Disestablishment in Wales.

London, April 27 .- Mr. Asquith's remarks in introducing the Welsh Disestablishment Bill last evening, referred to the fact that twelve parishes in English dioceses would be disendowed and disestablished, but on the other hand fourteen Welsh parishes in the diocese of St. Asaph would be transferred to some English diccese. The treatment of a number of boundary parishes involved delicate questions, and would be considered therefore by special commissioners. If a $1,600,000 and assets $2,400,000, bill should be passed in the present year it would become effective on Jan. 1, 1896. All public and private rights in patronage would then become extinct. No Welsh bishops would sit in the House of Lords, ecclesiastical law in Wales would cease, and the courts would be deprived of their power. Existing doctrines and ordinances would continue, although without the force of law. The power to hold synods would be preserved, and the church would be empowered to appoint a body to hold property in its behalf. The Government proposed to appoint three permanent commissioners to carry out the provisions of Terror-Stricken Towns.

ATHENS, April 27 .- A heavy shock of earth quake was folt here at 9:20 this evening. It lasted 15 seconds. The weekly McNight, principal of the Presbyterian Etaphion procession was in progress and Theological College. He was 68 years of the cathedral was crowded. The windows age. of the cathedral rattled ominously, and several objects fell to the floor. Women screamed and somebody shouted that the building was falling. A terrible panic was averted only by Premier Tricoupis' presence of mind. He addressed the congregation civilized Indian and a graduate of a Vircalmly, saying that there would be no daager if they would only leave the cathedral slowly. The congregation dispersed without disorder.

Dispatches received up to 11:30 o'clock indicate that the early quake was felt throughout Greece. The town of Atalanta, 3,000 inhabitants, which had been but slightly injured by previous shocks, was nearly leveled to the ground. Two thirds of the buildings were reduced to heaps of ruins and the rest badly damaged. The destruction of Thebes was complete. Not a house is left standing. In Iamia acres of houses were rendered uninhabitable. Part of the prison collapsed and about 60 convicts were caught in the wreck. The number of dead and injured is not known. Larissa, Volo, Chalcis, and Patras were shaken more severely than was Athens. Stone walls were split in hundreds of buildings in the four towns. Terror reigns in the island of Syra and Zante. Repeated shocks have been felt there in the last two days. Small villages have been half ruined and hundreds of families have been driven to live in the fields unsheltered and unted. The towns of Zante and Syra have not been damaged greatly, although a few buildings in each were partly destroyed. ATHENS, April 28 .- The list of dead by the earthquake now numbers 300 persons who lost their lives before the shocks of last evening. The destruction of life and property has been far greater than in Zante | power, tenderness of the scalp and spine, last year. A FLAG CIRCUS.

Big Row in Winnipeg Between Two Brenches of the Militia.

WINNIPEG, April 28 .- A big fuss has been stirred up in Winnipeg military circles. At Thursday night's charity ball in the drill shed, among the decorations were several American flags. These gave offense to Major Coutlee, commander of the Winnipeg Field Battery, and he ordered them down. The committee refused to obey this order, and Major Coutlee called upon the deputy adjutant general to demand that the flags be removed. The latter, however, sided with the ball committee, and ruled that they should remain up. This made Major Coutlee so furious that he threatened to call upon a detachment of Sons of England to pull them down. Then the deputy adjutant-general placed a detachment of infantry on guard to see that the decorations were not interfered with, and they were not. Hence all the trouble, the end of which is not yet.

Sir Oliver Mowat said he didn't see how any intelligent man could arrive at such a conclusion. He thought registrars and sheriffs should have the right to appoint their own deputies. When questioned as to the payment of both he answered in favor of a well regulated system of fees. He thought sheriffs should receive fees to the extent of about $5,000. and registrars $4,000, and the Government should see that their subordinates were not unjustly paid. The fees outside of this should be funded. Erastus Jackson, of Newmarket, ex-warden of York county, also favored strongly the present system.

Other Objectionable Features of the Tariff Attacked by Opposition Members.

Government Supporters Disagree Over the Insolvency Bill.

[Special to the ADVERTISER.] OTTAWA, April 27 .- The greater portion of this afternoon's session of the House of Commons was devoted to discussing the tea duty question.

Mr. Mulock's bill, providing for the examination of witnesses under oath by commitee, was transferred to the Government

When the tariff resolutions were taken up, Mr. Sutherland questioned Ministers about the duty chargeable under the new tariff upon green Java coffee purchased in Holland. The point was important to merchants, he said, as large quantities of coffee were bought in Amsterdam.

Mr. Foster stated that as Holland levied no duty upon coffee the tariff provided that coffee purchased in that country, unless in bond on through bill of landing, would have to pay 10 per cent duty. In answer to Mr. Fraser, the Finance Minister said tea might be inspected in bond in London, and thus obtain free entry.

Mr. Welsh pointed out that if Great Britain placed tea and coffee upon the free list they would become dutiable in Canada at 10 per cent ad valorem.

Mr. Foster stated that the Government expected no increase of revenue from changes in the tea and coffee regulations.

Sir Richard Cartwright argued that such being the case there was no excuse for disturbing the arrangements of merchants or of discriminating in favor of men who imported from particular countries. There was no reason why a man who bought coffee in Holland should pay 10 per cent, while the man who bought coffee in a ountry that taxed that commodity should have his goods admitted free.

After the tea and coffee items were passed, the Opposition entered a strong protest against the high duties upon paints and paris green.

The clauses fixing the duties upon kerosens and other oils were allowed to stand at Mr. Foster's request. This is regarded as an indication that the question of mak. had any questions to ask. ing further changes in the duty upon coal oil is being considered by the Government.

Messrs. McMillan and Cartwright urged that drain tiles be placed on the free list to enable farmers to drain their lands cheaply.

Mr. Foster would not agree to this. A lengthy discussion took place on the glassware duties, the Opposition protesting strongly against 30 per cent on lamp chimneys and other common glass articles of daily use.

Mr. Fraser stated that he was a stockholder in a company that controlled a glass station) on Kensington bridge. He was the wholesale arrests of Stundists and their manufacturing business in Canada, and 8 talking to a friend of the witness, a Mr. foul treatment in prison? fit was divided among shareholders, while another 8 per cent was used to shut up competitive factories. The system which permitted such a thing was cutrageous.

Messrs. Cartwright, Mulock and Flint also condemned the glassware duties as taxes imposed upon the people for the advantage of the combine, which was not opening factories, but closing them.

Hon. David Mills ridiculed Mr. Foster's tatement that his policy was one of development." It was developing monpolies and combines, destroying competiton and throwing Canadians out of em-

Hon. David Mills pointed out that Mr. duty on glass more than he did by his useless bill against the combines. The item conscience.

After recess the House went into committee on the bill incorporating the St. Clair and Eric Ship Canal Company. Hon. David Mills (Bothwell) and Messrs. Allen, McGregor and Campbell (Kent) supported sufficiently safeguard the interests of the owners of lands to be expropriated along the line of the projected canal. Owing to the absence of Col. Tisdale, its promoter, the bill was allowed to stand.

Consideration of the tariff was then resumed. On the item of 40 cents a barrel ceased was not under the influence of on cement, Mr. Gibson pointed out that liquor, though he acted somewhat strangely; Canadian Portland cement was so superior witness had known Rogers fifteen years, that he had actually taken Canadian cement into the United States to the he was an industrious man; the deceased American end of the St. Clair tunnel on a was given lodging that night; no reuse the American article. It was obvious that protection was not required.

The Controller of Customs said that the manufacturers of cement were perfectly satisfied, which led Sir Richard Cartwright to comment on the extraordinary answer made, namely that the manufacturers were satisfied. The item passed.

The House adjourned at 10 o'clock. IN THE SENATE. At the meeting of the Senate committee on the Insolvency Bill there was much discussion over the question whether farmers should be brought under the provisions of the bill or not. Senators Scott, Bernier, Dickie and Clemow opposed the provision and Senators Lougheed, Ferguson (Niagara) and Ferguson (P. E. I.) spoke in favor

Senator Scott contended that a bankruptcy bill was intended to relieve only those who were led into difficulties by causes over which they had no control, such as traders. Farmers did not belong to this class, hence they should not be included in the act.

Senator Clemow was afraid the bill would ead the farmers into speculation.

The amendment of Mr. Scott to strike out farmers and non-debtors was eventually put and defeated. The clause was changed so as to place farmers, graziers and ranchers in the same position as other traders. That is to say a farmer, grazier and rancher can be put into insolvency by his creditors as well as the trader. Originally the clause authorized a voluntary assignment only.

Mr. Bowell opposed the change and on its being carried said he would bring it before the Government. If the committee were going to change the principle of the bill in this manner it would endanger the whole bill. It is quite certain that the bill will not be put through the House of Commons this session.

POOR MICHAEL ROGERS.

He Had Feditated Suicide for Some Time-Out of Work, Friendless and Alone-Suicided Owing to Despondency.

The adjourned inquest into the cause of the death of Michael Rogers, who drank ammonia on the market on Monday evening last, and afterwards died at the hospital, was held at the Police Court last night. Mr. Platt, a clerk in Strong's drug store, identified the bottle as the one he had sold to Rogers on Monday last with two ounces of ammonia. Thos. Spettigue, a tailor, said that Rogers had come to his establishment on Friday last and had sat for two hours without saying a word, and in a very despondent manner. Mr. Flock asked Mr. A. M. Hamilton (foreman) if he

PERSECUTED FOR RELIGION.

Tyrannised Over Because Their Creed is Different From That of the Majo rity.

[From London, Eng., Chronicle.] From the information we have received from Odessa, it is evident that the persecuting policy of the Russian Government is being steadily renewed. Students and other persons "suspected" of revolutionary tendencies are being arrested, and domiciliary visits are being paid to private houses by the active and corrupt agents of the "third section." It may, however, be said that any government is justified in protecting itself against any attempts at its own violent overthrow, and that, therefore. Nihilist students are persons to be closely watched, and, if needful, arrested. But apart from the fact that in these arrests and trials all the safeguards of personal freedom are violated, what can the apoloterranean dungeon, almost starved, and then sentenced to deprivation of all rights and to banishment to the Caucasus. The kind of punishment inflicted on this poor man has also been inflicted on numberless members of the Stundist persuasion. Now, who and what are the Stundists? Of all men in the world they are the most deserving of considerate and just treatment. Grant, if you will, that the revolutionary student who has absorbed the teachings of Bakounine is a dangerous wild beast. But ngainst the Stundist no such accusation can be made. He is really a primitive Christian reappearing in this nineteenth century to shame us all out of our smooth routine and decorous conventionalism. His ideas are those of Count Toistoi; nay, they are those of the "Sermon on the Mount." He loves his neighbor as himself, he calls nothing his own so long as his brother is in need, he labors honestly for the bread that perisheth, he carries out all the precepts which the early Christians regarded as having binding force. He is a disciple of the gospel of non-resistance, which indeed, he makes almost the corner-stone of his creed, so that he cannot be the enemy of the Russian Government as the Nihilist conspirator is. This is the kind of man who is now being persecuted by the corrupt administration of the Czaramined. He had made inquiries as to the an administration which has created special special methods of crushing out the early pious nonconformity of England. We may feel reasonably certain that the same result which happened in England will happen in Russia-the persecuted will prove stronger than their persecutors. The progress of Stundism is so rapid among the simple, honest peasantry of Russia, whose natures are predisposed to receive its teaching, that it is evident the Russian Government is becoming alarmed at the movement which, by purely peaceful methods, will effect a far greater transformation of that vast empire than can ever be effected by violent revolutionary means. The existence of the Russian autocracy, with all its apparatus of corruption and cruelty, depends on poor men being willing to accept the office of hired butchers, ready to slaughter their fellows at the bidding of their imperial master. Once let millions of men band themselves together in an attitude of passive resistance, and declare that, come what may, they will not fire upon their fellowmen at the bidding of a despot's creatures, and it is all up with the Russian despotism. You cannot draw an indictment against a whole nation, said Burke. You cannot imprison, much less execute, millions of them. This gospel of George Fox, of Garrison, of Tolstoi, whatever we may think of it as a final statement of the relations of men to the State, is the true gospel for the suffering, silent, inoffensive peasantry of Russia. It possesses an explosive force a thousand times greater than all the dynamite in existence, And it is probably because it is so strong, so invincible, that Stundism is persecuted by the Government. In the same way the harmless, peaceful Christians of Antioch and Rome were persecuted by the Roman Imperial power. But the Russian Government is in one respect meaner than the Roman. For while the Roman Government made no specific attempt to degrade the class from which Christianity made the greater part of its converts, the Czar's Government goes out of its way to perpetuate ignorance and drunkenness among the Russian peasantry. No books, but multitudes of dram-shops—such is the Government's policy. Stundism, on the other hand, puts a ban on drink, and enjoins the study of the gospels; it tends to rescue the peasants from their two greatest evils. And the Russian Government, which should welcome the aid of moral reformers whose methods are peaceful, is deliberately committed to the task of suppressing the best and strongest ethical movement in the tinctly anti-moral power. Happily, as we have said, it cannot win in the long run. Somehow, at some time, in ways unforeseen, the great fabric of imperialism superimposed on a democratic people will crumble and collapse, and the reign of truth and justice will begin for the great and noble Slavonic people. If the Stundists had their way, that reign would be ushered in peacefully, if such is not the case, the fault will lie exclusively at the door of the Czar and his advisers.

SHORT TALKS ON ADVERTISING.

[Copyrighted 1894 by Charles Austin Bates.] One man succeeds and another man fails, and people wonder how it happens. It seems sometimes to people who don't think deeply that the weaker, duller man goes | ahead, and that his more brilliant brother sticks in the rut at the bottom of the ladder.

Slight differences in men seem to make all the wide differences between success and failure. In games of chance (?) the "bank" has only a slight percentage, but the bank always wins. Back of every result is a reason. Back of business success are earnestness, energy, persistence, concentration. Between these and achievement is advertising. No man ever yet made a success of business without advertising of some sort.

