THE ISLANDER DISASTER

Investigation Did Not Stop With Coat of Whitewash First Applied—Bodwell Is After Facts for Government—Many Witnesses Say the Captain Was Intoxicated.

Victoria, Sept. 27.—The investigation as to the cause of the wrecking of the steamer Islander off Douglas Island on the morning of August 15th when nearly half a hundred lives were lost has been reopened and under the supervision of Attorney Bodwell who is conducting the investigation on behalf of the Dominion government, some very sensational evidence is being developed. Several witnesses yesterday and today declared positively that the captain was intoxicated at the time of the disaster. The investigation promises to be productive of greater safety to travelers in the future.

COLUMBIA WINS FIRST RACE

The American Cup Defender Draws First Blood in the International Yacht Contest—The Race a Very Close One—Columbia Finally Winning by Only Two Boat Lengths.

New York, Sept. 28.—Columbia wins the first in the series of international yacht races amid the plaudits of admiring thousands who crowded aboard all manner of craft to witness the great contest. The wind continued exasperatingly light as in the previous trial, but the race was accomplished within the time limit. Shamrock took the lead at the start and held steadily ahead of her opponent until the turn was reached. On the run in Columbia forged steadily ahead, overtaking Shamrock and winning the first race by two boat lengths. It was the most closely contested race that has ever occurred in the history of international contests. The result hung in the balance almost until the completion of the race. Columbia's time allowance of forty-six seconds gives her the race by one and one-quarter minutes. New York, Sept. 27.—The opinion of both American and British appears to have crystallized into the belief that the Shamrock will fail to lift the cup from America. The incompleting race of yesterday fully demonstrated the fact that the Columbia can out-sail the Shamrock under light winds, while last year it was demonstrated that a half gale suits the Columbia to perfection. Yesterday's incompleting race will be re-sailed tomorrow over the entire course, fifteen miles out and back.

HOW LONG?

The publication in this paper yesterday of the fact that the White Pass company is charging storage for boilers and other machinery now lying in the public streets, was a matter of surprise to a great many people. Some refused to believe the facts as set forth in the article referred to, thinking that even the White Pass concern would not carry its greed to such an extent.

Nevertheless the statements set forth in yesterday's Nugget are absolutely correct. The company has taken possession of a portion of a public thoroughfare—the most important in the town. A large portion of the street has been filled with machinery, which not only blocks and hinders traffic but utterly destroys the appearance of the street.

But that is not all. The greed and audacity of this grafting corporation do not stop here. It only has the concern taken possession of a public highway, but it makes its illegal action a source of revenue to itself.

Shippers are actually made to pay storage on freight which the White Pass company has piled in a public street. Such a monstrous action is unprecedented. But it is done by the railroad company simply because the public is at the mercy of this worse than highway robber. The shipper is told to pay the charges demanded by the railroad or his freight will be sold—and what can he do?

Now the question which the Nugget wishes brought to the attention of the people of this territory is simply this: How long do they propose to submit to such outrageous treatment? Are they going to continue without action for an indefinite length of time and allow the vitality to be drawn from the community by this vampire, or will they take the means that are within their power and seek redress where it may be obtained?

The Nugget has used strong words in dealing with the attitude of the railroad toward the territory but it is a case where strong words are required. We believe that an appeal should be made to the government of Canada, to the government of British Columbia and to the United States government, from all of which the railroad company has charters. If something is not done along this line, another twelve months will see the Yukon territory so closely bound in grasp of the corporation that escape will be practically impossible.

ANGLO-SAXON UNITY.

Two events have occurred during the past twelve months which have served to bring the two branches of the Anglo-Saxon race into closer touch than anything else that has happened in the course of a century.

These two events, if need scarcely be said, are the death of Queen Victoria and the assassination of President McKinley.

During the administration of President Cleveland an incident known as the Venezuela affair occurred which brought the governments of the United States and Great Britain to a point where history will certainly say that peaceful relations were strained.

That incident in itself served to open the eyes of the people of the two great English speaking nations to the absurdity of permitting any circumstance whatsoever to array them against each other. It would be impossible at the present time to conceive of any situation which would cause a rupture of pleasant relations between the two powers. In all the councils of the nations of the world the two stand shoulder to shoulder and each takes a deep interest and a large share in the joys and sorrows of the other.

Now, the bonds which have been formed through close commercial, social and diplomatic relations have been sealed, it is to be hoped, forever, through the influence of a mutual sorrow. A people who have mingled their tears over the same coffin can never be forced into war with each other.

Victoria is dead. McKinley is assassinated. Two of the greatest rulers of the world have gone to their final account. But they have left behind two nations bound together by the indissoluble ties of a common grief.

Who knows but that in the passing of Victoria and McKinley, Anglo-Saxon unity has been re-established forever.

Arrangements are all perfected for the memorial services which will be held at the Savoy theatre tomorrow afternoon. The program will be of an impressive character and in keeping with the nature of the occasion. The public need not be urged to attend. In no place in the world was more genuine sorrow exhibited for the death of President McKinley than was shown in Dawson. The sincerity of this feeling will undoubtedly be shown by the attendance at the memorial services tomorrow.

The News, the champion (?) of the downtrodden miner, which formerly could not find language to express its contempt for the Sun, is now eating from the same spoon as the latter just as chummy as you please. Well! it is often said that politics makes strange bedfellows, but we never saw anything quite the equal of this latest combination.

