IRISH REBELLION REPORTS PUBLISHED IN DUBLIN.

Dublin, July 25. The Press Censor has issued for publication in today's papers important documents containing the original detailed reports of various Irish volunteer leaders in Cork, Kerry and Limerick, explaining to the Irish volunteer executive their actions during the rebellion. The reports are dated September 1917 and show "The utter futility of the rising and the Treachery and Callousness of the Germans toward their unfortunate dupes."

GERMAN LINE OF RETREAT FROM SALIENT THREATENED.

London, July 25. Nine thousand reserves from the army of Crown Prince Ruphricht, of Bavaria, and a division from the Eastern end of the line have been rushed to the aid of the Crown Prince William between Soissons and Rheims. With the American troops in France, the Germans may well hesitate to push more troops into the already crowded salient seeing the difficulty they have of defending those already there. German resistance on the Southern side of the Salient has been reduced to a mere shell and the enemy doubtlessly is consolidating on keeping open the Northern outlets of the salient. The Allied drive toward Oulchy Le Chateau not only threatens the enemy communications with Fere En Tardenois but it is a serious threat for the German troops around Epieds whose line of retreat would pass through Fere.

Miss Antoinette Forbes of Windsor, went to Tatamagouche to be present at the funeral on Saturday of her brother, Rev. Wm. Forbes, whose very sudden death from blood poisoning has erribly shocked his family and friends.

TRURO STORES WILL CLOSE AT 6 P. M., TODAY, THURSDAY, and also on Tuesday next, to enable all to attend CHAUTAUQUA.

MUNITION WORKERS OFFICIAL LY NOTIFIED MUST WORK OR BE DRAFTED.

London, July 27. The announcement last night of Premier Lloyd George that all workmen absent from factories on or after Monday, will be deemed to have voluntarily placed themselves outside the munitions industry and that they will become liable to military service, was issued too late to reach the bulk of the strikers last night. Consequently it was not generally known in the strike areas. No reports reached London last night of an extension of the strike and the great bulk of the workers still remain unaffected. Such important centres as London, Manchester, Leeds, Nottingham and Huddersfield for instance, remain cool.

ALLIES CLAIM 30,000 PRISONERS IN PRESENT OFFENSIVE.

Paris, July 27. The number of German prisoners captured by the allies since the beginning of the counter-offensive is placed at 30,000 by the Havas Agency.

EXPECTED GERMANS WILL MAKE A STAND ON RIVER VESLE.

Paris, July 29. The retrograde movement of the Germans apparently has assumed a great impetus since Saturday. In some places along the Chateau Thierry-Soissons road, French cavalry is interfering with the movements of the German rear-guards. In well informed circles there is a feeling that the Germans will attempt to make a stand on the River Vesle.

GERMAN EDITOR AGAINST GERMAN MILITARISM.

Amsterdam, July 29. Maximilian Harden devotes practically the whole of today's Die Suksucht to proving that chancellor Von Hertling's charge against the allies, that they want to annihilate Germany

VICTORY LOAN IN NFD OVER-SUBSCRIBED.

St. Johns, Nfld, July 30. Final reports issued from the first victory loan campaign in Newfoundland showed a total of $3,000,000—an over subscription of fifty per cent.

BRITAIN'S AIMS REGARDING RUSSIA.

London, July 30. The British Government has defined its aims regarding Russia, in reply to the Provisional Government of Siberia, according to the Daily Mails Correspondent at Vladivostok. The statement follows:—"The Aim of His Majesty's government is to secure the political and economical restoration of Russia with out internal interference of any kind; and to bring about the expulsion of enemy forces from Russian soil. His Majesty's government categorically declares that it has no intention of infringing to the slightest degree on the territorial integrity of Russia.

BRITAINS ; WAR EXPENSES

Ottawa, Ont., July 31. The war is costing the people of Great Britain the gigantic sum of $35,330,000 per day or $1,455,000 every hour or nearly $25,000 a minute according to the British Ministry. Britain's national debt has increased during the war from $3,225,000,000 to $39,900,000,000. Before the war the people of Great Britain paid taxes amounting to approximately $1,000,000,000 a year; today they are paying taxes to the tune of $3,270,000,000 annually. In spite of this Great Britain releases her third war loan of $5,000,000,000.

INFORMATION REACHING STOCKHOLM.

Information reaching Stockholm, shows that the Bolsheviki regime has come to the end of its tether and that the Bolsheviki Russian masses, workmen and peasants—are about to rise in arms against Bolsheviki tyranny.

GERMANS FEAR COMBINED RE-ALLIED ATTACK.

London, July 30. Prisoners captured in one of our effective raids on July 28 state that the German troops are no longer boasting about the coming offensive. On the contrary all prisoners claim the Germans are in deadly fear of an anticipated Allied attack.

LAST MAN OF ONE GERMAN COMPAN YKILLED.

London, July 31. The conviction is unaltered that the Germans have no intention of standing this side of the Vesle-prisoners report severe losses. Two stretcher bearers say their Company went into action with reduced members and that this morning, the Commanding Lieutenant, told them that only thirty men were left, while during this morning fight all the remaining thirty were killed.

THE ABLE MEN IN 1867.

To the Antigonish Casket we are indebted for the following interesting article on Reminiscences of the Public Men of 1867.

"The death of Dr. Hugh Cameron, former Federal member for Inverness, and the reminder that Judge A. W. Savery, once M. P., for Digby, still lives, recalls the fact that no more able body of men ever went to the Parliament of Canada from any one of the Provinces than the eighteen representatives who were elected to the first Parliament of the Dominion from Nova Scotia on the eighteenth of September, 1867. The two giants, of course, were Joseph Howe, from Hants, the leader of the Anti-Confederates, and Charles Tupper, from Cumberland, the latter being the one man who had been returned as a supporter of the Union. Two big men had also fallen by the electoral way-side, 'Jim' McDonald, in Pictou, afterwards Minister of Justice in Sir John MacDonald's National Police Administration, and Adams George Archibald in Colchester, was later on returned to Ottawa, was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, in the same capacity, where he publicly thanked Riel for heading off a Fenian invasion with four hundred followers, and gave him a little keepsake of 600 pounds into the bargain. Colchester's first M. P. in the new Parliament was A. Woodbury McLean who came out of his shipyard at Great Village, defeated the brilliant Archibald, accepted the situation with Joe Howe, after repeal had been a failure, became Finance Minister in a Tory government, and his brochure on protection was considered one of the finest products of the great National Policy Campaign. The man who defeated Jas. McDonald, of Pictou, was another shipbuilder, J. W. Carmichael, who entertained Blake and Laurier during their Nova Scotia tour in 1881, and who remained as long as he lived a close personal friend of the present Liberal leader. The other county to send two members to Ottawa in the first Parliament was Halifax, which sent Alfred G. Jones and Patrick Power, the first an old Johnstone Tory before Confederation, and the second named a Joe Howe Liberal, and the respected father of the present Senator Lawrence G. Power. Hon. A. G. Jones was a West India merchant, a born aristocrat who wore black kid gloves, as he looked over his fish piles, and was one of the ablest men in the MacKenzie Cabinet, holding the portfolio of Militia and Defence, Patrick Power, although a very strong party man, kicked over the traces and voted with Sir John Tupper when the Washington Treaty came before Parliament for ratification, although Mr. Jones, his colleague, opposed the measure. When Hon. W. B. Vail was taken into the Cabinet, after having carried on the Annand Government in the Lower House for many years, and was defeated in Digby at his second election. Alfred G. Jones took his place, and it was on that occasion that the able and eloquent merchant was almost enough for the Cumberland war horse at a famous debate in the Halifax Drill Hall, the night of Vail's crushing defeat in the County of Digby.

A very clever man also went up to Ottawa from Lunenburg, when the first Canadian Parliament was called in the person of E. M. McDonald, the uncle of the present day "E. M." and quite as eloquent and able in debate, both on the platform, and on the floors of Parliament. Annapolis sent at the same time W. H. Ray, whose "dancing lessons" at the Capital were the theme of some very witty letters written by Martin J. Griffin, then in the press gallery for the "Halifax Herald." The neighboring County of Kings sent Col. L. de V. Chipman, a comparatively able man, who was cut off in his prime by smallpox, although Dr. Tupper, who was a very able practitioner in his time, tried his best to save him.

Shelburne, which has since been united to Queens for Federal electoral purposes, was represented in that particular Parliament by the Hon. Thomas Coffin, a retired master mariner, becoming a member of the Liberal Cabinet when Alexander MacKenzie came to power in 1874, or seven years following Confederation. Another very brilliant man, whom the anti-Confederates sent to Ottawa in 1867 was Hugh McDonald, of Antigonish, who later on became a Conservative Cabinet Minister, with the portfolio of Militia and Defence, while W. Ross was elected from Victoria, and he also entered the MacKenzie Cabinet, making way later for his successor by becoming Collector of Customs for the port of Halifax, the position having been previously held by E. M. McDonald.

Stewart Campbell, of Guysboro, was also another capable representative from Nova Scotia, he being also first sent as a pronounced anti-Confederate, as was Frank Killam from Yarmouth. Dr. Hugh Cameron, who came up to Ottawa from the County of Inverness in 1867, was a sturdy Scotch Catholic, and having taken his M. D. from an American University, he served as a surgeon in the Northern army during the Civil War, and returning to Nova Scotia at the close of the conflict, was invited by Howe to contest Inverness, although a native of Antigonish County and a graduate of St. Francis Xavier. Although the great repeal battle was fought over again when Joe Howe accepted the situation and entered Sir John's Cabinet, as Secretary of State in 1869, that great orator was practically followed in his political transition by McLean of Colchester, McDonald of Lunenburg, McDonald of Antigonish, Cameron of Inverness, and McKeagney, of Cape Breton, and when Tupper entered the Government after Howe's death, the old anti-Confederate party, which Howe had led into the Commons, after the election of 1867, the once solid phalanx was soon a thing of the past. Chipman of Kings, had gone over: Ray of Annapolis was accepted by Tupper as the Government candidate in Annapolis; the eloquent "Jim" McDonald had come back in time to make the ever-remembered speech on the Pacific Scandal Debate; Jones and Power were in turn defeated in Halifax, and once more Tupper had a majority of his countrymen at his back before the old Government fell in 1873. It was, indeed, a powerful and brilliant galaxy that entered the House of Commons from Nova Scotia at the first Parliament following the Union.—Montreal Gazette.

BACK FROM THE FRONT.

Inverness Man Past Age and Who Comes of Soldier Stock Has Done His Bit.

W. L. Blair, Chief of the Police of the Inverness Coal Company, passed through New Glasgow this week enroute home from overseas, where though past military age, he did his bit. He is a Colchester born, a son of Col. W. M. Blair, who at one time commanded the Colchester and Pictou 78th Highlanders. A son of Mr. Blair is also at the front.

W. L. Blair saw service in the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police and was in the Duck Lake fight at the time of the second Reil Rebellion, in 1885. En route home he stopped off at Shubenacadie, and spent Sunday with his parents, Col. and Mrs. W. M. Blair, who are yet hale and hearty. He also stopped off and called on old home friends in Truro. He was looking fine.

THE LAST ASTHMA ATTACK

May really be the last one if prompt measures are taken. Dr. J. D. Kellough's Asthma Remedy will safeguard you. It will penetrate to the bronchial passage and bring about a healthy condition. It always relieves and its continued use often effects a permanent cure. Why not get this long-famous remedy today and commence its use? Inhaled as smoke or vapor it is equally effective.

A ROTARY STEAM ENGINE INVENTED BY JOHN N. SPENCER TRURO, A GREAT SUCCESS.

Mr. John N. Spencer of the Spencers Garage and Machine Shop, Esplanade Truro, gave on the 30th quite a thorough testing out of his recently invented Rotary Steam Engine.

This new type of steam engine is certainly an advanced step in the principle of steam engine construction.

Mr. Spencer's model 7 h.p. steam rotary engine in size is only about fourteen inches in diameter and four inches in width and weighs not more than sixty pounds. It develops great and steady speed and runs as smooth as a sewing machine.

There are no parts or gears, the engine occupies but little space and can be connected up if desired direct to the shafting in any place required. No belts or other fixtures, are required to drive the attach machine.

Mr. Spencer has invented a wonderful engine. He has applied for patent rights in Canada and United States.

Mr. E. A. Farguhar, a member of the Spencer's Garage and Machine Co. has secured an option on this steam engine and as soon as the patents are secured will be ready to negotiate with parties wishing to buy the patent rights or to arrange for the manufacture of the engine.

Mr. Spencer is to be congratulated on his success in producing such a valuable and effective new power producer for the world use.

OBITUARY.

Charles Campbell Nickerson.

Under the shadow of the great conflict which has drenched the world in blood and sorrow the lesser tragedies which happen around us every day pale into insignificance. But to those immediately affected by them they are none the less sore and heartrending.

On July 15th the community of Upper Stewiacke was shocked and saddened beyond all remembrance by the sudden and tragic death of Charles C. Nickerson, a young man in the full vigor of life and health, known to everyone as "Charlie". The deceased had since childhood been subject to periodic fainting spells and it was one of such which brought about his untimely end. He was going about his work as usual on the morning of the 15th. Not coming to dinner at the regular time, his uncle and aunt with whom he resided, became anxious and starting a search, found him lying dead in the barn, he having fainted and fallen from considerable height while doing the noonday chores.

Charlie Nickerson was known and remembered by everyone who ever spent so much as a few days in the quiet little community of Springside Upper Stewiacke. His constant cheerfulness, despite the heavy cross of the affliction laid upon him; his obliging off-hand manner; his ready rejoinder, made him a favorite with all. He had resided with his uncle, Mr. Jas. Creelman, since the death of both of his parents when he was only a child, and in that home he will be sorely missed. A faithful, energetic toiler from dawn till dark, no matter who came or went, Charlie was always there. He was a member of Springside congregation for the past eleven years and in church and Sunday School his place was never vacant.

The funeral, which was held on the 17th, was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Dr. Archibald, and was one of the largest, if not the largest ever seen in Springside church. The sudden passing of one whom we knew so intimately for so many years reminds us of that immortal verse:

Oh! why should the spirit of mortal be proud?
Like a fast flying meteor, a fast flitting cloud,
A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,
Man passes from earth to his rest in the grave.

This is to certify that fourteen years ago I got the cords of my left wrist nearly severed, and was for about nine months that I had no use of my hand and tried other Liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. By a persuasion from a friend I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and used one bottle which completely cured me, and have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it, and would never be without it.

VERY SAD ACCIDENT.

Bright Young Man Lost His Life in the Steel Works Last Sunday.

On Sunday morning the accidental death of Randal McDonald, the eldest son of Mr. Andrew McDonald, Acadia Street, New Glasgow, took place at the plant of the Eastern Car Co., Trenton. The young man while in a girder by one of the cranes some 33 feet from the floor, came into contact with a live wire, by which he was severely burned and shocked. He then fell to the floor and his neck and back broken. Death of course, was almost instantaneous.

A coroner's jury was impanelled yesterday morning and a verdict of accidental death returned. The deceased was a particularly fine young man and highly respected by all who knew him.— Eastern Chronicle.

The very sad affair has called forth wide spread and deep sorrow, for deceased was a clean, manly lad, liked and respected by all who knew him. It was only last week that he was in this office, full of health, and vigor and of hope for the future.

He was a member of the Electrical Workers union, the members of which attended the funeral Wednesday morning.

SLIGHTLY GRASPING.

At a court held in a country town within twenty miles of Glasgow a rustic was charged with some petty offence, at the instance of a man notorious for his grasping disposition and the readiness with which he tried to annex all the odd little patches of ground in the district for his own use.

In the course of the trial the magistrate said to the defendant: "What sort of a man is the complainer?" to which the accused cautiously replied: "Well, sir, he's just this sort of a man that if he had a' the world tae himself he would be wantin' a wee bit outside for taties."

WEDDING BELLS.

HEATHER—FARNHAM.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized July 18th, at the home of the bride's brother, J. U. Farnham, 106 Dorchester Street, St. John, N. B., when Reuben Pearl Heather of Oxford, N. S., was united in marriage to Miss Lottie Belle Farnham, of St. John, by Rev. D. J. McPherson. The bride was becomingly attired in a travelling suit of navy blue broadcloth with hat to match.

The bride has been a member of staff of E. A. Dykeman, and she was splendidly remembered by fellow employees. Among the many costly gifts received was a cheque from the bride's mother, while the groom's present to the bride was a string of pearls. After a dainty lunch the bridal pair left for Moncton where they will start on a motoring tour of the provinces after which they will take up their residence at Little River where the groom is a prosperous farmer. Good wishes of the bride's many friends go with herin leaving St. John.

NO PLACE FOR THE BOOZE DRINKING AUTO-DRIVER.

There are many complaints heard these days against drunken drivers of autos, at night, on the roads outside of Truro. These booze drinking drivers are a serious menace to the traveling public, they endanger the lives of decent people who usually have the misfortune to meet them on the highway.

Let responsible car owners and drivers adopt "Safety First" actions by taking the number of the autos found in possession of drivers under the influence of liquor and have them put off the road and out of business by law. At the wheel of an auto is no place for a boozier these times.

A VITAL DIFFERENCE.

Everybody falls at one time or another into the snare of temptations, but there are sinners and sinners, and the difference between them is put by a negro preacher in homely phrase: "Unc' Si, de Holy Bible say, 'In speakin' ob de jus', Dat he do fall sebben times a day; Now, how's de sinner wuss?"

"Well, chile, de slip may come to all; But den de diff'nee foller— For, ef you watch him when he fall, De jus' man do not waller."

This recalls Canon Liddon's remark that it is characteristic of the true believer that though he may often fall he never concludes that his sin is invincible.

The two young men arrested in connection with this affair belong to Truro.

AN EYE TO BUSINESS.

Two young Irishmen in a Canadian regiment were going into the trenches for the first time, and their captain promised them 5 shillings each for every German they killed.

Pat lay down to rest, while Mick performed the duty of watching. Pat had not lain long when he was awakened by Mick shouting: "They're comin'! They're comin'!" "Who's comin'?" shouts Pat. "The Germans, replies Mick. "How many are there?" "About fifty thousand." "Begorra, shouts Pat, jumping up and grabbing his rifle, "our fortune's made!"

