BROOKE

which all early settlers were called upon to endure this family was unfortunate in the loss of their father when he was instantly killed by being thrown by his team of oxen against an oak stump. Thus was the mother and family of little ones left to face the battles of the new world.

On July 21st, 1870, she was married to Mr. Benj. Parker, whose family also resided in the district, and they took up their residence on his newly purchased farm just across the road from her former home. Here they lived for 40 years, where they raised a family of six sons and one daughter, made the old homestead one of the finest farms in this section, and finally were able to retire into Watford where they have lived for the past sixteen years.

Besides her sorrowing husband she is survived by one sister, Mrs. George Fuller, second line; one brother, Francis Clark, in London; six sons, William E., ex-reeve of Warwick Tp., who resides on the Main road; Dan G., ex-reeve of Watford, now residing in Leamington; Reuben, of Biggar, Sask.; Joseph and John, on second line; James, on the old homestead, lot 28; and one daughter, Mrs. Wilbert Galloway, of Sarnia.

Funeral services were conducted on Monday afternoon in Erie St. United church by the pastor, Rev. S. J. Thompson, assisted by Rev. Samuel Quinn, and interment took place in Watford cemetery. Note and Comment

Every town has at least one man who is a good influence and not worth a hang.

The finer the weather on Sunday, the greater the crop of auto fatality reports in Mondays papers.

There are more spectacular methods of suicide, but doubtless hugging the driver is the most satisfying.

Same Old Story.—When this younger generation is old what do you suppose it will tell the next generation that it didn't do?

Who was it who recently said that the cost of living was like an evening gown; it looks as if it was going to come down, but it doesn't.

By an amendment to the Dominion Elections Act, recently adopted by the House of Commons, the afternoon of a Federal general election day is declared a holiday.

A man was arrested in Hamilton for staring at women. The truth is that a good many women these days are made up to be stared at; but no doubt the Hamilton police wanted to show that they could make an arrest.

The winter of 1925-26 will be the worst in 216 years, according to a paper read before the Academy of Sciences by Professor Bigourdan. The paper covered 744 years of meteorological and astronomical conclusions. It said that the coming winter would compare with the terrible winters of 1709 and 1523.

An article in the Goderich Signal last week advocated that each of the various school sections of the township should undertake to write the history of the section before it is too late to secure accurate records. The pioneers are gone in many localities and some of the second generation also. If any effort is to be made to preserve the early history of the school sections the work should be undertaken without delay.

"Dollar Day" sales are growing in popularity among the merchants of the various towns of Ontario. These concerted sales accomplish various gratifying results. They bring the business people into closer relationship and helpful co-operation. They appeal to purchasers from a wide area. They enable the merchants to reduce their surplus stock satisfactorily at a minimum of cost; and they supply the community with needed and desirable goods at substantially reduced prices.

The Royal, Connaught Hotel, of Hamilton recently refused to give meals and accommodation to several colored doctors and is now defendant in an action for damages. The Royal Connaught is one of the string of hotels owned by the United Hotel Company, the headquarters of which is in the United States, where the color line is much more tightly drawn than in Canada or other British dominions. The outcome of the action will be awaited with interest.

"Hank" in St. Thomas Times-Journal: "We believe in making the punishment fit the crime. For instance: Were we a judge or magistrate, and a bootlegger or a moonshine manufacturer came before us, we wouldn't merely fine him a few hundred dollars with the alternative of lazing it out in jail. First and foremost, we'd have the police dig up some of the fellow's hootch and then, right in court, before as many spectators as cared to attend, with a special invitation to other bootleggers and moonshiners, we'd force the offender to drink a generous amount of the stuff. Perhaps we're mistaken, but we have an idea that the operation of such a plan of punishment would do more to discourage the trafficking in distillate poison than all the fines and imprisonment that could be imposed.

ANNUAL AUTO EXCURSION ORGANIZED

All Southern Ontario Invited to Accompany "See Ontario First" Tour

The annual Essex County Farm Auto Excursion is really now longer either a farmer's excursion strictly an Essex County excursion. Although the majority of tourists are farmers, a goodly percentage of town and city business men and wives. And every year, larger numbers of residents of adjoining counties are taking advantage of the trip. A larger proportion of ladies attend each year, so that it now bears the character of a family excursion.

The auto excursion is organized by the Essex County Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. All arrangements in regard to touring, meals, rooms, educational features and the entertainment program are completely organized in advance. The excursion is personally conducted and at all points, personally managed, by the Department of Agriculture.

