The Countess of Landon.

CHAPTER XXI

The maid only permitted herself to express surprise once, and that was at the moment she let Madge's hair fall showering over the white shoulders; then with a kind of gasp, she said:

"Oh, ma'am!"

"What—what is the matter?" asked poor Madge.

The maid colored and bit her lip. She had been guilty of what the countess would have considered a crime, familiarity with her superior.

"I beg your pardon, ma'am; it was your hair."

"My hair," said Madge; "is it anything wrong with it? I—I wish you would tell me. I do not do it up properly, perhaps. Is that what you mean?"

"Oh, no, no, ma'am; though I think, if you will allow me, I could arrange it more suitably; I mean, more fashionably. It wasn't that, but the length and the color. I never—I beg your pardon, ma'am—I never saw anything like it; never, never!"

Madge breathed a sigh of relief. "I thought something was wrong in the way I had done it. Oh, yes, arrange it as you like it. What—what is your name?"

"Marion, ma'am," said the girl.

"It is a pretty name," said poor Madge.

"Thank you, ma'am," said Marion. Swiftly yet smoothly she did up the wonderful hair and put on the new dress. "Have you—in the jewel-case in the box, ma'am?" she asked.

"Jewels!" Madge stared at her. "I have no jewels."

Marion colored and hurried to something else.

"Yes, ma'am, I will get a flower for your hair—a white flower," and she hurried away.

Madge got up from her chair and went to the door of the next room.

"Jack!"

Royce came out. He was fully dressed, and he started at sight of her; a passionate, loving admiration sprung into his eyes.

"Madge! Why—"

She fell on his breast, her heart beating against his.

"Keep near me, Jack," she panted. "Hush!"

Marion had returned with the flower, and she fixed it in Madge's hair. As she did so, she glanced up at Royce, as if challenging him respectfully, and Royce nodded.

"Beautiful!" he breathed.

"Yes, sir," said Marion in a low voice and with heightened color.

A bell—no, a shrill bell, but the deep, resonant tones of an antique gong—rang heavily through the air. Madge started.

"It is the dinner-bell," said Royce; "are you quite ready, Madge?"

The color rose to her face and her lips quivered. Then she drew herself up and seemed to fight against the weakness that threatened to overcome her; seemed to brace herself, as one nerves one's self to meet the foe, and taking his arm, said in a low voice: "I am ready."

And there was need for courage, for poor Madge was going into battle.

CHAPTER XXII

Madge went down the stairs on Royce's arm, her heart beating fast, her face pale. Two footmen stood at the bottom of the stairs like sentinels, and one of them advanced to the drawing-room door and opened it, with head bent respectfully.

They passed in, and for a moment Madge saw nothing; a mist seemed to swim before her eyes, through which the room, in all its luxury and subdued grandeur, came dimly.

Then she saw the countess, a tall, upright figure in gray satin, with jewels sparkling on her bosom and on her fingers. Beside her stood Seymour, in evening-dress, with a barely suppressed sneer of contempt and anticipatory amusement on his thin lips; but as his pale eyes wandered over Madge, a momentary expression of surprise and admiration shone in them.

The countess came forward and held out her hand.

"How do you do?" she said.

"She did not kiss her or say that she was glad to see her, and to Madge the jewelled hand felt like ice.

The countess kissed Royce on the forehead.

"Did you have a pleasant journey? You are looking well."

Royce said "Yes." Seymour held out his hand to Madge and bowed over hers, then extended it to Royce as if they had never had a difference in their life; and Royce shook it and nodded.

"Won't you come near the fire, Madge?" said Seymour, with a slight hesitation before her name, as if he had half-intended to call her Mrs. Landon.

Madge sunk into the seat he drew up for her. She could hear her heart beating, and could scarcely lift her eyes. She had not spoken a word as yet.

The countess sat opposite and looked at her. She saw that she was more beautiful than ever she, the countess, had thought; that she was dressed in good and modest taste; that the evening-dress seemed to have grown upon her; that no one could see her without being struck by the loveliness of her face, the grace of her form; but all the while as she looked at her, she was saying, "a gypsy, a gypsy! a common girl, a vagabond!"

She could find no word to say to her. She could not ask after Madge's mother or father or any of her relations. The mere thought of them sent a shudder through the countess and made her hot. And she was her daughter-in-law, her son's wife!

Royce and Seymour stood talking together, in the forced and unnatural manner in which men talk who, though closely related, dislike and distrust each other; but Royce glanced now and again at the two women, and his heart ached for his beautiful Madge. He knew that she was suffering.

At last the countess spoke.

"I suppose you have been travelling a great deal?" she said.

Madge looked up, and the countess felt a spasm of reluctant admiration shoot through her as the dark, pure eyes, with their sad timidity, met her own proudly cold ones.

"No, madame," said Madge, "we have not travelled much. We have only been in London."

Another silence. The countess noticed the "madame," and the clear, bell-like voice; but neither the title of respect nor the sweetness of the tone in which it was uttered softened her heart.

"Royce has coached her," she thought, bitterly.

"London is very empty just now, I suppose?" she said.

Madge's eyes opened wide.

"Oh, no; it is quite full. The crowd was so great that sometimes Jack and I could scarcely make our way along the streets."

The countess frowned.

"Jack?" she said, haughtily.

Madge's face crimsoned, then resumed its paleness.

"I—I mean Royce," she said.

The countess inclined her head slightly.

"I did not know," she said, icily.

"It is the name he gave me—" She stopped.

"Pray call your husband what you please," said the countess, with a fine blending of courtesy and contempt which passed over Madge like a cold wind.

But her eyes dropped meekly. This was her first lesson, and she would not forget it.

