Horace Sirrell Stole From Good Samaritan Who Provided Him With Home

Robbed Rankin House of Eight Silve Baikie's Room

When Horace Sirrell, the young Englishman rémanded to jail yesterday for the larceny of $8 from Ra Tipping, the Queen St. plasters, was searched at Castle Davidson eight silver spoons were found concealed in the bosom of his shirt. These spoons bore the monogram of the Hotel Rankin and the initials of the proprietor, John Pleasence.

kin and the initials of the proprietor, John Pleasence.

A subsequent investigation by the police to-day discloses a story of the basest ingratitude and treachery to his benefactors.

Sirrell, who is about 23 years of age, arrived in the city barely two months ago, "dead broke." He told a very pitiful story to Mr. Pleasence and the big-hearted hotel man said he would give him a home till he was able to get work. Week after week Sirrell boarded at the house without any charge. Finally, Mr. Pleasence, learning that he was a pressman by trade, alleging to have worked in the Salvation Army printing offices in London, England, saw Mr. Stephenson, of The Planet, and secured for him a position in the press rooms there. He failed to materialize and Mr. Stephenson notified Mr. Pleasence. The latter called the young man and asked him what the trouble was. He replied that he wasn't able to work and didn't wantemployment. "Then," said Mr. Pleasence, "Tm afraid I cannot afford to keep you longer."

Sirrell left, but next day returned with tears in his eyes and said he was hungry. Mrs. Pleasence, to whom he appealed this time, kindly took him in again, fed him and gave him his in again, fed him and gave him his room back again. Three days after, however, he became saucy in the din-ing room and losing his temper broke ing room and lesing his temper broke several cups, kicking them to pieces, tteg. Pleasence was called and, on his appearance, the man seized a butcher knife and threatened to cut him. It was then found that Sirrell had been through the room of James Baikie, the chief elerk of the hotel, and had stolen the greater part of Mr. Baikie's valuable collection of coins, Most of these were recovered, but Most of these were recovered, but Sirrell was then directed to leave. The spoons were not missed until their discovery by the police.

Sirrell comes before Judge Houston for trial on Monday.

He was abjectly terrified and demanded to have his passage paid from the country— sicily—in which the dread phenomenon occurred. He had been conveyed from the Sahara, I think, by a European, whose servant he was, and he evidently hought his master was behaving abom-nably to him in permitting him to get wet. Interesting and Instructive Addresses to Board of Trade by J. S. Larke

Ardent Apostle of National Policy Visits Chatham in His Official Capacity

In response to an invitation from the Board of Trade, a number of gentlemen met J. S. Larke, Canada Agent to Australia and New Zealand in the parlors of Hotel Sanita on Wesdenday evening, and listened to particularly interesting and instructive address on the trade relations between those countries and the Dominion of Canada, Mr. Larke was one of Sir John A. Macdonald's right-hand men in the great fight for the establishment of a higher tariff in Canada, and his enthusiasm at that time swill be remembered by many who heard him in his political addresses here and elsewhere, and this same enthusiasm is just as apparent when he speaks of the great possibilities now and for future generations in Australia.

He regretted that greater interest was not being taken by the Canadian manufacturers in the development of trade generally in the country, where such a firm as the Massey-Harris Company, by their enterprise, are able to held 50 per cent. of the entire agricultural implement trade. The Government representatives and the Government representatives and the people have much to learn respecting the advantages to be gained by cultivating a trade fithat is rapidly growing, but until we have transportation facilities sufficiently adequate to meet the requirements of the trade it will never develop as it should. In a few years the people to the south of us will undoubtedly lower their present tariff, and this will mean that the Canadian Government will substantially reduce the present mean that the Canadian Government will substantially reduce the present rates of duty and immediately a new condition will confront our manufacturers, who will have to look elsewhere for a large portion of their trade other than the rapidly filling up Northwest. It has already been shown that what trade Australia now gets from Canada comes from Ontario and Quebec, and not from the Coast, as many would suppose, and under altered conditions these two provinces would receive the greater benefits. The people have shown a praference for Canadian goods, but the Canadian shippers must give more preference for Canadian goods, but the Canadian shippers must give more attention to the requirements of the country, than they have done in the past, by properly preparing their goods for the market; when this is done the demand at remunerative fig-ures will encourage our Government to offer every inducement for the lowering of the present carrying to offer every inducement for the lowering of the present carrying charges to that market.

