Their objects, he continued, whatever differences of opinion there might be, were common objects, the furtherairce of the material interests, and drawing closer the bonds of sympathy which united the various communities that were subject to the King. For séveral years past, nearly one-quarter of the imports of the United Kingdom had been received from the over-seas dominions and possessions, and over one-third of the exports of the kingdom had been sent to them. This total import and export trade for 1911 represented four hundred million pounds sterling. A Stupendous Trade. To this of course must be added, when one was trying to estimate the r:agnitude of the interests represented in that assembly, the very large trade which passed between the dominions themselves, amounting to almost seventy millions more. These were stupendous figures, and the inference was plain that the deliberations upon which they were about to enter must have the greatest weight with those who were called upon to guide the various parts of the empire. It was in the belief that these deliberations would be undertaken with a full sense not only of the vast interests they represented, but of the enormous responsibilities which the proper management of those interests in volved, that he ventured on behalf o the Government, of the community and of the country to bid them hearty welcome, and to wish them all prosperity and success in the great work upon which they had embarked.

An Important Body. Lord Desborough, in his presidential address, concluded by dwelling upon the importance of such a body as a British Imperial Council of Commerce, assisting statesmen in dealing with the business requirements of the empire

RAISE SALARIES FIRST

Superintendent Grant Says This is Huch More Pressing Expenditure.

Edmonton, June 11 .- Ten superintendents will be named by the general assembly at the present session to supervise the work in the new disricts. A decision to take this step was reached by the delegates this afternoon. Almost a dozen delegates f the west protested that the number was quite insufficient for the needs of the great undertaking, and arged that there should be a large increase. Overtures were presented from several Presbyteries on the subect, and in these it was intimated that in the judgment of the Presbyeries from thirty to forty men were

No More Than Ten. Rev. Dr. A. S. Grant, the general uperintendent, was deaf to the apeals, saying that there was no proision in the budget for more than en. There was determination, he said, in the church, that the present low and inadequate salaries of the ainisters must be increased, and this would be done. If this task was uniertaken it would be impossible, in is judgment, to set apart more than en men for this work of supervision. t is possible in view of this decision that several of the Presbyteries will andertake to raise money in their own idst and engage pastors at large to eet the need. A most pleasing event of the day's roceedings was the arrival of three representatives of the Methodist Conference of Alberta, bearing the greet-ings of this body. As a result of the unanimous decision of the church union question by the assembly yesterday, it appeared as though the isitors entered on a new footing and the welcome extended to them cerainly lacked nothing in the way of

Colonial Drapery Fabrics Good Taste With Economy

We would be pleased to offer suggestions for the new home in Lace Curtains and Draperies, or match them to your earpets and wall decorations

For the many new homes to be furnished this June we are prepared to offer suggestions or carry out your own individual ideas in modern decorations, and are pleased to state that for the first time this season we are in a position to complete and deliver work on short notice.

"COLONIAL"-A fine old word, aptly chosen for our drapery fabrics. With it comes the simple artistic atmosphere of the home of a century ago. To see the welcome with which these Colonial tendencies are received in modern homes is refreshing.

With "COLONIAL DRAPERY FARRICS" homes are made less of a "show place" and more of an abode in which every appointment is primarily considered with a view to comfort, restiulness and refinement.

A quick impression of what is meant by these words-comfort, restfulness and refinement—is received upon entering a home in which "Colonial Drapery Fabrics" have been used for hangings, window seats, pillows, chair covers, scrims, utility boxes and other accessories. They bring personality into these rooms— a real personality entirely typical of the presiding genius of the home. Extensive displays of "Colonial Drapery Fabrics" are being featured this month in Drapery Section, Fourth Floor

WOULD BE JUSTIFIED

Vancouver Presents Request to Government for Spanning of Seymour Narrows.

Ottawa, Ont., June 11. - A request for a bridge across a piece of the Pacific Ocean was presented to Premier Borden and other members of his Government today. F. H. Sheppard, M. P., of Nanaimo; Ald. Cuthbert Beaumont, Boggs, and C. H. Lugmir formed the deputation. They asked the Government to build a bridge across the Seymour Narrows, and thus connect Vancouver Island and the city of Victoria with the mainland by rail They pointed out that although the plans for a bridge had not been prepared for the place, it was known that the waters could be spanned a structure. Though the cost would b considerable, in the vicinity of $20, 000,000, the benefits which ould ac crue to Canada would justify the ex penditure. If the construction of the Quebec bridge was warranted, Government was amply justified in undertaking this work, The Government of British Columoia has already provided for a railroad, which would connect the bridge with the three transcontinental lines the Canadian Pacific, the Grand Frunk Pacific, and the Canadian Northern, on the Island of Vancouver, There would be easy connection rail with the Victoria and other island points. Consideration was promised for the request.

FIELDING AMPLY VINDICATED

There never was a more unfounded charge against a public man than that levelled against the Hon. Mr. Fielding in connection with the granting of the charter to the Farmers' Bank. These accusations throw discredit only upon those who made them.

