"Wanted, a Cook."

How I STOPPED RUNNING.

CONTINUED.

More than half way up the mountain was covered with short turf, at first intermixed with flowers and brushwood. Then these ceased, and one came upon overgrown boulders and loose stones, enlivened by the Alpine rose. Further up again vegetation ceased entirely, and the mountain crest rose in bare ruggedness in the sky. Janet would certainly not have reached that region. She must be seeing the sun set from some grassy slope, for the sky was cloudless and hastened on. But I found the climbing much more difficult than I expected, not having waited to provide myself with an alpenstock. I planted my nailed boots firmly into the turf, and progressed steadily.

At last I reached a kind of ledge, or hollow, and turning round for a moment, beheld the great snow range of the Mount Blanc, and further back the St. Bernard group flooded in the wonderful crimson glow well known to Swiss travellers as a perfect earthly Paradise. Was Janet seeing it too? I felt sure she would appreciate it. But where was she? I missed her? Above me rose a very steep bit of climbing and ever that another ledge.

Suddenly I saw high above me, the flutter of a dress. I could not distinguish who it was, yet I felt sure it must be Janet. I waved my arm, and then, whether she was startled or whether she slipped over something I know not, at that minute I saw her fall. She made a violent effort to save herself, but let go her alpenstock, which rolled rapidly away from her. Then, losing all control over her movements, she half slipped, half rolled down the fearful precipice.

I was some way off. Also she was not just above me, but somewhat to the right, where a second ledge would step her course. In an instant I made up my mind. I rushed on as fast as my legs would carry me, ward direction to the right. In this way I might perhaps reach some point where I could stop her descent. If not, she might be killed or seriously injured by striking against some boulder. I flew on keeping my eyes on her. Now and then she was partially stopped by some small impediment, but again precipitated downwards by the struggles she made to regain her footing.

It takes long to describe, but it did not take me long to reach a spot below, only just in time to catch at her dress. But alas! I had not time to secure my own footing. I was dragged by her weight and fell, still retaining my grasp, however. A violent effort, in which every muscle of my body seemed to be exerted, and then I managed to cling to the ground, and throwing out my left arm clutched at a boulder. We were saved; no fear now of again slipping, for, curiously enough against this very boulder Janet's alpenstock had become fixed. I secured it, and planting it firmly in the ground, managed to raise Janet. She was for a few moments quite stunned, but happily had not fainted. Very soon she looked up and recognized me.

"Thank you," she said simply; "it was so very horrible going down like that and not being able to stop oneself." She shuddered a little, then with a great effort she rose, but was trembling too much to walk alone. She was thus forced to take hold of my arm and we proceeded very slowly with the aid of the alpenstock. I do not think I objected at all to this state of things; I felt so proud of having been of use to her; so proud of having her hand on my arm once did. But now I must speak—Janet, Janet, if you will give me leave, I promise that you shall not regret having come here.

Janet turned toward me with a glowing face, she knew what I meant now, and yet she hesitated. "But, Mr. Hunter, some day you may regret having fallen in with one of Cook's tourists."

"No, indeed, Janet, never, if only you will let me be in future the personal conductor?"

"I have not much to add, except that I travelled back with Mr. Matthew and Janet, and that she and I found so much to say to each other that I am sure the poor man thought me very dull company. We parted in London—she to accept Mr. Matthew's hospitality till I could arrange something for her, and I home to my dear mother, who was almost too much surprised to speak to me when I appeared, and announced why had I come home so suddenly? Why had I not answered her too last letter? To these questions I replied by making a clean breast of the whole story, and, though my mother was at first terribly alarmed as to what Janet was like, and in her heart blamed the dear girl very much, yet she could not say anything but good."

"Mother, you must see her before you blame me. You will find her lady in every sense of the word, and the only person I ever met in all the world worthy to be your daughter. Besides, did you not tell me to look out for a 'Cook' in my travels?"

"Dear uncle, I missed my footing and—I think Mr. Hunter saved my life."

Mr. Smith poured fourth profused thanks and inquiries, so that I was forced to spend the evening with them, whereupon I found out what a kind sensible man Janet's uncle was. How was it I ever could have thought him a treacherous neighbor? When he retired to rest I was left a few minutes with Janet.

"I hope you will believe in future that I am willing to be of use, Miss Morton—and that I shall not find you gone when I wake up to-morrow morning?"

