THE DAISY.

My heart is like that daisy, she said,
Silver white with a flush of red,
That steadfast stands in the meadow grass,
While the golden summer hours pass:
Soft and slow
The long hours go,
And the brook is murmuring low.

In the tangled hedge of the meadow grows,
Fleeting and fragrant, a briar rose,
Flushing like incense on the air
The wealth of its perfume rich and rare,
Floating as yet
Through sunny heat,
Far aloof to the daisy's feet.

Over the daisy's patient head,
Fit the butterflies, brown and red,
Bearing the loves of flower and tree—
Have ye never a love for me?"

Half afraid,
The daisy said,
While the bright wings over her played.

The bright wings flash and are gone again;
Naught have they brought but a little pain,
To thrub and ache in the daisy's heart—
Sitting forever alone and apart,
Ah! so far
From the rosy star
That scarce is conscious daisies are!

Put courage! little daisy, she said;
Fear not to love though hope is dead:
The heart that loves, though it loves alone,
Something better than pence doth own:
Hearts are strong,
Though life be long,
And the blind bird sings the sweetest song!

BRITISH NATIONAL LIFEBOAT INSTITUTION.
—During the past year the British National Life-
boat Institution has saved with its boats the lives of 553 persons, nearly the whole of them from boats that would have perished any ordinary boats from proceeding to their aid. In addition to this service in the way of life, the boats have saved in the year 25 ships. A noble and picturesque venture was that of the St. Ives lifeboat, which was launched five times in a heavy gale of wind, to the rescue of the crews of three vessels wrecked on the coast on the stormy 3d of February last. The wind and tide twice carried the boat to leeward, but by unyielding persistence,
fresh crews taking the place of those exhausted,
she succeeded in saving the crews of the vessels,
with the exception of two men, who perished before they could be reached. Only three mishaps occurred to the Society's boats during the year.
The cause of two of these was a heavy sea, washing men out of the boat. The Ramsgate lifeboat —which during the past 20 years has, without the loss of a single life employed by her, saved several hundred people—thus lost one of her men in February.

SAFETY ON THE SEA.—Twelve years ago
there were forty-two steamers running between the United States and Europe. The increase, since 1861, has been ninety-seven steamers. The oldest company plying on the Atlantic is the Cunard. It has carried nearly a million of passengers since it began operations in 1840, and lost none. The next is the Inman line, which has carried 787,000 passengers, and lost 177 in the "City of Boston." The Anchor line has carried 150,- 770 since 1865, and lost 230 in the "Hibernia,"
"United Kingdom" and "Cambria." The Bremen Kue, since 1858, has conveyed 482,000 persons, and lost no lives; the National line, 217,000, and lost none; the Williams and Gouin, 250,000, with but two lost, by jumping overboard at the sinking of the "Colorado;" the French line carries no

steering passengers, though owning the largest vessels afloat. Finally, the White Star line has, since organized, carried 61,000 passengers, losing 546 by the wreck of the "Atlantic." Total number of lives lost, 975.

Interesting Tale.

THE NIGHT PURSUIT.

The night lowered dark and stormy around the lonely island of Saborro, in the South Pacific Ocean.

The tall cocoanuts lined the beach, tossed their heads wildly to and fro, and the great seas came thundering upon the sand, sending showers of spray far inland.

About two hundred yards from the beach, in a little log house, sat an old missionary—the Rev.
John Sturges—with his only daughter, Laura, who had accompanied her father to this distant shore, that she might be near to comfort him, and a juvenile sister to his wants.

A lover girl than Laura seldom greeted moral vision.

The light of the lamp upon the coarse table in one corner of the rough but neatly swept floor,
fell upon her chestnut hair, seeming to encircle it with a halo; while the pure innocent expression of the young face might have moved a heart of stone. The eyes of this girl were of deep hazel, her skin was transparently fair, her form perfect
in its graceful proportions.

At the moment of which we write, she sat upon
a little stool at her father's feet, her bright head resting upon his knee and a satisfied smile hovering about her pretty mouth as she felt the caressing touch of her parent's hand.

Laura, said he after a while, do you never feel tired of living so far away out here with me in the Pacific Ocean?

Tired? Oh, no papa—indeed.

Alas! I feel that it is selfish of me to keep you here. Tell me, darling, do you not sometimes think of Charles Graham?

A vivid blush came upon Laura's cheek; her bosom heaved.

Oh, never mind, papa, she said softly.

That means you do think of him.

I will not deny it, she answered, gently, burying her face upon his bosom. But Charles, you know, has promised to wait for me; so I am satisfied.

Mr. Sturges smiled.

It is most true that his ship arrived off this place.

You know, he said he would call here on his way home from Australia.

Yes—he said so, when we parted from him, she answered, her bright eyes gleaming with joy.

I hope he will come soon, said Mr. Sturges, a shadow crossing his brow.

Laura looked at him earnestly.

