Ratherford and Liburne Falls Through.

The Court of Orininal Assizes reopened yesterday morning, Judge McMahon presiding. The trial of James Chapman, Thomas Chapman, Wm. J. Lackie, Alex. Warren and Agnes Chapman, charged with felomously wounding Police Conatable Ruthertord and Protationer Lilburne, was proceeded with Crown Counsel Irving called as witnesses for the prosecution Peter Hnart, John Partington, P. C. Rutherford and Probationer Lilburne. The first mentioned festified that during the row he heard James Chapman say that he would allow no woman to be insulted while he was around. Some one unidentified had struck Rutherford with a scantling. The police constables named related the manner of the attack made upon them, but were rather lizzy about the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the constables and the identity of their days and the constables and the constable and the constables and the constable and the constables and the constable and namer of the attack made upon them, but were rather hazy about the identity of their asailants.

At the close of the evidence for the presecution Mr. Murdoch, counsel for the prisoner, claimed that there was no case for the jury. The Chapmans had been arrested on their own premises, after the row which brought the policemen to the scene had occurred, and they were then justified in resisting arrest as the officers were not provided with warrants. Judge McMahon, however, decided to hear the ovidence for the defence.

The chief witness for the defence was. Mrs. Miles, next door neighbor to the Chapmans. She stated that about 11.30 on the hight of the row two men knocked at her door, evidently supposing that the house was still occupied by its former lemmts, who were women of evil reputation. She reinsed to admit them, and they threatened to force an entrance. A few minutes later thay smoved away, and she, doming a wrapper, came out to the sidewalk. Just then James Chapman came up, and she told him of the annoyance she had been subjected to. He chaved the two men towards Agnes-street. Some time after-

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 27, 1888. CENTRAL BANK AFFAIRS. tion of Counsel's Arguments Be fore the Master. Yesterday was devoted to a continuation of ounsel's arguments before the Master-in-

Ordinary re the settling of the list of Central ributories. Mr. Foster, Q.C., replied for the bank and controverted the arguments of Mr. S. G. Wood, Mr. J. Foy and Mr. William Laidlaw of the previous day. Mr. Foster contended that Mr. Stayner's Mr. Foster contended that Mr. Stayner's conduct estopped his concluding that he is not a shareholder. On the contrary he drew dividends, sold shares and attended a shareholders' meeting called by the court. At length Mr. Foster refuted the argument that the title of the bank could be impeached. He also combated the arguments set up by the Home Savings and Loan Company. The company had power to buy and sell and invest and thus to acquire shares. If the company was not liable then the parties who assumed to accept were liable.
