ST. JOHN MUST HAVE A PUBLIC HEALTH OFFICER FOR WORK AS TO SHIP BUILDING

Dr. J. P. McInerney in Strong Address To Teachers Gives Reasons Why This Must Come

Medical Inspection in Schools—Hundreds of Residences in This City Where There is No Connection With the General Sewerage System—Striking Facts Presented By Medical Man Call For Action.

Before the St. John Teachers' Institute this afternoon, Dr. J. P. McInerney, M. P. F., read a paper of deep interest and particular importance to every St. John citizen. His subject was the need of medical inspection in the schools of this city, but he went beyond that and declared himself strongly for a health officer for the city in general.

Dr. McInerney's address, full of striking facts and fraught with much that should be taken as a warning, should give a great impetus to the movement for better general sanitary life here, and because of its value the Times gives its readers the benefit of the doctor's remarks in full. He said:

Ladies and Gentlemen: In the olden days, medicine, like other departments of philosophy, was surrounded by an almost impenetrable veil of mystery. In attempting to penetrate the demons of the murrain on the cattle and "the sickness that destroyeth in the noonday." From time immemorial, the medical profession have ever busied themselves with the betterment and uplifting of the human race. It is but meet and just that it should be so. Not only as individuals, but as physicians, not only as teachers, but as men and women who desire to build up the citizenship of this country, should we be anxious to carry into effect the state-ment made by Dorell on one occasion to the effect that the health of the people should be the first duty of all of us.

For a much greater reason should the health and welfare of the children—the rising generation—become a first call on our energies and activities, for the children of tomorrow will become the men and women of tomorrow, who will assume the responsibilities of your position and your position in building up Canadian citizenship.

This is why I accepted the kind invitation of Dr. Bridges to have a short talk with you this afternoon on the subject which was given me by the good doctor, "The Medical Inspection of the Schools."

Two Leading Wishes I may say to you, ladies and gentlemen, that this is a subject very dear to my heart—since, very much against my personal feelings, I was wrenched away for a short time from the prosecution of the profession of medicine—a yellow mist—

SPANISH CABINET RESIGNS

Matters Reach Crisis in Madrid—Ferrer Execution the Last Straw—Alfonso Was Desirous of Pardon

Madrid, Oct. 21.—The Spanish Cabinet headed by Premier Maury resigned this afternoon.

The cabinet which resigned was formed on January 25, 1907. The cabinet was conservative and succeeded in power the fall of no less than five liberal ministers in the preceding eighteen months. The religious issue had been the root of these dissensions and the return to power of Senor Maury, leader of the conservatives, and who had before held the premiership, was regarded as a sweeping victory for the clerical, and one likely to arouse a revolutionary spirit. This proved to be the case, the opposition finally uniting in opposition to the government's conduct and furtherance of the war in Morocco.

The latter was armed with a revolver and axe, but, getting the drop on him, Roy succeeded in arresting and handcuffing him.

Persons knowing of such children will please communicate with the principal, J. Fearon.

Y., Oct. 21.—When shown a despatch from Toronto last evening stating that, according to a high official of the Canadian Racing Association, racing at the Kenilworth track, Buffalo, will be resumed next spring, H. M. Gorman, president of the late Buffalo Racing Association, and one of the most prominent sportsmen, said there was absolutely nothing in this report; "absolutely nothing in it, and I would know if it were true," he said.

MEN SCARCE FOR WORK IN MAINE WOODS

Railroads and Potato Fields Give Many Employment—Higher Wages This Year—Many Foreigners in Crews

Bangor, Oct. 21.—The annual rounding up of workmen to supply the lumber camps in Maine's lumber district is now under full headway. The various employment agents cannot get enough applicants to fill the large orders they have received from lumbering companies. The scarcity of men is more noticeable than in past years and at the present time a great many men are engaged in picking potatoes. The potato crop in this locality, however, is much better than for years and consequently a large number of men are working on the railroads, getting good wages and not a bit anxious to be anywhere else than at present. Much work is being completed just at present by the railroads, many hundreds of men being employed. These men also receive good wages and they would rather work for the railroads than go to the woods.

