Had the Anarchist for His Crime.

SLEW THE EMPRESS OF AUSTRIA AS AN EXAMPLE—DETAILS OF THE AFFAIR.

va, Switzerland, Sept. 12.-Fur Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 12.—Further details of the assassination of the Empress of Austria show that Her Majesty was walking from her hotel to the landing place of the steamer about one o'clock, when an Italian Anarchist suddenly approached and stabled her to the heart. The Empress fell, got up again, and was carried to the steamer aneonscious. The boat started, but seeing the Empress had not recovered consciousness, the captain returned, and the Empress was carried to the Hotel Beaurivago, where she expired. The murderer is a man named Lucchoni. He was born in Paris, of Italian parentage.

Management of this Affairs.

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 12—A writhus been issued on behalf of D. Slawson, a wealthy farmer, of Blenheim township, against Alex. C. Misner, of Blenheim township, against Alex. C. Misner, of Blenheim, and Elizabeth J. Beale, of Brantford, the plaintiff's sister, claiming $5,000 damages for alleged con spiacy. The action promises to be of more than usual interest.

In May, 1897, Misner presented a petition to the High Court at Osgoode hall to have it declared that the plaintiff was of unsound mind at that time. After the matter had come up three or four times Misner withdrew the petition, which had been presented by his solicitor. Thomas Brown, of Norwich, it appears that Misner had been dealing with Slawson's property for some time, selling the stock and acting as business manager generally for the estate. After the petition was presented to the High Court the old man was examined by three Woodstock doctors, all of whom declared him to be perfectly sane. He was at that time a pachelor, but has since married.

The plaintiff's claim is for $5,000 damages against the defendants for maliciously presenting the petition to have the plaintiff declared a lunatic, and for conspiracy to deprive the plaintiff of his liberty and of the management of his affairs; also against the defendant, Misner, for an account of his dealings with the plaintiff's property.

The case will come up lefor Chief Justice Meredith in December next.

DOG WANTED TO SWEAR.

Let Events Take Their Course.

John Crittenden Watson does not belong to the list of "cussing officers," yet as a man-o'-war skipper he never had a man of his ship's company aft for swearing. He was singularly indulgent of the hard swearers forward.

"Hard language helps a man along occasionally," he has been known to may to one of his shock officers upon overhearing a stream of maledictions from the lips of some old flat foot working as a stubborn job forward, "and it is better for the men to work off their wrath over fouled anchor chains in cuss words than to take it out of each other's hide."

Aboard one of the ships under Wat-than to take it out of each other's hids."

Aboard one of the ships under Watson's command there was an old boa'n's mate named Fuller, who had the call throughout the whole navy as the champion profiame man of the government's line of packets. Fuller never raised his voice when he swore. He would simply stand back and quietly regard the inanimate object of his wrath—a bent belaying pin perhaps or a slack ridge rope—and then he would open up in an ordinary conversational tone. But the utterances he gave vent to were sulphurous. It always took Fuller a good five minutes to work off what he considered the necessary number of remarks on such occasions, and it always seemed, when he was through, that he had quite exhausted the whole vocebulary of profamity. But this was a mistake. The very next time anything went wrong with a bit of Fuller's gear he would start in on a new line that would contain absolutely not a single repetition of any of his previous performances. It was always a source of wonder to Fullwas always and the profiam and the profiam always and the profiam a with a bit of Fuller's gear he would start in on a new line that would contain absolutely not a single repetition of any of his previous performances. It was always a source of wonder to Fuller's shipmates, even the old timers, where he picked up the new ones, all of which were of startling originality and force.

These shipmates related only one instance in which he found himself at a loss for words. He was with a landing party from his ship, marching on the outskirts of Chemulpo, Korea. He stubbed his toe on a loose bowleter in the road and fell on his face in the dust. He picked himself up and looked at the read. He opened his mouth to say something, but he had no words. He was dumb with wrath. Two or three times dumb with wrath. Two or three times he attempted to begin, but it was no go. He was stuck for once, so he pelled out a pistel and deliberately fired it into the sir five times. He had to express his feelings in some way.