Maybe he didn't call it advertising, but it was advertising just the same. Advertising primarily consists in letting lot of people know you are in existence and what excuse you have for it. The nucleus of advertising is a sign over the door. If nobody had every put up a sign, the Royal Baking Powder Company would not now be paying $850,000 a year placing signs in all the newspapers in America. When a man goes into business, he has some cards printed and when he meets an acquaintance thereafter, he pokes out a card and says: "When you're down my way drop in." That's advertising. The trouble is that you can't repeat the operation enough-personally. What you can do is to put the card and the remark, more or less elaborately expressed into the ADVERTISER and have it handed to 10,-000 people all in one day. The difference in men that makes one do this and another refuse, is small. That is. it looks small at the start. It's like most all little things—when you stop to analyze it and figure it out to its ultimate result, you find it grows into proportions of great magnitude.

An advertisement in the ADVERTISER is a little thing, but it goes into hondreds of homes and tells thousands of people just what you most wish them to hear. If the ad is an honest ad it will always pay.

OBSERVANT physicians begin to believe that appendicitis and grip have a relation of effect and cause. Appendicitis was never so common as it has been since grip visited this country, and a physician who has performed many operations for the cure of the former advances the theory that grip produces a catarrhal condition of the vermiform appendix that finally, in some cases, induces the state of acute inflammation to which the name appendicitis is applied. Grip is now manifesting itself with many variations.

I used various domestic remedies and applied to my family physician, but received no benefit. By this time my trouble assumed the form of dropsy. I was unable to use any food whatever except boiled milk and bread; my limbs were swollen to twice their natural size; all hopes of my recovery were given up, and I quite expected death within a few weeks. Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY having been recommended to me, I tried a bottle with but little hope of relief; and now, after using eight bottles, my Dyspepsia and Dropsy are cured. No interest would suffer if it did, and the country would save nearly $200,000 a year.

-The chief Conservative organ, the Toronto Empire, acknowledges that Sir Oliver Mowat will be sustained in the coming general elections. -Cotton factory operatives in Hamilton are working but 35 hours a week. Is this the best the N. P. can do for the people? A little more than half time for those who have work, and so many standing idle at the end of April that vacancies can be filled at once by men who are glad to work even half time! Under the Cartwright tariff the Dundas cotton mill worked full time and there was no cotton mill in Hamilton. Under the Foster tariff the Dundas mill is closed altogether and the Hamilton mill works on seven-twelfths time! Comparisons are

-It is likely that as a result of a conference with the owners of steamships at Montreal, the grand officers of the Patrons of Industry will go to Ottawa and make strong objections to the proposed Dominion subsidy of $750,000 to the Huddard Company. Huddard's line is chiefly intended to carry passengers, while the Patrons and prompt and sensible action of Ald. Morris. farmers generally oppose the granting of any subsidy, unless it is paid to provide more rapid and cheaper carriage of agricultural products and other freight, thus benefitting the whole people instead of a few. One steamship owner told the Patrons that Mr. Huddard, at the end of a year, would be out of pocket $500,000, or he would have to ask the Government to raise the subsidy or decrease the speed. Another asserted that Huddard's boats would not carry a ton of hay or a bushel of wheat, and that Montreal shipping men were a unit against the subsidy because it is uncommercial and unnecessary. It is made apparent that before the question is finally disposed of it will be well threshed and also thoroughly understood in Parliament, which it apparently is not now. The Patron pilgrimage to Montreal is likely to bear fruits.

TWO-EDGED CRITICISM.

Mr. Hardy's new mining law is denounced by the London Free Press because the royalty clauses are suspended for five sleeping? When this measure, which our contemporary says is much too favorable to the miner, was before the Legislature. Mr. W. R. Meredith, the beau-ideal statesman, according to our city contemporary, not only supported the clause suspending the collection of royalties, but denounced the Ontario Government for not making the law much more favorable to the miners, who, according to the Free Press, now get har too much. Having condemned Mr. Hardy for his liberality towards those who take up mining lands, what has our city contemporary to say of the conduct of Mr. Meredith, who maintains that the new law is far from being liberal enough to the

THE LAST REVISION OF ONTARIO MUST DIE TO EARN MR. MERE-VOTERS' LISTS IN LONDON.

After four days of hard work, the revision of the Ontario voters' lists was practically completed last night. When it is taken into consideration that the lists were compiled by the assessors last summer, the number of changes made are remarkable. In a city the size of London, there is a constant movement of a considerable section of the population, and any list more than a few months old, unless gone over, as has been the list upon which the elections will soon take place, must necessarily be very inaccurate. The work that had to be done by the two political parties In order to purge the list of the repeaters, the dead, the moved away and the disqualified, as well as to secure the names of new voters, was simply enormous. We are sure that all will welcome the comparative relief which will be afforded by the new registration law, which comes into force after the pending general election. It enacts that all manhood suffrage voters must personally register their names as voters within a few days after the writ for a new election is issued. This is a very proper provision. No longer will it be necessary to spend time and money revising lists that may never be used, and as the registration takes place, under proper safeguards, immediately after election day is announced, the work can be done as part of the campaign, which will be regarded by the large majority of the people as the best possible arrangement. Busy people do not want campaigning while there is no need

It is to be hoped that similar reforms will soon be effected so far as the Dominion voters' lists are concerned. Most Dominion lists upon which the people have voted since the compiling of them were taken out of the hands of the municipal authorities have been antiquated and grossly defective. For example the large majority of those cut off the Ontario lists in London this week would be qualified on the Dominion lists. And what is the most scandalous feature of all is this: while hundreds of persons who have moved to the United States could come back and qualify in any election to be held between now and January next, hundreds of young men, long since 21 years of age, would be disfranchised. There are many young men in this city from 21 to 25 years of age who have never yet been able to get their names on the Dominion lists that have cost in eight years close on $1,000,000 !

While registration is welcomed for the Provincial elections, with its simple one man one vote residential suffrage, that cuts off all men who think this magnificent city not good enough for them to live in, we will never be satisfied till a similar provision for all Dominion elections is provided.

WHY BLUNDER?

The Milton Reformer, a thorough prohibition journal, whose editor is an active Royal Templar, says:

"The prohibitionists of East Hamilton made a big blunder in bringing out a candidate before they saw what the two great political parties would do. They should have waited and seen the kind of men they would bring out, and supported the party that brought out a prohibitionist. The prohibitionists are not as yet a political party in that sense of the word, and it was to their interests not to put up a man if either of the two political parties brought out a prohibitionist. The smart Alecks in the ranks are doing more harm to the cause of prohibition than anything else. Where was the necessity for bringing out a candidate in East Hamilton before the two great political parties had selected their candidates? Had these two parties brought out opponents of prohibition, it was time enough then for the prohibitionists to have taken action in the matter. The fool killer should be sent to East Hamilton-there appears to be a job waiting for him there,'

The blunder has been remedied by the who was chosen by the prohibitionists as a candidate. When he found that the Liberal candidate was a temperance man in the best acceptation of the term, he declined to remain in the field, taking the view that it would be highly detrimental to the promotion of the principles he has at heart to have a division in the ranks of the temperance people, thereby enabling a man like Mr. C. R. Smith, the P. P. A. nominee, who has not been a friend of temperance, to be returned by the division. Ald. Morris, who has many friends in London, has earned the gratitude of the progressive electors of East Hamilton by his action.

UNRESTRICTED LIQUOR SELLING. There is unrestricted trade in intoxicating liquors in South Carolina now, This comes of attempting to put a liquor law in force while its absolute constitutionality is a subject of dispute. No interest suffers in the case of some laws that are passed, even though their constitutionality may subsequently be made a matter of legal dispute. It is different with liquor laws about which years. Where has our contemporary been a squabble can be started with ease, if the constitutionality of the measures are not guaranteed inadvance. Sir Oliver Mowathad good sense enough to know this when he refused to run the risk of landing the Province into a similar state to that in which South Carolina is now placed. If he had no other warning before him than that of the abortive Dominion liquor law, which the Conservative Government passed while its powers to do so were in doubt, and which was declared unconstitutional after hundreds of thousands of dollars had been spent in attempting to enforce it, Sir Oliver's present course would have been vindicated. He is no friend of temperance who holds otherwise.

DITH'S APPROVAL.

Mr. Meredith now praises the late Hon. Mr. Crooks, Minister of Education, so as to make a comparison between him and Hon. G. W. Ross, to the disadvantage of the last named. When Mr. Crooks was Minister he was the worst abused man in the House. Being dead, Mr. Meredith and his friends now feel inclined to have him canonized. If Mr. Ross would only die, he would be received into the category of good Liberal saints in the estimation of Mr. Meredith and his Conservative following. Mr. Meredith treated the late Hon. Timothy Pardee in the same way. So long as he lived Mr. Meredith was always insinuating that he was a very bad man and was always threatening him with exposures about to be made that would drive him from public life. Now that Mr. Pardee is in his grave and an equally able statesman holds the position vacated by him, the worth of Mr. Pardee is recognized and his successor is traduced. Away with such petty denunciations of the Government of Ontario! It is not by this nagging, depreciating, insinating criticism of the statesmen of to-day, always falsified, that any man can attain power in this intelligent Province.

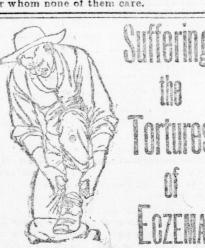

HOW TO INCREASE THE SETTLERS The St. John's (N.B.) Globe says that despite the trade disturbances in the States there is a very great outflow from New Brunswick to the United States at present.

"On they go-some by rail, some by steamer-to the neighboring republic. Even the onward march of Coxey's army does not frighten them. Is there no way to stop this? No doubt many who are now moving west are of those who come home in November or December to hibernate; but the number that go back is even larger than the fall arrivals. Probably the same thing happens in parts of Maine and in rural districts in other New England States, but the Americans who move westward are in their own country. Here the young and vigorous and active of our people are thus drained away. How can the country grow in population and become prosperous while this goes on? What can there be before us if in ten years we do not add 100 souls to our population?

An effective-indeed, the only permanent -remedy for this emigration is to make life on our vacant lands so attractive that hundreds of thousands, instead of hundreds, will go on them to seek a living. This country is a magnificent one, but it as been governed so as to enrich a few at the expense of the many. Reverse the conditions, and give the country a chance, While the earnings of the workers are diverted into the coffers of a few men in Montreal and Toronto, by the agency of the "protective" tariff, every independent elector must suffer, hence the complaints effective remedy, the most reliable and the regarding present conditions that are heard | best. on all hands.

A DEMOCRATIC PRINCESS. [New York Advertiser,]

The Radicals need not worry if Lord Rosebery marries Princess Mand. She has always been the most democratic of princesses. A good many people have heard the story of her serene announcement that if it were not for her grandmother she should herself propose to a young Bostonian who used to visit at Marlborough House. And children in England always delighted in the story of her running away from her sisters and their governess in Hyde Park when she was a child for the avowed purpose of buying oranges and eating them sitting on a park chair "like other little girls." As Lady Rosebery and wife of the Premier of England, Princess Maud would doubtless be sufficiently dignified for her position. The Britons who will say they "can't understand what Wales is thinking of, letting his girl marry the Scotchman," will at least confess that there is a good deal of independence of foreigners among his children. Like their aunt, the Princess Louise of Lorne, Prince George and Princesses Louise and Maud appear to think that a noble Briton is a better mate than any royal continental, for whom none of them care.

Here Are Some Valuable Suggestions for Both Men and Women at Just This Beason of the Year.

"I ought to take some spring medicine; must take something, I feel so miserable. Such a remark as this is often heard at this time of the year. Nearly everyone seems to feel the need of some remedy, because the passing from winter to spring, with its resulting changes in clothing, food and exercise, has a very trying effect on the system. After the severe strains of winter the health of most people is not so good as it ought to be. The appearance of warm, spring days finds them weak and debilitated, feeling the need of tone and strength.

This is the reason why so many people are now complaining of tired, irritable, languid feelings. They wonder why it is they have these distressing symptoms.

The best physicians say that this weak condition is caused by the liver being out of order. There is too much bile in the system. This brings on dyspepsia and other miserable feelings, which make life a

It was to cure these disorders of the system that Warner's Safe Cure was specially designed. In the most trying cases this great remedy never once fails to give prompt relief. It is popular ever y where, because it is always reliable and effective. For the past fifteen years Warner's Safe Cure has been before the public, and achieved a success never equaled in the history of medicine, not only in the United States and Canada, but in Great Britain, Germany, France and Australia. The greatest physicians have strongly recommended Warner's Safe Cure, because it is a purely vegetable compound, containing no harmful drugs or opiates, and because it does exactly as represented. It permanently cures all kidney, liver, urinary and nervous disorders. It builds up the system and gives new life.

When you are without appetite, are constipated, have a coated tongue, a nasty taste in the mouth, sick headache, pains under the shoulder blades or in the region of the kidneys, your liver is out of order. You feel nervous, despondent, lack your accustomed energy. The safe cure will relieve all these symptoms. It will make you strong and well.

Now is the time to put the system in sound condition. This is the season to lay in a stock of health to carry you through the year. Nature demands the use of a powerful and timely remedy. The testimony of the thousands who owe their health and strength to the great safe cure above mentioned proves that it is the most days, the voters' lists for the five wards of the city were finally revised yesterday alternoon. The last name, with the exception of those reserved, or some who could not be located, was disposed of at 3:30, and Mr. Macpherson asked that the court be adjourned till the morning in order to allow several men to arrive whose names were to be added.

Mr. Hellmuth was not in favor of granting the request, and said it would be wrong to hold over any names except awaiting further evidence. The Conservatives, he said, had about 60 names to add, but none had appeared, and he wanted the list kept open for fifteen minutes.

Judge Elliot, however, was disposed to keep the list open still longer-until 5 p.m .- and then close it to all additions. The Conservatives did love the men of the barracks, and in an endeavor to add called Harry Lane, a stalwart young man with a flourishing mustache, who belongs to the school. Harry took the stand and answered all questions to suit the Tory side until he was asked his age. "Twenty-one lacking seven months," was the reply. There was a surprised look on several faces, and Harry could not vote.