The scarcity of men has the effect of making labor more valuable and the men who go into the woods are receiving about $2 more per month than they did last year. This advance in wages does not seem to draw the men any better, however, as the agents of the companies who hire the labor are forced to do the hard work to get enough men to fill the various crews. Boston sends many men annually into the Maine woods. These men are not as a rule experienced woodmen and the employment agents say that a local man is worth three of the "imported variety." The Boston men do not receive as much as the local men because they cannot do as much work in that line. The class of men who do work in the lumber district is continually changing and now there are 50 per cent, less Maine men going into the woods than was the custom in the old days. Into their place are coming the only sort of work open to men, who were out of steady employment. Swedes, Russians, Poles and Poles are coming in from all over the world. One of the big lumbering companies will not cut more than half as much as it did last year. The company's overseer says that each hundred of men into the woods each year, while men are scarce now, it is likely that after the work in the potato fields and on the railroads is completed, that a and on the railroads is completed, that a and on the railroads is completed, that a

"I am simply here to acquire information," he said, "and I have nothing to say."

CRITICIZE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT

Has Done Little in Combating The White Plague

RATE NOW RAISED TO FIVE P.C.

Foreign exchanges have been steadily improving in London, particularly Berlin, where gold is badly needed and where the next arrival of the metal would probably have gone into the possession of the five per cent. rate. It is known that requirements from other centres would soon reduce the reserve to below $100,000,000, the new rate attracts gold.

The market sees in today's raise a general warning against the speculative operations and the announcement was followed by a dropping in prices. British securities and Kaffirs recovered almost immediately, but American shares were lower. United States Steel and Union Pacific dropped three-quarters and several others one-half, with the tone generally weak.

The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes: Total assets decreased $2,000,000; bullion decreased $200,000; other securities decreased $3,572,000; other deposits decreased $2,000,000; public deposits increased $200,000; government securities decreased $200,000. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability this week is 47.38 per cent.; last week it was 44.69 per cent.

