His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, will sail for Quebec on the Empress of Britain on October 6th, arriving in Quebec October 11th. This is three weeks later than originally planned. The Government will arrange a fitting reception for His Highness on his arrival at the Ancient Capital.

The British steamer Ben Earn, 2262 tons, went ashore last Sunday night on Half Moon Ledge, off Bacarro Point, 15 miles from Barrington Head, N. S., during a dense fog. It is understood that the steamer is hard and fast on the ledge. She was bound from Sydney to St John with a load of coal.

The Thomson liner Devona, from Middlesboro, which arrived at Quebec Friday night, came by the Straits of Belle Isle which were full of floating ice. The captain reported that he would not have come that way if he had known the conditions were what they were. The Devona is the first vessel through the Straits this summer.

A stoker named Hayward, of the warship Niobe, was taken suddenly ill on Saturday, and expired of heart failure shortly after being taken to the hospital ward. Deceased was an Englishman thirty-four years of age. He joined the Niobe several years ago. His funeral, conducted with military regulations, took place yesterday afternoon.

A spectacular fire occurred at Winnipeg on Sunday morning in the garage of W. Beaur. Thirty-six autos were stored in the building and only four were gotten out before the flames blocked the doors and drove the employees away. Two of the latter were burned, but not seriously. The loss is estimated at a hundred thousand dollars.

Workers clearing the hull of the battleship Maine at Havana are astounded at the extent of the damage done by the explosion. The warship was literally blown to pieces, and in view of the remarkable condition of the hull all plans for raising it must be changed. Heavy steel ribs, bulkheads and decks were crumpled like paper and tossed far out of their original positions.

Dr. Andrew McPhail, the well known author and essayist, was seriously injured in Montreal last Monday night by the explosion of a bottle of aerated water. Glass from the shattered bottle entered both his eyes. The doctor was operated upon at once and a specialist announced that one eye could be saved and that there were grave hopes for saving the other. He intended to leave for P. E. Island when the accident occurred.

Thompson Clark, an Englishman living in Vancouver, and Secretary of the British Columbia Football Association reached Toronto Thursday last after covering 2,300 miles across the continent on a bicycle. He left Vancouver April 4th and followed the Canadian Pacific Railway line, securing the signatures of the mayors of the towns and cities through which he passed. He earned money for his subsistence by selling post cards. Thompson will wheel to Montreal, take steamer for England, and cycle to London and the Glasgow exhibition.

The Imperial Conference in London was occupied on the 14th with questions relating to Imperial Citizenship. A resolution was adopted in favor of Imperial Naturalization under an act open to adoption by the Dominions, with a view to securing uniformity in the recognition everywhere of British subjects. Resolutions were also adopted in favor of uniformity through out the British Empire in the Law of Accident Compensation and for reciprocal action regarding the deportation of undesirable aliens.

While the aeroplanes took wing early on Sunday from the aviation field at Vienne, France, on the first stage of the European Circuit race, two of the aviators, almost immediately after start, met with tragic deaths. One was killed later, and one more was seriously injured. Of the dead, Capt. Princeaux's motor exploded in mid air, flooding him with gasoline and burning him to death. La Martin dashed against a tree, the motor of the aeroplane crushing his head. Leudron was burned to death near the Chateau Thierry. The engine in reservoir exploded and the machine was consumed.

After a telegraphic hunt lasting several weeks, Castro, the former President of Venezuela, was recently located on the steamship "Consul Grostuck," an obsolete gunboat, formerly owned by the Italian Government, and lately at the Port De Paix Hayti. He was undoubtedly on the way to Venezuela to stir up a revolution. The State Department there are taking steps to thwart his plans.

Reforms immediately affecting millions of dollars worth of foreign property in Mexico were announced Friday. Governor Gonzalez declared that under the new regime foreign concessions, which might be regarded as monopolies, would not be extended or renewed and that every legal effort would be made to restrict the foreign monopolies now existing in Chihuahua, one of the richest states in minerals and timber. The properties referred to are largely controlled by American, British and German interests. Americans are the largest holders.

An order for the foreclosure of the Eastern Coal Company, whose property is at McCann, Cumberland County, N. S., was granted on the 15th. The sum of $250,000 was issued in bonds, on which the interest has been defaulted. The National Trust Company were trustees under the mortgage. The property, in which a number of wealthy Toronto men are interested, will be sold about the end of July. A large amount of money has been expended in the manager's house and surface equipment of the mine, but the seam of the coal did not materialize as expected, or the shaft was sunk in the wrong place.

