The Earl's Son;

TWO HEARTS UNITED.

CHAPTER V.

She wandered along the bank, now and again picking the flowers which jeweled the grass, the murmur of the stream making music in her ears, the scent of the terebene from the fir spinney lulling her senses; and presently she sat down, and clasping her hands round her knees, leant against the shelving bank and gave herself up to reverie; and she was so lost in thought that she was almost startled by the sudden appearance in her solitude of another human being. A man had come round the bend of the winding river; he was wading in the stream, fishing. It was the man whose fate she had been sent to decide. His tall figure was silhouetted against the bright sky, and his perfect ease and grace reminded her of one of Allingham's drawings to William Black's novels; and she watched the movement of his arm, as he threw the fly, with a rapt attention.

He was quite unconscious of her presence, and as he moved up the stream slowly, presently coming abreast of her, she was sensible of a curious feeling of embarrassment, and she was about to rise and go away softly so that he should not hear her, when he hooked a trout. It was a large fish; she saw his eyes grow keen, his lips tightened, as the line tightened, and his excitement communicated itself to her; unconsciously she rose and moved towards the stream, and as he secured the fish and put it in the creel hanging at his side, she uttered a faint exclamation of satisfaction.

Faint as it was, his quick ears caught it, and he looked over his shoulder.

Veronica, half annoyed at her display of interest, said, with even more than her usual hauteur:

"Good-morning; I want to speak to you."

He raised his hat, and came to the bank slowly and regarded her waitingly and with perfect self-possession—so perfect that Veronica almost resented it.

"I have been to Burchett's hut," she said, as coldly as before. "I came to tell him that Lord Lynborough says he may engage you, though your references are not—are not as full as the usual ones."

"I am obliged to his lordship," said Ralph. "And I am very glad. I should have been sorry to go: it's a beautiful place." He looked round at the river, the rising wood on the other bank, the bright sky. "Any man could be happy here."

She caught up the skirt of her muslin dress as if to go; but paused, her profile turned to him.

"Have you had good sport?" she asked.

"Fairly," he replied, respectfully enough, but with the tone of independence which Veronica had noted the first day she had seen him. "Of course, it's too bright; but you can pick up a fish or two in the shallow pools; and the river swarms with them; it's been well preserved and little fished, I should say. It's grand sport," he added, rather to himself than to her.

Veronica looked at the river rather wistfully. "You seem to enjoy it," she said.

He laughed. "There's nothing so enjoyable as sport," he said; "it's the only time when a man can forget himself. You can't think much when you're setting your wits against a fish or a fox or a bear. You fish, of course?"

He spoke exactly as an equal would have spoken, and again the resentment rose in Veronica's breast, as she replied, coldly.

"No, I do not."

"Ah, that's a pity, with this splendid river at your command."

"I never tried it," said Veronica. "It looks easy."

"So it does—when you don't know it," he retorted, with a smile which occupied his eyes as well as his lips. "No doubt you think it's easy enough to throw this fly into that shallow across the stream there. Try it."

He held out the rod with a curve of the lips that nettled Veronica. She hesitated a moment, then she took the rod—very nearly jerking the hook into his hand, by the way—and made a cast, and, of course, flopped the fly a few yards from her feet.

"Try again," he said. "You made too sure of it, though confidence is usually half the battle. Swing the rod over your shoulder easily—No, no; not like that! Give it to me; I'll show you."

He took the rod from her and with obvious ease landed the fly where he wanted it. Veronica bit her lip; her blood was roused.

"Let me try again," she said, and she made another futile effort.

He appeared to be interested in the lesson, and he stepped up close behind her and closed his hand over hers as it held the rod, as if he were unconscious of the difference between them.

"Now, let your hand go back," he said. "That's it. There! You have nearly reached it. There's a fish there—"

"How do you know?" she asked.

"I don't know; I feel," he said. "They lie in the shallow under the boulders. Now throw again, gently, and yet as if your heart were in it. Ah! I thought so; you've got a fish. Now, what are you going to do with it? No, don't force it, but don't slacken your line; just let him feel it."

The rod nearly bent double; Veronica was thrilling all over. She forgot that she was the chateleine of Lynborough Court, that this man was only a gamekeeper—forgot everything in the excitement of the moment.

"I shall lose it!" she exclaimed, her eyes flashing, her lips apart.

He looked at her with a faint smile of amusement which, in a subtle way, slid into one of admiration; Veronica, all in a glow, was enough to move a heart of flint.

"Oh, no, you won't!" he said; "he's well hooked; he's a fine fish. Treat him gently. Let your line go gradually; now tighten up. No, no! almost sternly. 'Not so fast; he'll break loose; gradually, easily. Ah! it's a beauty!'"

As she drew the fish on to a shallow he waded in, netted it, and carried it to her to the bank.

"That's your first fish," he said. "We ought to wet it. I've got a flask with me in case of accidents."

He took it from his pocket and poured some spirit into the cup, diluting it from the lucid water of the stream, and held it out to her with perfect gravity. Veronica was thrilling with excitement and, all unconsciously, she took the cup and carried it to her lips. In an instant she had withdrawn it with a little shudder.

"Oh, it's horrible!" she said.

"Not at all. It's very good whiskey. Don't throw it away, please."

He drank, and replaced the flask to his pocket.

"Well, what do you think of it?"

"It is delightful," said Veronica, as if carried away by her excitement and satisfaction; "do you think I can catch another?"

"I haven't the least doubt of it," he replied. "Come further up the stream."

She obeyed, as the most docile pupil would have obeyed; and following his instructions, presently landed another fish. He seemed almost as pleased as she was.

"There is nothing a woman cannot do, if she tries," he said. "You have such light hands, such quick eyes, you can beat us at most things—not all; thank Heaven! Now you can understand why I am glad to remain here. Though I am sorry that my character wasn't altogether satisfactory, Miss Gresham."

Veronica had seated herself on the bank and was watching him put on another fly.

"Why is it not?" she asked.

"Ah, well," he said, "in the first place, I'm a stranger, and strangers are always regarded with suspicion. And yet it's easily explained."

