A Tip to Hubby—

Bet you never thought of it, but isn't it just a wee bit selfish to sit there in your big chair, your feet upon the fender, pipe-dreaming, while that little housekeeper of yours works over a sink full of messy pots and pans or finishing up the day's odds and ends? Have a heart, help her keep those rosy cheeks of hers. Be a real sport, step into Stewart's Fancy Bakery and ask for a loaf of Stewart's Homemade Bread, it's the best. Also Xmas Cakes, Mince Pies, Ladies' Fingers, Pastry Shells, Oyster Pattle Shells, etc. Take it home and tell her to quit baking. If it's anything fancy in the baking line, Stewart's have it.

CHAPTER XLIII.

"Something caught fire and exploded. Some preparation of Mr. Dean's, I believe," ironically, "that it was the compound which he was inventing for the extinction of fire."

Gaunt smiled.

"And they're all safe? The servants and all?"

"Yes, quite safe. You are the only one who has suffered."

"That's all right," said Gaunt, with quiet satisfaction. "I fell from the ladder, I suppose? I remember now, I'm rather thirsty."

The nurse gave him some water.

"Thanks. The house—the Woodhiges—must be rebuilt. It should like to be rebuilt as soon as possible, and as much like the old one—"

"Plenty of time for that, my lord," said the doctor. "We must not let you worry yourself about that of anything else at present. Are you in any pain?"

"Nothing to speak of," said Gaunt, though the aching of the burned muscles made him catch his breath even as he spoke. "I suppose I shall pull through?" he asked, quietly.

The doctor smiled, but it was an uncertain and painfully professional smile.

"I hope so, my lord," he said. Gaunt looked at him calmly but searchingly.

"There's a doubt, eh?" he said.

"Well, I am sure you will do your best, doctor." He was silent for a minute or so; then he said, with an affection: "I've been unconscious, haven't I?"

"This is the first time you have been conscious," said the doctor.

"Yes? I—I fancied—you know how one fancies things when one is off one's head—that there was some one else here beside you two. Thank you, nurse; that's more comfortable!"

The nurse had raised the pillows slightly. The nurse and the doctor exchanged glances, and it was she who answered:

"It wasn't fancy only, my lord. Miss Deane has been to see you; in fact—"

She hesitated, but Gaunt's eyes were fixed on her, and she went on. "Well, she did say that we were not to tell you, my lord—but Miss Deane has been here all the time helping to nurse you."

A slight flush rose to the white face.

"I thought so," he said, quietly.

"Any one else been here?"

"Mr. Bright and Mr. Robert. Miss Deane's brother," said the nurse. "He came down from Sandhurst. He's down-stairs now."

"Is he?" said Gaunt. "I should like to see him."

"Not just at present. Later in the day; after you have had some sleep," said the doctor, decisively.

Gaunt nodded and closed his eyes.

"Very well," he said; "I'm under orders and must obey."

He slept, or seemed to sleep, for about an hour, then opened his eyes.

"Ask Mr. Robert to come up," he said to the nurse; and Bobby entered the room.

"Ah, Bobby, how are you?" said Gaunt. "Sorry I can't shake hands. How is your sister?"

"Bobby bent over the white, wasted face with its scorched hair and too brilliant eyes.

"Decima's all right," he said. "She's—she's down-stairs."

There was a suspicious moisture in Bobby's bright eyes.

"I—she—I—want to thank you, Lord Gaunt!" he stammered; but Gaunt cut him short.

"That's all right, Bobby. All's well that ends well. She's safe—and not hurt, they tell me. And that's the principle thing. We'll build up the house again. A spasm of agony silenced him for a moment, but he still smiled.

"And—and—we must persuade your father to drop the fire-extinguishing business. And how do you like Sandhurst? Tell me all about it."

But Bobby could not talk of himself or Sandhurst.

"You saved her life," he said, brokenly.

"Why not?" asked Gaunt, with a quiet smile. "Wouldn't you have done the same? Very well, then. How well you are looking! Nice place, Sandhurst! We shall see you a general, commanding one of her majesty's regiments presently, Bobby." His voice broke, for another spasm of pain had caught hold of him. "I—I want to send a message to your sister. Tell her—Are you listening? I want you to remember the exact words, please. Tell her that I'm not in the least pain. Don't forget."

Bobby nodded and went away. He could not have spoken to save his life.

The doctor came up to the bedside and Gaunt smiled up at him. "Am I going to die doctor?" he asked, coolly.

"There's a funny feeling about my heart."

The doctor grew grave and bent his ear to Gaunt's breast.

"It's the shock," he said, under his breath. "You were very badly burned, Lord Gaunt."

"I know," said Gaunt. "I asked you because, if you think there is a chance of my joining the majority, I—I—well, I should like to see Miss Deane."

The doctor was silent for a moment, then he said:

"I will tell her, my lord."

"Thanks," said Gaunt, cheerfully.

He lay quite still after the doctor had left the room, and the nurse, watching him, thought he had gone to sleep; but when the door opened, Gaunt opened his eyes and a faint flush rose to his white face, for Decima had entered with the doctor. As she came to the side of the bed, Gaunt said:

"Will you two clear out for a few minutes?"

They went out, and Decima was alone with him.

She knelt beside the bed and looked at him. The light was waning, and he could not see the expression on her face, in her eyes; but her sweet presence thrilled through him.

"I wanted to see you, to thank you—"

"—I said in a low voice.

"She raised her eyes.

"To—to thank me—me!" she whispered.

"Yes," he said in a thin voice, which for all its feebleness had nothing morbid in it. "They have told me that you have helped to nurse me. That is so, isn't it? It was like you, Decima. You see, I call you—Decima. You—you will not be offended, angry?"

She looked at him in speechless sorrow and anguish.

"I—I wanted to see you, to bid you—well, to wish you 'good-bye.' I'm afraid our friend, the doctor, doesn't think any great things of me."

She hid her face in the coverlet for a moment, but raised it again and looked at him.

"And I wanted to ask you—to bear—Decima, do you think you can—that you can forgive me?"

"She fought for calmness, prayed for it. She had been warned that she must not excite him.

"Forgive! You ask me that! You who—who have saved my life, who may be dying!"

Better a Peasant Than a Peer.

CHAPTER I.

"Oh! not now," responds the boy, pitching the book on a distant sofa. "It's too dark—at least—it's dark here; it's light enough outside," and he swings toward the window. "No snow, Jeanne; the ice will bear tomorrow. I wonder where my skates are?"

"Well," replies the girl, serenely, "we used one for a scare-crow, you know, and the other aunt took to prop up the milk pails."

"Oh, I say, you know! It's too bad!" ejaculated Hal, lugubriously. "A fellow doesn't know where to put his things for safety in this house. Well, if Aunt Dostrill hadn't taken 'em, Uncle John would have wanted them to tie up for one of his chemical experiments, I suppose. But it's too bad! and just as the Lambtons are talking about this skating party!"

"Never mind, Hal," says Jeanne, clasping her hands behind her head—golden, seen in the firelight—and leaning against Hal's legs, "I'll coax aunt to buy you another pair; the old ones were nearly worn out. But who told you about the Lambtons' party, Hal?"

"Oh, Maad Lambton herself," replies the boy, beginning to wig his legs again, and thereby rocking the girl to and fro like a ship in a storm. "I met her yesterday morning on the street—you know her way—with her sugar-candy smile on! Tell your sister that Georgina and I are going to call on Mrs. Dostrill, and we shall like to have the pleasure of your sister's company at the park when the skating comes on—"

"Oh!" says Jeanne, putting her head on one side with a little toss, "very kind, very patronizing. What else, Hal?"

"Oh, a lot more," replies Hal; "but I didn't listen—something, though, now I remember, about some swell who was coming down to stay with them. An honorable—somebody."

Jeanne laughs softly, showing her white, even teeth.

"That's why she is coming, Hal! To wave the honorable before our faces, like a flag. I wonder what he does down there? He took Lambton's word-knowledge pills, and, being cured by them, visits the maker out of gratitude. You might ask them, Hal!"

The boy leans back and laughs.

"Catch me!" he says; "though, mind, it would serve them right. What's the use of being ashamed of the way one makes money? Pills made old Lambton's fortune, and yet you can't say that you've got a bilious headache before the girls but they turn as red as beet-root, and look as if they were going to die. But they're awfully rich, Jeanne!" he adds, gravely.

"Yes," says Jeanne, stretching out one shapely foot, and eyeing it contemptuously, "awfully rich. And, after all, it doesn't seem to matter how you get the money, Hal, so that you get it. Pills or pump-handles, it doesn't matter. I wish we were rich, Hal!"

"So do I," says the boy, but with a yawn, as one who has not yet realized the value of money. "Money doesn't seem to run in our family, Jeanne."

"N-o," says Jeanne, thoughtfully. Then, suddenly and softly:

"Do you remember papa, Hal?"

The boy shakes his head.

"How should I? He died before I was five year old. Do you, Jeanne?"

Jeanne shakes her head.

"No. He must have been very poor, Hal?"

"Yes," assents the boy. "And so is Uncle John. I wish some of our people had gone in for pills and ointment, Jeanne, then we might have a big house, all plaster outside and fresh paint in, and a carriage, and a four-headed hunkey. And you could have talked through your nose, and carried your eyebrows in your hair like Maad and Georgina."

Jeanne laughed; all her gravity disappeared by this sarcastic picture, and springing up, thereby nearly upsetting the boy, ran to the window.

