CHAPTER IX.

The "Noble" Marquis.

Lilian held up her slim finger at him, with an arch smile.

"You have not improved, marquis?"

"You promised me to pay no more compliments, and you have offered me these already."

"Not empty compliments, by Gad!" he mumbled; "all true as the sky! There, I'm a naughty man, am I not? Eh? Eh?" and he chuckled and gasped.

"Well, I must not stop the way any longer, I suppose! Cruel! And where are you going to-night?"

Lady Devigne's eyes sparkled.

"To Lady Deuchamp's, marquis."

"You will be there?"

"Haven't a pasteboard," he grinned.

"Ah, as if you needed it," remonstrated Lady Devigne.

"Can't come without my dear leedy!"

"Troublesome man!" exclaimed Lady Devigne, with pleased playfulness.

"There, I will tell Lady Deuchamp you are in town, but doubt not she has seen you already, and you will find a card waiting at— Ah, where are you? Grosvenor square, of course?"

The marquis nodded.

"The marquis nodded."

"And you will come?" asked Lady Devigne, as the fretting horses moved on.

"Yes, I'll look in for half an hour. Can't stay longer, 'pon honor, supper with Bordie to-night—must go, but just for half an hour, and so we shall see if the lily blooms at night, eh?"

and, with an upraising of the glossy hat, and an ogling smile, the most vile—we beg pardon, the most noble, the Marquis of Orland ambled off.

Lady Devigne drew a long breath.

"Do you think he'll come?" she breathed, anxiously.

Lilian turned her calm gaze upon her mother's quivering lips, and anxious eyes, then looked before her, with the same dreary expression which she had borne before.

"Yes, he will come, if he should not happen to forget, or his valet (who beats him they say) will let him, or he is not too tired, poor old man," she murmured, placidly.

Lady Devigne leaned back.

"Hush!" she whispered, with as deep a shudder as if the sweet lips beside her had uttered blasphemy.

"My dear Lilian, you forget you are talking of the Marquis of Orland! 'Poor man!' How can you say such dreadful things?"

The day passed. The noble marquis went home to his stewed chickens, and his minced roast mutton, his soaked bread, and blood-giving Madeira; the Devignes, mother and daughter, went through the usual routine, making and receiving calls, playing the old, weary, world-worn comedy of making love to their friends before their faces and scandalizing them behind their backs, at their quiet dinner at home, as it happened, and at last dressed for the evening party.

All through the day Lilian had remained calm, serene, and quite content, apparently, to leave her fate in the hands of circumstance.

All this outwardly; inwardly, there was the bitterness born of self-contempt, that was as futile as it was bitter. For a while she hated herself for being so worldly, so selfish, so false; she knew that she could not be otherwise, that she could no more be true to the man she—yes, almost loved; if another and a more acceptable were to turn up—than a leopard can change its spots, or a blackamoor be washed white.

Absorbed in her own thoughts, the day wore away, and while Percy was proudly asserting the purity and disinterestedness of his ladylove, that ladylove was wondering whether she should be called on to betray him or not. All powerful marquis, the happiness of Percy Chester, the honesty and faith of Lilian Devigne are in your hands.

As they were standing in the old drawing-room, waiting for the night brougham, Lady Devigne looking at the lovely face, half shadowed by the hood of white cashmere, sighed anxiously.

"He has not come back; perhaps he will not arrive for a day or two. I hope not. How unlucky it has turned out, after all! Just like us! I feel as confident as it is possible to be that the marquis is impressed—I may say deeply impressed! You did not notice his manner, perhaps, so closely as I did. To ask where we are going to-night, and to promise, even, that he would come—he who so seldom goes out at night! It is a great thing! Oh, my dear Lilian, I feel as if—as if—"

"We were on the eve of a great battle!" put in Lilian, slowly. "I understand, mamma; but do you think that so experienced a general as you are should be calm, a little less nervous, and apprehensive of the result?"

"Calm!" echoed Lady Devigne, tapping the fan, impatiently. "One would think you were made of ice, Lilian, or that you had no interest in the matter! You are calm enough for both!"

The girl turned her eyes on her for a moment, and there was something in her look which made her ladyship fidget slightly.

"Is the brougham never coming?" she said, irritably. "Ten o'clock! And he will wait half an hour only, for certain!"

"Ten o'clock," thought Lilian. "He will not be here to-night. I shall not see him; and, perhaps, I shall never see him here again."

A pang, sharp, quick and unmistakable, ran through her, but she did not flinch; and her face was serenely lovely, sweet, and free from care, as she followed her mother to the brougham, as a child's might be.

Heart's Action Was Weak and Circulation Poor

He Was Always Tired and Nervous and Had Pains in Feet and Legs—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured.

The heart is a wonderful worker, plodding away year in and year out, forever pumping the blood through the body. So long as the blood is rich and nourishing it renews its own waste and keeps up a vigorous circulation of the blood through the arteries and veins of the human system. But when the blood gets thin the nerves are starved, motive power is lacking, the heart's action weakens and the circulation is slow. The hands and feet feel cold, there are cramps and pains in the legs and through the body, digestion fails, you become nervous and irritable and do not rest or sleep well.

This letter will give you some idea how admirably Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is suited to overcome derangements of this nature. It is, above all, a creator of new, rich blood, and with the blood in good condition the nerves

CHAPTER X.

"All Women Are False."

Lady Deuchamp's mansion was one of the new and spacious ones recently erected in Belgravia, and tonight its available rooms were crammed with the elite of London.

At the last moment it had been rumored that the Marquis of Orland had promised to come, and many who had been rather doubtful about going, or had decided not to go, rapidly made up their minds, or changed them, for it was not easy to run the great game to cover, and a chance like this was not to be missed.

Be sure, there were envious glances cast at the belle of the season, as she made her appearance that night, and jealous mamma's glances from their own to Lady Devigne's daughter, with a bitter sense of inferiority.

"That's the filly to make the running!" said Lord Turfend, admiringly, as Lilian passed him. "What form she's in! Splendid, by Jove!"

"I shouldn't wonder," murmured Sir Toffie to his little group, "if the Devigne doesn't make for the marquis, if he comes. Wonderfully taken he seemed to be in the ride this morning."

"Perhaps he won't come?" queried one of the club gossips.

"She won't be the only one sold, if he should not," remarked Sir Toffie, glancing round. "The hunters are gathered together, and are lying in wait!"

Certainly, it seemed that the belle was reserving herself somewhat, for she refused many a familiar partner, and once was absolutely seen to glance toward the end door leading to the staircase.

But, beyond this one slip, she was as bright and serenely placid as usual, with a smile for all, and an air of enjoyment about her that would have deceived Lavater himself.

Presently there was a little stir at the end of the room, and all knew that the marquis had arrived.

Making his entry, accompanied by a similar group of hangers-on to that which had hung about him in the park, the most noble the marquis, freshly enameled, upright as a dart, in perfect-fitting evening dress, and with his little feet clad in the most brilliant of dress shoes, made his way to the hostess, and paid his respects.

He stood talking, in his ghostly liveliness for five or ten minutes, then was seen to peer round the room, that, to tell the truth, was too brilliantly lighted for his weak sight, and, at last, mumbling something, ran a gauntlet of warmly welcoming friends to the other end of the room, and there he found Lilian Devigne, resting beside an inane lieutenant, who seemed utterly nonplussed and bewildered by his proximity to the beautiful Miss Devigne. Lilian had seen the marquis the moment he entered the room; but she looked up now, with a little smile of surprise, that was coolness itself, compared with some of the effusive greetings that had been accorded him. Young and unsophisticated as she looked, Lilian Devigne knew that a little coolness and self-respect would plique the most noble lord more than the most accentuated gushingness could do.

"Well, Miss Devigne, I am here, as the duke's motto says; are you surprised?"

"Not at all," she said, quietly; "you said you would come, you know. Have you been here your half hour yet?"

"Why, I have only just come!" replied the marquis, abashed by her assumed indifference, surprised and piqued, as she had intended him to be.

"And now, are you going away?" he said, raising his painted eyebrows, as Lilian rose and placed her hand on the young lieutenant's arm.

She smiled.

"Lieutenant Brownjohn has asked me for this," she said. "If you are here when it is over—" and away she went, leaving the astonished marquis rooted to the spot. This was not the treatment he was accustomed to. It interested—yes, it pleased him!

