The Wonder-Working Christmas Spirit

This mysterious force called "Christmas Spirit" gets into our bones every year, in spite of the fact that about a month before Christmas you mentally resolve to "cut out giving any presents this year."

Yes, sir, you solemnly declare that anyone who gets a Christmas present from you will have to give an anesthetic and extract it by the vacuum process. It's all a farce and you're not going to make a fool of yourself by throwing away a chunk of your bank account to give somebody something they don't want or shouldn't have. Certainly not! That's what you resolve, but here's what really happens.

Along about the first week in December something bites you. You begin to get an uneasy feeling and think maybe you could manage to loosen up for a doll or book for some of the youngsters. Finally you give in and decide to get a doll, a book, a couple of toys and a few greeting cards, but that's all. Then you feel better in mind and things go along smoothly for a week or so.

Along about that time you get restless again. There now sets in a rapid rise in the temperature of your Christmas spirit. You see Christmas signs everywhere. Every paper you pick up has something to say about Christmas and Christmas-giving. You feel yourself slipping. Then a few days before Christmas you rush out to the stores in search of the doll, book and toys you were going to buy. You get them; but on the next counter you see something that another little girl you know would like, and across the aisle is a little toy engine your nephew would throw a fit over.

One thing leads to another. You throw all your previous resolves to the winds and plunge in to buying Victrolas, cut glass, silver platters and sealskin coats. Christmas eve finds you without a cent left in your pockets and charge accounts piled up at all of the best stores in town.

The same thing happens every year. There's something mysterious about the "Christmas Spirit" that always makes you want to be an amateur Santa Claus.

Oh, well, even if you do put a lot of money into circulation around Christmas-time, it's money well spent. The pleasure of giving is hard to beat. But most precious of all gifts is the gift of Love, for love makes all other things possible. Love of parents for their children and of children for their parents; love of husband and wife; love of youth for maiden and love of friend for friend.

The whole institution of Christmas puts a man into a better frame of mind. Makes him a little better and broader all around and makes this world a little better place to live in. Therefore, let us all be thankful for Christmas.

In contradiction of a statement made yesterday R. Smith, reeve of Waterdown, stated this morning that he voted against the memorial to the government asking it to enact legislation making it necessary for municipalities to have an assessment of $350,000 before becoming eligible for representation in the county council—Hamilton Herald.

After all—Batchelor's Drug Store is the best place to shop.

The Review $2

After January 1st, 1921, the subscription price of the Review will be $2 a year, and $2.50 on papers to the United States. Newspaper publishers have for some time been face to face with rapidly advancing prices of everything which goes into the make-up of a newspaper. Print paper which in pre-war times cost two or three cents a pound, now is thirteen cents, and other items more than doubled. For these reasons the Review, along with all other weekly papers, has found it imperative to advance the subscription price.

As an appreciation for past favors, and that all our subscribers may be treated equal, we will allow renewals for the next 30 days at the old rate. This applies only to those now on our subscription list. After Jan. 1st the Review will be $2 a year to all new subscribers.

The New School

The end of the present school term witnesses the closing of the old Public school building. At the commencement of next term in January the kiddies will be safely housed in a thoroughly up to date school building, modern in every way.

It seems sad to have to leave the old building which has done duty for upwards of seventy odd years. But this is a progressive age, and Waterdown and East Flamboro must not be behind the times.

The new school building is considered by many, the most thoroughly up to date in the province, and is a credit to the contractors and School Board. We understand that the school will be formally opened after the new year, and on that occasion we will have the honor of having with us the Honorable Minister of Education and other prominent persons. The school children are preparing a choice program for that day.

Corn Club Propaganda

Batchelor Members Disappointed with Leap Year Results

The question is oftentimes asked why it is that so many spinsters are taking such a lively interest in matrimonial affairs. It is said that daily they scan the want columns of the city papers in quest of an add for a husband or wife; some lonely individual tired of single blessedness and desirous of changing their earthly estate for one of misery and woe.

We cannot understand why this marked change on the part of our lovely spinsters should take place in such a short space of time. The whole thing seems clouded in mystery. To our mind there is only one reasonable solution to this vexed question. That our elder sisters are extremely jealous of their younger ones and are trying to "put one over" on them. One elderly lady has actually picked out a $10,000 beauty for one of our batchelors, who she avers will make him an ideal wife. Can it be that our friend is getting a rake off for completing the deal, which she claims will make two hearts beat as one. If she should manage to rake in a ten spot, we hope that she will donate at least 50% of it to some charitable institute, say the Corn Club, to be distributed among disabled members, most of whom are in good standing, but poor and deserving.

Morden-Moore Wedding

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moore, Campbellville, was the scene of a very happy event on Saturday December 11th last, when their youngest daughter, Jessie, was united in marriage to Mr. R. Clare Morden, of Freulton. The ceremony took place in the drawing room which was prettily decorated with flowers and plants. The Rev. Mr. Strachan officiating. Guests were present from Waterdown, Guelph, Toronto, Campbellville and Brantford.

The bride looked lovely in a traveling suit of blue cloth with hat to match, and wore a handsome diamond bar pin, the gift of the groom. The young couple were unattended.

After the ceremony an adjournment was made to the dining room where a wedding supper was served. The toast to the bride proposed by the Rev. Mr. Strachan was happily replied to by the groom. Short speeches were made by guests present all of whom had many highly complimentary things to say about the young couple. The bride's sister, Miss Annie, played the wedding march.

The young couple are well and favorably known in these parts, and have a host of friends who will wish them many happy years of married life.

CURRENT COMMENT

PROVINCIAL POWER MONOPOLY.

After prolonged negotiations Sir Adam Beck has at last been able to secure what is described as a clean up of the provincial power situation at Niagara. The price paid in the transaction, which will undoubtedly be ratified by the people is $22,724,000 and includes the Electrical Development Plant at Niagara Falls, generating 125,000 h. p. nominal, but with greater potentialities, the transmission lines to Toronto; the Toronto Electric Light Co. with a steam-power auxiliary; and three radial railways, running north, east and west from Toronto. The government has approved and will validate the agreement. The provincial municipalities will vote on the question of taking over the radials outside Toronto city limits, and these will be included in the proposed radial railways, on which, apparently the government looks more approvingly than when the Radial Commission was appointed. The Ontario Commission will have 1,000,000 h. p. to dispose of and will need radial lines to feed the power out to the farmers economically. Power alone or radials alone can accomplish nothing like what they can do in combination. The Toronto World is the only organ that has continuously sought for the consummation now attained. Horatio Hocken, M.P., when Mayor of Toronto, tried to purchase the radials, the street railway and the electric light plant for $30,000,000, but the case was so misrepresented that the bargain was rejected. In the meantime the citizens have suffered no end of inconvenience and have now to pay $10,186,295 for the Electric Light Co. and the radials which were offered for $8,000,000 eight years ago. The value of materials has of course greatly appreciated, but this operates on the street railway plant also, so that the city must get the railway considerably under $20,000,000 to equal the figure of eight years ago. For the province the purchase is one of incalculable value. Sir Adam Beck says that Ontario now has the greatest power system in the world. In the absence of coal this is marvellously opportune.

VICTORY BOND VALUES.