RECEPTION TO PTE. ROLAND FLECK, SOUTH BRANCH.

On Monday evening July 22nd a reception was held in the South Branch hall in honor of Pte. Roland Fleck who has returned from France, wounded in the right arm. The hall was beautifully decorated with flags and flowers, and many friends gathered to extend a welcome to the returned hero. Mr. Wm. Nelson was the chairman and remarked that Roland brought back his receipt—his wounded arm. Pte. Fleck in his short speech showed that his modesty equaled his valor. Rev. L. W. Parker and Robinson Cox, M. D., made splendid patriotic addresses, music and recitations were also rendered. After singing the National Anthem ice-cream and cake was served and an opportunity was given to congratulate the hero of the evening.

GREAT STRIKE IN UNDER THE SEA WORK.

A deep sea diving machine, which it is expected will be used in attempts to raise torpedoed vessels, was successfully tested in Lond Island Sound.

It went down ninety-eight feet unpropulsion of electrically driven propellers—for which current was supplied by a generator, on a barge—bored holes in a steel plate, inserted rivets and brought the plate to the surface.

A request for a government test will be made by the inventor, W. D. Sisson, president of the American Salvage Company, 115 Broadway, Manhattan.

The machine is oval-shaped, nine feet long, seven feet six inches in diameter and weighs nine tons. It has a pair of propellers on the bottom for moving up and down and two on the side for propulsion forward or back. Magnets on the outside will hold the machine against a ship while the holes are being bored and the rivets placed. It is intended to use the machine to fasten water-filled pontoons to ships, then bring the ship to the surface by pumping out the pontoons.

IMPERIAL PREFERENCE IS FATAL TO NATIONS SAYS BONAR LAW.

Mr. Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will not admit that the policy of Imperial Preference is fatal to a League of Nations. Replying to questions Mr. Bonar Law said there would be no opportunity of carrying out the policy in war time but the Imperial Government had put its self in line with the Dominions Governments by accepting the principle.

By a decision of the privy council in London domination of some 48,000,000 acres of land in Southern Rhodesia remains in the Crown; but the British South Africa Company will continue to administer the land and may be reimbursed in financial matters.

IMPURITIES OF THE BLOOD COUNTERACTED.

Impurities in the blood come from in the action of the liver. They are revealed by pimples and unsightly blotches on the skin. They must be treated inwardly, and for this purpose there is no more effective compound to be used than Parme's Vegetable Pills. They act directly on the liver and by setting up healthy processes have a beneficial effect upon the blood, so that impurities are eliminated.

DEATH OF REV. WILLIAM McDONALD.

"Father William is dead." Such were the sad words that passed from lip to lip Wednesday evening, when it became known that Rev. William McDonald, for forty two years, the faithful beloved priest of Lourdes, was dead. It was known for some time that his health was not satisfactory, and about ten days previous to his death he was seized with quite a poorly turn, but rallied, after which the end came gradually.

His was a commanding figure, and he was beloved by his own people, liked and respected by all who knew him, because of his kindly, genial disposition. Indeed, his name was a household word in this part of Nova Scotia.

The Federationist extends deepest sympathy to the good people of the parish in the loss of their faithful spiritual adviser, and true friend.

Further reference to his life, and work will appear next issue.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Johnson, of Upper Stewiacke, have gone to the town of Stewiacke. Mrs. Johnson to clerk with Mr. Fred Nelson. Mr. Nelson is to be congratulated in securing so good an addition to his staff of employees. Upper Stewiacke was very sorry to lose such a good citizen, as Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were deservedly very popular here, their ever hospitable home genial manner and willingness to assist every good object in any way possible will certainly be a great loss to this community. We wish them success and happiness in their new home.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

PAY FOR SOLDIERS UNDER TREATMENT.

Pay and allowances for discharged sailors and soldiers undergoing treatment in the sanatoria and hospitals of the Department of Soldier's Re-establishment have been fixed by order-in-council. The scale will be the same as each individual man was in receipt of from either the army or navy before his discharge, with one or two slight variations. Dependents will receive militia or naval scale of separation allowance, but a special scale in lieu of any allowances paid from the Patriotic Fund has been fixed.

The order-in-council also contains a confirmation of the scale which has been paid to discharged men granted courses of industrial re-education.

Approximately 2,500 men are affected at the present time by the scale for treatment cases. The number of currents industrial re-education cases at the last compilation was slightly over 2,000 making a total of nearly 5,000 who are being paid by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment.

The new scale for dependents, which is to be in lieu of the Patriotic Fund, is as follows:

- Wife only $10.00 per month.
- Wife and one child, $19.00 per month.
- Wife and two children, $26.00 per month.
- Wife and three children, $32.00 per month.
- For each child in excess of three children, $5.00 per month, with a maximum allowance of $45.00 per month for wife and children.

A man with dependents will be required to assign at least $20.00 per month to his dependents, who will also receive the amount of separation allowance to which, but for his discharge, they would have been entitled under the pay and allowance regulations of the Department of Militia and Defence or the Department of Naval Service. In the event of a man being granted out-patient treatment, provided that his disability is such as to prevent him from obtaining or continuing employment, he shall receive an equivalent to the subsistence allowance to which, but for his discharge, he would have been entitled to on active service.

It is provided, however, that no member of the forces who is undergoing in-patient treatment, and is entitled to the allowance payable under these clauses, shall be paid for his personal use a larger sum than $3.00 per month, unless special authorization is given. The balance of his allowance shall be retained by the department or be deposited by the department in a bank or in the post office savings bank to his credit, and paid to him at the conclusion of his treatment.

It is provided that payment of pension and allowance shall be suspended during the man's receipt of treatment or training allowances, except that when a man is undergoing treatment by the Department of Soldier's Civil Re-establishment of such a nature as not to prevent him from obtaining or continuing employment, his pension and allowance, if any, shall be continued during such treatment, and he shall be entitled to receive from the department a discretionary amount, not exceeding $1.00 for each attendance for treatment, plus reasonable travelling expenses.

Men refusing treatment which a military medical board or a medical officer reports they require, may, in the discretion of the Board of Pension Commissioners, have their pensions reduced by not more than 50 per cent., and post discharge pay may be withheld until such discharged men have undergone and completed the treatment they require to the satisfaction of the Department of Soldier's Civil Re-establishment.

An important clause provides that allowances authorized by this order-in-council may be continued for one month after the completion of treatment or training, provided that the man's treatment or training has occupied a longer period than two months, that the man is not entitled to receive post discharge pay at the completion of such treatment or training, and that such continuation of payment is necessary to assist him in obtaining employment. The payment is also contingent upon good conduct during treatment or training.

The allowance for dependents shall not be paid in respect of any boy over 16 or girl over 17 years of age. The privileges extended by the order-in-council are not receivable by men who have been cashiered or dismissed from the service, deprived of commission or warrant for misconduct, or discharged from the service for misconduct, unless the department otherwise directs. Regulations have also been promulgated by the department whereby men undergoing treatment may receive civilian clothing—Canadian Patriotic Fund Bulletin, July 1918.

Mr. Ivan Finley and Rufus Taylor, of Meadowvale, were in Truro July 20th, returning home the same day.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTER RECEIVED FROM FLIGHT CAPTAIN ELLIS ANTHONY.

R.A.F. Airdrome, Guston, Rd, Dover, Kent, England.

Dear Father:— We are having some bad weather now, it has been fine until the last few days. I tested two new machines this morning, but have done nothing this afternoon. On Thursday I made a record trip to France and back. It is 37 miles each way. I took a new machine over, and another one came in which I flew back. From the time I left till I arrived back at Dover it was just one hour and fifteen minutes, pretty quick work. On Wednesday last I had charge of the burial of a German flight commander, who was shot down in the last raid we had. He fell into the sea six miles off the coast and died from exposure, he had two iron crosses. As tomorrow is Sunday I expect to go to church in the morning and have a good swim in the afternoon; if it is fine, unless I have to make a trip to France.

I heard the explosion when the American troops ship was sunk off here last Thursday morning. I believe most every one was rescued. A large number of American troops pass thru here on their way to France.

We are having lovely weather and doing lots of flying. I have been across to France a good many times with machines, especially the last few days, I was over today but did not have to stay long, as I flew back in another machine, and this afternoon I have been testing new machines for climb and gun test. I had two up. They went up six thousand feet in less than five minutes, so that is not too bad; they are certainly fine machines and do certainly climb. On this job I get good flying experience types as perhaps in one day I will fly several types of machines. I heard a few days ago that Dallas had been killed. It was too bad as I heard such a fine fellow. It was he who wrote to you when I was wounded, he was my C. O. at that time. McDonald a Nova Scotian I knew was killed a few days ago. A good many of the old pilots have been killed lately, but we have the best of the Germans in air for every one of our pilots that are left, we kill at least three Germans, and we have lots of machines. I have taken twenty five new ones to France since I came here. I was down to Eastbourn on Sunday; it is a lovely place about forty miles away a seaside resort. I flew down, took a machine and some square parts to an airplane which had broken down. June 18th. A week ago I received word I was to go to France at once, but my C. O. got that order cancelled, and I am to stay here for two months; and then go to France I am in a bombing squadron that is just forming, for the purpose of bombing submarines. We have not started work yet, but expect to soon. I have been over to France seven times in the last four days taking new machines across, but will only have a few more trips to make. I was taken on a film for the movie pictures last week; it was part of the film of the Zebruge and Ostend stunt. The part I was in is where four of five full flying kit, the film is entitled, "Zebruge and Ostend, so if you hear of it being shown go and see it, it is very good and is to be sent all over the world, so in time it is should get to Nova Scotia. I am writing to Uncle Silas, and shall try get him across to England on leave, as American Officers are not allowed to come over here, I shall get him to come to Calais or Boulogne, and get permission to fly him across, I think he would like that all right. July 1st. It is a fine day and as it is Dominion Day of course there are to be sports this afternoon at Folkstone, I expect to be to sports this afternoon at Folkstone, I expect to go down about 1.30 and spend the afternoon. We have been flying quite a little lately and have started our own patrol, but not going properly yet. We are to escort convoys as well as patrol. I have seen to France several times lately but do not expect to go again soon as the machines do not fly from Willie Steing; yesterday, he is in a squadron in France and likes it very well. He has only been there a short time. I have my new R.A.F. uniform and like it very good, but not nearly so well as my old R.N.A.S. uniform. We have had new potatoes and peas for a week, or more suppose you will have them at home by the time you get this letter. Will close now with love to all at home. Your son, ELLIS.

they must smash it in with a hatchet what for, I don't know—part of the programme I suppose. At one little blaze which I witnessed, after having wasted a lot of time smashing in the door, they commenced to "holloa" after a while a brave man put his foot inside the house—great cheers from the crowd, myself included, but they died down as he retreated—while all this palaver was going on, the fire was seen to die out, the reason being, some of our lads had got in at the back and put it out with 3 or 4 buckets of water! This so enraged the firemen, that—well it is a providence we do not understand French very much or we should have felt hurt by the compliment; hurled at us for not minding our own business. However, we gave three cheers and a tiger for the Fire Brigade patted them on the back and helped them haul their ancient extinguisher back. Keep smiling. JAMES WOMERSLEY.

YOU FEEL FINE. Fatigue is the result of poisons in the system, the waste matter resulting from the activities of life. The kidneys have failed to filter these poisons from the blood and you are tired. But awaken the kidneys and liver by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you soon feel fine. The poisons are swept from the system, the pains and aches are gone and you are ready for work and for play.

EXTRACT FROM RECENT LETTER FROM JAMES WOMERSLEY IN FRANCE. Dear All:— Just a line to say all is well with me and I hope it is the same with you. I won't distract you with any lectures on drainage, rabbit hutches or chicken coops, or the war. I know you must be fed up with it, as I am. I know you don't want to hear about hairbreadth escapes, they sound too much like a dime novel. I will tell you just a little of life in a French Village under shell fire. Every morning the women line up at the bread shop to draw their rations. Sometimes, they stay there till noon and don't they do some talking! It is like a threshing machine. It is very laughable but yet sad. All at once a shell drops and the chattering ceases for a moment then it is worse than ever! At night they all promenade to dugouts to sleep, for bombs are dropped at night, they the bombs; make quite a noise and shake the very earth. I saw six houses smashed in and saw the women laughing and talking round the debris shortly afterwards. They have about 60 years behind them, but still they are very heroic when a little blaze starts up, they gather up their antiquated apparatus and start to the scene of action. Instead of opening the door by the correct method, of turning the knob or raising the latch,

Miss Norma Jean Cox of the News Publishing Co, Staff Truro spent Sunday at her home Upper Stewiacke.

The net result of the German retreat has been an Allied advance of from seven to eight miles on a front of twenty miles and the capture of almost a score of villages, several of them most important. The most valuable strategical result is the restoration to the Allies of the Great Paris-Chateau Thierry—Chalons Railway by means of which the Campaign front is best reactivated and which is a great factor in future developments.

Dr. Albert and Mrs. Culton, Shubenacadie, autoed here Wednesday afternoon, and spent the night here, among friends—New Glasgow Enterprise.

BROOKFIELD, COLI CO.

July 29—Mrs. Frank L. Taylor of Brookfield, and Mrs. Fred Jeffers of Upper Stewiacke have just returned from Meccan, where they were visiting their sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Forbes. In the Drs. car they were taken for a delightful trip through the rich and prosperous county of Cumberland. Leaving Meccan they motored through Athel, Spring Hill, Rodney, River Phillip, Oxford, Pugwash and thence up shore through Linden Northport, Tidnish to the New Brunswick line returning over the far famed Tynda all road to Amherst and thence to Maccan, we almost suspect that our friends enjoyed them selves so greatly that they will influence their good husbands to purchase, farms, in some rich district of the neighboring country. We understand Mr. William Gourley has purchased the cottage on St. Andrews' Street, owned by Mr. William Holesworth and lately occupied by Mr. William Flemming. Mrs. Martha Fisher is spending a few days in Stewiacke East. Mrs. C. Mackie and three children of Sydney, C. B., are guests of Miss A. F. Putnam at Onaway Lodge. Mrs. Jessie Smith of Halifax was in town last week calling on friends en route to Middle Stewiacke where she will visit for a time. Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Marshall returned home a few days ago from a delightful auto trip through New Brunswick. Miss Mabel Myers of Halifax was the guest of Miss Mary Reid for a few days last week. Mrs. W. G. Ervin and baby are visiting Mrs. Ervin's mother Mrs. Hines at LONDONDERRY STATION, COL. CO.

July 29—Mrs. J. A. Peppard and children of St. John, arrived here on Sunday night to visit friends.

Red Cross met on Friday with very good attendance. The new name was added to the honor roll that of James Creelman, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. I. Creelman, now of Truro, but former residents of this town. Sox went sent to the following boys, Roy Carter, Jas. Smith, Arnold Smith, Wm. Gelling and Chester Marr, some interesting reading matter was before the meeting. Materials for sewing and knitting were given out and a nice supply of finished work brot in.

Lieut. Myrtle Morrison, who is on furlough will join her regiment on Aug. 2nd. She and her mother Mrs. S. G. A. Morrison have had pleasant visits to Parrsboro and Fredericton. Steps are being taken to give our Londonderry heroine a reception before leaving for her duties overseas.

Londonderry is getting to be quite a summer resort, and we do not know of any place where the scenery is better, or the climate more healthy. People are beginning to recognize this fact, and the future of the town looks more progressive every day. Merchants here continue to supply groceries clothing and wares of every kind to an ever growing patronage, from customers from the surrounding country.

Most of the calls for Drs. come from outside vicinities, but now and then, our good Dr. calls at the town homes and bestows his blessings, and occasionally in his absence, another Dr. calls at his home while he is away and bestows a blessing and thus the burdens and blessings of life are distributed quite evenly each one getting his allotted share.

Mrs. Jas. Starrett, Bass River, is visiting her mother Mrs. Bayne McLaughlin of Londonderry.

Mrs. Thomas left by train on the 25th for a visit in Cumberland County. Miss Leta Cox, went to Wentworth on the 24th.

Mrs. Reeves, Londonderry, spent two days last week visiting her daughter Mrs. J. W. Fulton of this place.

Mrs. G. R. Smith and daughter, Miss Florine, with a party of friends motored to Gt. Village on the 27th in their car.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Giddens accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. John MacKay East Village, motored to Earlton, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Currie Giddins, were also on a motor on Sunday to Brule.

We would like to know if the Truro Scott Act inspectors are sleeping. Several days during last week two large cars, said to belong to Truro came here meeting trains and taking off large number of suit cases, one day car backed close against the tank behind the station and took on several suitcases which were handed off to the C.G.R. The same afternoon another car took for a ballast a barrel bostered it between the seats carried it neatly with rugs and sped away, Saturday night two more cars took on board a number of suitcases. The people here think these very suspicious looking cargoes. There was a lady in one of the cars on two occasions, somebody should get busy.

Edward Reeves and Ernest Patiquin Londonderry are now employed with the I.R.C. Bridgemen and have gone with them to N. B.

R. S. Bigney will take charge of the mail and carrying of passengers between the Station and Londonderry today. Miss May McKinnon will have charge of the Post Office of Londonderry.

Miss Vida Stevens, Londonderry, was at the Station on the 24th.

J. A. Christie and Mrs. Christie left for Aldershot today.

Mrs. D. Fields and children Belmont spent Sunday at the Station.

Miss Bertha Jobb of this place intends spending part of this week in Truro.

Among the several good vegetable gardens of this place we think that, that of Mrs. H. Jobb takes the lead. It is admired by everybody and shows both thrift and experiences in cultivating.

H. Weatherbee has his house on its foundation and is making it ready for habitation.

Mr. Henderson of U. S. who has been visiting friends at Londonderry Station returned home on the 24th, accompanied by his son, Roy who has been living with his uncle D. Phillips and attending business college at Truro

Mrs. Stevenson Smith and daughter of Sydney have taken up their residence in Londonderry.

Rev. F. Scoates preached at Londonderry morning and evening and at the Station in the afternoon on Sunday.

Wm. Kelley of the I.R.C., spent Saturday at his home here.

Mrs. Gulvin and two daughters of N. B., are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John MacKay, East Village, Miss Edith Crittendon is a visitor at Folly Mt.

The first blueberry pie appeared here on the 27th.