Very Cheap Excursion.
This service is absolutely free. The total cost, to those who attend are their travelling expenses while on the trip. And because of the numbers who go, these costs are remarkably low, considering the mileage and length of the tour. From $20 to $30 has been the average cost per individual, depending on the nature and length of the tour. This year costs should be rather below the average.

The excursion this year will last six days, leaving Essex early Monday morning, August 31st, and returning Saturday night, September 5th. The greater points of interest will be the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and the Niagara Peninsula, including Niagara Falls. The cars will be assembled in Chatham and will leave in a body at 8.30 a.m., the morning of August 31st, via the Northern Route. On Saturday, Sept. 5th, they will return from Welland via the Southern Route and that afternoon will disband at Blenheim. Cars from more distant centres may join the excursion and again may leave it at the most convenient point.

Guelph, Toronto, Niagara
The daily schedule is as follows:
Monday, August 31st. Essex to Chatham, London, Woodstock. Dinner at Woodstock. Visit one famous dairy farm Oxford County. Proceed via Galt to Guelph, Supper and lodging Ontario Agricultural College.

Tuesday, Sept. 1st. All day at Agricultural College, Macdonald Institute and City of Guelph. Meals and lodging at College.

Wednesday, Sept. 2nd. Drive to Toronto, visit Parliament Buildings and University. Afternoon at Exhibition in group tour. Supper on Grounds, evening in grandstand. Stay in Toronto that night.

Thursday, Sept. 3rd. Morning open for shopping, city sight-seeing or visiting exhibition. Noon dinner at Exhibition. After dinner drive via Hamilton Highway and Burlington Beach Road to Vineland Experimental Station. Tea at Station, drive to St. Catharines for night.

Friday, Sept. 4th. Drive to Niagara Falls. Visit some outstanding farms in Lincoln and Welland Counties. Supper and lodging in City of Welland.

Saturday, Sept. 5th. Drive via Southern Route homeward through Simcoe to St. Thomas for dinner. Proceed from St. Thomas to Blenheim. Disband officially at Blenheim, reaching home by nearest route.

Everyone Is Welcome
Every community is invited to make up a carload of relatives, neighbors or friends and come along. The tour is organized for people from town and country and for men and women. The educational and the entertaining are well balanced and there is something for everyone. Children are welcome, although, it is a wearing trip for both mothers and kiddies, when very young children or infants are taken. Last year, there were 25 cars, 125 people of whom 40 were ladies on a similar trip to Illinois.

It is necessary that the approximate number of persons and cars be known as soon as possible in order to make definite arrangements in regard to numbers at all the places where accommodation will be required. For complete details, write to Justus Miller, Agricultural Representative, Essex, or to your local Agricultural Representative.

Requisite on the Farm—Every farmer and stock-raiser should keep a supply of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil on hand, not only as a ready remedy for ills in the family, but because it is a horse and cattle medicine of great potency. As a substitute for sweet oil for horses and cattle affected by colic it far surpasses anything that can be administered.

History of the Farm

He made money on the farm

Of many a farmer retiring to a well-earned rest it has been said, "He made a lot of money on that farm." The fact is that he made no more money than his neighbors. He saved a great deal more.

Acquiring wealth is largely a matter of systematic spending and saving. Without a definite plan few men get anywhere. Hard work is not enough; the fruits of the work must be conserved.

Useful in Camp.—Explorers, surveyors, prospectors and hunters will find Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil very useful in camp. When the feet and legs are wet and cold it is well to rub them freely with the Oil and the result will be the prevention of pains in the muscles, and should a cut, or contusion, or sprain be sustained, nothing could be better as a dressing or lotion.

To a young lady just learning to play golf, the names of some of the clubs are often very confusing. The other day on a certain course, not many miles from Petrolia, a young man told the young lady he was playing with that he noticed she had a new brassie. "Goodness!" she replied blushing furiously. "Where does it show?"

AFTER THE MANNER OF PARIS
 Simplicity of cut with elaboration of style is the idea that Paris presents in this frock of printed silk. It is slightly flared at the front underneath a bow of grosgrain ribbon, and bands of darker silk appear below the hem and edges of the short kimono sleeves. The round neck and slashed front are finished with a French fold. Medium size requires 3 yards 36-inch figured and 3/4 yard plain silk.

