Public Ownership Favored

Kingston Citizens Vote To-Day To Purchase Power Plant

W. F. Maclean, M.P., Addressed a Representative Gathering in the Opera House on Saturday Night on the Municipalization of Public Utilities.

Advantages of Public Ownership. (W. F. Maclean at Kingston.) 1. The public utility franchise, whatever it is, is your own.

2. It's your own for all time. 3. And it's your own to do what you like with it whenever you like to do it.

4. Public ownership gives full measure and heating measure in the service supplied; private ownership cheats in the measure; puts half a horse power in an arc light where it contracted to put a full horse power; puts 8 candles in an incandescent light and charges for 16; reduces the price of gas and then gets the money back by increasing the pressure.

5. Public ownership gives the utility or service at the lowest possible price to the greatest number of people; private ownership limits the service to the least number of people at the highest possible price that will secure a dividend for shareholders. Public ownership serves the people; private ownership serves the shareholders.

6. Public ownership lets a city control the entrance of all trolley lines from outside; lets the city offer the greatest inducement to industries in the way of cheap power, cheap light, aiding accommodation, etc.

7. The essentials to-day of city life are cheap electrical energy for light and power, cheap gas for fuel, cheap and unimpeded street car travel. Cheap gas for fuel is one of the greatest boons a housewife can have.

8. Public ownership pays its men better; treats them better, as Glasgow testifies.

FRANCE AND BRITAIN UNITE SETTLE DISPUTED MATTERS

Canada Freed From the Complications Caused by the French Treaty Rights.

London, March 20.—General satisfaction prevails here at the announcement that a basis of settlement has been reached regarding the main questions on which Britain and France were at issue. Although no official confirmation has yet been given, the information has come from so many usually reliable sources that it is accepted as not only probable but substantially correct.

When Canada Comes In. The settlement as outlined follows the lines which were long ago hinted at in the Anglo-French agreement of a free hand in Egypt and the acknowledgment of her supremacy. France becomes paramount in Morocco and her dream of a vast consolidated North-western African empire comes another step nearer realization. CANADA RECEIVES THE GREAT BAY OF FUNDLAND COAST, PURCHASED FOR HER BY THE MOTHERLAND EARLY BY A MONEY COMPANION AND PARTLY BY THE GIFT OF PART OF THE BRITISH TREATY OF SINKER, WHICH SECURES FOR FRANCE A MORE CONVENIENT ACCESS TO LAKE CHARLESTON AND THE GREAT RIVER SEAS.

These constitute the only dangerous matters in dispute, and with the taken out of the way, the minor questions affecting Siam, the New Hebrides, the Persian Gulf and various other African disagreements ought to present no difficulty.

Will Not Be Exacted. There will be no inclination here to watch the gain and loss to the contracting parties in any very exact balance. If France gains positively in territory, Britain gains negatively in the removal of French treaty and other rights which fettered her freedom of action and caused many anxious diplomatic moments.

British secure a great direct advantage for Canada which will facilitate also the rounding off of the Dominion by the inclusion of Newfoundland. Both countries reap a vast benefit in the consolidation of friendly feeling already so auspiciously initiated and in the creation of joint interests and mutual recognition, which must tend in the future to closer co-operation and support in the foreign policy of the nations.

Incidentally, too, it puts an effectual stop to the German diplomatic wheel by securing the preservation of absolute neutrality in the pending eastern crisis. Any hopes Germany cherished of adding to her Chinese possessions is blasted, and Russia must prepare herself to carry the war thru on her own resources. Japan's satisfaction that she is to be allowed to fight it out alone is wonderful evidence of her confidence and self-confidence that she can do so to a successful issue.

POOR LAW IMMIGRANTS. J. J. Kelso Urges Avoidance of Conflict With Canadian Opinion. (Canadian Associated Press Cable.)