She Had Heard it Before

"I'll attend to you in a minute," was the way her mother addressed Beth when she was to be punished. One day she sent the little girl to the store on an errand. She returned crying: "He was goin' to 'pauk me, and I wunned home." "He wouldn't do that," said mother. "Es um would," sobbed the child. "He kep' sellin' to older folks 'an' sayin' to me; 'I'll attend to you in a minute."

SUNDAY'S BULLETINS FOR THE NEWS WERE GOOD, THEY ARE:

In their pursuit of the retreating Germans, North of the River Marne, French troops have reached the South bank of the River Ourcq, it was announced by the French war office. In the Champagne a number of German attacks were repulsed by the French. The Germans retreated along the whole front North of the Marne. French and allied troops, pressing hard upon the enemy rear guards, have reached the line of Bruyeres Villeneuve sur Fere Courmont, Passy, Gringny Cuisles La Neuville and Chaumusey. The allied forces have advanced more than ten miles north east of Chateau Thierry. The right bank of the Marne has been cleared of the enemy. Field Marshal Haig's report from British headquarters in France said the hostile artillery had shown some activity during the day on the Northern position of the British front. French cavalry, supported by some infantry, advancing in the Soissons-Rheims, salient, had reached the District South of Villers sur Fere, a little more than a mile to the Southeast of Fere En Tardenois and Sergy and a mile and a quarter east of Villers sur Fere. Southwest of Rheims, the French cavalry was advancing swiftly on the Ville En Tardonis road. The allied success was complete along the whole front. Half of the pocket in which the Germans had been cornered, had been taken. Fere En Tardonis, the town on the Ourcq river in the middle of the Marne pocket, which had been used by the Germans as a great supply base, was seriously threatened. The losses of the enemy have been extremely heavy. The Germans retreat was assuming a rapid character.

SUPPOSE.

Suppose, my little lady, Your doll should break his head, Could you make it whole by crying Till your nose and eyes are red? And wouldn't it be pleasanter To treat it as a joke, And say you're glad it was Dolly's, And not your head that broke?

Suppose you're dressed for walking, And the rain comes pouring down, Will it clear off any sooner Because you scold and frown? And wouldn't it be nicer For you to smile than pout, And so make sunshine in the house, When there is none without?

Suppose your task, my little man, Is very hard to get, Will it make it any easier For you to sit and fret? And wouldn't it be wiser, Than waiting like a dunce, To go to work in earnest, And learn the thing at once?

Suppose that some boys have a horse And some a coach and pair, Will it tire you less, while walking, To say, "Isn't fair?" And wouldn't it be nobler To keep your temper sweet, And in your heart be thankful You can walk upon your feet.

And suppose the world don't please you, Nor the way some people do, Do you think the whole creation Will be altered just for you? And isn't it, my boy or girl, The wisest, bravest plan, Whatever comes or doesn't come, To do the best you can?

AERTEX CELLULAR UNDERWEAR

The chief function of underclothing is to assist in maintaining the normal temperature of the body. The normal temperature is about 98 - Fahr.-and a deviation from this is a recognized sign of disease.

It is evident that clothing to be healthy must not interfere with the action of the skin—it must be porous—it must be a good non-conductor of heat to prevent the undue access of heat or cold as well as to prevent the escape of the heat generated by the body. Aertex Cellular is easily washed and does not shrink. It is light and comfortable to wear and does not irritate the most sensitive skin. It is very durable.

REPORTED MISSING.

From one of our valued contemporaries we take the following poem. In these days, alas, the words "Reported Missing" are painfully familiar, and few can realize what they mean to the anxious loving hearts which hope, and pray, and wait. In such cases even the terrible words "Killed in action" would seem to be of lesser burden;

"Not missing from the Father's heart,
Not missing from His ordered ranks;
For this, through pain and bitter smart
Faith still, with tears, can give Him thanks.

We cannot tell where he may be,
On earth or in the heavenly light;
A captive or a son set free
He still is in the Father's sight.

God sends His soldiers far away
To bear the battle's strain and stress;
But some He calls, e'en from the fray,
To rest with Him in blessedness.

And here or there, they all are dear
To Him; He knows them every one;
And plans for each, afar or near,
Until the battle day is done.

Within His sight each son of His Remains; not one is wanting there;
The lad is indeed safe; he is,
Not missing but with God somewhere!"

—The "Zenana."

SHE DID—ONCE.

Little Clarissa peeped at herself in the mirror on the overmantel, and addressed her father:
"Dad," said she, "every morning when I am going to school the boys catch hold of me and kiss me."
"Well, Clarrie," replied Dad, looking over his newspaper, "why don't you run away from them."
Clarrie fidgeted and cast her eyes down on the carpet.
"I did one morning," she said, hesitating, "and they—they didn't chase me."

It is estimated that about 3000 pelts, valued at $450,000 were sold from Prince Edward Island fox ranches at fur sales in the United States last spring. One pelt sold for $1000 and one for $7.50. The average price this year was higher than last.

FORDS' TRACTOR DISTRIBUTORS, FOR THIS TERRITORY.

Messrs Bligh and Prince have been appointed distributors for the Fordson Tractors in this territory. This is the Tractor which is in competition with all others. It has been selected by the British Government as being the most efficient and economical. 6000 of the Fordson Tractors have been purchased for use in the British Isles this year. It was this special Tractor which was selected by the Canadian Food Board as being the one best adapted to Canadian needs. This Board contracted for 1000 machines for use this Spring and they were found a wonderful help during seeding time. The Fordson Tractors burn Kerosene and give absolute satisfaction to users. Parties wishing to secure one or more of these famous Tractors should at once place their order with Messrs Bligh and Prince, the Distributors for this territory. See ad. in weekly news.

31st ANNUAL MEETING OF TRURO PRESBYTERIAL.

After an interval of almost twenty-nine years, Truro Presbyterial revisited Bass River on July 4th. On September 10th, 1889 the semiannual meeting of the society was held here with an attendance of 32 delegates. The Secretary reported $879.68 raised for Foreign Missions for the year.

Officers 1888-89

- President—Mrs. James Maclean, Great Village. 1st Vice-President—Mrs. J. A. Logan, Acadia Mines. 2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Robbins, Truro. Secretary—Mrs. D. Gunn, Truro. Treasurer—Mrs. Yorston, Truro.

The 31st Annual Meeting convened at 1.30 o'clock p. m. Owing to the unavoidable detention of Mrs. Harrington the opening exercises were conducted by the President Mrs. L. W. Parker, Mrs. A. W. Thomson leading in prayer. The President expressed her pleasure in introducing Mrs. Thomas, President of the Board, who was given a cordial reception.

Mrs. A. J. McDonald, Truro, conducted a Memorial Service, 16 members "having died" during the year. The exercises consisted in the reading of Rev. 21, the singing of Hymn 302, followed by a few well chosen words.

Mrs. James Fulton cordially welcomed the delegates and visitors to Bass River. To this address Mrs. Melville Cumming made a graceful reply. The roll of the Nominating Committee was called, and vacancies filled by the appointment of Mrs. Earle, Noel, and Mrs. Johnson, Great Village. The President appointed Mrs. Laurena and Mrs. Howard Dunlap, Committee on Resolutions and Courtesy.

The President's address was interesting and inspiring, and continued many practical suggestions.

The Secretary, Mrs. J. C. Gass, reported 31 auxiliaries with a membership of 865 and average attendance of 335 (Greenfield held no regular meetings but contributed to the funds $35 amount, of Thank-offering service) 39 members were added during the year, and 13 Life Members as follows:—two each in Bass River, First Church Truro and Shubenacadie; one each in Economy, Five Islands, Springside, Brookfield, Upper Steviacke, Noel, and St. Andrews Truro, 584 copies of "Message" are taken. Almost all the auxiliaries studied "In the Heart of India."

75 Officers and delegates responded to the Roll-Call. Mrs. H. V. Kent, Truro, read a carefully prepared paper in "Auxiliary Work," which she said had been read at another meeting, and followed this by a bright, impromptu talk on the same subject.

Mrs. C. B. Spencer, Great Village, Secretary of Young People's Work read her report. Two new Mission Bands have been organized, one at Noel Shore by Mrs. Earle, the other at Valley with Mrs. Bradley as Superintendent. The 16 Bands reporting have a membership of 527 with an average attendance of 289. Nine Life Members were added during the year. The sum of $342.58 was raised for Foreign Missions and $141.59 for Home Missions. Ten boxes have been forwarded and some in course of preparation.

The five Young Ladies Branches reporting have a membership of 125 with an average attendance of 66. Three Life Members were added. A new Branch was organized at Middle Steviacke $167.04 was raised for Foreign Missions and $46.50 for Home Missions. Six boxes were prepared. The Report speaks of "advancement in every line, but especially in the amount raised by Bands and Branches."

A practical paper on "Young Ladies Branch Work" prepared by Mrs. F. M. Milligan, Glenho-me was read by Miss Gertrude Smith, Truro. This was followed by a bright talk on "Mission Band Work" by Mrs. L. M. Christie, Truro, in which she gave her own experience in the work. This was on part (1) help from working on the Band (2) help from the "Message" (3) help from the "Message" (4) help from the mothers, which meant children interested.

Mrs. Thomson led in the discussion which followed. It was pointed out that in many cases necessary matter sent to the Secretary of the Mission Band is lost or mislaid, the child being ignorant of its importance. It was suggested, that the name of the Superintendent appear in the Annual Report the children being appointed Vice-Presidents until trained for the duties of office; and that only the minor matters be sent to the Secretary, the important ones to the Superintendent. Mrs. Thomson spoke of the necessity of leadership; and of the benefit which would ensue, if in each congregation some man might be found to establish a League or other organization for the boys too old for the Mission Band, thus keeping them in touch with the work of the church and training them to be in turn leaders of others.

The Report of Miss Helen Archibald Springside, Home Mission Secy, was read, also list of supplies. Ten auxiliaries report something done in th way of boxes for the Home Mission fields, but in most cases Red Cross work takes its place.

St. Andrew's Truro continues to support a missionary in the West and have contributed $250 for that purpose. The Presbyterial as a whole had as their representative in Stranger, Alberta, Rev. D. Kuh, from whom a most interesting letter was read by the Secretary. There is a marked decrease on the amount contributed for Home Missions. "Since a number of Auxiliaries do not allocate their money but send it in a lump sum to the Treasurer it is suggested, that as a guide, 1-30th the whole amount raised each year be given to Home Missions." More attention is being given to the study of Home Missions, which is a hopeful sign for the future. The report concludes "God has opened His hands and has provided us with the means, He has made it abundantly possible for us to Canada for Christ 'Let us go up at once and possess the land, for we are well able to do so.'"

The report of the Treasurer was read by Mrs. John Sprott, and Miss Jean Creelman, Truro, was on the main most encouraging. The amounts raised are as follows:—

Table with 2 columns: Category and Amount. Foreign Missions: $2249.30, Home Missions: 769.80, Wonsaw School: 165.60, Dr. McMillon's house: 372.25, Trinidad Special: 25.00.

Total amount raised: $3581.95. An increase overlast year of $108.76. Mrs. Dawson offered the dedicatory prayer. Hymn 488 was sung, after which the President announced a recess of 15 minutes.

On resuming business "The claims of the Missionary Conference at Wolfville as a training school for leaders" was interestingly presented by Mrs. W. P. Grant, Truro. Mrs. Thomson warmly commended the Conference and urged that members of auxiliaries use their influence in securing the attendance of some young person from their respective congregations.

The Nominating Committee brought in this report as follows:—

- President—Mrs. L. W. Parker, Middle Steviacke. 1st Vice-President—Mrs. J. C. Gass, Shubenacadie. 2nd Vice-President—Mrs. G. R. Smith, Londonderry. 3rd Vice-President—Mrs. James Fulton, Bass River. 4th Vice-President—Mrs. Thomas Roy, Maitland. 5th Vice-President—Mrs. H. V. Kent, Truro. 6th Vice-President—Mrs. Saml. Johnson, Newton Mills. Secretary—Mrs. Clarkson, Truro. Treasurer—Miss Jean Creelman, Truro.

Secy. Young People's Work—Mrs. Walter Ross, Brookfield. Secy. Literature—Mrs. E. Mattatall, Truro. Secy. of Supplies—Mrs. J. Wall, Truro. Home Mission Secy—Mrs. Wilson Madell, Milford.

Rep. on Board—Mrs. C. M. Dawson, Truro. The Committees appointed to nominate officers for the Board reported as follows: For President—Mrs. Robert Dawson, Bridgewater. Rec. Secy—Mrs. W. R. Campbell, Truro. Secy.—Education—Mrs. C. D. McIntosh, River John.

After repeating Lord's Prayer in concert the meeting adjourned. Tea was served to delegates and visitors at the Hall.

Evening Session.

The public meeting was opened at 7.30 o'clock. Hymn 432 was sung. Rev. Mr. Earle read Isaiah 40. Mr. Forbes offered prayer.

The President named Nominating Committee for next year [as follows];— Convener—Mrs. John Sprott, Truro. Mrs. J. C. Gass. Mrs. C. B. Spencer. Mrs. Howard Dunlap.

Miss Isabella McCulloch moved a vote of thanks to the retiring officers, Mrs. C. B. Spencer, Miss Helen Archibald and Mrs. J. C. Gass. This was seconded and carried by a standing vote.

Rev. Mr. Earle, Noel, complimented the Presbyterial on the despatch with which business was conducted, and also on the interesting nature of the discussions held. He spoke of the necessity of the Forward Movement in the Church, of the diverting of the energy now going out in patriotic work, into missionary channels when the war is over.

Rev. W. P. Grant, spoke of the oneness of the work of the men and women of the church, divisions of the same great army, engaged in the same work. All may find exercise for talents, whether great or small, in the world problem, which confronts us today. Reference was made to the discussion of the afternoon re the holding of the boys for the Church. Mr. Grant emphasized the fact that it was only thus we might expect to meet the needs of leaders in the coming days.

Mr. Robb announced as his subject "Korea, old and New". It was the earnestness and liberality of the Women's Missionary Society he said which incited the Foreign Mission Committee to undertake the work in Korea; and quoted the words of Carey "We have gone down into the dark mine of heathenism but you have held the ropes." American Missionaries had begun the work 35 years ago.

It was twenty years since Grierson, Footes and Macrae took up the work laid down by McKenzie; and seventeen years since he, himself, had arrive in the country. An exchange was made by which the American Church took over the work begun by McKenzie in the Western part of the country the Canadians taking up work in the Wonsan district. At that time the church in Wonsan consisted of but 100 converts.

One hundred years ago, Korea was known as "The Hermit Nation", prohibiting Western religion and forbidding the foreign; today it is the meeting place of the nations. Mr. Robb sketched with vivid strokes the changes that have come on the modes of travel, in the dress and manner of life of the people. The women were with few exceptions unable to read. The girls were nameless showing the status they held on home and society. Today educational advantages are theirs in common with their brothers. Some are teaching in the primary schools, and with success. They are also studying nursing, one graduating this year in Seoul.

Then there were 46 schools with 1600 scholars, today there are 600 schools enrolling 26,000 pupils. The church is getting the product of her educational system in the church and community of today.

Then there were 278 churches with 10,000 converts, now 3,000 churches have a membership of 200,000. Christ has been writing his name on the foreheads of the Covons. We must not forget, however, that there are 15,000,000 people in Korea, besides 1,250,000 living in Manchuria, only a very few of whom have any knowledge of Christianity. The great majority are still in bondage to the old superstitions; and the need is urgent for more men and women from Canada and United States to lead them into the light and to train them to become their turn teachers of others.

Mr. Robb sounded a note of warning. The terrible war which is convulsing our world today makes demands upon us which must be met, and the temptation comes to lessen our giving, for the congregation carrying on of Christ's war. The war in Europe is but one phase of the great war between selfishness and sacrifice. For us it is not war on missions, but war and missions. We must be loyal to the Captain of our salvation; faithful to carry out His commission.

Thus we may hope for the day when we shall cease, when His kingdom of righteousness and love shall be established in the hearts of men. Mr. John Sprott sang impressively a beautiful solo "Behold I stand at the door and knock."

Mrs. Thomson spoke of the unity of Home and Foreign Missions. They are not different but the same. Our commission is to give to every creature the knowledge of God. In His providence the heathen have been brought to our doors. We must save Canada for Christ. The Christian Ideals are the only thing which will keep the nations sweet and clean after the war. We have only been playing at Home Missions.

Mrs. Thomson also referred to the necessity of brighter spiritual life in the homes to welcome the boys back from the war. Growing out of it, they have gained a faith in God pure and simple. They must not fond in want. We must fight evil at home as they have fought it abroad. What would be the work of winning out in the struggle, if we lose our heritage here?

Mr. Forbes spoke a few closing words. Mrs. Lawrence read the report of Resolutions and Courtesy thanking the ladies of Bass River for their abundant hospitality, the choir for their assistance, Mr. John Sprott for the pleasing afforded us by his singing, the speakers of the evening for their stimulating addresses, and all who have helped to make the meeting a success. The report was adopted.

The minutes of the afternoon session were read and approved. Mr. Robb closed the meeting with prayer.

MR. B. J. ROGERS, RUN DOWN BY AUTO, HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Mr. B. J. Rogers, while riding his bicycle on Queen Street, near the Court House, Tuesday morning, was by accident run down, by an automobile driven by Chester Works who in some way lost control of his car and collided with Mr. Rogers. Mr. Rogers received bruises on his back, and shoulder and had a narrow escape from very serious injuries. His bicycle was broken and put out of business. This case may reach the police court.

DEATH OF CLARA M. McLEAN.

The many friends of Miss Clara Martha McLean were shocked to hear of her sudden death, Wednesday, July 10th, at her home in Sherbrooke, N.S.

Miss McLean, had been ill for nearly a year, eleven weeks had been spent in the Antigonish hospital, following a critical operation. She had been home two weeks when out of seeming improvement the angel of death called her home.

Miss McLean was greatly beloved by all who knew her as a neighbor and friend. Her life was a beautiful personification of unselfish Christian principles, kind, gentle and thoughtful. She never hesitated to lend a willing hand to those in need. Her interest and work in her church was quiet but unending, always faithful to the Sunday School and choir, when her health permitted.