:The evidence given by Mr. Fielding before Chief Justice Meredith completely vindicates him and shows that his conduct throughout the whole transaction was just and proper, and exactly what it should have been. Take a few extracts from his evi-

"The requirements of the law had been met. There was no charge to the contrary. Mr. Travers, then regarded as a reputable man, had presented a statement, accompanied by a sworn affidavit, that the required capital had been subscribed honestly and properly. There remained nothing for me to do but to recommend the treasury board to issue the certificate. This I did."

At this point let it not be forgotten that the irregularity with regard to the capital on which the certificate was Assued had nothing to do with the failure of the bank. It was in no sense

Sir Edward Clouston wrote after the charter had been granted, and at this time Mr. Travers had as good a right It is very important not to forget Mr. Mail and Empire, tells Ontario electors Fielding's statement:

"I was so anxious from the first that this bank should not go ahead that I would have welcomed any-McCarthy letter had been withdrawn, I dismissed it from the case. and I had only before me the sworn statement of Mr. Travers, then a reputable man, that the stock had ers had, therefore, qualified his bank for a certificate as well as any other bank had done. If we had withheld the certificate we would have been accused of treating this bank dif ferently from the manner in which other banks had been treated, and of having turned down the farmers and favored the capitalists, who had been granted charters with exactly the same qualifications."

Mr. Fielding was asked if an incestigation could not have been held In compliance with Sir Edward Clous-His answer, as always. If the Bankers' Association had knowledge that the capital was fraudulently subscribed, it was their duty to have refused the Farmers' Bank admission to the clearing house."

Could any defence be more complete? Yss; he drives it home even

"Mr. Henderson, M. They did not do so, and I am convinced, in spite of what they now say, that, while they disliked I did, they had no knowledge which would have warranted the withholding of the certificate."

Mr. Fielding adds later: "The failure was in no way due to prove that it is wholly impracticable, the irregularity in the paid-up capital to qualify for certificate; on the contrary, there was afterwards ample capital paid in to qualify and conduct the bank, and there was no reason for its failing if it had been wisely and honestly administered."

Hon, Mr. Fielding's defence could not be more complete. He could not have done anything else. Sir Edmund Osler, member of Parliament, and 000 to $70,000,000. "Though his (Mr. Rowell's) abolish-the-bar campaign will not serve political ambition, his labor in that behalf will not be lost. Should he succeed in developing opinion to the point of demanding that the bar be abolished, Sir James Whitney's Government, always keeping pace with public opinion and always responsive to it, will effect the reform."

That is to say, the measure of Sir lames Whitney's temperance reforms will be exactly the measure of the support given to Mr. Rowell by the electors. If Sir James' majority is greatly reduced in the next election "We wrote Sir Edward Sir James will take it as a hint that na! to the Government to stand pat. THE DECAY OF SATIRE

(By Special Arrangement With the Winnipeg Telegram.]

One of the branches of literature that has had little recognition since the eighteenth century of the department of satire. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries Satire was queen ooth in prose and poetry. Dryden and Swift, Pope and Johnson, to say nothng of a swarm of lesser lights whose names have nearly all been enshrined like flies in the amber of the Dunciad prought this form to the height of perfection. It is true that Byron whetted his glittering knife and gave Englishmen of the early nineteenth century some shrewd thrusts, but among the later poets of the century we search in vain for a master of the art. Lowell in the "Bigelow Papers" did some cutting and slashing, but the eccentricities of his dialectic medium did much to soften the force of his

Satiric poetry is fitted for the persal of a prosaic age. Our poets in this present year of grace are accus omed to lament the popular distaste or verse. But if they were to restore the art of Dryden and Pope, and apply to contemporary politics and social restions the mordant wit of the ersifying critic would there not be an avid desire on the part of the public to ourchase their wares? The eager inerest that was shown a few months age in William Watson's satire on the cman with the serpent tongue proved now keen is the human appetite for tabasco sauce in rhyme. The field of pelitics today in Canada, and elsewhere, offers just as ample an opportunity as in the days of Rochester and Shaftesbury, to whom Dryden gave Raindrops are pattering, lull thee to immortality of an unenviable kind. Can it be that our silent Drydens and Swifts are restrained from attacking their aversions by the law of libel, which bears down more heavily today pon editors and literary men than it did in the days of the Restoration or of good Queen Anne? There is some freedom left to the satirist, however, and there are still sins and sinners to

My thought has been turned into this channel because of the republicaion of Dryden's famous political atire. "Absalom and Achitophel," by the Clarendon Press. The editor is hanging around that Hamilton ball Mr. W. D. Christie, whose work has grounds, been revised for this fifth edition by Mr. C. H. Firth. The scholarly introduction and notes to this great satire are all that could be desired people have to contribute large sums to As so many of the allusions are now innumerable burglars, pick- cbscure, the text of the poem has to be plentifully helped out with explanations, but despite its antiquated politics nothing can make this master-

For merciless satire, however, I have lways thought that Dryden's pen crtrait of his publisher, Tonson, is perhaps as strong as anything he ever wrote. He accused Tonson of paying him in clipped, and in bad money, and one day he sent him by a messenger hese insulting lines with the message:

MATRIMONIAL DIFFERENCES

In trying to adjust the matrimonial difference of an unhappily married couple a judge recently ruled that a husband has a perfect right to swear at and insult his wife all that he likes, and that the fact that he used abusive language to her every time he speaks to her does not constitute any ground for her bringing a legal action against him.