"Proud young hussy!" he mumbled, with his head on one side. "Tall as her namesake! Make a good marchioness! Ah, I like her style! Where's that old fox, her mother, I wonder?"

That old fox was at a little distance, biting her lips in angry amazement at her daughter's reckless conduct, but now she came up, and the marquis took a seat beside her.

Like all mothers, she talked of little else but her daughter, and the marquis was informed that there had never been a more dutiful, affectionate girl than her Lily; and so young, too! Ah, what a comfort such a daughter was to a lonely mother!

"Wouldn't like to lose her, my leedy!" sneered the marquis, who, though short-sighted as regards Lilian, was not at all deceived by her ladyship.

Then came back Lilian, just flushed enough, with sparkling eyes and full, pouting lips—certainly a tempting morsel; and the old wolf ogled and fidgeted, and mumbled, half in admiration and longing and half in doubt.

"There is Lady Deuchamp beckoning!" exclaimed Lady Devigne, with a stretch of imagination, the hostess being at that moment on the staircase, out of sight. "Marquis, take care of her till I come back!" she said, with a smile, and with a tap of the fan, trotted off.

"Enjoying yourself," said the marquis, when they were alone; "like halls, eh?"

"Yes, the few I have been to. Do you not, my lord?"

"Hem! Don't dance now," mumbled the marquis. "Never liked it; like looking on, though, when there is anything to look at. You dance well." Then he eyed her all over, and ground his teeth, like the wolf he was. "There's a good sort of hall-room at Orland," he said, in a low voice, and with a leer.

"So there should be," said Lilian, looking straight at him.

"Yes," he nodded; "they call it one of the finest places in England. I don't know; I'm never there. It's a great, lonely, devil of a—beg pardon!—a somewhat dead place. Wants a mistress, eh?"

"I'm not so sure of that," said Lilian, innocently.

"But I am," resumed the marquis, getting a little closer, and staring at the small, white hand, which she had ungloved for a moment. ("Nice hand," he muttered to himself; "good foot too," glancing down at the slim, white-satin morsel. "Yes, she's the pick of them all—the pick of them all!") "It's time there was a mistress there, to cheer it up, and—take care of me!"

Lilian moved her head, and nodded, absently.

"You are old enough to take care of the mistress, marquis," she said.

This speech from less pretty lips might have offended. As it was, it sounded charmingly bold and quick from the young, blushing creature beside him.

He chuckled.

"That's good; yes, yes! I'm old enough—you don't know my age," he broke off, with a sly cunning. "I'm not so old as you think."

"I said old enough, not too old," remarked Lilian. "Older than the poor, young man who has just danced my poor dress to pieces. Marquis, I hate young men as much as you hate old maids."

OFFICIAL.
LONDON, June 5. At Verdun the enemy continued violent and costly assaults throughout the week, making some progress. On the British front there was greater activity, especially southeast of Ypres where the enemy penetrated our line to a depth of several hundred yards. The Canadians, after severe fighting, recovered much of the lost ground. The enemy's losses were severe. Italian-Austrian attacks on the Adige front are continued. The enemy occupied Arsenio Astero. Attempts to further advance were repulsed. Austrian reports foreshadow a Russian offensive. Smuts' forces captured an entrenched position in Mithocum. In the Caucasus the Russians have withdrawn from Mamakun salient.

BONAR LAW.
GERMANS MOWED DOWN.
PARIS, June 5. In their separated attacks on Fort Vaux one of the outlying defences of Verdun, along the front east of the Meuse, the Germans are hurrying forward infantry masses in compact form. The first ranks were obliged to advance to certain death. Columns tried to debouch from the village Damloup below Fort Cross, to attain the slopes near the fort. For three days this spot has been the scene of carnage which saturated the ground with blood. One German column advanced no further than the bottom of the ravine. The front ranks pushed by those behind, fell as fast as they reached the dead line and were swept by French quick-firers. As they toppled over, others came on to take their place, and fell in line. French officers who have returned from the Verdun front, although hardened by the worst sights of war, declare that the butchery there surpasses imagination.

SURVIVORS TALK.
LONDON, June 5. Survivors of the British cruiser Warrior, who were landed at Devonport, say that the Warrior and the cruiser Defence steamed between the two lines of German warships, with the result that within a few minutes the Defence was blown into the air

BRITISH DESTROYER SAFE.
LONDON, June 5. The British destroyer Acacia, which the Germans claimed to have sunk, has arrived at a N.E. coast port under tow of another destroyer. The shell which put her out of action after she had been in the thick of the fight for 40 minutes, exploded in the engine room, killing five men. After that we were helpless, said one of her crew, and with shells falling all around us, we expected soon to be sent to the bottom, but luckily none struck us.

URGES PRESSURE ON GREECE.
PETROGRAD, June 5. The Russian press urges the Entente Powers to bring pressure to bear on Greece, because of the antagonistic attitude of that country. Something of a sensation has been caused by articles, especially that in the Bourze Gazette, expressing the opinion that the King of Greece would do well to take a rest of some duration at some place, which would be better for his health than Athens. Other papers denounce the political feeling in Greece toward the Entente Powers. The Novoe Vremya considers measures at Salonika insufficient and calls upon the Entente Powers to take the necessary steps at Piræus and Athens.

CASUALTIES.
LONDON, June 5. The Admiralty this evening made public an additional list of casualties among petty officers and men who took part in the naval battle off Jutland, reported from ships other than those sunk. The list shows 116 killed, and 233 wounded.

FRENCH POSITIONS BOMBARDED.
PARIS, June 5. The French positions near Lake Doiran, in the vicinity of the Greek Serbo frontier, have been violently bombarded, according to a despatch to the Havas Agency from Salonika. A Greek convoy crossing the Patraeg region near Doiran, was cannonaded by the Germans and Bulgarians, the correspondent adds, despite the fact that white and Greek flags were hoisted.

UNFAIR CRITICISM BY NEWS-PAPERS.
LONDON, June 5. An Admiralty communication to-night, referring to aspersions cast by some newspapers upon the professional conduct of the higher command officers in the Jutland battle, says that it cannot be too clearly stated that as no definite report from the Commander-in-Chief has been published or even read, any attempt to criticize the direction of operations must be wholly conjectural, and that such aspersions inflict grave injustice upon those able and gallant officers to whose care is confided the command of His Majesty's squadrons.

AROUND VERDUN.
PARIS, June 5. With undiminished violence the Germans continued their attacks last night along Verdun east of the Meuse. In the region of Vaux and Damloup between the Fort and Utlage on Damloup, the German offensive was particularly severe. The French are still in possession of Fort Vaux. In the vicinity of Douaumont there the heavy artillery fighting. Unsuccessful raids were undertaken in the Vosges.

CATTLE EXPORT PROHIBITED.
LONDON, June 5. The Dutch Ministry of Agriculture have decided to prohibit the exportation of meat and cattle, says a despatch to Renter's from the Hague.

BRITISH STEAMERS SUNK.
LONDON, June 5. Despatches to Lloyds report the sinking of the unarmed British steamships Dewaland and Salmonpool.

BRITISH ADMIRALTY DENY REPORT.
LONDON, June 5. In connection with the German official statement which announced the sinking of a British destroyer off the Humber, and the burning of the British cruiser Euryalus, the following announcement was made to-day by the British Admiralty: "No British destroyer or any other British warship was destroyed off the Humber or anywhere else by submarine, or any other agency. Since the action of the 31st of May, the Euryalus was not present in the North Sea, and during this battle therefore was not sunk by German fire. It would ap-says that the British and Germans are fighting hard in the region of Ypres, where last Saturday the British in hand-to-hand encounters with the aid of bombs, recaptured most of the trenches the Germans previously had taken. In the sector from the Ypres-Comines canal to Hooge point, in face of repeated attacks, the British have been unable to retain the bulk of the recaptured ground, but are still fighting strenuously to keep what they have and recapture what has been lost.

"MEASLES."
Hundreds of children are suffering from "measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them. A heavy "cough" is very prevalent during the present epidemic, and "Pneumonia" is the great danger. Avoid this by keeping a bottle of "Stafford's Phoratoxine Cough Cure" on hand.