London, March 21.—Lord Crewe, chairman of the State Children's Aid Association, in urging the desirability of greater emigration to Canada of law children, denounced the Metropolitan Board of Guardians for their proposal for a start, and urged the Canadian public opinion. Lord Crewe's address was a work of voluntary agencies is sufficient.

GIVES A LOVING CUP. Cambridge, Mass., March 20.—Dr. Charles W. Elliot, president of Harvard University since 1889, celebrated his 70th birthday anniversary to-day at University hall the faculty presented him with a loving cup. The anniversary was recognized by the student body in various ways.

NOT SETTLED YET. (Canadian Associated Press Cable.) London, March 21.—The correspondence of The London Echo in Paris wires that the question of Newfoundland proved the most delicate of all, and he believes it is not yet decided.

Young Student is Missing With No Apparent Reason

Left Boarding House Thursday Night and Friends Are 'Seriously Alarmed.' The mysterious disappearance of John W. Pierce, a young college student of Toronto, is puzzling the police. His friends are much concerned.

Pierce boarded at 25 Wood-street. His acquaintances here and at the School of Practical Science are equally amazed over his unaccountable absence. He is but twenty years old and quite uncomplained. He has not been seen since Thursday evening. He stepped out of the door of his home and dropped out of sight. He was seen after closing the door the police have been unable to discover the fact.

All Is Quiet On the Yalu Opposing Armies Far Apart Battle Story Was a Fake

St. Petersburg Startled by Attempt of Japanese to Land in Helena Bay—No More Changes in Russia's Leaders at Seat of War.

London, March 21.—Nothing has reached here to confirm the report that a battle has taken place on the Yalu, in which it was said the Russians had captured 1500 prisoners. A despatch from St. Petersburg to a news agency, dated yesterday, says there has been no change in the war situation, and that all is quiet on both land and sea.

On the Russian line from Pingyang to the Yalu River, and the Japanese line to Genzan there have been slight skirmishes between scouts, but no battle has taken place, as the distance between the opposing armies is great. The bulk of the Russian forces, the despatch adds, has not yet passed the Yalu River.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says that the military authorities were startled by the attempt of the Japanese to land in Helena Bay, as the nearest Russian force that could have been used against them consisted of three rifle regiments at Newchwang. The weather having hindered the Japanese landing, energetic measures are now being adopted to prevent such a descent.

The correspondent reported that a Japanese squadron arrived at the mouth of the Liao River Saturday night and landed a party which, after reconnoitering, re-embarked. PORTS HAD NO GUNS. London, March 21.—A correspondent of The Times at Newchwang cables: "According to information received here, the reason the Vladivostok forts did not reply to the bombardment by the Japanese was because the batteries were not provided with guns. Since the bombardment parties have been working night and day to place guns in position, the bombardment destroyed the guns before they were ready to be used."

CHINA ASKS FREE ENTRY OF COOLIES INTO CANADA. Result of Sanction to Immigration of Yellow Labor Into Transvaal. (Canadian Associated Press Cable.) London, March 21.—The London Press states that the Chinese government, in returning its sanction to the emigration of Chinese coolies into the Transvaal, demands their free entry into Vancouver. It is pointed out that this might result in a serious disturbance of the relations between Britain and the United States.

ONCE BITTEN, WAGE SHY. IS CANADA'S ATTITUDE. No Joint Commission for Settlement of Our Tariff Trouble With Germany. (Canadian Associated Press Cable.) London, March 21.—The Daily Chronicle says "once bit, twice shy" expresses the attitude of Canada towards the colonial office proposal for the solving of the tariff difficulties between Canada and Germany by a joint commission. Rightly or wrongly, Canada feels that the English representative in the Alaska case gave away her case, and she is in no mood to risk a similar result in the case of Germany.

with gas for 75 cents per thousand feet. He strongly urged the people to get out and work that they might in the street railway by the Toronto World and Mr. Maclean. Were it not for these two factors the citizens would not have gained what they did at the hands of the legislature. It was a most important service, he thought, that they all appreciated and he thanked Mr. Maclean and his party for their work.