With the release of control over Victory Bonds by the government a good idea has been obtainable of the intrinsic strength of this security. A great many people unfamiliar with the operations of the stock market got the idea that the government had ceased to back the bonds and that they had better sell what they had before they fell like other stocks. A good many sales were the result of this lack of knowledge, but the offerings were quickly absorbed and a few days served to stabilize the market. It is well to repeat once more for the benefit of amateurs in finance that no matter what price may be quoted for the bonds on the market they are good for their face value when due and will be redeemed by the government at that value when presented at the proper time, and all interest will be paid when due. The difference in value between the face value and the price offered for immediate sale is simply the value of the accommodation of ready money to the man who sells his bonds. Everybody has to pay for ready money, even the government itself. Those who buy Victory bonds in the open market now at the reduced price will receive the full face value from the government when the bonds mature. The 1922 bond, for instance, selling say at 96%, will be worth $100 in 1922. For those who have them Victory bonds are good to keep.

BRINGING HYDRO INTO POLITICS.

A recommendation by a committee to study the question of Hydro rates that a minister of power be appointed is the revival of an idea which has been turned down repeatedly, and the adoption of which would be fatal to the Hydro-Electric organization. Sir Adam Beck, who has made many and great sacrifices for publicly owned and transmitted power in Ontario has regarded the success of the Hydro plans as dependent on keeping the whole system out of politics. He declined to be minister of power under Premier Whitney, and resigned from the cabinet under Premier Hearst. The Liberal party as well as the Conservative party also desired to bring the Hydro movement into politics, and the enlargement of the Commission and the appointment of a Liberal member was requested. Now a committee of the Farmer-Labor government makes a similar request, asking definitely for a minister of power. Such a minister would undoubtedly be of the politics of the party in power, and would unquestionably look upon the Hydro system as a legitimate field for the exercise of his influence in the distribution of patronage. There are many ways of destroying the Hydro system, but this is probably the most effective one. The failure of public ownership is confidently predicted by those who see in political control an inevitable source of weakness. The success of the post office has been explained by the fact that everywhere it has been kept out of politics. In the United States poor service in recent years has been attributed to the political interference of Burleson. Supporters of Hydro in Ontario declare that its non-political character is an essential of success, and the recommendation of the committee is regarded as but another attack upon the integrity of the system.

ADVERSE BALANCE OF TRADE DISCLOSED

Unless unforeseen circumstances arise, Canada's total trade for the present year will show a record. But, at the same time, and for the first occasion since the outbreak of war, there will be an adverse balance. Returns issued by the Bureau of Statistics give exports and imports for the 12 months ending October 31 as compared with the corresponding 12 months of the previous year. For the two periods, total trade is:

Twelve months ending October 31, 1919:
Imports, merchandise...	$962,569,438
Exports (both domestic and foreign) merchandise...	1,262,651,965
Total trade...	$2,164,411,396
Twelve months ending October 31, 1920:
Imports, merchandise...	$1,339,639,464
Exports (both domestic and foreign) merchandise...	$2,693,423,987

On these returns, the balance of trade works out as follows (the periods being the same):

1919 (favorable)...	$309,692,520
1920 (unfavorable)...	76,864,921

Imports and exports by countries present some remarkable comparisons. In spite of the depreciated value of the Canadian dollar in New York and the consequent increase cost of American goods for the Canadian purchaser, imports from the United States are increasing. Exports from Canada to the United States, too, have increased but not at the same rate. Thus, comparing the two 12 months' periods, the adverse trade balance is higher. For the 12 months ending October 31, 1920, imports from the United States were $924,000,000, exports to the United States $530,000,000 or an unfavorable trade balance of $394,000,000. For the corresponding 12 months of the previous year, imports from the United States were $715,000,000, exports to the United States $439,000,000, leaving an adverse balance of $276,000,000.

Increase in British Exports.

Trade with the United Kingdom has recently had singular developments. Cessation of munition work in Canada is, of course, responsible for very heavy post-war reductions in the volume of Canadian exports to Great Britain. The remarkable feature lies rather in the extraordinary increase in imports into Canada from the United Kingdom. Comparing against the October to October periods, imports from the United Kingdom have risen from $81,000,000 in 1919 to $226,000,000 in 1920. During the same period, Canadian exports to the United Kingdom have dropped from $524,000,000 to $364,000,000. The balance of trade is still favorable to Canada, but it is now $138,000,000, whereas, twelve months ago, it was $443,000,000.

During the same period, imports from France have increased from five millions to 23 millions; exports to France have decreased from 66 millions to 43 millions. Imports from the British West Indies have increased from 16 millions to 16 millions; exports to the British West Indies, from 10 to 12 millions. Trade with Belgium is picking up. Imports from Belgium have risen from 47 thousand to three and three-quarter millions. Exports from Canada to Belgium have increased from eight to 41 millions.

THE ROUND TABLE

I suppose it is because they call me a book-worm; because, when I was a youngster I always "had my head in a book" and have never seemed able to outgrow the fascinating malady—that I think books make the best gifts of all.

There is not a child anywhere who is not the better for being taught early to reverence books. There is not a child who does not naturally take them and find the keenest delight in good pictures and clever stories. And there is such a wealth to choose from. Pass over the highly colored, slap-stick, comics—these are not books—and choose instead the picture book or story book that loving thought has made beautiful for your little ones to see and memorize.

If I could only give one story book to my little family, I think it would have to be one of John Martin's Annuals. This year's book will be number four and any bookseller will get it for you. Then there are the Strang Annuals and the Thornton Burgess books and Fairy stories and Bible stories and Annual stories in splendid array. You will have no difficulty in making a selection; but you can always send me a list and a post office order, giving me an idea who the book is for and what price you want to pay and I shall gladly get the books at the publishers and send them on to you.

I shall mention a few of the outstanding books of the season, giving you a brief resume of the story and telling you where you may send for copies. There are two Canadian books for the young people that deserve attention. One is "The Enchanted Garden" by Doctor Gordon, Professor of Old Testament Literature, McGill University. This collection of stories from Genesis is spoken of in glowing terms by those who realize how important it is to get the right kind of biblical stories for children. The stories are wonderfully told and full of dramatic interest that holds not only the boy and girl but the adult as well.

The author says in his preface: "There is no book in the Bible more fascinating than Genesis. It charms us in our childhood, and it keeps its spell to the end. For it is not only full of the enchanted poetry of the East, it is a shining mirror of life in every age and under every sky. As we follow these tales, we seem to be reading the story of our own souls."

"The Girls of Miss Cleveland's" is a story of Canadian girls at a Toronto school, written by a Canadian girl, Beatrice Embree, who as a pupil and then a teacher in such a school, knows exactly what she is talking about. It is the story of the pranks and good times, joys and sorrows of life in a boarding school and is just what girls love to read about.

States neighbors, deliberately set out upon a tour of investigation through the Eastern States. He wanted to find out the plain American opinion of the plain American business man and farmer. He hoped to find the chance comments of business conversation more enlightening than any formal interview.

He found out a great many things, which he sets down in his own popular way and makes interesting by his own observations, gained first and broadened later by his life on a Canadian farm—that perfect home, rich in never-fading fountains of delight and inspiration.

"Bulldog Drummond" by Cyril McNeill. Except for his Piccadilly accent, Bulldog Drummond would be a composite portrait of Diamond Dick and Young King Brady. He is strong as an ox, shrewd to kill, and is an exponent of Jiu Jitsu. Of course, he needs all these qualities to gain the heroine, who is a combination of all the virtues of all the heroines of Laura Jean Libbey. The climax of the volume is a battle between the hero and the villain, man to man, on the edge of a poison bath.