Mr. E. A. Wright, of 269 York street, was struck off on Wednesday. He was objected to by the Conservatives as a nonresident. Mr. Wright appeared in court this afternoon and wanted his name put on. He had been in Ingersoll but two months, and came back to London about two weeks ago. Mr. Hellmuth again raised the objection that he was not domiciled here on April 6, and Judge Elliot would not allow Mr. Wright's name to go on.

John Donald, a man of about 55 or 60 Donald had a somewhat peculiar history, but he was all right. He was a Canadia by birth, but in the sixties he had gone to Uncle Sam's territories and joined the army. There he stayed until 1865, but never took the oath of allegiance. In 1866 he returned to Canada, and when the Wenian raid broke out took up arms in defense of his native land. His name remains on.

The remainder of the afternoon was taken un as follows:

Spicy Suit Between Members of the Women's P. P. A.

Mrs. Shepherd Doesn't Know Her Father's Name-Miss Marron's Relations With Mr. Clendennan-Mrs. Youmans and Mrs. Shepherd Fall Out.

TORONTO, April 28-Evidence in the $10,000 suit brought by Miss Rebecca Marron against Mrs. Agnes C. Youmans, president of the Women's P. P. A., for alleged slander, was continued before Judge Mac-Mahon at the assize court yesterday. It will be remembered that Miss Marron claims that Mrs. Youmans charged her with immorality, unchastity, fraud and dishonesty for the purpose of having her expelled from the Women's P. P. A. The alleged intimate relations between Miss Marron and D. W. Clendennan, of Toronto, were the grounds of the said charge against the young lady.

KISSING MISS MARRON. Miss Marron's friends crowded around her when she came into the court room, and the female portion of them kissed her affectionately. The fair plaintiff took a seat beside Mrs. Youman's, but the two women kept their faces averted from one

The defense asked that the evidence relating to the workings of the Women's P. P. A. be eliminated. "It had better be dropped unless everybody wants to know what they do," said Counsel Johnston, lawyer for Mrs. You-Mr. Gallagher, Miss Marron's lawyer, evidence, and the case went on. FRIENDLY WITH MRS. CLENDENNAN. Miss Marron carried a glass of water to the stand with her, prepared for another long siege. She went over the story of her life at the Clendennan house. Her relations with Mrs. Clendennan were for a long time friendly in the extreme, although marred at times by outbursts of jealousy on Mrs.

THE TRIP TO RUFFALO. She explained her trip to Buffalo and her correspondence with Mr. Clendennan while in Coteau, where she was in great trouble on account of her father. Mr. Clendennan knew of their family affairs, and wrote to her about them. In this way she saw much of him upon her return to Toronto. She had written the note containing the words, "Webin's own, own dear, come as early as possible," because his presence was needed on account of the baby's illness. Mrs. Youmans and Mrs. Margaret L. Shepherd had suggested to her that if Mr. Clendenuan were divorced from his wife she should marry him. She scorned the idea. She did not know the cause of the separation between Mr. and Mrs. Clendennan, and had not heard that she was connected with it until afterwards.

A DOMESTIC'S EVIDENCE. Bella Marser, the next witness, was a domestic at the Clendennan house when Miss Marron was there. She said that Mrs. Clendennan always treated Miss Marron as a sister, and Mr. Clendennan had treated her as a daughter. Mr. Clendennan always saw that Rebbis (Miss Marron) had her rubbers on when it was raining, and in other ways showed his care of her. The two often drove out together, but never returned later than 10:30 o'clock.

The witness had heard Mrs. Clendennan ask Rebbie to take Mr. Clendennan's break fast to him. Continuing, the witness had to admit that she saw Mr. Clendennan KISS THE PLAINTIFF just before his departure for Michigan. She had also seen Miss Marron adjusting Mr. Clendennan's necktie and cuffs. He treated Miss Marron better than he did his wife. Mr. Ciendennan had come into the witness' room when the rest of the family were away, and he had some trouble with her which ended in the head of the family being struck by a stick wielded by Bella. In cross-examination she said: "Mr. Clendennan is a bad lot, Mrs. Youmans is a bad lot, and Mr. Johnston (the lawyer) is the worst of all."

MRS. BASKERVILLE, OF LONDON. Mrs. Emma Maud Baskerville, of London, said that in response to a letter from Mrs. Youmans, she came to Toronto, where, amongst other things detrimental to Miss Marron's character, Mrs. Youmans said that on one occasion Mrs. Clendenman had found Rebecca and Mr. Clendennan in an extremely compromising position. Mrs. Shepherd's Wonderful Story.

Margaret L. Shepherd was the last witsomewhat celebrated anti-Romanist lecturer and has a history that is decidedly interesting. She appeared dressed in black. and in answer to questions by plaintiff's counsel told of certain remarks that had been made to her by the defendant about the plaintiff's character. The witness was sharply cross-examined by Mr. Johnston, counsel for Mrs. Youmans, and it was in reply to him she told her strange story. Mrs. Shepherd said she had lived in England a certain portion of her life, and while there had been imprisoned in a London jail for six months for stealing to save the life of her starving child. She was tried and acquitted on another criminal charge. The name under which she went at the time of her conviction was Louisa Edgerton. This was not her real name, however. The name she had borne from childhood was Egan.

Q.-Were you not known as Louisa Probin, and indicated under that name when you were convicted in London? A .- I don't remember. In March, 1880, she had gone to the St. James House, a Church of England institution in London, and there had given her name as Louisa Helen Westland. IMPRISONED A SECOND TIME. Q. - Were you imprisoned at Bodmin, Cornwall, Eng., awaiting trial on a criminal charge, and there known as Georgina Parkyn? A .- Yes; after I had married Captain Parkyn. Q .- Were you ever indentified with the Salvation Army, and if so, under what name? A .- I was with Mrs. Booth for a time as Margaret Herbert. The witness here explained to his lordship and the jury that she had changed her name this last time to put away from her the sorrows of her past life, and start anew. She had lived in Bristol, Eng., and in Ireland also as Georgina Parkyn. The father of her child was a priest named Egan.

EMPLOYED BY MR. STEAD. She drifted on to the stage for a few weeks, and then was employed for a time by Mr. W. T. Stead, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette and the Reviews of Reviews. She first met Mr. Stead in July, 1885, and agreed to secure interviews with Mrs. Armstrong and other women for publication in Mr. Stead's series of articles on fallen women. She was helping Mr. Stead to prove that children were sold for immoral purposes in London. She drew no salary for her services, but her expenses, and afterwards her passage to America, she understood, were paid by Mr. Stead.

SEPARATED FROM HER HUSBAND. The next remarkable event of her peculiarly eventful life was her separation from her husband, Capt. Parkyn, when a forgery charge was brought against him. She came to America under the auspices of the Salvation Army, and after a time proceeded to Charlottetown, P. E. I., to conduct a series of services for that body. While there she met Mr. Shepherd, her present husband, and was married to him on April 4, 1886. At that time she thought Capt. Parkyn, her former husband, was ness called for the plaintiff. She is the dead, and when she found that he was still living, she left Mr. Shepherd. Both husbands were living now.

WAS ONCE A METHODIST. While in Canada she belonged to the Methodist Church. She afterwards went to Boston and joined the Baptists. Then she began her work as a lecturer, speaking in Boston, Chicago and other large cities in the States. While in Chicago the charges formerly made against her by her enemies were again brought forward. These charges she answered at a mass meeting held in the Madison street theater, Chicago.

Protestant Women of Canada, Mrs. Youmans denied a number of the statements credited to her by the plaintiff. She acknowledged having made certain of the statements with which she was charged, but held that, inasmuch as she had made them in the interests of the society and its organ, the British Canadian, they were privileged remarks. She absolutely contradicted portions of the evidence of Mrs. Shepherd, and admitted having made strong statements to Mrs. Baskerville regarding Miss Marron's morals.

Mrs. Shepherd Creates a Scene. At one stage in her evidence Mrs. Shepherd jumped up in the middle of the court room and denied statements of the witness, but the judge told her that she must not interrupt the proceedings. Mrs. Youmans acknowledged having a bad temper, and said she and Miss Marron possessed incompatible temperaments. Cross-examined by Mr. Gallagher, Mrs. Youmans said that Miss Marron was in the habit of telling her (witness') daughters stories about her (plaintiff's) love affairs, which were not fit for young girls to hear. Q.-Did you never sit on a sofa beside Miss Marron, caress her and tell her love was no sin? A .- I may have told her lawful love was not sinful. THE JUDGE'S JOKE.

His lordship here interrupted with the Biblical quotation, "Love is the fulfilling of the whole law," and the court crier had to exert his lungs to still the uproar of laughter which followed.

After further cross-questioning the court adjourned to meet again this morning.

As Tending to Extravagance-Don't Want a New School-Against Building a Free Library Without Another Vote.

The first business of the real estate owners at their last meeting last night was the Colborne street school question. School Trustee Blackwell raised the same objection to the proposed new school as he did at the board meeting. It would involve an outlaw of $25,000. It was moved by George Taylor, seconded by John Campbell and carried unanimously, that the association think the present school, with necessary repairs and alterations, is quite sufficient for present requirements. They ask the school board to incur no further liability.

Discussion then branched to Collegiate Institute matters, Ald. Parnell favoring a fee being charged non-resident pupils, while Trustee Blackwell took an opposite view. "Contractors sitting in the city council" seemed to strike the association as very wrong. Mr. Campbell thought so and stated that this year's council was very

The matter dropped with a resolution of John Campbell and John M. Parsons, "That it is unwise to elect any contractors to the city council or water commission, as in their doing any municipal work and receiving pay therefrom we believe they violate their oath of office and that no council can be economical whose members do contract work."

For the first time in the history of the association the free library question was broached.

Mr. Joseph T. Marks, the labor leader was present by request, and laid before the association his side of the question. He spoke of the efforts made to balk the granting of the sum. From what he heard the workingmen were the only ones who understood what they were voting on. Nevertheless the board was this year going to have the half mill or the $20,000 debentures. There was one thing sure the board was not going to do, and that was to beg for the library.

Ald. Parnell moved in favor of issuing debentures for $20,000 for the erection of a free library as voted by the people.

Deputy Reeve Wm. Scarrow moved in amendment that in the present depressed state of civic finances it would be inexpedient to issue debeatures for a building without again submitting the question to the electors.

Mr. Campbell thought they should leave it to the council.

Mr. Scarrow's amendment carried and the meeting adjourned. Messrs. H. H. Morgan, C. Stockwell, Col. Moffatt, Ed. Towe and Joseph Gatecliff were chosen as members. There were present: President, George T. Hiscox, A. W. Spry, J. B. Murphy, John Campbell, Philip Cook, D. W. Blackwell, George

London, Saturday, April 28.

Receipts of all kinds of grain were small today. The rain, although just what the agriculturists wanted, put a decided damper on the market. Wheat at 95c to $1; oats at $105 to $16, mostly $166. Nothing was done in any other kind of grain. Offerings of both butter and eags were heavier and eales ranged any other kind of grain. Offerings of both butter and eggs were heavier and sales ranged at lower values, as will be seen in quotations. Meats were plentiful and sales slow, especially in veal. Potatoes easier at 60c. Hay scarce; sales at $8 and $8 50. Quotations:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 28.—Mr. Mulock's bill to fix the salary of the Governor-General is distributed. The preamble sets forth the growth of the expenses of the officer beyond the sum or of the offices beyond the sum originally contemplated and enacts as follows: The salary of the Governor-General shall be reduced from £10,060 ($48,666) to £5,000 ($24,333) a year, which sum shall be held to include all moneys for traveling expenses, wages of servants, allowance for light, heat, or other service in connection with Rideau Hall other than all proper charges for maintenance of the buildings and furnishings in a proper state of repair. Bowell and Onimet were waited on yesterday by Grand Vice-President Currie, of the Patrons of Industry, who urged that Parliament be not asked to vote the subsidy of $1750,000 to the proposed fast Atlantic steamship line, but that instead a proportionate subvention be given to the existing lines to enable them to furnish a faster freight service and equip their vessels with larger cold storage accommodation.

The End of a Famous Law Suit in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 28.—The State Supreme Court yesterday handed down ten decisions in the Blythe case, all of which are in favor of Florence Blythe. This settles the celebrated case and gives the Blythe millions to Florence Blythe Hinckley, natural daughter of Thomas passing on Mrs. Friend's property Sunday, $4,000,000. There were nearly 100 other claimants, and many of them app the decision of the lower court. For years the young woman whose title to great wealth is thus assured has been the most talked about of her sex in California. From a child she has lived in the glare of publicity. The case is almost as celebrated in the history of American litigation as that of the other California claimant, McGarrahan, who has just ended his long fight for millions with his life.

Thomas H. Blythe died suddenly in San Francisco on April 4, 1883, leaving no will. He died of heart failure while taking a bath in the apartments of Alice Edith Dickerson, who claims to be his widow. The case was involved, owing to the pains last night for Toronto, and about 10 o'clock, just as the train was about to arrive at Embro, an axle broke. One car was derailed and the London auxiliary was sent out. It went to California, where he accumulated wealth. In February, 1873, while in London, he met a girl of 20, Julia Perry, Blythe was then 50 years old. Florence was born Dec. 18 of that year. Blythe provided for the child, and gave to her C. E. of the Wellington Street Methodist mother, Miss Perry, his true name and address before returning to America. In 1876 Julia Perry married a man named Ashcroft, whose child some of the heirs alleged Florence to be. Florence was taken to San Francisco immediately after Blythe's death. Her striking resemblance to the dead pioneer made Blythe's intimate friends favor her claims. The legal fight for the property began in 1886, and has been kept up ever since.

Miss Blythe married Frederick M. Hinckley on Sept. 21, 1892. He is a young man in the insurance business, and both he and his wife are favorities in Oakland (Cal.)