Mr. Maclean was then called upon to speak. He thanked the citizens of Kingston for coming to hear him under such unfavorable conditions as the weather. He would feel repaid for their sacrifice by a discussion of the advantages of public ownership. He wanted to point out that it was not a new thing. It had been tried and was found to work admirably. It was found to be the best way of providing the public utilities. Europe many of the public utilities were now owned by the state-owned telephones.

In Germany, France and Russia the public utilities were in operation and in Germany they were one of the principal sources of revenue. The great cities of England, Scotland and France were taking over their public utilities. In the United States, the city of New York had taken over the street railway. The city of London, however, the greatest city in the world, strange to say, had not taken over its public utilities. The people would long before they would be able to take them over. The water supply was the fact that they would be more than likely to take them over. The water supply was the fact that they would be more than likely to take them over.

What should be done? The benefit of public ownership. In our own country we were already striving for what municipal ownership means. The street railway and the gas works were examples. These towns have gone into it on their own. The city of London had municipalized all its public utilities. It had, what perhaps no other city has, control over part of its steam railway service. That they are better off by the change has been proved in every instance. Their street cars were paying, as well as their waterworks, gas and lighting plants. They are able to meet many miles away, in fact, to give these services in many instances at a lower cost than the companies formerly actually need personal contract. And charged.

Mr. Maclean declared that he had decided to risk his political future on this issue of public ownership. He would stand or fall by it. He would be directly in the interests of the people, and it was they whom he was trying to serve. He had no other fight, he said, for his principles. In evidence of the mistake the people had made in giving away their rights in the street railway, he had to fight undisciplined forces who would not come out and declare themselves. He had intended to persevere, and felt sure that the time would come when other people would see the wisdom of this scheme for the public good. The object of society and government was to give the greatest number of people the greatest number of the common comforts of life, especially to the poor. This life is a struggle for the most of us, and we should do as much as we can to assist the weaker. The end was realized under private ownership. In private ownership the man who administered the service made the largest possible dividends for the shareholders, who were but a few. The administration of public ownership gave the largest number of people the greatest service at the smallest possible cost. Or, in other words, Mr. Maclean, in the greatest service to the public. Private corporations do not like to extend their service. Public ownership strives to serve as many as are in need of the service.

As to the great issue. Mr. Maclean then drew the attention of the meeting to the fact that they would be asked to give up the right of supplying sufficient money to take over the power plant and to run it as a public utility. He said that there were a few reasons why they should vote in favor of the bylaw. First of all, he said, under public ownership the money is your own. It's your own for all time, and you can do what you like with it. He said that they would be asked to give up the right of what you like when the time comes. It is the city that you are going to free, he would then be asked to give up the present conditions, said the speaker. It was a city like Guelph that was going to profit and the other cities would be attracted by cheap light and motive power, and in every other way. He said that they would be asked to give up the right of all their public utilities. One of the best services they hold to-day, said the speaker, was the street railway. He said that they would be asked to give up the right of that city of trolley lines, and there could be made arrangements with any of the proposed radicals that are being talked of now. They would not be held up by a private corporation that would demand a fabulous sum to give the right to traverse the streets to any of these electric railways that proposed to come in. He, in passing, referred to the conditions as they applied to the case in Kingston. The Street Railway Company held the rights of the streets. They could keep out any roads that proposed to come from Montreal or Toronto along the Kingston road.

In Service of Companies. It was his impression, and he was in a position to know, that representatives of the companies were in the city to give the companies holding public franchises, and they sold the people that they might see these corporation grafters. In the case of Toronto they could travel for two cents a mile on the street cars if they had the franchise. To-day the cars run there from 5 o'clock the morning till noon to pay a dividend on $5,000,000 of watered stock, and from that time they are operating to pay the interest on bonds which were used for the construction of the road. After that they ran to pay the money to the condition the Kingston Street Railway Company was in. He read from the financial statement as supplied by themselves. They had issued $200,000 worth of stock, $200,000 in bonds and had a floating liability of over $50,000. This money could not all have been put into a road seven years in length. Where was the money to then? he asked. In fact he was there to declare that it would not bring more than 20,000.