"Did you like London?" asked the countess.

Madge looked up.

"I thought it was wonderful," she said in a low voice. "I had never been there before. But I should not like to live there. It's too big and too noisy. One feels as if one were quite alone there."

The countess looked at her with a faint curiosity.

"You had never been to London?" she said.

"No," said Madge. "Our people—"

She stopped, the blood rushed to her face, the room swam before her.

The countess drew herself up and turned away from her, palpably to the men.

"Is it not dinner-time, Seymour?" she said.

"Yes, madame," he replied, looking at his watch; "but we are waiting for Irene, I imagine."

"She had a headache, and went to lie down," said the countess.

Madge remembered Irene, and started slightly at the sound of her name. She looked round the room.

She had not only never seen such a place, but had never read of one. The vaulted ceiling, picked out with olive and dull gold, the painted walls, the pictures, the marble statues, the great marble and ormolu fire-place, the Venetian mirrors and fish silk hangings filled her with a sense of wonder which oppressed her.

Then she glanced at the countess and sighed. She seemed to Madge to belong to a different species to herself. She had seen ladies as they drove past the string of caravans on the road, and had sometimes spoken to them—asked them to permit her to tell their fortunes—at races meetings, but never until now did she understand the vast difference between them and herself. And she had married the son of one of the proudest and haughtiest of these "gentry."

Her heart sunk. She longed for Royce—no longer Jack, alas!—to come near her and encourage her with a word, or a smile, or a pressure of the hand. A sense of loneliness fell upon her like a chilly cloud. The vaulted ceiling, with its painted flowers and birds, seemed to be crushing down upon her.

And then the door opened, a figure in white stood for a moment in the opening, and glided toward her.

It was Irene, all in white, with a pale mauve orchid in her golden hair.

STEEDMAN'S POWDERS

Cooling and health giving. An ideal aperitif for children from the period of teething to the age of 10 or 12 years.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUEST

ONCE WE HAD A LITTLE CHILD.

Once we had a little child, Life was radiant when she smiled. In that happy long ago to know. Every charm was ours to give. Swiftly by the glad years went. Filled with hope and merriment. Then one night the angels came To her bed and spoke her name. Came and whispered: "Marjorie! God has sent us down for thee."

Oh, the bitter tears which fell! Oh, the hurt we cannot tell. And the lonely days and bleak While we vainly tried to seek Reason for that cruel blow. Oh, we cried: "We'll never know Why this sorrow had to be! God has taken Marjorie. Called away our lovely child, Leaving us unconsoled."

Now we talk of her again, Free from every worldly pain: Now we see her at her play. Age has come to us, but she Is the child she used to be. Neither sin nor hurt nor care. Now can mar her beauty there, Marjorie will always be Innocent and fair to see.

She is safe from every woe. Hurt and pain she'll never know. She was ours, though brief her stay. Time can never take away Change or stain her memory. Lovely that will always be. We shall know her, young and fair. She shall smile, as once she smiled, Always as our lovely child.

The Star Movie Re-Opens Monday

WITH A SENSATIONAL PRODUCTION.

High Class Vaudeville Coming. There is an expression which is now becoming a by-word with movie fans, viz: "What will the Star be coming next?" as it is now conceded the Star leads. Reference to the ad on another page will show this is a fact, as there is coming by the S.S. Rosalind, next week, a Miss Gloria Pleasants, a harpist, direct from Ireland. This is the first of this kind to be seen here, and as Miss Pleasants comes with the highest credentials, this is, no doubt, going to prove a big hit. There is also booked a Miss Marie Fanchionette, and Mr. Jameson Rilly, singers and dancers, and the team that put the capital "J" in Jazz, in New York City last season, whilst playing at the Long Acre Theatre. Further reference will be given in this paper next week. For Easter Monday there is a Cosmopolitan production, that, for elaborate settings and exquisite gowns, the equal of the picture has not yet been made. This production is entitled, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and had the biggest run of any picture yet shown in London. During this week, the interior of the theatre has received a thorough renovating under the capable supervision of Mr. C. Murphy and his large staff of painters. The entire place has been all painted, and patrons will be more than agreeably surprised at its appearance. The management has also booked the biggest of the biggest in the picture business, such productions as "The Merry Go Round," "Rosita," with Mary Pickford, "The Thief of Bagdad," with Douglas Fairbanks, and the big English sensation, "The Game Of Life," so, that without the shadow of a doubt, it is just another example of "Move with the crowd to the Star Movie."

Candid Chats Concerning Crisco

A hint as to Crisco's purity is shown by this simple test: Break open a hot biscuit in which Crisco has been used, and you will note a sweet fragrance which is most inviting. You or any other normally healthy person, whose digestion does not relish greasy foods, can eat rich Crisco pie crusts. The richness is there, but not the unpleasant after-effects noticed from many fats. Crisco digests readily.

Something Far Above the Average Entertainment

IS THE ARCHIE HARROD JUBILEE CONCERT PARTY.

The management of the Nickel Theatre introduces to the music-loving public of St. John's, the Archie Harrod Jubilee Concert Party, which commences an engagement extraordinary on Monday. Mr. Harrod, himself, has for a number of years been on the Chautauqua platforms of the United States and Canada as a tenor and dramatic reader. During this period he has appeared on the same platform with some of the most noted public men in the United States. The writer has seen a number of letters written to him by men whose names are well known in American public life, and they are unanimous in their commendation of Mr. Harrod's ability. Mr. Harrod has had two year's training at the Michigan Conservatory of Music in Detroit; three years with New England Conservatory in Boston. Then he joined the Swan River Male Quartette in Cleveland, Ohio, as tenor, pianist and reader. A Jubilee Concert is a concert which is guaranteed to please every one. The remaining people of his talented company are: Ruth Mayo, Soprano and Pianist; Mathilda Walton, Contralto and Reader; John Woodard, Bass; and Belle Brown, Soprano. These noted singers have recently returned from a successful tour abroad. Their delightful programme consists of Jubilees, Negro Spirituals, Plantation Melodies, Folk Songs, etc. Negro Dialect Reading also form part of their programme. An especially attractive bill has been prepared for the grand Easter opening on Monday. These artists will appear each afternoon at 4 o'clock and each night at 8. The admission for night performance will be 30 cents and the usual admission will prevail for the matinees.