"It's snowing just now, Hal," she said. "You can't see the flowerbeds! How jolly it looks! I wish I were out in it—anything rather than shut up strumming on the piano. You must have been used to prop up the beer barrels—oh, Hal, here are the Lambtons!"

"Eh? what!" exclaimed the boy, slipping off the table, and preparing to beat a precipitate retreat; for Hal has all a boy's instinctive hatred of "visitors."

"Stop, Hal!—wait, there's a dear boy!" pleads Jeanne. "Where's aunt?"

"Fetch her!" echoes Hal, with a short laugh. "Likely matter! She and Jane are up to their necks in the kitchen making sausages. Fetch her! No, Jeanne, you'll have to bear the torture alone; aunt wouldn't leave the sausage-machine for fifty pill-makers' daughters! Good-by!"

"Stop!" cries Jeanne, in dismay.

But Hal is deaf to all prayers, and Jeanne hears a distant door slam after him, as Jane's thin voice announces: "The Miss Lambtons!"

KAISER BRONCHITIS IN EXILE

Thousands Liberated

What! have you not heard the joyful tidings? Bronchitis has been exterminated—right out of society—and 100,000 Canadians liberated from the bondage of this disease. Every trace of bronchial trouble is blown to atoms by the world's most effective disease-destroyer, Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture. No wonder people are rejoicing! No longer do they dread the effects of coughs, colds, asthma, etc., and so anxious are they that others should benefit also, hundreds of letters have been written proclaiming the merits of this wonderful miraculous remedy. Here is one letter—To Whom it may Concern:—This is to certify that I had been suffering for over three weeks with bronchitis and was advised to try Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture. I purchased a bottle and after the third dose I received relief, and before the bottle was finished, I was perfectly well. In making the above statement I have no hesitation in saying it is the best remedy I ever came in contact with for heavy colds and bronchitis. (Signed) Mrs. M. Harding, 100, Dufferin Street, Toronto. The original of this testimonial may be seen at W. E. Buckley, Limited, 100, Mutual St., Toronto. This mixture cures thousands of Canadian households, will give you sure relief. It cannot fail. Seventy-five cents is the price that stands between you and the road to health. Take no substitutes—insist on the bottle with the "Satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded."

All Will Have a Say in Future Naval Policy--Two Thousand People Perish in Earthquake--Tragedy Enters Toronto Home--Flames Take Toll in Halifax and Toronto.

NO RENEWAL ANGLO-JAPANESE ALLIANCE.

LONDON, Dec. 24. A CHRISTMAS TRAGEDY.

TORONTO, Dec. 26. Black tragedy drove the Christmas spirit out of the home of George Adams in this city Saturday night. Instead of peace and good-will and merry making that should have brightened Adams' household, murder threw its terrible shadow over the home and the day of all days to the children closed with two little tots of girls left fatherless and their mother dragged off to the police station on a charge of murder. Mrs. Adams claims her husband was drunk and that she shot him dead in self-defense.

CONSTANTINE INTERVIEWED.

ATHENS, Dec. 24. King Constantine, dressed in uniform of General of Greek army, called in correspondents of United States newspapers to-day and gave them his first interview since he returned from Switzerland to Athens. Constantine said that as far as he understood the situation the Greek Government would follow a conciliatory attitude toward the Allies and that he did not expect any change in the cabinet at the present time. He smilingly shrugged his shoulders regarding the uncertainty as to whether the British and French Ministers would remain in Athens. "They don't know what they are going to do," he said. "Yesterday they expected to go, to-day they are uncertain, maybe to-morrow they again will change their minds."

PARIS, Dec. 24. The French Foreign Office expressed the belief to-day that a revision of the Turkish peace treaty would be almost inevitable if Constantine retains the throne of Greece. The officials of the Foreign Office also are of opinion that the recent speech of David Lloyd George, British Premier, concerning the possibility of changing the treaty of Sevres does not close the door to such action, but merely delays it.

McInnis Takes Tanlac And Regains Health--Picks Up 13 Lbs.

"I have not only gotten my health back by taking Tanlac but have also picked up twelve pounds in weight besides," said Ronnie McInnis, of 164 Argyle St., Halifax. Mr. McInnis is a veteran of the recent world war, having served overseas for over two years with the 2nd Pioneers and 5th Engineers Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

"While over in France my stomach became so badly disordered it gave me no end of trouble, but I encouraged myself with the thought that when I returned to Canada to the foods and climate I was always accustomed to, my troubles would leave me. However I got worse and was going down hill at a rapid rate. I had no appetite, ate no breakfast at all, and very little at any other meal. Even the little I did manage to eat caused me to suffer with indigestion, and blood until I had terrible smothering sensations. When I would lie down it was particularly hard to breathe, and I didn't know what it was to get a good night's rest. I was so nervous the least excitement upset me, and left me very weak for several hours afterward. "I heard so many people talking about Tanlac and the good it had done them I made up my mind to try it, and it has only taken four bottles of the medicine to fix me up in fine shape. I have such a big appetite now I just want to be eating all the time, and my stomach doesn't give me a bit of trouble. I'm not nervous at all, and sleep like a log every night. As I said, I've put on twelve pounds in weight, and am still gaining right along. I just feel strong and healthy all the time, and can't say enough for Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martha F. Byrne, in Upper Guillies by Herbert Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Salvage Notes.

The Christmas season is almost upon us--will be past I suppose ere this reaches the press--and with it comes the rush of festivities, which are always given in and around Christmas week.

So far the prediction of a mild winter looks likely of fulfilment, but January and its attendants have still to be heard from.

The children of St. Stephen's School held a concert here last week. Quite a creditable performance was run off under the direction of the teachers. A selection of rifle drill, hoop drill, and flag drill was given, and several dialogues and recitations with the inevitable remarks of the chairman, and report of the Principal. A handsome sum was realized.

The C.F.W.A. held their annual ... of work on the 22nd. The work was done tastefully and ... and ... tables replete with ... of ... man. The weather was ... which made the ... a little less than usual. The ... however, were well patronized ... the proceeds realized were up to ... average.

Messrs. Hickman & Co. have defied the King of the Regulations, and sold his fish. The Gazette Extraordinary is again to the fore, but what use that is when the "pig is out" is hard to be seen. Of course it still keeps Mr. Coaker's reputation up to the scratch, and among his blind followers tends to keep up faith in the law-making powers of their chief.

Most of the men who were working in Grand Falls, from here, are back home for the Christmas season. Among the comers are Messrs. John F. Lane, Thos. Hibbs, Joseph Hunter, Henry Jas. Oldford, Jr. Several men are returning to Grand Falls for the winter work, as soon as the New Year opens.

The L.O.A. are holding their annual parade on Tuesday, "The Holy Innocents' Day." The Rector, Rev. E. H. Humphries will be the preacher on the occasion.

The S.U.F. are holding their annual parade at Salvage Bay, on Monday; several people from Salvage contemplate going up.

May we embrace this opportunity of wishing one and all a Happy Xmas and a most successful New Year.

The War Memorial.

Those who have perused the communication from Rev. Fr. Nangle, which appears elsewhere in to-day's edition, will have no reason to feel proud of the Patriotic Association, which has, after a year of dilly-dallying finally thrown over the suggested plan for a War Memorial, and have let this all-important matter slide into the background. We have no intention of going into details in connection with the various meetings of the Patriotic Association to consider the matter of a War Memorial, nor with the report of the Committee appointed to attend to it. We are not even concerned as to what form the memorial will take, provided that in it is incorporated something symbolical of our regiment. What, however, does concern us, and what concerns every other person in the island, especially the relatives of those who gave their lives for us, is to see the self-sacrifice of the flower of the youth of Newfoundland commemorated in a fitting manner. Whilst probably all that Father Nangle suggests may not be entirely practical under existing conditions, at the same time something must be done. If the Government cannot see its way clear to act upon his suggestion then let it conceive a plan of its own for a memorial. Let it be an educational institution, a monument or anything else so long as it will fittingly commemorate the fallen, but let us have a memorial quickly.

To Quiz the Sphinx?

We hear that the Hon. W. F. Coaker is soon going to Egypt although why we have not as yet been able to discover. We have not heard of Mr. Coaker being an ardent Egyptologist and cannot imagine him examining mummies unless he wants to see if the Egyptian variety is anything like those which help make up the advisory board. The latest rumour is that it is his intention to attempt to answer the riddle of the sphinx.

Obituary.

RT. REV. MONSIGNOR REARDON. Rt. Rev. Monsignor Reardon, P.P. Placentia, was called to rest, suddenly, on Friday last, death occurring in the Presbytery. Beloved by his parishioners, his passing on the eve of the festival of Christmas changed joy into sorrow, for one who had guided the spiritual welfare of the people for almost quarter of a century had left them to mourn. In their adversity and prosperity he watched with them as a father. Ever careful for his flock he advised and offered comfort, always the holy priest, and sincere friend. During the world war the deceased priest was a patriot of the truest type. In all the movements to advance the cause of Empire he took a very prominent part in word and deed, and the town of Placentia offered its best manhood to enlist in the ranks of army and navy. After the armistice the late Monsignor began work of the erection of a monument to Placentia's dead, and on June 23rd last, saw its completion, when, following Solemn High Mass, it was unveiled by His Grace Archbishop Roche.