When Puller was serving aboard Watson's ship, he was in good shape, and his frequent quiet outbursts kept the forward part of the ship keyed up with wender as to what was coming next. One morning at big gun drill Captain Watson himself was experintending the carefuse. One of the wooden carefidges became jammed in the breech of the 6 than ride to which he was devoting most of his attention. He wouldn't permit any of the gunner's maste around him to attempt to lose in streams, but he persisted in trying to loseen the stuck cartridge. He looked as if he would like to may a heap were he a swearing man, but he wasn't a swearing man, but he wasn't as wearing man be he had been working for five minutes over the jammed cartridge with no success, he looked as if he would like to may a heap were he a swearing man, but he wasn't as wearing man be hed been working for five minutes over the jammed cartridge with no success, he looked as if he would like to may a heap were he as wearing man looked at the fu and Watson retreated to the star side of the quarter deck. Fuller side of the quarter deck. Fuller made two or three claws at the wooden carridge, but it wouldn't come out. A gunner's mate could have got it out in a jiffy, but Fuller wasn't in that line of the service. He tugged away, but it was no go. Watson stood regarding the horizon on the starboard side of the quarter deck. Fuller spat on his hands and made one more try. The dummy didn't move a tenth of an inch. Then Fuller mopped his cap on the back of his bead and opened up. It was great york, this performance of Fuller's, and no mistake. He eclipsed all of his former efforts. He stood with his hands on his sides, looking at the gun breech and saying things at it that no Morgan or Kidd or Teach or other heaven defying pirate could ever have equaled. The

SLICK PETE'S WATCH DEAL.

Beoght Them at $2.15 Each and Sold Them to Swindlers For Sic Appear.

An old time detective the other day was discussing with some sleuths new in the profession the methods of up to date swindlers. After deprecating the criginality of the modern crook he told of what he considered the sharpest game he ever saw worked.

"I suppose you fellows know," he said, "that during Centennial year Philadelphia was a hotbed of bunko steerers and sharpers of every description. Well, I was detailed to keep an eye on these gentry, and in time I became acquainted with most of the 'big ones,' who were generally exceedingly bright men. One in particular, who was known as 'Slick Pete,' I took a great liking to, for he had an inexhaustible fund of humor and was a good hearted chap. Toward the end, of the Centennial exhibition one day I dropped into a down town suction room where some fake jewelry was being sold. A lot of watches were offered, and I saw that they had been made evidently for bunko steering purposes, for the works were good, and the carse were made to look like solid gold. They were finally knocked down for $2.15 apiece, and I saw that the buyer was 'Slick Pete,' Jewelry was out of his line, but I knew he had some scheme in view. Two months passed before I again saw Pete, and then I asked him what he had done with the watches. He began to laugh and said, 'Oh, skinned some swindler with them!' Then followed the explanation. He had hired a room and inserted an advertisement in various papers something like this: 'Found—A solid gold watch; Elgin works; loser pay costs. Apply, etc.' Nearly every crook in town answered the ad, and claimed the watch. Pete, who made up as an old man, seemed a mark, and the 'fip' crook, in the hurry to depart, made but a cursory examination. 'The costa,' $10, were invariably handed over, and in two days Pete had disposed of his stock.'—Philadelphia Record.

Wartime Reminiscences of a Veteran of the Civil War.

"Men build fires in various places to cook their coffee by or to make themselves warm or for company's aske," said a civil war veteran, "and any fire is likely to be more or less a gathering point, but I suppose that the fire to which the name of campfire properly belongs, the campfire of song and story, is the cock's fire at the end of the company street, built on the ground, under a pole supported at the ends by crotched sticks, driven in the earth and from which the camp kettles are suspended. This was the gathering point of the

This was the gathering point of the company.

"Men did not always stand about the campfire. It depended upon circumstances and on the weather. They met here, of course, at mealtimes, and there were times when men would stand around the fire and smoke and talk, and then it might be that the men would keep their tents, playing cards or smoking there, or mending their clothes, or polishing up their accountments, so that there were times when the fire was quite deserted or when perhaps there might be seem there a selitary figure, a man who had come to light his pipe.

"But, though it might be deserted, the fire still burned. Sometimes on cold and windy nights the wind would blow it about and scatter it, and sometimes, when it was no longer attended, the rain would put if out black, but there was usually a living fire there by day and a bed of embers by night, and here was the soldier's hearthstone."— Parrote Are Never Original.