There is a market for millions of pounds of fish, pulp, paper, and at thousand other articles. When the trade is once established and honestly conducted it will rapidly develop. The speaker strongly urged upon our exporters the necessity of establishing warehouses where their goods can ing warehouses where their goods can ing warehouses where their goods can always be on exhibition.

Owing to the political conditions of the country, where there are three parties of almost equal strength, he did not think a preferential trade, however greatly to be desired, could be established at present, and indeed, not until a strong Government got the reins of power. This, the speaker hoped, would come about, but present conditions were not favorable. The result of a preferential trade would mean a rapid extension of the markets that offer greatly increased trade to both people, and he hoped the day was not far distant when this condition of affairs would exist. At the conclusion of his admirable address he was asked a number of

out of such an investment.
Judge Bell said the possibilities of the country were a revelation to him and increased prosperity would come to the Canadian manufacturers as soon as they availed themselves of the advantages to be derived from trade with that country.

This was the startling news that travelled from lip to lip all over the city this morning, but in spite of the energetic efforts of those who were emp.oyed to find her, she has not yet been found and her father can get no trace of her whatever. The missing girl left her home yesterday morning on her way to the Central school. Her stepmother told her to order some meat and go to the post office before she went to the post office before she went to school. The meat was ordered and the little child was seen at the post office and here all trace of her stopoffice and here all trace of her stopped. She did not go to school and no one can be found who has seen her since she left the post office. When she did not come home yesterday at noon, her parents were naturally alarmed but did not notify the police or inquire for her at the school, as they thought she had probably gone home with one of her school mates.

when four o'clock came and the little girl did not come home her parents became thoroughly alarmed and started out immediately to look for her and they are still using every means to find her, but up to the present the search has been fruitless. Last evening word was sent around to the different prayer meetings, but no one had seen anything of her. This morning Policeman James Dod-son visited both schools but none of the scholars had seen her yesterday It is a deep mystery to everyone where the little child could have gone. If she had wandered out of town to any of the surrounding town to any of the surrounding places some one would have noticed her and notified the local police. If she is still in town it seems funny that no one has seen her. The little girl is subject to fits, although it is some time since she has had one, and some express the opinion that she may have fallen into a fit in which event harm may have come to her. She strolled away from home which event harm may have come to her. She strolled away from home some time ago and was found after she was missing for a couple of days, and it is hoped that she will soon be found again this time.

She was a particularly bright child and one of the cleverest pupils in the Central school. She was in Miss Arnold's class and one of this year's medalists, having won a silver medal for making the highest stand in Grade Three.

The search is being vigorously kept up to-day and it is expected some trace of her will be found before night.

At two o'clock this morning Police Officer James Dodson succeeded in finding the first clue which may lead to the fittle girl's discovery: Mr. Dodson telephoned Homer Turner, who said he saw the little girl shortly after nine o'clock yesterday morning. She passed through the ceme-tery and told Mr. Turner her name. She said she was going to McGeachy's with Mr. McGeachy.

The little girl at one time lived with Mr. McGeachy.

It was learned at three o'clock that the child had not been at McGeachy's. She was seen at the cemetery at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was a funeral there and she may have gone home with some farmer who attended the funeral.

The following is a full description of the lost girl:

Dark brown hair tied with black ribbon, blue eyes, a very small scar between the eyes, teeth very dark colored near the gums, thin red lips, high forehead with straight nose and prominent large eyes. Wearing apparel as follows—A man's white straw hat with black band one and one-haif inches deep, a dark short coat lined with red shaker flannel, double breasted, two rows of large pearl buttons, perhaps one or two off. She wore a Mother Hubbard dress with blue yoke, greyish blue sleeves, buttoned with one button at the wrist; skirt a light grey plaid, lace shoes, No. 4 1-2, been worn some time, and long black stockings.

EDUCATION AND PUBLIC MOR-ALITY.

The frauds in connection with the big insurance corporations of the United States, and the close relationship revealed between the corporations and the political organizations have naturally given rise to much severe comment in the press and pulpit, points out the Guelph Herald. The Canadian people cannot afford to view with unconcern these revelations or assume a "better-than-thou" attitude towards our We need, just as much neighbors. as they to take to heart the lesson that comes from the unmasking of men, highly honored in social and political circles, who reduced to a science the practice of filching from the earnings of those for whom they were acting as trustees. Two college presidents have taken the occasion of the reassembling of the student body to utter words of sanity and vigor, touching the revelation of dishonor in high places that have lately astonished the community.