"The Conquering Hero," by J. Murray Gibbon. "What a pity that so good a story should be handicapped by such a title. A cut on both 'jacket' and binding of a very wooden and conventional cowboy, gazing off into the Rocky Mountain peaks, labels the story further, for it is neither wooden nor conventional. Although Mr. Gibbon has chosen for his scene the Canadian Rockies, this is far from being the ordinary Western story. It has little sensationalism. The characters are fresh and lovably human, the dialogue natural and amusing. Altogether a very light, refreshing cooling affair is "The Conquering Hero."

"Paradise Bend," by William Patterson White, is a thriller for the reader who likes the Western story where the surest shot is the most respected citizen; and where law and order is enforced by self-appointed sheriffs. The same characters are introduced—the dauntless young cowboy hero, the dark-haired, flashing-eyed daughter of the old ranch owner, the comedy cook, cowboy "supers" who say "shore" and "yuh" and "gal" and "fella." The usual properties, too, are dragged forth from the store-room in the shape of lariats, branding irons, and six-shooters. As a consequence, "Western atmosphere" is served up lavishly.

"The Autobiography of Andrew Carnegie." A truly great and permanent contribution to American literature. Mr. Carnegie's story of his upward fight from messenger boy to steel king will be an inspiration to every youth of ambition; his account of business experiences, and particularly of the formation of the steel trust, will make absorbing reading for every business man; and his wise and far-seeing comments on such subjects as the relation of capital and labor will illuminate the problems of today for every forward-looking reader. The Boston Transcript calls it "one of the four greatest biographies in American literature."

"The Drums of Jeopardy," by Har-

year. It is just one romantic mystery after another and works up to a splendid climax. Kitty Conover, beautiful and Irish, gives food to a starving man who appears at the window of her apartment and thereupon embarks upon a flood of international intrigue. There is one disappointment in the story. Perhaps I should not speak of it, but it struck me very forcibly.

"Cutty," newspaper correspondent and secret service man is not the hero of the story, but the reader wants to make him one, and the fact that Cutty always falls just short of happiness gives a tinge of sadness to a perfect story.

"The Man With the Lamp," by Janet Leing. This book deserves much more than passing mention and I hope it may be reviewed at length and much discussed in this department. It is just as well written as Miss Leing's "Before the Wind," but it is broader and bigger in every way.

Martin Ascher is a German who loves his country, but hates its policy. He had been educated in England and was very much English in inclination. The story deals with his problem in the year 1918, as it is worked out near Rathness which looks out upon the North Sea.

It makes a gripping story which will be appreciated by those who read good prose.

"The Mysterious Affair at Styles," by Agatha Christie, is a detective story that is exceedingly interesting and baffling. Mrs. Inglethorp, an energetic and capable English matron, is found poisoned. There are five people who would profit by her death and suspicion points at different times to every one of them. An ingenious little Belgian who had been befriended by the victim, solves the mystery in masterly fashion.

"Hidden Creek," by Katharine Newlin Burt, is a Western novel brimful of stirring adventure. Sheila Arundel, dreamy daughter of an unsuccessful artist, goes west to enter the astounding profession of "barmaid" in a tavern in the Rockies. She is forced to give up this precarious method of earning a living and goes into the mountains with a woman rancher who turns out to be a demon. Often happiness seems just within our heroine's reach to be snatched away again. Events move rapidly and thrillingly to a dramatic climax. It is a good story, strongly written, a worthy follower of Mrs. Burt's first success, "The Branding Iron."

"The Enchanted Garden," by Alexander Gordon D. Litt, D.D. Published by McClelland & Stewart, Toronto. $1.50.

"The Girls of Miss Cleveland's," by Beatrice Embree. Published by The Museum Book Company, Toronto. $1.50.

"The Affable Stranger," by Peter McArthur. Published by Thomas Allen, Toronto. $1.65.

"Bulldog Drummond," by Cyril McNeill (Sapper). Published by Hodder & Stoughton. $1.75.

"The Conquering Hero," by J. Murray Gibbon. Published by S. B. Gundy. $1.60.

"Paradise Bend," by William Patterson White. Published by S. B. Gundy, Toronto. $1.90.

"The Autobiography of Andrew Carnegie." Published by Thomas Allen. Price $5.

"The Drama of Jeopardy," by Harold Macgrath. Published by S. B. Gundy. $1.90.

"The Man With the Lamp," by Janet Leing. Published in Canada by J. M. Dent & Sons.

"The Mysterious Affair at Styles," by Agatha Christie. Published by the Ryerson Press, Toronto. Price $2.00.

"Hidden Creek," by Katharine Newlin Burt. Published by Thomas Allen. $2.25.

HOW TALL BUILDINGS CAUSE WINDS.

How you may learn many interesting things about air currents and the way storms develop by watching the movement of pieces of paper, or perhaps your hat, as it is whirled about the street is explained by a writer in Boys' Life.

A variety of miniature wind storms are developed by the high buildings of our cities or the towers of streets, which well repay careful study. On a hot day even when the air is perfectly quiet the atmosphere, as it becomes heated tends to rise against the sides of rocks or buildings, and if it travels far enough will develop in a strong wind, which descends on the opposite side and plays queer pranks. A small whirlwind is often produced by the action of wind against a corner formed by several buildings. As the wind travels down a street again, especially a narrow one, it rapidly increases in velocity. A little will spill into the side streets, but the main stream will flow on gathering momentum.

Watch the wind strike against the side of a high building and notice how it mushrooms out on all sides, splitting into many air currents and trace these till they come to rest, but be sure to hold tight to your hat in the mean time.

Landmarks of Mackenzie

SINCE William Lyon Mackenzie King, the Liberal leader, has been visiting some of the shrines of his illustrious forebear, from whom he gets his Christian names, it is permissible for the average citizen, regardless of his politics, to do the same.

The remains of the rebel leader rest beneath the low spread branches of a mountain ash in the Necropolis in Toronto. Within a small plot, bordered by a hedge, four little stones, only a few inches high, mark a row of graves. One bears the word "Father" and below "William Lyon Mackenzie, next to it is a stone marked "William Lyon and George Mackenzie," and the fourth "Barbara and Helen." A substantial monument has been erected to William Lyon Mackenzie in the same God's acre where a granite shaft commemorates Lount and Matthews, two of his chief lieutenants, who gave up their lives for the faith they had in their leader and his cause.

Parts of the basement walls of the old Toronto Jail, in a cell of which Lount and Matthews were kept till their execution, are still traceable in the office building at the southeast corner of Toronto and Court streets.

From the Necropolis we pass to Bond street where at No. 82 stands the three-storey dwelling in which Mackenzie died. Toward the end of his strenuous life, which was one of almost continuous opposition to things as they were, some of the rebel leaders' friends, moved by sympathy for his condition, presented this property to him, though against his will, for his native Scottish independence never forsook him.

Here he spent his closing years—years of gloom and despair, it is said, and with a consciousness that he had not achieved all he sought in the realm of reform. After sixty-six years of strenuous struggle he passed away, and with his passing a page of Canadian history was closed.

As one sits at the old desk used by Mackenzie when a member of the Upper Canada Legislature (now preserved in the cabin of the York Pioneers in Exhibition Park), it is easy to conjure up the exciting scenes in which he figured and of his five successive expulsions from the old Front street chamber. It must be admitted that he drew fire as when he wrote that "the House was an assembly of scoundrels" and the Government "a band of public robbers." "If a Government emanating from England can cherish such a corrupt star chamber crew (as the Family Compact), then the days of the infamous Scroggs and Jeffreys are returned upon us! They were tools of a servile power, official fungi more numerous and pestilential than the quagmires and marshes that encircle Toronto!"