Our Volunteers.
The total number of enlistments to date is 3,335, ten young men having presented themselves for enlistment yesterday, as follows:—
Ferd. Parsons, Sandy Point, Saint George's
Fred. Sheppard, Sandy Point, Saint George's
A. A. Messervey, Sandy Point, Saint George's
W. J. Messervey, Sandy Point, Saint George's
Herb. E. Badcock, Upper Gallies
J. Snow, Clarke's Beach
Ernest Kelly, Coley's Point.
John Dunn, St. John's
Elihu Moore, St. John's
Fred. A. Stone, St. John's.
The men in training spent yesterday at rifle practice at the Southside Range and at extension order drill on the Parade Grounds.

SPLENDID PICTURES AT THE NICKEL.
The pictures at the Nickel Theatre yesterday, attracted very large audiences, and patrons one and all were highly pleased with the show. The building was pleasingly cool and most comfortable. The pictures were all of the highest quality and were pronounced to be the best seen for some time; they were all by artists well up in their profession. Bert Stanley, the rag time king, sang a catchy song which was much admired. To-day the programme will be repeated and those who were unable to attend yesterday should be sure and go. Tomorrow "The Romance of Elaine" will be continued. Patrons are now greatly interested in the grand new serial "The Strange Case of Mary Page."

Patriotic Operetta.
At the Casino Theatre to-morrow night the pupils of the Christian Brothers Schools will again present that charming operetta "Agatha." The proceeds will be given to the W. P. A. Red Cross Funds. The operetta promises to be even a bigger success than when last produced and in view of the object should be largely patronized.

Crafts in Collision.
While beating in the harbour yesterday evening two crafts, which are here from a northern outpost for supplies, got in collision and damaged each other as a result. The tug John Green had to go and separate the "row" and tow one of the schooners to a waterfront premises for repairs.

West Coast Herring Fishery.
The spring herring fishery at Bay of Islands is practically over and the voyage has been a poor one. It being estimated that not more than five thousand barrels have been packed. Of this quantity a very small portion was put by the "Scotch" method.

"Carpe Diem" Re-plies to "Home Ruler."

Editor Evening Telegram.
Sir,—A letter appeared in a recent issue of the Daily News signed "Home Ruler," this letter is so misleading and so accurately wrong that I feel impelled by a feeling of justice to reply to it and to point out its fallacy.
To begin with Empire Day in this Ancient and Loyal town was entirely unmarked except that a concert was prepared for the night when it was advertised that a dance would take place in the Star of the Sea Hall.
The Magistrate opened the performance with the usual patriotic speech, unfortunately, however, the eloquence of the speaker as well as the unusual good musical performance, was rather a wasted effort, because of the empty benches facing the performers. There were, perhaps a dozen representative men and women in the audience and as it is usual to measure the patriotic fervour of a locality by the amount of attendance at a gathering, why then this meeting is an eloquent reminder of our marked deficiency in that respect. I fear it looks as though Placentia is content to do the cheering while the other outposts furnish the money; flag flying and patriotic outpourings are quite in order when such expressions of loyalty are accompanied with that most practical of all proofs of feeling—money contributions, and our lack in the more pronounced when we notice the ever increasing contributions from other villages. I fancy I hear again the oft repeated assertion: "Placentia has contributed her fifty bold soldier boys." This is right and good as far as it goes but it does not go far enough. Placentia has sent out her soldiers, all the greater reason have we to do our utmost to equip our soldiers and sailors and nobody ought to forget in naming Placentia that this includes Jersey Side, North East, South East, Marquise and Harrisway and Point Verde, our boys are scattered all through these villages. Now compare our output of human material with that of little Portage Cove, where are to be found to-day the homes of the same number of boys in the Empire's service.
Placentia has during the past eight months sent in five hundred pairs of socks but absolutely nothing in garments.
"Home Ruler" is not speaking the truth when he states that the "Hall" has been placed at the disposal of patriotic workers." It was the committee of this very Institution who refused to allow the use of one of their several unused rooms for patriotic purposes. I am very glad, however, to announce that a house which has just been vacated has been placed at the disposal of the women of this town in consequence of which I have no doubt that things will soon begin to hum.
Mrs. Thomas Whelan has been very energetic since the sheep shearing has begun. I believe this good lady sent off over fifty pounds of wool to the factory, so there is no doubt that everything points to much increased activity upon the part of the women workers. Not only so, but I feel sure that the presence among us of those heroes who will visit us next week will rouse us from our lethargy and inspire us to picture in our mind's eye how every isolated soldier, though as small as a unit, is magnificently great in his relation to that vast army of brave men who are raised definitely above the life of ordinary civilians, inasmuch as they are willing to shed their blood in defence of the spiritual forces of the great and glorious Empire which nurtured them, and it is this spirit and this alone which is the foundation and source of all true patriotism.

Firemen's Strike Called off.

At the meeting of the Firemen's Union last night it was agreed that the rate offered by steamer owners, stokers $37 and others $39 be accepted. The demand made by the Union was a raise of $10 which would give each man $45 a month. Messrs. Job Brothers & Co. and Messrs. Baine Johnston & Co., who consented to give $40 will, on the return of their ships, sign on the men at rates offered by other concerns. President Woods and Secretary Whelan expressed an opinion that at present it was no time to strike.

Why There Are Tramps

Detroit Free Press.—It is this instinct to wander, suppressed in most cases by the necessities of civilized life, that makes hoboes and tramps and weary "Willies." Dr. C. B. Davenport, of the Carnegie Institution, ascribes its origin to heredity, which is at the base of most things we do. We have more wanderers than most nations, because Americans are descended from immigrants in which the instinct was not suppressed. "The Americans is nomadic in religion, in ideas in morals, and residence," he says. It is comforting to know that science can account for our wandering propensities, which by investigating the pedigrees of 100 families in whom were many nomads, Dr. Davenport ascertained are most frequently manifested in adolescence, when the instincts are strongest.

MORNING ON THE FARM.
Get up, my lad! The sun is rising, it is a most majestic day; Aurora's beauties are re-surprising, you should be glad to quit the hay. Get up, get up, the dew is gleaming, I like priceless jewels on the grass; it is a sin to lie here dreaming, while morning's transient glories pass. Get up, my son, the light is stealing afoot the summit of the hill, and I can hear the porkers squealing for buckets of refreshing swill. The oriole's already soaring, the mocking bird begins to mock, and you, O sluggish youth, are snoring, although it's nearly four o'clock! When I was young my sainted father ne'er had to rouse me from my bed; I thought it shame to cause such bother—I rose before the East was red. Before the wren began his carols, or curlew raised its solo note, I went and carried seven barrels of slop to feed the humpbacked swine. I went about my labours singing, as I would see you do, my son; and when the breakfast bell was ringing, the morning chores were always done. Get up, get the world is waking! The morn is grand, but soon it fades! In three shakes I will be breaking this slat across your shoulderblades!

Here and There.
GOOD FISHING.—So far there has been excellent codfishing in parts of Conception Bay, especially last week when some good hauls were made.
LEFT FOR CAPE COD.—The S. S. Danahad, which brought a cargo of salt here sailed yesterday for Cape Cod.
A FAILURE.—According to late reports received by the Board of Trade, the lobster fishery around the coast so far this season is a failure.

"Daddy, I jus' got to have Grape-Nuts"

No wonder children are fond of Grape-Nuts food. Its crisp, attractive form and delicious barley sweetness appeal wonderfully to the child's taste.

Grape-Nuts is made of Nature's finest food grains—wheat and barley. It is ready to eat direct from the sealed packet—convenient, economical, easy to digest, richly nourishing—the most perfect cereal food ever devised.

But above all, this food makes children sturdy and helps them to get big A's in their studies. For bounding health and vitality every boy and girl should have a daily ration of Grape-Nuts with cream or good rich milk.

MONDAY, June 5, 1916.

Last Night's Lecture by Dr. Grenfell.

Dr. W. T. Grenfell lectured on the Great War and of his personal experiences for three months in France and Flanders, at the Casino Theatre last night. The audience was small though none the less appreciative. In his opening remarks he referred to the inaccurate reporting of his addresses in Montreal on Newfoundland as published by the Montreal Gazette and Montreal Star. He then continued as follows:

"Among the number of things of which I am accused, owing to the report of the Ritz Carlton, perhaps seven will be enough to deal with.