"Perhaps it would be better if we found you gone?"

"Will you let me be the judge?" and she did not answer. I need hardly say that I did not pack up my portmanteau that night. All my doubts and misgivings had flown away. I loved Janet, and I fancied that this evening she was not quite so indifferent to me.

She had just fallen into a sound slumber that night when I was roused by a loud knocking at my door. "Would I get up and come to Mr. Smith at once?" I hurried on my clothes and was soon at Mr. Smith's door, where Janet met me, looking pale and frightened.

"Oh, Mr. Hunter, forgive me for sending for you, but you said—I went to give my uncle some medicine at 1 o'clock, and I called him, but he did not move. I fear he has fainted."

I went in with her by her uncle's room; the mistress and master of the hotel were there, both being most kind and attentive.

Janet and I went to his bedside; I touched his hand; it was cold as ice. I looked up in the faces of those about me and then I saw that honest, kind-hearted Mr. Smith would never wake again in this world. Janet burst into tears when she saw the look on my face.

"He was so good, so kind to me," she repeated. "Dear dear uncle!" The funeral was very quiet, for Mr. Smith had few relations. His married sister's husband arrived the day of the funeral much perplexed at finding himself in a foreign land and having a young lady to see after. I wondered how he ever managed to reach Canada. Janet left the English ladies at the chafet very kind to her. It would have been difficult to be otherwise to the gentle, beautiful girl who appeared so lonely.

She returned to know each other during that week as we could have done under no other circumstances. And when all was over and Mr. Matthew told me he must go back at once, and would give Janet a home till something was arranged. I determined to see if that "something" might not be—I hardly dared to say the word even to myself.

"Will you come and see the sun set once more on this last evening?" I said to Janet. "I promise to see that you do not again fall." Janet was sitting in the veranda, looking so desolate and dejected. She had tried to avoid me all day, but now she was forced to answer.

"Yes—if you wish it."

When we reached the scene of the accident we sat down, and both of us looked out over the sea, looking down upon those snow ranges which would soon be dyed with ruby light.

"Miss Morton, why have you avoided me, all day?" I said at last, but she only turned her head away. "Janet," I said, eagerly, making a desperate plunge and taking her hand almost forcibly, "Janet, won't you say you are a little sorry to leave—this place?"

"I am sorry—very sorry."

"Will you not come back next year and see this same beautiful sight?"

"Next year?"

"Yes, with me. Janet, have I not said that I love you in everything but in words? Those I dare not say for fear of not looking at you any more. So the years pass, and even a few grey hairs begin to show themselves among her brown tresses, while her friends no longer plied but ridiculed her for refusing all advances from other desirable sources.

Lately her fidelity was rewarded. The lover of her girlhood has returned from California, bronzed, bearded, and a millionaire, with a wife and twins.

Woman in existence, at once wrote to invite Janet to come and stay with them—but that is hardly necessary to write down. Yes she did say one day:

"Indeed, Reggie, I am quite satisfied with your choice. You could not have obeyed me more suitably."

So Janet and I were married, even before I was twenty-five years old. Mr. Smith left his nice little income. And if a beautiful, loving, and perfect wife can make a man an exemplary creature, then I feel sure I must come under that title. At all events, I know that I have never regretted having fallen in with one of "Cook's Personally Conducted Tours."—The Argosy.

Mormon Despotism.

The first colony that went to Utah was composed of only a few hundred people; now the Church claims that it rules some one hundred thousand followers in the Territory. The first comes had a large number of Americans, who were drawn into the toils before the full enormities of the institution were divulged, but of those who have connected themselves with the Mormon Church during the past thirty years, quite nine-tenths have been from Europe, and from the very lowest classes of European society. The immigration has increased from a few hundreds annually to a few thousands. Last year more than three thousand came, and this year a heavy increase over that number is expected. The children of school age, as returned by the Mormon authorities, number forty thousand. Those too young to attend school, together with those above school age and still under the requirements that it would die of its own infamies, within twenty years, except for the yearly infusion of fresh serf blood from abroad. Few Americans could ever be made to bear the unquestioned and unquestioning obedience which is exacted from this people. The government is an absolute despotism. Every ward in the city, every small precinct in the country, is under the control of a bishop. To him the people have to submit all their affairs, temporal as well as spiritual. His advice amounts to a command, and a command which must be obeyed. The bishops report to the elders, the elders to the seventies, the seventies to the high priest, the high priest to the president of the stakes, they to the patriarchs, they to the twelve apostles, and they to the president and his high counselors. Down the same scale the orders are sent. These leaders are the same as God to the blinded thousands of Utah. At the last October conference the burden of the harangues to the people was to impress upon them that the chiefs, being daily and regularly inspired by God, could make no mistake, could be trusted in all their decisions, and that the Elders of the Great Priest is full of the truth, and he did not fail to warn all who doubted that they would be damned. At the same conference another leader explained that the people must obey their leaders in all things, as well as spiritual matters, even as the people did in the days of Moses.