No wonder there was a "come back" "William Lyon Mackenzie" was a comparatively gentle rejoinder. He was, according to his enemies, a gentle, a spoiled dog, a seditious little bar, a firebrand, a political mountebank, a scamp scribbler who began to feel his importance among small people and, like the frog in the fable, to swell with puffs and vanity.

Another Mackenzie reminder in Toronto still exists in the old Doel house, on the northwest corner of Adelaide and Bay streets. John Doel became associated with the leaders of "the Party of Reform." During the exciting days preceding the actual outbreak of the rebellion at the skirmish at Montgomery's Farm, the house was a rendezvous for Mackenzie sympathizers, while larger gatherings were held in the adjoining brewery where "The Canadian Alliance Society" was probably discussed if not formed, and other plans laid for the raising of an armed force, and where their leader no doubt frequently met with them.

Yet another visible reminder of Mackenzie is a pleasant one in his portrait, in the City Hall, as the first Mayor of Toronto, in 1834; indeed, as the first mayor ever elected in Upper Canada. It was during his year of office that the "little mountebank" proved to be a hero in personally risking his life during a cholera plague; in fact, he was stricken with the disease, but fought it successfully.

Among the Mackenzie relics in the John Ross Robertson collection in the Toronto Public Library are some of the military orders issued by Mackenzie and his rebel army, as well as the proclamation offering $1,000 for his capture. A curio in the Normal School Museum is a cane apparently given to Mackenzie by some political enemies in a spirit of irony, the lettering reading: "This vine was cut on Navy Island, C. W., after the Lion

More than one old Ontario farmhouse has legends of having given him sanctuary during his flight. A cave near Dundas is still pointed out as one of his hiding places, while, in the same town, the building which he once occupied—the Leslie House, has survived the passing of the years. Queenston also holds a pathetic reminder of the turbulent Scot in the ruins of his old printing office, in which the Colonial Advocate was first printed and which so exasperated Sir Peregrine Maitland and all the Government rulers of the day, and, generally, a glimpse of Navy Island, in the upper Niagara, tells its story of the short-lived Provisional Government there set up by Mackenzie, ere he finally escaped to the American shore. —Frank Yeigh in Star Weekly.

OUR BOYS' AND GIRLS' CORNER

By Aunt June

DEDICATED TO EVERY BOY AND GIRL IN CANADA

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

Who has frightened Jack Frost away I wonder. He is such a funny fellow. He comes and he goes. In this part of the world as I write he is missing for a little while, having run away two days ago, but probably by the time you read my letter he will be back again at his old pranks, painting the window pane and trimming up the branches of the trees with beautiful silvery icicles. My Helpers in Quebec who read this, will probably say: "Ah! Aunt June, you just come down here and you would soon see where Jack Frost is."

I know Quebec well in the winter time. What a jolly place it is for winter sports and fun. Many a sleigh ride and snow shoe tramp I have enjoyed through the lovely country of Quebec Province and speaking of Quebec reminds me that we are welcoming this week a new member from this part of Canada. Isn't it perfectly splendid to see the way out "League of Service" is growing. Every week finds boys and girls who are Helpers, and who wish to pledge themselves to more and better service.

Before we go on to our Mail Bag, however, I must tell you of the game which was promised last week. This is called

ACTING PROVERBS.

This is a game which can be played by a good number. Four, six or eight players can engage in it. Players divide themselves into two sides. One half are to go outside the room and one half to remain seated.

The players who are outside then choose some well-known proverb which they are to illustrate without words by their actions. Each player chooses a different proverb known to the others. Then one by one they must go into the room and act the proverb before the others and the game is of course for those seated in the room to guess the name of the proverb. For instance, one player might take a broom which looks perfectly new and pretend to sweep the floor with it. He must work very hard with the broom and this will illustrate the proverb, "A new broom sweeps clean." Another might take a pebble or a stone, roll it over the floor and pick it up at intervals and look at it closely. This would illustrate, "A rolling stone gathers no moss." Another proverb which might be illustrated between two players is "It's never too late to mend." But as the game goes on you will doubtless think of many others that will create a great deal of fun in the acting.

WELCOME !!

A big warm welcome to the following new members:

OUR MAIL BOX.

Dear Aunt June:—

I have been reading in your corner for some time so thought I would like to write. I am a girl ten years old.

I am in the senior third class at school. I go every day. I have a girl friend, her name is Miriam Runchey. I think she will write too if I tell her about it. I am sending three cents for a badge.

GRETA MARTINDALE.

My dear Greta:—

I am very glad to have your letter and to include you in our list of members, but you have forgotten to tell about your acts of service. One of the rules of the Service League is that all Helpers wishing to win a badge must tell about their work. I am glad to know that you are in the Senior Third and to hear about your friend. There is an envelope already addressed for your badge so please send the letter quickly, which will tell me about your helping.

AUNT JUNE.

Dear Aunt June:—

This is the first time I have written. I thought I would join your Club. I am eleven years old. We live on a farm. In the summer I go after the cows. We have eleven cows. Sometimes I milk four cows. I go to school every day when I am well, and learn my lessons when I come home. I am in the senior third class. When I get through school I am going to High School. I have about a mile to go to school. It is not very nice in winter although I love sleigh riding. At school the children were on the ice. It was about three inches deep on the 15th and 16th of November. I hope to receive a badge.

EVA G. YOUNG.

Yours is a very interesting letter Eva, and as I read it I can picture a farm in the summer time and the cows and a little girl helping to milk them and then I think of you in the winter going the long walk to school and sometimes having a jolly sleigh ride, and then at home in the evenings helping and doing your lessons. So you have given me several pictures in which to think about you, and some day in the future I shall picture you a clever girl going to High School. How splendid that will be! I am sure that as you have joined the League of Service you will work so well that mother will be very proud of you. I hope you will write again some day.

AUNT JUNE.

Dear Aunt June:—

I have been a weekly reader of your Boys' and Girls' page for some time and enjoyed it very much. I would like to join your Helpers League of Service. I go to school and when I come home I carry in wood, wash dishes, milk cows and sweep and on Saturdays I scrub and help all I can. I am enclosing a three-cent stamp for my badge which I would like to receive.

MARGARET DESJARDIN.

Well Margaret, after reading your letter, I feel sure that you have earned your Helpers' badge and you may be proud to wear it for the good service you are giving at home. I am so proud of all these pledges from Helpers from all parts of Canada. The pussy cat on the top of your letter looks very interested in the bubbles. I wonder if you knew I was

Nature's Mirror

When a woman is well and healthy—there's a sparkle in her eyes, a rose tint in her cheeks, and she has rich red blood. There's elasticity in every movement and a spring in her step. fond of cats when you sent me this pretty paper.

AUNT JUNE.

Dear Aunt June:—

This is my second letter to you. I am not big enough to write neatly for myself. Well I have been doing a lot of work since I last wrote. Now I am going to tell you about it. I hunt the eggs, carry in wood and do other things as well. I hope to see my letter in print. Roberta does my writing. Well Aunt June I like my badge but I will have to close this time as I do not want to take up too much room, but I like to be a Helper, so I will close. Love to Aunt June.

GEORGE GOLDY.

There are several words George in your letter that were not written clearly enough for me to understand them so if there is a mistake in any of the names you will understand. I am pleased to know that you like your badge and that you are keeping up with the helping.

AUNT JUNE.

Dear Aunt June:—

I thought I would write a few lines for my brother. I have been quite busy. This is what I have been doing: Washing dishes, sweeping the floor, getting in the night wood and the water, let out the cow and the calf, water the horse, get the meals ready and go down town for mother, make the beds and other chores. We have a lot of nice potatoes this fall, about forty bags and a lot of other garden things. I go to church and Sunday school on Sunday. I have a nice teacher. I saw my last letter in the paper and I noticed you wanted me to tell you all about my Sunday school. My brother goes with me quite often. I go to the Methodist church.