I have read of a father who would not let his children tell their dreams because there is in such narrative too great temptation te wander from the truth. Parrot stories are too often like dream stories—one-half true, and they are sometimes; plainly to any who knows the true talking power of these birds—made up antirely or greatly exaggerated. While the parrot has a certain unmistakable sense of humor, and is correspondingly wiss, none of the various species is or ever was capable of the original wise and witty talk familiar to us in newspaper aneodotes.

In fact, the parrot is never original in speech. It is altogether imitative, and a bird that has never heard spoken would Gain Thirty Millions a Year by Prohibition.

Another way, as the cookery books say, is to employ the bamboo as a fork with a cobra pinned to the far end. An application of the cobra to the sleeping body of an enemy is all that is necessary.—London Tit-Bits.

The Rev. J. J. Ross preached las consequently the temperance people themselves buried it at the first opportunity.

The present proposal was aiming at the prohibition of three things: the manufacture, importation and sale of intoracting beverages.

One argument extensively urged against the measure was the loss of revenue. But while ten million dollars were turned into the government in revenue, forty millions were taken out in order to enforce observance of the law. Therefore the country would be really ahead by doing away with the liquor traffic.

Another argument was that it would throw so many out of employment. According to the amount invested in the liquor business compared with others such as boots and shoes, etc., there was less ishor used in propertion to the capital invested than in any of these other lines. The law would have this benefit if passed. The earnings of the workingmen instead of going into the hands of the liquor men would be distributed among the various other businesses and afford vast benefit to the community. Lastly, leaving the financial question out altogether, everyone should vote of prohibition, argued Mr. Ross, on account of its vast moral influence for good on the people. FIRE AT TILBURY.
Yesterday morning between 11 and 12 o'clock the residence owned by A. Masse, of Dover, and occupied by J. K. Magee, on St. Clair street, Tilbury, was discovered to be on fire and but for the timely arrival of the fire brigade would have been a total loss. As it was the loss will reach nearly $300. The fire started in the back part of the house and is supposed to have originated from the kitchen stove which was left burning while the family were at hurch. The loss is fully covered with insurance.

Bow the Insurgents Treat Them—Trouble for the Americans Ahead.

Mamila, Sept 12.—Santa Cruz, the last position held by the Spaniards on Manila. Bay, has been taken by the insurgents, who followed up their success by recking venigeance upon some of the priests of that section. This took the form of requiring the priests to "do penance" by standing on the roadside for many hours. A story comes from like, in the northern part of the Island of Luron, about the cruel treatment of a Spanish bishop by rebel sympathizers. (The prelate was beagen with clubs and compelled to disclose the hiding place of the money belonging to the church. (That the insurgent leader is bent upon mischief becomes daily more apparent; Aguinaldo has called a congress of island representatives for Oct. 15th, to decide on their policy. As he appoints most of the delegates, he will practically be a dictator.

And a light, pretty little figure glided in, dressed in somewhat shabby mourning. Major Essex sat by the window, looking absently out into the street, but as the work girl attempted to remove the fur wrapping from Mrs. Colonel Changhley's neck a pin at her wrist caught in the widow's lace collar. "You awkward, clumsy thing!" almost screamed Mrs. Colonel Changhley, and then she checked herself abrupily; remembering the presence of Major Essential Changhley.

And Mrs. Changhley wished she had not insisted on Major Essex's company during the fur seeking expedition.

He went, as soon as he had reason to suppose business hours were over, to the place named by Mr. Minx, but his expedition was in vain. Miss Dayton was set at home.

dition was in vain. Miss Dayton was out at home.
"Home," what a contrast was this to the cool verands and wide halls of Dayton's place. Essex's heart sank within him as he looked round at the carpetless floors and rickety stairs of the third rate boarding house.

Half an hoar later he was sitting in his private parlor at the De L'Orme hotel smoking a meditative cigar when the waiter knocked at the door and ushered in a slender figure in black. Essex flung his cigar into the fire and aprang up with a glad countenance.

"Estelled I have been to your house to find you, but without success."
"We worked late tonight," she said quietly, "and the late hours and constant confinement are killing me. Major Essex, I have a favor to ask of you for the sake of old times."
He had drawn forward a chair for her, into which she wearily sank.
"It is already granted, Estelle."