The next point he touched upon was the question of cheap fuel and the necessity of the public having this under its control. He said, he thought, by far the best and most convenient of all fuel. It saved a great deal of work and annoyance and gave so much better results, and in the end, he thought, it was cheaper. Provided it was a public service in Toronto, gas was installed in the first place with the idea that it should be operated in the interests of the people. After a time it came under the control of individuals, and the citizens had to suffer in consequence. They further reduced the price of a fair cheap service. It would be still cheaper if the municipality had it. It could be run successfully with a further reduction in the price to 70 cents a thousand feet instead of 80 cents as now. And it was the speaker's opinion that the City of Kingston when they got hold of their plant would be able to supply the people tracts or charters, but the citizens' rights must be equally respected and contracts must at times be interfered with to give them these rights. It had already been done, and should be done so again. They talk about private interests, but what about public interests? Mr. Maclean asked. It was of much more importance, in any change, that the public interests be protected. He was a most important service, he thought, that they all appreciated and he thanked Mr. Maclean and his party for their work.

At this point Senator Sullivan interrupted to ask the speaker what he thought the best method of managing the power plants was. He said that the city would take it over. Mr. Maclean answered that that depended largely upon circumstances. In his opinion, he said, a commission of three men might take charge, or a committee of the council. If the men show themselves to be unworthy of the trust placed in them, put them out and get others. For that matter, if there were any of the city's representatives, whether in the council or in the legislature, that were not serving the citizens, let them turn them out. And keep on punishing these people and give them to understand that they must serve the public. It looked to him as if the power plants were being managed in the greatest alarm. He requested the people to refuse such a request. They were now the masters of the situation, and it would indeed be poor policy to let any rival on any pretext come in to the field and compete with them in the same commodity. If this man, he said, had the request wanted to supply the citizens with any surplus energy let him sell it to the municipality. He would not let any other individual or corporation, public or private, field and menace the city's plant.

The Street Railway Company has had a charter for forty years. Mr. Maclean declared that it would not run that length of time by any means. The people would long before they would be able to take them over. The water supply was the fact that they would be more than likely to take them over. The water supply was the fact that they would be more than likely to take them over.

What should be done? The benefit of public ownership. In our own country we were already striving for what municipal ownership means. The street railway and the gas works were examples. These towns have gone into it on their own. The city of London had municipalized all its public utilities. It had, what perhaps no other city has, control over part of its steam railway service. That they are better off by the change has been proved in every instance. Their street cars were paying, as well as their waterworks, gas and lighting plants. They are able to meet many miles away, in fact, to give these services in many instances at a lower cost than the companies formerly actually need personal contract. And charged.

Mr. Maclean declared that he had decided to risk his political future on this issue of public ownership. He would stand or fall by it. He would be directly in the interests of the people, and it was they whom he was trying to serve. He had no other fight, he said, for his principles. In evidence of the mistake the people had made in giving away their rights in the street railway, he had to fight undisciplined forces who would not come out and declare themselves. He had intended to persevere, and felt sure that the time would come when other people would see the wisdom of this scheme for the public good. The object of society and government was to give the greatest number of people the greatest number of the common comforts of life, especially to the poor. This life is a struggle for the most of us, and we should do as much as we can to assist the weaker. The end was realized under private ownership. In private ownership the man who administered the service made the largest possible dividends for the shareholders, who were but a few. The administration of public ownership gave the largest number of people the greatest service at the smallest possible cost. Or, in other words, Mr. Maclean, in the greatest service to the public. Private corporations do not like to extend their service. Public ownership strives to serve as many as are in need of the service.