ROBERTA GOLDY.

Thank you Roberta for this second interesting letter. I am so glad you like your teacher. What a lot of helping you do. That is real service I am sure. Do you think you can get some of the other girls and boys to join our League of Service. I will print one of your riddles. There are two which are not written plainly enough.

Riddle sent in by Roberta:

Rid.—What goes round the house and leaves a white glove in the window?

Ans.—Snow.

I think it is time we had the answer to a riddle that was given several weeks ago, which so far no Helper has guessed correctly. This was the riddle:

Rid.—Why are bookkeepers like chickens?

Ans.—Because they have to scratch for a living.

If your letter is not in the paper this week do not think you are forgotten but look again next week. Every letter is very, very carefully kept because I want to hear from every Helper in Canada and every letter sent in will be answered some time or other so watch your corner. I have thought perhaps that some Helpers living in Ontario might like to write to Helpers who live in Quebec or boys and girls from different parts might exchange letters and cards with each other. Don't you think this would be interesting?

Yours lovingly,

AUNT JUNE.

Is Licorice Oldest Confection?

The greater part of black licorice is derived from Spain, where it is made from the juice of the plant and mixed with starch to prevent it from melting in hot weather. The licorice plant is a shrub that attains a height of three feet and it grows wild where its roots reach the water. It flourishes especially on the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers.

Since the valley of the Euphrates contained one of the earliest civilizations in the world, says a writer in The Argonaut, the probability is that licorice is about the oldest confection in the world and the taste which the boys and girls of today like so well was enjoyed by the youngsters of 3,000 years ago.

Advice to Girls

By Miss Rosalind

Registered according to the Copyright Act

Miss Rosalind welcomes letters from young women asking for advice on any subject. All you have to do is to address your letter to
MISS ROSALIND,

34 King William St., Hamilton, Ont.

Dear Rosalind:—

I am a girl of 20 years, and would like to get a boy friend. I have met some, but they seem to have other girl friends. I live five miles from town and do not meet many. Please advise me what I should do as I value your advice very much.

SUNSHINE.

Dear Sunshine:—

It is pretty lonesome at times, I am sure, especially in winter. But there are silent friends that we may have with us all the time—I mean books. I'd like you to make up your mind to make this winter the best you have ever spent. Make up your mind first to go on studying where you left off at school. You will be amazed at how easily things come to you now. Then get some good stories. Borrow them from friends in town. Go to the library every time you go into town; and when you have the price of a good book, invest in one. It will pay you back a hundred times over. You will have an interest in life that will brighten you up and make you attractive to talk to, so that people will want to know you. Try it, I please me; and I know you will never be sorry.

ROSALIND.

Saskatchewan.

Dear Rosalind:—

I am a bachelor on the Prairie and would like some advice towards heart and social events.

Would it be proper for me to ask a married woman to have the first dance, providing her husband was not a dancer or he not being there, when it was only a small neighbor gathering?

Is it right for me to give a neighbor girl a box of chocolates if she has a fellow of her own, he sitting there when I give them to her? Should he care? I like a girl in this neighborhood about eighteen years old and I am twenty-seven; this girl has a friend with whom she has been going for over a year. Should I try to cut him out in a nice manner? I love this girl very much, but I have not got enough money to give her a good time.

Is it right for me to go along with a fellow when he is going to see his girl and sit and wait till he gets ready to go home?

Hoping to see this advice in the paper soon as I am worrying very much.

JIGGS.

Dear Mr. Jiggs:—

I enjoyed your letter, for I have lived on the Prairie and know those happy times—femininely speaking—when one girl was sure of half a dozen beaux.

The best way to answer your questions is to take them one at a time:

1. Surely, ask your married friends for dances, first or any other. If the lady's husband does not dance, she would have to sit that one out unless some bachelors asked her. And are you not all good friends together?

2. I am quite sure the girl would appreciate the chocolates at any time. If the man is sensible he will not care. If he is not engaged to the girl, it is none of his affair anyway.

3. There is nothing to prevent you taking your chance at making your neighbor care for you, unless she has already promised to marry another man.

If a girl loves a man, she will want him to save his money towards a home.

4. If the girl has asked you to call, and you really enjoy doing so and everybody else enjoys having you there, you may call when others are there, and of course leave together. That business of sitting the other fellow out is not done in nice families.

Send me your full name and address on a stamped envelope and I'll

A GREAT STOMACH BRACER

Makes You Feel Lively and Young—Removes That Tired Feeling.

At some period in our lives there is sure to come a time when the stomach is "off"—not working well—falling to enjoy and digest its food. Main thing then is to get the right remedy. You really want a soothing medicine, one quick to act, sure on results, combining the virtues of a gentle laxative with a tonic effect upon the stomach, liver and kidney.

Certainly the world affords no better medicines for the stomach than Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Their laxative effect is ideal—can't be beaten! But in addition to their helpful action upon the bowels, these pills contain certain ingredients that strengthen and invigorate the muscles of the stomach, thereby relieving all sourness, rising gas, headache and biliousness.

Just try Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they'll make you full of energy—brimming over with snap; they bring and maintain robust, sound, vigorous health, and isn't that just what you've looked for these many months? REPUSE A SUBSTITUTE FOR DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS. 25c per box, all dealers.

LESS LABOR—MORE WHEAT.

By giving proper attention to all the factors which enter into successful wheat growing, much larger yields can be produced. This has been established, times without number, by efficient wheat growers of Europe. The average man is disposed to say that Europe had until lately an abundance of cheap labor, which fact in itself accounts for the 30 bushels of wheat per acre which Great Britain harvests, as compared with the 18 to 20 bushels per acre which are gathered in Canada. Cheap labor has its counterpart in our highly efficient farm machinery. By adding a horse to the team and by using wider plows, wider harrows, disks, binders, etc., it is possible to reduce the man-labor required in raising wheat from 50 to 75 per cent. This is America's answer to European abundance and cheap labor.

The growing of wheat produces much more highly important food for each hour of man-labor put upon it than do either potatoes or corn. When wheat yields 30 bushels to the acre, reliable figures show that one hour of man-labor produces 1 2-3 bushels of wheat. At prevailing yields, one hour of man-labor on potatoes produces about a bushel of that crop, while on corn, one hour of man-labor produces about 1 1/2 bushels. It is obviously a matter of labor economy to grow wheat.—Henry G. Bell, B.S.A.

Drives Asthma Before It. The smoke or vapor from Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy gives asthma no chance to linger. It eradicates the cause. Our experience with the relief-giving remedy shows how actual and positive is the succor it gives. It is the result of long study and experiment and was not submitted to the public until its makers knew it would do its work well.

Fur Farming

Raising Mink.

At the recent fur auctions in Montreal, the price of mink skins averaged $20. The better skins sold for $30 upwards; to $75 for one very choice lot.

Mink is a handsome, durable fur. It has been demonstrated that minks can be kept in captivity. They require little space and can be cheaply fed, provided one can obtain fresh fish or fresh meat practically all the time. Persons who live near the sea-coast would appear to be in an advantageous position for the rearing of this animal. Once the difficulty of obtaining stock, which, for purposes of domestication, must be taken young, has been overcome, the prospective raiser of minks ought to be in a fair way to succeed.