"1st. The main one is that I accused Newfoundland fishermen of being drunken and frequenting 'hells' thirty years ago. I did nothing of the kind. In describing the splendid part played by the North Sea trawlers in keeping open the channel of communication between England and France, and helping largely in making the British Expeditionary force possible, I stated that thirty years ago I first visited the North Sea fleets. I saw there the 'floating hells' as the grog vessels were called, and visited the sea-ports, saw the saloons and houses of shame that waylaid these splendid men when they were coming from sea with their pockets full of money. I described the change wrought by abolition of the grog vessel through the advent of the mission vessels, which supplied them with cheaper tobacco, good literature, and a club house. How the re-action on the land led to different magistrates putting on record the improvement in the fishermen's quarters and how the chain of institutes slowly acquired around English seaports aided the men in keeping from temptation, by putting something better in place. I expressly stated, as even the reports admit, that I visited Newfoundland for the first time in 1892-24 years ago. Obviously therefore my remarks did not refer to Newfoundland."

"2nd. I am accused of 'not giving credit to other workers.' I have repeatedly, in writing, made reference to the unselfish labors of priests, clergy, Moravian missionaries. In my own book on 'Labrador,' the historical part for which was originally written by Mr. Gosling and was published separately owing to its size, and in the brief historical chapter written by Mr. Wallace, there is expressly stated that the Church of England have been doing good work since 1848, that their missions had been maintained in Labrador. The total time in this lecture devoted to our own work was very brief, and consisted largely of pictures showing the scenery. It was not an historical lecture; I am delighted, however, to go on record as being entirely conscious of the devoted work done by many men of every denomination, Church of England, Roman Catholic, Moravian Methodists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists. So far as we are concerned we have tried our best to help everyone that comes along in every way we can, and this we shall certainly do."

"3rd. I had been asked how many workers we had in the mission, and to my amazement found that last year the number was 173. The angry and sarcastic suggestion that they had better be employed in khaki or blue was the outcome of this. I explain that owing to the immense distance and the isolation of families, we are obliged to furnish each hospital with a motor yawl, to bring our freight if possible in our own vessels, and to run our small steamers. I explained that this number, 173, included all, from the staff of the Institute, Orphanage, hospitals, dispensaries, crews, reindeer men, farm hands, industrial department, and volunteers, apologizing for their number. Not one of the boys characterized as 'flocking around the hospital' were British subjects; one American at least, who was with us for three years is now a private in khaki at the front. They are all splendid men, do invaluable hard work, and pay their own expenses for the pleasures of service."

"4th. In congratulating Canada on her forthcoming prohibition legislation, I referred to the fact that Newfoundland had forestalled her in that direction, though I stated that personally I had no interest in purely negative legislation. Saloons do furnish warmth, company, light amusement, and a place to sit down; Christianity is positive, not negative, and some-

Herewith is correspondence between Mr. A. Sheard and Sir Herbert Ames:

Mr. A. Sheard, Secretary of the International Grenfell Institute, forwards the following copies of messages exchanged between himself and Sir Robert Ames, of Montreal, in relation to the reports in the Montreal papers regarding a recent address given by Dr. Grenfell at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in that city:

[Copy.]

St. John's, Nfld., June 2, 1916.

Sir Herbert B. Ames,

713 Drummond Bldg., Montreal.

St. John's press severely criticizing Grenfell for alleged statements made at meeting in Ritz-Carlton, Montreal, as reported in Montreal Star and Montreal Gazette. Grenfell wires you present. Kindly peruse such reports. Wire me immediate opinion if correct or incorrect versions of what was said. Don't come; purpose refuting allegations. Desirable perfect accuracy shall exist.

SHEARD.

A. Sheard, Seaman's Institute, St. John's, Newfoundland.

Do not remember Grenfell having said anything likely to offend residents of Newfoundland. Remarks, however, badly reported. Doctor described conditions years ago in North Sea and in seaport towns contrasted with improvement to-day; mailing clippings.

Two Men Miss

VOLUNTEERS SEARCH THEM.

Two young men, namely William Kearney, who was home recently and Lancelot of Bowring Bros. Ltd., are missing and several search parties are now looking for them. They were here by the trawlers' excursion last Friday night and got Maher's to go fishing. Not long after other excursionists disappeared naturally caused anxiety and alarm. As the search advanced since Sunday the parents and families of the men have become intensified. It is a theory that they went to the thick fog that prevailed on Saturday night. Relatives and friends, accompanied two police officers scoured the neighborhood in quest of the search was futile beyond that they found the camp. Kearney and Ewing had been and it were found their pants and overcoats, and in the pocket which were their money that evidently left behind before for the ponds. Last night rockets were sent off near the ponds to try and draw their attention without success. At noon a special train, containing 1000 volunteers, including Capt. Moore and Lieuts. Outerbridge and others, left town to make search of the missing men. There also were buglers, drummers and some kets and other equipment. At 5 p.m. to-day there were no reports of the missing men, but the hope is pressed that news of their whereabouts will be received within the next few hours.

Dr. Hal. Chaplin Gone Down in Hampshire.

In their poignant grief and sympathy profound and wide will be tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin and family, ever the loss of their son and brother, Dr. Hal. Chaplin. This morning Mr. Chaplin received the following message of Admiralty:—

"Deeply regret H.M.S. H. sank all hands."

The Hampshire, as referred to where, was sunk off the Orkney Islands, last night, and the hero was surgeon on her. Dr. Chaplin graduated at St. George's Hospital, London, in 1914, and gold medalist at that institution that year. He was twenty-six years of age and well known both at home and abroad as an athlete of exceptional ability. He is the second son of Mark Chaplin our esteemed townsmen, to make the supreme sacrifice, the late lamented Private Chaplin, of the First New Brunswick Regiment, being the first of our young men to give up his life in his country. The Telegram expresses its deepest sympathy to the family in their sad bereavement.

Yesterday relatives and friends, accompanied by two police officers scoured the woods in the neighborhood in question, but the search was futile beyond the fact that they found the camp where Kearney and Ewing had been staying, and in it were found their provisions and overcoats, and in the pockets of which were their money that they evidently left behind before leaving for the ponds. Last night sky-rockets were sent off near the camp to try and draw their attention, but without success. At noon to-day a special train, containing 100 volunteers, including Capt. Montgomerie and Lieuts. Outerbridge and Holloway, left town to make search for the missing men. There also went along buglers, drummers and some blankets and other equipment. Up to 1 p.m. to-day there were no tidings of the missing men, but the hope is expressed that news of their safety will be received within the next twenty-four hours.

The King vs. Albert E. Hickman.
The further hearing of the indictment against Albert E. Hickman, which was adjourned at 1 p.m. yesterday, was continued at 2.30. The following gave evidence for the Crown: J. C. Jerrett and John H. Roberts, and were cross-examined by Mr. W. F. Lloyd and Mr. A. J. W. McNeilly. At 5 p.m. Mr. Lloyd addressed the Jury on behalf of his client, and stated in his remarks that Mr. Hickman and those in his employ would voluntarily submit any statement or answer any questions in connection with this case that the counsel for the Crown would ask, and concluded by saying his client had nothing to fear. Mr. Calvert Pratt, manager of Smith Co.'s office, was the first to be called, after which Mr. Hickman was sworn and gave evidence till 6.15, when the Court adjourned till 7.30. It was argued by counsels and consented to by the Court, that the Court would further adjourn till 10 a.m. to-day. At the appointed hour Mr. Hickman continued to give evidence, which concluded at 1 p.m. The Court then adjourned till 2.30 p.m., when counsel for the accused will address the Jury.

A Worthy Appeal

In accordance with a request from the London Chamber of Commerce the Board of Trade here have started an appeal to all in view of the numbers of our sailors with the British navy. Despite the 22 long months of the war, the British sailor is ever on the alert, as demonstrated quite recently. However, literature minimizes the monotony and weary waiting and financial aid lightens the burdens.

Notes From the Editor of the "Diocesan Magazine."

The biennial session of the Diocesan Synod will fall exceptionally late this year, the opening ceremonies being fixed for July 4th. This will enable the clergy to be present at the C.H.E. examinations, which are to be held during the last week in June, when the Synod would, under ordinary circumstances, have been in progress. The later it is, however, the better the chances of good weather—an important consideration in the case of those for whom Synod week stands for pleasure as well as business, providing an all-too-rare opportunity for change and relaxation.

