He regretted the absence of Col. Burnaby, who contested Birmingham in the conservative interest in 1880, and who was killed in the Soudan campaign. The authors of that ghastly war sought arenewal of the onfidence of the electors. Mr. Chamberlain, he said, sought a renewal of the confidence of his constituents. (Groans, hisses and cheers), Mr. Chamberlain gave splendid promises in regard to the future, but refused to explain the past. He remained silent concerning the enormous bloodshed of gallant Englishmen in the Soudan. Mr. Gladstone [cheers and hisses] had issued a lengthy and vague manifesto, explaining nothing, and leaving the situation of the liberals befiling and confused. The meeting was uproarious throughout, but was generally favorable to Lord Churchill.

Lord Randolph admitted that the conservatives were responsible for Gen. Gordon's mission to the Soudan but he declared the:

Mormons Cleared Out.

Tolono, Ill.. Oct. 23.—Alonzo Johnson and Samuel Moody, missionaries from Mormonland, have been holding nightly meetings in a school-house on the outskirts of the town endeavoring to obtain converts. Several of the village maidens had begun to take a lively interest in mormonism and polygamy. Before the people were awakened to a sense of what was going on, nearly twenty young girls, it is said, had tacitly consented to join the saints. Last evening forty indig ant churchmen swooped down on the school-house, and after sending a shower of stones and rotten eggs through the windows, cleared out the buildings. French Colonization. Editor World: The tone of Bruce's communication I object to. He appears to think that as an English speaking man his Honus Distributed, authority is paramount. Does he not know that the Gallic, or French speaking SPECIAL NOTICE. individual, has an uncommonly good opinion of himself and of "la grande nation" from which he is descended. Bruce does not approve of French colonization—very likely not; but the Frenchman does, and to use a familiar expression, "What is he (Bruce) going to do about it?" We shall (Bruce) going to do about it?" We shall settle on both sides of the Ottawa if it suits us without asking leave of the Bruce family; and in every part of the dominion likewise, from the rising to the setting of the sun. Bruce says imperiously, "This dominion of ours (who are the 'ours') has had some experience of French colonization, and it was not of a kind to recommend its and it was not of a kind to recommend its continuance as a policy." This is Bruce's private opinion, and we, 2,000,000 of French Canadians, might smile, shrug our shoulders, and say, "What a deucedly funny fellow!" Bruce sympathizes with English minorities in Quebec; but does the nationality that he belongs to give any special privileges to minorities not of its own breed? In Ireland the minority of Protestants holds nearly all the appointments; in England, with a Catholic population of two millens, there is not one English Catholic member of parliament. What nationality do the officials in Hindostan belong to? and when the fair-minded and just, Marquis of Ripon, stood out for equal rights and fair play for the majority, who opposed him? Would not English arrogames and love of domination have crushed to pisces, ages ago, the Gaelic race of Intellection and not accountered. cance and love of domination have crushed to pieces, ages ago, the Gaelic race of Ireland if Englishmen had not encountered in that ancient and unconquerable people a stay and a tenacity superior to their own; and which, I have no doubt from the present aspect of things, will eventually overpower them? VERDICT OF THE INSURED.

Companies as show a good record in the matter of giving satisfaction to their memoers, and inducing them to stay.

Experience teaches that from four to six or seven per cent. of all insurance in force, at the close of any year, drops out through business failures and fiard times. Pretty much all above this may be considered as a beacon light, where it is seen, to warn the public off the shoals beneath.

Name of The following table gives the same information respecting the Companitate portion of their business lying within the Dominion of Canada—showin upon their merits as companies in the esteem of the people of Canada who is with them:—

The first-class position of the Ætna Life Insurance Company, in both tables is nothing new. That is its usual, every day accomplishment. It sells a first-class article every time. If 10, 12 or 15 persons out of each 100 who go in, are seen to quickly come out again, when only 5 or 6 should come out, it is good evidence that most of them found themselves in the wrong place, and were disappointed. But when 20, 30, 40 or 50 out of each 100 rush out again what better testimony could be given to outsiders in favor of making a wise and discriminating choice of the best companies once for all. A good article is worth having. Get the best. In life insurance, the best poincy costs a great deal less, in ten years' time, than the poorest and most uncertain article going.

On this latter point drop a card to the undersigned, at the Office of the Ætna Life Insurance Company, Toronto, for information, WILLIAM H. ORR, Manager

The case had its origin in the fact that more than a year ago a woman of the name of Hammermann was sentenced to two years' imprisonment for attempting to extort money by threats from Prof. Graf, while a similar but less severe punishment was inflicted on a man—not her husbandwho had abetted her in the effort. The pretext for this attemptatextortion was the charge that Prof. Graf had taken improper liberties with Frau Hammermann's daughter, a girl under 14, who had stood as model to the painter, and not only did he swear that this accusation was false, but he also denied on each the assertion of the counsel for Hammerman that another girl, Bertha Rother and her sister Anne emphatically gainsaid this accusation, but the public prosecutor held that there was evidence to show that all had sworn falsely. Therefore both sisters were bracketed with the professor on separate and double counts of perjury and instigation to perjury, while their mother sat beside them at the bar on the charge of having acted as a procuress to her own offspring.

Corrupted, the remedy is at hand. Take yee's Sarsaparilla.

The main issue of the trial hinged on the question whether in reality Prof. Graf had kept up what the Germans call a verhaltniss, or liaison, with Bertha Rother, a young woman whose singular grace and beauty seemed to mark her out for a better career than that which had repeatedly brought her into conflict with the police despective.