Mrs. Colonel Changhley was highly scandalized at the whole affair and positively declined to attend the wedding or visit the bride, but Mrs. Major Essex somehow has contrived to survive her neglect and has grown fairer than ever in the sunshine of her husband's love, and the shadows through which she has passed only added new brightness to her present life.—Exchange.

AFTER YEARS.

Ferdinand Essex after a moment or two of grave observation, "that /you're about old enough to leave off playing with dolls."

"Playing with dolls, indeed!" echo Estelle, drawing herself up, with this nite scorn expressed in the gracely curves of her lissome shape. "I playing with dolls!"

"Well, what are you doing, then?"

"Well, what are you doing, then?"
"Why, I am dressing 15 of them for the church fair!" and Estelle held up one completed fairy, gorgeous in piak crape and spangles, with a floating sush and ends of gause ribbon.
"The church fair!" said Major Essex, curling his lip. "Of all absurd nonsense, devised to stir up quarrels among the womankind and rob the men by wholesale, that is the most ridiculous!"

"Going! No, I should rather think not."

"Why?"

"Haven't I just told yon? Because I disapprove of the whole thing."

"Major Essex," said Estelle, her voice quivering with indignation and two vivid scarlet spots starting out upon her cheeks, "I do believe it is just as Annt Marion says!"

"And what does Annt Marion say?" demanded Essex, rather amused.

"She says that you are getting to be a selfish, narrow minded old bachelor!"

"I can't be so very old. I am not 30 until the New Year!" pleaded Essex.

"I call that very old indeed," said Estelle haughtily. "And she says you are settling down into a set groove of thought and feeling, and unless!"

"Stop, stop," said the major, whimsically arching his eyobrows. "Don't give too heavy doses of bitter medicine, Estelle. I'we heard quite enough for the present."

"Estelle Dayton!"

"Oh, Major Essex, is it you?"

Estelle colored and then grew pale—the snowy little circlet of fur dropped from her fingers to the floor.

"Miss Dayton—if you please!" began Mr. Mink of the firm of Mink & Furtail. And Estelle, catching up the ermine collar, murmured a word or two of spology and escaped from the room.

"So you're acquainted with the young woman!" said Mrs. Colonel Changhley a little superciliously.

"The young lady's father," said Essex coldly, "was one of my oldest friends and one of the wealthiest citizens of Florida before this unhappy war desolated all ranks of life. Mr. Mink, will you oblige me with Miss Dayton's

"You believe it?"
"Yes, I do," nodded Estelle emphat-

The major watched her with languid, half closed eyes.

"I am not crying." flashed Estelle, and to hide she bright, gathering drops she caught up all the pile of dolls, satin, tarlatan and glittering ribbon into her trock and darted out of the room like an arrow.

"The little firefly," laughed Major Essex. "But I'll make it up with her yet. Stells and I mustn't part unreconciled. As for Aune Marion, who has such a very derogatory opinion of me, it's hardly worth my while to attempt to undeceive her."

And Major Essex dragged the chintz cushions into a heap directly undermeath his head and composed himself for a counfortable nap before dinner.

When the next week came, he packed his valies as monchalantly as if he were going to Baltimore or Philadelphia and started for Calcutta, and when he returned the south had passed through the terrible pangs of war. He went to the old Dayton place. The relvet lawn was plowed up and planted in rice. The orange grove, where the mocking birds used to sing their merry roundelays, lay leveled to the ground, and only a rainous stone chimney, half overgrown with a rank poison vine, remained of the hospitable old mansion.

For a moment Essex gave way to matural emotions. He sat down on the ruined doorstep and wept.

And then he went hack to Baltimore, where his home was to be for the future, all efforts to discover any trace of the

FARM'S GARDEN

ITALIAN BEES.

Recognize Them by the Mar of the Worker Bee.

Those who are unacquainted with Italians are often desirous to know how they can be recognized. Dv. C. C. Miller explains the matter in National Brockman and Farmer, with the aid of a cut showing the abdomen of a worker:

Beas don't have a framework of homes inside, like dogs or horses, but a hony case outside, made of a hard substance called chitfne. The abdomen has fur its covering several bands of this chitinous substance so jointed as to move freely one upon the other, belescope fashion.

nove freely one space of the serings of bankion. In the common black bee these rings or bands are black. In the Italian worker the first three bands, A, B and C, are yellow. The first band, A, is small and does not show so distinctly in the liv-

ABDOMEN OF WORKER BER.

