dividual in its sweetness. It provides the flavor that most people who nourish a sweet-tooth probably will prefer.

The citric acid of the orange tempers the sweetness and imparts the tang that distinguishes real marmalade from the usual preserves and other marmalades.

Everyone who likes preserves of any kind will be delighted with this luscious marmalade.

Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade.

For the lovers of "bitter" marmalade our Scotch connoisseur-cook makes a limited quantity of Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade after a special recipe which she brought from Scotland.

Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade has that piquant tang that the connoisseur always seeks in marmalade.

Sunkist Orange Jelly.

Sunkist Orange Jelly is distinguished from ordinary jelly by a very delicate tang combined with the full flavor of fresh-picked oranges.

It is a stiff, clear jelly of beautiful, natural color. It contains oranges, lemons, water and pure sugar. Nothing else is added.

This jelly is also characterized by the real "home taste." You will want to Millicent Grahame clung to what the local paper, in an endeavour to be complimentary and allude to Travers as "battle-scarred," called her "battle-scared warrior." "You know, Billy, I would never say such dreadful things to you; and if dear papa's life was a little purple, is there a man, living or dead, whose past has been without any-any colouring?"

"There you've got me, Milly. I don't know all the people who've ever lived and died; and I'm very glad I don't. I find it difficult enough to get on with the living. Here am I, as soon as my wound's healed, going back to the front to be potted at by those beastly gas-mongers, and you make 'inspersions' on my char-acter. I didn't think it of you, Milly. Indeed I didn't."

Milly clung to Billy again, and her fair hair mingled with his black stubble. "You know, dearest, I didn't mean anything of the sort. How'd you like to be married, and then, just as you were thinking your trousseau was so much nicer than any of the other war brides', have your father's ghost appear to you and— and say things?"

It was a dark, cold, wet night, and Billy still limping from the effect of his wound, was glad to lean upon Milly's arm, perhaps a little more heavily than the occasion really required. The Haunted Oak was about a mile from the house, on a slight acclivity with a dense mass of bushes hehind it, through which it was imossible to see even in the daytime Billy carried a shaded lantern. plause Which comes to brilliant men, And found your dreams, how good it To get back home again!

When he shall tire of pomp. When he shall long to quit the throng And go where children romp; It matters not how high he climbs Nor wither he may roam, He'll count life best when he can rest With those who wait at home.

Let youth exultant seek its goals And strong men face the fray, Let those who will by brawn or skill Seek glory through the day; But all who fail and all who win Shall reach that moment when They'll turn form fame and want

The peace of home again.

There is no lasting joy in pomp, Its burdens wear men down And many a king has longed to fling Away his jeweled crown And once you've walked with famous folk And had your fill of praise,

You'd give your fame once more Your peaceful yesterdays.

For Men and Boys, go to Headquarters!

We stock the most complete range, and you cannot better our prices.

The cooler weather will soon be here but it is better to prepare now, and not wait until you have caught cold.

From a recent Magazine we have copied the following. We only need to add, Papers to suit all requirements can be had at our Store.

1. Thou shalt heed the call of Plain quiet wall papers and white woodwork wherever such is possible. 2. Thou shalt lighten dark rooms by the use of light-hued, palow-tinted wall paper, that suggests the

3. Thou shalt see that thy walls and thine own personality are not to forward, but modestly retiring. 4. Thou shalt use no large-patterned wall papers against which to hang thy pictures. The one will kill the other.

5. Thou shalt have no centerpiece or cornerpieces upon thy ceiling, but only a very nearly plain expanse

6. Thou shalt have thy fill of bright tints, and delicate designs for bedrooms and boudoirs, but for drawing-rooms, dining-rooms, libraries and halls, thou shalt be compelled to use less frivolous papers.

7. Thou shalt, when the ceiling is not too high, run the paper of the side wall up to the ceiling, putting the border just below the angle.

8. Thou shalt not panel the walls of a small room, except it be above a mantelpiece, a sideboard or a bookcase, where a bit of tapestry, a mirror or a picture may be held in place by strips of moulding. 9. Thou shalt use attention-compelling cut out borders, or conventionally designed strips for divisions between walls and ceiling. 10. Thou shalt remember at all times that thy wall paper is but a background against which to show thy pictures, thy furniture, and thy friends.