Papa, she said, at length, do you not think that your fears of a rising among the savages are groundless?

No, dearest, I do not. That fellow, Henry Weedon, I am afraid, is doing great mischief here.

The person to whom he alluded was a darkbrowed man—a boatswain's mate, who had deserted a vessel which, several months previously had touched there to take in a supply of water.

Weedon had called frequently on Mr. Sturges, and had been particularly attentive to Laura, who,
however, by every means in her power, had shown
him such attentions were to her far from agreeable.

The boatswain's mate, however, who was a coarse,
conceited man, had continued his unwelcome visits,
and finally had even had the audacity to propose to Mr. Sturges for Laura's hand, in the presence of the young girl herself.

Both father and daughter had then given him to understand that his company was no longer desired; and he had gone away with a countenance which had made Laura fairly shudder—it was so demoniacal—so full of bitter hatred.

Since then he had not again intruded—had shunned both, whenever they chanced to meet him in their walks.

The behavior of the natives, who had hitherto been friendly to them, also seemed to change.

Dark, sullen glances often directed toward them
by the island people convinced the former that Henry Weedon was at work, endeavoring to turn the natives against them. Vainly Mr. Sturges had endeavored to counteract this influence. Weedon was a man who had great power for evil—a willing, cunning villain, who knew how to deal with the ignorant islanders.

If so, said Laura, in answer to her father's last remark, if the islanders are really turning against us, had we not better quit the island?

That is what I have been thinking of. I feel that delay is dangerous in this case.

Yes, papa. These people have fearful passions, when once they are aroused; in spite of all your teachings, and I shudder to think what might be the result of our staying here. Good Heaven! she suddenly added, drawing back. Oh, papa, somebody's at the window!

Mr. Sturges glanced toward the window just in time to see the hideous face of a savage, which had been pressed against a pane, hastily withdrawn. He rose, and moved to the door, which he quickly opened, peering out into the gloom.

At first he could see nothing; but he finally made out a number of dark forms gathered together on the beach, apparently holding council.
Through the gloom he could faintly distinguish,
in the phosphoric light from the white waves, a number of long spears and heavy warclubs carried by the party.

Laura, he whispered, quickly returning, we must fly!

The young girl turned as pale as death.

Keep up a brave heart, Laura; Heaven will help us!

She caught the gleam of his brilliant eye, and her spirit seemed nerved with almost superhuman resolution. In a moment she had thrown on her bonnet and shawl, and was at the side of her father, who had donned his hat and coat. He cast a wistful look at his books in a rude book-case in one corner; but there was no chance or time to take them away with him.

Even as he moved toward the back door with his child, a savage yell broke forth, and the tramp of approaching feet was heard. He rushed out with Laura; at the same moment, something whistling past his head proclaimed that he had been seen. It was a spear, which, just grazing the side of his hat, lodged in the trunk of a tree and fruit tree beyond.

The missionary hurried along until he reached a thick clump of shrubbery growing by the side of the path; and then, with his child, he excoined himself therein. The tramp of feet drew nearer;
but, thanks to the darkness, the fugitives had not been seen to hide themselves; and soon the natives, believing that they had kept hastening on,
rushed past them.

Heaven is helping us, whispered Mr. Sturges to his child. We must remain quiet a few moments longer, then we will endeavour to get to the beach
unobserved.

They remained motionless, hardly daring to breathe, until they felt safe the savages had gone some distance, when they emerged, and made for the beach, at a spot where, in a small cove, Mr.
Sturges kept his own little canoe. Just as they launched the frail vessel, another yell proclaimed that they were again seen; and through the darkness they could dimly perceive the forms of the natives as they came on.

Quick, my child! cried Mr. Sturges, as he helped his daughter into the canoe, we must paddle out to sea, and may Heaven keep our canoe
from swamping in this storm!

A shower of spears whistled round the fugitives;
but, fortunately, not one touched them. In a moment they were in their canoe paddling far out upon the dark waters. The wind roared and shrieked around them, the great sea tossed the little boat as if it was an egg-shell, and it seemed at times as if the little craft must certainly roll over. Laura resolutely assisted her father; but she felt as if escape from their present peril were impossible—felt that they must eventually be swallowed up by the mad waves.

The fury of the storm seemed on the increase.
The seas rose higher, and the water at times almost engulfed the canoe, filling it.

Mr. Sturges, however, by rapid and expert handling, still contrived to keep the little vessel afloat.

What is there? Laura suddenly inquired, pointing towards something dark astern of them, and apparently rapidly gaining.

A canoe! exclaimed her father, a large canoe; the savages are in pursuit!

It is all over with us, then, gasped Laura.

At that moment, from a sudden opening in the dark cloud, the moon burst forth, throwing a broad glance of silvery light athwart the waters.

Mr. Sturges then discovered that the large canoe, which was full of natives, was indeed rapidly gaining upon them.