If the through telegraph line continues in operation throughout the winter we shall almost forget that Dawson is a long way out of civilization. The news of the day on the day it occurs. It sounds marvelous, but that is what the Nugget is now giving its readers.

The Sun is gradually losing the individuality which once belonged to it, and as has previously been suggested in these columns, is now nothing more nor less than a morning edition of the News. Think of it.

It is believed by those who are in a position to know that the warehouses of Dawson are supplied with enough food to furnish the district for two years to come. It is much better to have too much than too little.

Our first snow fall is about thirty days late this year. Let us hope that this fact may augur well for a mild winter.

The Pacific Cold Storage Co. has perfectly insulated chambers regulated by steam and offers the finest warm storage in Dawson.

MCKINLEY'S HISTORY

Late President Descended From Sturdy Ancestry.

Hon. William McKinley, 26th president of the United States, who was shot twice on September 6th by an assassin on the grounds of the Pan-American Exposition, was born in Niles, Trumbull county, Ohio, on January 29th, 1843, and was therefore in his 59th year of his age. President McKinley's father was descended from Scotch-Irish and his forefathers came to America about 1750.

The grandmother of President McKinley—Mary Rose—came from a Puritan family who fled from England to Holland and emigrated to Pennsylvania with William Penn. The father of President McKinley, William, sr.—was born in Pine Township, Mercer county, Pa., in 1807, and married Nancy Campbell Allison, whose father was of English extraction.

President McKinley was the seventh of a family of nine. Both the grandfather and father of the president were manufacturers of iron, or what were called in their day "furnace men." William McKinley, sr., was a devout Methodist, staunch Whig and Republican, and an ardent advocate of a "protective tariff." He died during the first gubernatorial term of his son in November, 1892, but the mother lived to see her son inaugurated president of the United States—dying in December, 1897, at the age of 89.

President McKinley was educated in the common schools of Ohio until he was 17 years of age. Then he entered the junior class of Allegheny College at Meadville, Pa., from which he would have graduated in 1861 had it not been for a severe illness.

In 1861 young McKinley volunteered as a private in the Twenty-third Ohio Infantry, one of the most famous of Ohio's organizations, including many noted men, among them General Rosecrans and President Hayes, and remained throughout the civil war, participating in all the principal battles in which his regiment was engaged, having been promoted to be major for gallant and meritorious services.

On returning from the war Major McKinley began the study of law at Youngstown, Ohio, and was admitted to practice in 1867 at Warren, Ohio. Major McKinley, however, decided to settle in Canton, where his sister Anna resided and was a teacher in the public schools.

In 1869, Major McKinley was elected prosecuting attorney of his town and served one term. In 1876, he was nominated for congress and was elected in the following October by a majority of 3800.

During the celebrated canvass between Hayes and Tilden in 1876, Major McKinley visited the Centennial exposition at Philadelphia, and was introduced to an immense audience by the late James G. Blaine, to whom Mr. Blaine had been talking for an hour—and made such an effective speech that the major became in great demand throughout the country during that campaign.

It is a coincidence that Major McKinley entered congress on the 4th of March, 1877, the same day that the colonel of his regiment, Rutherford B. Hayes, was inaugurated president of the United States.

Major McKinley was re-elected to congress in 1888, where he continued until 1890, when he was defeated by only 300 votes.

This defeat, however, only laid the foundation for nomination for governor in 1891, to which he was re-elected in 1893.

After Governor McKinley had retired from the gubernatorial chair, he went to his home at Canton, where he remained until his nomination for president in 1896, to which office he was elected in the following November, over William J. Bryan, by a popular vote of 691,854, out of a total vote of 13,000,000.

The public-life services of William McKinley since his inauguration as president, on March 4, 1897, are so well known to the readers of American newspapers that it would seem to be a work of supererogation to repeat them here.—Ex.

INDIAN FIRE WORSHIPERS

The Heathen Practice is Yet in Vogue in America.

Some of the methods still pursued by the savage races at the opening of the twentieth century for procuring fire are very interesting.

The Zuni Indians of North America use an agave stick with sand to help the friction.

In the national museum at Washington is a collection of objects illustrative of fire worship on the American continent.

One article is a sort of a fire pump, utilized by the Onondagas at the feast of the White Dog at which a white dog is sacrificed. This tool utilizes the mechanism of the pump drill for sparking in another piece of wood, thus obtaining ignition. It resembles the apparatus in vogue among the Australian blacks.

The Hima, by the way, have a similar sacred fire drill, by means of which they make fire nine times each day for nine days at a periodical festival. The Hupa Indians of California are remarkably expert fire-makers. With a couple sticks of soft mesquite wood they can produce fire in ten seconds.

The dwarfs of the Andaman Islands, of the Indian ocean until quite recently did not know how to make fire. On the islands of the archipelago is an active volcano, from which they were accustomed formerly to obtain fresh supplies of fire at intervals.

Special expeditions for this purpose were not often necessary, inasmuch as they knew how to keep the fire smouldering in decayed wood for an indefinite length of time.

At the appointed moment the great pile of inflammable brush is lighted, and in a few moments the whole of it is in one blaze. A stream of sparks flies 100 feet or more in the air and ashes fall about like a shower of snow.

The ceremony always takes place at night and the effect of it both weird and impressive.

Just when the fire is raging its hottest a whistle is heard from the outer darkness, and a dozen warriors little and lean, dressed in narrow white breech cloth and moccasins, are daubed with white earth, so as to look like many living statues, come bounding through the entrance of the copral that encloses the flaring heap.