Another judge, in deciding the case of a wife-deserter who had fled a home rendered intolerable by a shrewish wife, punished the man, and asserted that a wife's nagging was no excuse for her husband leaving her.

No doubt these two judges were perfectly correct in their interpretation of the law. No doubt the law does give a husband the privilege of snapping, and snarling, and cursing his wife as much as he pleases. No doubt the law does give a woman the right to fret, and whine, and complain, and harp on her grievances as much as she likes, and to badger a man out of his very soul, but if the law does permit these things it ought to be

The wedding ring itself was adopted in medieval times because it was believed that the circles typified eternity, and gold, purity or preclousness. There is an old superstition still holding tion during the evening, or early in good, that if a wife lost her wedding the morning. Several will probably be ring she would also, lose her husband's The bridegroom's pledge among Anglo-Saxon people, was called a "wed", hence our word "wedding". The betrothal, or "fyancel ring" was of Roman origin, being given to the prospective bride to bind her to her promise. The Quakers and Puritans rejected the use of the ring because of its heathen origin, or "pagan invention", as they termed it. It is said that the Irish peasantry have an impression that a marriage without the use of a gold ring is not legal, and as many of them could ill afford to buy one for the bride-elect, an enterprising merchant, in some districts at least used to keep wedding rings for hire these to be returned after the ceremory. When he found it necessary to steal his bride, the missles hurled after the departing pair by the angry parents are recalled y the slippers now thrown after them. The Babylonians bought their wives at public auction, and it is interesting to learn that they paid but half price In the Muscovite provinces the father of the bride gives her a light blow with a whip on the wedding day, and then passes it to the groom for future ese. Among the Javanese the wedding ceremony begins with an elaborate procession, the bridegroom fancifully dressed, marching at the head, accompanied by much loud music. The bride stands waiting at the door of her home near a tub of water. When the groom approaches she kneels and washes his feet, after which he carries her off to is home. "Oh, yes, you can," cried Edith, who would hear no denial as she ran swiftly toward the door.

CHAPTER IV. Miss Mittord's intervention.
The Captain stared after her departing figure; he listened to her footfalls on the stairs, and then came to an instant resolution. He would take advantage of her opportune withdrawal. He turned back to the table, seized his hat, and started for the door, only to come face to face with another charming young woman, who stood breathless before him, to his great and ill-concealed annoyance. Yet the newcomer was pretty enough and young enough and sweet enough to give any man pause for the sheer pleasure of looking at her, to say nothing of speak The resources of an ancient wardrobe.

Noted Stage Beauty Says She Was Away on Automobile Trip.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 11.-May 1, 1912. "Where—to Petersburg—to the front?"
"We can't always tell where orders will take us," he said evasively, again sitting down beside her on the iounge.

He could scarcely tear himself away from her, from the delicious yet painful emotion aroused by her presence. He ought to have gone long since, yet he was with her, as he supposed, for the last time. Surely he might induge himself a little. He loved her so desperately, so hopelessly.

"But listen," said the girl; "supposing there were other orders—orders from a higher authority, appointing you to duty here?"

"But world art always tell where orders will take us," he said expectant, looking at nim. She had gone as far as a modest woman might. Now the initiative was his. She could only wait.

"No," said the man at last, by the exercise of the most iron self-control and repression, "you shall not have this against me, too."

New York had enlisted the attention of the police of several cities, stepped in the world have said. And love gave her courage. The frankness of war was in the air. If this man left her now, she might never see him again. She was a woman, but she could not let him go without an effort.

FUNDS FOR THE COLLEGE

Recommendation Was Adopted to Increase Grant to the Sum of $3,300 Per Annum.

Huron Tuesday night, Bishop Williams Church, West London, had been appointed canon of St. Paul's.

The report of the executive committee was discussed, clause by clause, and with two slight amendments was adopted as printed in the convening circular. The total receipts for dioesan purposes, not including special funds, amounted to $13,726 69, an increase of $1,679.21 over the previous ear, and is the largest amount in any year for a long time past. The contributions to Huron College were the largest of any year yet, and the amount contributed for other than dioesan purposes was $20,290.38, also the largest amount. The collections for diocesan funds showed an increase of per cent, over last year. During the past year $7,142.18 was paid to the widows and children of deeased clergymen. The widows' and orphans' fund is now larger than ever before, amounting to $76,726.94. The commutation fund, which assists the superannuated clergy and those clergymen of more than fifteen years' ervice whose incomes do not reach $900 per annum, amounts to $7,665.80 each year.