The principal diet of minks should always be meat or fish. English sparrow, mice, frogs, rabbits, scraps of butcher's meat, small or coarse fish and fish heads, may be mentioned as examples of the sort of feed for minks. They will also learn to eat cereals readily and they may be given well-cooked Graham mush with milk, together with ground meat or meat broth. In feeding cereals, however, care should be taken not to cause diarrhoea. In winter the food is best served warm. As to quantity, about 4 ounces of meat daily is sufficient for an adult.

Cages may be about 4 feet by 8 feet and 16 inches high. They can be made of 1-inch mesh, No. 16 gauge, poultry netting. These cages are to serve as a runway. The dens should be quite warm. A good den can be made by putting a box about 12 in. x 12 in. x 12 in. inside a similar, but larger box, and packing the intervening space with straw. The entrance should be in the form of a passage sloping downwards toward the outside. Fine hay should be provided for the nests.

The mating season is in February and March. The young are born in April and May, about 4 to 6 in a litter. The females, while with young should always be kept separate from the males.

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS

The ailments of childhood—constipation, indigestion, colic, colds, etc.—can be quickly banished through the use of Baby's Own Tablets. They are a mild but thorough laxative which instantly regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach. They are guaranteed to contain no harmful drugs and can be given to the youngest baby with perfect safety. Concerning them Mrs. Alcide Lepage, Ste. Beatrix, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets were of great help to my baby. They regulated her bowels and stomach and made her plump and well." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

USE TEN MILES CABLE FOR FILM

GIGANTIC ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING PROBLEM TO PRODUCE "THE FOUR HORSEMEN" IN PICTURES.

No general ever worked out his strategy for a decisive battle with greater care than that bestowed upon the plans for the motion picture reproduction of the second Battle of the Marne, which will be filmed as a feature of Metro's colossal production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," by Vicente Blasco Ibañez.

Although many thousands of men will take part in an engagement that, to all appearance, is as deadly as the one that proved the turning point of the World War, the present arrangements are such to make serious accident almost impossible.

For many weeks Walter Grams, chief at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood, Calif., and a large force of assistants have been working on this system and it has been pronounced fool proof.

Above all other things, Rex Ingram, who is directing the production, and June Mathis, who adapted it for the screen, are anxious to make the battle realistic. With this system, the mechanical perfection of the battle scenes is assured.

The castle and all the buildings of the village have been built so as to "breakaway" properly at the desired time. There are more than 200 "breakaways" and more than 1,500 separate explosions planned to occur in the village alone. These "breakaways" are necessary to insure the falling of the buildings at the proper moment. More than 52,000 feet of copper cable has been laid and sixty-two storage batteries installed about the location.

A battery of fifteen cameras will be used for the filming of the battle scenes. These cameras will be under the direction of John Seltz, chief cameraman for "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

IMMIGRATION.

Trade Will Not Flow Strongly For Over a Year.

Probably a year, or slightly more than a year, will elapse before the movement from Great Britain to Canada reaches a really large number, in the opinion of Hon. James A. Calder, Minister of Immigration and Colonization. Mr. Calder, who has returned to Ottawa, after an official trip to England and Scotland, finds that shipping conditions are at present operating to restrict the movement. Moreover, Canadian immigration agents overseas have instructions to take every precaution to see that no more people migrate to the Dominion than can at present be absorbed.

They advise persons not likely to find employment within a reasonable time of their arrival in Canada to defer their departure from England. Shipping agents, too, in view of the penalties to which they are liable for bringing unsuitable persons to the Dominion, are careful to scrutinize applicants for passages. In consequence, Mr. Calder asserts that Canada is securing a better and more suitable class of new citizens than ever before.

The shipping situation, however, prevents any immediate increase in the volume of immigration. Mr. Calder interviewed officials of the North Atlantic shipping conference, and was informed that accommodation on vessels coming to Canada was booked for about a year. In so far as the outlook for immigration in the future is concerned, it will depend a good deal upon economic conditions in Great Britain. For instance, Mr. Calder states that there is at present almost as great a shortage of domestic servants in England as in Canada. Women, who were trained for domestic service, found employment in industry during the war. They are only gradually leaving that field and returning to domestic service. The Minister of Immigration, however, found in Great Britain a feeling that a fairly serious unemployment situation might develop there in the near future. Such a condition would tend to drive people to seek homes and livelihoods in other countries. It has been variously estimated, moreover, Mr. Calder points out, that Great Britain has a surplus population over pre-war days of from 500,000 to 1,200,000. Before the war 250,000 people left Britain every year. At the same time, having regard to the shipping situation, Mr. Calder inclined to the view that immigration would not reach really large numbers for probably a year, or until the spring of 1922.

Merrifield, the Modest.

Pte. William Merrifield, now of Sault Ste. Marie, is, above all things a modest man, though a V.C. wearer. It is recalled of Merrifield that when he was returning home on the troop train with his unit, the 4th Battalion, he was hunted up by a reporter who was intent on getting the tale of how he won the V.C. Merrifield simply wouldn't talk about it. Perhaps he couldn't. Anyway, the scribe says that as he tried to get the soldier to "loosen up" the big drops of perspiration stood out on the hero's bronzed face. It was less of an ordeal to win the medal than it was to tell how it was won.

For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty during the attack near Abancourt on the 1st of October, 1918. When his men were held up by an intense fire from two machine gun emplacements, he attacked them both single-handed. Dashing from shell hole to shell hole he killed the occupants of the first post, and, although wounded, continued to attack the second post, and with a bomb killed the occupants. He refused to be evacuated and led his platoon until again severely wounded.

FOOLISH FRANCESCA

By Olive Wadsley

She remembered her start on the platform at Charing Cross, and Reg gaily telling her jokes while he looked all the while as if he were wanting to cry.

And Leon, a splendid, famous, conquering person had been a beast about him, had accused her of being unfaithful to him. Justice to herself made Frankie's anger deeper.

It was the meanness of it all which hurt so; she would have believed where she loved, whatever had happened, but Leon had failed her. The stove glowed through a mist of tears, which did not fall.

"Day-dreaming, Bebe?" Madame Kain's voice said.

Frankie had told her nothing and Danvers had been given a royal lunch and had then, armed with Mme. Kain's card, gone out for an afternoon's amusement. Frankie knew that if she told Carissima the truth it would upset her, and she did not mean to do that today, whatever happened.

"About tonight," Mme. Kain said. "I, too, feel so excited. Himmel, Frankie, do not forget to make that pause in the second song. You take it too quick and your breath is short for the E. Pour l'Amour de Dieu, remember."

"All right," Frankie said rather wearily. Yesterday, the event of the evening had seemed the one thing to live for, now its interest seemed to have faded somehow.

"You haven't a headache?" Mme. Kain inquired anxiously. "Do not say that you have." She rose and came across to Frankie and laid her hand on Frankie's head.

"Burning," she said dramatically. "Stage fright, Bebe, pull yourself together, you have the voice I tell you. All you have to do is to forget that you exist at all and just sing. An egg and brandy you will take at once."

"Oh, I couldn't, Carissima," Frankie said almost piteously. "Really I couldn't darling."

"Circles beneath the eyes," Mme. Kain went on impetuously. "This is what comes of love-making, Leon should have waited. He was always so wild, irresistible if he wanted anything. Oh, that Russian temperament."

She went on describing its idiosyncrasies, and Leon's selfishness in having ever loved Frankie and loved her so, with almost vindictive force, quite forgetting she herself had prompted the interview of the evening before, and earnestly striven to influence Frankie.

She knelt down despite her best stays on the hearth-rug, and put one arm round Frankie. During the eight months they had lived together she had learned really to love the queer little English girl, as she had called her at first.