"Through such a system it is easy to see how an ignorant and fanatical people are held under absolute control by the heads of the organization. In Brigham Young's time he was a more absolute ruler than was ever the Czar of Russia. Since his death the president, John Taylor, and his first counselor, George Q. Cannon, make the controlling power, and give directions to the whole system. Both are Englishmen. A favorite expression of Brigham Young's used to be, 'We follow the forms of a republic, but this is a kingdom.' It is a kingdom, or rather a despotism, so all-embracing that intelligent Americans at a distance do not believe the truth about it when it is told.—C. C. Goodwin, in Harper's Magazine for October.

Love Unrequited.

From the Evening Wisconsin.

A touching story of tender love comes to us from a town not many miles from this place.

A beautiful young girl becomes engaged to a gallant Union officer. At the close of the war he went to California to seek his fortune. She ignored all advances from scores of suitors, and patiently awaited the return, feeling confident in his keeping true to her. So the years passed, and even a few grey hairs began to show themselves among her brown tresses, while her friends no longer plied but ridiculed her for refusing all advances from other desirable sources.

Lately her fidelity was rewarded. The lover of her girlhood has returned from California, bronzed, bearded, and a millionaire, with a wife and twins.

"Smith, didn't you tell me you sometimes wrote for the paper?"

"Yes, I did." "It's strange I never saw any of your articles in print."

"Oh, they never published them. You see, I don't mind telling you, the editor told me confidentially that my articles were so solid he used them for paper weights."

General Information.

At Rochester, N. Y., lately, the famous trotter, Maud S., lowered the best record for one mile by a quarter of a second, from the 2:10, or a full second less than the best record of any other horse. The successive quarters were covered in 32 1/2 seconds, 32 1/2 seconds, 32 1/2 seconds, and 32 1/2 seconds respectively.

The marble quarries of Vermont have become enormous excavations, several being 350 feet deep, and the openings are only slightly protected, if at all, while rude stairways down the side of the shafts afford the only means of descent; yet there is hardly an accident, and it is several years since a fatal fall has taken place.

The year 1887 will be the centennial year of the British Colonial Episcopate. In the year 1787 the first Bishop ever consecrated for a colonial diocese, Dr. Charles Inglis, was consecrated Bishop of Nova Scotia. Since then the growth and extension of the Church of England in the colonies has been very remarkable, there being no less than seventy bishops laboring in an empire of Great Britain.

During the six months ending June 30, the Deftford Smallpox Hospital, which receives patients from all parts of London, received 546 cases of smallpox, of which 326 had been vaccinated, and 224 had not been, while of 46 it was unknown whether they had been vaccinated or not. Among the vaccinated cases the deaths numbered only 6, or 2.5 per cent; among the unvaccinated they reached a total of 127, which was 28.5 per cent. Of the 46 doubtful cases 9 were fatal.—Scientific American.

In respect to the popular notion that coffee is an unhealthy beverage, that it keeps up constant irritation of the stomach and brings on depression of spirits, etc., Dr. Richardson, the well known English specialist, while admitting that the article cannot be taken in excess without producing dyspepsia and irritation, nevertheless asserts that, moderately used, it is an invigorating, healthful and wholesome drink, bringing a man's best energies into play.

On the other hand, Dr. Beck of Leipzig, an eminent authority, declares that the nervousness and peevishness of our times are chiefly attributable to tea and coffee, these producing a chronic derangement of the digestive organs.

A Frenchman has leased a large tract of waste country in the south of Algeria, and proposes turning it into a lion and panther preserve. Old horses, mules, and asses that have been used for the protection of the tract will be purchased and sent thither, and these will act as a bait to lure into the preserve the wild animals of the surrounding country. Those who wish to indulge in lion and panther shooting, not to speak of such small game as lynx, jackals, and tiger cats, will be supplied with the necessary outfit. The who are bold can shoot at their game from the open, but for the nervous amateurs will be provided, from which shooting can be done with the least danger of a counter attack. There will be on the estate a comfortable hotel, with a Parisian cook.