"Explain it," said Veronica, trying to speak coldly, even haughtily, but feeling that she had failed; for it was very difficult to be haughty in the presence of this strange young man who was so fearfully self-possessed and unembarrassed.

"It's this way," he said. "Though I am an Englishman, I have lived in Australia all my life. My mother was an Englishwoman. She emigrated with me, a tiny kid. I don't know why. She was a proud woman and a silent. Her husband had left her to fight the world alone."

"You mean your father?" said Veronica, fighting against the interest in his story.

"No, I don't," he said. "I shall put on a blue upright now; some clouds have come over the sky, and a blue upright will tell. No, I don't; I never knew my father. He died before I was born. I meant my mother's second husband." His lips tightened, and he frowned as he bent over the fly. "I never knew him. He deserted my mother before I can remember. I don't know why I tell you this. Ah, yes! You wanted to know why I hadn't a fuller character. My mother and I lived alone. When I was old enough I began to work for her. We were poor and the struggle for existence was hard; but I did my best. Thank God, I did my best! I got some work at the mines. But before that I had been a sheep-boy, cattle-boy, anything that turned up. I earned enough for us both. I was doing well. Then—he bent more closely over the fly so that Veronica could not see his face—then she died."

There was a pause. It seemed to Veronica that she was sharing the man's grief. She fought against the sympathy, but it was of no use. And half unconsciously she murmured: "She died."

"Yes; I ought to have been glad. I know that now, but I was sorry, for I loved her. After she had gone I took to wandering. I don't think I cared very much what became of me. I got some work on some mines again. One day, as we were sitting round the camp fire, I heard a man, a tender-foot, a new-comer, talk about England. I was English. The man's light words stirred up in me the desire to see the old country. I had saved some money—enough to pay my passage—and I started there and then. When I got to England I tried to get some work in London. A wonderful place London! A heaven for the rich, a hades for the 'poor! I worked at the docks. I am strong—they said I was the strongest man there—but they didn't pay me more than the others, by the way."

Veronica glanced sideways at his muscular frame, at the handsome face, with its expression of far-away reverie. Despite the difference between them she was intensely interested. She could not only picture the man's experiences, but imagine his moods.

House-Cleaning as a Dissipation.

By RUTH CAMERON.

There are many women with whom house-cleaning is a form of dissipation. They love it, they glory in it. They indulge in it almost as a man does in drink.

Dissipation means waste. It means indulgence in anything to such an extent as to waste one's energy and make oneself inefficient in the business of life.

On can indulge in drinking, smoking, eating, bridge playing, house-cleaning, to such an extent that any of them become a dissipation. We hear a great deal nowadays about the women who neglect their vocation of home-making to play bridge, or go to suffrage meetings. I believe there are just as many who neglect their business of home-making for excessive indulgence in house-cleaning. No, the two things are not the same, nor anywhere near the same. House-cleaning is a normal and necessary part of home-making, but when it is allowed to assume abnormal proportions it is no more right or natural or desirable than a swelling on some part of the body. We should keep clean to live comfortably. We should not live merely to keep clean.

I know a woman who frankly admits that she loves house-cleaning. As the spring months draw near she says she "just aches" to get at her house because it is so dirty. Of course, it never is what an ordinary person would call dirty. The first beautiful spring day, Nature's bugle call to human kind to come out of doors and make holiday, is her signal for the beginning of her spree. It is no exaggeration to call it that. She cleans that house from top to bottom. She goes in under the eaves, drags each article out, dusts it and puts it back again to be untouched and uncleaned "till another year be gone." She takes out every single drawer in the house, washes it and puts it outdoors to air. She takes out each piece of stored away clothing, airs it and puts it away again. She comes out of her spree (which lasts intermittently for two months) a wreck, physically and nervously. And the most absurd part of the whole thing is that she insists she is doing this for her husband and children, who need less to say, hate and dread the performance. As a matter of fact, she wears herself out in this way partly because she thinks it is her duty, but much more because she loves it. In other words, it is a form of dissipation with her.

I know another woman who loves cleanliness and order just as much as this one and yet she only does the absolutely necessary house-cleaning. Why? Because she realizes that her duty to her husband and children demands that she shall conserve her energy, her time and herself, and not spend extravagantly in any one direction. "The greatest sacrifice I ever made for my children," she once said, "was to give up having things immaculate as I did before they came."

Now, which of these two women, think you, has the higher deal of a woman's vocation?

The American Bison.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sishash."

The American Bison is a great and noble animal whose history is closed. He was elbowed into oblivion by the American settler and the American hunter about forty years ago. When the first Americans began to venture timidly into the howling interior of Nebraska, they had to push aside vast quantities of buffalo which is the informal name for "bison" before they could proceed. The buffalo was a large ox with an automobile robe for a skin. He had an imposing head with a long chin beard, a huge and shaggy hump and a body which sloped down rapidly and dwindled off into an insignificant and foolish tail, hardly large enough to break the leg of a stout horse fly.

The buffalo roamed the plains of herds of countless thousands, ate grass for a living and was as harmless as a Woodman parade. He had two great misfortunes. He was good to eat and he was easy to shoot. After the Union Pacific railroad was begun, hunting buffalo became a western pastime and the man who couldn't make a single morning was considered to be a very poor shot indeed.

Nature had spent many centuries developing and perfecting the buffalo, but man with his bumptious contempt for Nature usually managed to exterminate a specimen in about ten minutes after he had sighted him. Men shot buffalo as they do clay pigeons to-day and left them to rot on the plains, coats and all. When we consider how many automobiles are freezing each winter nowadays for the want of a fine buffalo robe to throw over the hood we cannot but feel shocked at the criminal wastefulness of the hunters of the seventies.

The buffalo endured being hunted in his proud but patient manner for a few years and then startled the nation by disappearing. An investigation developed the fact that there weren't any of him left to speak of. A few hundred buffalo now eke out an existence under protection in the west but they are dejected and pensive and seem to take a positive pleasure in dying.