Monsignor Reardon was born in St. John's 73 years ago, and after spending several years at St. Bonaventure's College went to Ireland, taking passage by sailing vessel, leaving here in 1866. He took up studies for the priesthood in All Hallows' College Dublin, and was made deacon in 1872. Returning here the same year, Sept. 15th, he was ordained Priest by the late Rt. Rev. Bishop Power, and was attached to the Cathedral for a few months. In 1878 he was sent to Harbor Breton, a parish also held by the late Most Rev. Archbishop Howley and the late Very Rev. Father Clarke, P.P., Torbay. After laboring there for several years he was transferred to St. Mary's, and Sept. 18th, 1897, the date of his silver jubilee as a priest, was appointed to Placentia by Bishop Howley, where he carried out the last years of his sacerdotal life. Under Archbishop Howley Monsignor Reardon was raised to the office of Domestic Prelate. He was the oldest priest in the Archdiocese, and the oldest in the Dominion except Rt. Rev. Monsignor Donnelly, who celebrated his golden jubilee a few weeks ago. During his Priesthood, Monsignor Reardon was most active in advancing education in the different parishes over which he presided. In Placentia the Convent School under his guidance sent forth many of the best teachers in the Dominion, and not a few of the Priests now ordained for the Archdiocese were directly under his care. His death severs the last link of the Missionary Priests, ordained by the late Bishop Power, all of whom now rest in Belvedere.

A Treat for Poor Children. The Sunday School and Christian Endeavour Workers of St. Andrew's Church gave a treat to the poor children of the city on Thursday afternoon. Shortly after 4 o'clock some 300 children assembled in the schoolroom and were given the time of their lives. A large Christmas tree hung with presents was one of the sights which delighted the little ones. A lantern exhibition was given and much enjoyed. At the close of the affair each child was handed a present and a bag of fruit, cake and candy. On Tuesday evening the children of the congregation were given a Xmas Tree treat by the Sunday School teachers and others.

Radiator Burst.

This morning a radiator in the Board of Works building burst and flooded the place with water. The accident happened in the Food Control office but fortunately no one was present at the time. The heat had been off from the building during Xmas and the pipes froze in consequence. Had the accident happened when any of the officials were present it would likely affect the sugar situation. The charwoman who was called to wipe up the water remarked that the accident was an act of Providence, but what she meant is not quite clear.

The "Fleur de Lis."

We thank the editor of the "Fleur de Lis" for a copy of the Xmas number of his excellent little paper. This number is contained in a cover of very Christmaslike appearance. Amongst the contents are a message to the Scouts of Newfoundland from H. E. the Governor, and two serials by Herbert Bradley. On the whole the edition of the "Fleur de Lis" is a very readable one and we can commend it to every boy, Scout or otherwise.

The Nativity Angel.

A Fable for Christmas. (A. J. O'R.) In two lonely islet spots Stood two little baby cots, And lovingly through the wreath of mist A stately angel stood; Fairest of all angels, He, The angel of Nativity— He had both the cots in sight, Watching, guarding, day and night. Sturdy babe was John, I trow, Eyes of blue and hair of tow— Flats drawn tight, as if in sleep He counted his feet withstood. Patsy, in the other cot, Watched the sunbeams gleam and glance. Watched the wreathed sea mists dance Like his brother, eyes of blue, Through which fun and mirth peeped through. Long the cots stood side by side, And the babies, slumbering, waking, Grew in lusty baby pride, Till John, moving in his slumber, Flung his arm o'er Patsy's cot, Little thinking that its weight Was not any easy freight— Calculating not to smother Life within his brother's.

From the other cot arose Wild, convulsive baby cries; Little fists thrust at the weight That impeded baby breath, John pressed brother harder, thinking thus— Half awake—to stop the fuss— Never realized the crying Meant his little brother dying. Convulsed limbs, that in commotion Strive to grasp the breath of life, Dimpling toes that in fierce motion Kick as if in deadly strife; Till the fury of commotion Sets John's cot in dangerous motion— Swings so furiously and fast, Nearly wakes John up at last. Then that stately angel bending Lifts John's arm, from Patsy's cot, Tucks it snugly, firmly in, Speaks, Oh, gently, yet speaks child— "Little boy must learn to lie Quiet in his little bed, Must not with his strong arm Life from out his little brother." Then lifts Patsy quickly up, Marks the blood of suffocation From the baby's cheek recede, And like the coming night, Good red blood of life succeed. "Little boys," the angel said, Each has his own little bed, Each is free to sleep or play, Or coo, or crow in its own way; Must be friendly, must be kind, And these little cots confined. And if in the coming night Furious hawk or dangerous kite, Or the taloned eagle dread Clamor make around your bed, Join together, heart and hand, Mutual trust and love the band— Lo, the Star of Peace—The Dawn! Little Pat and Little John."

Xmas Festival at Bar Haven.

Special to Evening Telegram. BAR HAVEN, To-day. At St. Francis Xavier's Church, Solemn High Mass was celebrated at midnight on Christmas Eve, by Rev. Fr. Cacciola. At 9 o'clock on Xmas morning, a grand musical programme under the direction of Mr. Bernard Murphy, was rendered during High Mass. This mass was for the children of the parish and was attended by a large congregation. Again at 11 a.m. there was High Mass at which pleasing Xmas Carols were sung. Rev. Fr. Cacciola being the celebrant and the Sanctuary boys of Bar Haven assistants. Musical Vespers in the evening brought a memorable Xmas celebration to a close.

Carol Service at St. Thomas's.

The Carol Service held at St. Thomas's on Christmas Eve provided a real musical treat for all who attended it. The full choir was present and the excellent quality of their singing reflects great credit on their organist and choirmaster, Mr. H. W. Stirling. The carols rendered were all new ones, recently received from England, and were as follows: "Noel," "Carol," "Anthem," "On a Christmas Morn," "Sleep, Holy Babe," "Christus Natus Hodie," "When Jesus Came to Bethlehem," "A Virgin Unspotted," "Breathe, Breathe O'er a World of Woe," "See Amid the Winter's Snow," "On the Birthday of Our King," "O Holy Star, O Lovely Star," "The Babe in Bethlehem's Manger Laid." The Carol "See Amid the Winter's Snow" was beautifully rendered by Miss E. Stirling and Mr. T. J. Seymour. Last night the carols were repeated and were much again appreciated. At this service, besides the solos of Mr. Seymour and Miss Stirling, Miss Olive Major also sang an anthem solo.

End of the Dresden.

The German cruiser Dresden was the only ship of Vice-Admiral von Spee's squadron that escaped from the battle fought on Dec. 8, 1914, off the Falkland island in the South Atlantic. The Dresden, which had sailed back into the Pacific was discovered off the island of Juan Fernandez on March 14, 1915, by the cruisers Kent and Glasgow and the armed liner Orama, and after a brief engagement, was blown up by her own crew to prevent capture. She had, of course, no chance against her opponents. It transpired that the Dresden was in Chilean waters when the attack was made upon her, that is she was within three miles of the island which belongs to Chile. The British Government made full apology to Chile when the circumstances were brought to their attention, pointing out at the same time that the Dresden had not been interned, that it was taken possession of by Chile, as it was her duty as a neutral to do. If the enemy ship sought refuge; and further, that the Dresden's flag was flying and her guns trained for action when sighted.

Tomb of Pontius Pilate.

Pontius Pilate, it was declared, returning from Galilee, fled to Mount Pilatus, near Luzerne, in Switzerland, in the bitterness of remorse and drowned himself in a tiny lake on the summit. All the storms and calamities on Lake Luzerne were ascribed to the workings of his restless spirit, wrought to wrath by the disturbance of his watery domain. Severe punishment awaited those who dared approach his supposed tomb. This tomb was fearfully and wonderfully described, but in reality it is only a pond, melted snow, collected in a hollow, which frequently dries up in summer.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

BROKE THE SEALS. ATHENS, Dec. 26. Seals were broken on the apartments of the late King Alexander today.

HAD SOFT NOSED BULLETS. DUBLIN, Dec. 26. Two men, who fired on Crown forces today at Tralee, were shot dead by the military, when they tried to escape.

NOT SO BAD AS REPORTED. LONDON, Dec. 26. The British steamer Chicago City, which was reported in distress off the Newfoundland Banks, with a bad list, has been sighted, and is proceeding to Malmö, Sweden, according to a wireless message received at the Admiralty from the Queen Elizabeth, which had gone to the assistance of the former vessel.

FIVE PLAGUES. ROME, Dec. 26. "The world is afflicted to-day by five great plagues," said Pope Benedict, replying to the greetings of the Sacred College, presented by Cardinal Vanutelli, as Doyen, at a reception to the Pontiff. The Pope enumerated as the negation of authority, hatred among brothers, thirst for pleasure, dislike for work and forgetfulness of the supernatural objects of life.

TAKING THE DRINKS. THE HAGUE, Dec. 26. "Dry" forces have succeeded in getting through the Dutch Parliament, after a hard fight, a law increasing the internal revenue on spirits fifteen per cent, and on beer one hundred per cent, after January 1.

LAWLESSNESS. CORK, Dec. 26. Thirty armed and masked raiders invaded the offices of the Cork Examiner on Xmas Eve, broke the machinery with hammers, wrecked parts of the building with explosives, and set fire to the property. They escaped before the arrival of the police. The fire was extinguished but other damage was very extensive. The raiders, who were civilian clothed, said they were acting under orders of the Irish Republic.