Jeanne of the Marshes

BY E. F. OPPENHEIM

(Continued) CHAPTER VIII. The Princess and Jeanne drove toward in a silence which remained unbroken until the last few minutes. The evening of the evening had been somewhat perplexing to the former. She scarcely understood even now why a great personage like the Duke of Westerland had shown such interest in her charge. "Tell me, Jeanne," she asked at last, "why is the Duke of Westerland so friendly with your stepmother?" Jeanne raised her eyebrows slightly. "My stepmother?" she asked him. "Yes, after all, Andrew de la Borne! They were at school together." "That is all very well," the Princess answered, "but I cannot see what possible sympathy there can be between them now. Their stations in life are altogether different. You talk with the Duke for some time, Jeanne?" "He was very kind to me," Jeanne answered. "Did he give you any idea," the Princess asked, "as to why he was staying down at Salthouse with Mr. Andrew?" "None at all," Jeanne answered. "You know very well," the Princess continued, "of what I am thinking. Did he speak to you at all of Major Forrest?" "Not a word," Jeanne answered. "Of his brother, then?" "He did not mention his name," Jeanne declared. "He asked you no questions at all about anything which may have happened at the Red Hall?" Jeanne shook her head. "Certainly not." "You do not think, then," the Princess persisted, "that it was some of the Duke's gaining information about his brother that he talked with you so much?" "Why should I think so?" Jeanne asked. "He scarcely mentioned any of your names even. He talked to me simply out of kindness and I think because he knew that Mr. Andrew and I were friends." The Princess smiled. "You seem," she remarked, "to have made quite a conquest." "The Duke has not the reputation of being an easy man to get on with." The carriage pulled up at the entrance to her house in Berkeley Square, and the Princess did not pursue the subject, but as Jeanne left her for the night, her stepmother called her back. "Tomorrow morning," she said, "I should be glad if you would come to my room at twelve o'clock. I have something to say to you." Jeanne slept well that night. For the first time she felt that she had lost the feeling of friendliness which for the last few weeks had constantly oppressed her. Andrew de la Borne had seemed to have some sort of understanding as to the troubles which were likely to beset her, and she felt that she could go to him for help. She felt now that she would not have to fight her stepmother's influence unaided. Yet when she sought her room at twelve o'clock the next morning she had very little idea of the sort of fight which she might indeed have to make. The Princess was very pale, but her eyes were hard and steady. She received her stepmother's offer with an air of affection, and bade her sit close to her. "Jeanne," she said, "you are now nearly twenty years old. For many reasons I wish to see you married. The Count de Bressault formally proposed for you last night. He is coming at three o'clock this afternoon for his usual visit. Jeanne sat upright in her chair. Her stepmother noticed a new air of determination in the pose of her head, and the firm lines of her mouth. "The Count might have spared himself the trouble," she said, "to know very well what my answer will be. I think that you know too. It is no more emphatically and decidedly! I will not marry the Count de Bressault." "Before you express yourself so irreverently," the Princess said calmly, "I should like you to understand that it is my wish that you accept his offer." "In all ordinary matters," Jeanne answered, "I am prepared to obey you. In this, no! I think that I am entitled to choose my husband for myself, or at any rate to approve of whomever you may select. I do not approve of the Count de Bressault. I do not care for him, and I never could care for him, and I will not marry him!" The Princess said nothing for several moments. Then she moved toward the door which led into her sleeping chamber, where her maid was still busy and turned the key in the lock. "Jeanne," she said when she returned, "I think it is time that you were told something which I have not told you before. You have heard so much, and which has been so much talked about, as a myth." "What do you mean?" Jeanne asked, looking at her stepmother with startled eyes. "Exactly what I say," the Princess continued. "Your father made huge gifts to his relatives during the last few years of his life, and he left enormous sums in charity. To you he left the remainder of his estate, which all the world believed to amount to at least a million pounds. But when things came to be realized all his securities seemed to have depreciated. The legacies were paid in cash. The depreciation of his fortune all fell upon you. When everything had been paid, there was something like twenty-five thousand pounds left. More than half of that has gone in your education, and in an allowance to yourself since I have had the charge of you. There is a little left in the hands of Monsieur Lephane, but very little indeed. What there is we owe for your dresses, the rent of this house, and other things." "You mean," Jeanne interrupted bewildered, "that I have no money at all?" "Practically none," the Princess answered. "Now you can see why it is so important that you should marry a rich man." Jeanne was bewildered. It was hard to grasp these things which her stepmother was telling her. "If this be true," she said, "how is it that every one speaks of me as being a great heiress?" The Princess glanced at her with a contemptuous smile. "You do not suppose," she said, "that I have found it necessary to take the world into my confidence?" "You mean," Jeanne said, "that people don't know that I am not a great heiress?" "Certainly not," the Princess replied, "we should scarcely be here." "The Count de Bressault?" Jeanne asked. "He does not know, of course," the Princess answered. "He is a rich man. He can afford quite well to marry a girl without a dot." Jeanne's head fell slowly between her hands. The Princess suddenly stood up and stepped back. It was not the loss of her fortune so much which affected her as the other contingencies, the things which she was surrounded. She tried to think, and she more she thought the more involved it seemed. She looked up at last. "If my fortune is really gone," she said, "why do you let people talk about it, and write about me in the papers as though I were still rich?" "The Princess shrugged her shoulders. "For your own sake," she answered. "It is necessary to find you a husband, simply and permanently is the good news, and towards one does not find them easily where there is no dot." Jeanne felt her cheeks burning. "I am to be married then," she said slowly, "by some one who thinks I have a great deal of money, and who afterwards will be able to support me and reproach me for having deceived him?" The Princess laughed. "Afterwards," she said, "the man will not be too anxious to know the truth, because they think that I am very rich." "And how, may I ask, do you propose to live?" the Princess asked quietly. "If there is nothing left at all of my money," Jeanne said, "I will work. If it is the worst which comes, I will go back to the convent and teach the children." The Princess laughed softly. "Jeanne," she said, "you are talking like a positive idiot. It is because you have had no time to think of this thing. Remember that after all you are not selling under any false colors. You are your father's daughter, and you are also his heir. If the newspapers and gossip have exaggerated the amount of his fortune, that is not your affair. Be reasonable, little girl," she said, letting her hand fall upon Jeanne's. "Don't give us all away like this. Remember that I have made sacrifices for your sake. I owe more money than I can pay for your dresses. Nothing but your marriage will put us straight again." "I am sitting in my room and all you want to live under false pretences." "Nothing," she said, "would induce me to marry the Count de Bressault, not even if he were an angel. I am penniless. If we cannot afford to live in this house, or to take rooms somewhere else, we will live under false pretences." The Princess was very pale, but her eyes were hard and steady. "Child," she said, "don't be a fool. Don't make me angry, or I may say and do things for which I should be sorry. It is no fault of mine that I am penniless. I took my money and I have done the best thing for you. I have made people believe that you are. Be reasonable, and all will be well for you. If you're going to play the Quixote, it will run for all of us. I cannot think how a child like you got such ideas. Remember that I am twenty years older and wiser than you. You should leave it to me to do what is best." Jeanne shook her head. "I cannot," she said simply. "I am sorry to disappoint you, but I shall tell every one I meet that I have no money, and I will not marry the Count de Bressault." The Princess grasped her by the wrist. "You will not obey me, child?" she said. "I will obey you in everything reasonable," Jeanne said. "Very well, then," the Princess answered, "go to your room at once." Jeanne turned and walked toward the door. On the threshold, however, she paused. There were many times, she remembered, when her stepmother had been kind to her. She looked around at the Princess sitting with her head resting upon her clasped hands. "If I am very sorry," Jeanne said timidly, "that I cannot do what you wish, that is not honest." The Princess turned slowly round. "Honest!" she repeated, scornfully. "Who is there in our world who can afford to be honest? You are behaving like a baby, Jeanne. Only hope that before you obey me if I tell you not to leave your room until I send for you!" Jeanne hesitated. "Yes!" she said. "I will obey you in that." "Then go there and wait," the Princess said. "I must think what to do." (To Be Continued)