Yelping like wolves, they move toward the fire, bearing aloft slender wands, tipped with balls of eagle down. Running down the fire, always to the left, they begin thrusting their wands toward the fire to burn off the down from the tips.

This done, another performance follows. It is heralded by a tremendous blowing of horns. Ten or more men run into the corral, each of them carrying two thick bundles of shredded cedar bark. Four times they run around the fire, waving the bundles, which are then lighted. Now begins a wild race around the fire, the rapid running causing the brands to throw out long streamers of flame over the heads and arms of the dancers.

The latter apply the brands to their own bodies and to the bodies of their comrades in front. A warrior will seize the flaming mass as if it were a sponge, and keeping close to the man he is pursuing, will rub his back with it, as if bathing it. The sufferer in his turn catches up with the man in front of him and satiates him in flame. From time to time the dancers sponge their own backs with the flaming brands.—Ex.

A Forgotten Countersign.
"War with recruits in the beginning is apt to lead to many amusing experiences," said the old army officer who saw service in Cuba. "Now, you couldn't ask for better soldiers than we had in Cuba, but a large number of them were new to the business and had much to learn, and, much to their credit, it can be said that they soon learned it."

"I had occasion to leave our lines one night soon after we arrived in Cuba, and upon my return it suddenly struck me that I had forgotten the countersign. I puzzled over it for some time, but for the life of me I couldn't recall the word that had been given out. While I was thinking it over I heard the command: "Halt! Who comes there?"

"Friend," I answered, thinking that the countersign would come to me in a moment.

"Advance, friend, and give the countersign," said the sentry.

"As the countersign had slipped from me completely I walked up to him and said sharply: "Call the corporal of the guard!" "Gosh," answered the sentry, "I knew it was something like that, but I'm durned if I hadn't forgotten it!"

Why Astor Quit.

It will be remembered that William Waldorf Astor, of New York City, who inherited a fortune of many millions from his ancestors, quit the United States—removed to England, renounced his allegiance to Uncle Sam and became a subject of the British crown.

Probably no man has ever been more mercilessly criticized for that act than William Waldorf Astor—and it is not surprising that he should feel the giving out a statement touching the reasons which led him to forsake his country—and here is what he says about it:

"It is the cruelest calamity to state that I sought citizenship in England because I lost my love for the land of my birth. I emphatically repeat that I was driven to do so by a persistent onslaught of venomous treatment on the part of certain American newspapers. Otherwise I would have been heart and soul an American in life and in death."

There isn't a man in the United States who knows the history of the Astor family and the conditions which led up to the result which landed William Waldorf in the British camp, who will take any stock in this ridiculous stuff now formulated as an "excuse."

The facts are that Astor always courted publicity—but unfortunately from his standpoint never secured but little at the hands of the newspapers—and that was one of the causes which soured Astor against his country.

Moreover, the immediate cause of Astor's departure was the fact that the assessor of New York insisted upon the Astor estates contributing a fair return in the line of taxation and this was against all precedent, and of course obnoxious to the man who had to pay the taxes.

As we recall it, Astor was a candidate for Congress once, and expected that the people of the district, where he resided, would follow him down and this was against all precedent, but even here the people refused and Astor was left out in the cold in spite of his family history and his enormous wealth.

For Skagway Route.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 12.—A new steamer is to be secured for next season to take the place of the lost steamer Islander on the Skagway route. While no announcement is made by the company in this connection, it is a well known fact that the matter has been taken up by the head office of the Canadian Pacific Navigation fleet, and Capt. J. W. Troupe, manager of the Canadian Pacific Navigation Company, will leave in the near future for Montreal to discuss the plans for the new Alaskan liner, which will be—as was the Islander—if not the best, one of the best steamers on the Lynn Canal route. Whether a new steamer will be built for the service of a vessel suiting the requirements of the trade is understood, but the former course is most in favor.

The surviving members of the crew of the steamer Islander, the greater number of whom have been held here to give evidence before the court of inquiry, are to be drafted to other steamers of the fleet, the majority going to the Hating.

Boosting vs. Knocking.

Just at the present moment this district is on the pivotal point of its existence, with gradual decadence on the one hand and immense opportunities on the other. The former conditions follows the working out of our placer mines and the latter is suggested by the great possibilities in quartz discoveries. Now here is a chance for the booster to offset the work of the knocker.

When a man comes to you with a quartz proposition give him the glad hand. Help him along. Don't knock. Your welfare may hinge on his prosperity. By the way, fortunes will be made in hard rock mining within the next few years. Why not get in on the ground floor? We believe in boosting, you see. In fact, every suit of clothes in our establishment is a boost for the others.

CELEBRATED JACK HORNER

Who Set in a Corner Eating a Christmas Pie

He Was a Noted Character and the Plum He Pulled Out Was a Title to Valuable Property.

Herbert Gladstone, the best known son of the famous statesman, has become engaged to the daughter of Sir Richard Horner Paget.

Few Americans are aware that the little Jack Horner of nursery fame, "who sat in a corner," was once a living historical personage.

The famous rhyme really celebrates the achievement of Mr. Horner in helping himself to a fine estate, while negotiating a "deal," without asking the consent of either of the other parties concerned.

The Horners are today people of position in their county, Somerset, and are so proud of their connection that every scion of the house is named Jack just as every member of Lord Nelson's family is named Horatio.