A new industry or manufacture has been undertaken in England, namely, the production of paint from steel waste for the protection of iron and steel from corrosion in any position and in any climate. The scale for this purpose is that which falls from the metal as it falls from the rolls and this is ground by special machinery until it becomes as fine as lard. The white color is then given to the paint by the addition of iron filings, and then it is intermixed with boiling oil and coloring matter. The paint is of two kinds—the anti-corrosive for use above water to prevent rusting, and the anti-fouling for use under water, to prevent the attachment of barnacles, attaching themselves to ships' bottoms and other iron work. It is claimed that, if painted with two coats of the composition, a vessel may go to India or Australia and return with clean bottom; the anti-corrosive covering. It is also asserted, is much more effectual for blast furnaces than gas tar.

Professor Artus, who has devoted himself to the discovery of the reason why woolen clothing when washed with soap and water, will insist upon shrinking and becoming thick, and acquiring that peculiar odor and feeling which so annoy housekeepers, says these evil effects are due to the decomposition of the soap by the acids present in the perspiration and other waste of the skin which the clothing absorbs. The fat of the soap is thus precipitated upon the wool. These effects may be prevented by steeping the articles in a warm solution of washing soda before being washed. The soda solution is made by adding some warm water and a few drops of ammonia. The wool is as then to be washed out, and dried in lukewarm water. The Professor further tells us that flannel which becomes yellow by use may be whitened by putting it for some time in a solution of hard soap, to which strong ammonia has been added. The proportions he gives are one and a half pounds of hard curd soap, and two-thirds of a pound of soda, and strong ammonia to 10 pounds of water. The same object may be obtained in a shorter time by placing the garments for a quarter of an hour in a weak solution of bisulphate of soda, to which a little hydrochloric acid has been added.

VEGETINE

Conductors Take It.

Blotches, Pimples, Humors on the Face and Neck Disappear.

ASovereign Remedy for Rheumatism.

MONTREAL, P. Q., Oct. 17, 1879.

Dear Sir—Most cheerfully and yet testimonial to the great number you are daily receiving in favor of your Vegetine. I have been troubled with rheumatism for several years; also with blotches and pimples breaking out upon my face and after using several bottles, I have had no more trouble with rheumatism, and the blotches on my face and neck have disappeared. I have recommended VEGETINE to some of my friends who were troubled with rheumatism, and they have used it with good success, and I will recommend it to all my friends who are troubled in the same way.

Yours truly,
T. E. CALLEER, M. D.,
Passenger Conductor Grand Trunk Ry.

VEGETINE.

Dr. Callier Surprised.

VEGETINE Cured his Daughter.

CALDERVILLE, CHITCOE CO., ALA., May 15, 1878.

Dear Sir—My daughter has been afflicted with nasal catarrh, inflammation of the kidneys, and is of a nervous and irritable nature, and after having exhausted my skill and the most eminent physicians of Selma, I at last resorted to the use of your VEGETINE (without confidence), and, to my great surprise, my daughter has been restored to health. I write this as a simple act of justice, and not as an advertising medium.

Respectfully,
T. E. CALLEER, M. D.

VEGETINE.

Worked Like a Charm—Cured Salt Rheum and Erysipelas.

76 COURT ST., BOSTON, N. Y., July 10, 1879.

Dear Sir—One year ago last fall my little boy had a breaking out of Erysipelas and Salt Rheum, his face being one unbroken and the worst description. Noticing your advertisement in the papers, I purchased two bottles of the VEGETINE, and with the two bottles my son was cured. I never saw anything like the VEGETINE; it worked like a charm. I require it for my children, and for my years. Your testimonial is gratifying.

Yours respectfully,
HORATIO GRUBBET.

VEGETINE.

Remarkable Cure of Scrofulous Face.

WESTMINSTER, CONN., June 19, 1879.

Dear Sir—I can testify to the good effect of your medicine upon my mind. I had a Scrofulous face break out on his head as big as a quarter of a dollar, and it went down to his neck. He had a fever, and his neck, and was one solid mass of sores. Two bottles of your valuable VEGETINE cured him.

Very respectfully,
MRS. G. H. TRITCHER.