Harry Carey at the Crescent To-Night

DWYER SISTERS, DANCING AND SINGING ACT OPENS MONDAY.

Harry Carey was never seen to better advantage than in "Good Men And True," which is at the Crescent to-night.

The suspense starts when the horse and his rider are pitched over the cliff, one of the big thrills. This is one of the several melodramatic events that halt the political ambitions of the hero who is running for the office of sheriff. His enemy's plots are revealed in exciting sequence. Wallace Beery's vivid performance intensifies the effect of these heavy scenes, particularly those in the deserted shack. The drama culminates in the big scene in the roadhouse where Carey routes a whole army of villains in a spectacular encounter on the stairs.

The Dwyer Sisters, a classy and refined Singing and Dancing Act, will open their season at the Crescent on Monday, appearing each afternoon at 4 and each night at 8. These artists have played a big success in all the large American cities and they come to St. John's very highly recommended by theatrical critics. See their opening bill on Monday.

Pleasing Presentation

PIPE INSTRUCTOR IRVINE BIDS FAREWELL TO COMRADES.

On Thursday night a very pleasing event took place at the Newfound Highlanders Band Room when after the usual parade at the Presbyterian Hall the Officers, W.O. and N.G.O.'s and members of the Band bade farewell to Pipe Instructor David Irvine, who leaves for Canada by the Silvia sailing to-day. The pipe band under the tuition of Mr. Irvine has made splendid progress and the Highlanders and their supporters will have reason to feel proud of their band during the coming season.

Lieut. Col. W. H. Herder made a short address expressing, on behalf of all ranks, regret on having to part with Mr. Irvine and presented him with a handsome traveling case, suitably engraved as a token of regard and appreciation of the services he rendered to the brigade.

Mr. Irvine in accepting the gift assured the Newfound Highlanders that he would at all times have the welfare of the Brigade at heart and that the services he had rendered the Brigade gave him great pleasure. In passing over the management of the band to Piper Major Flett he felt that he was leaving the band in good hands for its future management and success. Refreshments were then served and several selections rendered by the band. A shipment of uniforms recently arrived for the Highlanders and in the course of the next month the Brigade will be commencing its seasons work in earnest and it is hoped that by the 1st of July the Brigade will figure prominently in honouring the famous Scotsman, Earl Halg, who is coming to unveil the National War Memorial.

Life More Abundant.

As the word, "Christ is risen" brought new hope and fresh courage to that small but devoted band of Christians nearly two thousand years ago, so to-day at the Festival of Easter the whole Christian world responds to the same message; despondency and misgiving are dispelled like mists before the rising sun, and the despair of night flies before the joy of the morning.

To us who live in a country in which at this time of the year all Nature begins to reassert itself after the winter's sleep the season of Easter has a special appeal, and even though the north wind seems reluctant to yield to the warm breezes from the south, the earth is already responding to the longer hours of sunlight, the rivers are bursting their icy bonds, and the sap is carrying new life into the leafless branches of the trees. Around the coast increased activity is already noticeable as the fisherman prepares for his season's work, and one and all of us are throwing off our lethargy at the call of spring which is in the air, and are applying ourselves to the task with renewed zest.

We have carried on through a long period of depression and hardship which has reduced many almost to despondency, but all the signs indicate that "the winter of our discontent" has passed and the dawn of a brighter day is lightening up the horizon.

The pulp and paper industries are thriving, others are in process of development and there are good prospects of further activities in this direction. Already the results of the seal-fishery promise to be satisfactory, and what is of the greatest importance to us, there seems to be every hope of a successful codfishery.

May we not hope too that in the public affairs of this country there is awakening a new life: a greater sense of our responsibilities and a stronger desire to introduce into them a cleaner and healthier moral tone?

A Trusted Watchman

Caught red-handed entertaining a number of guests of questionable character on the premises of his employer, a trusted watchman of a large mercantile firm has been given a prompt dismissal after years of service. It appears that the watchman in question became possessed of a quantity of booze, and helping himself to "cats" he lavishly entertained a number of female friends. A number of the employees became involved through partaking of a drink or two of the booze and were only saved from dismissal through having no knowledge of its origin or of the actions of the watchman. On the foreman, who was likewise innocent except for taking a drink of the liquor, the responsibility was placed and he was given a month's notice to quit. It is said that a large quantity of liquor was landed on the premises and the watchman was given a share for looking after it.

SEALING NEWS

RANGER REPORTS FOR FULL LOAD.

The only sealing news of an encouraging nature received over the holiday is a message from the Postal Telegraph operator at Herring Neck to Messrs. Bowring Brothers, this morning, stating that the landmen, in communication with the crew of the Ranger, report that ship with a full load, 10,000 bedlamers, were batted and placed on board within the past few days, which now brings her total catch up to 24,000. The Ranger reports her catch two miles North of Baccalieu and should weather and ice conditions not impede her progress, an early arrival can be looked forward to. There is nothing of importance from the other ships. The Terra Nova has secured an additional 400, while the Thetis managed to pick up 1,000 bedlamers, batted on Wednesday evening, but a number of the names were lost owing to a heavy swell. The outlook in the Gulf is very gloomy one. The Viking has drifted to a position off the East Cape of Prince Edward Island and reports prospects very poor.