The founder of the house was steward to the Abbot of Glastonbury, and the pie he negotiated was a playful present to King Henry VIII under whose crust were the title deeds of twelve manors, and the plum he pulled out for himself was the title deed of the manor of Wells. Here is the story:

Of mixed Abbots, who sat in the house of lords before the reformation, two were heads of houses north of Trent, Selby and York, and two south of Trent, Reading and Glastonbury. Of the last-named Richard Whiting was about at the time of the dissolution, and as Henry VIII always seized the bull by the horns and "muzzled" the great people, it is no wonder that he singled out Whiting for an example of what would follow on refusal to take oath of supremacy.

By the king's orders the abbot was hanged, ripped up and quartered November 14, 1539; his body was mangled by the executioner, and his head and limbs were hung up on what is called the Jor, which overlooks the abbey. This everybody knows; how the abbot made unavailing attempts to save himself is not so well known.

Since 1535 the danger about the oath had been threatening, and Abbot Whiting seems to have taught his disciples that they might take the oath without injury to their consciences. Even an apostle was not above getting into a basket and being let down from the town wall in order to escape temporal persecution, so why should one be surprised that abbots and others of the sixteenth century did their best to save their lives and properties?

The history of Glastonbury is a good illustration of what two his torians said on the subject of his- tory. The Scottish youth, said: "No divine can speak the truth." Kingsley threw up the Cambridge prize, saying: "His- tory is a pack of lies." As the earlier history of Glastonbury was written by the cleric William of Malmesbury, it is not wonderful that legend over- took truth, and Freeman says that the chronicler compiled the history of the abbey from materials he did not believe himself.

Here we may dismiss the story of the foundation by Joseph of Arima- thea, of the burial of King Arthur, and come to a real piece of history which nobody has ever denied, that about the year 1535 the Abbot built a new kitchen, so large that its size reached the royal ears, for rumor said it was larger than the king's own. No doubt the king already had his eye upon ecclesiastical property, and Henry may have resented an abbot, whom he looked upon as a mere tenant holding the abbey during the royal pleasure—launching out into such ex- ceptive words upon the subject, who was reported to the abbot, who saw it would be worth his while to make his peace with the king if possible, and so hit upon one of those playful jests, common enough at the time of sending to the king a present of a home manors, the title deeds of which were concealed under the crust of a pie.

It being Christmas time was pointed to the joke. Such pres- ents were common in those days, and it may be remembered that the Eng-gers, the great German bankers, wish- ing to do the emperor Charles V a benefit, invited him to dinner, and burnt on the table in a fire of cinna- mon wood his bonds to the value of many thousand gulden.

The abbot's pie was entrusted to Mr. John Horner, the steward of Glastonbury, and he traveled to Lon- don in a wagon, for coaches had only been recently introduced, and even Wolsey did not possess one. Per- haps the steward was more of a man of the world than his master and knew that church property would soon be at the mercy of those who chose to take it. At all events, he is said to have abstracted from the pie the title deeds of the manor of Wells and presented the king with the rest. How far it availed to appease the royal greed or the royal displeasure has already been intimated. A darker deed does not occur in the annals of the English reformation than the murder of the able and high-minded Abbot Whiting, whose worst offense was that he defended as best he could from the hand of the spoiler the property of his charge.

Mr. John Horner returned to the abbey and told the abbot that the king had given him the title deeds of the manor in question. Either the abbot made no inquiries or else the bestowal of a valuable manor on a messenger who had brought so large a present seemed only a natural gift. We read in the past of rich benefices dropped into the laps of sleeping friars from a mere royal freak; we read how in those times the largest amount went to those who solicited the most, and that a certain mar- quis, being asked how he had con- trived to feather his nest so well, re- plied: "It rained piaces; others held out their hands, but I held out my hat." So there is nothing intrin- sically improbable in the gift having been made to the original Jack Horner, as his descendants assert to be the case. What the country people thought is shown in the popular rhyme:

Little Jack Horner, sat in a corner 'o' the wagon, Eying (not eating) his Christmas pie. He put in his thumb, And pulled out a plum (the title deed), Saying, "Wast a brave boy am I."

Sir Richard Horner Paget is a de- scendant (in the female line) of the original Jack, whose male descend- ants are settled close by him in Somersetshire.—Ex.

GREAT PROGRESS BEING MADE

Along the U. S. Telegraph Line on Lower Yukon.

Private McGowan and Private Spies are two members of the U. S. signal corps stationed at Fort Egbert. They arrived in the city on the Rock Island yesterday and are en route to Van- couver, Wash., where they have been ordered to report for duty. The former in conversation with a Nugget man gave considerable interesting infor- mation concerning the progress being made in the construction of the tele- graph line through Alaska.

From Valdez on the Pacific slope the line is completed and in operation for 200 miles and being pushed forward as rapidly as possible. Following the signal corps, which is engaged in the actual work of putting up the wire, is a corps of engineers. The latter is building a wagon road which will ul- timately connect Eagle with Valdez. All the creeks and rivers encountered are being bridged in a most solid and substantial manner. The supplies for the construction department are all being forwarded by wagons, the pack trains having been abandoned.

The line from Fort Egbert eastward is now up and finished for 90 miles, the last station to be established being on Bullion creek, a tributary of the Fortymile. There are 31 men employ- ed on the Egbert end of the line and it is the intention to remain at the work all winter, or until it is completed. The line when finished will be 425 miles long between terminals and those in charge are anticipating the con- nection will be made the latter part of March or the first of April. There remain but 125 miles yet to be con- structed, but it is through a rough mountainous country and progress will necessarily be very slow, particularly during the extreme cold weather.