QUALITY OF LOYALTY. TRIESTE, Dec. 26. General Cavaglia, on Friday, ordered the occupation of advanced positions around Fiume, in consequence of recent incidents, and the threatening attitude taken by D'Annunzio's legionaries. In the operations the poet's soldiers offered armed resistance to the advancing troops, who lost five men killed and thirty wounded. Many of the legionaries in command of D'Annunzio are said to realize now the impossibility of being loyal to both their commanders and their native country. It is reported that fifteen Bersaglieri left Fiume immediately before General Cavaglia's blockade was instituted, going to Italy. The poet's torpedoes at Fiume are kept moving constantly, and the idea of mining the Delta at the port of Barro is again being considered. The more elaborate of the legionaries are accumulating stores of arms and machines behind the frontier lines. Ardeleglia and San Marco, under blockade by the Italian fleet, are already beginning to feel the scarcity of food.

OSALIND HAS WINTER PASSAGE. HALIFAX, Dec. 27. The Red Cross steamer Rosalind arrived here yesterday from St. John's, Nfld., heavily coated with ice. After a typical winter passage, sixteen passengers landed here and 25 en route to New York. They had Christmas dinner aboard.

OFFICIAL THANKS. BERLIN, Dec. 27. President Ebert has issued a proclamation of the appreciation of the sympathy of foreigners for needy Germans, and specially thanked Quakers and other organizations, which have been feeding children and hungry students.

WON FREE FOR ALL RACE. LONG BEACH, Calif., Dec. 27. Flying at 148.8 miles per hour, Capt. E. E. Bratten, United States Army aviator, on Saturday, won the hundred mile free-for-all race for the Albert H. Hayes challenge trophy, the opening event of the National Winter Air Tournament.

NEWFOUNDLANDER DIED AT HALIFAX. HALIFAX, Dec. 27. Israel Hatcher, sixty-three, of St. John's, Nfld., died at Victoria General Hospital on Xmas Eve of pneumonia. He came here two weeks ago, as a member of the crew of schooner

Allan Rose. During his long seafaring life Hatcher crossed the Atlantic scores of times on fore-and-afters. He was for thirty-seven years in the employ of John Penney and Sons, Ramona.

TO PROHIBIT JAP IMMIGRATION. NEW YORK, Dec. 27. The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune claims that preliminary discussions are taking place relative to Canada, United States Australia and New Zealand, forming an alliance to prohibit Japanese immigration.

Fakir. The common and perhaps "slang" use of the word fakir is to denote an impostor, a tumbler, a cunning and unscrupulous pretender. It is an adapted use of a word that is the general name for a member of an order of mendicants in the East, particularly in India. The word is also used for Moslem priests and dervishes in Persia and Turkey. Originally the fakirs were not only "pious" men, but sometimes pretended workers of miracles and healers of diseases. Under a garb of humility and poverty they collected alms, which often amounted to great wealth. They live either separately as hermits or solitary beggars, or united in large gangs, carrying arms and banners, beating drums and sounding horns as they approached a village. The origin of fakirism is lost in mythical darkness, but the word fakir is said to be derived from the Arabic word fakhar, meaning poor.

Odd Insurance Policies. The announcement was made in the papers the other day that a York-shireman had taken out an insurance policy against the laying violent hands on his mother-in-law! It appears that the old lady was so frightened of personal injury at the hands of her son-in-law that she made a will leaving him a substantial legacy if only he would keep his hands off her. Being equally afraid of his ability to hold his temper in check over what might prove a considerable number of years, he went to a firm of underwriters and fixed up an insurance policy covering this queer risk. St. Paul's Cathedral is cracking up a bit, but to the average intelligence it is at least as "safe as houses. A city man whose place of business is in the shadow of the cathedral is not so sure about that. He had a vivid dream in which he saw the vast building crumble up and demolish all the adjoining property in its fall. So disturbed was his mind as a result that he at once went to an underwriter and took out a policy which will cover his loss if the mighty edifice collapses!

A Woman Who Goes to Congress. One of the new members of the United States House of Representatives is Miss Alice Robertson, who was recently elected in one of the Congressional Districts of Oklahoma. When the bill to give the franchise to women was before the Legislature of her State, Miss Robertson strongly opposed it. The bill was adopted. Then said Miss Robertson, "The men have thrust the vote on us and now I am going to see whether they mean it." She offered herself a candidate for Congress. Her time was already well occupied between her farm and her cafeteria in her home city, Muskogee. And she had no organization for furthering her political interest. She hit upon an original plan for getting votes. Among the small want advertisements in a newspaper published in her city, she had inserted her own writings—little paragraphs which set forth her views on many public questions. They soon attracted attention, and were read day after day. They evidently made converts and won supporters. When the election was over and the ballots counted, Miss Robertson headed the poll.

The Apocrypha. Certain books of the Bible commonly styled apocryphal or anciently known as deuterocanonical have never been considered as authoritative as others, and are not found in many copies of our English version. They are found in Bibles published by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and form part of the Scriptures received by the Universal Church. Your other questions would lead to controversy and therefore cannot be answered in our columns.

Davy Jones. Among sailors Davy Jones is a common name for Death, but in earlier times it was a name for the evil spirit, who was supposed to preside over the demons of the sea. Davy Jones was thought to be in all storms, and was held to be seen at times, a being of gigantic height, showing three rows of teeth in his enormous mouth, frigid eyes, and nostrils which emitted blue flames. The ocean is still termed by sailors "Davy Jones's Locker."

Address & Presentation

TO BUSINESS MANAGER OF THE "ADVOCATE."

The atmosphere of good cheer and good will inseparable to the Christmas season pervaded the various departments of The Advocate office on Friday last, Christmas Eve. The forty employees of the establishment—ladies and gentlemen—had determined on signalling the Christmas season of 1920 in giving tangible evidence of the esteem and regard they feel for a gentleman who often has evidenced his kindness, courtesy and practical sympathy in any of the difficulties or troubles inseparable to a busy place or extended valuable advice and kindly assistance when personal trouble or affliction occurred. We refer to Mr. Richard Hibbs, the Business Manager, of the Union Publishing Company and popular member for Foggo. Utterly unconscious of what was coming, Mr. Hibbs was taken completely by surprise when at 12 noon he was asked up to the Job Department where all had assembled and where a very pleasant event to the whole staff took place. The Editor, Hon. Alex. News, presided and explained the object they had in view—a presentation to their popular Business Manager—which would at once be a reminder of the glad Christmas festival and an earnest of the esteem and regard in which he is held by the staff.

Mr. Alan Sutton, Foreman of the Job Department, referred to the high place Mr. Hibbs occupied in the estimation of all the employees of his particular branch of the business and expressed the good will of all towards one who has done so much not alone for the advancement of the paper materially but also for the improvement in every way possible of the workers attached to it. Mr. Sutton then read the following address from the employees of 'the Union Publishing Co.:

ADDRESS. Presented to Mr. R. Hibbs, Business Manager, by the Employees of the Union Publishing Company, Ltd., Christmas, 1920.

CHRISTMAS EVE. Dear Mr. Hibbs,—To-day the entire staff is combined in wishing you the compliments of the Season.

It is impossible to express in words the full measure of our appreciation of your efforts on our behalf in all matters concerning us in the past, and as our earnest hope that your kind consideration of the human element in the everyday business life may bring you blessings without end. It is the wish of every individual member of the staff that you may continue to retain the position of Manager until the very last moment when it begins to interfere with your participation in greater things.

We also wish to convey to Mrs. Hibbs and every member of your family our warmest greetings and best wishes for a happy season and a prosperous future.

We ask you to accept the accompanying group of articles as a token of our esteem.

EMPLOYEES OF THE UNION PUBLISHING CO. Mr. Pottle, Foreman of the Compositors Department, in sincere language paid a meed of well deserved praise to Mr. Hibbs on behalf of the composing room, after which Mr. John Long, the Foreman of the Press Department, dwelt in eloquent strain on the spirit of esprit de corps and camaraderie always evident in the Advocate office, extolling the kindly influence of Mr. Hibbs in propagating good will and harmony among the workers throughout the plant.

Mr. Long in a very comprehensive and interesting manner reviewed the history of The Advocate and the very rapid advancement of the Union Publishing Co. under its present able and efficient management.

Mr. Hibbs, in replying, said he appreciated very much this spontaneous evidence of the esteem and good will of the editor and staff towards himself. The surprise he received was indeed an agreeable one and he would be an ingrate indeed did there not well up from his heart a reciprocation of the kindly sentiments expressed towards him in the beautiful address he had received. He always had the predominant feeling that by helping in every legitimate manner the employees of the concern, he was serving the best interests of the paper as well as the job department and indeed he witnessed the fruition of his humble efforts in the loyalty, zeal, and increased efficiency of the whole staff. To say that he was pleased with the beautiful address and the no less beautiful and valuable presents was but to express in a very feeble manner the sentiments he felt. He thanked all—editor, foremen and staff—for the kind sentiments so beautifully expressed that all entertained for him and promised to treasure the handsome presents received, not as much for their undoubted intrinsic worth, but as the expression of the good will and kindness which he was fully assured all entertained for him.

The presents consisted of a beautiful silver ten pot, silver-mounted biscuit barrel and corkscrew. When the office had cleared and Mr. Hibbs reached his home another agreeable surprise awaited him in the shape of the address appended below from the members of the staff of the Business Office, accompanied by a massive, artificially wrought gold tie pin with the emblems of the Masonic Order emblazoned thereon.

On arrival at the office this morning Mr. Hibbs sincerely thanked the gentlemen and lady donors of this handsome present, who like the rest of the staff entertain the highest regard for him. After the ceremony at the office Friday all present enjoyed a nice little informal reunion. The following is the address of the Office Staff:

Dear Mr. Hibbs,—We, the employees of The Union Publishing Company, Limited, Office, beg to offer you the compliments of this Christmas Season, and express the hope that each succeeding year may see you further advanced towards your ambitions in matters of business, of State, and of Home life.