VEGETINE.

PREPARED BY
H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass., and Toronto, Ontario.

Vegetine is Sold by all Druggists.

People tormented by the most disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Vegetine. It is a pure and healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action and constitution is restored by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics which give it its pleasant and agreeable taste, render it a most valuable and healthful beverage. It is a healthy and strengthening tonic, and it is a healthy and strengthening tonic, and it is a healthy and strengthening tonic.

The superb organization of the Church is held complete in all its details; nothing is permitted to be neglected. No general ever held an army under more perfect control than Taylor and Cannon hold the whole body of the Mormon people. Through times of discipline and strength. More and more missionaries are sent out annually, and the annual increase of bigoted, priest-enveloped foreign creatures to join the "kingdom" in Utah is very great. From Utah colonies are being sent forth to wherever a place presents itself. In this way the valleys of Colorado, and Arizona, Idaho, Wyoming, Montana, and Washington Territories are being swiftly appropriated, and wherever these colonies go they carry with them joyfully their badge of slavery to a few men in Salt Lake City who, as they believe, are the vicegerents on earth of the living God.—C. C. Goodwin, in Harper's Magazine for October.

NINE-TENTHS of the religion of the present day is nothing but holy-margarine.

Shipment to England.

The Hon. Judge Peters, of Charlotte Harbor, Fla., in a letter to the Editor of the Dominion, dated July 12th, 1881, writes: "I have been a tenant of your farm for a number of years at a moderate rental, and I have been very much pleased with the richness of soil, bounded by the river on one side, and Gagetown Creek on the other, and containing a large quantity of the best quality of hay, grain and roots of all kinds, as well as a very wide range of the richest pasturage, and containing about 500 ACRES in all, also embracing about 20 acres of upland near the centre of the farm, on which I erect suitable buildings at all times be far above the highest freshets, and having already borne in good crops, suitably located on the river, capable of holding a large quantity of hay. I use no advantage for raising cattle for the English market, and I have all equalled in the Maritime Provinces probably in the Dominion. For full particulars, apply to—

Don't Stop My Paper.
Don't stop my paper, printer,
Don't strike my name off yet;
You know the times are stringent,
And money hard to get;
But let me little harder,
I want it more than ever,
And scrape the dimes together,
Enough for me and you.

I can't afford to drop it;
I find it doesn't pay,
To do without a paper,
However others may;
I have to ask my neighbors
To give me theirs on loan;
They don't just say, "but mean it,"
"Why don't you have your own?"
You can't tell how we'd miss it,
If, by any fate,
Should happen not to reach us,
Or come a little late;
Don't you just keep posted,
And send me what is going on
Or feel, and be accounted
A foggy simpation.

Then take it kindly, printer,
I may have some new matter,
For cash is not so plenty,
And wants not few, you know.
But I must have my paper,
Cost what it may,
I'd rather dook my sugar,
And do without my tea.

So, printer, don't you stop it,
Unless you want my flow,
For here's the year's subscription,
And credit it right down;
And send the paper promptly
And let it come weekly
I'll be obliged benison.

Justice Must be Respected.
They give a man a chance out West. In Deadwood, Custer or any of those new Western towns the spirit of fair play crops to the surface even in judicial proceedings.

In March last a Michigan man who keeps a eating-house at Gunnison was over particular about taking a counterfeit bill dollar, and in the row which resulted he was considerably battered. He therefore called upon the Justice of the Peace and stated his case and asked for a warrant.

"I guess I wouldn't make a fuss over it," replied the official.
"But he meant to kill me."
"Yes, I presume so, but he'll leave town and that's all."
"Yes, they say so; but no one is afraid of him."
"Judge, do you know what he said about you when I told him I'd have him arrested?"
"No."
"Well, he said you were a blamed grasshopper eater."
"Yes, but he didn't mean it."
"Yes, and he was mad when he said you didn't know enough to write your own name, and therefore couldn't be a lawyer."
"He did say that?"
"He did."
"Then I'll issue on him like a ten-ton avalanche on a yaller mule! The man who sneezes at my larin' must have a contempt for the Judiciary!"