The lower river line is completed from St. Michael to Fort Gibbon (Weare station), at the mouth of the Tanana, a distance of 800 miles. A gang of men has recently been put to work at Rampart, 85 miles above Fort Gibbon. From a short distance below Fort Yukon the line has not been def- initely located. Several preliminary surveys have been made but it is said none have been absolutely decided upon. It is positive however, that the Yukon flats will be avoided and Circle City will be side tracked, though connected with the main line by a spur. The route which will likely be adopted lies via Mosquito Forks from Fort Yukon to Eagle. Work on this division will also be kept up con- tinuously during the winter, if possible, and it is hoped to have it com- pleted at about the same time as that running from Eagle to Valdez.

Owing to the difficulty of keeping the cable from St. Michael to Nome in working order, due to the constant grinding of the ice for weeks at a time in spring and fall, the submarine route will, doubtless soon be abandoned. A party of surveyors is now in the field seeking the best route for an overland line and as soon as it has been decid- ed upon it will be erected. Next summer it will be possible for Dawson to talk with Valdez and Nome with as much ease as Vancouver or Skagway. The line to Nome will be 2000 miles long, approximately the same distance as Vancouver. From the latter point to New York is 3500 miles and by making the proper connections Nome can talk with the eastern metropolis 7500 miles away, nearly a third of the distance around the globe.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Report of Late Business Is Most Encouraging.

The 20th annual report of the Cana- dian Pacific railway, which has just been issued for the period of 18 months, ended June 30th, 1901, is considered by far the most encourag- ing statement of affairs ever issued. The immense system now embraces upwards of 10,333 miles. The con- densed balance sheet shows the assets of the company to amount to $291,518,571, the cost of railway and equipment being $225,353,616. The steamships, ocean, lake and river, are valued at $5,791,815.

The earnings for the twelve months ending June 30th were $30,855,203. For the last full year for which re- turns have been received ending with December, 1899, the gross earnings were $29,230,028.

The working expenses were in 1899, $16,999,872, and in the twelve months covered by this report, $18,745,828, leaving the net earnings $12,230,165 for 1899, and $12,109,376 for 1900-01. Like all other large systems the C. P. R. has felt the increase in the cost of wages, material, etc.; taking this into account and the partial failure of last year's wheat crop, the statement is most satisfactory. During the year the road carried 4,337,799 passengers, 7,155,813 tons of freight, the average passenger fare being 1.93 cents a mile (the charge per ton of freight 0.79 cents per mile).

The working expenses for the year amounted to 60.75 per cent of the gross earnings, and the net earnings to 39.25 per cent, as compared with 58.16 and 41.84 per cent respectively in 1899.

The report points out that in view of the rapidly increasing development of the Pacific trade and the desirability of securing as much as possible of that trade, the directors recommend that a suitable line of coasting steamers be provided by the company, and as the steamers and other property of the Canadian Pacific Navigation Com- pany, actively engaged in the business and with established trade relations could be secured on terms that ap- peared to be advantageous, it was deemed desirable to acquire the same at the expense of five hundred and thirty-one thousand dollars. Since the purchase was made, another has been added to the fleet at an ex- pense of one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars. Before next season it may be necessary to provide one more steamer for the northern or Yu- kon trade, and one for the route be- tween Vancouver and Victoria.

The growth of the company's traffic on the Pacific ocean suggests the im- portance of providing at an early date an additional steamship, somewhat larger and faster than the present Pacific steamship company.

In order to provide for these ex- penditures, the shareholders will be asked to authorize the issue of steamship bonds to the amount of four hundred and eighty thousand pounds (£480,000) sterling.

The report concludes by expressing much regret at the death of Hon. D. A. MacInnes, one of the board.

Preparing for Winter.

Mr. F. J. Kalles returned to Daw- son Thursday from a several weeks' trip over Dominion, Hunker, Last Chance and other creeks in the district. Mr. Kalles and associates are opening some hillside claims on right limit of Last Chance opposite and 7 creek claims. They are find- ing very favorable prospects and are in hopes of striking good pay as they go farther in. Several days ago the shaft in which they were working caved in and it required some time before the repairs could be made and the work continued.

Mr. Kalles expects to return to the claim in the early part of next week and get the winter's supply of wood ready before cold weather sets in.

WAS AFTER M'KINLEY

A Crank Attempted to Enter His Carriage in Arizona.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 7.—An at- tempt on the life of President McKin- ley in Phoenix May 7th while the presidential party was on its western tour has just been made known to the public. The press did not give pub- licity to the incident at the time owing to an effort on the part of the police to locate the would-be assassin.

Mr. McKinley rode with Governor Murphy in the carriage surrounded by an escort of rough riders. As the pro- cession proceeded along Washington street a man sprang from the dense moving throng and attempted to climb into the president's carriage. He had one hand on the back of the seat and one foot on the carriage step. Several rough riders discovered that he was armed and seizing him as he drew him- self up and before he could make a movement tossed him back. He was swallowed up in the crowd that was gazing intently at the distinguished occupant of the carriage and few per- sons witnessed the incident. The president himself didn't see it. The rough riders attempted to recapture him, but he escaped among the thou- sand who thronged the sidewalks.