Dr. Schurman of Cornell University is one of the presidents who took an early opportunity to speak out plainly to the reassembled students of that institution. In his address at the opening of the thirty-seventh year of the university he denounced without qualification "the colossal immorality in the management of public trusts." Colossal immorality is a scorching phrase. It does not take account of whether the criminal statutes have been violated in terms, or whether there has been gain or loss of money in the transactions. The immorality was in the transaction itself, its selfish motive, its dangerous method. He referred explicitly to what had occurred during their vacation to attract public attention to the manner of management of funds and trusts that belonged of right to widows and orphans. Nothing, he said, will come of the indignation aroused "unless it makes each one of us feel that there is something wrong in the public spirit of the country." The criticism now rife of "recently eminent men in the financial world who have become mere notorious characters" will be wasted "unless it reacts upon ourselves and individually gives us samer views as to the chief good of life and the way to walk to attain it." There is before our young men a distorted view of life and a laxity in regard to the means of attaining to the false end. His view is that we need to go back to the old ground that a man's life consists not in attainment of this world's possessions, but in the development of the best character and power that is in him, and that "the highest as well as the lowest are bound by the same moral laws, and these laws are as inevitable as the physical laws of the universe.' President Butler, of Columbia Un iversity in New York City, also took occasion to speak on the recent scandals. He declares that in business and at the bar men are found "who have substituted the penal code for the moral law as the standard of conduct." He calls attention to "the subtle distinction between legal, not illegal, and illegal; cr better, perhaps, between honest, lawhonest and dishonest." Time was. and let us hope it has not gone by forever, when a genuine ethical standard prevailed in business, giving countenance to the voice of morally instructed conscience, which did not make nice distinctions hetween the "not illegal" and the "illegal," nor, indeed, would take advantage of the technically "legal" if it appeared to sanction wrong. Nowadays there is a disposition in some quarters to be governed not by what is immutably honest, but by what is "law-honest." if the sta tute law be not violated that is esteemed sufficient justi leation, that constitutes respectable business con

Very timely are the atterances of the college presidents from whom we have quoted. To the ingenuous young man who has not been already corrupted by an atmosphere of false standards in his home these performances in high finance will seem dishonest, unfaithful, not far removed from the flat stealing of money rightly belonging to others. What he wants to know is whether his natural judgment is correct, and he is very curious about the feeling elders, especially those who are his guides in religion and education. Are such things permissable without affecting the social standing of those who do them? May a man use the money he holds as trustee for the owners of it to gamble in the market for his own profit? He knows that when bank clerks and where.

ddie Naylor, the six-year-old so of Mr. and Mrs W. B. Naylor, of Mont real, was on Saturday, August 19, 1905 the hero of a most sensational boating adventure in the Cascade rapids. Alone in a leaky, old rowboat, standing up all cern, he shot the long, dangerous and surging rapids, holding in his grip all through his perlious voyage a little paddle. When rescued after he had the way, seemingly in perfect uncon reached comparatively calm waters, hi greeting to the boatmen coming towardhim was "Am I paddling right?"

Mrs. Naylor and her son were sum mering at the Hotel Perron. On Sat urday about noon the boy managed to escape his mother's observation, and slipped over to the water's edge, where there was a leaky, old boat moored. Getting into it, he managed to cut loose, and to the horror of the few of the villagers who had noticed him by

Just when he was midway in his terrible journey, the boy was caught sight of from a steamer which was then shooting the rapids. To launch a coat to rescue him was impossible bit a life belt was thrown out, but it came nowhere near him, nor, indeed, did he pay any attention to it.

At length, the little boat emerged from the more turbulent portion of the rap ds, and entered the calmer waters at the foot. Word had been hastily passed along, and several attempts were made to put out to the rescue. Finally, two French-Canadians put out from a mill, and succeeded in navigating the craft to a point where they could head off the youthful adventurer. When they reached him they found him drenched, of course, from head to foot, but none the worse for his astounding experience.