The local papers have recently contained an advertisement for the sale of the Church Ship Amazon. It has been generally known for some time past that she was, in more ways than one, unsuited to the work required of her; and those who are responsible have, no doubt, acted wisely in coming to their present decision. It is much to be hoped that the Amazon will fetch a good price, so that out of the proceeds of this sale provision may be made for the Bishop's visitation in the future. There is a great demand for craft of all kinds at the present time, so that the prospect of success is brighter than usual.

Recently the Lord Bishop, who, on May 1st, entered upon the 30th year of his Episcopate, has been holding a visitation of some of the nearer portions of the Diocese, which are readily accessible to him by train. The all-important question now is—how many of those confirmed have at once become regular and earnest communicants? The percentage of professing church folk in some of the districts recently visited by the Bishop, whose names stand on the communicants' roll, is lamentably low. Yet, until the Lord's own service becomes the centre of the life of every parish, every mission, and every individual church member, it is difficult to see how any real spiritual progress can be expected. There can hardly be found a plainer command than this: "Do in remembrance of Me"; but it was far more than a bare command; it was the last wish of our greatest Friend, expressed under the most touching circumstances, on the very eve of the day on which He gave His Life for us all. When once the Holy Communion is seen in that light, surely the blight of non-communicant churchmanship must pass away from our midst for ever.

REPORTS ON NORTH SEA

LONDON, June 5.—The latest reports received from the Admiralty enable the Press to give the following account of the naval engagements off the land coast, with various results as viewed from the side during the night of May 31 and June 1st: British destroyers determined attack on the German battle fleet which remained in the night of June 1st, but on the morning of June 1st, reversed the field four times, but no enemy to fire upon, the Commander-in-Chief took his fleet back to bases, and five hours after it is reported the battle already fought. As regards German losses, the evidence it is declared has been obtained:—Two battle cruisers at least, probably two battle four light cruisers, eight destroyers, one submarine, remainder of the battle cruiser squadron must have reached home port but ships were severely damaged, as also were the ships of the Koenig class which under the fire of a portion of the British battle fleet. Besides the German battle cruiser Seydlitz as reported from returned officers of the effect that they are able to lost German battle cruisers at the port of Danzig, including the battle cruiser and Lutnow. Naval here point out that on account of proximity to home ports, some of the vessels, that were as badly as the British cruiser Warrington have been able to make port, the warships Hindenburg hitherto classified as 'battleship.' Destroyer and her sister ship Lutnow believed to be the battle cruiser Seydlitz as reported from returned officers of the neutral source, as having been Thursday morning badly damaged, pursued by British warships, result of the battle it is supposed puts an end to German ambitions.

Dental Insurance.

By BETH CAMERON.

"Had the cunningest little four-year-old in this chair the other day," said the dentist, "said the dentist."

"I don't suppose she feels quite so trusting now," said I, after a pause in our conversation, during which she had used the particularly vicious looking instrument.

"She does," said he. "She had a lovely time."

"I looked at him carefully to make sure he wasn't being sarcastic. "What do you mean?"

"Just what I say. I didn't hurt her."

"How could you help it?" She's Crazy To Go To The Dentist.

"Oh, it was only a small cavity. Her aunt was in here a day or two ago, and she says Rosamond has told her cousin what a lovely time she had and now she's just crazy to come too. She asks every day when she's going to the dentist."

"Poor things!" said I. "There's a terrible disillusionment waiting for them some day."

"Not necessarily," said he. "In fact I think it's more than likely that I'll never have to hurt them, that is if their parents will keep on the way they've begun."

"That if I can see a child young enough and often enough I ought to be able to catch the cavities before they get in deep enough to be painful."

"They Wouldn't Have So much Tooth-ache."

"And would they never have the toothache, either?"

"I'm not so sure of that. In fact I have one family that I've been taking care of that way and they do sometimes have toothache. But they have a heritage of very soft teeth. Besides I minimize it."

"Why don't all parents have their children taken care of that way?"

"Partly because they are careless and partly because they are afraid of the expense."

"Wouldn't it be cheaper in the end?"

"Of course. And I'll tell you what I'm doing with one family. I've made a price per child for the year and I'm taking all the responsibility. The agreement is that I am to have the children when I send for them. It's an experiment, but I hope it will work. It will mean a saving of money to the parents without any loss to me, and think what it will mean to the children!"

The dentist laid down a comparatively painless implement and reached for that most dreaded weapon of the dentist's arsenal—the buzzer. And I wished—Oh, how I wished—that preventive dentistry had been the style when I was young.

A word to the wise is sufficient. If you have children, isn't this scheme worth talking over with your dentist?"

Motor Cycles.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Slwash."

A motorcycle is a bicycle with a pandemonium attachment, and is designed for the special use of mechanical geniuses, daredevils and lunatics.

The motorcycle is equipped with a motor small enough to be put in a large pocket and loud enough to fill a Coliseum comfortably. This motor is connected with the rear wheel of the bicycle, and when it is in the mood, will revolve the wheel with tremendous speed, thus causing the bicycle to proceed from hither to yon over buggies, pedestrians, fences and small out-buildings.

A motorcycle is really a miniature automobile with full sized nose, small and dirt output. It is not started by cranking, however, but by pedalling the whole machine along the road until the motor emerges from its coma and gets on the job. An automobilist can be detected by his vast overhanging shoulders and calloused hands. A motorcyclist, however, may have arms like pie-patens, but his legs are seven sizes too large for him.

A motorcycle is not as comfortable as a camel or a lumber wagon, but it is very swift, and there is nothing that feels more like flying than to ride a large bartone motorcycle over the country roads at fifty miles an hour, leaping lightly from bump to bump—except to leave the machine when it has struck a rock and to soar swiftly through the unstable atmosphere until some jagged section of the United States interferes with further progress.

Motorcycles are very useful and have almost annihilated distance and cheap clothes. They should be ridden, in costume, except by very wealthy and careless men. A pair of leather pants with asbestos lining and a two bushel hip pocket for tools, a padded vest, heavy gloves, a pair of goggles, and nose and shin-guards make a tasty and useful rig for the cyclist. Dressed in this fashion the enthusiast can enjoy himself to the full as he caroms from tree to tree and gorges himself with dust, oil and excitement. Motorcyclists are not as fatal to pedestrians, automobiles, because they can only run over him with wheels. But they should be treated with respect at all times and should not be interfered with when in a hurry.

Marvelous records are made by intrepid manhours who have driven large double-barreled motorcycles ninety miles on a board track, and most of the way up the golden stairs in one hour by the clock.

Motorcycles are much cheaper than automobiles, and there seems to be no practical remedy for this, as the industry is unfortunately not in the hands of a trust. A good machine can be purchased for $150. However, if the devotee does not possess $150 he can get almost as good results by drinking a little lubricating oil, inhaling a vacuum cleaner and setting off two bushels of fire-crackers between his legs.

AT THE CRESCENT.

One of the best week opening shows is on at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day. "Through Troubled Waters" is a notable Broadway Star feature in three reels produced by the Vitagraph Company. "The Broken Wrist" is a great Biograph drama, the story of a Hospital nurse and two doctors. "The Fable of the Tip and the Treasure" is one of George Ade's cleverest comedies.

A new and classy musical programme has been arranged by Professor McCarthy to accompany this big show.

A Gallant and Hardy Breed

The Navy—It is hardly necessary to emphasize the dangerous character of mine-sweeping. Trawlers and drifters, being of moderate draught, have a certain advantage over heavier ships, for they can often pass in safety above mines which have been laid at a certain depth to catch deeper riding victims. On the other hand, the very nature of their duty compels them to spend most of their time in mine-infested waters, and the appalling risks they run are too often brought home to use by casualty lists. But the erstwhile fishermen who man these boats are a gallant and hardy breed, too unruined to be much impressed by the hidden and deadlier perils that now lurk beneath the grey waters.

REPORTS ON NORTH SEA FIGHT.