Vainly he strained himself at the paddle;
vainly his lovely daughter also exerted her self; the natives drew nearer every moment, shouting exultantly as they came on.

The fugitives were now paddling on a course diagonal with the shore, and which carried them toward a high, rocky promontory, jutting out into the sea from the Southern extremity of the island. As they drew near this promontory, the face of the missionary lighted up with hope; for he had, not long since, discovered there an under sea cavern, the existence of which he believed the savages knew nothing—the opening to this retreat being concealed by a rock, overgrown
by thick masses of seaweed.

Soon, however, he perceived that he must be overtaken ere he could reach the place.

Alas! further exertion was useless. There was the natives' canoe! less than thirty fathoms distant, speeding along toward the smaller one with the rapidity of an arrow. In this extremity Mr. Sturges resolved to resort to prayer.

He threw himself upon his knees in the canoe and prayed if it so pleased Him, to take the petitioner, but to spare his lovely child.

Meanwhile, poor Laura, who had also stopped paddling, was praying that her father might be saved, even though she were destroyed.

Mr. Sturges concluded his prayer. Now he stood upright in the boat, gazing towards his enemies as they came on.

Thus gazing he did not observe a stately ship, which suddenly came booming round the promontory under reefed topsails. The suddenness of this vision, hitherto concealed by the high land, was not without its effect upon the natives, all of whom now stopped paddling,
and looked toward the strange craft.

Go ahead, screamed the evil voice of Weedon, who was among them. Never mind the ship, but first get these runaways in your clutches.

The natives again took to their paddles.
On came the canoe; and in a few minutes it must have reached the fugitives.

Mr. Sturges and his daughter now beheld the strange ship, which, not distant further than a quarter of a mile, was booming straight along toward them.

If we can only reach that vessel, he said to his daughter. Quick, Laura! paddle again.

With superhuman strength they paddled toward the ship; Mr. Sturges now and then shouting and pausing to wave an arm to her.

Finally, overpowered by their exertions, father and daughter were obliged to pause—
their pursuers were close upon them—so was the ship.

Help! help! screamed the missionary,
springing up. We are pursued by savages.

His shrill voice was evidently heard, for the ship was now directed straight toward the savages' boat, which it soon struck, dashing it to pieces and passing over it, killing Henry Weedon outright, and leaving the other occupants striking out for the shore.

Mr. Sturges and his daughter were then picked up, to meet with an agreeable surprise
to discover in the captain of this vessel Laura's lover Charles Graham.

My prayer has been answered, said Sturges solemnly, as he embraced his weeping, blushing daughter.

We have to add that they had a safe and speedy passage home, and that Laura, soon after, was united to Captain Graham.

Mr. Sturges found a comfortable home with him during the remainder of his life.

Wit Made Easy.

A. Here comes B., the liveliest yet most tire-some of word catchers. I wonder whether he'll have wit enough to hear good news of his mistress. Well, B., my dear fellow, I hope I see you well.

B. I hope you do, my dear A., otherwise you have lost your eyesight.

A. Good. Well, how do you do?

B. How? Why, as other people do.
You would not have me eccentric, would you?

A. Nonsense. I mean how do you find your self?

B. Find myself? Where's the necessity of finding myself? I have not been lost.

A. Corrigible dog! Come, now, to be serious.

(B. comes closer to A. and looks very serious.)

A. Well, what now?

B. I am come to be seri-ous.

A. Come, now, nonsense, B.; leave off
this. (Laying his hand on his arm)

B. (Looking down at his arm) I can't leave off this. It would look very absurd to go without a sleeve.

A. Ah, ah! You make me laugh in spite of myself. How's Jackson?

B. The d-uce! How's Jackson! Well, I never should have thought that. How can Howe be Jackson? 'Surname and arms,' I suppose, of some rich uncle? I have seen him gazzeted.

A. Good by.

B. (Detaining him) 'Good by!' What a sudden enthusiasm in favour of some virtuous man of the name of By! 'Good by!' To think of Ashton standing at the corner of the street, doing aloud on the integrity of a Mr.
By!

A. Ludicrous enough. I can't help laughing, I confess. But laughing does not always imply merriment. You do not delight us,
Jack, with these sort of jokes, but tickle us;
and tickling may give pain.

B. Don't exempt it, then. You need not take everything that is given you.

A. You'll want a straightforward answer some day, and then—

B. You'll describe a circle about me, before you give it. Well, that's your affair, not mine.
You'll astonish the natives, that's all.

A. It's great nonsense, you must allow.

B. I can't see why it is greater nonsense
than any other pronoun.

A. (In despair) Well, it's no use, I see.

B. Excuse me; it is of the very greatest use. I don't know a part of speech more useful. It performs all the greatest offices of nature, and contains, in fact, the whole agency and mystery of the word. It rains. It is fire weather. It freezes. It thaws. It (which is very odd) is one o'clock. 'It has been a very frequent observation' it goes. Here it goes. How goes it?—(which, by the way, is a translation from the Latin eo, is it: eo,

I go; is thou going; it, he or it goes. In short—

A. In short, if I wanted a dissertation on it, now's the time for it. But I don't; so good by. (Going)—I saw Miss M.—last night.