Fashion Hint for Times Readers

The Tricorne is Particularly Fashionable. Dozens of the dainty little tricorne-hats are seen at every opening of millinery. The tricorne is becoming to almost everybody, but the higher the brim the more trying the shape, as a rule. This model is of white beaver faced with black moire silk, two ostrich tips forming the trimming. The ostrich feathers are of the sort termed 'clipped ostrich'—much more fashionable now than the willow plumes, which have had a long vogue. The brim is caught back with a buckle ornament made of silver cord.

WASHINGTON SAYS INFORMATION WRONG

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 20.—(Special)—A special despatch from Washington, D. C., says: "The report from Windsor (Ont.), that it is the intention of the navy department to equip the training ship Don Juan De Austria, which recently passed up unarmored through the Canadian canals, with modern four inch guns, is evidently based on wrong information. The vessel is no longer under authority of the United States government, having been loaned to the State of Michigan for training of state naval reserves. Nothing is known here of any intention of the state to arm her."

CATARH CURED

No Cure, No Pay, is a Most Generous Offer. To get an antiseptic strong enough to kill catarrh germs and to destroy the tissues of the membrane at the same time, has been a problem which was never solved until the discovery of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-mei). Hyomei is prepared from eucalyptus, the most powerful yet harmless antiseptic known. Breathe the Hyomei vapor under the inflamed and germy membrane four or five times a day and in a few days the germ will disappear. The inflamed tissue will go, too, and the sneezing, yawning and offensive breath, and the discharge of mucous and crusts in the nose will cease. Then why should any catarrh sufferer hesitate, when Chap. R. Washburn has such faith in Hyomei that he offers to return your money if after a fair trial Hyomei does not cure catarrh. A complete Hyomei outfit, including the inhaler, costs $1.00, and extra bottles, if afterwards needed, cost 50 cents. Hyomei also cures asthma, croup, sore throat, coughs, colds or grip.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS

Montreal, Oct. 20.—The Star's London correspondent cables: All eyes in London are on the suburb of Bermondsey, famed for its leather tanneries and jam factories. The writ for the by-election there was moved in the house of commons yesterday. The election is probable either on Wednesday or Thursday next and the result is awaited with the deepest concern by both parties. It is understood that Mr. Lloyd George for weeks past has been urging the cabinet to go to the country while the budget issue is hot. He wants, at all costs, a new lease of power. If his candidate, Mr. Hughes, wins, he and Mr. Churchill may precipitate a general election even by a threat of resignation, if necessary. If, on the other hand, the tariff reformer, Mr. Humphreys, wins, the conclusion will be drawn that the budget has done nothing to help the government. A third possibility is the return of the third candidate, Dr. Salter, a high-toned, cultured Socialist, whose victory would vivify Lord Rosebery's anti-Socialistic warnings and would tend to strike terror into every Englishman who has anything to lose.

The Evening Times

ST. JOHN, N. B., OCTOBER 21, 1909

The St. John Evening Times is published at 27 and 29 Castlereagh street, every evening (Sunday excepted) by the St. John Times Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., a company incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Act.

THE EVENING TIMES THE DAILY TELEGRAPH New Brunswick's Independent Newspapers.

These papers advocate: British Connection Honesty in Public Life Measures for the Material Progress and Moral Advancement of our Great Dominion. No Graft No Deals

THE PUBLIC HEALTH St. John must have a medical health officer.

In clear, strong, convincing terms Dr. J. P. McInerney, M. P., sets forth the evidence to support this assertion.

It is found in his address delivered to day before the Teachers' Institute, and reported in full in this issue of the Times. Citizens, and parents especially, should read this address with thoughtful attention.

The importance of medical inspection in the schools is made so clear to the mind that there can be no reasonable argument against such a course. Dr. McInerney's intimation that some of the school buildings are not in the best sanitary condition should appeal to the board of school trustees.

Surely there is grave reason for protest against a condition which permits hundreds of residences in this city to be without proper sewerage. The experience of Montreal, to which Dr. McInerney calls attention, should lead the health authorities of St. John to abolish the pestilence breeding pit closets. He declared that outbreaks of typhoid are due chiefly to local filth.

campaign against tuberculosis. It stands also for healthier tenements. The question has been brought squarely to the attention of the citizens by many agencies laboring for social and civic betterment, and not to take action would be a criminal neglect of a plain duty.

THE HADDOCK THEORY One recognizes the hand of a former New Brunswick journalist in the following article from the Victoria Colonist, which the Times reprints without prejudice and with all due reference to local authorities on the subject of philology.

"A telegram announces unusually high tides in the Petitecote River, New Brunswick. Modern usage would pronounce this name as though it were written Petyoodyack, with an accent on each of the y's. There are yet some people, and there used to be a good many more, who say 'Petyoodyack,' and the chances are that they are right. If you go with a Maritime Province Frenchman, he will speak 'Codyeh,' when he means what we call Acadia, and educated Frenchmen write Acadie. But Frenchmen, as we Englishmen speak of Passamaquoddy Bay. Now there is an old Indian word which sounds something like Quodjeh—you can tell just how to spell an Indian name, and if you have any doubt on this point try to spell the Timpanean word which written Kaian—and it means haddock, fish very common in the Bay of Fundy. It seems probable that the 'y' of the unimproved Frenchman, the 'cojck' of the old-fashioned Englishman, and the 'quoddy' which they both use, all come from the same original 'Quodjeh,' and that Acadia, the name which Longfellow made world-wide, is only a pretty way of expressing the fact that the lands around the Bay of Fundy encompassed the home of the haddock."