Extra precautions were thrown about the president and although he mingled freely with the people during his trip through the territory, walking among miners and laboring men, he was not exposed during the balance of the day in Phoenix and shook the hands of but a few of the selected guests at the capitol building. The man who the police strongly believe attempted the president's life was of medium size and a stranger here. He is said to have preceded the president to Phen- ix but two days.

Nome's Short Season.

Nome's open season is already nearly at end. This is the report brought to Seattle by the steamship Centennial, which has just arrived from the north. Purser McDonald, of the Centennial, states that the ice is forming each night in low places, and that frost lies along the creeks.

"The indications," said Mr. Mc- Donald, "point to the fact that Nome is to have an early winter following the late spring. Cold weather is coming on before the Centennial reached Bering Sea. Gold is now beginning to come in at Nome at a good rate, and all indica- tions are that the next ships returning to port from Nome will have large amounts of treasure. The Centennial brought $250,000 in the care of Purser McDonald. Of this $55,000 belongs to the Wild Goose Mining Company, and is consigned to the Scandinavian-Am- erican bank of this city. The North- west Commercial Company also sent down a large consignment. By far the greater portion of the quarter of a million, however, was contained in in- dividual pockets, the contents of which ran from $50 to $5000.

Gold is coming into Nome from Tel- ler and from Gold Run. A peculiar feature about the latter is the fact that the large amount of claim jumping and disputes during the early part of the season caused caution on the part of many claim owners, and these said nothing of the richness of their property. Now however this richness is beginning to manifest itself in the season's yield.

Capt. Conrad, of the Centennial, re- ports that on the voyage to Nome he picked up the second mate and six of the crew of the schooner James Sennett, of San Francisco. The Sennett went ashore on Unimak island August 7. Her crew was picked up August 21. During their stay on the island they had plenty of provisions, and even lived for a large portion of the time a board the wrecked schooner. They were brought from Nome to Seattle.—Alas- kan.

THE RECEPTION LAST NIGHT

Tendered to Rev. Dr. Grant and His Wife

Fine Program Was Rendered and a Splendid Time Enjoyed by All Who Attended.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian church was filled to overflowing last evening by the members and friends of the church, who had assembled to extend a welcome to the returning pastor, Dr. Grant, and his family. The building was tastefully decorated and the effect was brightened by the soft light cast by numerous Japanese lanterns which had been placed over the incandescent lamps.

Mr. Milne had been selected as chairman of the evening, and at 9:15 he called the assembly to order and announced that a short program would be rendered. The chairman himself then addressed the pastor and in words, well adapted to the circumstances, expressed his own and the feelings of the congregation toward Dr. Grant. He referred to the marked individuality of the pastor as his most admirable characteristic.

Dr. Grant is a broad minded man who has his own opinion of matters, but who is willing to give allowance to the views of others, and this trait in the doctor's character the speaker thought especially commendable. Mr. Milne welcomed Dr. Grant back to the scene of his labors and also extended the cordial greetings of the congregation to the pastor's wife. His remarks were frequently interrupted by hearty applause.

Dr. Grant replied briefly to the speech of welcome. He thanked the chairman for his words and assured the audience of his own, and his wife's deep appreciation of the reception they have been given. He believes that Dawson offers opportunity for hard work in the various lines of church activity, and he has returned prepared to jump immediately into the harness.

Rev. Hetherington of the Methodist church was called upon and spoke of the pleasant relations existing between the two organizations, and expressed the hope that they would continue to work together for the good of the entire community.

Other features of the program were as follows: Organ Solo—Mr. Searelle. Vocal Solo—Mrs. Devig. Recitation—Little Mary McDonald. Solo—Mrs. Boyes. Recitation—Mrs. Moore. Solo—Mr. McPherson. Solo—Mr. Miller.

The two little Schramm children were present and delighted the audience with an exhibition of their marvelous talent on the piano. Miss Paloma in response to repeated encores improvised most beautifully from a theme presented by Mr. Searelle. The talent possessed by both children is considered something remarkable by all who have heard them.

After the program dainty refreshments were served by the ladies of the church, who exerted themselves throughout the evening to make the occasion a pleasant one for all who attended.

CALDERHEAD'S PROSPERITY

Is Enlarging Business of Which He Is Sole Owner.

One of the greatest improvements on the Dawson waterfront this season is now under way and almost completed. It is a big wharf in the rear of R. W. Calderhead's big warehouse, the new structure being fifty feet wide and extending back over the river sixty feet. It is most substantially constructed, and when completed will be the finest wharf in Dawson. By next season Mr. Calderhead expects to enclose the entire structure, thus affording sheltered storage for several hundred tons of freight in addition to what can now be accommodated in the main warehouse.

Mr. Calderhead is now sole proprietor of the entire business formerly operated under the firm name of Lancaster & Calderhead, he having this week purchased from P. I. Lancaster all the Lancaster interests in the partnership business. Mr. Calderhead has always had the entire management of the business, and to his shrewdness and far-seeing business traits is due the eminent success that has attended the operation of the three steamers—Flora, Nora and Ora—both this season and last. Besides operating the

THE CHESTO-CHINA DISTRICT

Is Reported Rich by Late Arrival in Dawson.

J. P. Anderson Returns After Spending the Season in That Country—A Bear Story.

Mr. J. P. Anderson, a well known mining man of this district, returned last Saturday from an extensive and extended prospecting trip to the Chesto-China district. Since his return to Dawson Mr. Anderson has been stampeding, and it was not until two months ago that he was known to have returned to Dawson. He was accompanied by a representative of the district, and he was known to have returned to Dawson. He was accompanied by a representative of the district, and he was known to have returned to Dawson.

