness that excites rage does not permit, justify or palliate your using a deadly weapon on your opponent.

"Under the evidence I find you guilty of unlawfully and maliciously stabbing and wounding Cyril Power and sentence you to six months in the Penitentiary; your previous term of imprisonment is included in this period."

Another matter that troubles me is that Jane, our cookmaid did leave us yesterday, being that her great aunt is ill and needs must she go to her home to stay awhile with her, and so my wife must rise betimes to have my breakfast ready for me, being a thing about which I am most particular.

CHILD WELFARE

HEALTHY BABIES.

"An Ounce of Prevention is Worth a Pound of Cure."
 A Merry Xmas to all the babies, and so happy to the mothers! One of the things we think about at Xmas time is food: so here's a little talk on simple foods for the toddler.
 The toddler, because he grows so fast must have good, wholesome food if he is to grow properly.
 All vegetables are good for him especially potatoes, boiled in their skins or steamed (mashed with a little milk or fat), cabbage, carrots, turnips, parsnips, etc., all these must be well boiled and cleaned.
 Fruit: especially orange juice, strained tomato juice, apples baked or raw, and all fruits with pips or stones removed.
 Milk pudding of every sort.
 Beef juice and soups. See that the toddler has plenty of fat producing food, either with his beef juice or in the form of butter or cod-liver oil. This is especially important in the cold weather we are having now.
 Sweets in some form, for again, this is a heat producing food. Of course, don't forget to give him plenty of water.

FRIDAY'S MENU.

Breakfast—Porridge, brown-bread toast, tea or coffee.
 Dinner—Boiled fish, white sauce, potatoes, bread-pudding, (with raisins).
 Tea—Fish pie, stewed apricots, bread, butter tea.

One Woman Escaped From Russia

She came into the room looking like a frightened bird that had come out of the night and in at the window of a home. So writes Stephen Graham, a London Times correspondent, telling the story of one Russian refugee he was asked to help. "Here is the story of how it happened and what he did: Rowno is in southern Poland, 30 miles from Soviet Russia. I was there one night, and seeing that the cathedral in the midst of the town was all lighted up, I went inside. A number of two Russians was being examined, and it lasted an hour and a half. Two tall men held crowns above the bridegroom and the bride, while they with bent heads supported a large Bible upon their brows, the priest holding it with one hand and reading the appropriate gospels. I liked the fine old face of the priest and all his movements; so when the service was over, about 10 o'clock, I followed him to his house in the cathedral close. This was Father Nicholas Rogalsky, a wise and gentle personality; to use his own words, not only priest but, as it were, counsel and lawyer and adviser and friend for all sorts who come to him for help. I think he had the true Russian faith that everything is arranged by God, and he therefore accepted a tiresome visitor, late as it was, gladly and freely. "Perhaps you can help," said he with inspiration. "I have a lady here, just out of prison. You know Z—, ah, well, his niece. She escaped from Soviet Russia; tramped through the big Shepatovka Forest, was robbed on the frontier, but got here and came to me. Within an hour of her arrival she was arrested. She was 24 days in the administrative prison, and we have just managed, with God's help, to get her out. Her trouble now is to get a passport to go to Siberia, where her husband, an ex-officer of the Guards, is earning a living by lumbering." He went out and called her. There came into the room a young woman, scantily dressed, looking like a frightened bird that had come out of the night and in at the window of a home. The priest left us, and she told me her story. She became separated from her husband in 1918. He was on Denikin's staff. With the White Army he retired to Novorossiisk, and later with Wrangle, retired to Constantinople. Then he was transferred to Siberia. She remained with her child in the capital, and, thanks to a false passport, was unmolested, got work as a clerk at six chevonski a month. Lived on hope. Then her little girl took scarlet fever and died. There was nothing to hold her in Russia. She felt terribly lonely, and decided to run for it. So she sold all she had and realized all that was laid away, and with a hundred-dollar note set off for the south, got out two stations before the frontier, and bravely struck westward for Poland. She entered a great forest, and all went well until the second night, when she met a man in sheepskins with a gun on his back. He called two others, and they robbed her of all she possessed. "It was a terrible ordeal for me," she said. "They pointed to a bush and made me take off everything. They took away the note I had tied round my waist. They tore out the lining of my cloak. They took my blouse, my undergarments. It might have been worse. I have to thank God. They did not destroy me. They gave me back my skirt and the lining of my cloak and told me I could go. 'Who are you?' I asked. 'We are the forest chiefs (lesnie ataman),' they said. No one else attacked me. I lived on apples for a while, but was obliged to go to the village for food. The peasants all recognized an escapee; gave me food; told me which way to go to escape the police, to escape being asked questions. So late one night I got into Rowno. I could not think to whom to go. So I went to the cathedral, came here. How thankful I was. I had some food. I had a bath, and had just got to bed when the police arrived. I put on the skirt and the lining again and they took me away. 'You must have wept,' said I. 'I wept, yes. I was in despair. Twenty-four days I was in that prison with a crowd of other Russians, all starving. Many had been back and forth several times on the Russian frontier. One old woman, Anyzia, over 60 years old, had been seven times taken to the frontier at night and left there, and come back again.' What an impression of heroism and misery! The strange frightened bird sat on the divan and was silent. Then the priest rejoined us. He had that faith in God which repels all pessimism. He knew no reproach, praised the Poles for their kindness, and with a mild, radiant look, calmed the woman who had got excited and freshly alarmed by the telling of her story. The upshot was I stayed a day longer in Rowno than I had intended, and wrote a letter to the Serbian Government. Incidentally we paid a visit to the prison in the muddy street behind the town and took a loaf of bread and some meat for the unfortunate Anyzia.