THE ASTERIA

Interesting Data About the Magie

Familiar to some of the ancient writers and credited with supernatural powers, the asteria, or star gem, was highly valued for the benefits supposed to be conferred on the weare Its bright, six rayed star, ever changing and shifting with every play light and especially shooting out its flames in the direct sunlight, would seem to be something more than an ordinary crystal, and to the superstatious mind it could readily be believed to embody some tutelar spirit. The particular virtue attributed to this gem was the conferring upon the wearer of "health and good fortune" when worn as an amulet, and to those fortunate to be born in the month of April, with which the stone was associated or rep resented, the wearer was insured from all evil. The star stone is found principally in Ceylon, invariably in soil peculiar to rubies and sapphires. In-deed it is composed of the same con-stituent "corundum," its chatoyant, or star rays, being caused by the presof what the natives call "silk." It is found in many different colors, from pale blue, pink and white to deep dark blue, ruby and purple. The blue are termed sapphire stars, the red ruby stars. It is always cue en cabochon, the star dividing into six rays at the apex. It is next in hardess to the diamond. The "Moorman" of Colombo, with tools as rude and simple as his fore-fathers used 1,000 years before, with no training or instruction except the unwritten mysteries of the craft hand-ed down from father to son, will produce the most wonderful results in cutting and polishing gems and in many instances rival the more edu-cated lapidary of Europe for judgment in cutting gems to the greatest advantage.-London Graphic,

QUEER THINGS IN POLAND. Superstition Plays a Leading Roll With Young Men and Maidens,

It is customary in Polish villages to strew straw over the Christmas eve supper tables and for the young people, blindfolded or in the dark, to pick out each a straw therefrom. Should the straw be green the lucky maiden expects to wear a bridal wreath or the youth to lead a blushing bride to the altar during the approaching year, but a dried straw foretells to either long waiting, possibly even until death.

In other rural Polish districts on the wine, beer and water are placed by a girl between two candles on a table. She then retires into a corner or an adjoining room to watch the result reflected in a mirror hung for this purpose. If as the clock strikes midnight a man enters and drinks the wine she is happy, for her wooer will be rich. Should he drink the beer, she may be content, for the wooer will be well to do. If the water be chosen, her husband will be very poor. But if as the clock strikes no man comes to her table the anxious maiden shivers with more than midnight terror, believing that she is doomed to be early the bride of death.

Poland is peculiarly rich in these observances, spreading themselves throughout the year, both sexes being equally superstitious in this respect. On New Year's eve the young unmarried men place themselves before a fire and, bending down, look beneath their legs. Should a woman appear in the background it is the one they will marry, but if they see a shape as of a cofin it forebodes for them death during the year close at hand.

LIFETIME IN LIGHTHOUSE.

George Durnan Presented With the Imperial Service Medal For Long Faithful Service to Canada.

By command of His Majesty, King Edward VII., Mr. George Durnan, for-merty lighthouse keeper on Gibraltar Point, on the Island shore, Toronto, has been presented with an Imperial service medal for long and faithful service to Canada. The presentation was made by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, in the drawing goom at Government House, in the presence of Mr. Durnan's family and some friends. Mr. Durnan made a happy reply, in which he gave some reminiscences of the historic lighthouse.

To have lived a lifetime in a light-

To have lived a lifetime in a lighthouse is an experience that will impress the average man as being the climax of monotony. But Mr. Durnan, who himself held the position of light keeper for fifty-two years, following his father, who had it for twenty-two years, and who only a few months ago was placed on the Government pension list, is a striking example that such monotony does not prevent longevity. Mr. Durnan is hale and hearty at 79, and blds fair to live many a day yet. He is an uncle of Eddie Durnan, the Canadian sculler, and is the father of thirteen children, eight of whom are living.

A Solitary Sandbar.

Mr. Durnan was five years old when his father, who had a few years previously come to this country from Ireland, was appointed keeper of the light and took up his residence on the Island. Mr. Durnan recalled the scene vividly. The Island was a solitary sandbar, with not another house upon

The first keeper of the present lighthouse on the Island was a man named John Miller, who remained in charge for nine-years, when he was murdered by soldiers to whom he had refused a supply of whiskey. "Miller was on his way to inform the commanding officer of the unruly conduct of the soldiers when he was pounced upon and mirdered by them. The position was afterwards given to an old soldier named Halloway, who with his wife occupied the old wooden cottage beside the lighthouse and trimmed lamps for seventeen house on the Island was a man named house and trimmed lamps for seventeen years. him.