As to the great issue. Mr. Maclean then drew the attention of the meeting to the fact that they would be asked to give up the right of supplying sufficient money to take over the power plant and to run it as a public utility. He said that there were a few reasons why they should vote in favor of the bylaw. First of all, he said, under public ownership the money is your own. It's your own for all time, and you can do what you like with it. He said that they would be asked to give up the right of what you like when the time comes. It is the city that you are going to free, he would then be asked to give up the present conditions, said the speaker. It was a city like Guelph that was going to profit and the other cities would be attracted by cheap light and motive power, and in every other way. He said that they would be asked to give up the right of all their public utilities. One of the best services they hold to-day, said the speaker, was the street railway. He said that they would be asked to give up the right of that city of trolley lines, and there could be made arrangements with any of the proposed radicals that are being talked of now. They would not be held up by a private corporation that would demand a fabulous sum to give the right to traverse the streets to any of these electric railways that proposed to come in. He, in passing, referred to the conditions as they applied to the case in Kingston. The Street Railway Company held the rights of the streets. They could keep out any roads that proposed to come from Montreal or Toronto along the Kingston road.

In Service of Companies. It was his impression, and he was in a position to know, that representatives of the companies were in the city to give the companies holding public franchises, and they sold the people that they might see these corporation grafters. In the case of Toronto they could travel for two cents a mile on the street cars if they had the franchise. To-day the cars run there from 5 o'clock the morning till noon to pay a dividend on $5,000,000 of watered stock, and from that time they are operating to pay the interest on bonds which were used for the construction of the road. After that they ran to pay the money to the condition the Kingston Street Railway Company was in. He read from the financial statement as supplied by themselves. They had issued $200,000 worth of stock, $200,000 in bonds and had a floating liability of over $50,000. This money could not all have been put into a road seven years in length. Where was the money to then? he asked. In fact he was there to declare that it would not bring more than 20,000.

The next point he touched upon was the question of cheap fuel and the necessity of the public having this under its control. He said, he thought, by far the best and most convenient of all fuel. It saved a great deal of work and annoyance and gave so much better results, and in the end, he thought, it was cheaper. Provided it was a public service in Toronto, gas was installed in the first place with the idea that it should be operated in the interests of the people. After a time it came under the control of individuals, and the citizens had to suffer in consequence. They further reduced the price of a fair cheap service. It would be still cheaper if the municipality had it. It could be run successfully with a further reduction in the price to 70 cents a thousand feet instead of 80 cents as now. And it was the speaker's opinion that the City of Kingston when they got hold of their plant would be able to supply the people

Parliament Let Quietly in the Kingdom

Emperor's Speech Refers to the Loyalty and Valor of His Subjects.

Tokyo, March 20.—With stately ceremony, the special session of parliament, convened to provide the money needed towards the war against Russia, was opened at 11 o'clock this morning. The emperor, clad in the uniforms of a generalissimo, rode in the great state coach from the palace to the parliament house, and personally addressed the peers and commoners. For the first time the crown prince attended the ceremony. He followed his father to an improvised throne in the peers' hall, and stood by his right side, while he read his appeal to his subjects.

The emperor left the palace at 10:30 o'clock, accompanied by a group of imperial aides and members of the imperial household. His escort consisted of two troops of lancers, the emperor's personal guard, and a brilliant uniformed, white silk carried by the emperor's personal guard. The emperor's speech was a masterpiece of eloquence. He spoke of the loyalty and valor of his subjects, and of the sacrifices they had made for the empire. He promised to continue to lead the empire to victory.

Long before the emperor reached the peers' chamber, the members of the public twice the number of the emperor, occupied the right side of the chamber and the commoners in evening dress filled the left side. The members of the peers' chamber had been removed, and the members of the public were seated in semi-circles with the emperor and vice-presidents of the chamber.