Herr Friedrich Kain—minus the Schubert—had died ten years before, and his widow had never married again.

She had really loved her first husband and their greatest grief had been that they had no children. Frankie had received in some part, that maternal love which Mme. Kain had once longed to lavish.

She bent now over Frankie's dark head with its broad band of black velvet and lapsed into the German "Du."

"What is it with thee, Bebe, tell thy old Carissima? Is it that thou dost not love Leon? For marry him thou shalt not, if that is so. Tell thy old teacher."

She drew Frankie's head gently against the soft laces of the negligee. Frankie put her arms round the bent neck and clung almost despairingly for an instant. She wanted comfort and sympathy dreadfully but she knew that if she told Mme. Kain the truth a scene would ensue, Leon would be fetched, there would be an endless explanation, and she had at last made up her own mind, and decided upon her plan of action, and that plan held no suggestion of explanation.

"Then I go to prepare the egg brandy," Mme. Kain said, rising briskly and going toward the door. It opened and Leon came in.

With a little cry of surprised embarrassment, Mme. Kain fled, Frankie and Leon were alone.

She sat on the hearth-rug, looking at him steadily, praying inwardly that her heart was not really beating as loudly as it seemed to be doing to her.

Leon put down his gloves on the table and came over to her. He looked at her, then knelt down beside her.

"It was deuced silly when one thinks it over, both of us acted pretty idiotically," he said.

"I haven't got such an abounding sense of humor as you, I'm afraid," Frankie said.

"Look here, let's make it up," he said rather roughly. He put his arm around her.

At his touch she struggled and leaped to her feet.

"Do you think I can be taken up again and left just as you please?" she asked breathlessly.

He made his greatest mistake then, his own temper was rising again.

"You don't seem so jolly particular about the taking-up part," he said; then, instantly, he repented. "I don't mean that, Frankie," he said. "Look here, I'm a fool at saying things. I love you. I made an ass of myself this morning. Of course, you don't care for that boy, how could you?"

"How could I possibly care for any one while you are in existence?" Frankie said bitterly.

"It is no good going on like this," Leon said doggedly. "I'm sorry for all that's happened, will you make it up?"

He came nearer to her as he spoke. Lack of self-confidence had never been a characteristic of his and he was just going to stretch out his hand to take Frankie's, when she said in quite a level voice:

"No!"

He gazed at her, a look of actual bewilderment appeared on his face. He had known a good many women in his time, and he had felt for them what passed for love at the moment of his infatuation, and he had been utterly spoiled by them all.

His fame, his looks, his personality had made life far too easy for him.

He had told Mme. Kain he was hopeless despairing; yet at the back of his mind he had never despaired. He was not of that type. His own opinion of his powers or loving was quite excellent, a very sure sign that his love was not a supreme thing. Also, the humility. He was really amazed at Frankie's answer.

"I am sorry to give you such a great surprise," Frankie went on quickly. "I am sorrier still that I made the mistake, I did last night. I don't love you."

"I—I—I'm sorry for you in a way, it's such a poor, mean, little way of loving that you have. I have been thinking about you all this afternoon. I see now that you just love me because you happen to want me, perhaps because I told you twice that I hated you, I think you're the sort of man who would be attracted by that; you'd like to feel you'd conquered it and won."

"And I saw in my mind how dreadfully miserable we'd be both of us if we married. You'd be jealous and you'd misjudge me often, and—and I couldn't bear it. Love ought to mean that you believe, whatever happens, and such a very little thing happened and you didn't believe. You failed the very first time."

Leon's face was flushed deeply.

"When you have quite finished your interesting dissection of my character," he said quickly, "perhaps you will tell me what you really mean. Am I to understand that you wish me to release you from our engagement? His blue eyes were glittering; he was angry with the bitter mortified anger of a self-appreciative man.

CHAPTER XXII.

Before the Premiere.

Long years afterward Frankie used to wonder how she lived through that afternoon. The strain was almost unbearable.

Mme. Kain fussed over her, old Mrs. Baggs came, summoned by wire by Danvers, as another "treat" for Frankie, and had to be entertained—gaily entertained.

Frankie was really tired out, and yet strung up by the excitement of her recent trouble.

As the hour approached for her to go to the opera she began to shiver uncontrollably. Mme. Kain fussed more than ever. Danvers kept on saying "Buck up, buck up," until Frankie could cheerfully have muzzled him; old Mrs. Baggs alone showed common sense by administering a good strong cup of tea to Frankie and supplying her with a hot-water bottle to her feet.

"Fellin' better, aren't you, deary?" she said in her comfortable voice as the trembling passed.

There, calling upon just Heaven to assist the evening, came in with Frankie's cloak. Mme. Kain wrapped two mufflers round her throat, and Mrs. Baggs gently took one off when she was not looking to that Frankie could breathe.

"The car is there. There are nounced, tears in her eyes: "The car is there." She said it above as cheerfully as though the executioner were waiting by the curb.

Frankie went down-stairs feeling shaky and queer, and as if her mouth had been filled with cotton-wool and some of it had stayed there.

Mme. Kain followed her.

Together they crossed the hall and walked down the steps. A man at the bottom of the steps came forward; in the light of the electric globe Frankie saw it was Leon. A mist came up round her, involuntarily she clutched at the railing.

Leon was speaking in an easy, pleasant voice to Mme. Kain, who said "Yes yes, very well," and went on quickly to the car.

Frankie was about to follow her when the footman shut the door and the car moved off. She gazed at Leon; quite naturally he took her arm and led her forward to his car, which had been waiting behind.

"I am to drive you to the opera-house," he said simply, helping her in. It was all done so quickly, so naturally, that she had only time to think that the drive was a short one, and that after all nothing mattered very much.

HOW HAIL INSURANCE WORKS. Hail insurance is practically only a term in Eastern Canada, but in the West it signifies something of vivid importance. Measures known as Municipal Hail Insurance Acts are in force in each of the Prairie Provinces. These Acts provide a system of mutual insurance under which rural municipalities can operate to tax each other for the granting of compensation to individuals for losses incurred by hail, which are often very serious. How the system works out and the extent to which it operates in Saskatchewan and Alberta are set forth in the November number of the Agricultural Gazette of Canada. Each claimant is entitled to receive not more than five cents per acre for every one per cent. of damage from hail he has sustained. To some this may not appear a very liberal provision, but when it is understood that the number of claims filed in 1919 in Saskatchewan were 7,538 and that the total indemnity paid amounted to $1,911,776 a different view will obtain. For one storm alone that occurred in July of the year referred to claims amounting to $1,100,000 were satisfied. In Alberta the total losses for the same year were $506,000 against a valuation of $12,000,000 insured. Besides the system under Government supervision there are 3 companies in Saskatchewan that accept hail insurance and that paid out $1,750,000 in 1919 for losses caused by hail.

OLD MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

Honored Customs of Giving Piece of Bacon to Happy Couple Recalled.

The death recently of W. Smith Shaw, for forty years agent to the Wichnor Park estate, near Lichfield serves to recall the fact that recently, there was honored at Wichnor, a custom similar to that of Dunmow, in Essex, or giving a piece of bacon to a married couple who were able to declare on oath after a year of wedded life that they had "passed no cross words," repented not of their marriage, and that, were they single, would wed each other.

At Dunmow the reward, which is regularly given, is that of a gammon of bacon, but at Wichnor it used to be a fitch of bacon and half a quarter of rye. For many years the bacon has not been given at Wichnor, and for it a painted wood fitch which hangs over the chimney in the hall, has been substituted; but it reminds one of the curious tenure under which the Wichnor Manor was held in the reign of Edward I.