Miss Clara was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. McLean, of Sherbrooke. She is survived by her parents and four brothers (one sister pre-deceased her in infancy). The deepest sympathy of all their friends go out to them, in this, their great loss. Although only in the prime of life Miss McLean was ready to hear the call of her Saviour, and surely would receive the precious welcome—"well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

The funeral service which was attended by a large concourse of friends was held at the family residence in Sher brooke Saturday, July 13th.

One brother Mr. Howard McLean of (Matapan) Boston, Mass., came down for the service and spent a few days with his parents at home—Eastern Chronicle.

MR. CHARLES BRYSON OF HILDEN, COL. CO., 88 YEARS VISITED TRURO.

Mr. Charles Bryson of Hilden, Col. Co., was in Truro on the 24th and visited his sons Messrs W. E. Bryson, Queen Street, Lewis Bryson, Arthur Street and Rufus Bryson Walker Street. This venerable Truro visitor, altho 88 years of age has all his faculties and is as active and as bright as a man of half his years.

He enjoyed his visit to town and the time spent with his sons.

An incident of the visit of King George to the American Battle Squadron which forms part of the British Grand Fleet shows that he has not forgotten his naval training. After inspecting the crew of the American flagship the King was conducted thru the ship by rear Admiral Rodman. Like every other vessel in the grand fleet she is always in instant readiness to put to sea. While inspecting her stroke hold the king noted this fact. Admiral Rodman there upon suggested that he should help to keep the vessel in steam, and the king promptly responded by picking up a shovel and throwing coal into her furnaces in expert strike fashion. "It is not the first time I have done this" he remarked laughing. "You are a lot better fireman than I am" responded the admiral. "You must remember" replied the King, "that my naval training was pretty thorough."

The Eternal Feminine.

The teacher was examining the class in physiology. "Mary you tell us," she asked, "what is the function of the stomach?" "The function of the stomach," the little girl, answered, "is to hold up the petticoat."

CANADA FIRST AGAIN.

At the inter-allied Conference in London on the care of disabled soldiers and sailors, Canada was bound to be in advance of all other countries in the systematic way in which she has gone about the matter of the future of invalided soldiers. King George was especially pleased with the position.

Canada had taken in this matter, and the thoro manner in which the work had been done. The World at this Conference got lots of big ideas from Canada.

The Dominion of Canada was represented at this allied Conference, of the Senator McLennan of the Sydney Post, and Major R. T. MacKeen.

The United States people have long ago expressed admiration of what Canada, has done and is doing for the rehabilitation of our invalided; and must lately have borrowed our Canadian Secretary of this Department; T. B. Kidner, Ottawa, to go to Washington and give our cousins a wrinkle or two on the re-educating and vocational training of disabled and invalided men from the battle fields.

UNITY AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Editor News, I listened to a very good sermon Sabbath evening—the text was Peter followed afar off—I don't mind much of the sermon, only the preacher made the statement that there were many people in the world today who really lived the Christian life but were outside of the Church.

The Church according to God's word is made up of believers in Jesus Christ. But what do we see today? Hundreds of Sects, each professing to believe in Jesus Christ, but living apart from each other. The preacher said it was a problem which he had not solved, how to "bring" those Peter's who lived the Christian life but denied their Lord by not joining a Church and he appealed to his hearers to help solve this problem.

I would like to say that he is on the right track to solve this problem. The very fact that two Truro Churches have united, even if only for a month, is a step in that direction. Truro contains at least eight churches all full of believers, all worshipping in spirit and in Truth the one God and acknowledging he one head, our Lord Jesus Christ, but kept apart by trivialities that do not effect the Christian life more than the different style of clothing effects the people who wear it. Why not throw away these trivialities and go back to the simple Pentecostal creed—There is one body and all believers members of that body and joined to the head by a living faith. At this time nearly all the forces of humanity are united under two heads. Those fighting for right and those who are fighting for might.

What a power would be added if the churches throwing away their petty differences would win in heart and soul in strength and mind, in

HUSBAND SAVES WIFE

From Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"For many months I was not able to do my work owing to a weakness which caused backache and headaches. A friend called my attention to one of your newspaper advertisements and immediately my husband bought three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me. After taking two bottles I felt fine and my troubles caused by that weakness are a thing of the past. All women who suffer as I did should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. JAE ROEBBERG, 620 Knapp St., N. E., Pittsburgh, Pa. Women who suffer from any form of weakness, as indicated by displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues," should accept Mrs. Roebberg's suggestion and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a thorough trial.

Honorably Discharged

From Canadian Army and R.A.W.M. Police on Account of Weak Heart.

Mr. Victor A. Tatton, Indian Head, Sask., writes: "It is with pleasure I am writing to let you know that I have been cured of weak heart by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills."

I had been a sufferer for nearly two years with heart trouble and could get no relief by using other kinds of medicine. I had been in the Canadian Army for nearly ten months and was honorably discharged on account of my heart.

I served in the Royal North-West Mounted Police, in 1917, and was also honorably discharged on the same account.

A friend of mine advised me to try your pills. After taking three boxes I was completely cured. You can please use this as you see fit."

Wherever there are people suffering with weak hearts, they can find no remedy that will do so much to make the heart regain strength and restore it to a normal and healthy condition as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

SMART DRESSES OF ALL MATERIALS.

Calico Vies with Satin—Velvet with Wool Dyed Laces as Trimmings

Calico makes very smart looking dresses that cost a good deal at the best places, but are not difficult to copy at a modest figure even though calico sells at many times its normal cost.

Some Dresses.

A dress of black calico, with small white dots smartly worn, had a wide jumper vest that crossed over, surplice fashion and ended in a sash at the side-made of fine white pique, this and the wide flaring cuffs on the sleeve gave a quite unusual air of distinction to the otherwise simple frock.
A dress worn on a club veranda the other evening, was of English embroidery topped by an over frock of black net, that was banded at the foot by a wide chantilly lace flounce, put on flat. The same lace draped the bodice over the embroidery, while the sleeves were transparencies of the net and lace.
A taffeta sash of French blue ended in one of the popular bunched up bows at the back that more than suggest the bustle.

A similar idea was embodied in a frock of white organdie with the usual panel front ornamented with narrow pleatings, topped with an over dress of figured chiffon that covered all the under dress, except the front panel, and was finished with a collar and wide cuffs of the organdie trimmed in narrow pleated frills.

Matching Sets.

Matching sets lose none of the prestige, and would be wearisome but for their infinite variety of form and color. Matching hats and bags, are most prevalent but beach cushions, parasols and every sort of jumper and smock are matched up after the same style, often with excellent effect, and as such accessories are worn with various skirts and frocks great variety is attained and changes many produced with few belongings.

Chiffon Sweaters.

Chiffon sweaters or smocks are among the latest bidders for favor and sleeveless jackets of velvet have rivals of silk, satins and ruffled chiffon that camouflage a passe frock successfully.
A dress of pink accordeon pleated organdie built on simplest belted smock lines, had a hat to match and a pair of leaf fan dyed pink completed the coolest possible looking costume.

SOVIET REPUBLIC IN A BAD WAY.

Amsterdam, July 26.
Premier Lenine, in a speech at Moscow, before the Government Conference of Factory Committee said the position of the Soviet Republic had become extremely acute in view of international complications, counter-revolutionary conspiracies and the food crisis, according to a Moscow despatch received by way of Berlin.

A REVOLUTIONARY POLITICAL CHANGE IN GERMANY

London, July 26.
A striking and revolutionary political change has just been made in Germany, says a Daily Mail despatch from Berne.
Very quietly and unostentatiously it is added, full executive and State rights have been granted to the Imperial General Staff. This means, it is declared, that the civil and military executives have been placed on an equal basis.

THE STORY OF THE STAIRS.

Everytime you go up stairs you can test your state of health—the condition of your blood.

Do you arrive at the top of the stairs breathless and distressed? Does your heart palpitate violently? Do you have a pain in your side? Perhaps you even have to stop half way up, with limbs trembling and head dizzy, too exhausted to go further without resting. These are unfailing signs of anemia. As soon as your blood becomes impoverished or impure the stair-case becomes an instrument of torture. When this is so you are unfit for work; your blood is watery, and your nerves exhausted, you are losing the joy of an active life and paving the way for a further break down and decline. In this condition only one thing can save you. You must put new, rich, red blood into your veins without further delay and rebuild your health anew. To set this new, rich blood give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and they will give you new vitality, sound health, and the power to resist and hrow off disease. For more than a generation this favorite medicine has been in use throughout the world and has made many thousands of weak, despondent men and women bright, active and strong.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MRS. GEORGE W. MURRAY DIED AT HOME WALKER STREET, JULY 24th.

All friends of Mrs. George W. Murray will regret to learn that she had died quite suddenly at the home residence, Walker Street at four o'clock p. m. July 24th.

Mrs. Murray had not been in very robust health for some time and her passing away was not unexpected. She had been up and around her home as usual when suddenly she was stricken with paralysis and peacefully slept away.

The deceased is survived in her immediate family by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. J. H. Morrison and one son Mr. Telwright Murray, of Boston. She also leaves four brothers, Henry Leaman, Dakota, U.S.A., Geo. H. Leaman, Truro, N. S., Oliver H. Leaman, New York, U.S.A., and Gordon Leaman, in Southern States, U.S.A., and four sisters, Mrs. John L. Miller, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Black and Mrs. Holmes all of Boston, Mass.

This greatly beloved and esteemed lady was the daughter of the late Mr. Robert Leaman, Moncton, N. B. When a young woman she moved to Truro in 1867 and was married and enjoyed a happy married life for nearly a half century; most of this long timeshe spent here.

She was a lady beloved by all her many acquaintances and a real mother in Israel.

The bereaved and sorrowing husband and family, have the sincere sympathy of all friends in Truro. The funeral services will be held Saturday at 2.30 p. m. from the late home Walker Street. Rev. W. P. Grant officiating.

TIDAL BORE AT BOARD LANDING.

The tidal bore was in sight at 1.25 p. m. July 24th and in 10 minutes from that time the water had risen ten feet at Board Landing Bridge.

UNVEILING OF AN HONOR ROLL.

Tuesday evening, at Zion Church, the unveiling of an Honor Roll to the colored Soldiers, who went Overseas, was witnessed by a good number of the Citizens Some 30 colored soldiers have joined the colors, including the former Pastor, Rev. W. A. White—the first colored Chaplain in Canada, to go across.

There were several patriotic songs rendered by the Choir in addition to Solos by Miss Taylor, Mr. Samuel Reece, a returned soldier, and several others.

The Rev. Mr. Perry, Chairman, opened the service by a very appropriate address, stating that they were there to Honor the Boys who had gone Overseas; and that during the evening calling upon the different speakers.

One of the speakers called upon was Comrade Jeremiah Jones who related how he had won his D. C. M. He, single handed, bombed a party of Germans knocking out half the party the rest surrendering, he returned with the prisoners and a captured machine gun. Jerry is certainly entitled to receive his D. C. M. that we understand was promised him.

A very strong speech was given by the Rev. B. Knott on the Duty of men with real blood in their veins, to their King and Country.

The Rev. Dr. Johnson, Editor of the Wesleyan, gave a very interesting address of what the colored race of U. S. A. were doing in this present war. How, in the first Draft, eight out of every hundred were colored and he mentioned how the colored race flocked to the Northern States attracted by large pay. But which was having a bad effect on the colored people as they were being crowded into dark, dirty quarters, which was causing various forms of disease to break out and was becoming a very serious problem for the Missionary Societies to handle.

The Rev. L. W. Parker spoke of the contribution of the colored race in this great war.

By invitation the Great War Veterans Ass'n was represented by a very good attendance. Mr. Stanley Chambers, President of the Association when called upon stated that he considered it a great Honor to be present at the unveiling of an Honor Roll to our colored Comrades who nobly responded to the call of their Country. He gave, clearly and distinctly, the aims and objects of the Returned Soldiers, and why it is desirable and imperative that all returned Soldiers, becoming members of the Great War Veterans Association. The Association is the fruit of a spontaneous effort on the part of the returning army to help itself and the inevitable result of a desire to possess an organization or meeting place through which questions of common interest can be discussed, grievances redressed and problems solved. Active membership is composed of those who have been Overseas in the present War. No distinction as allowed to exist in the Association between Officers and Privates, and the Comradeship of the Association. He said the Association has done splendid work remedying pressing grievances of individuals and in helping Dependants to secure additional pensions. In the Public's eye they have established themselves as a powerful National Force which the Legislature, both Provincial and Federal, view with respect and attention. If its true objects are to be achieved it must never be at the disposal of and special Party or Creed.

Its object is to serve the widest interest of the whole community and to become a healthy force in our National Life.
The Great War Veterans Ass'n. has now a membership of over 40,000 members. It has its own troubles and difficulties, but on a whole it has achieved a very great success and thoroughly justified its existence. It can only continue its work, however, if it receives the keen support and Loyal membership of all Returned Soldiers soon after they arrive in Canada.

Those men who have survived the ordeals of Battle to return, in safety, to their homes should remember that they are trustees for their Comrades whom they have left in France. The latter, as long as they are Overseas will find great difficulty in impressing their views on Governments and voicing their opinions upon the social and political conditions at home, to combine and by that Unity, which alone brings strength, safeguard the interests of their Brethren.

The Association has many critics who are anxious about its development and ultimate power.
Today the Comrades who have returned are, as it were, the fighting vanguard of a host who will follow after, and that Vanguard not only needs its full fighting strength but also must have no laggards in its ranks. Every single member must become a fervent Missionary in its behalf and secure recruits for its ranks with the same zeal as they displayed in making up the strength of their old Unit.

The Genial Drink

Around four o'clock in the afternoon, when the body is tired and the mind is weary, and you don't quite know what to do next, there is nothing that will stimulate you so quickly and give you renewed ambition, and make the world take on a new aspect, so much as a cup of Lipton's Tea.

But be sure the Tea IS Lipton's, because the quality is guaranteed. We grow it, blend it, pack it, and sell it ourselves. No other firm selling Tea in Canada may give you this guarantee.

REDUCING FRITZ'S HEAD.

To win the kind of peace the world must have, and the only kind of peace that will be enduring, the soul of the German people must be reached. This can never be accomplished by the issuing of peace manifestoes or by making proclamations setting forth the high and unselfish purposes which brought America into this war. government is the best in all the world; that his army is superior to any other that the world has ever seen; that as a fighting man he has no equal; that in every field of endeavor he excels, in business, finance, science, education and everything else. To put it plainly, he has the most exaggerated case of swelled head that the world has ever seen. Before the Hun can be taught anything by anyone this supreme egotism must be reduced. The bully who has been led to believe he can whip the entire universe must be made to crawl abjectly on his knees and plead for mercy at the hands of the peoples he has scorned and caused to suffer.

We are now engaged in the agreeable task of taking score of the conceit of Germany and it appears as though we were going to be very successful in the undertaking. The despised American soldier is showing himself able to not only meet the Hun under any conditions and hold his own, ut he is demonstrating that he can lick four Germans alone and single handed and still be ready to take on the next lot who happen to come along. It will take some time to make all of Germany realize the truth but that is what the American army will do before it is through.

There is a danger however, which we must be prepared to encounter. That is when we have all but administered the finishing touches to the Hun's education our own magnanimous spirit will shrink from the punishment it is up to us to inflict. Tender hearted people will cry out against completing this very necessary operation of reducing the German egotism. Not until this has been thoroughly and fully done, can anything in the way of laying the foundation for an enduring peace be accomplished.

If Germany should agree to-day, and probably her rulers would very willingly make peace on such terms now, to give up all of the territory her troops now occupy, to restore Belgium and surrender all colonial possessions in lieu of indemnity; to make restitution to Serbia, Roumania and Italy; to even abandon Alsace and Lorraine, and have a free hand in Russia, with the same military caste in control of Germany that now directs its affairs, Germany would have practically won this war and be stronger than ever inside of ten years. Having reduced the Hun's head the Entente Powers must then plan in some way to offset German influence in Russia and in some way Germany must be made to understand that only when the war making power is taken away from the few and put into the hands of all the people can she have peace.

The time has not arrived for peace yet and it will take many wholesome whippings and terrific sacrifices before it will arrive. But every American victory is a long step along the road which must be travelled. Before many months the Hun will begin to entertain some doubts as to his military prowess and will then begin to question the wisdom and strength of his own government. Such a lesson is going to be very hard for Fritz to learn because there are years of the most skillful training of promotion of egotism to be overcome, but America with her Allies can force this lesson home if she doesn't weaken on the job. We must see to it that there is no weakening on our part because what we are now going through we never want to go through again nor have any of our children or our children's children go through.

The above article, taken from the Free Press, Portland, Mr., kindly sent us by Mr. Edward J. McCarthy expresses fairly well what we have so frequently mentioned in the News We the Allies, not the American army alone, that has just got into the war, must not tire of the campaign until it is properly finished.

The danger is the weak-kneed pacifist element in an our midst; who, when we have Germany beaten, will interfere and attempt to affect public opinion so that punishment will not be meted out in proportion to the guilt of the circumstances criminals we have in hand. We must put Germany in a position so that the boasting supermen in that country can never again deluge the world with such blood-shed.

The danger, that condign punishment may not be inflicted, is the peace-at-any price howlers, who have done nothing to assist in this world emergency, who are in our midst. At present they are more dangerous than our open and recognized enemy—the blood-thirsty Hun.

SUMMER HEAT HARD ON BABY.

No season of the year is so dangerous to the life of little ones as is the summer. The excessive heat throws the little stomach out of order so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand, the baby may be beyond all human help before the mother realizes he is ill. Summer is the season when diarrhoea, cholera infantum, dysentery and colic are most prevalent. Any of these troubles may prove deadly if not promptly treated. During the summer the mother's best friend is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and keep baby healthy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MR. WATSON SMITH WITH PARTY OF BOYS FROM SHUBENACADIE VISIT TRURO

Mr. Watson Smith, the well known and popular merchant of Shubenacadie, N. S., motored to Truro, on Wednesday on a combined business and pleasure trip.

Mr. Smith brought with him, six bright young lads belonging to Shubenacadie. These boys visited the News Office and were shown through the different departments of that busy printery. They were greatly pleased and interested in all they saw and had explained to them of the workings of the plant.

Mr. Smith will give a prize to the lad of his party who will write up the best account of the trip to Truro.