Ing specimen as in the enlarged picture. If the bee is filled with boney, the bands all show more plaintly, and if the bee is crawling up a pane of glass in the window it looks somewhat transparent where the yellow bands are. If very sungty, as in the case of a dead bee, you may not notice the yellow bands.

These bands are not uniform in appearance. The front part of each of the three bands are a not uniform in appearance. The front part of each of the three bands, as at A. B and C, is a distinct yellow, the other part, as at J K, less so, because this part is covered with a kind of hair or feathers. These hairs or feathers are sometimes rubbed off, as in the case of robbers or diseased bees, and then all the bands of an Italian bee will be a shining black.

By selection in breeding bees have been produced that have more than three bands. Five banded bees are quite common in America, for this increase of yellow bands has been made in this country, and some bees have the abdomesh yellow to the very tip.

The Petate Field.

During the grain harvest the potate field is apt to be neglected. This was had enough in the days when weeds were the only enemies to be feared. Since the potato beetle has become common, there should never a day pass when some one does not go through the field and destroy all the larve in sight. It is easy to see by examining the leaves whether eggs are numerons. If they are not, hand picking of beetles will suffice. A does of poison applied, diluted with water at the rate of a teaspoonful of the poison to a pail of water, will kill the larve to soon as they get to work and prevent most of the damage. It is very difficult to have this done so promptly that part at least of the hills will not be stripped before the poison is applied. But in harvest time there are several hours of 'aylight early in the morning, when dew will prevent desing much in the harvest field. If this makes too many hours' work per day, take a longer nooning. If the grain harvest and the care of potatoes conflict, most farmers will be wise in giving the preference in care to the crop that is most profitable, and, concludes The American Oultivator, is takes several acree of grain to equal in value a large potato crop on one acre.

Much has been heard of peach "leaf con!" this year, resports of its prevalence coming from various parts of the country. The leaves become thickned, puffed, blistered with a whitish bloom; small areas are often much arched and reddish in color. This fungus appears to flourish during cool, rainy weather. Investigators of the disease point out its conincidence with frequent showers and low temperatures during April and May. Although the trees appear quickly to recover from an a wack of leaf curl, yet they carry the disease over to the meaning season, when it is likely to break out again. Professor Selby of Ohio notes what he calls the "cumulative effect" of spraying for leaf curl. He finds that two applications of bordeaux mixture in a season favorable is leaf curl will unfliciently prevent the disease to enable the tree to carry a crop of fruit without very great loss through dropping, and thorough spraying the preceding season is even more effective in the prevention of leaf curl than dering the season of its cocurrence. Some varieties are reported more susceptible to leaf ourl than others. Among these are Mountain Rose. Oldmixon, Globs, Elberta, Scott's Nonpareil and Red Cheek.

WHAT THE MATTER WAS.

A minister's widow talls this:

"My husband," she said, "had brown syes that turned deeply, darkly black when he was angry, and which danced with most miraculous merciment when he was amused. Naturally, in the course of a long life with him, I came to know the varying expression of those eyes pretty well. I used to watch his eyes when he was preaching to know how things were going with him and, incidentally, with the congregation. I remember once in the midst of a most earnest discourse to have seen him stop suddenly for the space of a minute, not more, his eyes growing strangely black, then brightening again with that irresistible twinkle, though the rest of his features remained quite grave throughout. As I said, it was only for a moment; then he resumed his sermon as before:

"What was the matter?" I asked when church was out and we were on our way home.

""Why, I came so near laughing out in church that there was no fun in it," he said. "Of course the choir is hidden from the congregation behind its protecting screen in the rear of the church, but it chances to be exactly in my line of vision as I stand on the rostrum. When I stopped in my sermon today, it was because I happened to glance choirward and saw our new soprano and new tenor having a quiet game of cards behind the screen. They must have felt my gase upon them, for when they looked up and caught my eye those oards disappeared so suddenly and mysteriously I thought that in spite of everything I should burst out laughing."

Unique Manual of Arms Prepared by "Extra Billy."

The most remarkable company of soldiers ever drilled in this country fought under "Extra Billy" Smith, twice governor of Virginia. He acquired the nickname through connection with the extensive mill contracts which he had before the war, his charge to the government of "extra work" on his star routes being so frequent and large as to keep the postoffice department in a state of constant ferment.