Is Germany Disarmed?

By far the most important contribution to an excellent number of the Quarterly Review is made by General J. H. Morgan in a lengthy paper (covering 42 pages) on the "Disarmament of Germany and After." This paper should be read attentively by all who desire to understand the quality and the dimensions of the German Disarmament problem. By his work as Deputy Adjutant General on the Inter-Allied Military Commission of Control, General Morgan acquired a knowledge of his subject such as few Englishmen can claim; and he sets it forth with clearness and with vigor. He says that "To say that the strength of the German Army is '100,000' is, to put it very charitably, an economy of truth." During the past two years Allied military control of Germany has been passive. How many men have been trained during that period? No one knows or vouches for the German military ever will know from any information authorities. But I will tell the reader this. On a conservative estimate, General Von Seeckt, the German Commander-in-Chief (whom General Morgan describes elsewhere as a brilliant soldier "who may yet project a gigantic shadow across the face of Europe within the next five or ten years"), has at his disposal at this moment at least 500,000 annually trained men, by which I mean men trained since 1921, to say nothing of all the annual classes of conscripts up to that year. If that statement is challenged by any responsible person, I will produce my data. Upon the question of hidden arms, of German industrial preparation for war, and upon the alteration of railway rolling stock so as to make it adaptable for immediate conversion into troop trains, General Morgan makes further important statements that explain the scepticism with which he regards the proposal to substitute control by the League of Nations for Allied military control. He believes that the object of the Control Commission must be to provide reasonable security against German aggression for a period of twenty years, beyond which period it is impossible to look, and he concludes: "If I am asked what 'close season' for European peace would be secured, as things now are, if the present control, feeble though it is, were terminated and the Rhine armies reduced to any considerable extent, my answer would be—one year.

Sussex in 700 B.C.

That civilisation existed in Sussex more than 2,800 years ago has been proved by the discovery of relics which are now on view in the Municipal Museum at Brighton. The discoveries, which were made by a local resident, took like putting most of the text books on this period of British history out of date. Perhaps the most interesting exhibit is the fragments of a covered cooking pot, which was used by a woman of the early Britons about the year 700 B.C. There is also a piece of pottery with a perfectly preserved grain of wheat embedded in it. This goes to show that the men of Sussex, even in those times, were acquainted with agriculture. Experts of the British Museum have confessed that they are astonished at the discovery of the relics, which are, of course, the only ones of their kind which have ever been brought to light. HEART OF ETIQUETTE AND RULE ETIQUETTE.