The following are the messages:—

BOWRING BROS.

Terra Nova, (Thursday evening)—Gale from northeast, jammed, too thick to sail, far took few bedlamers. Sagona—Fifteen miles northeast Cape Islands, gale from northeast. Fear lost half our pans, heavy swell of yesterday. Have about 1,000 on board.

Viking—60 miles southwest by half west Deadman's Island. Blowing gale N.E. fine and clear, ice rafted. Prospects poor for whitecoats.

Terra Nova, (Friday evening)—Ten miles southeast Off Wadhams. Kill-400 bedlamers to-day. No report from Ranger.

Sagona—Six miles southeast Cape Freels, wind northeast.

Thetis, (Friday evening)—Position 15 miles south Punks, wind N.E. gale, snow storm. Sagona and Terra Nova, (Friday evening)—Picked up yesterday's seals this morning.

(Friday evening)—Position north by west Cabot Islands. Having trying time since yesterday.

BAINE JOHNSTON & CO.

Seal—(Thursday evening)—Gale from N.E. last night and to-day, very heavy swell; ice broken to pieces. Men all night occupied in ice protection. Expect to get clear soon as swell goes back. Position 4 miles South Horse Islands, jammed.

LAFEST.

Ranger—(10 a.m.) via Herring Neck—Batted bedlamers, full load; 2 miles North Baccalieu, N.D.B. to-day. This connection received by way of landsmen. Last spark wireless died last night.

The seven reel super production entitled "The Bride's Play" which, without exception is the best Irish melodrama written and screened. The scenes were laid in Killarney. This picture is indeed a triumph. Mr. Cameron Geddes, the renowned vocalist, is continuing a successful engagement, at the request of hundreds who did not patronize the theatres during the Lenten season. Mr. Geddes will sing three splendid numbers "The Old Plaid Shawl," "The Big Bass Viol," and "The Same Old Dear Old Place".

International Intrigue

Germany outwitted. British loan to the Chinese Navy. British diplomat. The sternness of the Foreign Office. Chinese gratitude. Mr. Paul Marketel, eminent international financier, has agreed to make a large loan to the Chinese Navy. The British Government is behind this. An alternative loan from Germany was contemplated, but through the good offices of Sir Roger de la Haye, son of the eminent British Ambassador to China, and Chai Lung, plenipotentiary to Great Britain from the celestial kingdom, the coup was culminated. However, all is not well, for the terms of the loan have got into the press and Sir Roger is in disgrace and has been asked to resign from the Foreign Office. Who gave the information to the Press and who accepted the blame and everlasting disgrace is well told in the Chinese Puzzle by our local amateur at the Casino next week.

TRINITY

JOSEPH WOODS 1770.

Though several of the countries in England had representatives in Trinity during the 18th century, yet fully 95 per cent. of those from England came to us from Southern countries. This, of course, was largely because of the fact that the great trade routes between England and Newfoundland, began at some point along the coast between Poole and Plymouth. Occasionally, however, a vessel would leave Trinity for Liverpool with a cargo of salted seal skins, oil, etc., and return to Trinity with a general cargo of Colonial requirements from Lester's headquarters at Liverpool. Whilst Trinity, Newfoundland, must have been well known to the people of Liverpool in Lancashire, and to those of Birkenhead in Cheshire (just across the River Mersey from Liverpool); yet, so far as I can find from the old books, only one man came to us and settled down from Lancashire, and only one man from Cheshire. The man who came from Lancashire was Robert Jones, and he who came from Cheshire was Joseph Woods. Joseph Woods came to Trinity in 1770, and Robert Jones came in 1780. I have already given a detailed account of the deeply interesting history of Robert Jones; and I shall now from the meagre information available, follow Joseph Woods through his more prosaic life.

Joseph Woods was born at Birkenhead in the County of Cheshire. Birkenhead is situated on the S.W. side and at the entrance of the river Mersey, and immediately opposite the seaport town of Liverpool in the County of Lancashire. Mr. William Woods had been Light Keeper on Birkenhead for many years, and there, his family of three boys had been born and reared. Joseph was the youngest of the family. To William Woods and his wife and his two elder boys, the passing in and out of the shipping to and from the port of Liverpool were but ordinary events of their everyday life, and seldom, if ever, directed their thoughts from their daily duties at the Light House, and the grounds surrounding it. It was different with Joseph. As we often find in families, he was as different in tastes and interests from the other boys as he could possibly be. The passing of a vessel going in and out of the river was an event of the greatest interest to him, and absorbed his thoughts to the exclusion of all others for the time being.

He knew all the vessels that had visited the port of Liverpool since he was six years of age; and he was thoroughly well versed in the different private house flags, and other marks of ownership. All his spare time, and some that was not spare, found him across the river watching the vessels coming into the wharves, and others leaving for foreign ports. He knew many of the captains and sailors, and nearly every time when he came back to Birkenhead, he brought with him some curios from foreign ports, to add to the already large collection that he had carefully classified in a room that his father had given him for the purpose. He was, for some unknown reason, especially attracted to the Newfoundland vessels and sailors; and with his parents' consent, he often invited the cabin-boy or one of the sailors to return with him to his home, and, when possible, to spend the night there. His parents could not fail to realize the tinge of the boy's thoughts and the bent of his life; nor did they place any obstacle in his way to prevent him from following what was evidently his vocation in life, viz: the sea. They, too, became interested in the country that the Newfoundland boys and sailors used to tell them stories about; and when Joseph, on his 15th birthday came home and asked his parents' consent to go as cabin-boy with Captain Whitewood in the brig Lester, bound to Trinity, Newfoundland, that consent was readily given, and Joseph's delight knew no bounds.