The following are the names of the six fine manly young Shubenacadie boys who accompanied Mr. Smith on this very enjoyable trip to Truro. Howard McKinlay, Lawrence Lively, Charles Rine, James Bennett, George Currie, William Cook.

PRESBYTERY OF TRURO.

The regular quarterly meeting was held on Tuesday, the 2nd inst., with an attendance of thirteen ministers and four elders. Rev. C. A. Earle of Noel, was elected Moderator of Presbytery for the ensuing year and Dr. W. P. Archibald re-elected clerk for the same period. Rev. D. C. Ross of Stewiacke was unanimously chosen as the Presbytery's nominee for Moderator of the next Synod at Charlottetown. Mr. John Milligan, a member of the graduating class of last spring at Pine Hill was licensed to preach the gospel, leave for that purpose having been obtained from the General Assembly. Milligan from the congregation of Kennetcook and Gore with an accompanying guarantee of $1200 annual stipend, with use of manse and glebe and four weeks annual vacation, was laid on the table by Mr. Earle. The call was supported by Mr. Nelson Weir, an elder of the congregation, and afterwards sustained, placed in Mr. Milligan's hands and accepted by him. Arrangements for the ordination and induction were made as follows: The Presbytery will meet in the church at Kennetcook Corner on Tuesday, July 16th at 4 p.m. The Moderator of Presbytery will preside, offer the ordination prayer and induct; Mr. J. E. Forbes will preach; Dr. E. A. McCurdy will address the minister and Mr. J. C. Davis the people.

The basis of the proposed federal union between the Presbyterian congregation of Economy and Five Islands and the Congregationalist church of Economy with amendments suggested by the congregational union of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, was carefully gone over and commended to the acceptance of our people. The Congregational Union has also given its cordial endorsement to the movement. It is hoped that the arrangement work smoothly and harmoniously, lead to a closer union of the forces in the communities concerned.

The following nominations were made of representatives of Presbytery on Synodical committees: Bills and Overtures, H. J. Fraser; Foreign Missions E. V. Forbes; Obi-tuary Notices Dr. W. P. Archibald; Presbytery Records, L. W. Parker and J. A. MacKean; Public Education; W. P. Grant; Sabbath Schools and Young Peoples Societies, F. M. Milligan; Social Service and Evangelism, D. C. Ross; to nominate standing committees, J. A. Bradley; Synod Fund, J. E. Forbes; Systematic Giving, C. A. M. Earle—Presbyterian Witness, July 13

RAILWAY AT A BARGAIN.

The Beersville Coal Railway of New Brunswick, N. B., was recently sold at auction at Moncton, and knocked down for $10,100. It is said that with the proper opening up of the mines operation of the road can be made a financial success.

BOOZE TO SUPPLY IT BEING BROUGHT ALL THE WAY FROM MONTREAL IN AUTOS.

Some idea of the demand for booze may be had from the fact that it is being brought all the way from Montreal into this province in automobiles nearly 1000 miles, 2000 miles the round trip.

This is no pipe dream, but a fact. There certainly must be a big demand at big prices, and as a rule the goods are poor at that.

DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY CURES DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, CHOLERA MORBUS, CHOLERA INFANTUM AND ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS.

It is without a doubt the safest and most reliable remedy in existence. It has been a household remedy for 72 years.

Its effects are instantaneous and it does not leave the bowels in a constipated condition.

Make up your mind to insist on getting "Dr. Fowler's" when you ask for it. Don't experiment with some no-name, no-reputation, so-called strawberry compounds that tries to sell on the reputation built up by Dr. Fowler's.

The genuine is 35c. per bottle, and manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Mrs. R. Armstrong, Nixon, Ont., writes:—"Some years ago I had diarrhoea until it became chronic. I doctored with a good doctor, but as soon as I stopped taking his medicine I was as bad as ever. I became so weak I could hardly walk across the floor alone. A friend told me of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and less than two bottles cured me to stay cured. I think it is the best medicine for bowel trouble that can be procured."

Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Taylor, and two sons of Hampton, N. B. are visiting Mrs. Taylor's mother Mrs. F. R. Marshall Creek Cottage, Lower Truro. Mr. Taylor is a cousin of Sir Frederick Williams Taylor.

Miss Rebecca Cameron, Professional Nurse, of Truro, who was in charge of the Truro Hospital some years ago, is now on military duty in a hospital for wounded in Plattsburg, U.S.A. She is chief Nursing sister in this big hospital of 3,000 beds.

Isaac O'B McKim, of Great Village, has been appointed Sheriff of the County of Colchester, in the place of the late C. A. McLennan.

Sheriff McKim, has for many years represented his district in the Municipal Council, and is well known in Truro. For some years he has assisted E. E. O'Brien in the grocery of E. E. O'Brien & Co., Prince Street Sheriff McKim is the right man in the right place.

While working on Mr. H. Bigelow's barn, Onslow, Col. Co., July 25th Mr. Albert Thompson, of Brookfield, Col. Co., was stricken with a paralytic stroke. He was taken to the Ainsley Hospital where he is receiving treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dunbar and little son, Frank, of New Glasgow, are spending the week-end in town, with Mrs. Dunbar's parents Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Lightbody, Arthur Street.

The town council is instructed last night that the Town Laws regarding cord wood measurement be enforced. It is up to any citizen to demand a Town appointed surveyor certificate with every cord of wood offered for sale to him. The citizen can only blame himself if he does not yet full measure.

One man was charged for fourteen cords of hardwood in Truro this month that a town surveyor, later measured as 10 1-2 cords. Better get your legitimate certificate of measurement before paying for wood.

The Great War Veterans Association of Truro expect to put on a Sunday sacred concert in one of the town churches in the near future.

Rev. Charles King, of Western Canada is expected in Truro shortly to visit his father T. M. King Esq., while in Truro he will supply the pulpit of the First Baptist Church

Mrs. J.B. Heal and daughter Olivia have gone to Liverpool for a week or so. Rev. Mr. Heal has gone to Wentworth to visit his sister—Mrs. S. R. Pratt.

The friends of Driver Allison M. Stevens are pleased to see him beginning to get out again after his long confinement to his home with a crushed foot.

Mr. A. C. Wall and son, Walter of Riversdale, were the guests for last week end of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dewar, Plymouth.

The Pictou County Dairy Company, Limited, of Stellarton, made an exhibit of creamery butter at the Calgary, Alta., Exhibition, from June 28th to July 6th, and won up high in the prize list, their butter scoring 97.1 out of a possible 100; the highest score made was 98 points. The company is receiving congratulations on the splendid showing made against the finest creameries in western and middle Canada, and also in view of the fact that Alberta for some time has been considered to be making the finest butter in Canada. This is another evidence that no finer butter can be made anywhere than in Nova Scotia.

—Freight rates on practically every railroad in the United States increased twenty-five per cent, on June 25.

The catch of salmon at Little Harbor this season so far is not as numerous as former seasons. The fishermen blame this on the winds which prevail this season so far "off shore". Howard Cohoon, however, is high line with 150 salmon so far.

—Many remarkable things are chronicled from time to time concerning the war. The prisoners confined in our Penitentiaries are becoming interested in the conflict and are enlisting. At Dorchester, N. B. 21 short term prisoners have volunteered for service. They have been accepted on condition of receiving pardon at the termination of the war. They may be brought under the influence of the Y.M.C.A. wherever located.

SPECIALIST SAID HE MUST OPERATE

She Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES" Instead, And Is Now in Perfect Health.

MME. F. GAREAU

153 Papineau Ave., Montreal.
"For three years, I suffered great pain in the lower part of my body, with swelling or bloating. I saw a specialist, who carefully examined me and gave me several tonics to take, which did not help me. Then he told me I must undergo an operation. This, I refused to permit. I heard about 'Fruit-a-tives' and the wonderful results it was giving because this medicine is made from fruit juices, so I decided to try it. The first box gave great relief; and I continued the treatment, taking six boxes more. Now, my health is excellent—I am free of pain and swelling—and I give 'Fruit-a-tives' my warmest thanks."

The Daughter Of The Moon.

BY LYDIA M. DUNHAM O'NEIL.

"And so," said Gideon, as he turned a golden bracelet over and over in his hand, "you're going back—back to the land where these things grow on bushes?"

"They don't grow on bushes," replied Keller. "You have to search for them, and search mighty hard, believe me! I consider that the best find I've had in all my life. It dates back to the fifth dynasty. But, replying to your question—yes; I'm going back. We intend to sail the third of next month, five of us."

"I thought," said Gideon, "that you were going to Peru or some such place next?"

"I had intended to, but the land of Cleopatra has cast a spell over me, and I believe I shall devote the remainder of my life entirely to the study of Egypt."

"But isn't it considered rather a slow, dull kind of country—nothing but desert, and monuments of a funeral sort, and all that sort of stuff?"

"Slow? Dull? Well, yes, I suppose the tourist parties do consider it rather dull. You see a group of girls who have forgotten all the ancient history they ever studied in high school, gazing for the first time on the Great Pyramid, carefully guarded—the girls, I mean—by a chaperon with a lorgnon and a double chin. 'Oh, what an ugly old pile of rock!' they exclaim in chorus. 'To think of leaving London just to see this!' And they shrug their pretty shoulders contemptuously, while the chaperon cautions them to hold up their skirts and beware of scorpions. At the Sphinx you'll find a lot of dapper young men aiming soda-water bottles and sometimes even sardine cans at that Rock of Ages—seeing how close they can come to hitting its left eye. That sort of people come home and tell you that Egypt is terribly dull. But to the student, the thinker, the dreamer, there is nothing on earth more sublime than that same inscrutable Sphinx; the solemn grandeur of the pyramids, the magnificence of the rock temples, the obelisks, guarding the desert like silent sentinels, the ruins, here and there, that bear mute evidence of the existence of cities long since vanished from the face of the earth, have for me a charm that I have never found elsewhere in the world."

Gideon Lehr seized his friend's guitar from the little taboret on which it lay, and sang, as he touched its strings: "Egypt! In Egypt! Where the winds blow lightly o'er the grape-vine bowers! Egypt! In Egypt! Where pure and pallid blow the lotus flowers! Egypt! In Egypt! Where the moonbeams play on temple's gleaming walls! Egypt! Old Egypt! Egypt the siren calls!"

"I see you haven't lost the knack of making extemporaneous verses," observed Keller. "Rather pretty verses, too—but if you want to sing of Egypt—that part of Egypt where I'm going—you'll have to sing of the glories of the past. There are no temples there now—no grape-vine bowers. I have no doubt that it was once one of the garden spots of the land. I have found slight, but unmistakable traces of an irrigation ditch through the hills, so it is not only possible but extremely probable, that the grape-vine bowers of which you sing once existed in luxuriance. Now the vegetation is very sparse. There is some slight rainfall, of course—sufficient for the growth of trees and shrubs in limited quantity—but that is all."

"Later on," Keller continued, "I want to investigate that irrigation business. Just now I am deeply interested in finding the palace of Amen-em-hat, a Pharaoh of the twelfth dynasty. He was quite a builder, was Amen-em-hat, but his works have not fared as fortunately as those of many of the other Pharaohs. His pyramid and his palace both have perished, although he said that he built them for eternity, and not for time. His palace is popularly supposed to have been situated at Heliopolis, but in my own mind I am positive that it was net. I feel certain that it was farther inland, near a little range of hills; I mentioned them a moment ago, in connection with the irrigation project. I have found a few blocks of pink granite in the vicinity of those hills, and a few other traces of habitation; and I am going to pursue my investigations there. I believe the spot to have been the site of one of the beautiful cities of the past which can be pictured now only by imagination, because there are no existing records of it."

Lehr played softly on the guitar, humming a little song. Suddenly he looked up. "Five in your party, I think you said. Keller would you mind making it six?"

"Why no!" said Keller in surprise. "Not the slightest. But you don't mean to say that you want to go to Egypt, do you, Gideon?"

"I mean exactly that. What you have just been telling me is very interesting, indeed, and I'd like to go along."

Keller laughed. "Come, now, Gidon! I know how you used to flunk in history, and never did learn to distinguish between Cambyses and Ramesses! You profess to be interested in Egyptology! You devotee of teas and dainties! Come again, Gideon, do!"

Gideon smiled. "There's no deceiving you, is there, Keller? Well, I do want to go to Egypt, though you're right in your surmise that it's not love of ancient lore that's luring me. I thought I'd not tell you—you might think it too foolish—but on the whole, I believe I will."

He paused to whistle a little tune, while collecting his thoughts. "I really don't know how to explain it to you, because it's rather hazy even to me. But it seems that ever since I've been old enough to remember, or to think about things at all, there were three intangible things that occupied prominent places in my thoughts; three things, all seeming to be connected in some way, though for the life of me I can't tell you how. Those three things are a girl, a flower, and a snake. I have always dreamed about them, and the memory of those dreams have been so vivid that they have come to mean as much to me as any other person or things that I encounter in my everyday life."

"Now, I'm not much of an artist, but if you'll hand me that pencil and a bit of paper, I'll make you a sketch of the flower."

As he drew delicate little penciled lines he continued talking. "I not only see that flower in dreams and in imagination, but often its perfume comes to me as well. In the morning, especially, when I awake from a sound sleep, my room seems permeated with its rare, sweet odor. There—that's a fairly good representation of it. Did you ever see anything that looked like it?"

Keller examined the drawing critically. "That," he replied, after a close examination, "is the flower of the mokhayt tree of Egypt. It blossoms in May and exhales a most delicious odor. The ancient Egyptians made a sort of wine from the fruit."

Lehr nodded thoughtfully. "I guess I was right about wanting to go to Egypt. Now, the snake—sometimes I dream that it bites me—is a little fellow about a foot and a half long; brown, with blackish spots on it—and two little horns on its head. Absurd, isn't it? For, of course, there's no such thing as a snake with horns—though I have seen horned toads, out west."

"The snake you mention," replied Keller, "is an Egyptian reptile—the coluber cerastes, known commonly merely as the 'horned snake.' I have seen and killed a great many of them. They are one of the most poisonous snakes in existence, and if one ever bites you, I hope you'll be within easy reach of an antidote. You dreamed these things, you say?"

Lehr flushed. "I suppose you think I'm fabricating, and I don't blame you. But I actually did dream them—I never saw, heard, or read of them in my life."

"Go on," replied Keller. "I'm not doubting you in the least. I've known of so many queer things in my time—particularly in Egypt—that I don't doubt anything any more. Now tell me about the girl."

"The girl? Well, I've seen pictures of Egyptian women, so I couldn't help knowing, from the features and head dress and everything, that she was an Egyptian. I dream about her very often—young, beautiful, dark eyed, tender-mouthed—different from any real girl I've ever known. And I've known some mighty nice girls, Keller! Sometimes, in my dreams, I try to hold her—to keep her from leaving me—to talk to her for a moment—but she always eludes me, with a smile—drifts away from me, somehow—and I follow after her, but always she is just a little distance away. She turns and smiles, and lures me on with her deep dark eyes, till, I wake up, exasperated. Often she wears garlands of those flowers—what do you call 'em? the mokhayt, yes—thank you; and when I wake and find that faint, sweet odor in my room, I sometimes wonder if she hasn't been there, in the flesh."

"She's dressed, always, in a crimson robe—looks like silk, it seems to me—and yet not silk—I don't know what."

"The Egyptians," observed Keller, "made linen that rivaled the finest silks in texture and appearance."

seemed to me that I was dying—I can remember that, in a vague way; and he folks did actually think I was done for. I remember that I called for her—called, and called—it seemed to me that I needed her—and she came. She came, and laid her cool little brown hand on my hot brow, and my hot cheeks, and I grew calmer immediately. It seemed she spoke to me, just two or three words, but I couldn't remember them; I don't know what they were. But when I was well again, they told me I had been calling for Cleopatra—that's what I always called her in my mind, you see, it being the only Egyptian name I knew; and that by and by I grew calmer and whispered another name over and over. That name was Ahmes. Did you ever hear it before?"

"It was one of the names in commonest use in ancient Egypt," replied Keller. "It has been borne by many rulers and their associates, both men and women. It signifies 'Child of the Moon.'"

"Well, I guess that's about all. I still dream about her, and the flowers, and the little serpent with the horns; but Ahmes still eludes me, though all the while she seems to be luring me on—and on and on through the dusk—and on to the lights in the background—but always I wake impatient and exasperated, to wonder what it all means. Now, Keller, what do you think of this crazy story I've told you?"

"I can't tell you just what I think—or rather, I don't care to; but if I were you, Gideon, I would stay away from Egypt—just as far as possible away from Egypt!"

"Why?" asked Lehr in surprise. "Why? Well, in the first place, what do you expect to accomplish? You can roam Egypt from one end to the other without finding a brown-skinned beauty wearing anklets and bracelets and great pink pearls. But because you dream of a fair Egyptian, brown-bound with burning gold, you fancy you must see her country. Is that it? Well, don't do it, my boy! Don't do it!"

"Again, why? I'm not expecting to find Ahmes—of course not; but simply have an interest in the country; I'd like to see it—the obelisks, and the pyramids, and all; I'd like to look at them and imagine that once, maybe thousands of years ago, the girl I dream of may have stood there and gazed on the very scenes that meet my eyes. Where's the harm, Keller?"

"I once heard of a similar story to that of yours," replied Keller. "Only the man dreamed about the flower of the blue lotus, instead of the mokhayt; and of a scorpion instead of the cerastes. He died."

"As we all must die," commented Lehr. "There was a physician in the party," continued Keller, "and he claimed that the man died of the sting of a scorpion. Now the sting of a scorpion is painful, but seldom fatal; but I'm willing to concede that point, for there was a mark on his arm, and a scorpion was found close by; but we were out on the desert at the time—miles from a stream of water; and even the learned doctor couldn't explain the presence of a blue lotus flower, fresh as if just plucked, that we found in his hand. Gideon, take my advice and stay away from Egypt!"

"I don't intend to do any such thing," replied Lehr determinedly. "I'm going to Egypt. Don't worry about that—I'm going if you don't take me with your party, why, I'll go with a bunch of Cook's tourists."

"If you are intent on going, you'd better come with me. I'm not objecting—I'm simply advising you. If you really want to go, I'll be glad to have your company. At the same time, I must say that I don't approve of it."

"You're relieved of all responsibility," said Lehr, gayly. "After all," observed Keller, "I don't suppose it makes much difference. A man's fate will follow him, wherever he may go."