LONDON, To-day. The latest reports received from the Admiralty enabled the Associated Press to give the following review of the naval engagements off the Jutland coast, with various incidents. Results as viewed from the British side during the night of May 31st and June 1st: British destroyers made a determined attack on the retreating German battle fleet which hastened its flight. The British fleet remained in possession of the scene of battle during the morning of June 1st, and traversed the field four times, but finding no enemy to fire upon, the Commander-in-Chief took his fleet back to its bases, and five hours after its arrival reported the battle already for action. As regards German losses, definite evidence it is declared has now been obtained:—Two battle cruisers, one at least, probably two battleships, four light cruisers, eight destroyers, one submarine, remainder of German battle cruiser squadron may have reached home port but ships were all severely damaged, as also were the ships of the Koning class which were under the fire of a portion of the British battle fleet. Besides the above the Associated Press obtained information from returned officers of the fleet to the effect that they are able to identify lost German battle cruisers as Hindenburg and Lutzow. Naval officials here point out that on account of their proximity to home ports, some of their vessels, that were as badly injured as the British cruiser Warrior, would have been able to make port. German warships Hindenburg hitherto been classified as battleships; Derflinger and her sister ship Lutzow are believed to be the battle cruisers which have been included in the list of supposed German losses, while another battle cruiser Syditz as reported from neutral source, as having been seen Thursday morning badly damaged being pursued by British warships. The result of the battle it is suggested, points an end to German ambition of forcing a way through the British blockade, for a few fast cruisers, which if the scheme had been successful, would have undertaken a raid on the Allied shipping of the Atlantic. With the loss of three or four light cruisers, damage done to others, Germany, it is argued, now has not ships suitable for this undertaking. Another advantage claimed from the outcome of the battle is that it relieves the pressure on the Russian Army wing, where the German fleet was giving valuable support, while the sinking of nine destroyers and damage done to others will make it easier for British submarines to enter the Baltic and cruise there. It is already reported from Copenhagen that German cruisers have been withdrawn from Court and Coast while German destroyers have not been seen for a week in the Southern Baltic.

AMERICAN COMMENTS ON NORTH SEA FIGHT.
NEW YORK, To-day.

The Herald comments on the North Sea battle as follows: Granting great damage inflicted on British in the earlier stages, even this, as the air clears, it is open to doubt as the German abandonment of the battle scene is a confession if not an acknowledgment of defeat. In the meantime flags of rejoicing are flying in the Fatherland, the Kaiser is telephoning messages recording the triumph of the fleet over greatly superior forces. The Kaiser does well to praise the skill and gallantry of his officers and competency of his ships, but with the British still commanding and maintaining a relentless blockade, does he believe what he says, or is he kept in purposed ignorance of the truth?"

PRaise FOR CANADIANS.
LONDON, To-day.

The Evening Standard commenting on the latest action at Ypres says Paardoberg, Neuve Chapelle, St. Julien, St. Eloi has shed undying lustre on Canadian arms.

TRENCH FIGHTING.
LONDON, To-day.

Our infantry entered German trenches at five different places between Cinechy and Fauguisar, two of our parties particularly causing loss to the enemy. Mine warfare continues actively in sector from Huttech to Givenchy. Five mines have been sprung by us, one by the enemy during the past twenty-hour hours.

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE COMMENCED.
LONDON, To-day.

The long expected general offensive of the Russians against the Teutonic Allies seemingly has begun as from both Petrograd and Vienna came reports of Russian activity over front from Pripet River, East Brest, Litovsk to Roumanian frontier, a distance of 250 miles, the Russians everywhere using large numbers of guns and men. According to Petrograd the Russians have achieved successes at many important sectors, taking 13,000 prisoners, a number of guns and destroying or capturing Teuton positions. Along Bessarbian front, Dnieper region, along lower Stripa and Volhynia Russian attacks have been particularly violent. In the region of Olyka some Volhynian forts, a triangle of Russian guns shelled a front of over fifteen miles in length held by Austrian Arch Duke Joseph Ferdinand. Around Verdun bad weather set in and as a result the infantry of both sides kept their trenches, only bombardments have taken place, no new changes in position are recorded. Around Vaux and Damouloup, north east Verdun, bombardment on both sides continued with considerable intensity, while west of the Meuse shelling been only intermittent; on remainder of front in France, except around Ypres, the situation reported quiet. About Ypres the Germans and British forces, latter consisting of Canadians, keeping up violent fighting which has been in progress since last week when the Germans under terrific rain of shells captured Canadian positions; which later were retaken in hand to hand and bombing encounters. Returning to the attack on Sunday the Germans again forced the Canadians to relinquish the bulk of recaptured ground but the Canadians disputing strenuously the efforts of the Teutons to oust them from the remainder of the positions. Vienna reports that despite sturdy resistance of the Italians the Austrians have made further gains into Italy, Cengio zone, near Asiago a town in Celsana; 5,900 Italian prisoners, three cannon, eleven machine guns, 125 bomb throwers captured by the Austrians. Rome admits the retirement of the Italians in Cengio zone but says in Dalgone Valley, Largarina Valley, and on Posiha front, Austrian attacks repulsed with heavy losses. In southern Albania, in the region of Avlona the Austrians have dispersed with their artillery Italian detachments operating in that vicinity.

TORNADOES AT ARKANSAS.

LITTLE ROCK, To-day. Fifty-nine persons are reported dead, and many more injured in a series of tornadoes which swept Arkansas this afternoon; all means of communication crippled and it is feared that the list of dead and injured will be increased by later reports.

CANADIAN LOSSES HEAVY.

LONDON, To-day. The Times correspondent at British headquarters describing the situation at Ypres explains the Canadian forces were unable to retain their ground recaptured from the Germans last Saturday owing to the intensity of the German artillery fire, the correspondent concludes his despatch by saying you must be prepared to hear that Canadian losses have been very heavy.

OTTAWA, To-day.

Evidences of toll paid by the Canadians during the recent fighting about Ypres is shown in casualties being received by the Militia Department; about seven hundred names of rank and file have been received and the list is steadily growing.

GERMANY TALKS PEACE.

BERLIN, To-day. The Imperial Chancellor has again discussed peace in Reichstag. Six months ago, on December 9th, he said, discussing our military situation I spoke here for the first time of our readiness for peace, I could do so in entire confidence that our war situation would continue to improve and developments have confirmed this confidence as we made further progress on all fronts, we are stronger than we were before. If with this development before my eyes, I declared that we were ready for peace, I need not regret my statement even if our offer could not respond from our enemies.

WANT VON TRITZITZ RECALLED.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch to the Daily Mail from Hague says Leaders of German Conservative and Nationalist Liberal parties as well as of other German political factions are making concerted and determined efforts to secure the recall of Admiral Von Tritzitz as the head of the navy, because they are not satisfied with the result of the North Sea battle.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR'S SPEECH.

BERLIN, To-day.

In the critical times of July, 1914, it was the duty of every responsible statesman before God, his country and his conscience, to leave nothing untried that would preserve peace with honor; we also desired after successful repulse of our enemies to neglect nothing that was calculated to shorten the terrible suffering experienced by the people of Germany in such a conflagration. I told an American journalist that peace negotiations would only reach a settlement if they were conducted by statesmen of belligerent powers, on the basis of the real war situation, as shown by the war map. This proposition was rejected by the other side. They will not recognize the war map, as they hope to improve it in their own favor, but it has constantly changed in our favor. We have added to it since that remark was made. The surrender of the British army at Kut-el-Amara, the defeats with tremendous losses of the French at Verdun, the collapse of the Russian offensive in March, the mighty thrust forward of our Allies against Italy, the strengthening of our lines before Salonika, and just now we have received news of the naval battle off Jutland with jubilant and grateful hearts. This is how the war map looks now. If our various enemies desire to shut their eyes, then we must fight on until final victory.

ADMIRAL JELlicoe REPORTS LITTLE HOPE OF ANY SURVIVORS.
LONDON, To-day.

Admiral Jellicoe reports to the Admiralty as follows: "I have to report, with deep regret, that His Majesty's Ship Hampshire, Capt. Herbert J. Savill, R.N., with Lord Kitchener and his staff on board, was sunk last night at about 8 o'clock, to the west of the Orkneys, either by a mine or torpedo. Four boats were seen by observers on shore to leave the ship. The wind was northwest and heavy seas were running. Patrol vessels and destroyers at once proceeded to the spot and a party was sent along the coast to search, but only some bodies and an upturned boat have been found up to the present. As the whole shore have been searched from seaward, I greatly fear that there is little hope of there being any survivors."

No report has yet been received from the search party on shore. H.M.S. Hampshire was on her way to Russia.