Seeing an opening, I cudgelled my brains to think of any condition which, being fulfilled, might turn the table on him and place him in my power. But his position was so strong, or my wits so weak, that nothing occurred to me at the time, and I sat looking at him, my mind gradually passing from the possibility of escape to the actual danger in which I stood, and which encompassed also Simon Fleix, and, in a degree, doubtless, M. de Rambouillet. In four or five days, too, Mademoiselle de la Vire would arrive. I wondered if I could send any warning to her; and then, again, I donbted the wisdom of interfering with M. de Rosny's plans, the more as Maignan, who had gone to fetch Mademoiselle, was of a kind to disregard any orders save his

"Well!" said the monk, impatiently recalling me to myself, "what security do you "I am not quite sure at this moment," I made answer slowly. "I am in a difficult position. I must have some time to consider."

"And to rid yourself of me, if it be possible," he said with irony. "I quite understand. But I warn you that you are watched; and that wherever you go and whatever you do, eyes which are mine are upon you.

"I too, understand," I said coolly. He stood awhile uncertain, regarding me with mingled doubt and malevolence, tortured on the one hand by fear of losing the prize if he granted delay, on the other of failing as utterly if he exerted his power and did not succeed in subduing my resolution. I watched him, too, and gauging his eagerness and the value of the stake for which he was striving by the strength of his emotions, drew small comfort from the sight. More than once it had occurred to me, and now it occurred to me again, to extricate myself by a blow. But a natural reluctance to strike an unarmed man, however vile and knavish, and the belief that he had not trusted himself in my power without taking the fullest precautions, withheld me. When he grudgingly and withheld me. When he grudgingly and with many dark threats, proposed to wait three days—and not an hour more—for my answer, I accepted; for I saw no other alternative open. And on these terms, but not without some short discussion, we parted, and I heard his stealthy footstep go sneaking down the stairs.

CHAPTER XIX.

If I were telling more than the truth, or had it in my mind to embellish my adventures, I could, doubtless, by the exercise of a little ingenuity make it appear that I owed my escape from Father Antoine's meshes to my own craft; and tell, in fine, as pretty a story of plots and counterplots as M. de Brantome has ever woven. Having no desire, however, to magnify myself, and, at this time of day, scarcely any reason, I am fain to confess that the reverse was the case; and that while no man ever did less to free himself than I did, my adversary retained his grasp to the end, and had surely. but for a strange interposition, effected my ruin. How relief came, and from what quarter, I might defy the most ingenious person, after reading my memoirs to this point, to say; and this not so much by reason of any subtle device, as because the hand of Providence was for once directly manifest. The three days of grace which the priest had granted I passed in anxious but futile search for some means of escape, every plan I conceived dying stillborn, and not the least of my miseries lying in the fact that I could discern no better course than still to sit and think, and seemed doomed to perpetual inaction. M. de Rambouillet being a strict Catholic, though in all other respects a patriotic man, I knew better than to have recourse to him; and the priest's influence over M. d'Agen I had myself witnessed. For similar reasons I rejected the idea of applying to the king; and this exhausting the list of those on whom I had any claim, I found myself thrown on my own resources, which seemed limited-my wits failing me at this pinch-to my sword and Simon Fleix. Assured that I must break out of Blois if I would save, not myself only, but others more precious because entrusted to my charge, I thought it uo disgrace to appeal to Simon; describing in a lively fashion the danger which threatened us, and inciting the lad by every argument which I thought likely to have weight with him to devise some way of escape. "Now is the time, my friend," I said, "to show your wits, and prove that M. de Rosny, who said you had a cunning above the ordinary, was right. If your brain can ever save your head now is the time! For I tell you plainly, if you cannot find some way to outmaneuver this villain before to-morrow, I am spent. You can judge for yourself what chance you will have of going I paused at that, waiting for him to make some suggestion. To my chagrin he re-mained silent, leaning his head on his hand, and studying the table with his eyes in a sullen fashion; so that I began to regret the ondescension I had evinced in letting him e seated, and found it necessary to remind im that he kad taken service with me, and nust do my bidding.

"Well," he said morosely, and without ooking up, "I am ready to do it. But I do not like priests, and this one least of a'l. know him, and I will not meddle with

You will not meddle with him?" I | cried almost beside myself with dismay. "No. I won't," he replied, retaining his listless attitude. 'I know him, and I am afaaid of him. I am no match for him.' Then M. de Rosny was wrong, was he?" I said giving way to my anger.

"If it please you," he answered pertly.
This was too much for me. My ridingswitch lay handy, and I snatched it up.
Before he knew what I would be at, I fell upon him, and gave him such a sound wholesome drubbing as speedily brought him to his senses. When he cried for mercy which he did not do for a good speed -which he did not do for a good space, being still possessed by the peevish devil which had riden him ever since his departure from Rosny-I put it to him again whether M. de Rosny was not right. When he at last admitted this, but not till then, I threw the whip away and let him go, but did not cease to reproach him as he de-

"Do you think," I said, "that I was going to be ruined because you would not use your lazy brains? That I was going to sit still, and let you sulk, while mademoiselle walked blindfold into the toils? Not at all, my friend !'

"Mademoiselle!" he exclaimed, looking at me with a sudden change of countenance, and ceasing to rub himself and scowl, as he had been doing. "She is not here, and is in no danger."

"She will be here to-morrow, or the next

"He will know it the moment she enters the town," I answered. Noting the change which the introduction of mademoiselle's name into the affair had wrought in him, I felt something like humination. But at the moment I had no choice; it was my business to use such instruments as came to my hand, and not, mademoiselle's safety being at stake, to pick and choose too nicely. In a few minutes our positions were reversed. The lad had grown as hot as I cold, as keenly excited as I critical. When he presently came to a stand in front of me, I saw a strange likeness between his face and the priest's; nor was I astonished when he presently made just such a proposal as I should have expected from Father Antoine himself.

"There is only one thing for it," he muttered, trembling all over. "He must be got "Fine talking!" I said contemptuously. "If he were a soldier he might be brought to it. But he is a priest, my friend, and does not fight.

"Fight? Who wants him to fight?" the lad answered, his face dark, his hands moving restlessly. "It is the easier done. A blow in the back, and he will trouble us

"Who is to strike it?" I asked drily. Simon trembled and hesitated; but presently, heaving a deep sigh, he said, "I

"It would be easy," he answered under his breath. His eyes shone, his lips were white, and his long dark hair hung wet at Hand. Mrs. Mary Olmstead, who lives near Wheatley, Essex county, Ont., is one of the best known and most highly respected residents of that section. To a reporter of the Leamington Post she lately told the following story of long years of suffering and restoration to health:

"About six years ago I was stricken with sciatica rheumatism, which first made its appearance in my left knee, but gradually took possession of all my limbs. Within three months I was unable to leave my bed, and day and night suffered excruciating pain. My (limbs were swollen to twice their natural size, and drawn out of shape. My feet were also badly swollen, and my right arm was in the shape of a semi-circle. For three long years I suffered in this manner, being unable to put a foot to the floor. I could only be moved around by being wheeled in a chair. During all this time I kept doctoring with medical practitioners, which cost my husband much money, but I am unable to say that I received any benefit. My agony kept increasing and my system growing weaker, till many times death would have been a welcome relief. After reading in the newspapers about the many cures effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I decided to try them. I had taken half a dozen boxes of the pills before I began to feel an improvement. I continued taking the pills, however, and never had a relapse, and to-day I am as hearty and healthy as I was before the rheumatism came on. I am now able to knit and sew as fast as any young person, while for years my fingers were as stiff as needles. I owe my re-

At the conclusion of the service the leading choir lady, Miss Soprani, had a brief conference with Mr. Tenori, as follows:

"Oh! Mr. Tenori, I am grieved to find you suffering from such a horrible cold this morning. Too bad we could not sing that lovely new quartet; we must have it at the evening service, and I will doctor you for it." "Glad to sing anything, Miss Soprani, if you show me how to get rid of this disagreeable cold. What remedy do you prescribe?" "A very simple and effective one, Mr.

Tenori. Just drop into your druggist's on your way home and procure a bottle of Harvard Bronchial Syrup, and use it frequently during the afternoon, and you can depend upon being in good voice for the evening service. Now, do not forget my advice; the name is 'Harvard;' it has always cured me in a few hours when suffering from hoarseness and cough." Mr. Tenori acted according to instructions, and in the evening was able to take his part in the new sacred quartet, giving general satisfaction. Moral: Singers should always be provided with Harvard Bronchial Syrup that cures so quickly.

Mr. Buchanan afterwards bought the note, giving therefor a horse valued at $80. HON. C. F. FRASER, M.P.P.

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF ONTARIO'S MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Successful Career of a Remarkable Man -He Won His Position Without Adventitious Aids-Author of "One Man' OneVote," in Ontario, and Much Human. tarian Legislation.

HE Hon. Christopher Finlay Fraser, Q.C., M.P.P., Minister of Public Works for the Province of Ontario, one of the most eloquent debaters of his time, was born at Brockville, October, 1839. He is of Celtic origin, his father, John Fraser, being a

Scotch Highlander, and his mother, Sarah, nee Burke, of Irish parentage and birth. When a boy it was the lot of our subject to be poor, for his parents, like the majority of pioneers, brought into the new country very little gold in their purses. But this very poverty seems to have been a stimulus to the lad, and it is said that early in life he resolved to carve out his own fortune. In order to accomplish anything young Fraser knew that he must become equipped with an educa-tion. Schools in those days were sparse and not well conditioned, but the best of such tuition as his purse afforded he was resolved to have, and have it he did. We are told that he did not hesitate to put his hand to any employment that was offered, and it was between the periods of such employment that he attended school. When a mere youth he was employed in the Brockville Recorder office, working for a small salary, which he most carefully saved to use in his education. Even this honorable ambition and all the dauntless industry could not have availed had Fraser been composed of common material. He was gifted with altogether unusual mental alertness, and his utterances, when only a boy, were remarkable for their brilliancy, force and sometimes for their wit. When he had obtained what he considered a sufficient education, the young man entered the office of the Hon. A. N. Richards, late Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, and began the study of the law. That was in 1859. A hard-working student, he was, after passing a most creditable examination in 1865, called to the bar, and settling down to the practice of his profession at Brockville where he was well known, he soon succeeded in acquiring a good business connection. Even during his student days he had taken a keen interest in the political questions of the times, and had worked hard at the local elections on the Liberal side. He had not been long at the har before he began to be looked upon as an available candidate for parliament. At the first general election under Confederation, held in 1867, he offered himself as a candidate for the Ontario Legislature to the electors of his native place. He was defeated by a small majority, but made a solities would be of future use to the good impression upon the electors during country. I hope some means may be the canvass and established his reputation as a ready speaker on the hus the general election held four years later he offered himself to the electors of South Grenville, but was again unsuccessful. being defeated by the late Mr. Clark. In

HON. C. F. FRASER, M.P.P. once again presented himself and was returned at the head of the polls. However, he was not yet to take his place in parliament. His election protested and the case tried by Mr. Mowat who was then on the bench as vice-chancellor. Mr. Mowat gave judgment unseating him after a trial of two weeks. Afterwards re-elected, it was rather a remarkable coincidence that he entered the House the same year as Mr. Mowat, and within a year became a member of his government as Provincial Secretary and Registrar. On appealing to his constituency for the usual ratification of his acceptance of office he was elected by acclamation. In 1874 he became Commissioner of Public Works. His great abilities were at once recognized in the legislature, and he took a commanding place from the first. Mr. Fraser is ready, brilliant and powerful in debate, whether the question be an old one or one sprung upon him, and he is a man with whom the opponents never care to trifle. He is not malicious nor unkindly in his place upon the floor of the House when attacking or defending, and one and all are delighted to sit and listen to him so long as he remains upon his feet; for whether they agree with what he is saying or not, they are pleased with the fresh, vigorous, brilliant and manly way that he has of say-

Mr. Fraser's great abilities as a constitutional lawyer received recognition when he was selected by Sir Oliver Mowat from his cabinet to present Ontario's case before the Privy Council in England against the McCarthy Liquor Act.

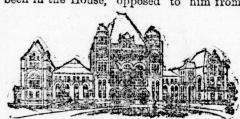

As a legislator he has been distinguished by the broad and liberal character of the measures he has brought forward. He originated, prepared and successfully carried through the Act giving the right of suffrage to farmers' sons, which was virtually a manhood franchise act and afterwards became the basis of that act. His humanitarian instincts are illustrated by such legislation as the Factories Act, an Act to make provision for the safety of railway employees and other workmen, and the Employers' Liability Act.

In the conduct of the important department of government Mr. Fraser has been charged with for now nearly twenty years he has displayed administrative talents of a high order and has proved himself a most capable public official. The care and attention devoted to the erection of public institutions throughout the Province and to the building and details of the noble pile in the Queen's Park, Toronto, for the nse of the Legislative Assembly and public been the right man for the responsible position he has held for so many years. In 1876 Mr. Fraser was created a Queen's Counsel. His wife was formerly Miss Lafayette, of Brockville.

Probably one of the most affecting scenes ever witnessed in legislative chambers was that in the House on Wednesday, February 28 last, when the Premier announced Mr. Fraser's resignation and said among other things: "It is three months since he announced to me the impossibility of his continuing, by reason of the condition of his health, and his resignation practically took place then, though at the request of myself and his other colleagues he has continued to discharge in such measure as he could his official duties. My hon. friend's failing health has long been known. On account of it three years ago or more he intimated to me his wish to be relieved from his public and official duties and the labor, responsibility and care which belonged to them, and my hon, friend repeated to me this expression of his wish several times previous to his final announcement three months ago. We were especially anxious that he should remain with us if he could until these new parliament and departmental buildings were completed, both within and without, and until after all accounts relating to them were settled. The buildings are completed now, and are admitted on all hands to be a lasting monument to the ability, efficiency and economy of my hon. friend, the Commissioner of Public Works. I confess that I agreed to part with my esteemed colleague with extreme reluctance. He was elected to the House in the same year that I was elected. He has been my colleague here as a member of the government for over twenty years—a longer period than any other gentleman I have been associated with in the government. All the others have passed away."

As a public man, as a legislator, as a debater of this House, we all recognize his talents and ability and regret very much, I repent, the reasons which the Attorney-General said have induced the hon. gentleman to take the course which he has decided to adopt. I join with the Attorney-General in the hope that rest may help to restore the hon, gentleman's health, and I should hope some important position somewhere in the public service, could be provided for the hon. gentleman where his great country. Heredity and Good Teeth.