ATTRACTIVELY DESIGNED
 As useful as it is smart is this frock in jersey—natural color, of course. The front and long, close-fitting sleeves are trimmed with fancy buttons in a soft shade of brown, and there are inserted pockets on either side of the front. Where the underfaced front is slashed and turned back to form revers, a tiny vestee of white silk shows. The collar corresponds with the vestee. Medium size requires 2 1/4 yards 54-inch material.

BEST MEDICINE SHE EVER USED

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Highly Praised by a Nova Scotia Lady

Among the well known and esteemed residents of Hemford, N.S., is Mrs. Amanda Woodworth. Some four years ago Mrs. Woodworth had the misfortune to lose her husband, and as a result of caring for him during his illness, and attending to farm duties, she became terribly run down. Mrs. Woodworth says she felt as though her blood had turned to water. The least exertion would leave her tired and breathless. She was often attacked by spells of weakness that left her almost speechless, and frequently suffered from severe headaches. The medicines she took did not help her, and she almost despaired of gaining her health. In this condition she one day read in a newspaper of a case very similar to her own, in which health was restored through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This made her decide to give these pills a trial. After using a few boxes she found the pills were helping her, and she continued their use until her old-time health and vitality were restored. Now Mrs. Woodworth looks after a small farm of fifteen acres, besides doing all her housework, and says she never felt better or more energetic in her life. She gives credit for her present splendid health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which she says are the best medicine she ever used, and strongly recommends the pills to all run-down people.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Secretary of State for Michigan has a plan for reducing the cost of collecting automobile fees. He would abolish the present licensing system, give permanent plates, good till a car is scrapped, at a nominal fee and increase the gasoline tax from two to three cents a gallon. He claims the licensing system costs Michigan $500,000 a year, whereas the cost of collecting the gas tax is $18,000. The new plan, he figures, could be carried out for $50,000 a year.

GIRL FALLS DOWN FARMER'S WELL AT MACLACHIE

Taking a Drink When Top Cave Way, But is Uninjured

Cambridge, Aug. 4.—On Monday morning Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crone and daughter Dora and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Smith and daughter Isabella, of Sarnia, were on a motor trip when tire trouble caused them to stop in front of John Joyn's farm. Being thirsty the two girls went in to get a drink at a pump beside Mr. Joyn's house, but just as Miss Crone stepped on the well top it gave way, letting her drop in. Miss Isabella used presence of mind and grabbed a ladder that was near, putting it down the well so Miss Crone was able to brace herself till further help came. Miss Smith then secured the aid of Justus Joyn, who with a rope was able to bring Miss Crone to safety. She was uninjured and readily recovered from the shock.

From the Past

By OTTILIA FRANCES PFLEFFER

Bride of a month, mated to a man she devotedly loved, mistress of a beautiful home, Arline Ward sat crouched back in the darkest corner of her boudoir staring agast, heart stricken, at a letter that seemed to seal her doom.

"Oh, to blot out that foolish, reckless hour in the past!" her trembling lips repeated woefully over and over again.

In memory she saw herself the daughter of a man of means, the belle of the seminary where she was a general favorite. Young, confiding, inexperienced in the ways of the world, she had met and fancied she loved a man she had met incidentally. He had told her that he was Roger Derwent. He had saved her from being run down by a speeding automobile, being himself slightly hurt in the rescue. Interest, sympathy in and for a handsome, flashing face had led her to meeting him clandestinely. He had made love furiously, and one day—oh, that fatal day! ever destined, it seemed, to shadow all life's calendar. He had told her that he was called to a distance to settle up an estate. He had pleaded for a secret marriage—she was to steal to the city, a brief ceremony, an immediate parting, she was to hasten back to the seminary before she was missed, he to return in a few months and go to her father and claim his bride.

It was only after Roger Derwent was gone that Arline Ward comprehended that there had been no depth to the affection she had believed she felt for him. She had been dazzled, since 1825, for in both 1850 and 1875 international complications interfered with the plans of the church. The idea of the year of Jubilee comes direct from the Old Testament and the Jews. It is a year for special thanksgiving, special religious exercises and presumably spiritual benefits. From the time that the persecution of the Christians ceased and Rome became their headquarters there have always been pilgrimages from the more distant parts of Europe into which the faith had penetrated, but there was no formal year of Jubilee until 1300, and it arose almost by accident. In the last months of the year 1299 many pilgrims visited Rome apparently from a common impulse and independently of each other. Pope Boniface VIII. happened to learn of the unusual influx and questioned several of them. The oldest of them told him that their fathers had visited the city in 1200 and had received many remarkable spiritual favours as a result of the visit, and they themselves believed that equal blessings would flow to them by their visit. The Pope was impressed, and so ordered that 1300 should be a Holy Year.