Running a Country Paper

Some of the Tribulations of the Rural Mosier of Public Opinion. The editor of a rural weekly paper is looked upon by the populace as running his paper solely for their accommodation. If there is a tea meeting in the village church, for which he receives a complimentary ticket worth 25c. If a man has some extra large potatoes or apples, he leaves one (not a bag) on the scribe's desk and expects a column notice in the paper, congratulatory on "the success attained by an esteemed friend, who has given his berries or special fruit in his own care. The village doctor, if he has an extra large fish always informs the editor of the weight of the fish and shows him the head, but forgets that the "proof of the pudding" is in the eating. The editor publishes the angler's story, which is branded as a "fishy story" by 90 per cent. of his subscribers. The editor reads the fisherman and his immediate family.

Editor Left Stranded. While the country editor has many drawbacks to contend with, his life is not all darkness. He has a "stand in" in the village, and the schoolmaster, the policeman, the railway and steamboat companies, just the same as in a town. He has a "stand in" in the village, and the schoolmaster, the policeman, the railway and steamboat companies, just the same as in a town. How to Fill Space. One of the great troubles that beset a country editor is the failure of his boiler-plate to arrive from the city in time. One experience of a witness was "funny. A collision on the road prevented the delivery of a certain boiler-plate, which meant that all the plate of old patent medicine ads. in the office had to be used. The editor had been assured that a foreign potentate of some sort had once been cured by his medicine, and his picture had been published in nearly every paper in the country. DEATH OF J. J. PEARSON.

Newmarket, March 19.—The death took place yesterday of Jas. J. Pearson, registrar of North York, which position he held since its creation in 1863. He was 75 years of age, and his father, coming from Pennsylvania in 1800, settled between Newmarket and Aurora. Mr. Pearson was educated in Toronto and at Oberlin College, O. He married Mary Ann Kennedy in 1854, who died ten years later, and he remarried in 1868 a daughter of S. T. Wickham, who survives. Deceased was a member of the Friends' Church.

Wages Reduction Agreed Upon.

Pittsburg, March 19.—The demand of the manufacturers for a reduction in the sheet and tin plate was scaled has been conceded by the general executive board of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Tin Workers. The new scale for sheet calls for a reduction averaging about 8 per cent. in addition to the ten per cent cut that went into effect Jan. 1. There are many idle union sheet plants in the country, but it is expected that most of them will be put in operation under the new terms. The executive board also decide to make a reduction in the tin plate scale amounting to about 20 per cent.

Fire Loss of $50,000.

New York, March 19.—The seven-story furniture storehouse of R. J. Horner and Co. on West 24th-st. was gutted by fire above the second story to-day, causing a loss of $50,000. The rescue of Annie Healy, aged 18 years, was the most thrilling feature of the fire. Miss Healy was working alone in the rear of the fourth floor of the building when the explosion occurred and was cut off from the stairway. Louis Mayer and Frank Klop, two employes of the storage department, carried her to a window on the east side of the building, and by forming a living bridge helped her to a nearby building.

On Way to Jerusalem.

Aderman Woods Cannot Be Excused On Ground of Ignorance of the Law

Judge Morgan.

Argument in Assessment Department Investigation Partially Completed on Saturday, Fully on Monday.

After consuming fourteen days, strung out over a period of six weeks, the civic investigation into the assessment department reached the argument stage Saturday. If the public interest in the case is measured by the two score spectators in Judge Morgan's courtroom, the exciting charges and counter-assertions of the dozen lawyers and special prosecutors engaged has not crossed the city to any serious degree in the contentions.

Mr. Lobb for the city, Mr. Du Verne for Ald. Dunn and Mr. Johnston for the commissioner concluded their addresses Saturday, Monday Mr. Hales, Mr. Godfrey and Mr. Riddell will conclude the arguments. The court is expected to return his findings with the evidence to the council within two weeks. The ultimate conclusions of the court may be anticipated by the forecast of Judge Morgan's views announced during this discussion.

For instance, he declared that the act of Ald. Woods could be excused, not upon the ground of ignorance of the law nor on the ground of mistake, but on the ground of mistake.