In addition, we ask you to accept the accompanying gift, which we hope you will regard as a token of our goodwill, and with it, we extend to you our best wishes for a Happy Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

Yours very sincerely, FLORENCE MAUNDER, FRED BUTLER, P. PETTEN, SADIE CUMMINGS. Xmas, 1920.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

"I SHALL NEVER FORGIVE MYSELF."

Some friends and peace of one's mind as late of mine took a trip which the wife had planned and the husband, after some objection, conceded to. It was a place she had long been anxious to visit, and as he was only indifferent and not actually opposed to the trip she felt it was not unreasonable to urge her project.

Some time after their return, her husband was stricken with typhoid fever and the doctors immediately declared that he must have contracted it on the trip.

Naturally, his wife is anxious, but unfortunately she is much more than that—it is her fault, she says, that he is sick because she urged him to take the trip.

"If anything should happen to him," she told one of her friends recently, "I would never forgive myself."

What a terrible state of mind to be in! And how absolutely foolish!

The Act Was Not Wrong in Itself.

In the first place, she did nothing wrong in urging him to take the trip. She has often gone where he wished to go and there was no reason he should not take his turn. And just because misfortune comes from an act which is, in itself, not blame-worthy, I do not think one should blame oneself.

But setting all that aside, suppose she had been blameworthy in urging the trip upon him, would there be any sense in her "I shall never forgive myself" attitude? Would it help her any to persist in holding this grudge against herself the rest of her life?

Do we not owe forgiveness to ourselves just as surely as to others? If anyone made a mistake which caused you trouble, presumably you would try to forgive him.

Remorse is a Deadly Poison.

Pent up bitterness and resentment always clog and poison the mind, and this is just as true when the bitterness and resentment is against one's own self.

Remorse is just as destructive to the

It is just as essential that we learn to forgive ourselves, when ourselves have been our enemies as it is that we learn to forgive other enemies. And this is true of small things as well as large.

Another friend of mine was coming to visit me one day and got started without something he wanted to bring with him. I don't know how many times he blamed himself for his forgetfulness. "Oh, forget it," urged his wife finally, "You are letting it spoil your whole day."

"But I can't forget it," he said. "When I do anything so absolutely unintelligent as that, it just makes me sick."

Be Lenient With Yourself.

Of course one cannot help being annoyed with oneself temporarily just as one is annoyed with others. But to prolong the annoyance, in either case, is surely more unintelligent than any act that caused it.

If you are a victim of any form of the "I shall never forgive myself" habit, you will surely do well to make up your mind to break it. Be lenient and forgiving with yourself as well as with others, and yourself will surely appreciate it and give you better service in return.

Names and Phrases.

To be in jeopardy is to be in danger or in a critical position. Tyrwhitt says it comes from the French "jeu parti," a game in which the chances are exactly balanced, hence a critical state.

Bacon is the outside portion of the back and sides of pork and may be considered generally as the part which would receive a blow. To save one's bacon, therefore is to escape castigation as to taste one's bacon is to strike a person. The Normans called the Saxons hogs, and Shakespeare's Falstaff says to the travellers at Gadhill, "On, bacons, on." (Henry IV, part I, ii. 2).

Another sense in which the term is used is to escape loss. In this sense the allusion is to the care taken by our forefathers to save from the numerous dogs which frequented their houses the bacon which was laid up for winter, and the loss of which would prove a very serious calamity.

When Bad Boy Did Service.

The misbehavior of a small boy gave to the world the lamp chimney of to-day. The first lamp having an air chamber was invented by a Swiss, Jules Argand. A wick was introduced into a hollow tube and the tube inset into the lamp. As this allowed oxygen to enter the base a much brighter flame was given than by any lamp then in use.

Jules had a small brother and as small boys of to-day Jules was instructed to watch him and especially to look out for fire and little fingers. Jules remembered his instructions but a few minutes and then became so busy that his little brother quite passed from his mind. He was bending over a bench straining his eyes to see some minor defects in his work, when suddenly the room became much brighter.

Jules turned and discovered the boy with a bottomless oil flask, which he had lowered over the wick of the lamp. The flame had leaped up the long circular neck of the flask with greatly increased brilliancy.

Argand soon saw the possibilities before him and the modern lamp chimney was born.

Novel Lifeboat.

An unusual lifeboat is in use on the Dutch coast. It operates by sucking water up from the ocean and blowing it back again and so obtaining a speed of nine miles an hour. The boat has a hole in the bottom through which the water is drawn by an intake pipe which leads to a powerful centrifugal pump operated by a 140-horsepower steam engine. The water is then forced backwards into the sea through two outlet pipes opening at the bottom of the craft. The boat is controlled by shutting off, either wholly or in part, one of the other of these outlet pipes. If one is shut off it goes to starboard; if the other it goes to port. If both were shut off and the water diverted harmlessly over the sides while the suction goes on at the intake it is claimed the boat rests almost still in the stormiest of seas, the suction holding it firmly on the water. The Dutch lifesavers have found that this craft keeps steadier than any boat propelled with oars or by screws. It is fifty-eight feet long, and has a capacity for from forty to 100 passengers, depending upon the state of the sea. It has been in use for some time and has saved many lives.

King George's Pet Nurse

Not long since there passed away the last of the original servant staff who were at Marlborough House to greet Queen Alexandra on her arrival in London as a bride. This was Mrs. Rosalie Dodds, who was in her Majesty's service for over fifty years. When Queen Alexandra first came to London, Mrs. Dodds was a girl of nineteen, and was assistant nurse. It was the duty of the head nurse to give King George his morning and evening bath, but the baby much preferred the assistant nurse, and always wanted to be bathed by her. One morning the corridors where the nurses were situated resounded with the loudest cries. King Edward who was on his way downstairs to breakfast—Queen Alexandra was in bed with a cold—hearing the cries, went to the nurseries. On opening the door he saw his younger son in the arms of the head nurse, holding out his hands towards the assistant nurse uttering the most piercing cries. His Majesty—then, of course, Prince of Wales—with one glance took in the situation. "Let Rosalie give the prince his bath," he said, and from that day until he was old enough to bath himself the present King was given his bath by the assistant nurse.

Princess Who Drank DeW.

Many a little princess had unhappy hours in her royal courts and palaces, but none had a harder time than the girl who became Queen Christian of Sweden. Her father died when she was six years old, killed in battle, and her mother, a half-crazed neurotic woman, developed a dislike for her child, and seemed actually to desire to ruin her in any way she could. To this end she attempted to make the child drink beer and wine. The little girl disliked both drinks, and said so, and as force could not be used on her the mother gave instructions not to allow her any water. The princess was stubborn, and went for hours without a drink, and then, as her mother remained firm, she began to plot a method of getting it. Dew was gathered every morning by gardeners and put in a crock for the queen mother to bathe her face in and the princess, stealing from her bed, secretly drank a part of it. This continued for several days and then she was caught. She was disrobed and whipped with birch switches from shoulder to heel. But she won her point, and was given the water she craved.

In Honor of Magellan

When the Portuguese navigator, Fernao de Magalhaes, better known in his Anglicized name, Ferdinand Magellan, found his way, 400 years ago, into the Great South Sea through the straits that now bear his name, he was nearing the accomplishment of that which had been the dream of many a predecessor of his. Others before him had assuredly filled with an overmastering desire to achieve the circumnavigation of the world. Christopher Columbus himself had sought a direct passage from Europe to East Asia through uncharted seas. But it was not until the 21st of November, 1520, that Magellan and his little fleet of vessels completed the passage of straits now known as the Straits of Magellan, and came into the terrifyingly vast immensity of the Pacific which the far-seeing eyes of the explorer Balboa had glimpsed 17 years previous. And then began an epoch-making voyage of ninety days through the depths of the Pacific, the first voyage in which human beings, so far as the records go, crossed the Pacific in ships. To Magellan belongs the undying glory of this achievement, even though he was destined to return alive to his native Portugal. Having lost their leader in the Philippines through the treachery of the native islanders, only men, under del Cano, in one vessel returned to Spain in 1522 of those set out with Magellan on his memorable voyage.

South America and the Philippines are planning to commemorate, by appropriate ceremonies, the four hundredth anniversary of Magellan's imperishable exploit. History, it is hoped, has dealt somewhat unjustly with Magellan; and has placed a little loth to award him his place in the pantheon of great explorers. The commemoration of four hundredth anniversary of a circumnavigation of the world is indeed a fitting time for the presentation to do justice to the man which Magellan achieved. It was epoch-making, with consequences that effected a revolution in contemporary cosmogony. Magellan showed Europe a vast and unexplored realm beyond the limits reached by previous discoverers; he unlocked the gates to the greatest of oceans and revealed to an amazed Europe that it was possible to navigate a vessel from European shores around the world, and back again. All honor and glory to the name and deed of Ferdinand Magellan.

Nearly 400 years after Magellan's voyage across the Pacific, the United States unlocked the magic door which he discovered. The opening of the Panama Canal was the logical consequence of Magellan's discovery. Only a narrow isthmus of Panama has prevented the successors of Magellan from duplicating by the shortest route his epoch-making voyage. It was possible, of course for him to follow the course of the first expedition to circumnavigate the globe, and enter the Pacific Ocean through the Straits of Magellan. But the greater part of the Pacific trade was carried for generations overland through Mexico or Central America. Only isolated vessels, several hundreds of years, undertook the laborious voyage down to the southernmost end of South America. Now all is changed. The Panama Canal has made possible a direct sea route from Western Europe, to Eastern Asia. The feat of Magellan becomes, therefore, a thing in which Americans are interested in more than a sentimental way. For twentieth century America sees in the endeavor of Magellan a revelation of the restless spirit and indomitable energy which have characterized from its earliest beginnings the development of the American people. The nation, which conceives the idea of the Panama Canal, and carries to completion that idea, is akin to Ferdinand Magellan, and shares the day in his spirit.—Boston Transcript

A Long Step Forward

Every sportsman knows what it means to have his day's hunting spoiled on account of his cartridges becoming damp and unfit for use.