Every pilgrim must visit the shrines of the apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul, and the Churches of Santa Maria Maggiore and San Giovanni, the latter known as the "mother of all churches." Confession and communion and a penitent spirit are necessary, as well as a prayer to be offered by each pilgrim on his visit to the churches named. This prayer is to be made according to the directions of the Pope. They provide for a prayer for the peace of the world, "not merely the peace of treaties, but the peace in the hearts of men"; "the return of the faith had penetrated the Church of Christ," and "a final orderly settlement of conditions in the Holy Land, so as to secure the sacred rights of the Catholic Church." Pilgrims are particularly admonished not to act "like ordinary travellers or visitors, but eschewing all appearances of worldliness, to be modest in looks, in conduct and especially in the matter of dress." The bull goes on to exhort the pilgrim to care only about those things that will help the soul in its search for Divine grace. The visits to the four churches named need not be made on consecutive days unless the pilgrim so desires, provided the requisite number of visits is observed. The day may be computed either according to the natural or ecclesiastical reckoning, i.e., from the first vespers of any given day to the Ave Maria of the following day.

The most dramatic part of the proceedings occurs on Christmas Eve when the doors of the four pilgrim churches are thrown open. In St. Peter's the ceremony is performed by the Pope in person. Here the gate is not really a gate since there is no opening and no bars. A piece of the wall is thrown down, and every crumb of the masonry is eagerly sought by the pious as a holy memento. Upon this piece of wall the Pope strikes three times with a silver hammer, saying: "Open unto me the gates of justice," and at the third blow the wall magically collapses, having been previously weakened by competent laymen following their profession as engineers. Rome's Holy Year

The Anno Santo, or Holy Year, Jubilee, for the Roman Catholic Church occurs every twenty years. Its significant events take place in Rome and pilgrims gather there for the solemn ceremonies which attend it. For the first time since the year 1300, the Church has held these special ceremonies. The first one was held in 1300 and the intention of the Pope who established the institution was that they should be held thereafter each century, but the first one proved so popular with the Roman people, both on religious and business account, that Clement VI. issued a bull fixing the date between each of them at fifty years. Later this was reduced to thirty-three years, and later still to twenty-five years. A Jubilee was held by Pope Leo in 1900. Previous to that there had been no celebration of the kind since 1825, for in both 1850 and 1875 international complications interfered with the plans of the church.

HABITS OF ANIMALS

CHARACTERISTICS OF OUR DUMB CREATURES.

Dogs Turn Around Several Times Before Laying Down—Baby Whale Swallows a Barrel of Milk at One Gulp—Other Oddities.

Many animals which have been domesticated by man have curious characteristics and habits. Dogs turn around several times before lying down to rest, a habit inherited from ancestors who, living in a wild state were wont to so trample down the long grass in order that a comfortable couch might be obtained. Cats do not make use of their claws in rending meat from bone and do not even place their feet upon food of this kind. A further curious fact concerning the domestic cat is that although a quadruped it has a biped track in walking, the hind legs are set exactly in the tracks of the fore paws. The common pig is not usually considered an intelligent creature yet on the approach of a storm it may be observed carrying straw to make a bed in a sheltered place. Mooses have peculiar horny growths on the inner side of both fore and hind legs. Asses have such formations only on the forelegs. The cow and the sheep have no cutting teeth on the upper jaw. The young calf has its upper jaw some rudiments of teeth which however never develop. A dog will not take hold of a load with his mouth. He has learned to dread the peculiar corrosive acid secreted in the head glands of the reptile.

In rearing their young many animals have occasion to resort to extraordinary expedients. Thus, the whale, a sea animal common to the coasts of Canada, in suckling her growing calf, the gigantic calf but one mouthful of milk to a meal. This great baby swallows the ration at one gulp, a quantity sufficient to fill a large barrel. Another marine animal, the porpoise, gives milk which is composed of eighty per cent fat.

The hoary bat, a winged animal, frequently takes her young for an "airing." Clinging tenaciously to the under side of the parents body they accompany her on her aerial food flights and must have many a thrilling moment as the mother twists and turns in mid-air in pursuit of elusive insects. This type of bat has a singularly ugly facial expression, resembling in miniature that of an English bulldog.