B. The— you did! Where was it?

A. (To himself) Now I have him, and will revenge myself. Where was it, eh? Oh, you must know a great deal more about it
than I do.

B. Nay, my dear fellow, do tell me, I'm on thorns.

A. O, thorns! very odd thorns. I never saw a thorn look so like a pavement.

B. Come, now, to be serious.
(A comes close to B., and looks tragic.)

B. He, he! very fair, egad. But to tell me where was she. How did she look? Who was with her?

A. Oh, oh! How was with her, was he?
Well, I wanted to know his name. I could not tell who the devil he was. But I say, Jack, who's he?

B. Good. He, he!—fair. But now, my dear Will, for—sake, you know how interested I am.

A. The d-uce you are! I always took you for an interested fellow. I always said of Jack B., Jack's apt to overdo his credit for wit; but a more honest, disinterested fellow, I never met with.

B. Now, my dear Will, consider, I acknowledge I have been tire-some, I confess it is a bad habit, this word catching; but consider my love

(A. falls into an attitude of musing.)

B. Well.

A. Don't interrupt me. I am considering your love.

B. I repeat; I am truly sorrow. What shall I do (Lay his hand on his heart) I'll give up this cursed habit.

A. You will? Upon honour?

B. Upon my honour.

A. On the spot?

B. Now, this instant. Now and for ever?

A. Strip away, then.

B. Strip! F! what!

A. And you'd give up that cursed habit.

B. Now, my dear A., for the love of everything that is sacred, for the love of your love.

A. Well, you promise me sincerely?

B. Heart and soul!

A. Come B., I now see you can give up a jest, and are really in love; and your mistress, I will undertake to say, will not be sorry to be convinced of both. Women like to begin with merriment well enough, but they think ill of a man who cannot come to a grave conclusion.—'Washing Cap Papers,' by Leigh Hunt.

A concern called the "Check Bank," with a capital of $1,000,000, is about to begin business in London. It will pay no interest on deposits, discount on bills, enter into no financial speculative transactions, but will simply receive money on deposit, pay checks,
and place its unused funds with leading bankers, whose names will be published from time to time. The novel features of its system for which it relies for business are stated as follows:

Checks will be provided in convenient books
and may be had for amounts limited from £1 ($5) to £10 ($50) each. The charges for ten checks will be 1s. (24 cents), must be drawn on the forms provided by the bank.—
They are crossed and payable to order, and therefore as they require indorsement by the person in whose favor they are drawn, they serve as receipts. No customer can possibly overdraw his account, for no blank check will be supplied until the full amount for which it can be filled has been deposited. It will be impossible, that checks of the bank against overdrawn accounts should be in circulation.

Secretary of the navy, Robeson, will personally examine the survivors of the Polaris on their arrival, that he may decide whether a Government vessel should be sent after the Polaris.

Washington County, Iowa, was visited by a terrible whirlwind yesterday. Its path was about half a mile in width; houses, barns, fences, trees, cattle, and human beings were caught up and whirled through the air, like toys, and then dashed to the ground with such violence as to produce instant destruction. Hail stones fell nine inches in diameter. Several persons were killed and injured, and many farm houses destroyed.

Rascality in the Army.

The information we received from New Mexico indicates that the military service in that region is in a sadly demoralized condition. Last year a court martial was in session there for over five months, occupied solely with the trial of officers of the army. Among the cases tried was one of a captain charged with crimes of fraud, perjury, and rape, and convicted of them all. The first and second lieutenants serving under this officer to the service were likewise convicted of perjury and fraud. The convicts were cashiered, and that was the end of it!

One lieutenant of cavalry, stationed at one of the extreme Southern posts, was accused of robbing a brother officer's hen roost. The charge was not sustained, however, owing, it is said, to the fact that the post commander issued instructions to the enlisted men forbidding them to give any information on the subject. Another officer at the same post was accused of having tempted private soldiers to swear falsely for him, and of having been guilty of petty frauds on the Government of the most contemptible character.

One way in which some of the army officers stationed on the frontier manage to swindle the Government is illustrated by a transaction at a post in New Mexico. The contracted price of beef at that post was eight cents a pound. An officer who occupied the double place of acting commissary of subsistence and acting assistant quartermaster, formed a connection with the post commander and a roost trader, a partnership for a speculation in beef. The way they managed the thing was very simple. The commissary rejected the beef offered by the contractor as unfit for use, and the post commander approved his action. Consequently the whole herd was condemned after being examined on the hoof. But the troops could not do without their rations, and the post trader, who has been taken into the ring, at this point stepped forward and offered to supply all the beef required at twenty five cents a pound. This liberal offer was accepted, whereupon the shrewd trader bought the herd which had been rejected at eight cents and sold it to his confederates for the Government at twenty five cents a pound.