SAYS GERMANS REPULSED.

PARIS, To-day.

Two attacks by Germans on the French lines between Fort Vaux and Damouloup, on the Verdun front, were repulsed by the French last night, according to an official statement issued by the War Office, to-day. The heavy bombardment of Fort Vaux continues with intermittent cannonading on the west front.

Recruiting Meeting at Burin.

Special to Evening Telegram.
BURIN, To-day.

A magnificent recruiting meeting was held last night in the Parish Hall by Mr. Blackall, and accompanying returned soldier heroes. Greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Mr. Blackall made a powerful appeal which resulted in eight recruits. Joining the colours we believe that the good seed sown will result in still larger numbers offering themselves in the cause of King and Country.

Harrowing Stories of Bulgar Abominations.

Scenes of Desolation Witnessed in Macedonia Equalling in Horror the Exodus From Belgium and Northern France.

(By Gaston Richard, correspondent of the Petit Parisien, Paris.)

Salonika, June 2.—I have just returned from a visit to Demir-Hissar and Serel, where I witnessed scenes of desolation equalling in horror the exodus from Belgium and Northern France. The roads of Eastern Macedonia are choked with panic stricken Greeks, fleeing before the oncoming Bulgarian hordes. The refugees are driving their sheep and cattle before them, pushing hand carts containing their belongings, and carrying weeping children. Beneath the torrid sun, the wretched, homeless people struggled along concealed in a choking cloud of dust.

Demir-Hissar, when I arrived, was dense with refugees. They had been swarming into the little town since Sunday, clamoring for protection and begging bread. But there were only forty sacks of flour for 30,000 persons, and the majority of the refugees are starving to death. The same scenes occurred at Serel, where the authorities vainly endeavored to collect food. Every one of these wretched people tell harrowing stories of Bulgarian abominations. Led by pro-Bulgarian Greeks the invading troops swarmed into the frontier villages, and seized all the available food, killing all the beasts and striking down with their rifle butts the civilians who attempted to interfere.

I saw a girl with a deep cut eight inches long, around her neck, caused by a Bulgarian soldier, who had brutally snatched a tawdry necklace from her. Another girl who had been wearing ear-rings had the lobes of both ears torn away. A great majority of the young girls were carried off by the troops under the eyes of officers, who also allowed the most wanton pillage.

When the population begged for mercy and asked to be allowed to leave their homes, the officers cried: "Where will you go? we shall take Seres from Talva and Salonika and hurl the allies into the sea. Men who returned to the villages to try to find their missing women folks never returned to the refugees columns.

All stories agree that Ulians encouraged the Bulgarian pillage, although they did not participate in it themselves. The German officers made no effort to prevent Bulgarian orgies. When a young woman covered with blood, threw herself at the feet of a German colonel and implored his aid, he merely shrugged his shoulders remarking: "You knew we were coming, why didn't you leave before?"

Along the road from Demir Hissar to Seres, Bulgarians raided groups of fleeing Greeks, taking all their belongings and even removing the clothes from their backs and leaving them nude.

As soon as the miserable procession reached the Franco-British lines the troops gave the famished people bread and soup until they had disposed of all their own rations. At the frontier village of Beles, the Bulgarians expelled the population at the point of the bayonet. At Youle, a Greek school mistress who attempted to prevent the Bulgarian troops from raiding her home, was dragged to the village square and publicly attacked, being stoned as she ran shrieking towards the country. At Youle, also, five thousand sheep and 100 cows were seized. Thirty inhabitants of the region were arrested and four were shot on suspicion of spying.

New Municipal Bill.
 The Citizens' Committee met in the Board of Trade Rooms last night, Chairman Soper presiding.
 A communication from the Colonial Secretary was read in reply to a letter written May 27th in relation to the qualification of voters.
 Considerable discussion arising out of the minutes of the last meeting in relation to the holding of Council meetings, it was the unanimous wish of the Citizens' Committee that all regular meetings should be open to the public, notice to that effect given and seats provided; special or privilege meetings may or may not be open to the public and that no motions should be voted at special meetings.
 An amendment to Section 51 is: "That 25 cents be charged for a copy of the minutes of the Council meetings."
 Sections 54 to 67 were gone through. Sections 55 and 56 dealing with the right of employees of the Council entering private dwellings, etc., for the purpose of inspection, before and after certain hours, caused much diversity of opinion. The matter was deferred till next meeting.
 We understand it is the intention of some of the Citizens' Committee to be candidates in the forthcoming Municipal election; important business relating thereto is to be brought in at the next meeting on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

1st Nfld. REGIMENT, Casualty List.

1ST. NEWFOUNDLAND REGIMENT. Not Previously Reported.
 177—Sergt. Augustine Joseph Manning, 31 Gower Street. Unofficially reported killed in action, June 3.
 Sergeant Augustine Joseph Manning left with Company A. as a Lance Corporal, and his promotions indicate his soldierly qualities. He is a son of Capt. J. B. Manning, H.M.C., and was a Linotype Operator at the Herald Office. He belonged to the C. C. C. Sergeant Manning was one of the first to enlist, and has died gloriously in action.
 1665—L. Corp. Howard Smith, Dildo, T. B. Died of heart failure, Scotland, June 3.
 Lance Corporal Howard Smith was member of Company H. Unlike Sergeant Manning, he was not privileged to reach the front, but, not the less, has he yielded his life in his country's service. He was a son of Mr. Thomas Smith, of Dildo, Trinity Bay.
 1444—Private Nathaniel Butler, Clarke's Beach. Admitted Welsh Metropolitan Military Hospital, Whitechurch, Cardiff, Appendix, severe.

The Br War
 Some idea of the Hand-Incessant High Pressure Military Discipline that is Army and Never Fades Salutes of the Corridors.
 London (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—Reginald Brade, Secretary of the War Office, received a representative of the Associated Press and gave facilities, through one of his staff as escort, to see something of this huge war machine in full swing under the pressure of one of the greatest wars with which it has ever had to cope. It was an experience of several hours, exploring the labyrinths of the vast institution, fairly vibrating with energy at every point and yet proceeding with precision and efficiency in meeting the big part it is taking in the conduct of the war.
 Some idea of the immensity of this war establishment may be had from the fact that the corridors are two miles long—a good brisk walk of an hour. And along these two miles is a good-sized city of people, over 4,000 engaged in the infinite details of this war work, great and small, all the way from Lord Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, down to boy scouts and girl messengers. And this is only the central establishment, for the war exigencies have outgrown even this huge building, and many outside buildings, business blocks and other premises have been taken in as War Office branches. The sudden extension of censoring as a precaution of military defence has called into service a large army of censors, and a number of business premises in various quarters have been acquired for the military censors' branches. Three or four other branches are at other points, and practically the whole ordnance branch has grown into a separate government department, with a Cabinet Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, at its head.
 Yet the War Office still remains the throbbing centre of the work; here the larger questions of strategy and the campaigns in various theatres of the war are worked out; here the Army Council and the Imperial General Staff hold their meetings, and here the many branches of military work ramify from the headquarters of Lord Kitchener, Gen. Sir W. Robertson, Chief of the Imperial Staff; Lieut.-General Sir H. Slater, adjutant-general to the forces; Lieut.-General Sir I. Cowans, quarter-master general, and the two members of Parliament who represent the civilian branch and keep the war branch in touch with Parliament; Mr. Tennant, parliamentary under-secretary for war, and Mr. Foster, financial secretary for war, with Sir Reginald Brade as secretary of the War Office and of the War Council.
 It is difficult to get into the War Office, and more difficult to get out—like the continental railway system. Guards turn away all those without papers from authorized sources, stating a definite purpose for the visit.

The British War Office

Some Idea of the Big Task in Hand--Incessant Work Under High Pressure and with rigid Military Discipline--War Secretary is Acme of Courtesy and Never Fails to Return Salutes of Soldiers in the Corridors.

London (Correspondence of the Associated Press). — Sir Reginald Brade, Secretary of the War Office, received a representative of the Associated Press, and gave facilities, through one of his staff as escort, to see something of this huge war machine in full swing under the pressure of one of the greatest wars with which it has ever had to cope. It was an experience of several hours, exploring the labyrinths of the vast institution, fairly vibrating with energy at every point and yet proceeding with precision and efficiency in meeting the big part it is taking in the conduct of the war.