The disappearance of the buffalo was tragic in its suddenness, but we should not get too indignant over it. If we had ten millions of buffalo to-day we would not know where to put them. There is no room in Nebraska and Kansas to pass a law against them because they would spoil the wheat crop. So long as there are enough of them left to supply our circuses and decorate the landscape of our national parks, we should not repine. The buffalo had to move on because he was blocking traffic.

A brimless Jap turban is trimmed with a huge pompon of cabbage roses in front.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, the history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity, this equipment can surely be of use to you. Caught Passing Money of $273,000 Bank Robbery.

Man Arrested in Toronto With $3,500 of the Cash Stolen in New Westminster in 1911.

Toronto, June 12.—More than $3,000 of the $273,000 taken from the vault of the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster (B.C.), was recovered in Toronto Saturday afternoon. Harry J. Mathews, of New York, in whose possession the money was found, is being held by the police on the charge of receiving stolen money. Mathews passed a $5 bill at the hotel and five minutes later was placed under arrest. A search of his suit case revealed $3,500 in Bank of Montreal bills. One figure of the serial number of each bill had been so skillfully changed that it was only by the use of a powerful magnifying glass that the transformation could be detected.

Mathews said he came from New York, though papers found in his possession showed he had been recently in Toledo.

The New Westminster bank robbery in the spring of 1911 was the most famous robbery of its kind in Canada. Three men entered the bank one night, blew open the safe, and stole $273,000 in gold, of which $40,000 was recovered.

Charles MacNamara, alias "Big Australian Mac," New York, was sentenced to nine years in the penitentiary for stealing the automobile in which the robbers made their escape. Charles Dean, Los Angeles, was tried and acquitted. The third member of the gang, Martin Powell, who was caught in Detroit, will stand trial at the fall assizes at New Westminster in September.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferers and also thankfulness for persons who escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and suitably protected. Household Notes

A leg of mutton should be roasted from two to three hours.

Listerine is an excellent disinfectant to use for the mouth and throat.

Nutmegs will grate more satisfactorily if started from the bottom end. Steak one inch thick should be broiled from four to six minutes.

Lamb or mutton chops, broil six to eight minutes. When buying mutton see that the fat is firm, clear and white; mutton with flabby, flivd or yellow fat has been in cold storage too long.

Pickles and vinegar should be kept in glass jars or bottles. When kept in glazed ware the vinegar acts on the glaze and forms a poison.

If you live in the country and throw soap-suds and dishwater out, don't forget that rose bushes and other pet plants will thrive on it.

If you are so unfortunate as to have different size sheets in your linen closet, mark all the sheets of a size with one distinguishing mark.

To remove coffee stains from light material, brush the spot with glycerine, then rinse in luke warm water and press on the wrong side.

Olives, stoned and chopped, and mixed with fresh butter or heavy cream and cream cheese make one of the most delicious of sandwich fillings.

French kid gloves can be cleaned by putting them on the hands, then washing them in some spirits of turpentine, then hang them in the air to dry.

To take fruit stains out of linen, stretch the stained spot over a bowl and pour boiling water through it. Peaches aim are an exception to this rule.

If lamp chimneys are only a little clouded and you wish to save time, simply steam them inside over the tea kettle and wipe with a clean cheese-cloth.

Salmon or Salmon trout sandwiches are delicious. Flake the fish and add a little cream to it. A dash of French mustard is an improvement.

The net gumpes will last much longer if they are washed without ironing. Shape them carefully while damp instead.

Add a little salt to the bluing water in which white clothes are rinsed if you want to be sure to keep the bluing from setting in spots or stripes.

Cold mashed potatoes from yesterday's dinner make very nice croquettes by the adding of one egg. Shape them, roll them in crumbs and fry in fat.

A good way to clean feathers—Put them into a paper bag with a cupful of Indian meal, half a cupful of flour and three teaspoonfuls of borax, then shake.

Very excellent orange extract is made by putting grated orange peel into a bottle half full of pure alcohol. Allow it to stand for three weeks, then strain.

MONDAY, June 15th, 1914.
Closing To-Day.

To-day, June 15th, is the day on which the Committee and subscribers are asked to close their lists and send in all subscriptions to the Honorary Treasurer, Hon. R. Watson. The amount already acknowledged by that gentleman is over $240,000. When all the subscriptions are in, the amount will probably be in the neighborhood of $275,000, as there is a sum of $25,000 to be received from the Dominion Government. In addition to this $275,000, a sum of about $25,000 will be distributed by the Government under the provisions of the Marine Disaster Act. In all, the amount available will be about $300,000, about twice as much as was expected, when the meeting called by the Sheriff was held in the Court House. This sum should provide well for the victims of the disasters, and with the interest at 4 per cent, which will accrue from the gradually diminishing capital account, of which a considerable sum will be in the Banks for many years, there should be a considerable balance after making liberal provision for the victims, which may be available eventually as a basis for a Permanent Fund. The liberality of the people of Newfoundland, the United Kingdom, Canada and the States has been evidenced in a striking way in the subscriptions which have been sent in.

BOAT CLUB MEETING.—A meeting of the C.C.C. Boat Club was held yesterday morning to arrange for the dance to be held at the Prince's Rink on Regatta night. Mr. P. F. Collins presided and a large number attended. It was decided to place the practice boats on the lake shortly so that the crews may settle down to practice. Splendid progress is being made in the construction of the new boat by Mr. Sexton. After the usual routine business the meeting adjourned.

Cable News.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day.
The more one sees of the wrangle which has commenced between Redmond and the Provisional committee of the Nationalists volunteers, says the Dublin correspondent of the Morning Post, the more one is forced to believe that Ireland is on the threshold of a bitter struggle comparable perhaps only to the Parnell plot in the early nineties. One thing seems obvious. Redmond was too late in the field to capture the volunteer force and for several months he looked askance at the new body, not only with the sympathy but with absolute contempt. The Daily News, Ministerialist, denies there is antagonism between Redmond and Devlin and says that the Nationalist leaders are all exercising their influence patriotically. An overwhelming majority of volunteers are Nationalists, but the Executive officers mostly belong to the Sinn Fein, and though still in a definite and regrettable it cannot be of serious dimensions. The Lords reassemble to-day when it is expected the Marquis of Crewe will make a definite announcement as to the date of the second reading of the Home Rule Bill and the introduction of the Amending Bill.