A week later, with everything for the boy's comfort lovingly supplied by father and mother, he bade them farewell, and the next day as the vessel passed out of the river, signals of mutual good wishes were exchanged between him and those at the Light House. The end of a month full of new interests, such as the ocean can supply to one in love with it, found Joseph in Trinity, Newfoundland. One of the seamen with whom Joseph had established a special friendship was William Hussey, whose parents, John and Zipporah Hussey lived at Salmon Cove, near Trinity. Joseph obtained permission from the Captain to go there with his friend when he went to visit his parents in the old home. The Husseys were people in good circumstances, and they made the visit of their son and his friend a most pleasant one. They made Joseph promise that he would come to them again as often as he could whilst the vessel was in port. It was not a difficult thing to exact this promise from Joseph, and during his stay in Trinity, through the great kindness of the Captain, he and his friend made several trips in the ship's jolly-boat to the North Side, and over the hills to Salmon Cove, and back again within the limits of their leave.

During the next year Joseph saw Italy and the Southern parts of England; and during the Autumn the brig Lester passed in by the Light House on Birkenhead, and was safely moored for discharge of cargo at Benjamin Lester's premises in Liverpool. Joseph was glad to visit the old home and to find his father and mother well and glad to see him; whilst they, on their part were more than glad to see their boy so splendidly developed, and still more deeply in love with his work. When the Lester left Liverpool again for Trinity, Joseph went on her as a man before the mast in the second year of his five years' apprenticeship, and becoming more and more manly every day. The next three years were monotonous in one respect; inasmuch as the trade requirements took the vessel in largely the same routes year after year, and brought Joseph back to Liverpool and home once a year. Then came the expiration of his apprenticeship; and when he entered Trinity Harbor at that time, he did so as Joseph Woods, Able Seaman, and Boatswain of the brig Lester, with the privilege of being paid off in Trinity. In the meantime Joseph had been making new plans for the next few years at least. Those plans were not altogether of his own making; for he had talked them over with John Hussey's daughter, Susannah, during his last visit to her home.

He had also taken Captain Whitewood into his confidence during the voyage, and he had told him all about the plans, so that his honorable discharge was easily effected in Trinity. The fact that Captain Whitewood had set his wife in Trinity made him all the more glad to help Joseph do the same at Salmon Cove. After receiving his discharge and pay at the office, he said good-bye to the captain and his shipmates, and then he went to Salmon Cove and to the home of John and Zipporah Hussey, where he was welcomed, and where a new period of his life began. John Hussey was a respectable and a well-to-do planter. He had no son to follow him in life, or to succeed to his property; for his only son, John (Joseph's friend) had been lost at sea; and when Joseph Woods asked him for his permission to marry his daughter, the old man gave it gladly, and with her went the larger share of the money and property that he possessed at the time, and that he would possess at the time of his death. The following entry in the Marriage Register of old St. Paul's gives the sequel to this: "1775. Married—Joseph Woods, of Cheshire Parish, in the Parish of St. Paul, to Susannah, daughter of John and Zipporah Hussey, of Salmon Cove."

Thus began another family of permanent settlers in Trinity Bight; the members of which added to the respectability, and to the individual and corporate life of the place, during their day and generation. Owing, however, to the fact that the only boy born to them died in infancy, the name Woods died out with them in Salmon Cove.

LOVE—THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD.

"Love is the secret sympathy. The silver link, the silken tie, Which heart to heart, and mind to mind, In body and in soul can bind." (SCOTT.)

All down through the early ages, the highest point of human love was frequently expressed by the words: "the love of women." Then came that mutual love between Jonathan and David, of which we read: "David loved Jonathan as his own soul"; whilst David, in his efforts to do full justice to Jonathan's love for him, referred to it as a love, "passing the love of women." We hesitate to-day to refer to the love of one man for another, as though such love were feminine; and yet, history is full of instances of such love, as evinced by the mind, and the actions of virile men, whose love, for each other was the Jonathan and David type. Every settlement, and village in our country has produced men whose actions towards each other indicated the existence of such a mutual love; though in the large majority of instances it has been known only to the men themselves, or to their immediate friends. In these days, when the war spirit has engendered more hatred, than love of such a nature; and when that love of such a degree, which is a part of God Himself, is so frequently discounted, and referred to as a mark of effeminacy, it becomes the duty of every right thinking person, to make public any evidence of the existence of the same, that he might know of on the part of man. Permit me to practice what I preach, by calling attention to the following evidence of such a love on the part of George Smith and Charles Brown of Trinity, over sixty years ago. Their names were not Smith and Brown, but they will be known as such in this article. They were, however, real men, and known to me personally.

George Smith and Charles Brown were close friends from boyhood. That friendship deepened and increased with years, till by the time they had become young men, their feelings towards each other could be fully expressed only by one word, viz., love. They spent all their spare time together, and they were often referred to as "lovers." In the spring of 1868 Brown told his friend Smith that he had made up his mind to go to the seal-fishery during the coming Spring. Smith felt badly about having to part with his chum for so long a time; and had it been possible he would have gone in the same vessel. On the day when the vessels were ready to sail, Smith and Brown bade each other a tearful good-bye, and Smith went home with a lonesome feeling. Every day he looked seaward where he supposed his chum was, and nearly every night he said in his dreams, "One night there had been a light fall of snow such as made the next morning 'ideal' for partridge hunting, and Smith took his gun and hiked off towards the "Indian Look-out." During the afternoon, from the top of the "Look-out," he saw away on the horizon a vessel, which at that time of year, he knew was a sealer; and thinking it might be the one on which his chum Brown was, all the way home he thought so much about him that he drove all the partridges to wing, before he became conscious of their presence.