Is it so important to teach children all the rules and small amenities of the game called social life? We were talking about that the other day. A woman who was herself brought up in a simple country household, and had never been taught some of the rules, was speaking of buying a book that would help her get them all perfectly straight, so that she could teach them to her children with authority. Another member of the group was rather scornful at the idea of buying an etiquette book. She thought it was absurd to fuss so over petty things. She said she thought the politeness of the heart was much more important. The opinions of both appealed to me, and I was in the happy position of being able to agree with both.

Those Dreadful Blunders. I do thoroughly believe in teaching children all the rules of the game so that they may never suffer the terrible embarrassment that comes, with or without reason, when one makes a social blunder. Maybe one should not feel this embarrassment. Very likely one should be big enough to rise above the feeling but very few people are. I am sure there are thousands of people reading this who can remember the agony of self-consciousness, the flame of color they felt going up into their cheeks, when they realized that they had made some obvious social error. And also the sleepless hours afterward when they reviewed that miserable mistake and blushed anew in the dark.

We Do Care. The social game means something to most of us whether we play it on Fifth Avenue or Main Street, and whether we admit or not. Wherefore, it is kindness to your children to teach them the more important rules. But don't forget also to teach them that politeness of the heart without which the rules of the etiquette book are but empty gestures. It is a mistake, I think, to deny the desirability of knowing the little rules. But it is a far greater mistake to think that knowing the rules is the only thing that counts. I heard the other day a little story that seemed almost incredible. I could scarcely believe it until I had cross-questioned my informant and made sure that she had it first hand.

A Thoroughly Rude Woman. At a bridge party she was attending one of the players completed the cut, that is laid the two parts of the card pack together after cutting them instead of leaving that for her opponent to do. It is not the etiquette nowadays to do this. It used to be, and evidently the player who did it was not up to this latest wrinkle in bridge etiquette. Her opponent was. She looked coldly at the guilty one and said icily: "And do you also eat with your knife?" I am happy to say that there was not one person at the party who did not heartily condemn the woman who could so exalt a minor rule of etiquette over the politeness of the heart.

Growing Bananas

Jamaica, Costa Rica, British Honduras, Columbia and the Canary Islands depend to a great extent for their welfare on the cultivation of the banana. The truth of this statement becomes at once apparent to the visitor who lands at any one of these countries. Outside the natives' huts he will see bunches hanging in the sun (the banana is never allowed to ripen on the tree but is cut down as soon as it is fully grown), and should he drive through the country he will see plantations of the fruit on all sides and in all stages of growth, from tiny plants to full-grown "trees." Were he to inquire for what purpose a bare strip of land was being prepared, the answer would surely be—bananas!

Large plantations or pens as they are called, sometimes stretching for miles, are planted with the tiny shoots. These shoots increase rapidly in size and grow in a palm-like shape. The light green leaves are about 12 inch broad and reach several feet in length. They are smooth and have uncut edges, but the wind soon splits them up, and they hang fringe-like from the central vein which gives the plant a bedraggled and untidy appearance.

Before very many months have passed the "tree" has reached a good height and from the centre, at the end of a long stalk and surrounded by a fringe of little green fingers, the purple flower appears. As these fingers are bananas grow, the distance between them and the flower increases and the bunch grown heavy hangs upside down.

When the fruit in the pen is almost fully grown, a man, generally a Hindu, followed by a band of negroes walks through, looking over each bunch as he goes. When he sees a suitable one he catches hold of it and jerks "tree" and all to the ground. A negro then steps forward and with his machete cuts the bunch free and carries it to the roadside—and so they continue till all are gathered.

The fruit is transported to the docks by rail, and there it is sorted—the fat bunches for the American market and the "lean" or less fully grown for England. With as little delay as possible it is placed in the specially prepared holds of the ship and kept at an icy temperature during its two-weeks-voyage across the Atlantic.

The captain of the ship informs the company by wireless of the number of bunches he has on board, and thus every banana is sold before its arrival in port. Special banana trains are waiting and the fruit is at once despatched to its various destinations and there stored away in ripening rooms until it is fit to be offered to the public.