Advices of the 18th from Washington have this to say about reciprocity: The Canadian reciprocity bill now has sixty votes in United States Senate according to the White House count. The Root Amendment will be killed by a comfortable majority, men who have studied the situation say. The President expects a long debate on the bill, and perhaps some serious discussion on the Root amendment, but he has expressed the conviction that a combination of Republicans and Democrats will defeat the amendment and that two-thirds of the Senate will vote for the bill itself.

The Imperial Conference, London, Friday afternoon discussed the motion by Sir Joseph Ward for the establishment of a chain of state owned wireless telegraph stations throughout the Empire. The conference agreed to the proposal of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, supported by Sir Edward Grey to negotiate with foreign governments with view to securing to the overseas Dominions the right to withdraw from any commercial treaty without impairing such treaty with respect to the remainder of the Empire. It also agreed to Sir Wilfrid's proposal to appoint Royal Commission to visit the overseas Dominions and report on the trade and resources and best methods for their development. At a subsequent meeting Sir Joseph Ward's motion regarding wireless stations was passed.

On Sunday last two young priests, natives of this diocese, recently ordained at the Grand Seminary, St. Paul Minn., celebrated their first Masses in their respective native parishes in this Province. One is Rev. Louis McBry, son of Mr. Francis McBry, of this city, who was ordained for the diocese of St. Paul. He celebrated Solemn High Mass in St. Dunstan's Cathedral, assisted by Rev. J. F. Johnston as deacon, Rev. John B. McIntyre as sub deacon, and Rev. Dr. McLellan as Master of Ceremonies. The sermon of the occasion was preached by Rev. J. F. Johnston, and was a learned and eloquent discourse. His text was from the 109th Psalm, 4th verse: "The Lord hath sworn, and He will not repent: Thou art a priest forever according to the order of Melchisedek." After Mass the young priest bestowed his blessing on those present. The other newly ordained priest mentioned, who celebrated his first Mass on Sunday was Rev. Peter F. McDonald, son of Mr. James McDonald, West St. Peter's. The solemn service was in St. Andrew's, his native parish church. It was a Solemn High Mass, and the young celebrant was assisted by Rev. M. J. Smith as deacon, Rev. Pius McDonald as sub-deacon, and Rev. A. P. McLellan, P. P., as Master of Ceremonies. The other priests in attendance in the Sanctuary were Rev. R. B. McDonald, Sornis, and Rev. James Aneas McDonald, St. Columba, East Point. The sermon of the occasion was preached by Rev. R. B. McDonald. It was a learned and eloquent exposition of the nature and dignity of the priesthood. After Mass, a number of the young priest's fellow parishioners waited on him and presented him with an address and a purse. Father McDonald suitably replied to the expressions contained in the address. He has been ordained for the diocese of Helena, Montana, and will depart for his chosen field of labor in a few weeks. Police Raid Stocktakers.

Toronto, June 15. — Charged with fraudulent use of the mails, Thomas Barrett, a young man about 32 years old, was arrested this morning when Detective Wallace raided the office of the Mutual Brokerage Co. in the Dineen building.

The Mutual Brokerage Company incorporated, have had their head office in Toronto for only two months or so. Previously they have had their office at 77 Broad Street, New York, but they were forced to get out of there, as the police got too inquisitive. The police have been receiving complaints during the past few days and started to investigate. According to Inspector of Detectives Duncan, the firm sold stocks on the installment plan. There are said to be scores of victims, mostly women. "One of the most colossal swindles that we have ever run up against," said Inspector Duncan. "We got a wagon load of papers and letters when we raided the place, and the firm must have got thousands of dollars that way."

The Dream-House.

The wedding was in chrysanthemum time, and the yellow bloom seemed signify of golden success. At the very last, the bride, cheeks aflame, and eyes sparkling, whispered to her mother:

"I won't be long, Dick can do anything he sets himself to. In three years—maybe in two—I'll be writing, 'Our house is begun, and we are nearly ready for you and father to come and live with us. You had better start packing, so you won't be hurried.'"

It was easy to see where Jenny had got her bump of hope. The mother's eyes were as bright as the daughter's, and her thin cheek nearly as pink, while she said, under her breath, "Two years won't seem so long with the house standing at the end of the way."

"They will just fly!" declared Jenny, her fingers caressing the gold blossom she held. As the wagon turned in the high-road, bearing the bride and bridegroom to the depot on their way to Kansas, Jenny's father privately reflected that at least five or six winters would pass before "mother" would think about packing.

There is no such thing as luck, it is said. A man falls down or wins out by the measure of his fight. But when a half hundred horses are grazing under like conditions, and it is the poor fellow's horse that puts a foot into prairie dog hole and must be shot just about second plowing time.