Mr. Durnan is a man of splendid physical frame. In addition to keeping the light he was an enthusiastic fisher-

The lighthouse on the Island is one of the oldest landmarks of Toronto. It was built on the present site in 1806, and all the stone for the structure was and all the stone for the structure was brought from Queerston Heights. The walls are six feet in thickness, and the height from the ground to the weather vane is eighty feet. When the light was established it was, like all other such beacons, a fixed light. As the city grew and the Island became populated, it was found necessary to install a modern revolving beacon. Mr. Durnan remembers when there were several groves of good-sized pine trees on the Island.

The huge vessel, of 15,000 tons displacement, was anchored in the stream, and owing to the strength of the tide her was anchored in the stream, and owing to the strength of the tide her chain cable suddenly parted. She at once began to drift up harbor, and bumped against the gunboat Ant, whose deck was swept by the battleship's boom, and everything on it smashed.

Leaving the gunboat, the battleship'drifted on to a private yacht that was close by, and so completely wrecked the little craft that some ladles and gentlemen on board had to be taken off by the Dominion's boats. The great warship had no steam up, but her anchor was at once let go. Before it could hold however, the Dominion had drifted on to the royal yacht Albert, which was lying at her moorings. The little wooden vessel, of which the late Queen was so fond, was badly damaged, and her paddle-box almost reduced to splinters. Drifting clear of the yach, the Dominion ran on-to a mudbant, and remained fast for four hours until she was hauled off and conveyed to a place of safety.

Where Goldwin Smith is Popular.

The Cornell campus is crowded with memories of Goldwin Smith. One of the finest structures on the university hill is named in his honor. A pretty path skirting the edge of Cascadilla Creek for several miles is known as Goldwin Smith walk. His presence at Ithaca, in the early days of the university, had much to do with the popularity that it immediately gained as an institution of learning. The victories of the Cornell crews upon the water completed the fame of Cornell on the Hill. That Goldwin Smith will "live to be the last leaf on the tree" is the wish of every man who has sat under him in the lecture room. He may never succeed in uniting Canada to the United States, but he has already gained the love and affection of the vast majority of the American peeple.—Pittsburg Dispatch. The following story is told of a one time Pennsylvania legislature:

The session was about to expire. In accordance with the usual custom, the chair was occupied by a rapid worker who was deaf to objections and blind to objectors. His name was Alexander McClure. Under his able management the bills were going through at a lightning express rate when one measure was reached that was particularly obnoxious to a noisy minority. Utterly oblivious to the demonstration, Mr. McClure declared that the bill had passed. Over in one corner of the leg-islative chamber one member was especially vociferous. He would not be quieted, and Mr. McClure was finally compelled to notice him for the sake of peace. "For what purpose does the gentle-man rise?" asked the chair. want to offer an amendment to the bill," was the reply. "Too late," said Mr. McClure, without a smile. "Offer it to the next bill. The clerk will read."

WELL-GOVERNED TOWN.

City of Leeds Shows the English System of Loca! Government and Its Best Results.

The increased interest taken in the English system of local governmen justifies a critical examination of the Justifies a critical examination of the methods and results, says a London correspondent. The feature of municipal administration which invariably impresses me when am in the cities of the Midands, Yorkshire or Lancashire is the conservative way of carrying out radical, progressive policies. The municipalities have made darling experiments in collectivism, but so deliberate and cautious have been the processes that the results seem practical and businessilke rather than socialistic. The insalaried councils, with their methodical habits and disintertheir methodical habits and dishiter-ested labors, impart their own charac-ter to local government. The members are as diligent, shrewd and careful in supervising the affairs of the town as they are in managing their private busthey are in managing their private bus-iness and investments. The risks are fewer and the methods safer than in private enterprises, because every form of municipal trading and every branch of the public service is directed by a or the public service is directed by a committee of the council, in which conservative business men make their influence felt by holding back enthusiasts and experimentists. There are no private corporations as cautious in their financial operations, and especially in including supplies he well to the committee of the committee reducing surpluses by writing off large amounts for depreciation of plant, as these municipal councilmen. Ordinary directors are anxious to increase dividends and to make as good a showing as possible in their annual or quarterly reports. The municipal managers are satisfied with moderate contributions to the rates and are always on the safe side in their exhibits of the results of local enterprises.

The City of Leeds, with its population of over 450,000, is governed by a council of 64 members. There are few men of leisure among them. Nearly the are actively employed in business or the professions. There are three doctors several solicitors, one pawnbroker, several bankers, a few engineers and large groups of manufacturers and merchants. They are busy men, yet they find time for attending committee meetings and for supervising the public bus-iness of the community.