Hard Liquor Figures

"The American people are drinking more "hard liquor" to-day than they did before the Volstead Act became the law of the land, says the Los Angeles Times. They consumed over 20,000,000 gallons more in 1923 than they did in 1917, the last year of unrestricted drinking in the United States.

These figures were not given out by enemies of prohibition, but by officers of the Internal Revenue Department who are attempting to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. They are based on Government statistics and a nation-wide investigation of rum smuggling made by some of the keenest officials in the Government service.

Before the coming of prohibition, according to Government reports, we here in the United States drank 167,740,325 gallons of foreign and domestic whiskies, brandies, gin and other ardent spirits, annually.

To-day, smugglers and bootleggers are providing our people with 198,442,500 gallons of whiskey and gin alone. This is a calculation based on official estimates. Add to this amount 2,654,506 gallons released on permits and we have a grand total of 198,987,006 gallons consumed."

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR COLIC.

Methodist College Speech Day

The closing exercises of the Methodist College were held at the College Hall last night and proved to be most enjoyable and gratifying to those present and supporters of the College, who were present. Never has there been a larger attendance, the building being crowded to its utmost capacity, every seat being filled and even standing room was at a premium.

His Excellency the Governor who was present, accompanied by Lady Allardice and Capt. Goodfellow, was met by the Board of Directors and Principal of the College and was conducted to the platform where the Directors and Teachers also assembled.

The Chairman, Mr. C. P. Ayre, opened the proceedings, welcoming His Excellency and expressing his pleasure that there was such a large attendance.

During the year the school had done well, as the Principal's report would show. In their studies the pupils had been very successful and in the athletic field they had won the three championships. The Clinic Department, which had opened this year for the first time, had proved very successful, and had brought the pupils' health up to a high standard. The Directors were much indebted to the Ladies' College Aid Society and the Girls' Guild for their splendid work on behalf of the College, and only a few days ago they had handed in a total of $5,000 for two years. He then called upon the Headmaster to present his report, which was as follows:—

REPORT OF THE PRINCIPAL.

With the close of the year I have once more to present a report of the work done in the Upper School. Most of you are already familiar with what is shown of it by figures and lists and I shall therefore not spend more time than is necessary to present a summary.

In the June Examinations the School did unusually well, winning the top place in each Grade.

Senior Associate—4 candidates passed. Of these Jean Horwood won the Jubilee Scholarship of $1,500.00. The number is the same as last year. All who sat won distinctions in French, 8 in Physics and 2 in Latin. Total Distinctions—15.

Junior Associate—The first place in this Grade was won by Grace Parsons; 35 passed, 9 in the Honors Division. This is more than in any previous year. The best subjects were French, with 38 distinctions, Mathematics, with 13, and Latin with 7 (out of 17). Total Distinctions—68.

Intermediate—In this Grade the first place was won by Robert MacLeod.

GIRLS—33 passed, 8 being in the Honors Division. Best subjects—French, 24 distinctions; Arithmetic, 14; Algebra, 10; total distinctions, 54.

BOYS—31 passed out of 33, 10 winning honors. Best subjects, French, 17 distinctions; Arithmetic, 15; Geometry, 13; total distinctions, 79.

Preliminary—In this Grade Sadie Butt wins first place.

GIRLS—Of the 28 who passed, 12 were in the Honors Division. Best subjects, French, 25 distinctions; Arithmetic, 21; Algebra, 19; English, 11; total distinctions, 105.

BOYS—33 passed, 18 being in the Honors Division. Best Subjects, French, 34 distinctions; Algebra, 24 (8 with full marks); Arithmetic, 23; English, 16; Geometry, 10; total distinctions, 121.

Primary—120 pupils passed, Marjory Frost with a total of 82 per cent., the highest in the country; 45 made 70 per cent. of the maximum in English.

lish, 30 in Arithmetic and 19 in Hygiene. Total distinctions, 143.