ROME, To-day.
The threatened railway strike throughout Italy has been abandoned, order is being gradually restored, even in towns where a virtual revolutionary movement was in progress.

Bell Isld. Nickel Opens.

Under New Management.
On Thursday night the Bell Island Nickel which has been refitted and remodelled from floor to ceiling was opened. The building was packed, and a great many had to stand, but if the opening night was a success in point of numbers it was more so with regard to the quality of the show. The management has been fortunate enough to secure exclusively the use of films from the Nickel, St. John's, and the first batch of these as shown on Thursday night were, viz., "The Gift of the Story", "Mid. Seal Fishery", "The Vampire of the Desert", and "Faust and the Lily" were appreciated by all present, and if the first night's performance is anything to judge by, the success of the Bell Island Nickel is assured.

Dr. Grenfell Lectures.

Hon. Robert Watson presided over a crowded audience who had assembled in the Grenfell Hall to hear a lecture from Dr. W. T. Grenfell, C.M.G., upon the "Future of Turkey, Greece and Serbia." The doctor, who has just returned from the East, gave some very interesting words pictures of the condition of things prevailing in those countries at present. He gave a short history of the origin of the Balkan States, and of the conquest by the Turks of their country, and the subsequent persecution and tyranny under which the people have lived for centuries. They have never given up hope that at some time or other, they would take their place among the advanced nations. The spirit of true patriotism was inculcated in the minds of the young, and has been fostered in every possible way, leading to the great rally of the men from all parts of the world, during the late war, to fight for the freedom of their brethren. The power of the Turkish Empire in Europe is broken. The influence of Christianity in the schools and universities now established upon modern lines in Turkey, in which the women are also trained, has wrought wonders, and the future is full of promise to those states, Greece, Bulgaria, Servia and Albania, who after long years of oppression, have vanquished their persecutors. The Rev. W. H. Thomas undertook the opening and closing exercises.

Five Pictures and Two Songs at Nickel.

The Nickel Theatre presents nothing but the best in motion pictures, and the programme for to-day consists of five pictures and two songs. The all-star Vitagraph drama "His Life for the Emperor," is a treat in store for patrons to-day. It is a thrilling story of the days of Napoleon. "The International Spies" is another very exciting and gripping war story. No one should fail to see the great chase scenes in this picture. "Retribution" as its name suggests, is a picture of every day life, pathetic and touching, which we feel confident will greatly interest all who attend. "The Duke's Dilemma" is a comedy by the Edison Co., a regular side-splitter which will keep everyone in good humor. Miss Gardner and Mrs. Walter McCarthy will be heard in new songs, and Prof. McCarthy and J. F. Ross will give real picture music and effects. The whole programme is most attractive, and judging by the attendance will be large.

MAGNA CHARTA 1215. Disgusted and thoroughly aroused by the intolerable acts of King John, the Barons met in London in 1214 and decided on combined action to check the King. The Archbishop, Stephen Langton, produced a copy of the Charter granted by Henry I, and this was the basis of the Great Charter which John was to sign. It was presented to him in January, 1215. John promised his answer by Easter and then took steps to checkmate the Barons, but no answer forthcoming by Easter, the Barons raised an army and seized London. The King was brought to bay and on this date, at Runnymede, was compelled to sign the great document of English freedom—the Magna Charta.

Needs Repairs.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—In passing the General Protestant Cemetery yesterday afternoon, I was struck with the dilapidated state of the fences. This I have noticed for some time, but one reason that in winter there is no chance of doing anything permanent in the way of fences, but there surely can be no excuse when spring opens that the work of erecting a fence worthy of those who have near and dear ones resting there, should be left longer. If the excuse is funds, it must not be said that such cannot be raised, and may I suggest that the churches (Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational) take a special collection on the same Sunday for the cemetery. A short time ago I was at Belvedere Cemetery and there, everything is as it should be, and a great mark of respect to the dead, and only last Sunday the Roman Catholic Churches responded handsomely to the collection taken in their different churches. Now, no time should be lost in having the fences, gates and walks of the General Protestant Cemetery put in perfect order. Summer will not be so long that any delay can be made. I believe that it is only needed to ask many of the well-to-do in the different churches for a subscription, and a ready response will be made, as I am sure all have loved "one's" there.

If a disaster happens, St. John's, he said to its credit, responds to the call for help as, perhaps, few other places do, surely, then, the cemetery is of no less interest to them. I think there is a large amount of work to be done there, and it is hard to see cattle grazing over the ground where our beloved are resting.

By last evening's express there arrived a man named Brown, who was brought from King's Cove, by Constable Tobin and is charged with forgery. The nature of the forgery is the altering of a cheque. The accused was brought up this afternoon and remanded pending the preliminaries of the Crown. It is more than likely that he will be committed for trial to the Supreme Court.

Convicted of Theft.

Quite recently an ex-official of the post office, who had only a few days previously completed a nine months' term in the Penitentiary for theft, was convicted at Channel on a similar charge, the person from whom the money was taken being a domestic who was proceeding to Halifax by way of the cross-country express. The amount stolen was $5.00, and represented all the money the poor girl possessed. The money was taken from her purse while she slept, and as the accused was the only occupant of the car at the time, suspicion pointed to him. He was convicted before Magistrate Squaire at Channel and sentenced to 30 days' imprisonment, which term he is now serving at Channel jail.

Bigamy Case.