For many years cartridge manufacturers have experimented to perfect a method of making their shotgun cartridges impervious to dampness under all conditions.

Remington experts have at last developed a process known as "WETPROOF"—which has been patented and is controlled by this company.

Our factory loaded shotgun cartridges subjected to the "WETPROOF" treatment—as are all the Remington UMC brands—will withstand without damage to their shooting qualities such conditions as rain, dampness, or actual immersion for a considerable period of time, which are ruinous to ordinary cartridges, and which are often encountered in the field.

The Local Market.

(Friday's Trade Review.)

Codfish—The export of dried salt codfish to foreign markets from Newfoundland for the week just closed, amounted to 35,872 quintals, of which 12,755 quintals were shipped from St. John's, Newfoundland, and 16,296 quintals from the Outports. The St. John's Export was as follows:—2,559 quintals by the schooner "Annie" to Bahia from Messrs. A. H. Murray & Co., 6,571 quintals by the schooner "Jean Donald Duff" to Bahia from Messrs. Baine Johnston & Co., 3,394 quintals by the schooner "Imprints" to Bahia from Messrs. A. E. Hickman, & Co., Ltd., 3,040 quintals by the schooner "Douglas Parks" to Pernambuco from G. M. Barr, 2,324 quintals by the schooner "Gilbert B. Walters" to Barbados from Messrs. Baine Johnston & Co., Newfoundland Produce Co., Ryan Bros., and James Baird, Ltd.

Outports—From the Outports the shipments were 3,950 quintals by the schooner "Port Union" to Oporto from the Union Trading Co., Port Union, 3,394 quintals by the schooner "Imprints" to Malaga from Messrs. W. J. Moore, Carbonar, 3,313 quintals by the schooner "Nevia" to Malaga from W. J. Greenland, Bay Roberts, 516 quintals by the schooner "Pax" to Oporto from J. Sellars, Burin, and 483 quintals by the schooner "Vernon" to Halifax from Jerry Pettie, St. George's.

Cod Oil and Cod Liver Oil—The shipment of Cod Oil this week, all to New York, amounted to 2,094 gallons. The market for both kinds of oil continues very dull condition and the demand is rarely so slack at this season of the year. There is absolutely nothing doing in the local market and the oil of both kinds is nearly all out of the hands. Holders of stocks bought most of their oil at much higher prices than those now prevailing and will hold for an improved market, which is expected early in the New Year.

Pork—Quotations received during the week show little change in Pork prices. Such small fluctuations as are noted show a lower tendency. The slight declines however, are offset by the sharp advances in premium on American funds which touched 93% Tuesday. Local prices are as follows:—Ham Butt $52.00 to $54.00, according to quality; Mess $39.00, Family $43.00, and Fat Back $45.00.

Beef—A strong undertone still prevails in the Beef market with Boneless scarce locally and in the New York market. Some packers there are "sold up to the end of January." Local demand from now till May next will be slow as most of the outport needs have been supplied. Prices are: Libby's Special Family $39.50, Boneless $34.50, and Choice Plate $34.50.

Molasses—Trade is now very dull in molasses as the outport requirements have been nearly all supplied for the winter. Prices have been further reduced by importers this week to meet the changed situation. Choice molasses is now quoted at $1.30 per gallon wholesale, and Fancy $1.25 per gallon. The reports of the new crop received so far, indicate a shortage, but in any case, prices will have to be influenced by the lower sugar rates.

Flour—The Wheat markets advanced last week and the cost of future shipments is nearly in line with prices ruling on the spot. The position of Wheat is showing stronger tendency and importers are advised that advances are probable, and it looks as if flour has reached its lowest point for the season. Leading brands are $14.50 per barrel and other grades $14.25.

Potatoes—The price of potatoes is influenced this year more than ever by the bountiful local crop now stored in the cellars of our farmers and fishermen. The price seems to be fixed at $4.00 and as this is about the average price of cattle feed, it is not likely to go any lower this winter. Cattle owners would prefer to mix potatoes with their cattle feed and use all their surplus stock in this way, than sell less than $4.00 P.E.I. and other foreign grown potatoes are quoted about $1.00 higher.

Oats—It is likely to advance early in the New Year. Local price still holds $66.00 per ton, but when the holders of the early shipments exhaust their stocks prices with those then advance on a parity with those of the Canadian markets and recent shipments which are costing $1.00 per ton more than Hay that was brought in by the St. Lawrence route in November. Ample stocks are held by local dealers.

Oats—By the last "Roseland" 1,700 sacks of oats were brought in. The supply in this market is now ample for winter requirements and the price of the different qualities has about reached the bottom limit for this season in St. John's. Within the coming two weeks, therefore, will be probably the best time to buy in the local market. Mixed oats $4.75, White $4.90 and Black P.E.I. $5.20 per sack.

NEW HALL TO BE ERECTED.

At yesterday's meeting of the Star of the Sea Society, held in the T.A. Armoury, it was decided that a new building to replace that destroyed by fire on Thursday last, should be erected on the old site. President Martin was in the chair and over 300 members were present. A building committee was appointed, of which Mr. W. F. Treleagan is chairman and Mr. T. Kelly, Secretary. This committee will immediately make arrangements for having plans drawn up for the new hall, and it is hoped that the building will be completed by next September. Owing to the destruction of the hall the Golden Jubilee celebration has been postponed until the opening of the new hall, which will make the event a still greater attraction in the Society's history. It was decided, however, to hold a church parade on January 6th, attending 11 o'clock mass in the R. C. Cathedral, and it is expected the parade will be the largest in the Society's history. Rev. Dr. Green, Spiritual Director, was present at yesterday's meeting, and in extending the season's greetings, regretted the loss sustained by the Society, but expressed the hope that in the very near future a building that in every way would be worthy of the Association, would be erected. A letter of sympathy on the Society's loss was also read from His Grace Archbishop Roche, who assured the Society of every assistance in their future plans. Letters of regret were also received from the sister Societies at Placentia, Holyrood and Bell Island, and from the copy B.I.S., T.A. & B. and K.O.C. The B.I.S. and T.A. & B. Societies have very kindly offered the use of their rooms until the new building has been erected, and the members very highly appreciated their action in this matter. At present the Association will hold its meetings in the T.A. Armoury, and temporary club rooms have been arranged for the use of the members. A collection in aid of the family of the late William Harvey, reserve fireman, who lost his life in the burning of the hall, was taken up and the sum of $150.00 was subscribed.

Gospel Mission Hall.

DEDICATORY SERVICE.

The Gospel Mission, which is conducted under the auspices of the Methodist Conference, moved into its new quarters yesterday at Adelaide Street. The new building though plain in appearance, is very comfortably planned, and well laid out, and is capable of seating some three hundred people, and the committee in charge are deserving of congratulations upon their good work. The dedicatory service was opened at 3 p.m. by Rev. Mark Fenwick, President of the Conference and despite the storm, a full congregation greeted the President. The president was assisted by several of the city ministers, and a very helpful beginning was made towards the work of the Mission, and there was a spirit of freedom which seemed to make everybody present feel at home, and to say "we will come again." But there was more than a mere spirit of freedom—there was a deep spiritual fervor which seemed to say, "it is good to be here." Two addresses were given; one by the Rev. Dr. Bond, and one by the Rev. Dr. Curtis, and each speaker emphasized the importance of city mission work, wherever carried on, and they extended to the Mission their best wishes for its success. Both the speakers had had much experience in city pastoral work, and they know whereof they speak, and what room there was for the services of the Gospel Mission. It is the intention of the committee to have the hall open on Sunday afternoons, and also Tuesday and Thursday. To strangers and visitors the committee extend a hearty welcome and they especially invite the men who frequent our waterfront. The central situation of the hall is very favourable to this phase of city mission work. The hall is comfortably heated, and well lighted, and books are provided. We wish the good work all the success it deserves, and we feel certain that our many readers will join us in the wish.

Robbers at Work.

At about 3 o'clock on Saturday morning, while night watchman S. Day at Reids was doing his rounds, he heard a noise in the store of W. H. Jackman, the tailor. Investigating he found that a window in the rear of the store had been broken. Mr. Day immediately notified the police, who after arrival saw that the place had been burglarized. Mr. Jackman was called and a cursory glance showed him that the thief or thieves had gotten away with a considerable quantity of goods, amongst which were raglans, overcoats, underwear and several articles of jewellery. The police on making further investigation, found that the West End Bazaar, owned by Mr. Stewart, had also been entered and a quantity of goods taken.

Largely Attended Funeral.

The funeral of Reserve Fireman William Harvey, who lost his life at the burning of the Star of the Sea Hall took place Saturday, and was one of the most largely attended ever seen in the city. Inspector General Hutchings, a number of regular firemen, and a body guard of reserve firemen were amongst the mourners. Prayers for the dead were recited at the Cathedral and interment took place at Mount Carmel cemetery.

The Use of the Bow.