There are as many as 60 committees and sub-committees, and every mem-ber is called upon to attend at least 10 ber is called upon to attend at least Iv meetings each month. The education committee has 36 members and holds frequent meetings; the library and fin-ance committee meets once a fortnight and the other standing committees, with an average membership of 12, receive menthly reports from their sub-committees. Sacrifices of time and pleasure are involved, and these busy men make them cheerfully from a sens of public obligation, when they are not paid for their service and have nothing to get out of politics. They look upon local government as a stock company, conducted for mutual benefit, with ev-ery citizen a shareholder; and they ery citizen a snareholder; and they themselves are public servants, without other reward than the consciousness of doing what they can to promote the interests of the community. It is this lofty yet practical ideal of public service which makes this Yorkshire town one of the best governed in the town one of the best governed in the United Kingdom.

Leeds is a prosperous industrial centre, which is rapidly increasing in population and area. New streets have constantly to be paved and sewered; suburbs have to be provided with transit facilities; the water, electric light and gas supplies need enlargement every year; and local improvements are an unceasing burden to ratepayers. The educational expenses have payers. The educational expenses have payers. The educational expenses have been largely increased by recent legis-lation, and with an aggregate indebt-edness of more than £10,000,000, with more than £12,000,000 of corporate property to show for it, there are heavy interest charges to be met from a ratable valuation of about £2,200,000. If the tax rate has not exceeded 8 shillings, it is because the three-principal municipal industries—tramways, water and gas-yield an annual profit of £96. 108 for the relief of local taxation, af-fer ample provision has been made for deterioration of plant, interest charges and payments to sinking funds. The most remunerative of these is the electric tramway service, which, in the last year, has contributed a net surplus of £52,000 to the rates. This has een done with an average penny fare from more than 60,000,000 passengers for the year, and with extensions to the mileage by new construction and additions to the electrical equipment. The town corporation owns the electric works and manages the tramways works and manages the tramways; and, apart from providing cheap and rapid transit and from connecting the suburbs and improving the outlying area in a symmetrical way, it has con-verted the service into a considerable source of revenue, with the prospect of source of revenue, with the prospect of gradually enlarging it as the interest charges are lowered by the operation of sinking funds. The gas and water supplies are also remunerative services of increasing value. Electric lighting does not yet yield a surplus for the relief of the rates, but will probably do so in the course of a few years, being already self-sustaining.

A Lawbreaker.

Justin McCarthy was once showing a young American married lady over the House of Commons. In passing through the library he mentioned to her, as a more or less interesting fact, that it was against the rules for a woman to sit down there.

A learned English judge asked a woman to marry him because she, knowing his weakness, had mixed a salad so artistically that he declared he could not live without eating another. The judge soon repented of his folly. The lady had a foolish nature and a temper which so tormented her husband that he would prolong the sessions of his court far into the night. Crown Has Identified Man Wanted For 17 Years For Killing Mis

Has Returned to Neighborhood-Sentence of Death on Accomplice Was Commuted

After 17 long years of untiring watchfulness, it is probable that Sandy McDuff, alleged to have murdered the old miser, Wilson Holton on the night of July 1, 1888, will be captured and brought to justice within a few days. The Crown has been actively at work upon the case for the past month, in conjunction with the department of Toronto, and Provincial Detective Rogers is expected shortly to complete the coup-At the beginning of September some unguarded utterances are alleged to have been made by the man suspected, and, despite two aliases changed appearance, and several years of travel in foreign climes, the Crown has diligently traced up the dentity, and are now ready to act.

The story of the crime, disappearance of McDuff, subsequent trial, conviction, and death sentence upor another, his reprieve and final pardon after nine years' imprisonment, very interesting and dramatic

STORY OF THE MURDER.

On the night of the murder, Wilson Holton, an old bachelor of 70 years, reputed to have hoarded a consider able sum of money, was attacked in his log cabin in Tilbury, where he lived alone, by two masked men, who clubbed him and then shot him. They then rifled the hut and secured They then rifled the hut and secured something over $400 hidden in the wall, making their escape by horse and rig. Holton lived in a bush of 100 acres, which he owned. After the departure of the robbers he orawled almost nude to the home of Thomas Maris, a neighbor, 350 yards distant, gaspingly told his story, and expired. expired.