Lehr took up the little guitar again, and while he touched its strings carelessly, he sang, in a low voice, vibrant with dreamy sweetness: "Daughter of Egypt! Child of the Moon! Tarry for me—I shall come to thee soon! Down through the desert, over the sea, Fate and my fortunes lead me to thee! There is thy palace, in the land of the Nile, Reign in thy beauty, rule with thy amulets, The lotus thy scepter, my heart for thy throne, Ever and always, Ahmes, my own! Sunlight or starlight, midnight or moon! Always I love thee, thou Child of the Moon! O daughter of Egypt! O child of the Moon!"

"And you talk of being interested in Egyptology!" laughed Keller. "Go and get yourself a typewriter, and pound out sentimental ballads for lovers' misses and maiden ladies romantically inclined. That's your métier!"

He had a splitting headache that afternoon—Egypt's burring morning sun had proved too much for him. So, while Keller and the others went off to the ruins over which they were exulting, a mile away or more, Lehr stayed in camp, near the foot of the hills. He told the black serving men not to bother him at all—he simply wanted to be left strictly alone; and so they did not protest when he carried out a blanket and a pillow and spread them on the sand under a seyal tree, and laid himself down in the shade. He was asleep soon, for it was a hot, close afternoon; and when a little brown serpent writhed toward him through the sand he did not observe it. It paused near him, and lifted its head, the little eyes gazing intently at the sleeping man. Then it crept closer and closer, and finally wriggled into a fold in the blanket. There it curled itself up quietly and went to sleep.

When the sun slipped around so far that its rays shone direct into Lehr's face, he woke and roused himself to a sitting posture. His head still ached a little, and he was still very sleepy; but there was no more shade under the seyal tree, so he picked up the pillow and the blanket and went back to the tent, where he threw them carelessly onto the folding cot and resumed his interrupted nap. As he raised his arm to lay it beneath his head, he felt a slight sting upon his wrist. It was not much—just the prick of a pin, no more and he was too sleepy to care about it at all. As he slumbered, it pained him somewhat—but he was dreaming just then of a brown-skinned girl, brown-bound with burning gold, and he had no time to worry about a pin-prick on his wrist, however painful. And then—well, then he drifted off into a hazy sea of mist and sunshine intermingled, where murmuring zephyrs grew suddenly into roaring tempests that deafened him with their noise, and night and day seemed one, and through it all, through the mist and the sunlight, and the darkness and the moonlight, a voice called to him sweetly from a distance, and the strains of a guitar mingled with the tinkling of a tambourine.

And then he woke. It was dusk, and in the adjoining tent he could hear the black clinking pots and pans, and smell the savory odors of the evening meal they were preparing. He could hear, too, the voices of Keller and his companions, as they rejoiced over the magnificent ruins they had unearthed. He sat up; his headache was quite gone now, and he thought he would join them and listen while they told him all they had discovered that day. But as he roused himself, he caught a flash of gold and crimson at the door of his tent. He gazed steadily for a moment, but could see nothing more. He was so sure, however, that some one had been there, that he rose quietly—very quietly—and stole softly across the floor and peered out into the purple twilight. His heart leaped as he gazed. It was she—Ahmes—Child of the Moon!

She stood a little way from the tent, as beautiful as he had ever seen her in his wildest dreams. Bands of gold, studded with gems, encircled her slim brown ankles; bands of gold were on her wrists, on her arms, about her throat, and on her brow. A pin fell lay upon her breast, rising and falling lightly as the folds of her crimson robe rose and fell with the beating of her heart. Her eyes were radiant as jewels—her lips, full and red and luring. In her hair were thrust two or three sweet-scented blossoms of the mokhayt tree, perfuming the night with their odor. One hand was laid upon her lips to enjoin silence—the other pointed away across the sandy desert—away toward the ruins that the party had been exploring.

He gazed where she pointed. Instead of a heap of crumbling rocks, he saw a palace, towering above the surrounding buildings, ablaze with radiance, and gay with music that came faintly, to his ears. Amazed, he stood motionless and speechless; but when she beckoned him to follow her, he stepped silently out into the dusk and hastened toward her. But she moved away from him, as she had done in his dreams, always; and though his feet were swift, her own outdistanced him, though they moved so lightly across the sand. He followed her swiftly, eager to know the outcome of this strange adventure. Close and closer to the town they drew; brighter grew the lights, and clearer came the sound of the music; and at length, in the moonlight, he saw plainly a long avenue of Sphinxes, leading up to the palace of pink granite that he had discerned from afar.

And now the girl who lured him hither paused and awaited him. He drew close to her—close, until at last he stretched out his arm and touched the little brown hand that toyed with the pearl on her breast. "Ahmes!" he murmured, "Ahmes!"

"Yes," she said softly. "At last you have come! The ages were so long!"

He gazed down into her eyes—deep, dark, joyous eyes—eyes into which a man might look for an eternity without tiring. She moved toward him slightly, and he seized her in his arms, holding her close in a passionate embrace, pressing fierce kisses upon her eyes, her lips, her hair. "Ahmes!" he whispered. "My Daughter of the Moon!"

"Come," she said. "Come to the palace. My father awaits us."

"Your father? Who is your father?" "Have you forgotten?" she chided softly. "But the ages are so long—one forgets many things! My father is Amen-em-hat. Ah, yes! You remember him now, do you not?"

She led him up through the avenue of sphinxes, her hand lying in his own. At the portal they were met by many serving men, who garlanded them with wreaths of lotus blossoms, in the custom of old Egypt.

He could scarcely remember all that transpired thenceforward—the brilliant lights and the strange scenes seemed to confuse his brain, and he had but a hazy recollection of the meeting with Amen-em-hat, who greeted him as a cherished son—of the music, and the dancing girls, and the banquet with its wines and delicate fruits and pastries—of the magnificence of the surroundings—the golden vases, filled with odorous flowers—the soft, thick carpets, the finely carved chairs and tabourets, and luxurious ottomans—it seemed to him like a dream—one of those dreams of Ahmes, which would drift away from him presently, and leave him filled with regret and disappointment.

He did not think of his friends until he chanced to look through a window and observed the moon high in the sky, and the stars bright against their dark-blue background. Then he spoke hurriedly to Ahmes. "I must go back to the camp," he said. "They did not see me go—they will think I am lost—perhaps they are searching for me, through the h and over the desert."

"Yes," she assented. "You must go back. Come—let us go together."

Hand in hand they passed out of the palace and away toward the camp, their path lit by the rays of the stars and the moon. The tents gleamed white as they approached, and in Keller's a light was burning. Voices—low, tremulous voices—came to his ears. Together they approached, and paused at the open door. Lehr, looking in, drew back with an exclamation of surprise. Keller had opened his little trunk, and was examining his private papers—letters from the homefolks, directions to those who might have him in charge in illness or death—memoranda of addresses—everything, in fact, that Keller had no right to examine! His eyes blazed with anger. For the moment he could not speak. Then, just as he was about to denounce his friend in scathing terms, one of the other men spoke, and Lehr listened. "Poor chap! I suppose the thing must have got in when he was out under the tree. Black Sam said he went and lay down there in the sand, with the blanket beneath him. Just in the noon-time of manhood! It's tough!"

Lehr could not imagine what he was talking about. Had an accident happened to one of the party? Ahmes at his side, touched him lightly on the arm. "Come!" she whispered, and he followed in silence. She led him to his own tent, and he perceived that within a light was burning dimly. "Look!" she commanded, and he pushed aside the flap and gazed within.

On the floor, near the cot, lay a little brown serpent, dead. On the cot itself lay something long and rigid, covered completely over with a blanket. A chill passed through him, he knew not why.

Ahmes slipped past him and lifted the covering from the silent, rigid thing. A cry escaped him; he was gazing upon his own face!

"Ahmes!" he exclaimed. "Why, that is I! I—do not—understand."

He crossed the floor to her side, and laid his hand upon the face on the pillow. It was cold and unyielding. "It cannot be," he said, "and yet—is it I? I spoke of over there, a moment ago? Ahmes—Daughter of the Moon?"

Tenderly she replaced the blanket over the white, waxen face. "Life and the Past are gone," she murmured. "Come, let us go back to the palace!"

THE WOMAN IN UNIFORM.

The woman in uniform should be a welcome sight—particularly to mothers who are worrying because their boys are far from home and the gentle influence of home. To know that there are women with steadfast souls and loving hearts and kind hands near every firing line should bring comfort, and a very real sort of comfort, to them. And the women who wear the uniform are that sort of women—the sort who will inspire boys in a far land to do their tasks well, and—most important of all—the sort who will keep alive the ideals of home and of chivalry. The woman in uniform is the one link that draws a hearth fire near to a bleak battlefield. And so, when you see a woman in uniform, know that she is doing a big work in a worth-while spirit. Don't think that the uniform is an affectation that she is playing at a game that men are dying for; because she isn't. She is serving her country in the way her country most needs, and her uniform, like that of her brother in arms, is one of the marks of her service.—Margaret E. Sangster in the Christian Herald.

CHURCH "GRUMBLES."

An excellent though unconscious criticism of the rapid and incoherent manner in which too many congregations perform their part of the "responses" on Sunday was made by a small boy on his return from his first attendance at church. "Mamma," he remarked, "the people don't like the minister, do they?" "Why, certainly, Harold; what made you ask such a question?" was the reply. "Well," said Harold, sturdily, "he'd read something, and then they'd all grumble, and then he'd read some more, and they'd all grumble again!"

THE FOX BUSINESS.

The ordinary visitor to Prince Edward Island at present, unless specially invited to visit some fox ranch, would never know that such a business as fox ranching is being carried on here, while those who a few years ago had heard of the fame and name of Prince Edward Island foxes would conclude that the industry had died out.

We note by the current issue of the Black Fox, now published in New York, that in the United States the fox business is booming. There is an American Fox Breeders' Association whose membership covers all the northern states and as far south as foxes can be profitably raised.

Through the efforts of the Association the world is learning that the place to buy quality foxes is the United States, because all the foxes on sale are registered and therefore pure-bred stock.

A few years ago Prince Edward Island owned over seventy-five per cent. of all silver foxes in captivity, and a few years before that it owned them all. Prince Edward Island foxes were the recognized aristocrats of the fox world.

The fox business in the United States is still in its infancy; that in Prince Edward Island is full grown, tested and proved. Yet the infant promises to outgrow us, to leave us in the lurch, to see us completely ignored as fox producers regard this as nothing short of a calamity.

The United States, with the possible exception of a few sections in the Northern States cannot successfully compete with Prince Edward Island in fox production.

We have the climate and have the foundation stock, the stock upon which United States breeders are building their business. It remains with ourselves whether we shall be outclassed, whether we shall throw away one of the most promising industries in the world, an industry which only a few years ago we had securely.

It is not yet too late to redeem ourselves in this business, and for our redemption we may well take a leaf out of the American book. There are still many unregistered foxes in the province, foxes that cannot be registered because they do not conform to the required standards. Kill them off. They cannot be bred up, and they should not be sold as breeders. In fact, legislation should be secured prohibiting the sale of live foxes that are not known to be properly bred.

Let the Fox Breeders' Association make it widely known that there are reliable, pedigreed foxes in Prince Edward Island, and that the way to find them is by examining the registration records of the Association. Let them make it widely known also that the business is still flourishing in Prince Edward Island. This may cost something but considering what is at stake the cost would be infinitesimal.

A reasonable fee from the members—would place sufficient funds at the disposal of the association to keep the business before the public and to give it the necessary boosting. This fee should not be withheld. It would be the best investment fox owners could possibly make and without such investment the business will inevitably slip out of their hands—Guardian Charlottetown, June 29.

TRAWLERS NET A U-BOAT.

A Dutch newspaper prints the story of a German U-boat which was caught in a British trap and towed into a British port. The story comes from a member of the U boat's crew who escaped from England and is interned in Holland.

"We had sighted some English fishing boats off the English coast and were manoeuvring for attack, when their curious movements led us to suspect a trap, so we dived. We proceeded slowly, but presently the screw began to beat irregularly and the commander could not make out what had happened.

"After about two hours the water seemed curiously still, and the commander decided to come to the surface. When we emerged we were alongside a quay where stood a number of smiling British sailors. We were in a British port, towed in like a dead fish."

The Allied Armies are fighting hard in an endeavor to encircle and capture the German Crown Prince's Army in the Soissons—Rheims Salient. The Germans' had run a sharp point into the Allied armies, the back ends of the V being about 37 miles apart. General Foch, Commander of the Allies, advanced his troops on each side of the point and now has the German Army, enclosed in a semi-circle about 20 miles wide at the opening and 18 eighteen miles deep.

Both jaws of pincer are now being moved smoothly, with the pivot along the Marne working in unison, and the process of attempting to capture many of the nearly half a million Germans in the big pocket is well on the way to what at present seems like possible success.

The Germans, however, evidently do not intend to permit themselves to be entrapped without fighting. Having thrown thousands of reinforcements into the already congested salient, they have started a counter-attack of great violence all along the semi-circular front from the Ourcq River to the region immediately south west of Rheims, and their men are said to have orders to stem the Allied tide of advance at all costs.

At the pivot of the pincer, north of the Marne, midway between Chateau-Thierry and Rheims, the French have extended their line northward into the forest of Fere, in the Ris Forest and north of Dormans, while the eastern jaw of the pincer under the pressure of the British, has noticeably moved forward in a northwesterly direction for about a mile and a half over a three mile front to Meery remecy and Gueux, the P-silva named village five miles west of Rheims and a scant mile and a half from the Rheims-Fismes road. At Mery-Premecy the Allied line now stands about ten and a half miles southwest of Fismes, which is the central station on the railway running between Soissons and Rheims.

On both sides of the stream, and the Franco-American troops now are virtually knocking at the gates of Fere-En-Fardenols, the important railway junction and storehouse for Germany's war supplies.

Further south to the Marne new advances, in keeping with these in the north, have been attained.

The German nerve centre at Fere-En-Tardenols, which, as the junction of several great roads, was the most important storehouse and distribution point of the Germans, is now under the cross fire from the French and American artillery and must be well nigh untenable. In fact, no place in the whole pocket is a very comfortable position with the Allies long range artillery sweeping back and forth, with balloons and airplanes directing the fire.

Military critics in Paris incline to the view that General Ludendorff the German commander, will probably launch a new attack on some other sector of the front in an effort to gain a local success to gloss over his failure at the Marne. He might, by this means, also, wrest the initiative from General Foch and force the latter to remove some of his troops from the Soissons-Rheims area. It seems to be agreed that the logical point to expect such a German attack is somewhere along the British-held lines.

A device for telephoning from moving trains has been successfully tested on the Intercolonial Railway at Moncton, N. B. The instrument has been patented by Isidor, Abraham and Samuel Berliner, of Toronto, who have also submitted to the United States government a device for detecting submarines. It is stated that three conversations can be carried on from one train and that the voices are absolutely clear.

One Of The Six Hundred

where she might sit and compose herself till I considered what we should do next, and where we were.

She was greatly agitated, but passively permitted me to encircle her with my arms, to assure her that she was safe, to press her hands, and to wipe away her tears caressingly. I forgot all about poor Pitblado, "spilt" on the road, all about my uncle's best blood mare hanging in the traces, and all about the half-ruined gig.

In short, I felt only the most exquisite joy that I had gained, as it were, and Louisa together. It was that moment of intense rapture, when, combined with the natural revulsion of feeling consequent to escape from a deadly peril, I enjoyed that emotion which a man feels once, and once only, in a life-time, when the first woman he loves confesses to a mutual regard; and, half-kneeling, I stooped over her, kissing her again and again, assuring her—of I know not what.

From one of her fingers I transferred to mine a ring of small value—a pearl set in blue enamel, leaving in its place a rose diamond. It was a beautiful stone, of the purest water, which I had found when our troops sacked the great pagoda at Rangoon, and I had it set at Calcutta by a jeweller, who assured me that it was worth nine hundred rupees, or ninety pounds, and I only regretted now that it was not worth ten times as much, to be truly worthy of the slender finger on which I placed it.

She regarded me with a loving smile on her pale face, and in the quiet depths of her soft dark eyes, as she reclined in my arms. I gazed on her with emotions of the purest rapture. She was now humbled, gentle and loving—this brilliant beauty, this proud earl's daughter—mine, indeed—all that a man could dream of as perfection in a woman or as a wife; at least, I thought so then; and I was not a little proud of the idea of what our mess would say—the colonel, Studhome, Scriven, Wilford, Berkeley, and the rest—of a marriage that would certainly be creditable to the regiment, though we had titles and honorables enough in the lancers; and already, in fancy, I saw myself "tooling" into Maldstone barrack-square in a dashing phaeton, with a pair of cream coloured ponies, with Morrell and Loftus quartered on the panels, and silver harness, and Louisa by my side, in one of the most perfect of morning toilettes and of marriage bonnets that London millinery could produce.

Poor devil! with only two hundred per annum besides my pay, and the war before me, I was thus acquiring castles in Airshire, and estates in the Isle of Sky.

Oblivious of time, while the woods and hills of Dairise were darkening against the sky, while the murmuring Eden flowed past towards the Tay, and the ever changing spears and streamers of the northern aurora were growing brighter and more bright, I remained by the side of Louisa, wholly entranced, and only half-conscious that something should be done to enable us to return home; for night was coming on—the early night of the last days of January, when the sober sun must set at half past four—and I knew not how far we were from Calderwood Glen.

Suddenly a shout startled us; the hoofs of horses were heard coming rapidly along the highway, and then three mounted men wheeled into the field and rode straight towards us. To my great satisfaction, one proved to be my faithful fellow, Willie Pitblado, who, not a wit the worse for his capsizing on the road, had procured horses and assistance at the place called Drumhead, and tracked us to where we lay, wrecked by the old bridge of the Eden.

"Poor Willie," said Louisa, "I thought you were killed."

"No, my lady," said he, touching his hat; "it's lang or the de'il dees by the dykeside."

Of this answer she could make nothing. The gig was now released and run back, and though scratched, splintered and started in many places by the shock to which it had been subjected it was still quite serviceable. The wheeler was traced to it again, the leader, her arduous completely cooled now was fished out of the stream, and harnessed again, and in less than half an hour, so able had been the assistance rendered us, we were bowling along the highway towards my uncle's house.