The advantages of the telegraph line on the lower river is appreciated by none so much as the transportation companies. The Rock Island brought a wire from St. Michael which overtook them at Kaltog, 40 miles below Nulato, five days out of port, informing Captain Grey of important matters which he otherwise would not have known of until a month later.

The Victorian is the next boat due from Whitehorse and should arrive Sunday afternoon. The Ona arrived at 6 o'clock Thursday night with 16 passengers and three scows loaded with 1000 sheep for Pro-man. She returned up river yesterday afternoon.

The Prospector returned from Stewart river, points Thursday night and left for Whitehorse last evening at 8 o'clock. The steamer Lightning will leave early this evening for Eagle and will probably be the last steamer for down river points. She goes no further than Eagle and will tow a barge of Cliff Creek coal up on her return.

Captain Grey has received definite word that the T. C. Power will make another trip up this season. Excepting possibly the Tyrrell and J. P. Light, of the Sullivan fleet, the Powers will be the last boat to leave St. Michael for Dawson this year.

The steamer Sarah was dispatched yesterday to the assistance of the Will H. Isom, which is struggling up the river with three barges heavily laden. The swift water at Twelve-mile bar proved too much for the Isom and her tows, and first the Susie was sent to her assistance and now the force has been still further increased. The bar is twelve miles below Circle and has never been considered any serious impediment to navigation. There is plenty of water, but a contraction in the channel makes the current somewhat stiffer than ordinary.

The Sarah was preparing to go into winter quarters and had discharged her crew, the new move necessitating the hiring of a new force. With both the Susie and Sarah to render help it is thought no further difficulties will be experienced. The May West pulled out for White Horse early in the week, where she will go into winter quarters. At the opening of navigation next spring she will make a trip to the Koyukuk.

VARIOUS OFFENCES

Brought Forth Fines in Police Court Today.

Messrs. Fenn and Tomlinson of the Canadian Yukon Lumber Co. were this morning bound over to the territorial court by Magistrate McCaulay on the charge of disposing of the crown timber agent.

Thos. Blalock, an employee of the Klondike Mill Co., was fined $10 and costs for assaulting Joe Harding, another employee of the same firm. The assault was committed, according to the testimony, by Blalock, who did not think Harding was earning his salary. He remonstrated with Harding and received the reply to attend to his own affairs, upon which he became exasperated and struck Harding a blow on the head which knocked him out. The magistrate stated that he did not have any provocation to strike Harding, and for taking the law into his own hands instead of putting his case into proper hands he would impose the fine above stated.

Mr. G. Brimstone, of the firm of Brimstone & Stewart, was fined $10 and costs for having a structure in his yard with a covering of tar paper, which was in violation of the fire protection ordinance. Mr. G. C. Angelo was fined $10 and costs for allowing an accumulation of garbage and filth on his premises.

Send a copy of Goetzman's Souvenir to your outside friends. A complete pictorial history of the Klondike. For sale at all news stands. Price $2.50. Kodak $2.50; fresh films 50c. Goetzman.

Sheriff Eilbrek has secured a lease of absence and will leave next week on a vacation to the outside. He will visit his old home in Kingston and spend some time in New York and other eastern cities, returning to Dawson over the ice in January. During his absence the office will be in charge of Deputy Sheriff "Jack" Eilbrek.

PROMISING LITTLE LAD

Is Prince Edward, Second From Britain's Throne.

How his little Prince Edward been getting on this summer while the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York have been travelling around the empire? asks the London Mail.

Their Majesties have faithfully kept the promise which they made to the Royal tourists before the sailing of the Ophir, when they said, "We will take care of the children." During the last four months the three princelings and their sister have never been for a single day beyond the immediate reach of the King or Queen. One fifth of the time has been spent by them at Windsor, and the remainder has been divided equally between Sandringham and London.

Despite the quietude of the court, Prince Edward's days are full of boyish zests and pleasures. Such simple studies as are allotted to him are studied in the morning hours, and he has not yet learned the meaning of evening "prep." His scheme of study was devised by his cultivated mother, and he has wisely insisted upon her return to the old system. Indeed, the duties in the Royal Household are said to feel most keenly during her absence abroad is the interruption in her self-imposed responsibility of supervising the mental and moral impressions formed from day to day by her first born child. No serious curriculum of private study will be laid down for the Prince until after her return.

But all this time David—to use his home name—is absorbing princely experience under the best conditions. True, he does not appear at the Royal luncheon table, and is, of course, absent when the court is dining. Prince Victoria, however, so far as her health has permitted, and often the Queen as well, have visited the nursery during the tea hour, and have done their utmost to charm away the dullness of the little inmates' must sometimes feel at the thought that "mamma" is away.

Prince Edward, it may be interesting to recall, is exactly twice as old as his father was when he also in his earliest boyhood was deprived of six months of the personal care and love of his parents while they were travelling in Egypt and the Holy Land. He is old enough to understand something of the meaning of the empire, and is following the course of the Ophir from day to day with the aid of maps and photographs of England's colonies. It is known that at the successive places of call the Royal tourists have been collecting curious mementos for the delight of their little ones, but these they will not receive until the end of the voyage.

It is said, however, that with their own hands the Royal children have made little keepsakes to be sent out to their parents, such as the little watercolor sketch of a supple flower, scribbled "For darling papa from David," which now hangs upon the wall of the Duke's private cabin.