A few years ago the person who passed forty without a set of the falsest of false teeth in his mouth was an exception to the universal rule. To-day the person under forty thus unfortunate is the exception. One wonders whether this is because dentistry has made marvellous strides in the last decade or so, or because rather more private attention is given the teeth now than formerly. Undoubtedly these two things are both factors in the change. There is also another condition not so generally understood. The best dental authorities tell us that no part of the human body is more subject to the laws of heredity than the teeth. And also that a woman invariably loses something of the substance of her own teeth with the birth of each child, so that the mothers of large families are apt to be left pretty badly off in this respect.

Indications Favorable to Cattlemen. The supply of cattle is limited and only the present duliness and depression in business causes the diminished consumption of beef. This state of affairs can hardly extend beyond 1895. The calves dropped next year will not reach maturity until 1897 or 1898, and the prospects for those years are as good as for any future time. By selecting a good bull and carefully mating him with the best cows and heifers, the faithful cattleman may expect good fresults from this year's breeding. Good blood identified by a good pedigree must be sought in every instance. Choice sires and dams rightly fed and handled insure produce which will yield profitable returns. On the ranches or cheap pasture lands a good sire crossed on average females will usually give favorable returns, if all other necessary conditions are carefully complied with.

An Amusing Bit of Eulogy.

A Welsh paper, the Seren Cymru, has been composing an eulogy upon Mr. Gladstone which is noteworthy as an instance of what Mill might have called "unnecessary truth." After stating that "the range of his reading was wider than Spurgeon's' (which no one will be inclined to dispute), the "Cymric enthusiast proceeds to the following remarkable piece of frankness; "As an orator he has been to England what drunkenness was to Athens. Does the writer mean, asks the Pall Mall Gazette, that the ex-Premier has been intoxicating everyone else, as well as himself, with the exuberance of his own verbosity? Or should we, for "drunkenness," read "Demosthenes?" Printers have ere now tripped up writers and

SENSIBLE SOFA PILLOWS.

They Are Made For Actual Use as Well as Show.

Women are beginning to appreciate the fact that sofa pillows are meant to use, or at least, that it is difficult to disabuse the masculine mind of the idea that they are intended as rests for their weary heads. A woman will hesitate before she leans her back hair against a marvel of embroidery and lace or of exquisitely painted silk, but a man, fresh from the hands of his barber, will peacefully repose on the prettiest of Yellow denim, worked in brown, with daisies of brown in oil, is very effective. The ruffle matches the embroidery and decoration. Olive denim, worked with darker olives, is effective. Black silk handkerchiefs, worked with an effective design in red or corn color in one corner, are made up both with and without a ruffle. Squares of white linen, or linen handkerchiefs, where these are large enough, with a little simple embroidery, are greatly liked, because they can be slipped out and the covers laundered. Bright-colored Madras and bandanna handkerchiefs make showy pillows.

The Worth Bolero.

This pretty little bolero is one variation of the jacket with volant that will be worn and even in the summer. It is made of black velvet with stripes of silk braid stitched or in graduating widths. Others of dark red, brown, or green velvet have the stripes of gros grain silk of the same shade. They will give an air of elegance to very plain costumes. Similar boleros of tan or brown cloth will have satin or gros grain stripes. For summer boleros to wear with country dresses corduroy or black cloth will be used. The linings are of satin surah of the same or a contrasting color.—Harper's Bazar.

Decorative Hints. Ornamental books, covered with some small-figured brocade, outlined in gold thread, or plainer ones, covered with chamois skin, embroidered in colors, are seen in every artistic room nowadays. The same materials are used in fashioning picture frames, one of the most satisfactory sort of fan y work at present, now that photographs have reached such a height of perfection in finish and in pose. Pictures of one's friends are no longer relegated to boudoirs and other private apartments, but are found strewn through even the statelist drawing rooms. To the matter of their frames, ingenious women are giving their most serious attention. Plain, cardboard shapes are bought of the art supply dealers and deftly covered with pale glace or plain satin with narrow ribbon embroideries.

The Ideal Woman.

The ideal woman nobly planned is doubtless she who has had the advantages of perfect physical culture and who possesses a serene mind. Nothing so ages one as to fret and worry about little things. Heavy cares at times of great affliction or pecuniary misfortunes furrow the brows and wrinkle the eyes in a way that requires years of culture to obliterate, Women who have aged prematurely try to disguise the fact by very youthful dressing, which sometimes has the opposite effect desired. The neck arrangement, the hair and the bonnet must all be studied carefully. To choose something which shall not make one look a day older and yet shall be becoming is not always easy.

and Stripes Flag. Beneath a little mound in Greenwood Cemetery, New York, neglected and weedcovered, without even a headstone to mark the spot, lie the remains of an American hero, the designer of the American flag. It is a spot that very few Americans have ever heard of, and its position in the big cemetery is as inconspicuous as the humblest grave in Potter's field. He is utterly forgotten by the nation which stands by the flag he designed.

CAPT. SAMUEL CHESTER REID. earthly resting places of private citizens, the grave of Capt. Samuel Chester Reid is situated in the little plot at the intersection of Cypress avenue and Zephyr path. Capt. Reid's achievements during the war of 1812 are among the most noteworthy in that memorable strife. It was while serving as sailing master of the United States navy that Capt. Reid made his suggestion that the original thirteen States be represented on the United States flag by thirteen stripes, and that a new star be added whenever a new State should be added to the Union. His design was adopted, and on April 13, 1818, the first flag of the present design was raised over the House of Representatives at Washington.

There have been many claims for the honor, says the New York World, but the best authorities agree that Capt. Reid designed and proposed the present United States flag.

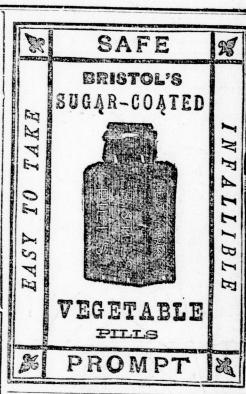

To him are also due the Sandy Hook Lightship, which he established, and the invention and erection of the signal telegraph at the Battery and the Narrows. Capt. Reid also proposed the regulation of the pilot boats of New York. This suggestion of Reid's was adopted, and to-day every pilot boat hailing from New York is known by its number. He died on Jan. 23, 1861.

In Greenwood Cemetery the guides will tell you that they do not know the grave of Capt. Reid, but at the Superintendent's office you will be directed to plot 13,108, corner Cypress avenue and Zephyr path. That is all the record they have. Six other graves occupy this plot besides Capt. Reid's, and none of them is marked. The plot is beautifully situated at the foot of Ocean Hill.

in movements, just now so much talked about, I met to-day, says the London correspondent of the Liverpool Post, a gentleman of the late Lord Granville's staff when Lord Granville held the Foreign Office portfolio. He told me that when Lord Granville was a young man he was asked to dine with the Prince Consort and the Queen at Buckingham Palace, and, forgetting the dinner, he had five minutes to dress and reach the palace. He got into his brougham somewhere in South Audley street as an ordinary gentleman, and step ped out at the portals of the palace a fully dressed Privy Councillor. Within the time he had to draw on silk stockings. knee breeches, silver-buckled shoes, and short, gold embroidered tunic, buttoned, luckily, to the throat. I myself knew Mr. Gladstone, some ten years since, to leave Downing street for St. James' Palace for a levee, stepping into his brougham in ordinary dress and coming out of it on arrival at the palace, in the gorgeous untform of Prime Minister.

EDISON'S KINETOSCOPE A SEQUEL TO HIS KINETOGRAPH.

Marvelous Mechanism-"A Little Nickelin-the-Slot-Machine"-What It Does and Fame-Sandow Honored.

"The kinetoscope does for the eye what the phonograph does for the ear." That is a phrase which has often been on the lips of Thomas, A. Edison during the past several weeks, and it conveys an idea which has been very much in his mind for several years. It is a perfect epigrammatic definition of his latest invention, for it is a fact that the kinetoscope reproduces to the eye the effect of motion just as the phonograph reproduces to the ear the effect of sound. How this is done and what the machine that does it is like, it is the purpose of this article to tell.

Several days ago the writer called by appointment at the Edison laboratory in West Orange, N.J., and sent his card up to Mr. Edison. Mr. Edison sent back word that W. K.L. Dickson would show and explain the kinetoscope to me, and that afterward he himself would talk with me about it. Mr. Dickson greeted me cordially, and pointed to an oak cabinet standing in the middle of one of the rooms of the photograph department. It was the kinetoscope. In appearance it is very like the nickel-in-the-slot phonograph, with which most people are already familiar. If an oak parlor organ with the keys covered were reduced somewhat in size, it would look somewhat like that kinetoscope. Mr. Dickson took a piece of brass exactly the size of a nickel and dropped it into the slot, while I looked into a glass in top. An electric light was burning inside, and the noise of rapidly running machinery was audible. The scene that was reproduced was that of a barber shop, and a placard on the wall informed the observer that it was "The Latest Wonder, Shave and Haircut for 'a Nickel." It pictured a man being shaved while two others sat by and enjoyed a joke which one of them had discovered in a comic paper. All the movements of the different persons were reproduced clearly and precisely as they took place before the camera. This is the picture that has been shown oftenest to those who have looked into the kinetoscope. Many other pictures are ready to be put into the marvelous instrument, and before long twenty-five of the machines will have been sold and stationed in publie places, where any one may enjoy them for five cents a look.

The kinetoscope is a sequel to the kinetograph, the invention of which was an-sounced some time ago. The business of the kinetograph is to take the pictures. and the function of the kinetoscope is to display them to the eye, one after another. so rapidly that they all seem like one scene, with the figures moving about as they do in actual life. The forerunner of these inventions was the zeotrope, a child's toy, which passed before the gaze of the beholder four pictures in a second, and created a semblance of the effect of motion. Then Muybridge got a battery of cameras that would take from eighteen to twenty impressions in a second. But neither of these was quick enough to deceive the human eye-that is to say, if eighteen or twenty pictures a second were presented to the sight the eye could easily detect when one went and another came. Mr. Edison discovered that, in order to create the illusion of a stationary or continuous picture forty-six views would have to be presented every second, and each one of them would have to pause about the one forty-sixth part of a second, and then be replaced by the next in the one hundred and eighty-fifth part of a second. This is the rate at which the impressions are received by the kinetograph, and reproduced by the kinetoscope. In the kinetoscope every picture must stop in exactly the same place as every other picture. did not there would be a tremor which the eye would notice, and the illusion would be dispelled.

Suppose, for example, it were desired to show a man in the act of taking a step. While he was moving his feet through the air a number of pictures would be recorded, each one of which would show the foot and the whole of his body in a slightly different position, as the step progressed. The series of pictures would be passed before the eye so rapidly that only one picture would appear, and there would be a perfect reproduction of the step.

The kinetoscope runs about thirty secands every time a nickel is dropped into it, and in that time, it will be seen, more than thousand separate views are slid under the little glass window in the top.

As we left the building in which the kinstoscope stood Mr. Dickson pointed to the emarkable phonographic theatre in which he kinetograph does it work. It is called the "Black Maria," and it is so arranged opon a pivot and track that one can easily move it around to the position required o meet the light of the sun. We then walked to the room on the second floor of the laboratory in which Mr. Edison was

He was deep in thought, and did not seem to notice that we had entered; but when Mr. Dickson spoke to him he drew two chairs close together, sat down on one, sade me be seated on the other, and signiied that he was ready to be questioned. It is said to be a peculiarity of Mr. Edion's habit of thought that he cares comparatively little for what he has done, and wells with pleasure on the prospect of what he is about to do. This would seem

A MECHANICAL MARVEL to be true with regard to his estimate of the kinetoscope. He speaks of the nickelin-the-slet machine that we have just been considering as though it were a mere toy, but becomes enthusiastic in unfolding the future greatness of the invention.

"Mr. Edison," said I, "what do you expect to accomplish in the development of he kinetoscope?"

"I expect to be able to reproduce a whole How It Does It-Edison's New Title to opera, showing the people on the stage in their natural size and moving around, and to make their voices heard just as they sang and talked. I expect to be able to show any celebrated orator on the platform delivering a speech, so that people may see how he looked and acted and hear the sound of his voice. This I will do by throwing the scenes from the kinetoscope on a large screen by means of a stereopticon and having the sounds issue from a phonograph at the proper moment to comport with the movements of those who

"I may say that this has already been done. Down in the library perhaps you noticed a large white screen, extending across one end of the room, wound upon a ratchet roller. I have also a stereopticon, and with these, the kinetoscope and the phonograph, we have reached some very satisfactory results. It will be some time. however, before we secure that absolute perfection which we aim to achieve before we give any public exhibition. You should see the figures on the screen," said he, with a glow of pardonable pride, showing that he contemplated that part of his work with sincere pleasure.

"The pictures that are taken at present for the kinetoscope are one inch by threequarters of an inch in size. The difficulty increases with the dimensions of the picture, because the larger the picture is the further it must move during the fraction of a second that elapses between the time one view disappears and another takes its place. We expect, however, to be able to work successfully with pictures an inch and a half high, and that, we think, will be the limit of the possibilities of the kineto-

"Do you expect to make any money out of this invention?" "No, I do not see where there is anything to be made out of it. I have been largely influenced by sentiment in the prosecution of this design. But," said he, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "as I have no steam yacht, or fast horses, or anything of that sort, I thought I could afford to sink a little money in the kineto-

That little nickel in-the-slot affair is only intended to let the people know what our idea is."