He was a grand old man of the rough, honest type of "Blue Jeans" Williams, Lincoln, Thurman, Jerry Rusk, Crawford and Jenkins. His education had been sadly neglected, but he owned brains to spare and horse sense enough for three ordinary governors. He drilled his men according to "Extra Billy's Tactics," an unpublished manual of arms.

One day he led his men into a blind lane about a mile long, and arriving at the end could not see his way out except by tearing down fences and going through a wheatfield guarded by an angry farmer with a dangerous looking gun. The objective point was the opposite side of the field. After studying gravely the situation he gave the order, "Dishand, boys, an meet me tomorrer mornin on the tother side of the field whar we aimed to git this evening."—Kansas City Journal.

One of our German-American oftisens related the following incident of the German revolution of 1848:

"We were short of men and had a sit large number of prisoners to look after. That did not worry us as long as we were not moving, but one day we had to make a forced march. The country through which we were to pass was necessary. We had few enough men as it was, and we knew that those prisoners were ready to make a dead run at the first opening.

"Finally a young officer made a brilliant suggestion, and it was promptly carried out. We ripped the suspender buttons from the prisoners' trongers, took away their belts and knew we had them. Their hands were busy after that, and fast running was out of the question. We made the march safely, and I do not believe that even Yankee ingemity could have invented a simpler solution."—New York Tribune.

word spoken against such a traffic of demoralization and infamy, while it would indeed be a bitter memory to have remained stient at this time." Choosing his text from Isaish V. ii, Mr. Larkin, with little introduction, proceeded to debate the issue. It was true, he said, in response to an imaginary elevical objection, that Principal Grant had written a series of letters upon this subject. Principal Grant was a good man, a bright light in the church, but he was not infallible. Signs of his failfibility swere found in these letters whose substance were objections to the working of prohibition. As Daniel O'Connell had said of some English laws—n cach and four could be driven through them. The learned principal was indebted to his imagination for his objections, and it was faced and arguments and interpretage of names that the people must follow in this crisis. What was necessary was adherence to independent conviction.

There was great room for improvement in Canada and even in our own oity. In conversation with a member of our gabie force, the speaker had learned that from 50 to 60 and sometimes 75 men igo out of town every Saturday in an intoxicated condition. This should be a source of regret to every patrick, and many a lurid tragedy was doubtiess besig conacted in our very midst. The modern spirit of industrialismit taboos the salon and men who believe theoretically in the traffic, oppose it as employers of labor. In the world, of industry, there is little prospet for the man who is a patron of the salona. (The smell of whiskey on a young man is his industrial condemnation.

A GOOD STORY.

In illustrating the limitation of literty the speaker told an amosing aneodote. A young man, somewhat under the influence, was travelling along the street in a somewhat irregular manner. In swinging his arms one of them came in forcible contact with the face of a passing citizen and the young man in consequence was sent sprawling to the sidewalk. He rose indignantly.

"I want you to know that this is a free county," he declared thickly, "and I want so interference with my liberty." True, "replied the irrate citizen, "but I want you to understand that your liberty ends where my nose begins."

In concluding Mr. Larkin asked his hearers to banish the traffic of which the prophets had declared in weird and terrific language that the appatite of hell was to be enlarged to suffice for the consumation of the spoils of strong drink.

LOST ONCE AGAIN

But it Took Eleven Innings for the Saints to Win.

m's Hard Luck Follows the St. Thomas Has Won Eight Straight.

(Special to The Planet.) St. Thomas, Sept. 12.—It took eleven innings for the Saints to defeat Chat-ham at Atlantic Park Saturday. The locals took a commanding lead early in the contest, but the Babes batted in the contest, but the Babes batted Kern freely toward the end and tied the score in the eighth. In the eleventh Sheehan got a pass, went to second when Pears got hit by pitcher, and to third while the latter was being retired on Lyons' infield hit. Sheehan crossed the plate a moment later when McCann made a wild pitch. The Saints pilfered bases at will on Catcher Phelps, no less than twelve being stolen, and this in a great measure accounts for the defeat of the Babes. This makes the eighth straight win for the locals, and the cranks are expecting them to land the pennant. In the ninth Sullivan had his finger split and had to retire from the game, Lyons taking his place. It is doubtful if 'Sully' will be in the game again this season. The score:
