Since Sir Thomas Browne's times the vulgar errors/have certainly not diminished in number and extravagance. Bear Lake, Liaho, has a sweet and beautiful monster. He swims in a fur coat; he is five feet long; he is "of a light snuff color;" he has a flat face with great width, indicative of strong perceptions, between the eyes, which are of a sweet and melting blue; and his ears are like the ears of a horse. It is particularly stated that he does not appear ferocious; so it is to be hoped that the dwellers on the bzaks of Bear Lake will muster courage enough to capture him should he come up again, for at the date of the last accounts he had gone under and hadn't come up either to breathe or be looked at.