The student of the violin nearly always has one fault. There is a certain angle at which the bow should cross the strings in order to produce those vibrations which give the roundest, fullest, most perfect tone, and the violin must be held so that the bow moves straight across the strings. A deviation from the correct attack produces a scratchy tone. And it is in just this one fundamental thing, the holding of the violin in exactly the same position when it is taken up by the player, never varying it by so much as half an inch, and the correct attack of the bow, in which the majority of pupils are deficient. If the violin is not held at the proper angle, for instance, it is just as though a piano were to stand on a sloping floor. Too many students play "with the violin on the bow, instead of holding the violin steady, and letting the bow play.

And in beginning to study, this apparently simple, yet fundamentally

Important principle is often overlooked or neglected. Joachim, when he studied as a ten-year-old boy under Hellmesberger in Vienna, once played a part in a concerto by Maures for four violins and piano. His teacher was displeased. "You'll never be a Sédler," he told him, "you use your bow too stiffly." But the boy's father took him to Bohm, and he remained with the teacher for three years, until his fundamental fault was completely overcame.

If Joachim had not given his concentrated attention to his bowing, while there was still time, he would never have been the great artist he later became.

Ghosts Haunt Palaces.

Many ghostly manifestations are reported as taking place in Britain's Royal residences. Catherine Howard often haunts a certain corridor at Hampton Court. She was one of the wives of Henry VIII whom he imprisoned. She managed to escape and reaching the King's presence sank on her knees and pleaded for mercy. It is part of this distressing scene which witnesses claim they have seen. The ghost of Jane Seymour is still reported to ascend at frequent intervals the staircase leading to what is known as the "Silver-Stick Gallery." The figure is dressed in white, and carries a candle. But the most interesting of the Hampton Court ghosts is that of Mistress Sibell Penn, who was nurse to the boy-king, Edward VI. One day, in the early part of last century, queer sounds, reminiscent of those made by a spinning-wheel at work, were heard in one of the rooms of the Palace. The fact was brought to the notice of the authorities, and investigations were begun, as a result of which a new apartment was discovered. This apartment contained a spinning-wheel, and there were signs that it had been in recent use. For fifty years nothing more was heard of the sounds. Then they began again. In addition, the figure of a woman in black was seen to emerge from the newly-discovered room every time a child died in the Palace. Among the many who saw it was Princess Frederica of Hanover, who was watching by the bedside of her dying daughter.

Training Men for Marriage.

Aesthetic unity in the home will be much more common when the colleges and universities of the country have recognized the need of such training for young men as well as young women, is the opinion of Dr. W. B. Bizzel, president of Texas agricultural and mechanical college.

With the development of civilization, the marriage relationship, originally undertaken in a haphazard manner, has become more and more complex. With the result that it is being given more intelligent thought than in more primitive days. But that intelligent thought has been chiefly on the woman's side of the relationship. Dr. Bizzel said. The young man is being left to feel that about all he has to do is love a girl very, very much, and, if he is able to support her properly, to marry her and live happily ever after. And while the young woman was instructed first in domestic science and in later years the aesthetic side of the marriage relationship, the young man has gone on absolutely ignorant of the responsibility he assumes when he attempts to adjust his mind and temperament to another mind and temperament.

Acme Cold Cream and Acme Vanishing Cream are allied remedies for rough, abraded, chapped and irritable skin, and may be used in combination to keep the skin and complexion in perfect condition. Acme Cold Cream is what may be called a night cream, and applied at bedtime, will exert a remarkable influence on the skin, making it smooth and soft; Acme Vanishing Cream, may be used at any time as it disappears immediately. The latter cream is excellent after shaving, as it does not show upon the face. Price (each) 60c. a pot.

Legs and Health.

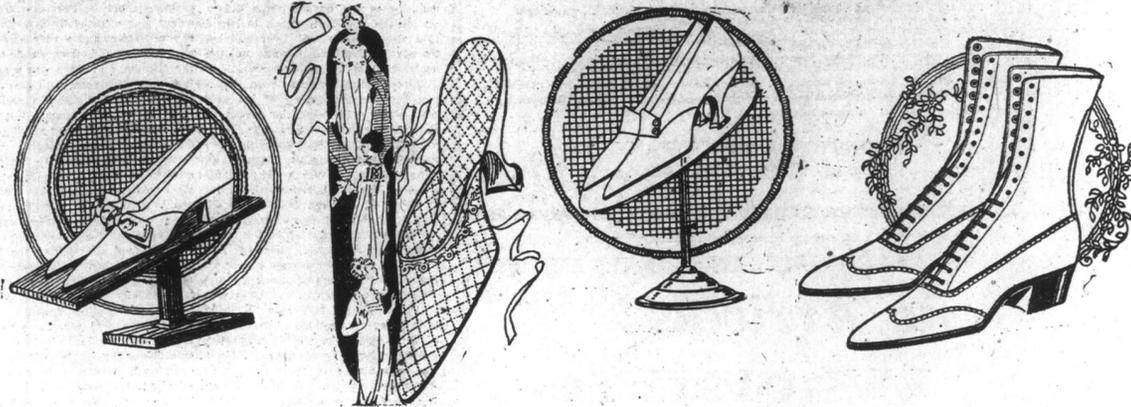

According to experts, the general health as well as one's state of mind are influenced largely by the way we use our legs. Persons with irritable tendencies invariably acquire the habit of crossing the legs. For them to keep the legs parallel is to invite a feeling of uneasiness. Brain-workers, too, find it easy to fall into the habit of crossing the legs. When overwhelmed with work, this is the favorite attitude. Engross them with important problems requiring initiative, and the legs unfold. This is because the best train of thought happens when the legs are thrust straight out. Sitting with the legs crossed is also a frequent cause of obesity. If you wish to remain slim and possess a good figure, don't cross the legs. Instead, copy your cat, and stretch all you can.

Ghost Runs Sewing Machine.

They say that headless horsemen used to ride through England and that hounds even now fly above the rain-drenched mountain tops of Ireland; but it is modernising ghosts to bring a phantom sewing machine into the circle of the supernatural. Scientists, philosophers and spiritualists of Portugal are trying to explain the origin of a strange sound first heard three months ago in a house in Oporto. The sound occurred at midnight and those who heard it, believe that it is caused by the soul of a seamstress, doomed to haunt the world to expiate a sin. The opinion here will rather be that one of the enterprising agents for a sewing machine company is seeking free publicity.

OLD LABRADOR BOUNDARY.
 Great many people fondly suppose that the purpose of the Premier and Minister of Justice in England all through this summer and was for the purpose of "settling" the Labrador boundary question between this country and Canada, and will be surprised to learn that "settling" so far has merely been bringing of the question before Privy Council.

The Labrador Boundary Dispute provided excellent pleasure for many members of the present Government, including notables as J. M. Kent, E. P. Donald Morison, A. B. Morison, R. A. Squires, W. F. Lloyd, W. Warren, while if we mistake not, the aristocratic R. Bond did not touch down on this little question. It is to be hoped for the sake of great legal lights of past, present and to-be Governments that the Labrador Boundary will not be settled too suddenly, else we shall have to regret some new "cessions" whose names may spend much of our many days' sojourn at the Savoy Hotel, London, free of cost (save) at the Colony's expense.

Should the Labrador Boundary be settled to a sudden and unexpected end, we suggest the next question to occupy the Government's attention might be the establishment of sovereignty over the Funks: they belong to Newfoundland or they entitled to self-government? getting the assistance of the Self-Determination League in St. John's as well on this question we think it ought to be good for at least a half dozen trips each to London for the Premier and Minister of Justice.

Mr. Squires returned to the Premier of a long-suffering people last "fed up" in more senses than with high living and high thinking on the Colony's behalf. When he regained his breath after the question marks have been shot him perhaps we shall hear what has to say.

EARLY SESSION LIKELY.
 The Herald thinks that as the Canadian Parliament expects to meet on January 20th in order to permit the Canadian Premier to attend the Colonial Conference at London in 1921, that our Parliament will also meet early for a short session in order to allow Premier Squires to attend, and to permit Mr. Coaker to visit Europe as well.

NOW MANY MORE AWARDS?
 One of the most serious questions that faces this country, or will face in a few months is the question of the railroad. By the action of Mr. Coaker's Railway Commission (a commission that was intended to oversee the expenditure of the $100 million loan to Reids) the contract has been apparently annulled and it is openly stated that Reids intend to throw the railway over on the Government's hands at the end of June, and demand compensation improvements and additions made. If we remember rightly under the 1900 contract the Government Sir Robert Bond undertook to pay certain additions which were made with the Government's sanction. These additions may quite easily run into a very large sum of money, and it is openly hinted that bill of enormous proportions faces the unfortunate country.

With the recollection of the Telegraph Award, following the Bond settlement in our minds, it is not altogether surprising eventually.

New Bank Official at St. John's.
 Mr. B. C. Gardner has been appointed Assistant Manager of the St. John's branch of the Bank of Montreal. Mr. Gardner, who was born in England, and was educated in Montreal, comes to St. John's from the office of the Bank of Montreal. He took up his residence in Canada about fourteen years ago, and since that time has held important positions, first with the Bank of British North America, and later with the Bank of Montreal, after the former institution had been taken over by the latter. These positions have included branch Managements at Trail, B.C., and Rossland, B.C., and an assistant inspectorship at Winnipeg. He left the last mentioned position during the war to join the Canadian Expeditionary Force. He served overseas in the 43rd Battalion Cameron Highlanders of Canada, and rose to Lieutenant Major second in command. He was twice severely wounded, and was decorated with the Military Cross. On his return to Canada in April, 1919, he was attached to the head office staff, and he remained at headquarters until his present appointment. While in Montreal he took great interest in golfing, and was a member of the Executive Committee of the Kanawak Golf Club.