That night, in his dreams, he saw a sealing vessel anchored off Trouty. He saw a boat lowered from the davits, and one of the three men who got into the boat was Charles Brown. He saw the men leave the vessel, and row to Green Island Cove, where they pulled up the boat and walked over the South Side hills to John Doherty's on the South Side. He saw them get into a punt at Doherty's and row across to Samuel Pittman's, on Hog's Nose; and then he saw them walk down the road towards their homes. This road took them not far from Smith's house, and just as Smith woke up and looked out of the window—there in his line of vision was Charles Brown passing old John Murphy's house. Just as Smith expected, as soon as Brown had reported himself at home, and had washed, he came up to see him. Smith, of course, told him what he had seen in his dream; and Brown said it was absolutely true in every detail. The vessel could not get into Trinity owing to the ice-pack in the Narrows, so they anchored off Trouty, and he and two other men got permission to come on shore. They came exactly by the route that Smith had seen them come. Surely in this we have the existence of a human radio-telegraph, the motive of which was the electricity of a mutual love on the part of two men—"passing the love of women." Next!

INFORMATION FOR ENQUIRERS RE HANNAH GAYLOR.

Hannah Newell Newhook was born in 1862. She was a daughter of Chas. and Catherine Newhook; and a sister of Mrs. (Capt.) George Field, Bonaventure. She married Thomas Gaylor, Jr., of Bonavista in 1886. She was a widow for several years, and she died at the home of the Newhooks at Long Point (Trinity East) in 1867. Thomas Gaylor, Jr., was a son of old Captain Thomas Gaylor of Bonavista, who was well known in Trinity during the years of his sea-service; and widow Gaylor had many friends in Trinity.

ANCIENT AND MODERN.

"The great eye of heaven shined bright, and made a sunshine in a shady place." I have often wondered why the office-building and stores in connection with so many of our old business premises were so dark, and otherwise so badly arranged for the book-keepers' convenience and comfort. It was so with the office at Garlands, and even more so with that at Glades in Trinity. It is the same to-day as others that I know of in other parts of the country and which have not been changed since they were built a hundred or more years ago. Those who used those dark buildings day after day, and year after year, did not love the darkness "because their deeds were evil." On the contrary, there were times when they must have bled it intensely; though years of use adapted the eye to its unnecessary surroundings; and the officials were more or less conservative in respect of the old-time-plans. I remember some fifty years ago going into the office of Garlands, in Trinity, in the Brookings time, and feeling sorry for those who were working there in the semi-darkness; and the conditions that always exist in a room where the direct rays of the sun never penetrate; and the only view from a north-west window is the barren side of a hill towering above the building. I have no doubt that those who had worked there for years would not have thanked me for either my pity or my sympathy for them; yet it had a real existence, and it was always good to get outside again in God's sunlight, which they might have had so easily and so abundantly inside as outside. I was glad to see Mr. Ryan's carpenter at work a few weeks ago putting a window in the south wall of this office, as I anticipated what a change it would make to the inside of it. I waited till it was finished and then took advantage of the first opporunity to call at the office. The changes that that window has made, and made possible, exceeded my anticipations; and those who like myself, knew it in its former condition should go at once and see it as it is to-day.

I have found another since as follows: "1838—Married James Collis of Millford, Hants, England, and Sarah Hodder. Witnesses: George Skelton, Mary Fleet.

Correction—In the thirteenth line of history of William Ennis in last week's issue, for "one is registered as having come from Cheshire" read Dublin, instead of the word "Cheshire". W.J.L.

Quebec Lady Tells of Dodd's Kidney Pills

After suffering for several years from kidney trouble Dame G. Gamelin finds relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills. Herbertville, Que., April 15 (Special). I have been suffering from kidney trouble and after the first box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I found relief. I continued taking them and am now able to work." Dodd's Kidney Pills have become a family remedy all over the Province because people have tried them and found them good. They are purely and simply a kidney remedy. A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Healthy and healthy made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex into a 1-1/2 oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 10 ounces of family supply of such better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Strange Things Our Eyes Collect

There are few people who have never experienced the pain or discomfort that comes of getting dust particles or other foreign bodies in the eyes. Fever still, it is safe to say, realize the true source of some of these irritating obstructions. Tell the average person that it is possible to collect in the eye the dust of a falling star and you will probably be disbelieved. Yet microscopic examination has shown this to be a fact. When a meteor reaches our atmosphere it discharges heavy vapors, which condense into myriads of minute particles, any one of which may lodge in the eye that is gazing skyward.

Volcanic eruption may cause discomfort in a similar fashion. Lava flowing from an active crater gives off clouds of vapor containing microscopic particles that make their way round the world in the upper air currents, ultimately to fall in showers upon the earth, where wide-open eyes may easily collect them.

Again, the great deserts contribute largely to the number of foreign bodies gathered in their way. Sandstorms do not cease from troubling immediately they subside. Their particles are borne by the winds the world over, many of them finding lodgment in our eyes, as the microscope has repeatedly proved.

Pollen from the big pine forests of Canada may affect us in like manner, while an even more strange, though not less potent, cause of this special form of irritation is the scales of butterflies' wings, shed as a rule during the first flights after emerging from the pupa.

The sources and variety of things gathered in the eyes during a nominal lifetime are, in fact, amazing, and form an astounding commentary on the disintegrating forces unceasingly at work in the universe.