Sandow, the strong man, is an intimate friend of Mr. Dickson, which accounts for his being the first celebrity to have his frame perpetuated by the kinetoscope. The picture shown herewith is only one of a hundred, which include Sandow's complete performance. It has been stated that Sandow was photographed while holding Mr. Edison out at arm's length with one finger, but this is not true. Sanday could easily have done it, even had Mr. Edison been a much heavier man than he is, and during his visit to the laboratory it was suggested that such a picture should be taken, but for some reason or other the idea was not carried out. put Mr. Edison as certainly in the foremost place among photographers and electrophotographers as the other products of his genius entitle him to rank first in the school revelation is fresh in our thoughts and new to our understanding, to estimate what the kinetoscope will contribute to the progress of science and the education of man. It appears from the official memorandum accompanying them that on January 1 last the total number of effectives, including India, was 219,400. Excluding those serving in India, the number in the home and colonial establishments is 155.347. What is known as the first class army reserve numbered 80,349 at that date. against 76,595 a year earlier. It is noted that during the year recruiting for the English army was quite easily effected. Indeed, even a year ago so numerous were the applicants as compared with the force needed that it was found practicable to dispense for a time with the enlistment of specials, and to raise the standard for enlistment in the foot guards. Measures had been adopted also to equalize the number of battalions at home and abroad, but it is said that "circumstances have not yet admitted of a reduction of the force in Egypt sufficient to effect this desirable result." In the volunteers the number of efficients continues to increase, and there is a much larger attendance at brigade camps. The recruiting for the militia has been brisker. A noteworthy provision is that by which a soldier, instead of accepting his new allowance of clothing, may retain his partly worn clothing, and receive commutation with fewer restrictions than heretofore. It is believed that beneficial results may be expected from the change when it is in full

Large supplies of magazine rifles for the infantry have been received, so that a good part of the work at the factories during the coming year will be devoted to carbines. On the whole, very little change in Great Britain's military establishment seems to have been planned for the coming year, and this is an indication that neither the condition of the army nor its prospective service point to the necessity of noteworthy changes. The King of the Belgians.

The mysterious movements of the King of the Belgians during the last day or two have caused more surprise in this country than in his own. For a lame monarch. activity of Leopold II. is unparalleled. He has been known to bathe in the morning at Ostend, sign dispatches in Brussels at noon, and be shooting in the Ardennes before nightfall. His arrangements are frequently made without premeditation. He is an enthusiast in railway matters, hates horse-riding, is never seen in his own capital except in a closed English brougham, and would appear to have now added a

One of the Last Three Survivors of the Charge of the Six Hundred Dies in New York-How He Dashed "Into the Mouth Hell."

the glorious charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava, William Hibbert by name, died in New York on Saturday, April 14, of pneumonia, after an illness of one week. Mr. Hibbert was a native of Nottingham, England, and reached his sixty-fifth birthday the day before his death. At the age of twenty, fired with the patriotic fervor that inspired all England at that time, Hibbert enlisted in the Royal Enniskillen Dra. goons, serving with them throughout the Crimean campaign, HIS GLORIOUS MEDAL and being discharged as a corporal at the expiration of his term of enlistment. He came to this country over twenty years ago. He was twice married, and leaves a grown-up daughter, Mrs. Fanny Antill, by his first wife, at Nottingham. His second wife, whom he married in New York ten years ago, survives him. Hibbert's last illness was very pathetic. On the day before his death, his birthday, he seemed a little better, and sat up in his shabby bed, propped by pillows. His worn eyes were pleased with the bright sunlight that had come at last, after days of storm. His mind wandered back over the exciting scenes of his life and he was glad to welcome a sympathetic visitor. The plain place which Hibbert called home, the place where he had lain down to die, was the top floor of a building just below Thirty-first street, in Sixth avenue. For years he had gone up and down the narrow stairways there, to and from his work, stocking making. He was to the folks who saw him just a plain, whitebearded old man, with a keen eye and quiet ways. They never knew that that eye of the old man's had looked through smoke into the belching mouths of the Russian cannon at Balaklava, and that under his unpretentious old coat he wore the precious medal which told he was one These inventions, the kinetograph, the of the seventy-four heroes who came back kinetoscope and the phono-kinetoscope, out of that awful charge of the Light Bri-

History never found out who sent the message for us to charge them guns, but Lucan never sent it. Everybody always thought Raglan sent it to Cardigan; that was his brother-in-law. Oh!" and old Hibbert sighed and shook $90,405,000 for the year 1894.95. This is his head, "it was a pity, a sinful, terrible an increase of $1,890,500 over those of a thing. I can remember. It is as plain as if I saw it now, and Nolan rode up and gave the order.

"Cardigan turned to him and cried: 'Nolan, who sent that order?' No answer. Then he asked again: 'Who sent that order?' But there was no answer. Third time he asked him, and all the answer Nolan made was-he pointin' to the breastworks: 'There's the enemy. Go!' Then he dashed on.

'Cardigan just threw back his head and said. 'Well, here's the last.' For an hour and a half after that nobody knew what was happening, except that we was runnin' right into hell, as the poem said. Three miles away. It looked like a lifetime journey, and the men began to fall away as the shells yelled an' tore among Every time one toppled off his horse around me, I thought I was goin' next. The man, who expected to come out of that would have been crazy. The four men next me, in front, behind and on both sides were killed, and as I spurred on alone I saw a shell coming straight towards me, straight, straight. 'Hibbert, ye're gone,' said L But I give just one jab o' the spur into that mare, and she leapt like a shot. She swerved, I should think, a dozen feet, and the shell took her nigh hind leg. I went tumbling. When I picked myself up there was a horse without any rider. I got into the saddle, and went on with the rush. It was terrible.

As the old man went on with his story his pale face took on color, and his wife, tears in her eyes, came over and said, "Please don't let him talk so much."

"Be quiet," said the veteran, "I'll be through in a minute. Well, sir, as I said, I spurred this big horse on, and I passed Capt. Williams. Hello, Bill," says he, where's that Bill, if I get back out o' this alive you'll have a special mention for that.' That was the last I saw of him. Well, when we got up to about three hundred yards of the works, they couldn't train the guns on us, and we just fought the Russians back an' cut 'em down an' spiked the guns. That was what we went for ye see. We all 'had little spikin' mallets," and as he said this the old fellow's hand

Close beside the bed lay the old soldier's waistcoat. He reached out and drew it to him, then tenderly unfastened from the breast of it the heavy silver trophy which told the story of the share he had borne in the struggles of Britain's arms in the hor-rors of the Crimea. Sebastopol, Inker-man, Alma and Balaklava were the fateful, glorious names upon the silver crossbars. The lettering and chasing had worn away with the years that the old man had carried the Queen's emblem next to his heart. But engraved around the edge of the medallion were these words: Hibbert, 48th R. I. Dragoons.

When he went back to England Hibbert left the army and settled down to the old stocking trade which he had learned as prentice. Then he married. After his wife died he commuted his pension, and, taking what he could get in a lump sum. came to America. For fifteen years he kept at the steady grind in Parker's shop, paying his debts promptly, they say, his word always as good as his bond, living manly, as a man should live who rode behind Wild Nolan and bore away from the bloody ramparts of Balaklava the brief boon of life and a fame that will outlast

"Oh, many a man, sir," said the old soldier, "has looked at that badge and passed it by. They didn't know what it meant. But I know. That's all."

His lips and the weak half-whispering voice trembled, and the tears stood in his fine old blue eyes as he stroked the worn medal softly with one white hand.

The veteran, courtly and gentle, waved his weak hand in farewell, and the pug dog sprang to the bed and pressed close to Hibbert's pallid, seamed old face as it fell back upon the pillow.

A Bishop's Act of Bravery.

There appears in the Guardian a letter from a member of the Salisbury Horse describing an act of personal bravery on the part of the Bishop of Mashonaland. The correspondent writes: "At our first battle at the Shangani one of our native picquet was so badly wounded that he appeared unable to rise farther than on his knees. It was not until after a pause in the attack and a lull in the firing that we discovered the poor fellow's plight. On two sides and in the rear of him were thick bushes, which we knew to be full of the enemy. In vain we called to him to do his best to reach the laager, when, in a twinkling as it were, we saw the Bishop making for him. To everyone's surprise, not a shot was fired from the enemy while the Bishop picked him up and conveyed him safely to the laager.'

A Thrifty Nobleman. This is from London Truth: On the estates of a great Tory nobleman (who has all his life been one of the magnates of that party) upwards of 20,000 pheasants, 7,000 partridges, 5,000 hares, and a large number of rabbits have been killed during the season which has just closed, and every head of game (except the small quantitity which was required for the house) was despatched to a dealer in the neighboring town, where there is a very large market. When "territorial princes" sell every creature that is killed who can wonder that the Game Laws are never mentioned in rural districts except to be execrated?

Native Hazelnuts.

Native hazelnuts are too small to have any market value, and until they are increased in size by seeding cultivation, we must look to the English filbert if we would engage in prefitable work. A. S. His trees grew finely for a few years, but, before they bore many nuts, were killed by blight. This has been the experience

The Mariner's Compass.

A Scotchman one day was bragging in Thebbear's company that it was a country man of his that had the honor of inventing the compass. Thebbear took his part against the rest, who differed from him, and he said he could further tell them the occasion of it. The Scotchman seemed much pleased at having so good an advocate, when Thebbear proceeded as follows When the captain of a ship was coasting with all that caution necessary before the invention of the compass, a storm suddenly sprang up and drove him out to sea. Not knowing where he was, and expressing his concern for the safety of the ship, a Scotchman among the crew bid him not to be under so much uneasiness, for he could at least tell him in what direction they were. "Well, that will be something, says the captain, 'Then here it is mon.' says the Scotchman, pulling a louse out of his head and placing it on a sheet of white paper, "watch that fellow's motions well for I'll be d-d if ever you saw a Scotch louse that did not always travel south.'

A class of boys in a boarding school were being examined in Scripture. "What can you tell me about Moses?" asked the inspector; "what sort of a man was he?" 'Please, sir, he was a gentleman," piped forth a pale-faced, bright-eyed lad of eleven or thereabout, "Gentleman!" repeated the inspector, with a look of surprise; "what do you mean?"

The little boy promptly replied: "Please, sir, when the daughters of Jethro went to the well to draw water, the shepherds came and drove them away, and Moses heiped the daughters of Jethro, and said to the shepherds: 'Ladies first, please, gentlemen. "-Good News.

SUPPLEMENT TO DAILY ADVERTISER --- SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1894.

Motto for the Week:

Our safety is in having lofty ideals, and in constant labor to secure their reali- turbed. zation. Let the getting of money be a man's ideal, and he will of necessity grow toward the dust -[Joseph Parker.

A somewhat lengthy communication from Mr. W. H. Orr, of Toronto, has been received regarding the coming Dominion prohibition convention and for any such lame and limited measure. other matters. It has been crowded over but will appear next week.

Dr. Norman Kerr is among the best known of writers on medical and scientific questions in England to-day. He has given these subjects years of careful investigation and his opinions are much quoted and relied upon. Here is the conclusion he has reached after years of inquiries: "Total abstinence is the surest way, all other things being equal, of attaining the highest physical, mental, moral and every other kind of health." He might well add that these great blessings can hardly be obtained in any other way.

Every temperance worker is earnestly requested to assist us in extending the circulation of the HOME GUARD. We are working hard to week and are making no inconsiderin the work. Show it to your friends. Innite them to subscribe. Order a few extra copies for free circulation. To those societies or workers who will thus circulate, bundles of ten or more will be sent at one cent per copy. It is better read and does better work than tracts or pamphlets.

and greater necessity as a national safe-guard as the franchise has been extending to nearly every man over 21 years of age. An intemperate elector is a source of national danger at the ballot box. Prof. McCook, a splendid authority, has just been saying: "Ballots in the hands of drunkards, who have the balance of power in business. Several leading brewers many precincts, turn our elections often and liquor importers met with them into a farce, sometimes into a tragedy. and extended the right hand of The average drunkard will sell his fraternity and took counsel with them vote; the average saloon-keeper will how best to guard the interests of the buy it; the average politician will buy business. both." These very dangers must all be faced at the pending Ontario Provincial elections and as long as the liquor traffic is sanctioned by law. Every lover of a pure and well guarded interests of the peace, prosperity, proballot box should do his duty in this tection and progress of the people the ville, Peel county, holds its meetings great matter.

That was the weak point of the bill introduced by Mr. Marter last year in the Legislature and supported by Mr. Meredith and nearly all his friends. That measure had scarcely a supporter in the recent great Provincial prohibition convention and not one member of it pretended to ask the Government

Past experience has clearly demonstrated to the people that it is just as the seller's supplies as to prohibit the more on private business than the sellers themselves - that all three sluices, the making, the importing and selling must be closed by law, if we expect to see the law a success. Had Mr. Mowat proposed the very measure our contemporary points out he would, we believe, have been denounced by three-fourths of the intelligent prohibitionists of Ontario as either incompetent or dishonest in grappling with such a powerful and gigantic an evil.

The most important features to be considered in judging of the merits of a life insurance company are: 1st, the safety and equity of its plans and policy contracts; 2nd, the care and economy exercised in its selection of risks and general management; 3rd, the character of its assets and their relation to its liabilities.

Why Christian Women Should and Christian voters might be guided Join Our W. C. T. U. (By Mrs. John Evans, vice-president London W. C. T. U)

This is emphatically an age of clubs and associations; on the ground that union is strength, the world is full of banded societies for the promotion of varied interests. Special, individual effort is something, but in these days the best talents, energies and efforts must be closely united into one body in order to achieve any lasting good. Our W. C. T. U. is an admirable illustration of such a combination. Women who have learned to realize their responsibility in work for God and home and native land are using their varied talents in this glorious struggle for the right, and the many departments of philanthropic work in the union afford ample scope for the par-

Although the number of delegates was not as large as was expected, those who attended met together feeling that the Holy Spirit was with them aiding in everything that was said and done. We were pleased to welcome the county president and several co-workers from Lambton, who had come to attend our meetings. The morning devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. (Rev.) Question Box.

Question.—Kindly inform me if we have to pay affiliation fees for honorary members. We fail to find anything about it in the constitution. Eva E.

Answer.-No. The full fees of an honorary member belong to the local Question.-Will you kindly tell me whose place it is to attend to union advertising, such as entertainments, regular meetings, etc.? Our press superintendent thinks that it is the recording secretary's work. The recording secretary thinks that all printing belongs to the press superintendent; and that only pulpit announcements, and the notifying of individuals appointed to special work falls to her INQUIRER.