Prof. Graf did not seek to deny that he Prof. Graf did not seek to deny that he had parted with very large sums of money to her and her family, and that he had also made other social sacrifices on her behalf; but contended that all this was done from purely platonic motives and from the desire to secure the artistic services of so suitable and inestimable a model, His professional honor, he argued, was concerned in the success of a ploture called "The Marchen," showing a full-length nude female figure of exquisite and fairy-like beauty, on which he had been laboring for the last six years (and even during his late incarceration) without being wholly able to realize his ideal. being wholly able to realize his ideal.
And it was on this account, he said, that he had been obliged to bind Bertha Rother to him by methods of fascination which, though naturally calculated to excite the suspicion of the world, were altogether harmless and honorable.

Among his papers the police had found poems addressed to his model in the style of Mr. Swinburne's most sensuous effusions, though their author con-tended that these were nothing but the tended that these were nothing but the exaggerated expression of innocent attachment to the being who inspired his art; while in his testamentary address to his sons, which was likewise profuged by the same merciless inquisitors, he solomnly avowed that he had made great sacrifices on behalf of his model for the sake of his beloved art, but that he had none the less been faithful to their mother.

Such, in brief, was the trial.

The prosecution of Prof. Graf, it is generally admitted, was an entire mistake, due to a series of untoward incidents supporting the presumption of his guilt, and the sympathy of the public was all along on his side. Indeed, the press has now almost unanimously hailed his acquirtal with joy and congratulation.

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—At the Central criminal court here this morning, shortly after midnight, there was concluded a trial which has riveted the attention of the source of the string. It is a hat made on the same plan as a silk hat. Instead of a silk cover on the stiffened body is stuck a felt covering free from stiffening. It is the mact durable hat: if ornshed it can be blocked same as when new. It can not be broken as the ordinary felt hat. With the patent steel wire brim, as originated by Smith, the hatter, it is destined to take the

which has riveted the attention of the capital for the last nine days. The man in whom centered all the interest attaching to the trial—Prof. Graf, member of the Royal Academy of Arts—is one of the most distinguished historical and portrait painters in the capital. Several of his masterpieces, among which may be mentioned the "Reconciliation of Wittekind and Charlemagne," and a series of Theseus themes, adorn the museums and picture galleries here, and it is understood that the style of his art procured him the special patronage of one of the highest ladies in the land. Prof. Graf was intensified by the fact that, in accordance with a Prussian law, he has been languishing in prison for the last six months, pending the ferreting out of evidence against him by the public prosecutor; and this evidence was of such a nature as to make it likely that the public would have to be debarred from listening to its production; but at the last moment the court decided that, of two evils, privacy or publicity, the latter on the whole was the less.

But the proud, hard look melted into sweetness and tenderness when on her daily walk through the grounds at Tervueren, where Empress Charlotte was then residing, her eyes followed the flight of birds or clouds.

After the conflagration of Tervueren the little court moved to Bouchout, and the impress has in the course of time become less excited. Some years ago it was one of her fancies to order a large number of her fancies to order a large number of elegant costumes, each of which required some thirty yards of material, having to be made, Mexico fashion, with innumerable pleats. Several hours are spent every day at the piano, and as Empress Charlotte is herself a distinguished artiste, these musical entertainments are highly appreciated by all. Fancy work is also one of the favorite ecupations of the Empress, and her embroideries are said to equal those of the best Paris workers. While listening to the music, or busy with her needle, the empress never utters a single word, but seems lost in thought, and it is very rarely that during her daily walks she the silence. Carlyle's house in Cheynes walk is still to let. It has been untenanted ever since he left it for the last time. The building offers a rather curious example of the Because the philosopher had lived there the rent of the successor was fixed at a rate double that of the neighboring dwellings, and the selling price announced at $25,000.

A great many people admire Thomas Carlyle; he has even still a school and a system; but somehow the anthusiasm of his system; but somehow the enthusiasm of his disciples and followers seems to express itself in admiration of his style or in laudation of his genius. The votary is still wanted who wishes to pay double rent for the privilege of living under the roof which sheltered him for life.

French at the Cape.
Our South African Empire-Greswell.
The French language was stamped out so quickly that in less than 150 years after the first landing of the refugees not a man spoke it. A quaint story is told of one of e French Boers, who was asked by a traveler whether he spoke French, his hame, De Ciere, being decidedly a French ame, De Ciere, being decidedly a French ame, "No." was his reply, in the broken Dutch patois of the Cape, "but I have French Rambouillet rum," Not a trace of the Cape, "but I have for quadrille and evening parties. Tuning a specialty.

French literature is preserved, and the spirit of enquiry and scientific thought so peculiar to the French nation seems to have disappeared altogether. Mr. Needham Cust, writing on the South African languages in a scientific spirit, mentions the fact that the Boars alone of the peeples of South Africa had contributed nothing to help him in his researches. There is absolutely no indigenous literature among the Boar or farmer class. The only poet South Africa oan boast of is a Mr. Pringle, a South Africa oan boast of is a Mr. Pringle, a South who came to Algoa bay in 1820.

Revolution in the Clething Trade.
Mr. Jamieson, the famous clothier, has issued an illustrated pamphlet in which he announces his determination to sell all goods in future upon the small profit of 10 per cent. on the actual east. In this pamphlet he discusses the "supply house system," and shows the numerous evils attendant upon that practice, and the enormous profits of necessity charged by these institutions, Mr. Jamieson's reputation as a business man of many years' standing in this city is a sufficient guarantee that this new departure of his is a genuine, affair, and his preparations are such that the most fastidious customer who may call and inspect his premises and stock will not fail to get just what he wants. To accomplish this task of revolutionizing the system of clothing the people, he ought to have the support of the general public.