Indeed, this promising prince is giving proof of having inherited the manual skill that marks Queen Victoria's descendants. At Sandringham he has been working designs in colored wools under the practised eye of "Auntie," is very proud of a medal awarded to him as the youngest student on the estate. A morning never passes, too, without a turn in the garden, sometimes with the proud grandchild companion of "Grandmamma," but usually in a Norfolk cart, or astride a tiny pony led by a governess or a groom. When in town the grounds of Buckingham Palace have occasionally been chosen for this exercise, which is sometimes made to fit in conveniently with the changing of the guard at St. James's Palace, a spectacle that the Royal children are never tired of watching.

Prince Edward has had no part in the court pageants of the last few months. His life is a very simple one, and his greatest excitement has come from his riding and driving lessons. He already sits his charger with an easy aplomb that even his father might envy, and at Whitson-

The Sarah was preparing to go into winter quarters and had discharged her crew, the new move necessitating the hiring of a new force. With both the Susie and Sarah to render help it is thought no further difficulties will be experienced. The May West pulled out for White Horse early in the week, where she will go into winter quarters. At the opening of navigation next spring she will make a trip to the Koyukuk.

Messrs. Fenn and Tomlinson of the Canadian Yukon Lumber Co. were this morning bound over to the territorial court by Magistrate McCaulay on the charge of disposing of the crown timber agent.

Thos. Blalock, an employee of the Klondike Mill Co., was fined $10 and costs for assaulting Joe Harding, another employee of the same firm. The assault was committed, according to the testimony, by Blalock, who did not think Harding was earning his salary. He remonstrated with Harding and received the reply to attend to his own affairs, upon which he became exasperated and struck Harding a blow on the head which knocked him out. The magistrate stated that he did not have any provocation to strike Harding, and for taking the law into his own hands instead of putting his case into proper hands he would impose the fine above stated.

Mr. G. Brimstone, of the firm of Brimstone & Stewart, was fined $10 and costs for having a structure in his yard with a covering of tar paper, which was in violation of the fire protection ordinance. Mr. G. C. Angelo was fined $10 and costs for allowing an accumulation of garbage and filth on his premises.

Sheriff Eilbrek has secured a lease of absence and will leave next week on a vacation to the outside. He will visit his old home in Kingston and spend some time in New York and other eastern cities, returning to Dawson over the ice in January. During his absence the office will be in charge of Deputy Sheriff "Jack" Eilbrek.

ROOSEVELT AS PRESIDENT

Must Follow Along the Lines Suggested by McKinley.

Mr. Roosevelt's responsibility is great. And it is not to be believed that he will prove unworthy of it. Since the nation's great misfortune results in his assuming the duties of President, Mr. Roosevelt's task becomes clear and distinct. To follow strictly, loyally, the route marked out by Mr. McKinley. Mr. Roosevelt, as president, comes responsible to the people for the fulfillment of Mr. McKinley's outline of American duty. That last speech, admirable in its simplicity, humanity and patriotism, gives to Mr. Roosevelt his own charter and guide. Hatred of conflict. "Our real eminence rests in the victories of peace, not those of war." Thus Mr. McKinley expressed at Luau, just before he was shot, his views of public duty and of public policy.

He asked the nation for more ships, "messengers of peace and amity wherever they go." He asked for the construction of the Isthmian canal—"the construction of a Pacific cable." All his thoughts were thoughts of friendly relations of peace, decency and national comfort and prosperity.

In the very last words of his official utterance he gives to Mr. Roosevelt the keynote of American progress and full directions as to what Americans will expect of their President. "Happiness and peace to all our neighbors and like blessing to all the peoples and powers of the earth." Since Mr. McKinley's words, in spite of the hopes and prayers of the nation, resulted fatally, Theodore Roosevelt will serve for three years as President of the United States. He will remember that the choice of the American people for President was not Roosevelt, but McKinley. He will realize that Mr. McKinley elected by the people's votes, had the right to express the public will in his official position the lines of national effort outlined by Mr. McKinley in his last speech.

Many men and many newspapers including this newspaper have followed with Mr. Roosevelt on public matters and on personal matters. But no one doubts Mr. Roosevelt's desire to do his duty as he sees it. No one will question his willingness to subordinate his own personality, his own ambition, to his manifest duty, now that he is called to the presidential chair.

That duty is to realize Mr. McKinley's hopes and plans as expressed in his last speech to the American people. It need not be said of all those who mourn Mr. McKinley's death that no more sincere than Theodore Roosevelt. It need not be said that he earnestly than Mr. Roosevelt for the President's recovery. It need not be feared that Mr. Roosevelt will prove unworthy of the explicit duty of carrying out President McKinley's plans—N. Y. Journal.

Going Outside. Tim McElroy, the merchant, bath-house proprietor and manager of Magnet City, has decided to establish and go outside for winter, returning with the opening navigation next season.

Rae Eldridge, a serio comic recently employed at one of the variety theatres, came near "cashing in" last night for the last time. She is stopping at the Seattle hotel, and coming in shortly after midnight somewhat the worse for wear made a mistake in the amount of morphine which is usually considered a respectable shot, with the result that her life was in danger for a short time. As soon as discovered by some of her companions a physician was hastily summoned who, by means of a stomach pump, succeeded in straightening matters out. It was first reported to have been an attempted suicide, but it later developed that it was simply a case of jag accompanied by a too free use of the white powder.