An hour's rapid driving soon brought us in sight of the long avenue, the lighted windows, and quaint facade of the old mansion, at the door of which I drew up; and as I threw the whip and reins to Willie Pitblado, and, fearless now even of Mamma Chillingham, handed my companion down, tenderly and caressingly, I found myself an engaged man, and the fiancé of one of the fairest women in Britain—the brilliant Louisa Loftus!

CHAPTER XII.

It passed—and never marble looked more pale

Than Lucy, while she listened to his tale. He marked her not; his eye was cold and clear. Fixed on a bed of withering roses there; He marked her not, for different thoughts possessed His anxious mind, and laboured in his breast.

Ellis.

Notwithstanding all that had passed, and that we had been carried so far in the wrong direction, we were not long behind the rest of our party in reaching Calderwood, where the history of our disaster fully eclipsed for the evening all the exciting details of the fox-hunters, though many gentlemen in scarlet, with spattered tops and tight, whom Sir Nigel had brought, made the drawing-room look unusually gay.

Lady Louisa remained long in her own apartment; the time seemed an age to me; yet I was happy—supremely happy. I had a vague idea of the new emotions that served, perhaps, to detain her there; but an air of cold reserve and unmistakable displeasure hovered on the forehead of her haughty mother.

When Louisa joined us, she had perfectly recovered her usual equanimity and presence of mind—her calm, pale, and placid aspect. She was somewhat silent and reserved; this passed for her natural terror of the late accident, and though we remained some distance apart, her fine dark eyes sought mine, ever and anon, and were full of intelligent glances, that made my heart leap with joy.

Coro, who shrewdly suspected that there had been more in the affair than what Berkeley called "a doocid spill," regarded us with interest, and with a tearful earnestness that surprised us, after our return, and during the explanation which we were pleased to make. But whatever tales my face told, Louisa's was unfeignable, so from its expression suspicious little Coro could gather nothing; though, had she carried her scrutiny a little further, she might have detected my famous Rangoon diamond sparkling on the engaged finger of her friend's left hand.

Coro was on this night, to me, an enigma!

What had gone wrong with her? When she smiled, it seemed to several—to me especially—that the kind little heart from whence these smiles were wrung was sick. Why was this, and what or who was the source of her taciturnity and secret sorrow?—not Berkeley, surely—they had come home in the drag together—she could never love such an ass as Berkeley; and if the fellow dared to trifle with her—but I thrust the thought aside, and resolved to trust the affair to her friend and gossip, the Lady Loftus.

A few more days glided swiftly and joyously past at Calderwood Glen; we had no more riding and driving; but, as the weather was singularly open and balmy for the season, we actually had more than one picnic in the leafless woods, and I betook me to the study of botany and arboriculture with the ladies.

I enjoyed all the delicious charm of a successful first love! The last thought on going to repose; the first on waking in the morning; and the source of many a soft and happy dream between.

The peculiarity, or partial disparity, of our positions in life caused secrecy. Denied, by the presence of others, the pleasure of openly conversing of our love, at times we had recourse to furtive glances, or a secret and thrilling pressure of the hand or arm was all we could achieve.

Then there were sighs the deeper for suppression, And stolen glances sweeter for the theft; And burning blushes, though for no transgression, Tremblings when met, and restless nesses when left.

Small and trivial though these may seem, they proved the sum of our existence, and even of mighty interest, lighting up the eye and causing the pulses of the heart to quicken.

We became full of petty and love-like stratagems, and of enigmatical phrases, all the result of the difficulties that surrounded our intercourse when others were present—especially Lady Chillingham, who was by nature cold, haughty, and suspicious, with, I think, a natural born antipathy to subalterns of cavalry in particular. Coro saw through our little artifices, and Berkeley, that An glo-Scotch snob of the nineteenth century, had ever his eyes remarkably wide open to all that was going on around him, and thus the perils of discovery and instant separation were great, while our happy love was in the flush.

This danger gave us a common sympathy, a united object, a delicious union of thought and impulse. Nor was romance wanting to add zest to the secrecy of our passion. Ah, were I to live a thousand years, never should I forget the days of happiness I spent in Calderwood Glen with Louisa Loftus.

Our interviews had all the mystery of a conspiracy, though, save Coro, none as yet suspected our love; and there was a part of the garden, between two old yew hedges—so old that they had seen the Calderwoods of past ages cooling and billing, in powdered wigs and coats of mail, with dames in Scotland, at certain hours, by a tacit understanding, we were sure of meeting but with all the appearance of chance, though occasionally for a time so brief, that we could but exchange a pressure of the hand, or snatch a caress, perhaps a kiss, and then separate in opposite directions.

Those were blessed and joyous interviews; memories to treasure and brood over with delight when alone. In the society of our friends, my heart throbed wildly, when by a glance, a smile, a stolen touch of the hand, Louisa reminded me of what none else could perceive, the secret understanding that existed between us.

And yet all this happiness was clouded by a sense of its brevity, and by our fears for the future; the obstacles that rank and great fortune on her side, the lack of both on mine, raised between us; and then there was the certain prospect of a long and dangerous—alas! it might prove, a final separation.

"They who love," writes an anonymous author, "must ever drink deeply of the cup of trembling; but, at times, there will arise in their hearts a nameless terror, a sickening anxiety for the future whose brightness all depends upon this one cherished treasure, which often proves a foreboding of some real anguish looming in the distant hours."

"Where is all this to end?" I asked myself, as the conviction that something must be done forced itself upon me, for the happy days were passing, and my short leave of absence was drawing to a close.

One day, by the absence of some of our friends, and by the occupation of others, we found ourselves alone, and permitted to have a longer interview than usual, in our yew-hedge walk and we were conversing of the future.

"I have two hundred a year besides my pay, Louisa." (She smiled sadly at this, and the smile went doubly to her heart.) "The money has been lodged for my troop with Cox and Co, and my good uncle means well concerning me; yet I feel all these as being so small, that were I to address the Earl of Chillingham on the subject of my engagement, it would seem that I had little to offer, and little to urge, save that which is, perhaps, valueless in his aristocratic eyes—"

"And that is?"

"My love for you."

"Don't think of addressing him," said she, weeping on my shoulder; "he has already views for me in another quarter."

"Views, Louisa!"

"Yes; pardon me for paining you, dearest, by saying so; but it is nevertheless true."

"And these views?" I asked, impetuously.

"Are an offer made for my hand by Lord Slubber de Gullion."

My heart died within me on hearing this name, which, as I once before stated, comes as near the original as possible.

"Hence you see, dearest Newton," she resumed, in a mournful and sweetly modulated voice, "were you to address my father, it would only rouse mamma, and have the effect of interrupting our correspondence for ever."

"Good heavens! what then are we to do?"

"Wait in hope."

"How long?"

"As I know not; but for the present let us our engagement, like our meetings and our letters, if we can correspond, must be secret—secret all."

"Of course, and of Louisa Loftus. Don't you think her very handsome?"

"I think her lovely."

"My cigar annoys you?"

"Not at all Newton."

"But it makes you turn your face away."

"You met often, I believe, before you came here?"

"Oh, very often. I used to see her at the cathedral every Sunday in Canterbury; at the balls at Rochester and Maidstone—"

"And in London?"

"Repeatedly! I saw her at her first presentation at Court, when the colonel presented me, or obtaining my lieutenancy, and returning from foreign service. She created quite a sensation! I spoke in such glowing terms of my admiration for Louisa Loftus, that some time elapsed before I detected the extreme pallor of Coro's cheek, and a peculiar quivering of her under lip.

"Good heavens, my dear girl, you are ill! It is this confounded cigar of one of a box Willie got me in Dunfer-

A close and mute embrace followed and then I left her in a paroxysm of grief, while my head whirled with the combined effects of love and joy, and of sorrow, not unmixed with anger.

"I wonder what the subjects are that lovers talk of in their tete-a-tetes," says my brother of the pen and sword, W. H. Maxwell, and the same surmise frequently occurred to myself, before I met or knew Louisa Loftus.

We never lacked a subject now. The peculiarities of our relative positions, our caution for the present, and our natural anxieties, for the future, afforded us full topics for conversation or surmise; but the few remaining days of my leave "between returns" glided away at Calderwood Glen; the time for my departure drew nigh; already had Pitblado divided a sixpence with my lady's soubrette, and packed up all my superfluous traps—and within six and thirty hours Berkeley and I would have to report ourselves in uniform at head-quarters, or be returned absent without leave.

It was in the evening, when I had gone as usual to meet Louisa at the seat where the close-clipped yew hedges formed a pleasant screen, that, to my surprise, and by the merest chance, I found it occupied by my cousin Coro.

The January sunset was beautiful; the purple flush of evening covered all the western sky, and bathed in warm tints the slopes of the Lomond hills.

The air was still, and we heard only the cawing of the venerable rooks that perched among the woods of the old manor, or swung to and fro on its many gilt vanes.

Coro was somewhat silent, and I, being thoroughly disappointed by finding her there in lieu of Louisa Loftus, was somewhat taciturn, if not almost sulky.

"Somehow—but how, I know not—Coro led me to talk insensibly of our early days, and as we did so, I could perceive that she regarded me earnestly from time to time, after I simply remarked that ere long I should be far, far away from her, and among other scenes. Her dovelike, dark eye became suffused, and the tinge on her rounded cheek died away when I laughingly referred to the days when we had been little lovers, and when Fred Wilford and I—he was now a captain—ours—used to punch each other's heads in pure spite and jealousy about her; but this youthful jealousy once took a more dangerous turn.

Among the rocks in the glen an adder of vast size took up its residence, and had bitten several persons. It had been seen by some, to leap more than seven yards high, and was a source of such a terror to the whole parish, that my uncle, and even the provost of Dunfermline, had offered rewards for its destruction.

On this I boldly dared my boy-rival to face it; but Fred Wilford, who was on a visit to us from Rugby, had more prudence, or less love for little Coro, and so declined the attempt.

Flushed with boyish pride and recklessness, I climbed the steep face of the rock, stirred up the adder with a long stick, flung it to the ground, and killed it by repeated blows of an axe, a feat of which my uncle never grew tired of telling, and the reptile was now in the library, sealed up in a glass case, being deemed a family trophy, and, as Binns said, always kept in the best of spirits.

I sat with Coro's white and slender hand in mine, gazing at her soft and piquant features, her pouting lips and dimpled chin, and the dark hair so smoothly braided under her little hat and over each pretty and delicate ear. Coro was very gentle and very charming; she had ever been to me a kind little playmate, a loving sister, and she sighed deeply, when I spoke of my approaching departure.

"You go by sea?" she asked.

"If we go to Turkey—of course."

"Embarking at Southampton?"

"Embarking at Southampton—exactly, and sailing directly for the east, I suppose," said I, while leisurely lighting a cigar; "I shall soon learn all the details and probabilities at headquarters; but the route may not come for two months yet, as red-tape goes."

"You will think of us sometimes, Newton, in those strange and dangerous lands? Of your poor uncle, who loves you so well, and—and of me?"

"Of course, and of Louisa Loftus. Don't you think her very handsome?"

"I think her lovely."

"My cigar annoys you?"

"Not at all Newton."

"But it makes you turn your face away."

"You met often, I believe, before you came here?"

"Oh, very often. I used to see her at the cathedral every Sunday in Canterbury; at the balls at Rochester and Maidstone—"

"And in London?"

"Repeatedly! I saw her at her first presentation at Court, when the colonel presented me, or obtaining my lieutenancy, and returning from foreign service. She created quite a sensation! I spoke in such glowing terms of my admiration for Louisa Loftus, that some time elapsed before I detected the extreme pallor of Coro's cheek, and a peculiar quivering of her under lip.

"Good heavens, my dear girl, you are ill! It is this confounded cigar of one of a box Willie got me in Dunfer-line," I exclaimed, throwing it away.

"Your hand is trembling, too."

"Is it? Oh, no Stay, I am only a little faint," she murmured.

"Faint. Why the deuce should you be faint, Coro?"

"This bower of yew hedges is close the atmosphere is still, or chill, or something," she said, in a low voice, while pressing a lovely little hand on her bosom; "and it seems to me that I felt a pang here."

"A pang, Coro?"

"Yes, I feel it sometimes."

"You, one of the best waltzers in the county! You have no affection of the heart, or any of that sort of thing?"

She smiled sadly, even bitterly, and rose, saying—

"Here comes Lady Louisa. Say nothing of this."

Her dark eyes were swimming; but not a tear fell from her long black, silky lashes, that lent such softness to her sweet and feminine face. She abruptly withdrew her tremulous hand from mine, and just as Louisa approached, hurriedly left me.

What did all this emotion mean? What did it display or conceal? I was thoroughly bewildered.

A sudden light began to break upon me.

"What is this?" thought I. "Can Coro be in love with me herself? Oh, nonsense, she has known me from boyhood. The idea is absurd! Yet her manner— This will never do. I must avoid her, and tomorrow I leave for England!"

* Louisa sat beside me, and, save her, Coro and all the world were alike forgotten.

CHAPTER XIII.

Forget thee? If to dream by night, and muse on thee by day;

If all the worship, deep and wild a poets heart can pay;

If prayers in absence, breathed for thee to Heaven's protecting power;

If winged thoughts that flit to thee, a thousand in an hour,

If busy Fancy, blending thee with all my future lot;

If this thou call'st forgetting, thou, indeed, shalt be forgot.

Moultie.

I had but one, only one, meeting with Lady Louisa, and it was indeed, a sad one. We could but hope to meet again—near Canterbury, perhaps—at some vague period before my regiment marched; and prior to that I was to write to her, on some polite pretence, under cover to Coro.

This was certainly somewhat undefined and unsatisfactory for two engaged lovers, especially for two so ardent as we were, and in the first flush of a grand passion; but we had no other arrangement to make; and never shall I forget our last, long, mute embrace on the last evening, when, scared by footsteps on the garden walk, we literally tore ourselves away, and separated to meet at the dinner-table, and act as those who were almost strangers to each other, and to perform the mere formalities, the politenesses, and cold ceremonies of well-bred life.

I could not help telling my good uncle of my success; but under a solemn promise of secrecy, for a time at least.

"All right, boy," said he, clapping me on the shoulder. "Keep her well in hand, and I'll back you against the field to any amount that is possible; but that gouty old peer, my Lord Slubber, is richer than I am; and then Lady Chillingham has the pride of Lucifer. Since Archie died at college, and poor Nigel at the battle of Goojerat, I have no boy to look after but you."

The last hour came inexorably. We shook hands with all. When that solemn snob, my brother officer, Mr. de Warr Berkeley, and I entered the carriage which was to take us to the nearest railway station, there were symptoms of considerable emotion in the faces of the kind circle we were leaving, for the clouds of war had darkened fast in the East during the month we had spent so pleasantly; and the ladies—the loo girls especially—half viewed us as foredoomed men.

Louisa was pale as death; she trembled with suppressed emotion, and her eyes were full of tears. When her cold and stately mother kissed me lightly on the cheek; and at that moment, for Louisa's sake, I felt my heart swell with sudden emotion of regard for her.

My uncle's hard but manly hand gave mine a hearty pressure, and he kindly shook the hand of Willie Pitblado, who was bidding adieu to his father, the old keeper, and slipped a couple of sovereigns into it.

Sir Nigel's voice was quite broken; but there was no tears in the hot, dry eyes of poor Coro. Her charming face was very pale, and she bit her pouting nether lip, to conceal, or to prevent, its nervous quivering.

"An odd girl," thought I, as I kissed her twice, whispering, "Give the last one to Louisa."

But, ah! how little could I read the secret of the dear little heart of Coro, which was beating wildly and convulsively beneath that apparently calm and unmoved exterior! But a time came when I was to learn it all.

"Good-bye to Calderwood Glen," cried I, leaping into the carriage.

"A good-bye to all, and hey for pipe-clay again!"

"Pipeclay and gunpowder too, lad," said my uncle. "Every ten years or so the atmosphere of Europe requires to be fumigated with it somewhere. Adieu, Mr. Berkeley. God bless you, Newton!"

"Crack went the whip, round went the wheels;" the group of pale and tearful faces, the ivy-clad porch, and the turreted facade of the old house vanished, and then the trees of the avenue appeared to be careering past the carriage windows in the twilight, as we sped along at a rapid trot.

For mental worry or depression there is no more certain and rapid cure than quick travelling and transition from place to place; and assuredly that luxury is fully afforded by the locomotive appliances of the present age.

Within an hour after leaving Calderwood, we occupied a first-class carriage and were flying by the night express en route to London, muffled to the eyes in warm railway-rugs and border plaids, and each puffing a cigar in silence, gazing listlessly out of the windows, or doing his best to court sleep, to wile the dreary hours away.

Pitblado was fraternising with the guard in the luggage-van, doubtless enjoying a quiet "weed" the while.

Berkeley soon slept; but I prayed for the celebrated "forty winks" in vain; and thus, wakeful and full of exciting thoughts I pictured in reverie all that had occurred during the past month.

Gradually the unwilling, but startling, conviction forced itself upon my mind that my cousin Coro loved me! This dear and affectionate girl, from whom I had parted with such a frigid salute as that which Sir Charles Grandison gave Miss Byron at the end of their dreary seven years' courtship, loved me; and yet, blinded by my absorbing passion for the brilliant Louisa Loftus, I had neither known, or felt it.

Her frequent coldness to me, and her ill-concealed irritation at the cool insolence of Berkeley's languid bearing on more than one occasion, were all explained to me now.

Dear, affectionate, and single-hearted, Coro. A hundred instances of her self-denial now crowded on my memory I remembered now, at the meet of the Fifehire fox-hounds at Largo, that it was she who, by a little delicate tact and foresight, contrived to give me that which she knew I so greatly coveted—the drive home in the tandem with Lady Louisa.

What must that act of self-sacrifice have cost her heart, if indeed she loved me? I could not write to her on such a subject, or even approach an idea that might, after all, be based on supposition, if not on vanity. More than this—I felt that the suspicion of having excited this secret passion must preclude my writing to Louisa under cover to Coro. Common delicacy and kindness suggested that I should not, by doing so, further lacerate a good little heart that loved me so well.

But the next thought was how to communicate with Louisa, Coro being our only medium. Nor could I forget that when I was up the Rangoon river, and when my dear mother died at Calderwood that it was Coro's kiss, that was last upon her cold forehead, and Coro's little hand that closed her eyes for me.