There appears in an old number of The Spectator of facetious record of the claimants of the Wichnor fitch, of whom it is stated only three were successful. One was that of a sea officer and his wife, who from the day of their marriage to that of the ceremony of claiming the bacon had not seen each other; in the second instance the wife was dumb; and the third had the fitch taken from them again because they quarreled as to how it should be cooked.

Soft coras are difficult to eradicate, but Holloway's Corn Cure will draw them out painlessly.

Magic Carpet

Visits to New Worlds

Sakhalien.

Cable despatches a few days ago announced that the Soviet Government at Moscow was prepared to grant concessions in certain portions of Russia's outlying territory in exchange for foodstuffs, the machinery so badly needed for rehabilitations. Among the areas designated was the island of Sakhalien. While it was not specified what portion of this island Soviet Russia was willing to allow foreigners to exploit—for a consideration—yet she has only the northern half at her disposal, for by the Treaty of Portsmouth which brought the Russia-Japanese war to an end all that part of the island lying south of the fiftieth degree of latitude was ceded to Japan.

Sakhalien is separated from Asia by the Strait of Tartary, the distance being only about four miles. This island is 585 miles long and varies in width from 12 to 90 miles. The Japanese portion has an area of 13,148 square miles, while the Russian portion is somewhat larger. The western coast consists of a series of high bluffs, while the eastern coast is high and mountainous. The climate is severe owing to the cold and the rainfall is exceptionally heavy. The aboriginal inhabitants are now few and in the Japanese portion known for their hairiness. Discovery of the island is credited to the Japanese in 1613, the first European to visit the island being Martin Vries. The Chinese later obtained dominion over the northern part of the island in 1700 and a century later Lieut. Koster took possession for Russia. In 1860 by the Treaty of Peking the island was formally ceded to Russia, but in 1905 it was conquered by the Japanese. There are some Christian churches, but the majority of the Japanese are Buddhists and Shintoists, while the Ainu have many interesting religious observances. Most of the island consists of primeval forests and the means of communication are poor. There are some coal mines, but the main industry of the island is fishing, salmon and herring being caught in large quantities and exported dry. The population in the Russian area is rapidly dwindling, while in the Japanese section it is growing fast.

13TH CENTURY TOMB.

An interesting 13th century tombstone has been discovered at Workshop, Enfield Prior Church, which is being restored as a war memorial to the local men who fell in the war. The tombstone which is beautifully carved has been identified as that of Lady Furnival, who built the church in the 13th century as a thankoffering for the return of her son from Palestine, where he had gone in order to bring home the heart of his brother Gerald, who was killed by the Saracens. The tombstone bears evidence of elaborate brass work, but the metal itself has disappeared, apparently having been stolen or torn off. The Lady Chapel is one of the most characteristic specimens of early English architecture in England, and its lancet windows are considered among the most perfect in the country.

A MOTHER'S TRIAL

CARE OF HOMES AND CHILDREN OFTEN CAUSES A BREAK-DOWN.

The woman at home, deep in household duties and the cares of motherhood, needs occasional help to keep her in good health. The demands upon a mother's health are many and severe. Her own health trials and her children's welfare exact heavy tolls, while hurried meals, broken rest and much indoor living tend to weaken her constitution. No wonder that the woman at home is often indisposed through weakness, headaches, backaches and nervousness. Too many women have grown to accept these visitations as a part of the lot of motherhood. But many and varied as her health troubles are, the cause is simple and relief at hand. When well, it is the woman's good blood that keeps her well; when ill she must make her blood rich to renew her health. The nursing mother more than any other woman in the world needs rich blood and plenty of it. There is no way to get this good blood so necessary to perfect health, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new blood, and through their use thousands of weak, ailing wives and mothers have been made bright, cheerful and strong. If you are ailing, easily tired, depressed, it is a duty you owe yourself and your family to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. What this medicine has done for others it will surely do for you.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHY THE CLOCK SAYS "TICK, TOCK."

Why do we always regard a clock as saying "tick, tock," and not "tick, tick," like a watch? Is there really any distinction between the alternate sounds, or is it a matter of psychology?

The general opinion, it seems, has always been that it was merely a matter of chance whether the "tick" accompanied the left and the "tock" the right beat of the pendulum or vice versa.

The first important discovery an authority made, according to Science and Invention, was that the "tick" always marks the amount when the pendulum reaches the extreme point of deflection from the perpendicular to its beat to the right, while the reaching of its swing limit to the left is marked by the "tock" in pendulums of all lengths. It was found that owing to the fact that the anchor of the escapement mechanism is above the rotating escapement wheel and in the same plane with it, the conditions under which its arms strike the cogs of the wheel are not the same for both arms.

One of the arms of the anchor strikes a cog of the wheel moving upward, in a direction opposed to that of the anchor, while the other arm strikes against the cog while it is moving downward, nearly in the same direction as the anchor. The result of the unequal conditions under which the two arms of the anchor engage the cogs of the escapement wheel is naturally an acoustic difference in the sounds produced by the contact of the parts.

MOTOR ROADS IN FRANCE.

The excellence of most of the French main roads has long been recognized; but the war inflicted on them immense damage, directly and indirectly, by destruction in some parts and by excessive wear, with reduced opportunities for maintenance, in others. In making good their roads the French are looking carefully to the character of the traffic which will pass over them and are developing particularly concrete construction. A feature of the new roads will be the massive concrete abutment on each side, whose heavy traffic is expected. The roadway itself in these cases will have a minimum thickness of 4.7 inches of concrete, the camber being 1 in 250.

KNOX CHURCH SERVICES

Morning Service—The Bells of Christmas.

Evening Service—Old Year Sermon. "The End of the Year."

DIED—At Waterdown, on December 23rd, 1920, Mildred Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Rutledge, at the age of 7 weeks, 4 days.

We wish you all a very Merry Christmas.

Mrs. John Carter returned from the hospital this week.

Mrs. Isaac Baker and daughter Doris, are visiting friends in New York.

Mrs. Frank Johnson, who has been very ill for the past two weeks, is improving nicely.

Mr. Geo. McMonies has installed a modern electric lighting system in his house on the station road.

The Church Club of Knox church will hold their regular social evening on Wednesday, December 29th.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Torrance leave today for Bradford, where they will spend the Christmas holiday.

With the exception of the 6 o'clock morning trip, the Waterdown Bus will make its regular Hamilton trips on Christmas day, including the Saturday night trip.

The silver cup won by the Waterdown Senior baseball team for the championship of the Wabasso League arrived yesterday, and is now on display in Gordon & Son's window.

The Christmas Tree entertainments of the Presbyterian, Methodist and St. Thomas R. C. churches held this week were largely attended, good programs being provided and successful evenings reported by all.

The annual Xmas Tree entertainment in connection with Grace church Sunday School will be held in the Parish Hall on New Year's eve. Watch night services will be held in the church to usher in the new year.

A grand Pageant, entitled "Temple of Fame" will be given by the Burlington Methodist Sunday School in the Methodist Church, Burlington on Thursday evening, December 30, at 8 o'clock. This will be well worth seeing and hearing.

The Library Board intend making another purchase of new books at an early date. The last purchase which arrived a few weeks ago is meeting with the general approval of the public. If you have not renewed your membership, do so at once.

Next Wednesday evening December 29th, a sacred concert will be given in the Methodist church by the choir, to which all are cordially invited. A splendid program will be given and the gowns recently provided for the choir will be worn. A silver collection will be taken in aid of the choir fund.