In a certain section of the city a case of bigamy is evoking more than ordinary interest at the present time. The story in the main is that a young woman, belonging to St. John's, has been deserted by her lover, a Nova Scotian. They were only married a little over a year ago. The husband, whose avocation is sea life, left here a few months ago in a foreign-going vessel. Since then, he has won the affection and admiration of a lassie at Barbados to the extent that they have been made man and wife. The news of wife No. 2 was brought here from the West Indian port a few days ago yesterday. It is also needless to say that wife No. 1 is now lamenting hubby's absence and very much out of sorts over his behaviour. So far the police authorities here are unaware of the matter.

Reids' Boats.

The Argyle leaves Placentia for the westward this evening.
The Bruce left Port aux Basques at 7.35 a.m. to-day.
The Clyde left Lewisporte at 11.30 a.m. yesterday.
The Dundee left Port Blandford at 8.10 a.m. to-day.
The Ethie leaves Clarendville to-day.
The Glencoe is at St. John's.
The Home arrived at Lewisporte at 9.20 p.m. yesterday.
The Invermore left Port aux Basques at 7.40 a.m. to-day.
The Kyle is still at Spotted Islands, going north.
The Lintrose leaves North Sydney to-night.
The Meigle is still north of Flower's Cove.

Shamrocks to Play Wabana Team.

The Shamrock baseball team will go to Bell Island on Wednesday to try conclusions with a select nine from that town. They will leave here at noon and meet at Port aux Basques, whence a special boat will convey them to the island. The line-up of the Shamrocks will be as follows:—Pitcher, W. Callahan; Catcher, H. Power; 1st Base, R. Waterfield; 2nd Base, E. Harsant; 3rd Base, R. Callahan; Shortstop, W. J. O'Neill; R.F., N. Ellis; C.F., C. Cantwell; L.F., E. Jackman.

Arrested for Forgery.

By last evening's express there arrived a man named Brown, who was brought from King's Cove, by Constable Tobin and is charged with forgery. The nature of the forgery is the altering of a cheque. The accused was brought up this afternoon and remanded pending the preliminaries of the Crown. It is more than likely that he will be committed for trial to the Supreme Court.

NEW YORK, To-day.
That the Canadian Government will establish fuel and supply stations on the Labrador and Greenland coasts for a round the world aeroplanes, who will fly from the Panama Pacific Exposition in San Francisco next year, is announced here by Arnold Kruckman, who arrived to-day after following a proposed route of race by way of Chicago, across several of the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River.

ATHENS, To-day.
War between Greece and Turkey is inevitable according to the newspaper Hestia, which is considered as voicing the majority of Greek public opinion. The Government has not yet received any intimation of the nature of the Sublime Porte's reply to the Greek note, demanding that Turkey cease its persecution of Greeks in Turkey and make reparation to them for the losses incurred.

LEICESTER, To-day.
Before the police were able to intervene, a hostile crowd yesterday attacked and demolished a stall in the Market Place, where militant suffragettes were selling confectionery in order to raise funds for the Women's Social and Political Union. Women were conspicuous in the attack and were prevented from setting fire to the stall only by the arrival of the police who escorted the terrified militants to a place of safety. The suffragettes burned a cricket pavilion at Beigate to-night.

LONDON, To-day.
A bomb exploded at St. George's Church, Hanover Square, to-night.
The explosion was the work of suffragettes. The caretaker of St. George's had locked the church after a careful inspection on the conclusion of the evening service. A few minutes after 10, a passer-by heard the explosion and summoned the fire brigade.
The firemen on forcing the doors found the church filled with smoke.
Three pews and three stained windows were damaged by the explosion.

TOULON, France, To-day.

AND FIVE FEATURE PICTURES.

There is an entire good programme prepared for the patrons of Rossley's Theatre to-night. Dan Cusack in some very fine songs and dances.
Dan Cusack, the lyric tenor, is a great favorite and shows real merit in his work. There are also five of the latest and best pictures. "A Bit of Blue Ribbon," a fine Vitagraph; "A Stenographer's Troubles," Vitagraph, with John Bunny and Flora Finch; "A Female Detective," Lubin; "Pat the Electrician," Gaumont, making an all round first class performance. The engagement of Lucy Hayes and her associate players has been postponed through the illness of the leading man, but Mr. Rossley is now arranging with another company whom he hopes to present shortly.

Personal.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, May 27, 1914.
SOUVENIRS OF THE PARIS ROYAL VISIT.

I mentioned some time ago that Queen Mary by her visit to Paris, had considerably influenced French fashions. I hear it confirmed by many people who have recently returned from Paris. The influence is not among the more rapid section of the Paris world, but in the more aristocratic quarters. It is seen in the large hats with feathers set straight on the head and in the heavier and more dignified skirts, and especially in the evening toilette. It is in walking dress and in grand costume in the evening that the English fashions make their chief success, and in the afternoon dress that the risk of failure is greatest. Queen Mary did not make the mistake of departing from her usual afternoon dresses, and these were thought in Paris individual enough to inspire ideas for new fashions. In the evening Queen Mary, like most Englishwomen of rank, wore rich material simply made, distinctly intended as a background to her jewels. With the French, who have few family jewels, the idea "en grand tenue" is quite the opposite. Queen Mary's dress at the opera has distinctly influenced fashionable Paris. It has not been imitated of course for the Parisians never imitate, but it has provided a new "motif" for those exclusive dressmakers whose names have been in the newspapers.

PRINCE ARTHUR'S JOKE.

I was much amused during the first meeting in Queen's Hall, London, to celebrate the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the Young Men's Christian Association in London, at an incident arising out of the speech of Prince Arthur of Connaught. Prince Arthur is a cheery young Englishman gifted with a strong sense of humor and is not above chaffing himself, as he did on this occasion, when he regretted that he had passed the age limit at which the educational facilities of the huge YMCA building in Tottenham Court Road were available to him. He ventured on a joke which was to the effect that London was not like a small continental capital with a bad name that he knew of which it had been zone. The Maidan-i-Naphtun is in the so-called neutral zone, but the other oil fields where oil has actually been discovered are in the Russian zone.

THE LIFE CARD.