The same officers are represented as exceedingly tyrannical toward the private soldiers, inflicting excessive punishment for trifling infractions of discipline. In such circumstances it is not strange that demoralization and tyranny on the part of officers are one of the chief causes for the enormous number of desertions from the army which are reported every year.

SETTING THE RIVER ON FIRE.—Any attempt to divorce off-end from cause must inevitably come to grief, as was demonstrated the other day to the satisfaction of almost every person over in Jersey city, who doubted whether petroleum would burn. Two bargemen, it seems, saw some oil spreading itself on the surface of the water at the Morgan street dock. A discussion, more or less scientific, ensued as to the brilliant success of an experiment in touching it off. The Dilymoss of the twin tugger threw a lighted paper over the side of the barge, and had his doubts inconspicuously dispelled by the sudden flaring up of everything in the neighborhood. Not only had he performed the hitherto impossible feat of setting the North river on fire, but his services included all the elements of a wide conflagration. Two barges and the pier, on which were two hundred barrels of tar, took fire, and things looked discouraging for a short time. But luckily, the fire was soon put out, and no great damage was done.

NORTH SHORE RAILROAD.—It is reported that news has been received from England that, under certain conditions, which it is the intention of the present Board to carry out, the bonds of the North Shore Railway Company will be negotiated, and the money for the whole road will at once be furnished.

IS IT A BRIDE.—When Costigan's resolution passed Parliament, our Better Terms Delegation, then in Ottawa, immediately called upon the Governor General, and personally protested against this gross insult to New Brunswick.

Subsequently they laid before Earl Dufferin a written remonstrance, and were led to believe before leaving for home, that the whole power of the Executive would be exerted, if necessary, to uphold the Constitution in its integrity.

It has been decided, however, to bring the who's subject before the British Privy Council, the expenses of both parties to be borne by the General Government.

Against this we protest.

Let the Local Government refuse to accept one cent from the Dominion treasury, and then will Sir John dare to defray from the revenues, the expenses of a party seeking to overthrow a law passed by our Legislature, endorsed by two thirds of our people, and pronounced constitutional by the highest legal tribunal in the British Empire?

New Brunswick is not so poor that she cannot defend her own.—Frederick Express.

The Standard.

SAINT ANDREWS, MAY 23, 1873.

A smart dodge of the Opposition in the Dominion Parliament last week, was checked by Sir John A. Macdonald. The bill relating to the debt of the Provinces was before the House, and attempts were made by the Opposition to prevent a vote being taken on it, by raising a point of order, that the division could only be called by those intending to vote against the Speaker's decision, declaring it carried. This was done to prevent members speaking one way and voting another. The Opposition who had spoken through their leader against the measure, were compelled to vote for it. They felt badly to record their vote, as it prevented them telling their constituents they opposed it. The bill respecting the duties on lumber imposed by the Legislature of New Brunswick was passed. The bill for the re-adjustment of the Judges' Salaries, and that it was intended to give Sir Geo. E. Cartier's remains a public funeral, and erect a monument to his memory at the expense of the Dominion met with general approval. Supplementary estimates including items to defray expenses for burial of bodies recovered from the wreck of steamer "Atlantic," also conferring rewards on Rev. Mr. Ancient and others for saving life at the wreck. The bill for the admission of Prince Edward Island into the Union was passed.

The large school building is fast arriving at completion, the roof and sides have been resingled, a chimney built, and dome erected with a vane of an appropriate description—a large iron quill, and the four cardinal points of the compass indicated by the letters N. S. E. W. placed beneath. The view from the tower is not surpassed in the Town.

The Queen's Birth Day—Cricket Match, &c.

Saturday last, the Queen's Birth Day, was ushered in with a light fog and heavy clouds, betokening wet weather. At an early hour, the good old Union Jack, the Stars and Stripes, and Dominion Flag, were flying from many buildings and vessels in the harbour. Between 9 and 10 o'clock the "Belle Brown" with the Cricket Club from St. Stephen, and about two hundred excursionists, accompanied by the Calais Band, arrived. They were received at the landing by the St. Andrews Cricket Club, and Band. The pleasure seekers walked about the Town, but soon wended their way to the

where the two Clubs stripped for their work. The Frontier Club won the choice, and sent the St. Andrews Club to the bats; we append the score which shows the splendid batting of the Club from St. Stephen; and without any wish to detract from their victory, we must add, were most fortunate in having among the members some five or six young gentlemen who had played matches in the old country, and one of whom played in a match against the great "All England Eleven," and wears a prize belt for bowling. At noon,

A ROYAL SALUTE was fired from the Battery at Fort Tipperary, under the direction of Ser-nt. Major James McKinney. After the firing, which was performed in thorough military style, three cheers were given for Her Majesty Queen Victoria. Soon after the "CITY OF ST. JOHN" emerged from the fog in the bay, bringing a number of excursionists from the commercial emporium, some of whom landed here, and others proceeded up the river. Notwithstanding the passage was made in a thick fog, the steamer arrived at her usual time.