McMAHON SENTENCED

Quick and McMahon came up for trial before Mr. Justice Rose in Sep-tember, 1889, the late Mr. Justice Lount appearing for the Crown and the late P. B. Osler defending Quick. The evidence was of a circumstantial, but very convincing character, and went to show that the deed was done by McDuff, while Quick appear ed in the light of an accomplice, and McMahon, who, it was sworn, drove the rig, was generally believed to be the catspaw.

The view of Judge Rose was evi-The view of Judge Rose was evidenced when he delivered sentence of death on McMahon, to be executed Dec. 13th, in which he stated from the bench that he had given time for "all efforts to be made on your behalf to the Executive, efforts which I would recommend your counsel to institute." Two months later McMahon received his reprieve and subsequent commutation of his sequent. hon received his reprieve and sub-sequent commutation of his sen-tence to life imprisonment. For nine years he served in Kingston, when repeated petitions secured a recon-sideration of the case and he was finally pardoned.

APPEARS AGAIN ON SCENE No trace was ever found of McDuff, although a big reward was offered for his apprehension. About a year or so ago, however, a man settled in Dover Township, and within the past three months the suspicions of the Crown have been active as to his identity. Investigations have been instituted and the tracing of the history of the man for the past 17 years has been virtually completed to the satisfaction of the officers.

It is expected that Detective Rogers will effect the dramatic climax of the arrest within a few days. No trace was ever found of McDuff

Mr. Ironides said that these cattle would have sold for as much in the City of Mexico. The market for live hogs was stronger to sold for as much in the City of Mexico. The market for live hogs was stronger in spite of the increased offerings, owing to the fact that there is a disposition on the part of one packer to keep up prices and he paid for for selected lots and contracted at this figure for delivery next week, which is an advance of 1½c over the top prices paid on Monday. SIR WM. MULOCK.

Authoritative Statement From Ottawa As to Cause of His Retirement. Ottawa, Oct. 12.—(Globe Special).— The following authoritative statement was given out as to the Pastmaster-General's resignation: "In the winter of 1901 Sir William Mulock was sent by the Government to Australia to represent Canada at the inauguration of the Australian Commonwealth, and during a somewhat stormy passage across the Atlantic he contracted an attack of neuritis, which lasted for many months, leaving behind it a rheumatic condition which, in a man of his years, is intensified by the severe strain of public life. Though the

Though the trouble thus arising is more or less formant, he has been advised that he must seek occupation less exacting, and less worrying upon the newous system, if he is to retain his health Accordingly, he has decided to withdraw from public life, and as a step to that end has placed his resignation in Sir Wilfrid's hand.

"He leaves the Cabinet with the deepest regret, not only because of his interest in public affairs, but because of his personal attachment to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues. He has been nearly twenty-four years in Parliament—fourteen years in Opposition and ten years in the Government—a pretty long portion of the working period of a man's life. But there is still much work in him, though it never again can take the form of strenuous public life. Sir Wilfrid is it never again can take the form of strenuous public life. Sir Wilfrid is giving him a farewell dinner on Mon-day evening, at which will be present all the Cabinet Ministers who day evening, at which will be present all the Cabinet Ministers who are at the Capital."

Sir William yesterday morning politely declined to say what his plans were, or whether he would resign for North York. It would appear, however, that his withdrawal from public life also involves the retirement from the constituency which he has so long represented. In that event, his successor, Mr. Aylesworth, will run in North York. It is expected that the writ, together with those for the other bye-elections, will be issued shortly. Sir William Mulock will be appointed Chief Justice of the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Ontario, carrying with it a salary of $10,000.

SOME SEASONABLE ADVICE.

It may be a piece of superfluous advice to urge people at this season of the year to lay in a supply of Chamberlain's Cough remedy. It is almost sure to be needed before winter is over, and much more prompt and satisfactory results are obtained when taken as soon as a cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system, which can only be done by keeping the remedy at hand. This remedy is so widely known and so altogether good that no one should hesitate about buying it in preference to any other. It is for sale by all druggists. SOME SEASONABLE ADVICE.

TALES OUT OF SCHOOL.

More Merry Mistakes Recorded by Henry J. Barker, M. A.

It is a remarkable fact that children It is a remarkable fact that children rarely or never make use of proverbs or "sayings" in their ordinary talk and conversation. If their teacher or parents happen to use proverbial language it is as much lost on the child as though it were so much Chinese or double Dutch. I came across an amusing example of this whilst I was examining a class of South London boys on the coalfields of England and Wales.

Wales.