Much curious information was given by expert members of the Royal Statistical Society in their discussion of Walter Hazell's suggested life-card system for indexing the life history and family connections of every individual. One learned that the average Englishman does not know the date of his birth, that bigamy is easy under the English law, that there is no official notification of divorces, and that the Registrar General has no power to record on a marriage register the fact that the marriage has been legally dissolved. The experts discussed the possibility of persuading English folk to preserve family records when supplied. About the whole meeting there brooded an air of reserve, a conviction that, though Belgium thrives on an elaborate card system, English people did not want to be tabulated or to have the facts of their life made known. Mr. Hazell's plan provided for the record of the name, date of birth, and register number of each individual, his parents' names, the name and number of his wife, the names of his children, his occupation, his possible divorce or re-marriage, and the cause of his death. Among many obvious advantages of such a system Mr. Hazell emphasized the facilities it would afford for tracing lost or deserting persons and of preventing irregular marriages. He held also that it would help the study of eugenics, but the opinion of the meeting was against him here, and one registrar spoke of the reluctance many practitioners show to record such important causes of death as cancer, syphilis, or even tubercle. They all agreed that the present system of registering births and marriages had many defects, but thought the card system too costly for any English Government to establish.

MORE BUILDING OF AEROPLANES.

I learn from an authoritative source that, as the result of enquiries and suggestions recently made by the authorities at Whitehall, London, and confirmed within the past few days, several large firms in the North, who have not hitherto engaged in this branch of industry, resolved to lay down plant and machinery for the building of both aeroplanes and hydroplanes. No absolute promises have been given, apparently, by the Government as far as orders are concerned, but no doubt is entertained that these will be forthcoming especially having regard to the many remarks of the King on the subject during his Majesty's visit to Aldershot.

UNEASY LIES THE HEAD.

It was never anticipated that Prince William of Weid would find Albania's throne a bed of roses, but his troubles have commenced very early. Essad Pasha, whose defence of Scutari was one of the few incidents of the recent war which Turkey can contemplate with any pride, has had, from the beginning, designs on the position filled by the imported Mpret. Before the war he was the uncrowned king of a very large portion of Albania and the recognized predominant Moslem chieftain. He very reluctantly assented to the dispositions made for his country at the instigation of Austria and Italy, and he seems to have lost no time in proceeding to plot against the new ruler. If it had not been that the support of the foreign battleships was so readily available it is probable that he might by now have been occupying the throne that he so eagerly covets. It would have been a temporary occupation, but the incident would have been unpleasant and extremely discouraging to those who are hoping against hope that it may be possible to carve some kind of well-conducted community out of a people who have lived for centuries in an atmosphere of combat and outlawry. The prompt imprisonment of Essad shows at all events that the protecting Powers are going to stand no nonsense and will, conceivably, impress Prince William's subjects, for force is the one argument that they are capable of thoroughly understanding. On the other hand Prince William himself may yet have to heat a speedy retreat.

Try Again.

You have, it may be, used ointments, pastes, lotions for Eczema till you begin to get tired of trying things. Well, but you should remember that science is advancing all the time, and that what was not possible yesterday can be accomplished to-day. If you neglect to try Zylex—the newest and best thing that science has yet to offer for the relief and cure of Eczema and other annoying and disfiguring skin diseases—you are missing a great opportunity. It may be that it will cure you. It has cured some very bad cases. Price 50c. a box. Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

Materials used for evening coiffures are quite Asiatic in their splendor.

Some One Else.

"I wonder," Grace Andrews remarked, catching a bill that fell from the change that Lillian Reed was receiving at the post office window, "whether I could ever achieve such a royal disregard of money. Don't you ever count your change, Lillian?"

"Never. What's the good of fussing? If it's gone, it's gone."

"Only sometimes mightn't it affect someone else, dear?"

"I don't know anybody it could affect except daddy, and he doesn't care. Don't go to being exact at your age, Grace, dear; you'll be sure to turn out like Miss Lucretia Moxey, and I know you wouldn't like that."

"The fates forbid!" Grace exclaimed, in laughing protest.

But although Grace said no more at the time, and the two promptly forgot the incident, Lillian was to receive a lesson she could not easily forget.

It happened one day that a package was sent to her from a jeweller's shop by a special messenger, a round-faced, honest-eyed boy of fourteen. The bill was for thirteen dollars. Lillian gave him two tens, and according to her usual custom, stuffed the change into her pocket without looking at it. That afternoon she was called up on the telephone by Mr. Tracy, the head of the firm. He apologized for troubling her, but said that their messenger was five dollars short on his accounts, and declared that he must have given her five dollars too much change. He had had but three packages to deliver, and both the others were accounted for.

"Oh, no, Mr. Tracy," Lillian replied promptly, "I am very certain that he gave me the right change—one five and two ones."

"I was afraid so," Mr. Tracy returned, "but the boy was so insistent that it seemed only fair to him to ask you."

"It was no trouble at all," Lillian answered cheerfully, "I hope that he will find the money, Mr. Tracy. It could not possibly have been here."

"That afternoon, it happened, Lillian did not go out; but the next morning, planning a shopping trip, she opened her purse to count her money. A wad of bills tumbled into her lap. She opened it carelessly; it contained two fives and two ones. There was no doubt about it, she had had but the twenty and some change the day before. It was humiliating, but she was honest. She at once called up Mr. Tracy and confessed her carelessness. Mr. Tracy's voice came back gravely: "I am very sorry, Miss Reed; we dismissed the boy yesterday. In our business we dare not keep one upon whom the least suspicion rests."

"But surely," the girl cried, "you can get him back?"

"Unfortunately, through an oversight, we did not have his address. It was our carelessness and our loss, I am afraid, for we liked him. I only hope it was not too serious a matter for him—we could give him no recommendation, you see."

Lillian stammered a word or two and hung up the receiver. But her eyes were full of trouble. For the first time she realized how much a girl's carelessness might cost others—"Youth's Companion."

Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your works and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure.

Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Earl of Devon Arrives.

The S. S. Earl of Devon, Capt. Carter, arrived from the Fogo Mail Service yesterday afternoon, bringing a small freight and several passengers. The codfish has shown very little improvement since the ship's last trip, though there is a sign of cod at most of the harbours along the route. Captain Carter is coming to the land at nearly all the places.