Mr. Johnston, Mr. DuVerne asked the court to lay down certain principles in his finding that would establish the property was made the vehicle for the assessment. Further, he did not think dishonest motives could be attributed to Rev. Frank Porter or his father, no matter what impression Ald. Woods may have secured from his conversations with members of the family.

Mr. Lobb was not very severe in his arraignment of Mr. Fleming. This has been left to the summing up of Mr. Riddell. It is expected that the chief counsel for the city will declare Fleming, Page and Ald. Woods guilty of a crime, but that the act of Ald. Woods could be excused, not upon the ground of ignorance of the law nor on the ground of mistake, but on the ground of mistake.

There was no poetry, no sentiment, no facts that confronted the court. Mr. Johnston observed by way of Mr. Fleming's new system was not the complete success he claimed for it. Mr. Du Verne was especially anxious that the act of Ald. Woods could be excused, not upon the ground of ignorance of the law nor on the ground of mistake, but on the ground of mistake.

had, Forman, he thought, had in mind the general rule that such names handed over the counter by reputable persons should go on the list. If Page had spoken to Forman, there was no need of mentioning the matter to both.

Therefore when Page says Fleming gave him the list, what could have been his purpose in going to Forman? This was a proposition that appealed to the speaker, and he submitted it for the court's consideration. He insisted that wherever the record of circumstances made it possible, Page was contradicted all the way.

As to Mayor Howland's failure to do so, the speaker had nothing to do with the people passed upon his conduct. That was sufficient. Ald. Dunn might have brought the case up at council without waiting until now. But of the three, Mr. Fleming alone had acted.

He had charged the system so as to make repetitions impossible. What better could have been done than to apply the remedy? What more to be done? There was no need of abusing Page, for the damage had been done. It was not the speaker's business to be gained by attempting to fix the responsibility for the padding. It was to be applied to the system.

Why did this man of letters, of good position, of high standing, of high repute, do something? "Perhaps he did not get up early," the speaker said.

As to Ald. Dunn, the personal equation of that proposition was that he was unwillingly Fleming's ally. While the system might be condemned, he asked his honor not to condemn the commissioner. He changed the system as soon as its possibilities for fraud were manifested.

Dr. Watson then proceeded to submit his analysis of the facts. He said that he had analyzed the facts and found that the system was a fraud. He said that he had analyzed the facts and found that the system was a fraud.

Queen's Representative Emphasizes That Reason Must Not Be Refused to Religion.

Yesterday afternoon the last of the Trinity series of lectures pronounced by the Trinity College was delivered in the convocation hall by Professor Watson of Queen's College, Kingston. The subject, which had been partly suggested to him, partly chosen by himself, was "Recent Essays on the Philosophy of Religion."

In opening the professor said he would deal with two main contributions which had been made in connection with the philosophy of religion—one that of Prof. James and the other that of Prof. James. "Specialties" OF OUR Spring Display. The following are special features of this season's importations, being goods of distinctly new character, hitherto unseen in this country.

The New Taffeta Silk That Won't Cut. It is called "Taffeta Mouseline." It possesses the life and brilliancy of the best taffeta silk, as hitherto understood, at the same time being so fine and flexible a composition, that it recommends itself at once for durability.

Uncrushable Black Silk Grenadines at $1.00 Per Yard. are a decided novelty, particularly where the patterns are considered; exquisite floral and whimsical designs in the richest of handsome effects; 4 1/2 in. wide.

"Assam" "Hunan" "Tusore" "Shantung". are among the very new silk fabrics for shirt-waist suits and spring frocks. They represent different weaves and weights in raw silks, are shown in beautiful evening gowns and in natural white, ivory, cream, black.

An Immense Variety of Printed Foulard Silks. The balance of this shipment is brought forward for this week, forming a display of these goods, such as cannot be duplicated. The vastness of the purchase explains the wonder of the prices.

60c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, instead of 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50. Samples Are Ready for Mail Orders.