Jenny Gray did not try to solve a problem so abstract. Their first spring in Kansas, when Dick told her about Ludyard's fate, she put her arm around her husband's neck and said: "We'll get along all right without poor Ludyard because, you see, we've got the mule left, and the cow, and the hogs—and ourselves."

But after Dick had gone back to work, his wife's straight little scarlet mouth drooped, and she looked out the kitchen window, eastward, through a veil of tears. The old people were back there, waiting, hoping, and now the new house could not be begun in the fall.

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.

They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

"I was taken ill with kidney trouble, and became so weak I could scarcely get around. I took medicine without benefit, and finally decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After the first bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and six bottles made me a new woman. When my little girl was a baby, she could not keep anything on her stomach, and we gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla which cured her." Mrs. Thomas L. Walsborough, Ont.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures kidney and liver troubles, relieves the back, and builds up the whole system.

trembling. Then father would read the letter aloud—and the ensuing silence in the low room would be broken only by the falling apart of the logs in the fireplace. The coming of the night would find the old couple still sitting there in silent despair.

Maybe the year would bring a wonderful harvest. They might be able to build the house right away after the corn was sold, and send for the old people next year, after all. So passionate was hope that Jenny believed.

"Dear mother," she wrote, after she had destroyed the letter of revelation, "we won't build this year, after all, but when we do we are going to build right. The front porch really ought to be a foot wider than our estimate, if there's to be room for a four-shelfed flower-stand, and then a side porch is almost a necessity for sunning pillows."

That year there was a drought of unprecedented length. In September Dick came in and burst out, desperately, "Well, Jenny, we're done! I'm beaten! That's all!" Jenny pulled Dick's head down until it rested on her shoulder, and they cried together. Then suddenly she laughed, the old laugh, and said: "Dick, I've just thought how much our worldly possessions were like the Ten Little Niggers in the nursery jingle:

"Ten little niggers, sittin' in a line, Lightnin' struck one and then there were nine," and so on to the tragic end, when there was left only "One little nigger sittin' in the sun, Crab caught him by the toes and then there was none."

"Girly," he said, "we'll win yet! A man who couldn't win with a wife like you isn't fit to live. Tomorrow I'm going into town and try for a job with a farm-machine firm. I know I can sell machinery enough to keep us from starving while we are getting on our feet again. The road to success will be longer, that's all. We will arrive some day."

Jenny thought Dick's plan fine. She said so, and saw him off on the ride to Wichita with a smiling mouth. But she did not write home that day. She sent a picture postcard instead. The dream-house was trembling.

Dick came back full of enthusiasm. He had secured a job with the farm-machine people. The sixty dollar salary would pay board for the two and taxes on the land. In a year or two probably he would get a raise, then they could begin to put by a little—in five years or so they would have enough to stock the little ranch and begin all over again.

ber mother any longer. If nothing unforeseen takes place, you may begin to look for us when the trees bud."

Kansas bloomed early. The first day of April the one tree in the yard of the new house across the street showed a tender green in the top branches. The tiny lawn had been tarfed, and already it was a green velvet rug. Passerby invariably noted the neat, complete appearance of the place, but a childish pang came to Jenny every time she saw it. It was so like the dear dream-house. Jenny passionately hoped her mother would not notice the new house during the coming visit—it would hurt so.

But the very day the old people arrived from Kentucky, after luncheon, when Dick had taken her father to see the "store," Jenny, who was sitting with her mother on the boarding-house porch, felt her heart sink. Her mother was looking long and interestedly across the street.

"Oh!" the older woman said, "that house over there seems sort of familiar. Where have I seen such a house before?" Jenny could not speak because of the lump in her throat, but her mother went on:

"Why, it's got two big south windows in the upper chamber, and a wide front porch—an extra wide front porch—all latticed in—and a glass front door, and it's painted pure white with green shutters. Why, it's for all the world like the house you were going to put up if things hadn't been so dead against Dick! Now I call that house just as near perfect as good lumber and good sense can make a house. I'd love dearly to walk through it!"

Jenny changed the subject. But the next morning, after breakfast, when Dick and father came out on the front porch of the boarding-house to set out on the down-town walk, mother again expressed her wish to see the inside of the new house across the street. Dick looked at his watch.

"I've got twenty minutes margin," he said. "I see a workman or two over there; there's no objection to our going through the house right now." Jenny had no adequate excuse, and followed the others across the car tracks and through the gate.

The house was all but finished. The two workmen lingered over the last touches. As Jenny walked behind the others through the seven rooms, a strange excitement clutched her. The new house was not like the dream-house. It was the dream-house come true! As one entered, she lingered in the tiny back hall, looking at the ingeniously constructed entrance to the cellarway which she had planned that loneliest winter out there on the ranch. She heard her father call from the front of the house as from a great distance. Then, blinded by tears for the dear night-have-been, she took her slow way towards the little living-room, where the others were waiting for her.