The warrant was issued, the party arrested and tried, and the verdict of the court was:
"Gunnison William, the verdict of this court is that you are guilty, and the penalty is a fine of $25 in cash. This court can't get over the fact that you vilified its mental calibre. It is also aware of the fact that you haven't a red to pay your fine with. Now, then, if you meet this court back of this building on every Saturday afternoon at 10 o'clock in your six and a half minutes or remit the fine. I want to prove to the citizens of Gunnison that in electing me to the judiciary they have cast their votes for a man who can spit on his hands in six different languages, and get away with a hog pen full of rongs without having an ear scratched. Prisoner at the bar have you anything to say?"
The prisoner had. He said he'd rather go to jail, and to jail he went.

The Crushed Sereader.
Young Bilkins went to serenade his girl on Van Ness avenue. The amateur orchestra of which he is a member, had hardly squealed out the first two bars of "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," when the second story window went up and old Boggs, Amelia's father, stuck his head out and remarked:
"Is there no way of compromising this thing?"
"What—what?" gasped Bilkins.
"If you can't get out of this matter? How does $4 and an old gas stove strike you?"
"Why—this—is a serenade," exclaimed Bilkins.
"Exactly—so I see. Now, suppose I were to stand the beer and the car fare all round, wouldn't you work off the rest of it in front of some deaf and dumb asylum or other?"
"Well, I'm blowed," ejaculated the crushed lover.
"I should think you would be, hitched to the end of that big trombone. Don't point out this way, for heaven's sake; it might go off!"
"Come down here and say that like a man!" roared the big drum, who was full of Budweiser and fury.
"You had headed old pelican, come down!"
"—I—think we had better—better go if it were, boys," murmured the mortified Bilkins, and the disgraced band walked away off, scornfully ignoring Boggs' parting injunctions to reform and lead better lives after the thing blew over.

The results of the census of the Australian colonies have been published. They are very gratifying as the following table shows:

New South Wales	1871	1881
Victoria	250,000	450,000
Queensland	71,000	125,000
Tasmania	18,000	27,000
South Australia	90,000	115,000

Contemporary Farm Topics.
The Agricultural Editor of the Maine Farmer reports the following instance of LIBERAL FEEDING FOR MILK. The supply of cotton-seed was heavy, but a free miller—yielding from thirty to forty pounds of milk per day—will dispose, with good advantage, of a great quantity of food that would cloy a dry animal or a smaller milker. It is a common error in feeding for profitable milk production that the large milkers do not get enough. Their rations are too often gauged by the inferior members of the herd which can only use a limited amount of extra feed. The greater profit comes from liberal feed to liberal milkers.

"We continue to feed the cotton-seed meal at the rate of from two to three quarts per day (the latter quantity for the last few weeks), from the first of November to the first of May, six months, and during that time she gave 710 gallons of milk, which, at twenty cents per gallon, the price at which it was sold, amounted to $142, and her keeping for the time at 28 cents per day amounted in round numbers to $42, leaving $100, as the profit for six months. The cotton-seed meal was then stopped and cornmeal substituted at the rate of four quarts per day. Within this feed the flow of milk was diminished four quarts per day in two weeks, then steadily increased until the first of June, when the feed of meal was discontinued. She is now nearly eight months from the time of calving, and with calf to come in about the middle of February, and her daily yield of milk now is fifteen barrels per day, with no feed but pasture grass. She is in excellent flesh."

Lemon Juice in Diphtheria.
Dr. I. R. Page, of Baltimore, calls the attention of physicians, in the Medical Record, to the topical use of fresh lemon juice as a most efficient means for the removal of membrane from the throat, tonsils, etc., in diphtheria. He states that in his hands it has proved the best agent that he has yet tried for the purpose. It applies the juice of the lemon to the affected parts every two or three hours by means of a camel's hair probang. In eighteen cases in which he has used the remedy the effect has been all that he could have wished. He finds that several of his patients have preferred to give the same favorable account of the remedy.

A curious tale comes from Adelaide, in the Province of Wesleyan Church, in that city, on the Sunday after the wreck of the steamship "Parana," the Rev. J. Watsford spoke eloquently of the Rev. J. Waterhouse, the Wesleyan minister who, with his son, was among the drowned on the occasion, and alluded to his last sermon in Sandhurst, when he spoke of the influence of one good man in his home, in the city, or in a sinking ship. He related that Mr. Waterhouse had a warning of the disaster in which he was to die himself and his son going down in a sinking ship, and also mentioned that, just at the time of the wreck, a young woman who was dying in Melbourne suddenly exclaimed to her mother, "Mother, yonder is Mr. Waterhouse." He is standing on the shore beckoning to me."