Answer.—The press superintendent, unless especially requested by the union to attend to the advertising, is not expected to do such work. She has the duty of keeping her column, or half column, filled with telling facts and convincing arguments in favor of the many-sided reforms the society she represents is advocating. If she be a tactful woman she will keep the local work, with its past doings, present plans, and future hopes, well to the front; and thus acquaint the public with what has been and is to come. But for the regular paid-for advertising, that each union should feel in duty bound to do, as a small return for privileges accorded, the press superintendent is not responsible. All announcements and notifications, whether made for love or money, should be prepared by the recording secretary, except under the following conditions: In some unions there is a lecture or entertainment committee, whose duty it is to manage the public meetings of the society. They are usually expected to attend to all the details of such meetings, advertising included. Also in certain of our organizations the president prefers to oversee the advertising herself. Being in the best position to understand the points of interest to be emphasized there is usually no objection to her doing so.

Question.-What do you think of a president who is usually late in attendng the meetings? A VICTIM.

Answer.—I don't think much of her. She must have missed her vocation and needs to be "labored with" by Question.—Kindly inform through the Question Box what the local constitution means by stating (section V. bylaws) that each local treasurer shall forward regularly the half-yearly fees for the provincial and county unions to the county treasurer. Is she to send, in the early part of the year, 121/2 cents for each paid-up member, and later on the remaining 121/2 cents? County President.

Answer.—No. When the local treasurer receives the 60 cent fee from any member she should at once place 30 cents of the amount to the credit of the union, and (if in an organized the evening a well attended meeting | county) lay aside the other 30 cents in was held in the church. Report of the Temperance Committee of the Hamilton and London Synod.

As there has been a considerable comment in a number of the leading political and other journals regarding the report of the temperance committee of the late session of the Ham-Ilton and London Synod, of which Rev. W. J. Clark was convener, adopted in Hamilton on the 17th inst., the Home Guard has been at some pains to obtain a correct copy of the report as it was presented and Presbyterian Church.

THE REPORT.

To the Synod of Hamilton and London. Moderator, Fathers and Brethren:

Your committee on temperance present the following report, compiled by the reports sent in by the various Presbyteries within the bounds of this synod.

The evidence of the state of public centiment on the temperanee question as shown in the votes taken during the past year is exceedingly gratifying. There now stand in line Manitoba, Prince Edward Island, Ontario and Nova Scotia, all strongly pronounced In favor of legislation prohibiting the manufacture, importation and sale of Intoxicating liquors as a beverage throughout their respective territories. Those interested in the traffic may seek to underrate the significance of the vote, but all unprejudiced observers | The proportion to population varies must admit that we have at least an overwhelming sentiment in these provinces in favor of prohibition, and such sentiment must evidently crystallize in effective legislation.

THE OPPOSITION PROBABLE. At the same time we should not be anduly sanguine. The immense capital invested in the liquor traffic is assurance that a long and bitter venting the indiscriminate sale and use struggle stands between us and such a of intoxicating liquors? The majority desirable end, and the secret convention of liquor dealers held in Toronto some two weeks ago is evidence that the liquor dealers and their friends are preparing for that struggle.

Throughout the synod, some 34 synods, probably more, failed to send in answers to the questions sent down by the General Assembly.

SOME ANSWERS SENT. Your committee have thought well to present the following paragraph from the report of the Maitland Presbytery, without comment: "This Presbytery asks the Synod of Hamilton and London and the General Assembly to take such steps as these courts may deem advisable. (1.) To urge the Provincial Government to prohibit the retail trade in Ontario in intoxicating liquor as a beverage. (2.) To urge the Dominion Government to prohibit the edge that the professed Christian peoimportation of intoxicating liquor into | ple of this country would vote against Ontario, and the manufacture and any man who sacrificed moral principle wholesale trade of the same. (3.) for party, pope or pelf." Also to take the necessary steps to see that the Government of Ontario now the plebiscite by the introduction of a bill into the House prohibiting the im-

VARIOUS RECOMMENDATIONS Your committee respectfully submit the following recommendations:

1. The synod gives thanks to God for the evidence presented in the report of progress in temperance sentiment and practice throughout its bounds, and urges ministers and other such practice.

2. The synod notes with gratitude the overwhelming sentiment in favor of | ing in beautiful fields of tassled corn, prohibitory legislation of the liquor traffic by the popular votes taken in our own Province, Ontario, with its magnificent majority of 81,730; Prince Edward Island, Manitoba and Nova Scotia, and is greatly gratified by the fact that the Premier of this Province, Sir Oliver Mowat, in reply to an important deputation, placed himself on record as ready to pass legislation prohibiting the liquor traffic to the limit of the power of the Government of which he is the present head.

3. Inasmuch as the Education Department of the Provincial Legislature has provided a temperance text-book for the use of the public schools, the synod instructs sessions to see to it that the said text-book is used in the public schools in their various communities.

4. That in view of the pronounced state of public opinion expressed in regard to prohibition, the supreme court of our church be asked to take be, in favor of the immediate passing lation.

All of which is respectfully submitted, W. J. CLARK, Convener. The above report was almost unanimously adopted, two or three proposed amendments being negatived by very large votes.

Roses and Clover.

An Interesting Study of Emblems.

(Written for the CITIZEN AND HOME GUARD.)

We are always pleased h the HOME GUARD. It has, from time to time, furnished its readers with a number of very interesting articles, one of which attracted our special attention, and it was all the more interesting because it was all about the fourleaved clover, with its emblematic meaning.

The subject of emblems is always an interesting study. Their origin is more or less shrouded in mystery, but the study of the subject is valuable The fourth question is: "What just in proportion as it increases our views do your people entertain as to love for the beautiful, or adds to the stock of human knowledge.

A Boy's Pockets.

My little girl has one pocket in her frock and two pockets in her little jacket. My boy has two pockets in his trousers, three in his jacket, two in his overcoat, every one of them crammed to bursting with odds and ends of every description. My husband has, by actual count, fourteen available pockets in the costume in One would have called him "an honest which he daily faces the world. I frequently am minus even one. Standing with hands in pockets, the miniature man surveys his Of the girl henceforward to bear his little world with the port of a conqueror. All through life he will carry the scepter of dominion by right of his pockets, in which, whatever his degree, he will carry the sinews of war.

The amount of inconvenience, of worry, of absolute distress, occasioned to women by the lack of pockets is almost tragic. No place for her keys, for her pencils, for her purse, for her handkerchief, poor wretch, she must carry them all in one little struggling, encumbered hand. She wishes to use a fountain-pen, and her desire is thwarted by her limitations, for the pen must be carried in an upright position, as in her good man's vest pocket it readily can be accommodated; but she in vain strives to perpendicularize her pen. In her single pocket, located loosely in the gown of her skirt, it wobbles about, head downward, the ink oozes out and ruins her handkerchief, and the result is disastrous to pen and to pocket alike.

The boy, my boy, takes solid comfort in his pockets, and no wonder. They are handy repositories for a bit of string, a cork, a knife, a lump of Then one who watched them made very sticky molasses candy tied up in brown paper, a piece of licorice, a morsel of chewing gum, some postage stamps, a slate pencil, a lead pencil, the leaf of a story book torn from some old favorite, the last school report, half a dozen marbles, and a hideously dirty ball of a boy's handkerchief. Blessings on the boy! He never has pockets enough, and those he has do bulge out and get out of shape, and they indicate a very plebian and altogether miscellaneous and promiscuous taste, but they are the sign manual of a genuine lovable all-round boy. And every mother knows about them, and has an admiration for them, since they are her boy's pockets. - [Harper's FORMAL PREACHING.—The skeleton of a sermon, as its name implies, is better kept concealed. It is meant for use, not for show.

Sixty years ago, according to Dr. Mines, there was a French Huguenot preacher in New York—a queer little man, of unimpeachable learning and dullness-who modeled his sermons exactly after the pattern laid down in Claude's "Essay on Preaching." Usually he preached in French, but when he resorted to English the effect was irresistible.

He not only built his discourse upon set plan, but was careful to have the fact known and appreciated. To that end he announced in turn each of its divisions. "Now we have de oration," he would say gravely; and then, "Now we have de peroration." His masterpiece of effectiveness was exhibited when, with a befittingly solemn face, he gave out the thrilling announcement: "And now, my friends, we come to de pa-tet-ic."

HIS MESSAGE.-When Col. Tamolyn was commander at Fort Fletcher, Kansas, he had an Irishman for orderly, who was noted for his remarkable manner of twisting messages. One day two men who were employed by Butterfield's Overland Dispatch Company were killed near the fort by Indians.

On the following day Col. Tamblyn said to his orderly, "Take my compliments to the company commanders, and tell them to notify their companies that those two men who were killed by the Indians yesterday, will be buried this afternoon at 2 o'clock, and I would like as many as can make it convenient attend their funeral."

The orderly accidentally found the company commanders together, and touching his cap, delivered his message as follows; "The colonel sends his compliments, and directs you to notify those two men who were killed by Indians that they will be buried at 2 o'clock to day, and he would like as many as can make it convenient attend their funeral."

Perceiving from the expression of the commanders' faces that something was wrong, he touched his cap again and said in a somewhat aggrieved tone: "There may be a joke about it sorrs, but if there is, it's on the colonel,

The Gothenburg License System. The current number of The Arena, of Boston, a leading American review, contains a well written article on "The Liquor Traffic Without Private Profits" from the pen of John Koren. It is an explanation and vindication of "The Gothenburg System," now in force in some parts of Sweden and Norway, and which has become quite popular among those anti-prohibitionists in Canada and the States, who are anxious to have something efficient done to check the drink traffic and yet Mistakes About Total Abstainers, are opposed to prohibition.

The writer is among those who aim rather at mending than ending the drink traffic, and from that standpoint argues strongly for the system of which he treats. A number of references have been made to the system in these columns, but, as the subject is so frequently discussed, some facts from The Arena paper may be of interest.

from the sale of intoxicants." He goes on to remark that, "When the terrible temptation to make money out of other people's vices is removed, competition must cease and every restrictive provision of the law can easily be carried out." He further remarks that "It is a measure of reform and not of destruction" to the drink traffic, and argues

The explanation given of the peculiar features of the company system inaugurated first in Sweden and since introduced in some parts of Norway are as follows: "A partial relief came in the shape of the law of 1855 which "Let it be granted that the use of provided for a strict control of the fermented liquors is quite open to manufacture of spirits and gave every community the right to prohibit all non-licensed sale of liquor within its greater possibilities was a small clause,

The weak point of the whole system is that liquors are still freely obtainable and some who get drinking at all are sure to become victims to the drink appetite and to end in drunkenness.

More Criminal Statistics.

A large number of crimes that have their origin in drink are not officially so charged, for the simple reason that it is not what induced to crime but the nature of the crime itself that the official reports specify. A very great many cases of assault, for example, come directly from the intoxication of one or more of the parties concerned, yet they are officially reported as assaults. The same is true of the never have occurred at all, or possibly ever have been thought of, had it not

Surely the wiping out of such a prolific source of crime, and also of poverty and misery included, ought to legislators, and especially among Christian and truly patriotic electors.

(From the Brantford Expositor.)

Mrs. S. W. Avery lives on Pleasant Ridge, about four miles out of the city of Brantford, that being her nearest postoffice and where all her trading is done. Mr. and Mrs. Avery have always lived in that neighborhood, and he is the owner of two splendid farms, the one where he lives consisting of 160 acres and the other lying near Brantford, comprising 100 acres. I procured a supply from Messrs. Mc-Gregor & Merrill, druggists of Brantford. Before I had used two boxes of the Pink Pills I felt so much better and relieved from my distressing symptoms that I thought it would be best to continue taking them through the winter, and I accordingly got another supply and used them with the result that I have been totally relieved. I have not once since had the severe headaches which formerly made my life miserable and my cough has entirely disappeared. Some Interesting Figures From the Official Returns.

The official report has been published of the prohibition plebiscite in connection with the late Provincial elections in Nova Scotia. The figures do not differ much from those already given in these columns, but they are worth repeating here in detail for future reference and remembrance.

There are eighteen counties in Nova Scotia, including the city of Halifax with the county of that name, in which the city is located. The total vote cast for prohibition amounted to 43,-726 to 11,542 against. The total majority being 31,701. The vote, we understand, was about 85 per cent of the entire vote cast for candidates for the Legislature. The vote for prohibition was a clear majority with a couple of thousand to spare, of the entire votes cast for the Legislature.

There was a majority in every county except Antigonish, which went anti by 65. The lowest majority in any of the other counties was in Richmond, which was 542 for prohibition out of a total of 1,414 votes polled.

The largest majority of any county was for Cumberland, one of the largest and most intelligent of all the counties. There the majority was 4,084, the total vote being 5,106. Halifax, city and county, polled the largest vote of any, the total being 7,728 and the majority 3,036. Shelburne county, one of the oldest settled in the Province, polled the smallest anti vote of any, being but 166 against 1,838 for the measure. Annapolis, in which is located the oldest settled town in the Dominion of Canada, polled the next smallest anti vote, being but 350 against 2,628 for prohibi-

The verdict, on the whole, was so sweeping and significant as to leave no room for doubt as to the well understood wishes of the people on the great prohibition question.

Mr. John Blackwell, of the Bank of Commerce, Toronto, writes: "Having suffered for over four years from dyspepsia and weak stomach, and having tried numerous remedies with but little effect, I was at last advised to give Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery a trizi. I did so with a happy result, receiving great benefit from one bottle. I then tried a second and a third bottle, and now I find my appitite so much restored, and stomach strengthened, that I can partake of a Mr. Merrill, the other member of hearty meal without any of the unpleasantness I formerly experienced.

SEBASTOPOL GEESE.