Divorced Life

Reflections

From the gorgeous chrysanthe-mums which Ratzgenhauer had sent her, Marian's eyes wandered to the mirror before which she sat in the theatre's stuffy dressing room.

The reflection of her features, in the glass startled her. Her face, bar-barically rouged, sent a sense of shock spinning through her blood. It brought a long-forgotten memory bounding into her brain, a memory of a certain escapade of hers when she was a mite of a girl. She had bought a bit of cheap rouge at a near-by shop, and later, before her mirror, she had rubbed it liberally upon her cheeks. In the midst of the act her mother's voice, sad and sweet with reproof had sounded back of her. Her puritanical little mother's gentle chiding had made an everlasting impres-sion upon her.

It came back to her now, as she sat regarding her image in the mirror of the dressing room. It came like the subtle, sombre ghost of a dead event. A muffled sob sang through her lips. Hot tears etched grotesque paths down her made-up cheeks. She buried her face in her hands, torn by surging sorrow.

Weeping, she felt the presence of her mother as she had rarely felt it since her death years ago. To-night it was a living presence. Invisible arms seemed to reach out and fold her sobbing body to an unseen breast.

From the theatre came the sound of applause. Footsteps sounded out-side the closed door of the dressing room. Marian dashed the tears grimly from her eyes, and fell sharply to rubbing the make-up from her face. The ingenue came dashing in.

"You're all right, Winthrop," ex-claimed the latter. "You did just fine. Here, grab some of this cold cream of mine. You'll never get that stuff off without it. Here, dig into it," and she pushed a box of cold cream to-ward Marian, who offered her thanks and did as she was bidden.

Marian was forgotten and left to her own devices by the descent of other women of the company, who came trooping in to make ready for the next act. From the stage came the heavy sounds of the scene shifters, dragging ponderous properties, hither and yon. When the curtain rose for the next act, Marian was again left to herself, her companions slipping forth into the wings to await their cues to enter.

As she dressed for the street, Marian felt like a different, a strangely altered and transformed being. She was oppressed by the feeling, some-how, that she no longer belonged to herself. She had become a thing to be gaped and stared at, there in the cruel glare of the pitiless footlights, to be laughed and snickered at by silly schoolgirls, to be eyed by cheap and common crowds.

A sweeping sense of humiliation, of mortification, of almost contempt of herself rushed upon her. It was a sensation she had never known, never dreamed of. Yet here it was, sur-rounding her like evil, malevolent vapors permeating her being, on the night of her debut, the night she had looked forward to with dreams and yearning. There had been hours when she had literally ached to be an actress, moments of intense longing when she would have given her soul to be a popular star. Yet already she felt sick of the tawdriness, the shallowness, the commonness of her lot.

She drove her hat pins into place, wrapped the twine around her box of flowers, and started for the door. Ratzgenhauer had not been around. She wondered whether he had seen her work, what he thought of it. Incidentally, she told herself she didn't care. The reaction of a dull lassitude, after being keyed up to the high tension caused by her first appearance on the professional stage, possessed her. She emerged dully from the stage door and hurried to the street car line.

To-morrow—Marian Begins to be Advertised.

In the Sanctuary.

I went to church the other day, a thing we all should do; I heard the pastor preach and pray, and felt as good as new. Fine music echoed through the kirk, whenever the gifted choir and organist got down to work; they all showed vim and fire. And when a deacon passed the plate, at closing of a tune, I saw full many a pious sinner dig up a piecemeal. Old rusty pennies were the prize the deacon drew that morn, and I could see his ancient eyes flash forth in angry scorn. The preacher looks down from his perch on jim crow sports. I ween; they take their pennies to the church where dollars should be seen. All honor to the widow's mite, the poor man's hard earned cent; they're pleas-ing to the Master's sight when in his cause they're spent; but it must give him fourteen pains, repeated fourteen times, when lightwads reach down in their jeans and dig up pewter dimes. That's why the good old deacon groans, t's why his spirit faints; he takes in just a pair of bones from seven hundred saints.

Personal

Mr. W. D. Reid and family are pas-sengers by the incoming express due this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Job took passage by the Carthaginian on Saturday for England.

Mr. James Grieve left by the Car-thaginian on Saturday on a visit to Scotland.

B. F. C. Sports.

On Wednesday afternoon the an-nual sports of Bishop Feild College will be held on St. George's Field and the event promises to be most suc-cessful. The football fives have been drawn as follows:—

St. Bon's vs. Star.
Saints vs. Collegians.
C. E. I. vs. B. I. S.
Feildians vs. Casuals.

St. Bon's Alumni.

A meeting of the Committee of St. Bon's Association was held yester-day to make arrangements for the breakfast and entertainment at the College on July 14th. It was decided that if the weather be fine the build-ings will be illuminated and a concert held on the grounds, otherwise the programme will be carried out in-doors. Great enthusiasm is being displayed, and it is expected that the coming celebration will be a most fitting one in every particular.

The latest beaded and spangled ma-terials are of feather weight. Many an evening dress has a mere whisp of tulle for a bodice.

Corpus Christi Procession.

The annual procession of the Bless-ed Sacrament, in celebration of the Feast of Corpus Christi, took place at the R. C. Cathedral grounds yester-day under most favourable conditions.

Thousands of people were present, and the ceremony was a most impres-sive one. Those taking part in the procession were: the school children, the sodalities, and representatives of the adult and juvenile Total Abstin-ence Societies, Mechanics, Knights of Columbus, B. I. S. and Holy Name, with the C. C. C. and both bands of the T. A. Society in attendance. After Vespers were sung at the Cathedral the procession moved slowly towards the Presentation Convent the route being lined by the C. C. C. who were present in full strength under com-mand of Lt-Col. Conroy. The Host was carried by His Lordship Bishop Power, attended by Rt. Rev. Mons. Roche, V.G., Rev. Drs. Greene and Kitchen, Fathers McDermott, Pippy, Finn, Sears, Sheehan and Conway and the altar boys. On reaching the altar erected at the Presentation Convent Benediction was imparted by His Lordship Bishop Power who was as-sisted by Rev. Dr. Kitchen and Fr. McDermott. The singing of the children and choir was excellent as was also the music rendered by the bands. The ceremony concluded with Benediction at the Cathedral at 5 p. m.