Meat Inspection Urgently Needed

NECESSITY FOR CLEAN MEAT AND THOROUGH EXAMINATION, DOCTOR SAYS.

A suggestion that a meat inspector be appointed for St. Anne de Bellevue, was made by Dr. A. G. Hood, of the Montreal Health Department in an address on "Meat Inspection," delivered before a crowded meeting of women held under the auspices of the Women's Club of St. Anne de Bellevue in the Town Hall. The Mayor, L. J. Boileau, was in the chair, and those present included Georges Charrier, Dr. Kelso, Dr. Guenette, F. J. Harfell and other leading citizens.

Dr. Hood emphasized the necessity of clean meat and thorough inspection in view of the prevalence of tuberculosis in cattle. When this disease was discovered in animals, three inspectors were appointed for the entire city of Montreal, and until a very short time ago meat coming in from distant points was not inspected at all. At the present time it was inspected as soon as it arrived, whether by boat, train or other conveyance and there was also a by-law whereby shippers were not allowed to ship dressed meats of any kind unless it bore the Government stamp.

The speaker described the development of tuberculosis in cattle. It first manifested itself, he said, as a small abscess in the neck, throat, lungs or other part of the animal. This abscess developed quickly. Other diseases found in cattle were pneumonia and inflammation of the heart. In this connection Dr. Hood instanced an animal which, on being killed, was found to have an enlarged heart as big as a milking pail. This had come about as the result of the swallowing an eight-inch nail by the animal. The nail gradually worked its way to the heart.

Dead Donkey in England Becomes Veal in France

In a case at Leicestershire Assizes some surprising admissions were made by a witness under cross-examination.

Counsel asked the witness: You have been convicted a number of times?—Yes.

There was a case when you were fined £200 in one day for fraud?—Not for fraud.

Counsel: I mean the case where the donkey was found killed and dressed as veal?

The witness: That was not fraud; that is a regular thing in Paris.

Counsel: What do you call fraud?—That wasn't fraud; that was a business transaction. (Laughter).

Sir William Finlay, (Commissioner): Is the transaction that an English dead donkey appears as veal in Paris?—They do this sort of thing in Paris and Belgium.

Counsel: But this dead donkey was masquerading as veal on premises in the town?—They allowed a lot to get in to the shop during the week.

Counsel: Do you look on this as a proper business transaction?—I shouldn't think there was anything wrong in it. It was only business. It is done every day. It is done by other people.

Counsel: It is an appalling prospect?—Well, they do it.

THAT CHAMELEON YOU.

Joy. What wonderful letter Kay does write."

"Wonderful letters," echoed the third member of the group, "why I think she writes very commonplace, ordinary letters."

My contribution was that I had never happened to receive a letter from Kay, as I have not known her very long.

But I was greatly interested in the difference in opinion.

Only I don't believe it was a difference in opinion at all. Rather a difference in actual fact.

Wonderful And Ordinary, Both.

From what I know both of Kay and of the two friends, I can well imagine her writing wonderful letters to one and ordinary letters to the other.

Don't you think that the objective as well as the subjective enters into the matter of letter writing?

You sit down to your desk and start to write a letter to a friend to whom it is easy to write, and before you know it you are chatting away to her just as you would talk were she present in reality. Her personality has reached across the void and touched yours and the spark has flashed forth.

Hard To Write To.

And then again you sit down to write to that very literal and unsympathetic friend. I hesitated before writing that word "friend," but "acquaintance" did not quite do there for there are people we have known so long and had so many contacts with, and perhaps admired and respected so deeply, that we think of them as friends even if there is no warm sympathy between us. But when we come to write to them what a task it is! Try as we will, all we can produce is something without life or spirit.

I think nothing brings home the different effects different people have on us any more than the different moods writing to them induces. I notice it particularly as I write my Christmas cards. As I pass from one to another my mood changes. I become the person each recipient knows.

Watch His Antics!

And that, in some slight degree, is a different person each time. For no two people ever see quite the same person in you or me. We react to what they are themselves, and to what they think of us, and to what they expect of us. Some people have the gift to make us wiser, wittier and better than we are. While others seem to lay across our spirit the blight of their disapproval or their incomprehension.

The next time you sit down at your desk to write half a dozen letters, watch that chameleon you, and see if his antics do not interest you.

Massacre Seen as End of Man

BY FAMOUS SCIENTIST.
Sir Oliver Lodge Sounds Warning in Brighton Address.

Mutual extermination may be the destiny of man if he will it so. It is for mankind to decide.

Sir Oliver Lodge, the famous scientist, made this pronouncement in an address to the National Free Church Council at Brighton.

"The average man," he continued, "has not progressed far as yet. While his ancestors were tree dwellers and cave dwellers, he might be described as a slum dweller. But still humanity is far better than one would expect from its superficial aspect and sordid surroundings.

"Many of the animal instincts remain and are strong. The fighting instinct, for instance, is prominent, and has blossomed into irrational forms which inflict untold misery.

Future Wars.
"It would seem how as if it might be regarded as a step in advance to wage war mainly by machinery, guiding tanks and submarines and aeroplanes from a distance without human bodies inside, so that they can be laden wholly with high explosives, poison gas, and disease germs, and this is what we shall come to if humanity is not discovered.

"Massacre is not fighting, and it is massacre towards which humanity is now again tending. The original fighting instinct has been prostituted and degraded by the apparent advances in civilization. Every advance in knowledge and power can be prostituted to vile ends. The conditions have grown so fearful in prospect that there must surely be a revolt against them.

"Happiness is not so super-abundant on this planet that we can afford to spend our energies in damaging and hurting each other. The evil is a disease of civilization, a mania which has accompanied material progress."

