TO-DAY. What The World wishes most to the elections over, the political excitement sudside, the differences of the contest for gotten, and business assume its wonted course.

We hope that this is the last election that will be fought out on the old tory and grit lines. We hope as we know that the next contest will be on broader issues : that the day is fast approaching when the people of Canada will have to say on which side they are on as regards the future of Canada ; when men will have to vote whether they are in favor of nationalty or against it. Recent events have hastened this issue ; it is nearer than many of us imagine. From to-day let us begin the work of preparation for it.

The public may depend on reliable and impartial announcements. As we have no party to serve no returns will be withheld. but everything will be given just as it comes hot from the wires. Be on hand and read the results.

THEY WHO ARE ABOUT TO DIE.

There are 176 seats to be contested to-day and there are at least 352 men anxious to fill them; as a consequence 176 will be left. Of course not one of the 352 has any idea that he will be a defeated candidate-it will be the other fellow in every case. Now this, as far as we have any knowledge, has never yet occurred on this earth, though there are some philosophers who say that there may be worlds where three and two make four. So it may be within the possibilities to see 352 candidates elected to fill 176 seats. If this does not occur then we hope the 176 men who have been imposing on the innocence and good nature of their 176 wives, by telling them in the most cold-blooded manner that their husbands will surely be members of parliament tonight, will be visited by some sure and speedy punishment. Their constant story to their dames has been, "Wait till you see me get the best of him." To impose on one's own common sense is pardonable ; to befool a trusting wife in the manner described is akin to bigamy. SECTARIANISM IN THE SCHOOL BOOM.

Data friendless "stills" from the nospital to select from. Nearly six thousand bodies pass through the morgue every year. The cumber last year, to be exact, was 5505. There is an average of one "floater" a day taken from the East or North river. Three hundred and sixty-five mysteries a year. The great majority of those who come to the morgue are poor and friendless dead from the charity hospitals. About six hundred of these are "wicked" for the medical colleges, To THE WORLD : The hon. secretary of the bank sports has given out this morning

these are "picked" for the medical colleges, and linger in this upper world for some time on the dissecting tables. The rest are tumbled in to the Potter's field at H rt's the bank sports has given out this morning that the sports will be postponed till the fall, on account of some of the clerks in the banks not having had enough practice though the sports have been advertised three or four weeks. Now, I think this a island, without burnal service ligious ceremony. While the keeper of the morgue was reviving some of his stories of mysterious bodies which had be n in his care, a little tinkle of a tell wa heard at the gave of the wall which separates the dead house from the street. An assistant answered it. An old woman, a man bent over with years, and a child followed him in. They entered the dead-house and looked at the corpses. There dead-house and looked at the corpuses. There were about a dozen of them. At length the woman said : "This is she," and bowed over a young woman who had been a "floater." There were tears in the old I hope, however, they will reconsider their decision and not entertain a postponement and if those who have profited by the time given them, make a better show on the 24th than these who woman's eyes. The three were tears in the old woman's eyes. The three were poorly clad and came from Multerry street. The dead girl wore various gew-gaws and was flashily dressed. The little girl looked at her. It appears Davis had a grudge against The World because his name was given along with that of others who attended the West Toronto conservative nomination, and being under the influence of liquor and meeting under the influence of liquor and meeting Mr. Carger he took the opportunity to "club him." But he got more than he bargained for, and when the police appear-ed people thought a big fire had broken out so fast did Mr. Davis run. Ten minutes after he made some insulting reference to another citizen, and as soon as the latter appeared Davis took refuge in a saloon. The fire and gas committee might "investigate" Mr. Davis as his record is getting notorious.