In all 213 pupils passed, 75 being in the Honors Division, and gaining 472 distinctions. A few different figures will give another view of the results:—Of over 250 in all who took English, 96 per cent. passed with 81 distinctions; of 203 in all who took Arithmetic, (leaving out Associate work) 93 per cent. passed with 103 distinctions. In Latin 98 per cent. passed. In French 99 per cent. passed, three-quarters of these gaining distinctions. In Drawing 92 per cent. passed. In Physics and in Chemistry of the two Associate Grades 89 per cent. passed. In the Preliminary Geometry our pupils gained very nearly half of the distinctions awarded to the whole Island.

I think, Sir, we have reason to be grateful for these results.

In the realm of athletics we have been equally successful, having won all the three trophies. I was pleased with the spirit in which the games were played, not only by our teams but by those of our friendly rivals. Much of their success is due to the zeal of Mr. Hogg and of Old Boys who assisted in coaching. I do not think I need dwell in the usual way on the value and necessity of athletics. The danger is not one of underestimation, but that some pupils may forget to show equal zeal in their school work. To such, much of the value of athletics is lost.

A few words about the other activities.

The 6th St. John's Boy Scouts, under Mr. Ronald Ayre, assisted by Mr. Hogg and the other masters have become very efficient. At the unveiling of the Memorial in July they won great praise for their work in assisting the police by lining the street for Mr. K. clear, and their camp at Round Pond was spoken of by visitors as a model. At the Haig Sports Randall, Butt and Rooney won the Relay Race.

The strength now stands at 78. I want to take this opportunity of congratulating Captain Ronald Ayre and those associated with him on the splendid tone that exists in the troop and on the thoroughness with which Scout Ideals are inculcated.

The work of the 3rd St. John's Girl Guides has been equally successful under Captain D. Ayre. The total strength of 37 includes 76 Guides, 6 Cadets and 5 Guilders.

There are 18 second class Guides and 24 proficiency badges have been won. With the proceeds of the play last Winter 6 large-sized Army Bell Tents were bought.

The sum of $195.00 was recently raised to provide the children of the Orphanage with Guide uniforms.

During the cold months Guides took turns in staying in at the dinner hour to serve out hot cocoa, and in numerous other ways illustrated the principles in which they are being trained. At the Haig Celebration they were highly complimented on their marching.

In July they went into Camp and the efficiency of the organization and the general success won admiration from all.

It is a great pleasure to congratulate Captain D. Ayre and her Patrol Leaders on their work.

The School Clinic has now been at work for a year, and much good work has been done by Miss Loder, not only here but in the other Methodist Schools of the town. It has attracted a great deal of favourable notice and will, I hope, prove to be pioneer work.

The year's work, more particularly in the Elementary Schools, has revealed the necessity for some sort of co-operation among the Educational Authorities of the whole city, if anything considerable is to be done. It would look as if Compulsory Education for St. John's and some kind of State aid for serious necessitous cases were the only solution of a very serious question. But, however important a matter the physical welfare of the city children may be, this is perhaps not the place or the time for its consideration, especially as the work of the Clinic will be reported upon at the Annual Meeting of the Old Collegians' Association.

At the Universities the number of former pupils continues to increase. There is what I think a very mistaken view entertained about Higher Education, which being examined resolves itself into meaning that a man can make a commercial success without a University degree. I have not mentioned this to discuss it or refute it. I think most parents now realize that a boy or girl should have the best possible intellectual equipment whatever the future work, and it is gratifying to see the increasing number of parents and young people, especially in the Outposts, who are determined they will have it. About fifty of our old pupils are at present studying Law, Medicine, Science and Arts at the Universities.

The mention of Science reminds me that last year I spoke of the desirability of a first-rate Radio outfit. That such great improvements were constantly being made that haste would be a mistake.

It is now evident that Radio work is going to employ countless thousands of people. $200,000,000 were spent last year in Radio equipment, etc., in the States. Numerous highly equipped and highly paid men are going to be required, and I should like this School to be pioneers in this country.

A Radio class is well within our reach. We have Science Masters capable of conducting it and we can do it without cost to the Board. I hope by this time next year we shall be able to show something practical has been done. Who knows whether we shall not be able to hear at our next Speech Day voices from the Old Country!