Blue-Eyed Mary.
New Words to an Old Tune.
Thy form so light and airy,
Thy face so sweet and mild,
Have charmed my soul, dear Mary,
And have my heart beguiled.
Thy nut-brown hair is flowing,
And gracefully it flows;
Thy modest cheek is glowing,
Like summer's blushing rose.
When first I saw thee, Mary,
Thy charms inspired a love
That nevermore shall vary,
But ever constant prove.
Enchanted by the brightness
Of those sweet azure eyes,
My heart hath lost its lightness,
For thee it fondly sighs.
Then be not coy nor chary,
Nor leave me thus to pine,
But, charming Blue-Eyed Mary,
Be thou forever mine.
September, 1881. GERALD.

VARIETIES
—A plumber who was about to die said: "My only regret at dying is because where I am going water-pipes never freeze up."
—An ignorant old lady was asked by a minister visiting her, if she had religion. She replied, "I have eight tongues of it occasionally."
—Some wives are merely burdens to their husbands. But a wife who can keep the house warm for a husband without a stove, ought to be a great help to him.
—Josh Billings remarks: "The only way to get thru this world and escape censure and abuse is to take the back road. You can't travel the main thoroughfare and do it."
—A citizen of Dakota took a Turkish bath in Omaha a few days ago, and died within an hour. The verdict of the jury was, "He had ought to have got so much mud of him at one time."

—A doctor goes out hunting and don't "kill anything," his wife always blames him and says it wouldn't have happened so if he had stayed at home and attended to his legitimate business.
—"Zion," said a Dutchman, "you may say what you please about pad neighbors; I had to visit neighbors as ever was. Mine pigs, mine hens come home with dirt ears spilt; and to-day I have two of them come home missing."

—A merchant of Liverpool who died suddenly, left in his desk a letter written to one of his correspondents. His sagacious clerk, seeing the necessity of sending the letter, wrote at the bottom:—"Since writing the above, I have died."

—A Galveston widow is about to marry her fifth husband. Her pastor rebuked her for contemplating matrimony so soon again. "Well, I just want you to understand, if the Lord keeps on taking them, I will 'o," was the spirited reply.

—A girl in Dublin struck her croquet partner on the head with the mallet; brain fever set in, and the young man nearly died. The girl was kept under arrest until his recovery, and when he got well she married him, and now he's sorry he didn't die.

—There are some very strange forward people in Galveston: One of them went up in the Vesuvio, office, and sauntering up to the desk asked: "I hear that the Bible has been revised. Do you know if many important changes have been made?" "A good many I believe." "Then there is no mistake about Ananias being struck dead for lying?" "No, I believe not." "Well if I was you I would find out about it," and he stroiled off as unconcerned as you please.

—During one of the recent riots in southern Russia a man entered a baker shop kept by a Jewess and bought a loaf of bread, which he began to eat as he went out. As soon as he reached the street he threw himself upon the ground and began writing about as though in excruciating pain, at the same time exclaiming, "I am poisoned! The Jews have poisoned me!" A crowd assembled, and threatening demonstrations were made against the shop. It would undoubtedly have been sacked within a few minutes had not the occupant maltreated and perhaps killed, had not the Jewess, whom the bread had been sold stepped out, snatched the bread from the writing wretch on the ground, and begun to eat it herself before the eyes of the mob. This conclusion answer saved her, and the ruffian jumped to his feet and ran off. Such scenes were frequent.

FOR
Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.
AYER'S
In diseases of the pulmonary organs, and in all reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S Cherry Pectoral is such a remedy, and so efficacious, that its use restores the confidence of the public. It is a scientific preparation, and contains the medicinal principles of the most valuable and chemically suited, of such efficacy as to insure the greatest possible relief, and to restore the vitality of the system. It is a foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cure, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Inflammation of the Lungs, and all the pulmonary affections, AYER'S Cherry Pectoral is magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Croup, its use is not only a remedy, but efficacious, soothing, and helpful.
Low prices are inducements to try some of the most mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and inferior ingredients, now offered, which are so often advertised, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the Throat and Lungs demand active and effective treatment, and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and untried remedies, from the great liability to these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated and incurable. AYER'S Cherry Pectoral is a standard, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is a scientific preparation, and contains the medicinal principles of the most valuable and chemically suited, of such efficacy as to insure the greatest possible relief, and to restore the vitality of the system.