Obituary.

MR. J. L. ROSS.

We regret to note the passing of Mr. Joseph L. Ross, our well known and veteran farmer. The sad event occurred at his late home Quidi Vidi Road, after a brief, though tedious illness. Some few weeks ago Mr. Ross was returning from the Nova Scotia coast, where he purchased a stock of cattle, when he figured in a train wreck near Come by Chance and was in the car that capsized. He was seriously hurt internally and de-spite the skill of his attending phys-icians succumbed to his injuries. De-cassed came to this country thirty-three years ago from Margaree, C.B., and by his own industry and perse-verance built up a successful farming business. He is survived by two sons and seven daughters. The Telegram extends sincere sympathy to the be-rieved family.

Kyle Delayed.

The Reid Nfld. Co. received a wire-less from Capt. Parsons, of the Kyle, last night, saying that the ship was at Spotted Islands awaiting a change of wind before proceeding further north. The Kyle left Spotted Islands at 8:20 a.m. yesterday, but was forced to return owing to the ice condi-tions. Quite a number of passengers for northern points are on board, and will be seriously inconvenienced if the ship is compelled to return.

Will Clear Coal Areas.

Mr. Thomas Thorburn, of the De-partment of Agriculture and Mines, leaves by this evening's express with a staff of men to clear the Howley coal outcrops at Grand Lake, Codroy and other places on the West Coast. Many of the seams have become covered with a growth of bush and sedge, the removal of which will greatly aid Prof. Dunstan, who will arrive shortly to inquire into our mineral possibilities.

West End Cemetery.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir,—I would like to call the attention of the Protestant people of St. John's to the disgraceful con-dition of the West End Cemetery. How they can allow their sacred prop-erty to get in such a deplorable state is beyond me, the paths are full of weeds, trees untrimmed, grass un-cut, stones at all angles, the fences and gates, such as they are, falling down, in fact, one part of the fence about forty yards along Waterford Bridge Road has been down for two months or more, and no attempt has been made to re-erect it, everything has a very neglected look, and not what one would expect from such a body of people.

I would suggest that the Board of Control pay a visit to the grounds, and I feel sure if there is a spark of shame in them, matters will be im-proved immediately. If funds are lacking a scheme might be started to collect from each member of the churches interested a small sum, say fifty cents, which all would gladly pay, an active caretaker might be ap-pointed one with no personal inter-ests outside the graveyard who would devote his whole time to the welfare of the property, and with a good helper should be able to get the place in first class shape, and keep it so, and see that flowers are not removed by parties so inclined.

No other country in the world would stand for such a state of affairs as exists at present in the cemetery in question, and its up to the management to wake up and do their duty. Thanking you for space, I remain, etc.

Here and There.

EXPRESS DIE. — The incoming express is due in the city at 3:30 p.m. to-day.

WEATHER.—It is calm and fine along the line of railway to-day, with the temperature ranging from 39 to 40 above.

LEAVES FOR MONTREAL. — Mr. B. Stafford leaves shortly for Montreal where he hopes to introduce his im-ment in the market at that city.

CLUTHA SAILS.—The barot, Clutha, Capt. Hallyard, sailed for Per-mambuco to-day, taking 6,200 pack-ages of codfish from the Monroe Ex-port Co.

BOWRINGS' BOATS. The Prospero left Westeyville early this morning, going north. The Portia left Burgeo at 10:20 a.m. to-day.

WILL LOSE LICENSES.—We have been informed that some young men of the city will lose their motor li-censes on account of reasons best known to the police authorities.

ERRATUM.—For Mrs. Delovpitz, $2.00, in the New Gower Street list of subscribers to Disaster Fund, pub-lished a few weeks ago, please read: Mrs. Duhamity, $2.00.

GOT TWO MONTHS.—The watch-man of the Rapewalk, who was con-victed and remanded for stealing ropes and twines, the property of the Colonial Cordage Company, came up to-day for sentence and got two months without the option of a fine.

WILL SPEAK TO-NIGHT. — Rev. Gordon Hatcher, B.A., B.D., who has just returned from Montreal after a very successful college course, will speak at the Literary Meeting of the Wesley Church Epworth League to-night. Something special may be ex-pected.

Many materials all sheer, are used in any one cotton dress. The effect is sometimes good and sometimes bad.

The new jerseys and sweaters are preferred to coats by some sporting women, as they have nothing to fly open and catch.

Very slender women who wear top-less corsets are using a corsetcover which ties on without buttons and has no bones.

A charming girle effect on a hand-made ballet dress was given simply by rows of shirring at the waist line.

Special Announcement.

We have just placed upon the market a new one cent Cigarette which is called the

Dear Sirs:—
In acknowledging receipt of cheque in payment of my endowment policy now maturing, I wish to thank you for the prompt way in which you have put my claim through. I did not have to wait a single day for my money as the papers were all in order beforehand.

I am pleased, too, with the way my investment has turned out. Besides having my insurance protection for $1,000, I have got all my money back and $400 besides. The Canada Life has my best good wishes for its continued success.

Yours truly,

Had Narrow Escape.

Mr. Joseph Peckford, of Hoyles-town, one of our best known and industrious fishermen, had a close call recently while setting his codtrap on the local fishing grounds. He had only one assistant with him while four men is the usual number required for such work. Mr. Peckford went ashore with the 'leader' himself and while 'making fast' a heavy sea hove in on the rocks, striking and hoisting him about six feet. Mr. Peckford was hurt and was unable to move. After a considerable while he was lifted into his motor boat by his companion and brought home. He was badly bruised about the side and back and hurt internally as well, necessitating the constant care of a physician. He is now, we are glad to say, almost as well as ever.