The first term of the new school year has been a very busy one, and free from sickness which we feared would spoil our prospects last year. We are still attempting to provide for more than the building was intended for, and it is depressing to have to turn away children whose parents, some from the Outposts where the opportunities have been few, have been eager to enter them. Many were applicants that I could easily see were backward and eager to get a chance. Some have assured me that they came to St. John's for the sake of getting the children into this school. Their admission meant more attention than is needed by our own pupils, especially with the Classes so large, but we are here to help such children and we are not able to, I submit, Sir, that there is something wrong with the State or the denomination when parents willing to pay the required fees cannot secure admission. It is not for me to say where the blame lies, nor is this the proper occasion for discussing it, but I venture to say that huge sums of money have been spent in various ways in the past which might have increased enormously the educational opportunities of the children of this country.

I am on safe ground, however, in asserting that what was possible with this school the Executive has done. The fear of debt has not prevented them from granting everything asked except additional building, and that I believe will come the moment it is possible.

This sympathy with our needs is, I assure you, Sir, appreciated by all concerned, as well as your unfailing appreciation of what we are able to do.

It is proper, too, I think that we should express thanks on these occasions both to the living and the dead for the scholarships given annually. The names connected with these have gradually increased in number, and it must be very pleasant and surely very legitimate too to be able to feel that one is helping some boy or girl in his or her education.

In connection with the book prizes I should like to see a prize offered for the first place in every subject in every class. Forty or fifty would be all that are needed. In the distant past, I believe, various friends were asked annually to give prizes, and I am sure they were willingly given, but that is a method I do not care much about. Formerly, also, the C.H.E. gave subject prizes as well as scholarships. These scholarships have been supplied by the generosity of Sir John Crosbie, but we are still without the subject prizes. About $250 would provide a book bound in leather, stamped with the College Arms, and if anyone, lady or gentleman, would care to give the sum annually I would undertake the pleasure to remind him or her annually. The prize could very appropriately be named after the giver.

I shall not keep you longer for we have a long evening before us yet which I hope you will enjoy. The season of good wishes has come once more and hearty greetings will soon be wafted round. May I commence by conveying to Your Excellency and Lady Allardice the pleasure we feel, from the oldest to the youngest, at your presence. You have come to a cold climate but you have our warmest wishes and heartiest appreciation of all your efforts. I believe I remember wishing when your Excellencies first came here to us, that you would see the land prosperous again. We are grateful to say that the wish is being realized.

To you, Mr. Chairman, to the Executive, to all parents, to my Colleagues to whom what success we have is due, I tender most hearty wishes and good will. May the coming Season bring only peace and happiness.

To the boys and girls the Season suggests something more concrete than the mere expression of good wishes! May your friends be generous, may the weather be fine, may the larder be full, and in order that you may enjoy it all to the full, may your holidays be just long enough!—but not too long. You have from to-night till next Tuesday fortnight.

The prizes were then presented to the winners, by the Governor and as each pupil came forward to receive his or her prize, they were warmly applauded.

At the conclusion of the prize-giving, His Excellency made a brief address.

After the splendid report read by Mr. Harrington, there was very little left to say. It must be gratifying indeed to have such an extraordinary successful year; not only have the pupils been successful in their studies, but they have also been victorious in outdoor sports. He was glad the Clinic Department had been so successful during the last twelve months, and he hoped that the Directors would go further and add to this Department a dentist, so that the teeth of the pupils would also receive attention. This had been found very beneficial in other countries, and can be done elsewhere can be done here. The Methodist people in this country are a very progressive body, and he felt sure they would lead in this direction. His Excellency wished to convey to the directors, teachers, parents and especially the pupils, the best wishes of Lady Allardice and himself for the festive season now at hand. He hoped the students would spend a joyous holiday, and come back renewed in energy so that even greater results would be attained in the New Year which, he hoped, would be for all a very happy one.

A vote of thanks proposed by Ruthen Horwood, and seconded by John Leamon, was received by acclamation and tendered to his Excellency, who graciously acknowledged it. This concluded the first part of the evening's programme.

