The Deaf and Dumb, and the Blind.

There has been no exhibition during the week as hitherto, and it is at which such work as is necessary to be done, is to be done by the Deaf and Dumb, and the Blind.

The little girl is well versed in algebra. She can read, and she can write, and she can do all the work of a school girl.

The deaf and dumb are not to be despised. They are capable of much more than we give them credit for.

The blind are not to be despised. They are capable of much more than we give them credit for.