The St. Andrews Band having provided dinner for their friends of the Calais Band, they both dined together.

IN THE AFTERNOON a heavy shower of rain and hail came on which drove the Cricketers to house quarters, and many of the visitors and Calais Band took shelter in

THE NEW HOTEL, where the large dining hall was cleared, and the band having kindly consented to play, sets were formed and polkas, schottisches and other dances were indulged in, much to the pleasure of the visitors.

The rain storm having cleared away, the Cricketers went on with their play until 5 o'clock, when the stumps were drawn, and both clubs adjourned to the hotel, and partook of a dinner which was given by the St. Andrews Club to their St. Stephen brethren. The usual loyal and patriotic toasts were drank, and the company separated at six o'clock; the visitors proceeded to the steamer accompanied by both bands. The excursionists having embarked, the steamer cast off, when three rousing cheers were given, which were responded to by those on board the steamer.

The following is the score of the Cricket Match, kindly furnished by the Secretary:

Stumps were drawn at 5 o'clock.

The Band during the evening played several of their favorite pieces in the square at Mr. Clark's Hotel, thus serenading him, which he generously acknowledged.

The Hon. S. L. TILLEY and family may be expected shortly to take up their residence for the summer at his beautiful villa here. The Hon. Dr. Tupper and family, and other notabilities are also coming. Dr. Tupper's cottage opposite Beech Hill is greatly improved, and his mansion and grounds at Highland Hill are in excellent order. His furniture arrived last week.

We have to apologise to our readers, for having published in our last issue an incorrect local item. It was given in our informants words, and inserted at his instance. Our edition was just worked off, when a friend informed us of its untruthfulness. Such practical jokes, tend to lessen confidence in those perpetrating them, and the notoriety gained is very questionable.

The Dominion Parliament was adjourned on Friday last, to meet again in August, to examine the investigations to be made by the Pacific Railway Committee, the former hope of the Opposition. But the fact is, nothing can be sustained against the Government, and the Session is therefore prorogued.

Several important bills were passed, and much good accomplished, even in the face of the fiery attempts of the Opposition to out the Government and establish themselves in power. The Codrigan resolution aiming a death blow at the Constitution and at our Provincial rights, although passed the House, will fail to accomplish the object it contemplated. The day has passed when such domination will have control or power with the people of New Brunswick.

DEATH OF REV. MR. TEMPLE.—We regret to notice the death of Rev. Mr. Temple, at St. John, on the 20th inst., at the ripe age of 83 years. Mr. Temple was stationed here some years ago, over the Wesleyan Church, and was beloved by all denominations.

The June number of the ALDINE, that unequalled United States pictorial monthly has just been received. We can only give a brief notice in this days issue, but will give a more extended one in our next. The engravings are superbly executed, and the literary matter, as usual, of a superior quality, and why not, when some of the best United States writers are contributors.

THE MARITIME MONTHLY for June is out, and like its predecessors is filled with ably written original articles. The first, is from the pen of the Rev. Wm. Harvey, Newfoundland, and advocates that island as a depot in the line of communication with Europe; he also argues that the route via Newfoundland is the shortest between Europe and America. The Rev. Mr. Grant, of Halifax, the popular lecturer, on the inhabitants of the North West. Like all Mr. Grant's papers it is interesting and instructive. There are several other articles, all entertaining and of interest. The present number closes the first volume, and we trust it will prove a remunerative undertaking.

EXPLORATIONS IN ASSYRIA.—Mr. George Smith, the leader of the London "Daily Telegraph" expedition to Assyria, telegraphs, under date Mosul, April 26, an announcement of successful explorations and important discoveries. He states that he has obtained upwards of eighty new inscriptions. One is an important stele of Merodach-Baladan, King of Babylon, 1360 B.C.; another, dated 1320 B.C., gives the particulars of the restoration of the caseway to the great Temple of Assur; and there are also tablets of curious and ancient Babylonian legends, as well as historical memorials of Sargon, Eshnunna, Ashurbanipal, Nebuchadnezzar, Nabonidus, Cambyzes, and Darius. Mr. Smith says he has also excavated Nimrud with important results; and one of his most recent discoveries is that of a perfectly new text of the annals of Tiglath-Pileser.