The College pupils have staged many entertainments that have received merited commendation, but never have they been responsible for anything better than the Operetta "The China Shop," which was presented by them last night, under the baton of H. Gordon Christian, L.R.A. M. The stage settings were attractive and the multi-colored and prettily designed costumes of the chorus and principals made a scene that had to be witnessed to be properly appreciated. The singing was of a high standard, and the chorus being well balanced, and of much variety, while the various solos, duets, trios, quartettes, etc., were rendered in a manner that was a source of much pleasure to all and surprise to many. The spoken parts were clearly enunciated and delivered in a manner that gave the audience a true appreciation of the story. Where all the principals did so well, it would be invidious to individualize, but it is only fair to state that perhaps the most popularly received were the duets and dancing of Sing Fong and Lotus Blossom, and the trio and dance of Mush Lush, Chuck and Jusco Karfair, which the audience wanted repeated again and again. The following was the cast:—

Fat Sing, a wealthy Merchant . . . T. Drover
Sing Fong, his son . . . E. Whitely
Wun Tun, a politician . . . R. McLeod
Mush Lush, a woman hater . . . A. Jardine
Chung, a Secretary . . . W. Hampton

Educational Problems at Corner Brook

(Western Star)

At Corner Brook on Monday night last week, a public meeting was held, having for its purpose the consideration of educational problems existing there throughout the large area of population in connection with the pulp and paper industry. At the meeting was called to order by the Mayor Butler elected chairman. Stansfeld was asked to act as secretary. The chairman, in his opening remarks outlined the educational conditions existing there, the growth of the small Presbyterian school of 23 scholars to its present interdenominational condition with 70 children of whom 27 are Presbyterian, 33 Methodist and 10 Church of England. He outlined briefly the scheme of grants which showed the meeting that until the next census in 1923 no regular grants would be forthcoming to Corner Brook, except the Presbyterian grant of $4500 a year, of which $1000 was payable to the small Presbyterian school at Nicholasville, near Lake. In conclusion, he called upon the Secretary to read the correspondence that had passed between the Educational Authorities of the country and the Acting United Board. In course of reading the correspondence, the Secretary showed how application of the Acting United Board to be gazetted had been refused with the request that it split into two component denominations; the request for a special grant to carry on the present school was met by the only suggestion that the Minister of Education could make—that of referring the Board to the Superintendent of Education. A telegram to the Inspector of Presbyterian Schools was read, throwing the onus of keeping the school open on the shoulders of the Superintendents of Education for the denominations represented in the School and the reply signed forth only the small quarterly Presbyterian grant, which as pointed out, was not sufficient to meet more than one month's requirements. Letters were read from the Board of the authorities in St. John's which pointed out the urgent necessity of funds, the need of at least a second teacher to help handle the 70 scholars on the roll. The Acting Board laid its cards on the table and sought support for its efforts to keep open to the end of the present term, from the community interested.

The following resolutions were submitted and adopted:
 (1) That this Meeting of citizens of Corner Brook representing all denominations supports the Acting United Board of Education in its efforts to carry on the existing school and the close of the present term.
 (2) That this Meeting undertakes to raise a public subscription the proceeds to defray expenses until the close of the school for Christmas.
 (3) That this Meeting respectfully requests the Newfoundland Power & Paper Company, Limited, to erect and maintain a temporary school building as and from the completion of the first term in January, 1925, and all ages and denominations at that time as their proposed permanent school shall have been approved.
 (4) That the meeting requests the Newfoundland Power & Paper Company, Limited, to appoint a Board of Education for the temporary school building erected and maintained until the public shall have representation.
 The Secretary announced that the Newfoundland Power & Paper Company had already very kindly erected the temporary school building mentioned, to replace the existing one which was unsanitary and totally inadequate.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.
 I HAVE MY LOVE TO LIVE.
 These are my days and weeks and years;
 What is my future, just ahead,
 Why should I care who grieves or sneers?
 Why should I pause, when pleasure bent,
 Because another bids me stay?
 Why should I care what others say?
 Do not ask that they incline
 Their lives to fit my little plan;
 Why should they seek to fashion mine
 And hinder me when'er they can?"
 I hold within my hand
 A stone which is my right to throw;
 I have the strength to fling it, and
 It pleases me to let it go.
 "It strikes my mother in the face!
 It stuns my father standing there!
 Would you get up and dead my case
 And argue that my deed was fair?"
 That life of yours you proudly boast,
 If lived to suit your whims alone,
 Will injure those who love you most
 Far more than any careless stone.
 When pleasure leads you to disgrace,
 And head-long into shame you go,
 You strike your mother in the face,
 And stun your father with the blow."