After a certain lad had correctly informed me that one of the most-important coalfields of England was that of Northumberland and Durham, I asked the question:

asked the question:

"When you hear people say as regards a certain action that "it is like carrying coals to Newcastle," what do they mea 1?"

Out of a large class of over six y boys only two put up their hands; and they did. I noticed, with some hesitation and diffidence.

"Well," I said to one of them, "what do people mean by the expression?"

"Well," I said to one of them, "what do people mean by the expression?"
"Why, sir," he answered, "they mean that carrying coals to Newcastle would be very hard work."
The lad had evidently in his mind the picture of a man carrying a sack or scuttle of coals all the way from London to Newcastle.

with a smile, I turned to the other boy, and asked him what he thought was the meaning.

"It means, sir, that you'd most likely "It means, sir, that you'd most likely be persecuted for cruelty to animals."
This lad, too, had evidently a picture of some poor broken-winded horse drawing a load of coals all that distance, and being urged on by the driver's whip or stick.

The Church's Feminine.

The Church's Feminine.

The masculine and feminine genders of nouns and pronouns often prove a great difficulty with children.

A certain inspector, after eliciting from a class of London boys that the feminine of "Jew" was "Jewess"; of "bachelor," "maid"; of "master," "mistress," etc., proceeded to give them some rather harder questions.

What is the feminine of inspector?"

some rather harder questions.

'What is the feminine of inspector?' he asked, pointing at a little ragged urchin behind.

urchin behind.

"There ain't none," said the lad, thinking, possibly, that the inspector was laying a trap for him.

"Oh, yes, there is," said the gentleman; "lady inspectors are plentiful enough. For instance, I daresay you know there is a lady who inspects the laundry work in the girls' department of this school. Now, what would you call her?"

or this school. Now, what would you call her?"
"Why," answered the urchin, "a washerwoman, of course!"
Another inspector informs me that in dealing with the genders of nouns, he asked (playfully laying a little trap for the hovs):—

"Has the word 'church' a feminine?"
After a pause, a thoughtful-looking d cried out.
"Yes o'r." Yes, sir.

"Oh, indeed," said the inspector, with smile; "pray, what is it?" "Chapel, sir."

When Queen Victoria agreed place the hereditary revenues of the Crown at the disposal of the nation for Majesty made a bad bargain for the royal family.

King Edward did the same thing

THE GRAVE OF ELIA.

Hutton's "Literary Landmarks of was largely a labor of love and was the result of years of hard work. Mr. Hutton gives this example of the difficulties that stood in his way: "Another Sunday afternoon I devoted to a pious pilgrimage to the grave of Charles Lamb at Edmonton. As usual, nobody at Edmonton knew anything The churchyard is not a small one, and it is entirely filled. The sexton and the It is entirely filled. The sexton and the gravedigger and a few persons wandering about could give me no information. Most of them had never heard of Mr. Lamb, and I could not find the sacred spot. Naturally I applied to the rector, and as he left the vestry door after service leaning on the arm of a pretty young woman I approached him, raised my hat and asked politely if he could tell me where Charles and Mary Lamb were resting. Really he could not say! And I, forgetting the day, the place and his sacred office, cursed that rector for his criminal ignorance.

" 'Great heavens,' I said, 'you ought to be ashamed of yourself! In your care have been placed the ashes of one of the foremost men in the whole his-tory of English letters. And you don't know where they are! They have made your churchyard and your parish distinguished all the world over. I have come 3,000 miles to visit Charles Lamb's grave, and you, the rector of the church, don't know where it is! You ought to be heartily ashamed of yourself.' And I turned upon my heel and left him standing there speechless and confounded."

Half an hour after the above incident occurred and while Hutton was grop-ing around the graveyard in the twilight the rector came to him, hat is hand, apologized most humbly for his iguorance, which he had corrected in the meantime, and conducted him to the grave of the immortal Elia.

"It ill becomes any of us to criticise lapses in grammar," says an authority, "when we all of us consent to and constantly make use of one such lapse ourselves. To speak of the 'setting sun' is wholly incorrect. You may set a book on a table or even set a son on a chair if he be big enough not to fall off, but what does the orb of day set, and where does it set? No, sir, queer as it may sound to ears grown accustomed to the universal form, the sun sits. If it sets anything why doesn't it raise something? If it shouldn't be the rising and the sitting sun it should be the raising and the setting sun. Think it over, and when you get it arranged to your satisfaction try to find out what you mean when you speak of a setting hen."