THE BRITISH ARMY.—Writing, many years ago, on the condition of England, Thomas Carlyle expressed a hope that armies of men trained to fight and kill one another would some day give place to armies of industry, commanded by captains of industry, who should subdue the earth in a way very different from that of the slaughterers. In one sense, the hope expressed by the deep-thinking author is about to be realized, for the British army is becoming a working army. Every man who enlists may, if he will, learn a trade, the choice being left to him; and thus at the same time that he is subjecting himself to discipline, and acquiring habits of obedience, he may become an artificer, skilful or not, according to his capabilities. It is one of the miseries of a soldier's life in time of peace that during one half of his time he has nothing to do, and he frequently falls into mischief in consequence. By the new system he will be saved from this misery, and be taught a good trade in addition to military duties; so that should he desire to quit the army at the end of his term, he will be well qualified to earn his living, and to prove himself a useful member of society.

The "City of St. John" has changed her days of running to this Port. She leaves St. John every Thursday and Saturday and returns on Fridays and Mondays.

The Mount Allison Academy examinations concluded on Monday, and were satisfactory. The Rev. A. S. Desbrisay was to deliver the Alumni Oration on Tuesday.

A Mystery Unravelled.

A strange story if true, is told by the Montreal Gazette, which brings to light the particulars of a thirty years mystery. The story runs as follows:

"Thirty years ago a child, about three years old, belonging to the family of a carpenter, named Richard, was playing on the door-step at his father's house, in St. Roch suburbs, Quebec. The man was busy at his trade, and the mother intent upon her household work, so that the gambols of the little boy in the sun-shine of the street, were unheeded. In the evening the child was missed, and search was made in vain, and after some time he was given and mourned as dead. Thirty passed and he was forgotten.

About a fortnight ago a gentleman came from Quebec to Montreal, and entered on business, into the store of a hatter, named Richmond. At the very first sight, he was struck with the appearance of the shop keeper, and, after further conversation, expressed his astonishment at the air of resemblance which he bore to the Richard family. On returning to his lodgings, impressed with this meeting, he wrote the particulars to his mother, residing in the St. Charles suburbs, Quebec. He had been raised from infancy by an Indian woman, whom he had been taught to regard as his mother. She had been invariably kind to him, and he should never have cared to travel beyond that record, had he not learned the secret of his life from the Squaw, when on her death bed. She then declared to him that he was not her child, that she had stolen him. After receiving the dying declaration of the Huron, the young man, then already grown up, went to Quebec to seek his family but his search was entirely vain. After hearing all these particulars Richard hastened to write a second letter to his mother. The maternal instinct was awakened at once, and hit upon an infallible means of recognition. She wrote to enquire whether Richmond bore certain birth marks, which she alone knew and alone remembered after three times ten long years. Her son returned a satisfactory answer. She came up to Montreal, had an interview with the hatter, and described more minutely the marks which she thought he must bear upon his person. She was correct in every particular, and there could no longer be the shadow of a doubt. We need not say more. The mother pressed her son to her bosom with the old feeling of him who said: 'He that was lost has been found; he that was dead has come to life again.' God reserves special blessings in this world sometimes, but perhaps the greatest and the sweetest mercy is the reward of the faithful mother in recovering her lost child, after long, weary reaches of tearful, patient years.

FINANCIAL.—The statement of banks acting under charter, for the month of April, is published in Saturday's "Gazette." The returns from Ontario and Quebec are complete and show the following totals:—Capital authorized, $59,316,666; capital subscribed, $56,976,566; capital paid up, $50,722,993.73; total liabilities, $86,229,812.04; total assets, $155,822.21. The returns of circulation and specie on the 16th instant, show the total circulation of notes—Dominion, Provincial and Fractional—to have been, at that date, $11,548,196.83. The total specie held was $2,676,694.12; deficiency of specie $15,174.47.

THE APPROACHING MARRIAGE OF THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH.—There are rumours of difficulties, political and otherwise, in the way of the Duke of Edinburgh's marriage with the daughter of the Emperor of Russia. They say there are high personages in Court strongly opposed to it, and that hints have come from "cousins" in Berlin that it might perhaps be as well if it did not take place. They say further that the Duke of Edinburgh will have his own way, let everybody else do or say what everybody else pleases.

TREATMENT OF INSANITY.—Experiments at the New York State Lunatic Asylum have resulted in proving the great value of conium—the hemlock of the ancients—in the treatment of insanity. The concurrent testimony of the cases in which it has been tried is that it soothes and mollifies the motor centres, operating on the motor tract as opium operates on the brain, thus quieting and renovating the whole muscular system, and acting directly as a tonic and nerve. It is now largely used in cases of epilepsy by New York physicians.

DEATH OF SIR G. E. CARTIER.—Intelligence has been received of the death in London, of Sir G. E. Cartier, Bart., Minister of Militia of the Dominion, on the 20th instant. The deceased Minister was born on the 6th of September, 1814, at St. Antoine, Vercheres County, and was consequently in the 59th year of his age. His family claim descent from Jacques Cartier, the discoverer of Canada.