"Pretty nice house, ain't it, girl?" Jenny's father's voice was strangely hoarse. "Rooney and neat, eh? Think you could get ready to move in next week?" Jenny's eyes followed the lines of writing on the paper which her father handed her, but she did not in the least grasp the meaning of it. Her mother's words were enlightening:

"We wrote that the year had been more prosperous than we expected, but we didn't say how much more. We trusted to luck that you wouldn't read in the papers about the new Western Kentucky and Indiana Railroad that just had to have a slice of the old farm to be able to bridge Green River at an easy place. It was your father's idea to build the house unknown to you, and we were perfectly sure of pleasing you, because we had your plans all complete in the letters you had sent home. We knew to the day when the house'd be finished, to we timed our trip accordingly. Your father built in town because he heard from the head of the farm machinery firm that Dick has got no business going back to farming because of his having such an unusual talent for selling farm machinery. His salary'll be going up, peg by peg, after a little."

Was So Bad With Heart and Nerves Could Not Sleep At Night.

Many men and women toss night after night upon a sleepless bed. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the heart and nervous system that they cannot enjoy the refreshing sleep which comes to those whose heart and nerves are right.

Milburn's Heart & Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

take. Holy Scripture reflects this judgment of humanity, and gives divine confirmation to it—at the same time pointing out the depraving effects of excess, and cautioning people against its dangers.

Some passages might be pressed in favor of total abstinence; but on the whole, Scripture casts no slur on the moderate or ordinary use of wine. Had the human race stooped to wine (and beer) moderately fermented, the drink question would never have become a serious one. It is the more recent introduction of stronger and more subtle drinks such as brandy and whisky, excessive alcoholization, and especially poisonous adulteration, as well as the mixing of drinks—sometimes practised as a fine art of debauchery—which has made the most part of the mischief; and the high pressure neurasthenia of modern life has much to do with it too.

The medical profession is divided on the ultimate question. All seem to admit that alcohol, as such, is chemically what we call a "poison," and there is a growing tendency to believe that the less a man takes of alcohol the better. But we have never been satisfied with the contention that every minimal dose is fraught with injury to the system—or in other words, that every use of alcohol is an abuse.

This is a view which common sense and Christian tradition, and even Christian theology will always oppose from the practical point of view. The sound position therefore is to abstain from the absolute and universal condemnation of the use of alcoholic drink; to enlarge on the very serious mischief which follows from its immoderate use, and on the difficulties felt by many in observing moderation. Hence total abstinence can be preached to all who experience danger, and even inculcated upon those who do not experience the danger at present—provided this is done in such a way as to avoid turning total abstinence into a dogma, or casting a censure on those who claim to continue the moderate use of alcohol without perceptible detriment either to health or conduct.

Attempts to prove that the wine recommended in Scripture and used by Our Lord was unfermented, or of such quality as never to make men drunk, are more ingenious than convincing. We quite admit that a man who is himself a total abstainer by free choice can always preach total abstinence to others with greater effect; and we should not quarrel with any one who took up this kind of mortification with that object in view. But there must be no Manicheism about it.—Bombay Examiner.

A BAD COLD Developed Into BRONCHITIS.

Neglected Bronchitis is very often the direct cause of Consumption, and on the first symptom appearing Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be used and the bronchitis cured.

The symptoms are, tightness across the chest, sharp pains at a difficulty in breathing, a secretion of thick phlegm, at first white, and later of a greenish or yellowish color, coming from the bronchial tubes when coughing, especially the first thing in the morning.

You can save money as well as add to your character and appearance by wearing made-to-order clothes. You Cannot Buy Made-to-Order CLOTHES Cheaper than WE SELL THEM.

MR. MAN--We Can Save You Money on Your CLOTHES. Some men think that when they spend their money for a Ready-made suit, that they are buying their clothes at the smallest possible cost. They think only of the first cost. They do not consider that if they would spend a few dollars extra and have a suit made for them by a good tailor, that it would wear at least double as long, and from this standpoint alone, they would be saving. And then again, in a tailor made suit along with getting at least double the wear, you get style and good looks that stay, you get comfort and satisfaction that can only be had in a made-to-order suit. Are not these features worth from three to five dollars extra? Buy Your Next Suit Here. When you want your Spring Suit come here, look over the hundreds of different cloths we have, pick one that pleases you and let us build you a suit. We will put the finest of work on it, and use the very best of everything in it's make-up; we will make it to fit you perfectly, and in the newest style, and when finished you will be so pleased with it that you will never wear a ready-made again. 153 Queen Street MacLellan Bros., Merchant Tailors.