On the subject of trade with the West Indies, the Toronto News says: "The British members of the Royal Commission on trade relations between Canada and the British West Indies have sailed for home after doing good work in this country. Though a free trader, the chairman, Lord Balfour of Burleigh, fully admits that there is no alternative for Canada but to protect its own markets and resources. Holding, as he does, this opinion, and having taken counsel from Canadians at different centres, there is every reason to believe that he appreciates the importance of encouraging and increasing interchange of commodities between these islands and the Dominion. Possible means to that end may include mutual concessions as regards customs duties, improvement in steamship connections, and closer attention of exporters to the special requirement of the market sought. Lord Balfour and his colleagues showed a grasp of the large issues at stake, and important results are expected to flow from their visit. They leave behind them in Canada many new made friends."

At a time when public feeling is much aroused over the budget discussion in England, and there is much talk about the possible dissolution of parliament, there is to be a by-election in the London suburb of Bournemouth, and the result is awaited with intense interest by all parties. There are three candidates—Hughes, Liberal; Humphreys, Tariff Reformer; and Salter, Labor Socialist. In 1900 Bournemouth was won by the Liberals, and in 1908 the Liberals swept the field with a majority of 1739. The by-election is expected to take place next week, and the result may have an important bearing upon the question of dissolving parliament.

MORNING LOCALS The trustees of the Waterloo street United Baptist church have invited Rev. F. W. Wentworth to the pastorate of the church in place of Rev. Gideon Swin, resigned.

Work of removing the salmon from the Little River hatchery was commenced on Tuesday. About 1,200 fish will be removed.

In St. Stephen's church last night Rev. Dr. Carmichael of Saskatchewan delivered an interesting address on missions before the Women's Foreign Mission Society.

The members of German street Baptist church have accepted the resignation of Rev. W. W. McInerney and it will take effect on November 15, after which date he is to receive four months' salary. He has not yet announced where he will go.

SUPERIOR PAINLESS DENTISTRY!

"There is a world wide cry against the dentists that they torture their patients. Those of strong physique submit and endure the agony. With a second class this is simply impossible, and thousands of teeth are neglected and lost even though the patients may be able to pay for our most skillful service. Then there is a third class who, after months of mental torture in anticipation, finally come into our hands, and, with nerves strung to a painful point, pass through the ordeal, but at what a cost! We do not sufficiently consider the consequences of shock in the dental chair, yet undoubtedly many suffer for months and even years from injuries to the nervous system received whilst in our hands.

The greatest duty of our profession today is to discover and adopt a mode of painlessly performing our operations.

NOTE—The above is an abstract from a paper read by an eminent dentist of New York City before a society of dentists in Philadelphia.

The famous Hale Method of Painless Dentistry, for which we are sole agents for Canada, is the best Method on earth.

OVERBOARD TO ESCAPE ARREST

Sensational Happening in the Stream Below the Falls Early Today—Clay Clark Arrested

Between 3 and 4 o'clock this morning Policeman Wm. R. Lee arrested Clay Clark on suspicion of stealing thirty-three pieces of deal.

The arrest of Clark was rather sensational. This morning about 2 o'clock Policeman Lee was standing near the old market place, Carleton, when, hearing the sound of rowing in the harbor, he thought he would investigate. On nearing the water front he saw a rowboat coming down stream. There were two men in it and it was loaded with lumber. The boat put in to Driscoll's wharf, on the west side, a little below the falls, and on the policeman making his appearance, his progress was stopped and the occupants, each catching a deal, threw themselves overboard, sustaining themselves by catching hold of the stick of timber and propelling themselves by their feet.

The guardian of the peace told the men that they must go no farther, but one of them got away. The tide was high at the time, and Clark, who could not swim, was in great danger. The current drove his feet beneath the deal, so that he was in a cramped position. Lee grabbed an oar and extended it to him, but he said he could not let go the deal, as if he did so, he would drown. Finally the tide washed him ashore, where he was placed under arrest.

Clark denied stealing the deal, saying that he got them in the drift wood at the Falls. The case was stood over until Saturday morning.