The burrowing beasts exhibit many quaint traits. When a badger has succeeded in digging out a gopher and has finished his meal he carefully manicures the claws on his fore feet, scraping the earth and clay from between the toes in a most thorough manner. Many people believe that the burrows of gophers and prairie dogs go down in the earth until water has been reached. This is a misconception. In particularly arid regions such creatures have acquired the ability to live without drinking water, the starchy foods being transformed to liquid in the stomach. A mole found in parts of western Canada has a peculiar fringe of fleshy tentacles on the point of its nose. It is called the "star nosed mole." The tail of this queer-looking beast becomes quite large and thick during the autumn months and remains so until the winter is over. Such a peculiarity is no doubt similar to the fat-acquiring habits of bears and other hibernating animals.

Beavers have a double claw on one toe of the hind foot, said to be used as a toothpick by that sagacious creature. The teeth of a bear are placed far forward on the body being found almost between the fore legs. The Rocky Mountains goat has a strangely formed vent on the upper part of the

DETROIT CHILD KILLED WHEN MOTORCYCLE IS DITCHED NEAR ARKONA

A young child of Mrs. Albert Farris of Detroit, was instantly killed about 7.30 Tuesday evening, near side car, when the motor cycle and youngster was a passenger, with its mother and two other children struck the ditch. The child's skull was fractured.

The motor cycle was ridden by A. Farris and the two other children, escaped with bruises and a severe shaking up. They were enroute from Detroit to London at the time. At Bartlett's corner, about three miles northeast of Arkona, they turned out to pass a motor car on a narrow roadway. As they did so the loose gravel, scattered about the loose gravel, struck the child's skull, the dead way to domestic... never drinks water... quantities through the... are more muscles in the tail of a rat than in a human hand. A mouse stores the bulbs of certain plants for winter food. Last but not the least interesting in this long list of animal curiosities is the fact that the pronghorn antelope, peculiar to western Canada, has the coat of a deer, the feet of a giraffe, the eyes of a gaelle and the horns of a deer and a bison combined.

Ultra-Violet Ray Catches Fakers.

New methods of identifying pictures have been perfected by French chemists, according to the American Chemical Society. They use groups of red, blue, green, or white light to light the picture, and they examine the suspected canvas with the spectrometer. Employment of these various colors puts in relief the retouchings, scrapings and changed signatures which constitute a false picture. By employing the ultra-violet ray they make the zinc white and certain varnishes stand out by fluorescence. Finally, by scraping off very small amounts of paint, they have made spectrographic analyses of them, and have been able thus to determine, for example, in a false Renoir, the presence of a cadmium yellow, when Renoir only used chrome yellow.

The sun is only one among a vast number of stars, estimated to number anything between seventy-five millions and one thousand millions.

Divers' Tanks.

Modern salvage enterprises demand greater and greater ranges in deep-sea diving, and as the depth to which a diver can descend is limited by the pressure of water his body can sustain without risk of collapse, improved forms of diving suits and accessories are being continually devised.

Few of these, however, increase the diver's range of operations by more than a few fathoms, and the maximum depth to which even the most expert diver can go remains at about 200 feet.

Actually men have gone to as great a depth as 300 feet, but under such conditions no work could be attempted. Moreover, the men who made this record were permanently incapacitated as a result.

A new apparatus has little in common with the usual type of diver's outfit. It resembles a small U-boat turret, which by means of a double telephone can be kept in constant communication with the surface, and which is provided with movable arms and legs to accommodate the limbs of the diver. The arms and legs are surrounded by sleeves made of a tough aluminium alloy.

Such a diving tank enables the diver to descend or rise at will by admitting or discharging water, replacing it with compressed air from a battery of six cylinders. One diver descended 530 feet in the course of tests, though at this depth the pressure amounted to 225 pounds per square inch.

Stamboul and Constantinople.

While the famous Turkish port is generally known by the name of Constantinople, it is commonly called Stamboul by the Turks themselves. It is specifically applied to that portion of the city—Constantinople proper—that lies south of the Golden Horn, as distinguished from Christian Constantinople, lying on the north side. Stamboul occupies the site of ancient Byzantium and contains the Mosque of St. Sophia, the Seraglio and almost all the monuments and antiquities to be seen in the city. Christian Constantinople is pre-eminently a commercial quarter. The name is written also Istanbul.