Geese Races. The Sebastopol goose resembles the Embden or German races in shape, although the former is possessed of a little more elegance of form, and is perhaps more elegance of form, and is perhaps more swanlike. Cows and Sheep. A comparison of the profit and care of sheep and cows has been made in the Country Gentleman by Galen Wilson. His figures are made for 500 sheep and fifty cows, which are allowed to eat about the same. "It is in requisite labor where sheep excel most. One shepkerd can care for them alone twothirds of the year, and work at other employment enough to pay an assistant for the other third. If the cows are milked 300 days of the year it equals milking one cow 15,000 times. How much is that worth? There must be at least four milkers for that number of cows. Then what is it worth to do the skimming, churning and cleansing of the milk vessels and utensils every day? And what is it worth to convey the butation from ter to market or the rallroad once to thrice a week? All of these involve an immense amount of labor during the year, besides investments in dairy utensils and dairy house, and wear and tear of team, harness and vehicle. Against all this there is the expense of washing and shearing the sheep. The wool can be taken to market in two or three wagonloads and the lambs walk there. Sheep have another value superior to cows, and that is their better manure, however unaccountable it may be. I have been almost faithless on this point because I could not see why there should be a difference when the two species, of animals eat practically the same things; but I have to believe my eyes when I see so many fields and whole

In this market there is a demand for all kinds of cattle, from the emaciated canner to the prime, sleek-coated, pure-bred bullock. But this demand is a variable quantity and does not always harmonize with the quality and quantity of receipts, and so the market is often glutted when the total receipts are not excessive, because there is a superabundance of some one class. Theoretically, if just so many cattle of each kind could be received each day they could be disposed of readily enough, but such a condition of things doesn't often happen in practice. Just now the cattle market is suffering from an over supply of medium and half fat steers, which, since the first of the year, has caused much dullness and dissatisfaction in the trade. The demand is strong for prime fat steers, and very few are coming, so that while the total supply is much short of a year ago, prices have been going down hill very rapidly. There is not much chance for the market to pick up when the quality of the receipts is so poor .- Chi-

Reduce the Stock. As soon as a sufficient number of eggs for hatching purposes has been secured, the males should be sold, as they will be of no service, and the hens will thrive as well and lay as many eggs without them. The eggs from hens not with males will keep fresh twice as long as those that are fertile. The young cockerels that are large enough to be sold, and which should be hatched with the early pullets, should also be gotten out of the way. By reducing the stock there will be a saving of food and a corresponding increase of profits.

Green Feed for Chicks. Young chicks should never be deprived of an abundant supply of green food. Nothing can compare with lettuce for this. Sow large beds of it broadcast, early in the spring, in the yard.

Some Experiments in Cheddar Cheese-Making. The following results of a series of experiments in Cheddar cheese-making conducted by the Bath and West of England Agricultural society have been recently published:—

1. The quality of milk varies on the farm each year, owing to the season, mounth and on the same fields each month, owing to the food. It varies on two farms during the same year, and on each has a characteristic composition due to the nature of the sofl. 2. The quality of a cheese, assuming that the manufacture was conducted by a skilled maker, depends largely on the quality of the milk from which the cheese was made.

3. The manufacture of a cheese must also vary in accordance with the varying quality of the malk. Not only is this true as regards the quantity of rennet to be used, but it influences the degree of acidity which may with advantage be obtained in the curd before vatting.

4. On good soils and with rich milks a high acidity in the curd is desirable; but on heavy land yielding poor milk a low acidity is desirable.

5. A cheese made with low acidity requires longer to ripen, and probably a higher temperature than a cheese with high acidity. 6. In the spring the temperature of the dairy should be maintained artifically at from 64 deg. to 66 deg. Fahr.

7. In order that the curd may be put away in good time, it is essential to obtain sufficient acid in the whey before drawing it off.

8. The acidity of the mixed milk, etc., before renneting, should, if possible, be .21 per cent., and of the whey in the tub before drawing .20 per cent., so as to ensure in the whey when drawn an acidity of .22 per cent.

The Dairy Business. Farmers may have owned cattle for a score of years and learned but very few facts about caring for dairy cows and dairy products. He may think he knows, but he don't know. It not only requires special study, but it requires careful study of the nature and functions of the dairy cow, and the condi-tions and properties of the dairy pro-ducts, before either the cow or the products are understood, and I assure you before a profit can be realized they must be understood. To this understanding must be carried out the programme 365 days in the year. Do not go into the dairy business unless you intend never to give it up. There is no subject whose study requires more extended observation or careful thought. It is true there are cases where men and women have grown up in the dairy business and know from experience that certain causes produce certain effects, never asking how or why, but these succeed to a certain degree. A new beginner does not enjoy this knowledge; most persons get it by study. Successful dairying has its foundations on years of careful and special study. The man who will not submit himself to be educated and developed in dairy knowledge will most assuredly fail. Study and preparation come first. The dairyman must be educated to be in sympathy with the comfort and happiness of his cows, and take delight in everything that conduces to their welfare. He must know the causes that produce the irregularities and deficits, or he will never avoid them.

One Kind of Dairying. One eminent Western dairyman at the Vermont meeting said that Iowa's progress and prominence in butter making dated from the beginning to wash butter in the granular form, but at the same time he was confronted with the troublesome fact that the butter taking first prize was not only not washed in the granular form but was not washed at all, only a little water poured in the churn after the butter was gathered in a solid mass. I was lately in a creamery where the steam engine with its hot, greasy fumes stood in the same room with the open cream vats which were occasionally agitated to mix the cream, and they were but a few feet from the engine, while still nearer were piled the bags of salt to be used in the butter as occasion should require. The churning and working for the day was done, and all cleaned up, yet I noticed little pieces of butter still sticking in and about the worker. Such conditions in a dairy would be justly condemned as careless, ignorant, filthy; they are no less so in a creamery. Dairymen do not need to settle the question of whether or not to take their milk or cream to a creamery simply on the quality of the butter, for they can make just as good; but whether the conditions of help, indoors and out, the cost of carrying, cost of making, etc., must come into the question.

Yield of Milk.

Most cows give about the same quality of milk year after year, beginning with this quality at the first calving. There is no general tendency for milk to become either richer or poorer as the cow grows older. The milk of a heifer tends to agree very closely in quality with that of her dam; the average variation is a third of one per cent. of fat and the greatest difference is one per cent. in the case of an Ayrshire cow crossed with a Jersey bull. In the long run, just the same results are obtained whether cows are tested once a month or twice a month. Cows that have been properly fed at the barn do not shrink in quality of milk when turned to pasture. They usually increase both in quality and quantity. Full feeding with grain at the barn and while cows are on pasture produces a much larger flow of milk during April and May, and causes the milk flow to keep up considerably later in the fall. No attempt was made to ascertain whether this increase was sufficient to pay for the extra grain.

THE LEAF CRUMPLER.

A Little Timely Care Will Soon Exterminate Them.

The apple-leaf crumpler—the rascalleaf crumpler of some authors—is too common an insect in orchards. Yet its destruction is comparatively an easy matter, as will appear from the following account of its transformation and ing account of its transformation and habits. In the perfect stage the insect is a gray moth, with darker markings on the fore wings, as shown in the enlarged figure accompanying (d), the actual size being indi-

APPLE-LEAF CRUMPLER. cated by the cross lines below. This moth appears in the latter part of June and later, and deposits eggs upon the leaves of the apple, thorn, quince and leaves of the apple, thorn, quince and other apple-like fruits. The larvæ are soon hatched and begin work upon the leaves, protecting themselves meanwhile from observation and destruction by making a small, blackish case (a) in which they are mostly concealed. When feeding and moving about, the head and fore part of the body are thrust out of this case, which yet remains the retreat of the insect until full-grown. The larvæ are nearly half-grown before winlarvæ are nearly half-grown before winter checks their work, and by this time the case is enlarged sufficiently to form roomy winter quarters. It is then always securely fastened to the twig or branch by a silken band and concealed more or less perfectly by dried leaves drawn around it (as in b). In spring the larva again begins feeding converge its case about begins feeding, carrying its case about with it as necessary, and if the leaves are not yet out, attacking the swelling buds or the tender bark. The full larval size is soon attained, and before the transformation into the inactive pupa the worm again fastens its case to the twig or leaf and remains therein until appearing as a moth.

Such, then, is the outline of its life history. The suggestions as to checking its progress are two. In a small orchard and with young trees the gathering by hand of the cases as they hang exposed to view is an easy task, and if well done will go far to exterminate the insect. Where this is impracticable, or where the orchard is under treatment in spring by spraying for other apple pests, this species may be practically exterminated by the use of paris green in spray with water. If farmers will use the poison named in the proportion of one ounce to fifteen or twenty gallons of water, the former proportion best in an orchard not hitherto under treatment, we are confident that he will no longer complain of this pest. Where this spray is used to protect the apples from the young apple worm, the leaf crumpler is killed by the same application. Upon non-bearing trees it will be sufficient to spray them once thoroughly as soon as the leaves are expanded, taking care not to defer the application until the larva has withdrawn into its case for transformation, which usually it does in the latter part of May. -Kansas Farmer.

LESSON VI, SECOND QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, MAY 6.

Joseph's Last Days—Text of the Lesson, Genesis l, 14-26—Golden Text, Proverbs iv, 18-Commentary on the Lesson by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

14. "And Joseph returned into Egypt, he and his brethren and all that went up with him to bury his father." For seventeen years did Jacob enjoy Joseph's presence and care in Egypt (chapter xlvii, 28) and died at the age of 147, having first blessed all his sons and charged them to bury him beside Leah in the cave of Machpelah, where Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, had already been laid. When Jacob was dying, he, with confidence in the promises of God, blessed the sons of Joseph and assured Joseph that God would bring them all out of Egypt (Heb. xi, 21; Gen. xlviii, 21).

21; Gen. xlviii, 21).
15. "And when Joseph's brethren saw that their father was dead they said, Joseph will peradventure hate us said, Joseph will peradventure hate us and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him." That looks like a very mean estimate of their brother, who had so freely and fully forgiven them and had so abundantly cared for them for so many years. One cannot read chapter xlv, 1-15, without seeing that it was pure unbelief and actually made Joseph a liar. But it is just the way that many Christians treat the Lord. They cannot believe that He has nothing against them and that He will never mention their sins, and so will never mention their sins, and so will never mention their sins, and so they make Him a liar (I John v, 10).

16. "And they sent a messenger unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying." A messenger's only responsibility is to receive and deliver his message correctly and promptly. Haggai was the Lord's messenger with the Lord's message (Hag. i, 13), and the message accomplished the work.

17. "So shall ye say unto Joseph, Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren and their sin." This was no new sin they were asking forgiveness for, but the old wrong of 37 years before which had been fully forgiven for over 17 years. We have no record that Jacob ever told his sons thus to appeal to Joseph. If he did, he was as bad as they yet there are Christian. Joseph. If he did, he was as bad as they. Yet there are Christians who, being assured of forgiveness (Eph. i, 7; I John ii, 12), are all the time asking forgiveness for the same old sins. No wongiveness for the same old sins. No wonder Joseph wept.

18. "And his brethren also went and fell down before his face, and they said, Behold, we be thy servants." It was in fear they came, begging for that which had long ago been given them. This is not the kind of servant Jesus expects to find in those who have been made nigh by His precious blood (Eph. i, 13). Not serving to obtain forgiveness, but serving because forgiven, is the right way. Serve the Lord with gladness.

19. "And Joseph said unto them, Fear not, for am I in the place of God?" It not, for am I in the place of God?" It was against God they had sinned, and from Him first they should have sought forgiveness. David recognized this when he said, "Against thee, thee only, have I sinned and done this evil in thy sight (Ps. li, 4). We must seek forgiveness from God, for all sin is against Him by Mr. Patrick Donohoe, of Beston, in 1879, (I Cor. viii, 12), and then from those against whom we have offended.

20. "But as for you, ye thought evil against me, but God meant it unto good to bring it to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive." In almost the very same words had he spoken to them of this matter seventeen years before. yesterday, to day and forever (Heb. xiii, 8), of Jehovah, who says, "I am the Lord, I change not" (Mal. iii, 6).

21. 'Now therefore fear ye not. I will nourish you and your little ones. And he comforted them and spoke kindly unto them." This is at least the fourth "fear not" in this story (xliii, 23; xlvi, 3; 1, 12). The first in the Bible is in Gen. xv, 1, and the last is Rev. i, 17, or ii, 10, but how many heart comforting ones there are throughout the book! I find constant comfort and strength in such as I Sam. xxii, 23; Isa. xli, 10, 13; Joel ii, 21; Mark v. 36. We are to comfort others with the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God (II Cor. i, 4); therefore I pass them on.

22. "And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he and his father's house, and Joseph lived an hundred and ten years." He was 30 when he first stood before Pharoah (xli, 46), so that he had 80 years of prosperity and honor in Egypt. He would be about 56 when his father died; therefore he lived to make good his word to his brethren for at least 50 years. 23. "And Joseph saw Ephraim's children of the third generation. The children also of Machir, the son of Manasseh, were brought up upon Joseph's knees." After Job's affliction he saw his son's sons, even four generations (Job xlii, 16). It is one of the blessings of the righteous to see children's children and peace therewith (Ps. cxxviii, 6). 24. "And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die. and God will surely visit you Good wool and profitable wool cannot readily be grown on anything but a healthy flock of sheep.

and offing you out of this land unto the land which He swear to Abraham, to isaac and to Jacob." This was confidence in God. By faith, Joseph, when and bring you out of this land unto the Spring lambs and mutton sheep will he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Israel and gave commandment concerning his bones (Heb.

25. "And Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence." So when Moses led Israel out of Egypt he took the bones of Joseph and when their wenderings of Joseph, and when their wanderings all had ceased they were buried in Shechem (Ex. xiii, 19; Joshua xxiv, 32). Joseph might have desired such a funeral as he gave his father and had his body at once buried in the land of promise, but he was so sure of their going up in due time that he was content to wait and let his body remain among them as a token of their coming deliverance. 26. "So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old, and they embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt." Gathered unto his people (xlix, 33), his body still awaits the resurrection of the just at the coming of Christ (I Cor. xv, 23; I Thess. iv, 16). These all died in faith, not having received the promises. These all having obtained a good report through faith received not the promise, God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect (Heb. xi, 13, 39, 40). That unburied body was a constant sermon to the believing remnant such as Amram and Jochebed, parents of Moses, not to be discouraged by trials, but to wait for the deliverance which was sure to JOHN

The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep.