LOUIS MCGUIRE'S VISIT HOME WAS A COSTLY ONE

Met Schoolmate and Claims to Have Been Robbed of $106 Martin Langin Arrested

Policeman Joseph Scott this morning arrested Martin Langin on suspicion of stealing $106 from Louis McGuire in the Ottawa hotel.

As McGuire wished to get out of town as soon as possible, and as he had no money left him, his case was begun this morning, and after hearing his evidence was stood over until this afternoon.

He said that he belonged here and had lived in Boston for some time. He came here on a visit on Friday last. He had known the prisoner for a number of years and had been a schoolmate of his. He had met Langin last night and after spending a few hours about town, they went to the Ottawa hotel, where they engaged a room. The witness said he had occasion to display a few bills in the room and Langin saw them.

Langin brought a bottle of whiskey into the room and they both had a few drinks. Both men went to the room and after having a drink the witness lay down on the bed and fell asleep. He woke up about 4 o'clock this morning and found that his money, amounting to $106, was missing.

He went then to the manager of the hotel and was told that Langin had left the building about 11.30 o'clock last night. The manager advised the witness to go to the police station and try to get police aid. This he did, and together with Policeman Joseph Scott went to the Union depot, where they found the prisoner. McGuire said: "Well, that was a pretty shabby trick to play after the way I have treated you."

On the way to the jail the prisoner attempted to hand to McGuire some money which he took from a pocket, but Scott would not allow this procedure.

Cross-questioned by the prisoner, McGuire said that when he met Langin the latter was accompanied by Wm. Hanlon. All of the witness' money was gone, with the exception of one dime.

The case was adjourned until 2.15 this afternoon.

SAYS WIFE HAS GONE FROM HIM

James Bartley's Reasons For Giving Up Carvill Hall—Have Two Children

James Bartley, who has given up Carvill Hall, and will store his furniture, states that his wife has left him, and is now at Brownville, Maine, and he does not expect her to return. He declares that she is infatuated with a railway conductor who boarded with them, and whom he finally ordered to leave the premises.

"She went away last Sunday night, and he says she would have gone on Saturday night on the train of the conductor in the case, but that he went to the depot and took her grips back to the house."

Mr. and Mrs. Bartley and their two boys, Harold and Milton, aged 15 and 12 respectively, came here about five months ago from Mile, Maine, where Mr. Bartley is proprietor of a hotel. They took over the Carvill Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartley have been married about sixteen years, he says, the ceremony taking place in Bangor, Me. She was Miss May Dillon, of Frampton, Quebec. She is Mr. Bartley's second wife, and they have but the two children referred to.

"I have lived happily with my wife all our married life," said Mr. Bartley, "and always thought her a very lovable woman."

He says that his wife was twenty-four years old when they were married.

"That man has broken up my home," said Mr. Bartley, "but he will never suffer the way I have the past few weeks."

It's Quality, Not Printers' Ink, that Makes Satisfactory CLOTHING FOR MEN

Advertising may make the first sale—satisfaction makes the customer come back for more.

It is what you put into Men's Clothing—goods, work, knowledge of style—not what you say about it, that makes its worth.

We saw a suit the other day, advertised as being worth half as much again as its price, that couldn't touch our regular suits at that price in any detail of style, cut, hang, or tailoring.

Beginning with the materials, carefully picked for excellence of design and fast coloring, we put in expert tailoring up to the very last notch that the selling price of the clothing is able to stand. The way the collars are made to lie close to the shirt-collar; the way the shoulders and chest are shaped, demand hand-work—and plenty of it. Canvas that won't buckle, interlinings that won't pucker along the edges of the coat, have to be fully shrunk and plentifully stitched. And these things are done—in varying amounts according to the price of the clothing—but more, for a given price, than you can find in any other clothing.

Test it today, in our good suits at $15, at $20, at $25—prices that just about hit the preferences of most men, and then go to see the way other clothing is built at the price.

YOU'LL COME BACK.

Overcoats—same way—$6.00 to $30.00.