THE THOUSAND ISLANDS.—The Waterton (N. Y.) Times puts the rumour that American speculators have bought up all the Thousand Island Group in the river St. Lawrence that lie within the United States boundary, and ten or three of those belonging to the Dominion and adds that the day is not far distant when they are to become the most popular summer resort in the world.

It is useless for any body further to attempt pulling the wool over the eyes of the Non-Sectarian School men of New Brunswick by palaver about separate School systems in Ontario and Quebec. A Separate School system was forced on the vast majority of Ontario by Quebec tyranny, and on the minority in Quebec by Quebec bigotry. New Brunswick will offer to Quebec tyranny an indomitable resistance, and will treat Quebec bigotry with contempt. Had there been no Separate School system in existence in Ontario at the Union, any attempt at establishing such a school system there would be laughed to scorn. And if a thoroughly good Non-Sectarian School system were set up in Quebec its Protestant people would accept it with pleasure.—Daily News.

SUMMARY.

A Halifax Paper says—428 bodies have been recovered from the wreck of the "Atlantic," there are still 118 unaccounted for, some of them Cabin passengers.

A FIRE took place at St. Stephen on the 23rd instant, which consumed the barn of P. O'Shaughnessy. The arrival of the fire engine prevented a greater loss.

The death of Andrew Barberie, Esq., formerly a Representative for Restigouche, took place on the 25th. Mr. Barberie's memory should be honored by the press of this Province as having carried a measure in the Legislature doing away with postage on newspapers.

The proceedings relative to the discovery of the Bank of England forgeries have been exceedingly successful, but at the same time exceedingly costly. In one day the sum paid for cable telegrams amounted to $800, gold, and it is estimated that the entire costs of detection and prosecution will not be covered for a smaller sum than $100,000.

A citizen of New York gave the United States in his will half a million dollars toward the payment of the national debt, but the courts of that state declare the bequest invalid.

Josh Billing says: "I have often been told that the best way is to take a bull by the horns; but I think, in many instances, I should prefer the tale hole."

Erza Cornell of New York, having been accused of defrauding the state in connection with the sale of lands for the benefit of Cornell University, demands an investigation of the charges against him.

GUILD'S SIGNAL.

BY BRET HARTE.

[The engineer Guild, who was killed at the Providence railroad disaster, was accustomed, as he passed by his own house at night, to blow a peculiar signal to his wife. All habitual travellers on the train knew and understood it.]

Two low whistles, quaint and clear,
That was the signal that Guild, 'tis said—
Gave to his wife at Providence.
As through the sleeping town, and thence
Out in the night,
On to the light,
Down past the farms, lying white, he sped.
As a husband's greeting, scant no doubt,
Yet to the woman looking out,
Watching and waiting, no serenade,
Love song or midnight roundelay,
Said what that whistle seemed to say:
"To my true love,
So love to you!
Working or waiting, Good night," it said.

Briar young bagman, tourist fine,
Old commuters along the line,
Brakemen and porters glanced ahead,
Smiled as the signal, sharp, intense,
Pierced through the shadows of Providence—
"Nothing amiss,
Nothing!—it is Only Guild calling his wife," they said.

Summer and Winter, the old refrain
Rang o'er the billows of ripening grain
Pierced through the budding boughs overhead,
Flew down the track when the red leaves
burned,
Like living coils from the engine spurned!
Sung as it flew:
"To our true love,
First of all Duty—Good night," it said.

And then, one night, it was heard no more,
From Stonington over Rhode Island shore,
And the folk in Providence smiled and said,
As they turned in their beds, "The Engineer
Has once forgotten his midnight cheer."
One only knew
To his true love
Guild lay under his engine,—dead.

A writer says very truthfully that success in life is very apt to make us forget the time when we weren't much. It is just so with a frog on a jump—he can't remember when he was a tadpole—but other folks can.

It is a curious fact that the farmers of Illinois or Missouri must sell two bushels of ripe corn to get money enough to buy a can of sweet corn put up green and holding less than one quart.

Makers of fishing tackle, whose season is now at hand, complain of the scarcity of feathers for the manufacture of artificial flies. One of them says that all the feathers have flown to the heads of women who are little better than artificial flies themselves with the hooks very well concealed.

Why the Valve Jar is Superior to all Others for Preserving Fruit.

1. Because it is the only one in which the contents can be securely fastened, and cooked while thus fastened, without risk of an explosion.
2. It is the only one that is Automatically Sealed, therefore, the only Seal-Down Jar in the market.
3. It is so simple that no skill is required to use it successfully.
4. It is securely fastened when placed in the kettle, and being immersed, the fragrance of the contents is confined in the Jar, a more perfect vacuum produced and the handling of the Jar entirely avoided.
5. It is well known that fruit Jars which are closed with rigid fastenings burst by fermentation, and the effect upon the content and surrounding well understood by many housekeepers.

The Cover of the Valve Jar being a perfect safety valve makes an explosion impossible, and entirely obviates every difficulty that exists in other fastenings.