"Hello there! Where are you going?" "I came home and found my favorite bread was not on the table and I am just going to buy what I like best 'WALSH'S MILK BREAD,' made only by The Central Bakery.—apr.15,12

The Prince's Fall
"Speaking for myself, says Mr. L. C. Thomas, the President of the London Cobalt Association, I do wish the Prince would not do that sort of thing. We go about with hot hearts in our mouths. And Mr. Thomas speaks not only for himself, but for most of us," says the Star.

"If there is anything in this King business the Prince has no right to risk his precious neck by persistence in a sport for which he seems to have all the essential pluck, but something less than the natural aptitude. There are many fine men who are not born horsemen and who would take no shame in confessing that a park hack for their 'Ivor' and a motor-car for travel satisfy their prudent ambitions.

"As the heir to a not unimportant throne the Prince will really have to ask himself whether he can continue to take nasty tumbles over the sticks or in the hunting field and yet show a proper regard for the responsibilities that he is heir to."

Vaccine for Epilepsy
IMPORTANT DISCOVERY IN MODE OF TREATMENT.

Satisfactory results, it is claimed, have been achieved in the treatment of epilepsy by an important discovery. The discoverer of the treatment is a former student of King's College, London. He received much encouragement and advice during the stages of his experimentation from Professor R. Thayer Hewlett, professor of bacteriology at the college. Giving some account of the discovery, the professor stated: "It is a vaccine treatment, the patient providing, as it were, his own antidote. The vaccine is injected at weekly intervals. A limited number of cases have been under test, about 15 all told, during the last two or three years. The results have been most encouraging, but the number of cases treated and the length of time devoted to the tests would not as yet justify any far-reaching claims for the treatment. One difficulty that has not been surmounted is the small number of the patients that the experimenters have been able to treat. Doctors are naturally cautious about allowing their patients to submit to new forms of treatment that are admittedly in the experimental stage."

The deaths from epilepsy total between 2,000 and 3,000 every year, according to official statistics, and among males the highest total is recorded between the ages of 15 and 25. Among women the highest total deaths recorded occur between the ages of 25 and 35.

Why is Prince so Often in Berlin?

DENTIST, HIS FRIENDS SAY—MAY BE POLITICS.

BERLIN, April 7.—Former Crown Prince Frederick William is a great sufferer from toothache, judging by the explanations his friends make of his frequent automobile trips from Cels, where he has his castle, to Berlin and Potsdam. His friends say he always comes in to see his dentist, although Berlin has become so accustomed to his visits that explanations of them are not as necessary as they were after his return from Holland when the Government explained that Frederick William would live at Cels Castle and not take part in politics. Since then there has been a swing to the political right and Foreign Minister Stresemann and his associates are compelled to make fewer apologies for permitting the former Crown Prince to return, which apparently was designed to checkmate attempts by the Bavarians to place former Crown Prince Rupprecht on the German throne.

There no longer are any plaintive stories in the monarchist newspapers about the poverty of the former Crown Prince and there are no indications of the existence of want around Cels castle. There automobiles are abundant and many new thoroughbred riding horses, recently purchased at Potsdam, have been installed. Those give the impression that Frederick William is not earning his living as a dirt farmer.

Freezing a Pit

Many people are familiar with refrigeration in some form or another; for instance, in its use in cold storages for foreign meat and for the manufacture of ice-cream.

Few, however, are aware of the assistance it renders to the mining engineer who is faced with the problem of sinking a shaft at a new colliery from the surface to the coal seams lying at a great depth.

When the ground is dry it is a comparatively simple operation, but the real difficulties appear when water-bearing sands are encountered.

At a colliery in Durham a pit was sunk some years ago where the freezing process was not employed, and in consequence the pumping machinery actually raised 15,000 gallons of water, weighing 6 tons, every minute in order to keep the pit bottom clear for the sinkers to work.

At a neighbouring colliery a different plan was followed. Instead of the workmen having to labour under a constant stream of water, the entire mass of water-bearing sand was frozen into a solid rock-like substance and high explosives had to be employed by the excavators.

At suitable distances apart in the circumference of the pit boring tubes were forced through the watered sand until they became embedded in the hard rock below. The sand was then cleared from these tubes and down each of them a freezing pipe was lowered to the bottom.

In order to allow the water-bearing sand to be in actual contact with these pipes the boring tubes were withdrawn. The freezing pipes consisted of inner and outer pipes, the inner ones being coupled to the outlet of the refrigerating plant, down which the brine or cooling mixture was forced to the full depth of the sand deposit.

The brine returned by way of the closed bottom outer pipe to the refrigerating plant again, carrying with it a certain amount of heat from the earth.

After a few days this constant transference of heat caused cylinders of frozen sand to form round each pipe until finally they joined up and made a hard wall round the shaft and effectively barred off the water, so that sinking could be carried on without pumping.

When the sinkers reached the hard rock a permanent cast-iron water-tight lining was placed in the new shaft, and after being made secure the ground was thawed by passing steam down the pipes, which were then easily withdrawn for use elsewhere.

Two Cleaning Hints

Pewter that has become dull may be brightened in this way: Squeeze out most of the juice from half a lemon and then dip this into the dust which has been sifted from cinders. Rub the metal briskly and then polish it with a soft chamois leather. When pewter has become very badly discoloured rub over the metal a cut onion on which a little pumice powder has been sprinkled.

Brass fittings and mounts on furniture are often difficult to clean because it is desired to avoid soiling the wood surrounding them. It will be found helpful to tie a little salt in a thick soft cloth and to moisten this slightly with vinegar and then to rub the brass with it. The metal should then be polished with a dry flannel dipped in fine wood ashes.