An Avalanche of Fun at the Casino

MARSHALL'S BEAUTY REVUE IN GOOD BILL.

Last night's show at the Casino was indeed an avalanche of fun from start to finish, as each and every performer of Marshall's Revue are individual performers of worth. The opening chorus by the entire company was a very pretty number which was well rendered, the theme being very catchy. Homer Roberts, the popular baritone puts plenty of enthusiasm into his songs and gets the appreciative applause of his audience. Dorothy Knowles registers firmly with her hearers by her beautifully sweet voice. Dolly Deuth seems to take things by storm by her toe-dancing number and the applause tendered was tumultuous. The comedians Anderson and Lynch control the comedy element in excellent style and they certainly have a way of bringing forth the laughs. Tom Delay got a big hand by his tenor solos. A performer of appearance and ability is Tom, who never fails to register big. Olive Perkins, soubrette, handled her numbers in good style. Fred Hoppeny's dance went big.

The show is brimful of good wholesome comedy with plenty of novelties and songs appropriately mounted with the most handsome scenic equipment ever seen in a local theatre. On Monday Marshall's Beauty Revue will present a complete change of bill that contains many surprises. Book your seats early for next week's productions.

Cabot St. Mother Now 'Rubs Away' Children's Colds

Uses New Vaporizing Ointment that Replaces Internal Dosing, Nothing to Swallow.

To-day millions of mothers treat croup and children's colds by the "vapor" method.

They use Vicks Vapo-Rub, the vaporizing ointment, because it is externally applied. There is no dosing to upset delicate little stomachs.

Mrs. I. LeDrew of No. 9 Cabot St., St. John's, writes: "My little boy, five years old, had a bad cold in his throat. I rubbed him twice with Vicks and cured him. I also used it for my little baby girl and recommend it."

For hours after Vicks is applied over the throat and chest, medicated vapors are inhaled directly into the affected air passages. At the same time Vicks is absorbed like a liniment and thus helps the vapors inhaled to break up the congestion.

Vicks contains Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme and other of the best time-tested remedies for inflammations, whether of the air passages—i.e., head or chest colds, croup, catarrh, bronchitis, etc.—or surface inflammation such as burns, bites, cuts, stings, etc.

Vicks is a standby in millions of homes. Over 17 million jars are used annually in Canada and the States.

THE KILLERS.

When the murderer is taken, and escorted to a cell, people hand wreaths of bacon and white lilies from the dell. If the killer is a lady, nothing is too rich. I wear, in her prison cool and shady she is posing like a queen; and we send her costly brought from distant clime, and are wiping from our noses tears of sympathy sublime. But the victims, laid in layers in the graveyard in the rain! We have pity for the slayers, but we soon forget the slain. Oh, the victims, rudely riven from the life they loved so well, sent into the dark unshriven, with no requiem or knell! We forget them while we tarry in the courthouse on the sea, watching all the laws miscarry and the murderers go free. We surround the gent acquitted of a black and grievous wrong, and he's gladly lamed and mitted by a gay and eager throng. We forget the victims sleeping, who should breathe the air to-day, but for slayers grimly creeping on their bleak and bloody way. And we praise the proud attorney who has got the killer off, and forget the graveyard fern, and the dead and butchered toff. Every day its crime discloses, and new murderers appear, and we take them lovely roses and sweet messages of cheer; we'd relieve them of the wiles, we'd encourage all such knaves; but we take no fragrant lilies to the victims in their graves.