Swiftly sped the express train while these thoughts passed through my mind, and agitated me greatly. To sleep was impossible, and ere midnight I heard the bells of Berwick-upon-Tweed announce, that we had left the stout old kingdom of Scotland far behind us, and were flying at the rate of fifty miles an hour by Bedford, Alnwick, and Morpeth, towards the Tyne, and the land of coal and fire.

Every instant bore me farther from Louisa; and I had but one comfort, that ere long she would be pursuing the same route—perhaps seated in the same carriage—as she sped to her home in the south of England.

I dearly loved this proud and beautiful girl; and if human language has a meaning, and if the human eye has an expression, she loved me truly in return; but though the conviction of this made my heart brim with happiness, it was a happiness not untimed with fears—fears that her love was, perhaps, the fancy of the hour, developed by propinquity and the social circle of a quiet country house; fears that my joy and success were too bright to last; and that, after a time, she might see her engagement with a nameless subaltern of cavalry in the light of a mesalliance, and be dazzled by some more brilliant offer, for the heress and only child of the Earl of Chinningham could command many.

War and separation were before us; and if I survived to return, would she love me still, and still indeed be mine?

Her father's consent was yet to be obtained. In my impatience to know the best or the worst, I frequently resolved to break the matter by letter to his lordship; but, remembering the tears and entreaties of Louisa, I shrank from the grave responsibility of tampering with our mutual happiness.

At other times I thought of confiding the management of the affair entirely to my uncle; but abandoned the idea almost as soon as I conceived it; knowing that the fox-hunting old baronet was more hot-headed, proud, and abrupt than politic. In conclusion, I

LEARNING ABOUT OUR ALLIES.

From the Rochester Times-Union

The war is a liberal education to Americans who go to France. It opens their eyes straightway to many things heretofore hidden. The Sammies pick up quickly an insight into the real characteristics of European nations—a matter in which out stay-at-home people are pretty ignorant. They learn, first of all, that the French are not the light, lax, degenerate folk many of us have thought them, and that the English are far different from the traditional American view of them.

It is this latter discovery that seem to accasion most surprise. An American Lieutenant, in a letter to his father, published in The Beaver Valley (Pa.) News, breaks into this delighted eulogy:

"Do you know, dad, the British are a wonderful people? Their education, courtesy, dignity, reserve, are a revelation. Their open-hearted friendliness, their admiration for America, and their sense of humor, have captured the hearts of every one of us who were sent to them for instruction. They fight and fight with fury, and yet I never saw the slightest evidence of 'hate.' After three years of defeat, disappointment and terrible losses, their spirit and morale are unbelievable.

"I never saw such optimism as their 'Tommys' and officers showed everywhere. They were eager to attack, and at the same time knew that each attack caused them losses of whole battalions. I cannot believe that even 'scientific' Germany can equal British organization and thoroughness. Certainly no German morale can ever equal the English.

"The English are healthy in mind and body. I never saw a better looking type of men. They are generous. They are modest. They are absolutely fearless. They are absolutely fearless. They lost 7,000 killed before Lens, but 15,000 German dead lay opposite. This was 'out in the open' hand-to-hand bayonet fighting.

"When a fight is on they fight with but the thought to kill and win. When it is over, they are immediately generous and merciful. They do not murder prisoners nor insult them."

Anyone who has closely followed the course of the war must recognize that this is an accurate characterization. It is only just to our Allies that we should learn to regard them in so favorable a light. And it is a pleasure to any fair minded American to substitute this picture for the prejudiced set of impressions we have rained from one-sided instruction and absurd stage caricatures.

Miss Bessie Chisholm, Chief Clerk in the Federation of Labor office, New Glasgow, returned today from spending a vacation in Sunny Brae, much improved in health.

Mrs. McLean, Kempton, Colchester County was a recent visitor in Trenton, where her husband is employed.

A Peasant rebellion has broken out in the Ukraine on a formidable scale. According to information received, seventy-five thousand peasants, fairly efficient troops with their officers and instructors, are advancing against the Germans, detachments of whom have withdrawn before the hostile advance, retreating to Keiv. The peasants are well armed.

With the capture yesterday of the town of Oulchyle Chateau the Allies were nearing the summit of the Plateau over looking Pore-En-Tardenois. Further north the capture of the ville Montoire was effected after sharp fighting in the streets and in the deep cavern nearby.

TOWN COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Town Council was held last night, the Mayor and all the Councillors, with the exception of Councillor H. A. Johnson, were present. On the request of Harold Putnam, Esq., the assessments on the Cumming & Renning buildings, owned by Mrs. F. A. Lawrence, was reduced from $2200.00 to $1500.00. Mr. Putnam also stated that the building had been sold to Mr. Gordon B. Crowe for $1500.00, and it was considered that that was a fair market value for the same.

A question of an advance in salaries for some of the Police of the town, brot up at the last Council meeting, was reported on by the Police Committee. Their report was to the effect that the estimates having been made up for the present year, after a settlement regarding the salaries for this year, they could not recommend an immediate increase, but the Committee recommended an increase for the entire Police Board commencing the first of next year. The report was adopted.

A letter from The Great War Veterans' Association, of Truro, asked for a special grant to their funds. A Committee was appointed with which The Great War Veterans' Association can confer, said Committee to report back to the Council.

The question of short measurement of cordwood being sold to people in town was again taken up. On motion of Councillors Semple and Coffin the Chairman of the Police was instructed to ask the Police to enforce the town By-Laws regarding the measurement of cordwood and to have anyone, caught as an offender, prosecuted. The motion also provided for the publication of the By-Laws of the town, regarding Cordwood, in all the town papers.

Draft agreement between the Town of Truro and the Truro Electric Light Commission regarding electric matters and the installation of the proposed new Electric Light Plant at the Pumping Station were before the Council, amended and agreed to, and the Mayor and the Town Clerk were authorized to have the said agreement executed. The Food Inspector's report, for the last month was on the table, read and adopted.

It was brought to the attention of the Council by Counc. Coffin that there are now at the Home for the Poor, Halifax Road, a number of bright, young boys in the vicinity of eight to twelve years of age, and that it is within the province of the Town to put these boys out, under the supervision of Government Inspector Blois, to homes and it was suggested that the public be made acquainted with the fact that these boys are available, for adoption or otherwise, as it would be better for the boys to be in homes, somewhere, than at the Home for the Poor, and it would save, as well, expense to the town. The Chairman of the Home for the Poor, Councillor H. H. Johnson is to arrange to give these boys out to any party, accordingly, who may apply.

Dr. Harris of Yarmouth, came into Truro last night and spent the day with his mother, Mrs. Harris and sister, Mrs. E. H. Gladwin, Queen St. He left today. The Dr. motored from Yarmouth and brought with him Mr. Kinney, of Boston and Inspector of Roads, Wheeler of Digby Co., the Dr. and his friends denounce the road from Shubenacadie to Truro as the worst piece of road encountered on that whole trip.

GERMANS BADLY HARRASSED GIVE UP MORE TERRITORY UNDER PRESSURE.

With Americans on the Aisne Marne Front, July 24. With their lines of communications reduced by operations on their flanks and their rear North of the Marne being constantly punished, the Germans have been forced to give up more territory. The French and American troops rest tonight some distances in advance of the posts where they started this morning.

The German retirement, under pressure, is believed to indicate that General Von Boehm, the Commander of the army within the Salient, has had enough punishment to convince him of the advisability of taking new position

MRS. ARTHUR WESTBURY CALLED TO HER HOME ABOVE, JULY 24th.

There occurred last evening the death of Mrs. Arthur Westbury Brunswick Street. The deceased had been in failing health for some time and her early death was expected by her family and friends.

Mrs. Westbury leaves to mourn their loss three sons, William, Robert and Philip, and three daughters, Miss Edith, May and Gertie. She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. James Fraser, Halifax, N. S.

All Truro acquaintances sincerely sympathize with the sorrowing children in their great bereavement, being left a family of orphans and practically helpless.

THE FARMERETTES.

Whether from city or country find themselves living under an unusual strain. The unusual work necessitates the use of different muscles and this development demands a good supply of pure, rich blood.

Because it goes directly to the formation of new blood, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of the greatest assistance in building up new cells and tissues and strengthening the muscles.

TRURO FIREMEN TREATED TO STRAWBERRIES AND CREAM

The members of the Truro Fire Brigade were invited last evening to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Rae, Brunswick Street, where they were given a grand feast of strawberries and cream.

It is needless to say the Fire Laddies most heartily enjoyed this fine luncheon so kindly and thoughtfully provided by Mr. and Mrs. Rae.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug is a sticky ether compound, but dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue.

It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone obtained at any drugstore will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Cut this out, especially if you are a woman reader who wears high heels.

SYDNEY NURSE WRITES VIVID DESCRIPTION OF DESTRUCTION OF HOSPITAL ON BRITISH FRONT.

Hun Aviators Set Building On Fire with Bombs—Attendants Killed—Patients Under Ether Carried to Places of Safety.

Nursing Sister Nan McLeod, daughter of Dr. W. McK. and Mrs. McLeod, George Street, who has seen two years active service in a front line hospital in France, is at present in Brighton, England, recuperating after passing through the terrible experience of being bombed by German air raiders, and seeing the hospital to which she was attached devoured by flames, started by incendiary missiles dropped by the Huns. Miss McLeod writes: "of that night at D— and that awful fire—hearing the patients calling for help and being unable to go to them—that was the awful part of it—I shall never forget it. The German airmen circled over our building letting their bombs fly as they passed. Several of these missiles hit the building squarely and practically all of our sergeants were killed, together with three M. O.s—one an American attached to us for the rush—and three sisters."

Vital Joint in Armor.

"Bulgarians treat their British prisoners well. They openly demonstrate their friendliness for Americans. They don't want to place themselves hopelessly on the side of the Germans. They want to have friends on the Entente side, particularly in the United States, in the event the war does not go as well as they think it will."

Among the Americans, now in Sofia is Consul General Murphy, whose wife has been prevented by the Austrians from rejoining him since she went last summer to Holland. Four employees of the American Tobacco Company are there who have been waiting for a year's time to be permitted to leave, but have been prevented from doing so, principally by the Austrians. They are Johnston Steele, Hyatt and Finger, and also A. C. Walker of the Standard Oil.

Lemon Juice For Freckles

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you will have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, necks, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

WARNS ALLIES NOT TO BASE HOPES OF VICTORY ON STRIFE WITHIN ENEMIES' FRONTIER.

American Missionary Markham, Just Out of Sofia, Believes Teutonic Offensiv on Salonica Front is Probable—Plenty of Food in Bulgaria, Which is Friendly to United States Citizens.

London, "We must not base our hopes of beating the Central Powers on internal dissension in those countries. The strikes in Austria-Hungary are insignificant compared with the wave of enthusiasm which has come with the Russian breakdown and the signing of a separate peace."

This was the statement made to The World correspondent by R. H. Markham of Kansas City, Mo., an American missionary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, who has been stationed for the last six years in the Near East. He reached here yesterday from Sofia.

Friendly to America.

Mr. Markham was accompanied by his wife and children. They left the Bulgarian capital early in January and were subjected months to a military quarantine in Austria.

"Bulgaria," Mr. Markham said, "is the vital joint in the armor of the Central Powers, and Bulgaria knows it, from King Ferdinand down. When Bulgaria wants anything, Germany and Austria give it to her.

There is no love for the Germans. On the contrary, there is friendliness toward the Entente people, especially America.

Patients Under Ether.

"My ward was directly behind the one hit, and on account of the fire we had to get out all on the 'tout suit. Three of the patients were in the operating room and still under the ether, and the others were all splendid, as usual. All but six had been operated on since 5 o'clock that night, and were all bad cases, but Capt. Baden-Powell (son of Maj. Baden-Powell) and my two orderlies helped carry them out, and we attended our wounded boys on the grass while Fritz was still busy. Finally we got all the boys into the tunnel for the night. At daylight the shells from the big guns kept coming over every twenty minutes but they landed mostly in the town and near the station. I tell you it was a relief to get the train with those poor wounded boys."

Lsted a "Shell-Shock."

A few hours afterwards Miss McLeod was listed a "shell-shock" and with twenty-four other sisters was ordered to take the train for Boulogne and England. They were treated royally by everybody—French and English—during the trip and reached "Blighty" safely.

Miss McLeod says that No. 9 (St. Francis Xavier's) Unit is all disorganized, but will soon start up again.

"Of course those terrible bombs upset everybody; but honestly, we've had bombs and shells all these months—the hum of Fritz lulled us to sleep at night, and after the first couple of shells we didn't mind, but the groans of our wounded and dying

Sof a Has Food Aplenty.

Speaking of the internal conditions in Bulgaria, Mr. Markham said: "Sofia suffers no more from food shortage than does London. Bulgaria is largely a farming country and the people have plenty of food except in certain sections where, because of primitive transportation methods, many Greeks and even Bulgarians have been starving. The ordinary person in Bulgaria has 400 grams of bread daily (about 11-6 pounds troy) and as people live principally on bread, cheese and sour milk they have little to complain about."

"Bulgaria has been able to send grain to Germany and Austria. We sent food supplies from Sofia to the American schools and mission in Constantinople.

"Bulgaria's army is in much better condition than Austria's. There are about 900,000 men under arms, though not all are at the front.

"What is considered probable is an attack on the Salonica forces, in conjunction with 100,000 Germans, once the Roumanian peace is signed. They hesitate at making a move until there is certainly about Roumania's policy.

"King Ferdinand has no great love for the Bulgarians. You seldom see him about Sofia, because he keeps much to himself. His power over his people now lies in the fact that he can say to them that he promised them Dobrudja and Macedonia and that both are now theirs. They are, therefore, not anxious to break with him so long as he keeps his promises. It probably will be a different story if the time comes when he cannot make good."

Turks Got Oil Fields.

The peace which the Central Powers have made with Russia has, beside opening up new food supply regions, given to Turkey the richest oil fields in Europe, according to Mr. Markham, who asserted that this would have its effect in bracing up the Turks, despite the hardships suffered by the people. He declared that Hungary had the best bread he had come across during his trip, adding: "It is practically the same as the white bread of peace times. We were placed in a small village in the Austrian Tyrol for a month as a military quarantine measure. There was no shortage of food. We had as much meat as we wanted and so did everyone else."

CONSTIPATION CURED BY THE USE OF MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS.

Constipation is one of the most prevalent troubles the human race is subject to, and is the greatest cause of many of our ailments. If the bowels cease to work properly, all the other organs become deranged.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills work on the bowels gently and naturally, and will cure the worst cases of constipation.

Mrs. Winslow McKay, Jordan Branch, N.S., writes: "I have been sick for a number of years with sick headache and constipation. I tried all kinds of doctor's medicine, but none did me any good until I tried Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and after using four vials I am completely cured. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers from that disease. I keep them on hand all the time."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial. Sold by all druggists and dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ferred by the people. He declared that Hungary had the best bread he had come across during his trip, adding: "It is practically the same as the white bread of peace times. We were placed in a small village in the Austrian Tyrol for a month as a military quarantine measure. There was no shortage of food. We had as much meat as we wanted and so did everyone else."

"The Russian peace has had a marked effect there. I think the strikes were not nearly so important as they were made out. Austria is completely under the domination of Germany. Vienna is shorter in food than London or Sofia, but in the country there is enough to live on.

Austrian Army Ill-Clad.

"The Austrian Army, however, is poor in appearance by comparison with the Bulgarians. Their clothes are ill-fitting and poor in quality. They are an army run down at the heels; but what we must realize is that the military leaders of the Central Powers, control the situation and mean to hold on. We have got to beat them."

Mr. Markham travelled by way of Switzerland and France. He said there was no comparison between the spirit and appearance of the Austrian soldiers and the soldiers of the Allies, including the Americans.

"The fine appearance of the British, French and Americans struck me immediately, after seeing the Austrian soldiers," he said.

THE MAPLE LEAF CONCERT - PARTY OF THE 4th CANADIAN DIVISION, B.E.F. PROGRAM.

The News has received a very attractive and handsomely gotten-up Program of a grand concert produced, May 5th, 1918 at the front, in France, by "The Maple Leaves Party of the 4th Canadian Division B.E.F."

This entertainment was put on in the form of a play in three acts, entitled "Camoufelage."

This performance was held in a theatre built from salvaged material by the men of the Division it will seat a battalion. It has a fine stage, footlights, spot light, orchestra pit, and other appearances of a modern and up-to-date theatre.

"The Maple leaves Concert Party hope to provide for the Canadian soldiers clean fun and good music to make them forget trenches and troubles, and to take them back for a little while to pleasant homeland where romance and beauty are waiting to greet them."

This interesting program was very thoughtfully sent to the News by Pte. W. J. Roddick, of H. Baty, 4th Division, Canadian Machine Gun, Battalion, B.E.F.

Pte. Roddick is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Roddick, Prince Street East, Truro at one time this Truro soldier "Billie" Roddick was the "Printer's Devil" at the News office.

MR. CHARLES NICKERSON, SPRINGSIDE, COL. CO MET DETH BY ACCIDENT.

At Springside, Upper Stewiacke, Col. Co., recently, Charles Nickerson fell through a hatch-way in the floor of Samuel Creelman's barn and was killed.

Mr. Nickerson with Mr. Creelman arrived home at dinner time from the field, where he had been working. Mr. Creelman went to the house and Mr. Nickerson went to the barn.

Not coming to the house in due course, Mr. Creelman went out to see what was detaining Mr. Nickerson. On the floor of the barn basement Mr. Nickerson's body was found still in death.

The deceast was subject to ill turns and it is supposed when seized by one of the attacks, he had fallen thru the hatchway to the floor below.

Mr. Nickerson had lived at the home of Mr. Creelman for some time and assisted with the farm work.

MARRIED.

TIT FOR TAT.

In a London omnibus an ill-bred male passenger made a grimace when a very stout old lady got in.

"Hippopotamus!" he exclaimed under his breath, but so loudly that the old lady heard him.

"Yes, sir," she said, "you know an omnibus is like Noah's Ark; it takes in all the animals—even donkeys!"

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES ASHAMED TO GO OUT.

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Get rid of these unsightly and obnoxious skin troubles by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."