Some idea of the immensity of this war establishment may be had from the fact that its corridors are two miles long—a good brisk walk of an hour. And along these two miles is a good-sized city of people, over 4,000 engaged in the infinite details of this war work, great and small, all the way from Lord Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, down to boy scouts and girl messengers. And this is only the central establishment, for the war exigencies have outgrown even this huge building, and many outside buildings, business blocks and other premises have been taken in as War Office branches. The sudden extension of censoring as a precaution of military defence has called into service a large army of censors, and a number of business premises in various quarters have been acquired for the military censors' branch. Three or four other branches are at other points, and practically the whole ordnance branch has grown into a separate government department, with a Cabinet Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, at its head.

Yet the War Office still remains the throbbing centre of the work; here the larger questions of strategy and the campaigns in various theatres of the war are worked out; here the Army Council and the Imperial General Staff hold their meetings, and here the many branches of military work ramify from the headquarters of Lord Kitchener, Gen. Sir W. Robertson, Chief of the Imperial Staff; Lieut.-General Sir H. Sclater, adjutant-general to the forces; Lieut.-General Sir I. Cowans, quarter-master general, and the two members of Parliament who represent the civilian branch and keep the war branch in touch with Parliament; Mr. Tennant, parliamentary under-secretary for war, and Mr. Foster, financial secretary for war, with Sir Reginald Brade as secretary of the War Office and of the War Council.

It is difficult to get into the War Office, and more difficult to get out—like the continental railway system. Guards turn away all those without papers from authorized sources, stating a definite purpose for the visit and a fixed time. Passing this barrier, one's name and address is taken, and a permit issued, and the addresses are always available if Scotland Yard wishes to investigate the antecedents of anyone making unauthorized inquiries.

Within the building there is an air of work under high pressure and with rigid military discipline, with many officers in uniform, old soldiers as messengers, and the boy scouts and girl messengers also in uniform, the girls in brown khaki dress and blouse with brass buttons and a brass device on the collar.

Kitchener and Derby.

There are two outstanding figures of interest at the War Office just now—Lord Kitchener, the supreme head of the whole establishment, and Lord Derby, whose scheme for increasing the army has brought him very much in the public eye, while across the road, at the Horse Guards, is Field Marshal French, now Lord French of Ypres, who as commander of home defence, is now directing home defences in general and the aircraft defences in particular. Lord Kitchener's windows look out on the busy traffic of Whitehall, with the mounted Horse Guards across the way, and the bronze equestrian statue of the Duke of Cambridge, in sweeping plume and full regalia of a field marshal, at the entrance. The offices are stately, with portraits of distinguished war ministers. But under Kitchener they have taken on an air of the camp, with maps all about and on the walls indicating the campaigns in many fields of British operation—in Flanders, at Salonika, in Egypt and Mesopotamia, and of ally operations on the Austro-Italian front, in Russia and other points.

Lord Kitchener comes and goes, always as a soldier, in uniform. He goes in uniform to Buckingham Palace for his conferences with the King, and in uniform to the House of Lords, where he is a member, to announce Government policies on the war. His busy hours at headquarters are in the morning and at night, attending war councils, seeing the chief staff officers and directing plans. He appears always calm and unruffled in the mass of details pressing from every side, and he returns the salutes of soldiers along the corridors with the same deference they give him, like Washington, who bowed to his servants because he would not permit his subordinates to outdo him in courtesy.

Lord Derby's quarters are across the corridor, and though he is a civilian and wears no uniform, he is surrounded by a military staff and is doing one of the most important military works—"establishing a reservoir," he calls it, which will supply a steady stream of recruits as the military authorities need them. Instead of war maps, Lord Derby has a map of the United Kingdom hanging back of his desk, for his problem has been the assembling of men in proper quotas from different points within the country. Field Marshal French's quarters are not far away, the centre of hustling activity in connection with the new air defences. Just what these are is not being made known, except in the guarded announcements of Lord Kitchener to Parliament, as the theory of the war officials is that surprise is an essential element in the effectiveness of a war-weapon. So that about all that is known is that Field Marshal French is working with Sir Percy Scott, the naval expert, is an extensive scheme of land and coast defences and warnings, with rapidly increasing air defence guns around London and in all exposed parts of England.

But while these main figures of the War Office are most before the public, there is also a vast organization carrying on the innumerable day-to-day branches of military work. The main divisions are the General Staff, the Adjutant General, the Quartermaster General, and the Civil and Finance departments, with most of the Ordnance branch now transferred to the Ministry of Munitions. Under these main heads there are some 120 divisions, taking in the whole range of military activities.

The War Council is, in effect, made up of the heads of these main divisions, seven in all, with Lord Kitchener as president of the Council, and General Robertson, chief of staff, Adjutant-General Sclater, Quartermaster-General Cowans, Major-General Von Donop, Parliamentary Secretary Tennant and Financial Secretary Foster as the other members of the War Council. The General Staff, with General Robertson at its head, makes the scientific studies of military defence, assembles all the available intelligence on different campaigns, furnishes the experts, and has charge of the military inter-communication by telegraphing and signalling. Unlike the American system, the British Army Medical Service is under the adjutant-general. The extensive purchase of American horses, harness and supplies has come under the direction of Quartermaster-General Cowans, who has general charge of food, clothing and supplies, land and water transportation of troops, supplying horses, etc.

The recent transfer of ordnance from the War Office to the Ministry of Munitions shows the remarkable development of ordnance, particularly artillery, since it first came into use. It was not until 1483 that England established an ordnance officer, the War Office records showing that Rauf Bigod was the first master of ordnance. That was the time the Germans were first using these strange engines called artillery, throwing enormous stones. So the English appointed a Master of Ordnance, and soon after Ferdinand of Spain also got some of these new engines of warfare and with them succeeded at last in battering down the walls of Grenada and driving the Moors out of Spain. From that time on artillery was a main factor in settling wars, and in England such men as the Duke of Marlborough, Lord Cornwallis, Lord Howe, and the Duke of Wellington, were Masters of Ordnance. It is a curious fact that after Lord Cornwallis' surrender at Yorktown, he returned to England and became the Master-General of Ordnance. This matter of big guns has been growing ever since, until this war made it such a factor that a new Cabinet Minister took it over as a separate department.

100,000 Letters a Week.

A visit to the Registry branch of the War Office gave an idea of the immensity of the work going on, for this branch received everything coming in and distributes the business to all branches. Over 100,000 letters are received every week, and of these an average of 40,000 go through the formality of registering. Once registered, a communication is an official record of the government, eventually under the control of the Master of the Rolls.

The mere registering of this vast influx of 40,000 pieces of separate war business is a prodigious work. Ten youths were at a long table engaged solely in slitting open the envelopes. Fourteen sacks of war business had come in the first morning mail, and this was only the start. Room after room is filled with men and women workers, registering these communications and getting them started to the 120 branches. A war communication addressed personally to Lord Kitchener or any other official is delivered direct, but unless personally addressed it is part of the War Office business, and goes to one of the 120 branches, according to the subject treated. There is no time for high-sounding titles, and so every branch and every official is known by a group of letters, and every officer in the service has a number. This Registry branch under the direction of one of the veteran members of Sir Reginald Brade's staff, Mr. Pedley, is a model of efficiency in the handling of the avalanche of documents which the war turns loose on every branch of the War Office. Going down in the sub-basement, below the level of the Thames, one could see the bewildering vistas of documents, stretching for long distances but arranged with mathematical precision for instant reference as a Government record.

One of the curious requirements growing out of the rush of war work is the need of a staff of "searchers" to look up lost documents. The "searchers" make their rounds every morning. Very often in the pressure of many kinds of work an important war record will get laid aside or covered up on some desk, and it is the business of the "searchers" to ferret out every lost record and get it back again in the regular channels.

Altogether this glimpse of the War Office and the passing exchanges with the many officials along the miles of offices, gave the impression of a perfectly regulated machine with the steam-gauge wide open and working under full pressure; and from end to end of this vast establishment, along with the sure and steady movement, was the spirit everywhere manifest war workers: "Let us do our part and expressed among these part to win the war."

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district." He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the trinity of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them, I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is—well, mere child's play."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very unobtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness—all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances, by the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO X Lamp and GASTHEAM Radiators fill all light and heat requirements.