Tatoing in South Seas.

Tatoing as it is known in the South Seas is pretty well out of date, says a correspondent. At one time it was a matter of record for the individual's accomplishments and distinguishing marks, a sort of heraldry, but the old artists died out, and the islands began to fill with bunglers and near-artists whose work was a blotch. This was not so much the fault of the artist's lack of ability as his lack of practice. The artist must have a living model on which to practice, and living models were hard to get, and became more and more difficult to bribe into standing still while the would-be artist pricked away. It wasn't the pain of the thing, although that a great deal, but it was the fact that the amateur worker's results were generally funny or cartoon-like, and the model's friends and relatives made all manner of fun of the decorations that would not wash off. It finally came to a point where only the most degraded of the natives would submit to being practiced on and, the supply being gone, the profession began to pass as well. A few of the old artists are left, and their work is beautiful as well as exact, and rich white women are not above having richly colored butterflies tattooed on their legs or breasts, or a flower of delicate outline twined on their arms or back.

$5,000 for a Flea.

Some fleas are worth their weight in gold thousands of times over. The rarest specimens are found on the blue fox, some species of Polar bear, and a certain breed of Eskimo dog. Often scores of animals need to be caught and searched before a rare flea is discovered. Even then the flea hunter's troubles are not ended. A slight mishap, and away goes the "little fellow" for dear life. Seldom, if ever, is he seen again. And so the search begins once more, the phials laid ready, the chloroform handy. There is no limit to the price that a rare flea may command. The public scoffed when M. Perier, of the French Institute, valued a particular sea otter flea at one thousand pounds. What was regarded as farcical turned to fact, however. A British collector came forward, paid over his thousand "Jimmy's" goblins, and tucked away the treasure in his waistcoat pocket. It wouldn't have been a bad bargain at double the price.

WRITES ON WAR MEMORIAL.
 Albert, Somme, France, 7th December, 1920.

Dear Sir.—I am enclosing a letter to the ex-members of the Newfoundland Royal Naval Reserve, the Royal Newfoundland Regiment and the relatives of the Fallen, in the hope that the crazy scheme put forward by the Memorial Committee may be "washed out" and at the same time to arouse the enthusiasm and sympathy of all citizens to action in a matter which has been allowed to die by those entrusted with the sacred task. I can do nothing at this distance except write. But as one who has laid to rest more of our heroes than any other man, I claim to have the interest of those men more at heart than those who take twelve months to come to a rotten decision. Personally it makes no difference to me, neither have I a brief for Gotto, but I want to see those men fitly commemorated, and that cannot be done by a "shabby gesture" attempt at a University.

Thanking you in anticipation for publishing my letter, and asking you to keep awake those entrusted with the duty by publishing from time to time the "PROGRESS" they are making, and by reminding the people of Newfoundland that the debt of the Fallen remains unpaid.

I am,
 Yours sincerely,
 T. NANGLE, C.F.,
 Lieut.-Colonel.

TO THOSE THAT MOURN.
TO THOSE THAT MOURN.
 It is now more than two years since hostilities ceased. Since then nearly every community has in some form or other sent down to posterity in an imperishable form its appreciation of those of its members who made the supreme sacrifice, and in the vast majority of cases this was done through the medium of a monument, for it is hardly a compliment to the glorious Dead to look around one and seek something that is thought to be needed, to endeavour to supply that want, and then call it a memorial to the Fallen. A true memorial should be a SACRIFICE made by the living to the dead; it should have no utilitarian motive in view.

A year ago the Great War Veterans' Association, through its executive, recommended this course to the Patriotic Association, who accepted the proposal. His Excellency the Governor, who was chairman of the meeting, appointed a committee, whose duty it was to make preliminary arrangements for a similar memorial for St. John's as is being erected by the Government on the battlefields. This memorial is distinctive of the region; it stands for everything dear to its members. But apparently the Memorial Committee (few, if any, of whom ever served a day with the colours) do not appreciate what the caribou stands for. The Secretary of that Committee might have been good enough to advise me that the decision arrived at had been altered, for on arrival in England I communicated to Basil Gotto the decision of the Patriotic Association to erect his battlefields memorial in St. John's. Gotto, I know, has refused other work to hold himself in readiness and give all his thought to this work; now a year later I see by the public Press that the committee had turned down the whole plan. To-day we find that a meeting of the Patriotic Association can muster only twenty of its members; that out of even twenty the Memorial Committee cannot get all to agree to the new proposals they have brought forward, and that a further delay is recommended. To my mind, the Memorial Committee is being run by out educationalists (school inspectors who don't inspect) to suit their own ends, and the sooner it is relieved of its duties the better.

It has been the duty of every Government for the past twenty years, it is the duty of the present Government, and will be the duty of future Governments to erect a normal school. Why do not our educationalists (so called by courtesy of government appointment) enforce their views on the Government and not on the Patriotic Association, who are only anxious to honour the dead, and not provide a playground for the C.H.E.?

A Mr. Scott has submitted a sketch for a memorial, which the Memorial Committee has recommended. Of course, it had a school-house as a main objective. Mr. Scott may be a very good architect, but he must naturally lack the first and most important qualification of a memorial artist; knowledge of the man he is to commemorate, and the spirit which made the regiment was it was—second to none. I do not wish to question Mr. Scott's ability to design, but I fall to see how he can estimate the cost in a country in which he has spent only a few days; and when he speaks of planting an avenue of trees on the "Barrens," Triumphant Avenue, etc., I am afraid he has not grasped conditions as they are.

Something must be done and done quickly. The modus operandi to my mind would be for the Governor to appoint a committee whose members would be nominated as follows: Three by the G.W.V.A. from members who had seen real Active Service; three by the Board of Trade from the Business Men of Newfoundland, and one Cabinet member, who would God-father the proposals with the Government. That this committee should be authorized to decide the form of memorial, confer with the Government as regards finance, ascertain the views of the public and make preliminary arrangements, and "get on with it." On Armistice Day in London, in company with S.S.M. Lambert and S. Q.M.S. Murphy, I had the honour of representing the Newfoundland Contingent in paying tribute to the Unknown Warrior. I was so impressed with the ceremony and the effect it made on the supposedly phlegmatic English, that I resolved at once to submit the following idea to Newfoundland. The outline of my scheme is:—

(1) To select an unknown Newfoundland soldier, the area from which the body would be taken to be unknown anyone but myself;
 (2) That the Imperial Government be asked to place a destroyer at our disposal and convey the body direct from France to Newfoundland, and by Freyberg, V.C. Forbes-Robertson, V. C. Commander McDermott and other outstanding officers who had connection with our sailors and soldiers, as pall-bearers;

(3) That an organized reception be prepared for the home-coming, which would take place on Decoration Day;
 (4) That the remains be placed in a mausoleum prepared for it;

(5) That the field burial service be read over the remains by various Padres, as on the battlefields, and that the usual ceremony attending a military funeral be carried out;

(6) That the portion of Bannerman Park bordering on Military Road be reserved for a Memorial Park and that the mausoleum be erected therein; that this should take the form of a vault or chamber of native granite, which would contain a simple sarcophagus in which the remains from France would be placed; that the chamber would be so constructed as to allow the public to pass through on Decoration Day or at any other time at which the next-of-kin may wish to pay tribute to our Gallant Dead, and that their names could be engraved on its walls;

(7) That this vault or erection should be surmounted by a bronze group, consisting of an old fisherman and his wife, representing the parents of the Dead, a young wife with her children clinging to her skirts, comrades of the dead represented by a sailor and a soldier, that the younger and older brothers, sisters and sweethearts of the dead should also be represented; all carrying aloft on a bier the figure of a dead soldier, the whole to be allegorical of sacrifice, either the supreme sacrifice made by the fighting men or the more painful sacrifice made by those who lost their nearest and dearest;

(8) That this memorial should be unveiled by H.M. the King in the same manner as the laying of the cornerstone of the Seamen's Institute.

This, to my mind, would be a memorial not too expensive, but at the same time worthy of our men and their sorrowing relatives. It would be a mausoleum which could be used each Decoration Day to pay tribute to the Dead, and show to posterity that we who survived understood their sacrifice.

Some at least of that Memorial Committee should not have forgotten the parable of the spikenard ointment. Had anyone objected to a Monument, on the grounds that it served no utilitarian need, just as the apostles of old said: "Wherefore this waste?" they could have replied: "You can build a school-house at any time, but it is once in history that we have the opportunity of erecting such a memorial as this. It is nothing but sentiment that called our men to the colours—let not the committee play on that sentiment to serve even the ends of education. Ninety-five per cent. of the next-of-kin will never visit the war cemeteries; let us give those people a shrine in our midst at which they may pay their homage, as also all Newfoundlanders, until the Great Revellie.

I am,
 Yours faithfully,
 T. NANGLE, C.F.,
 Lieut.-Colonel.

Turks' Paintless Houses.

Turkey is a paintless land. Most of the houses are wooden and unpainted. This is not a condition growing out of the war. The short-sighted policy of the Government in imposing taxes on buildings in proportion to the tightness of their exteriors has encouraged shabbiness. Even in Constantinople a large percentage of the residences and of the business houses are of wood. Many of the large apartment-houses and office buildings have brick or stone fronts, but wooden sides and backs. Hence the disastrous fires which have laid more than one-third of the city in ashes since the beginning of the war, and the general terror of the population when a fire alarm sounds.
