"I was troubled a long time with sick headache. I tried a good many remedies of which no relief was given.

their play is whimsical and erratic, but

It is rather curious that at the present playing. He indulged in his favorite pastime to such an extent that it ul-allow him even the sight of a chess-board, because anything to do with the game seems to rouse in him the worst form of his madness. Sometimes he will sit for hours playing an imaginary opponent for the night, leaving me alone to play a few letters which I was anxious to get

That Label Case. Our thanks are due to many kind friends for their offers of assistance in the threatened action for libel for allowing a correspondent to tell what she saw in the vicinity of one of the polls, where, as in others, liquor was dispensed freely to influence voters, said liquor being sent there in the interest of the government ticket, being apparently afraid that without it the sober sense of the electorate would turn against two of the ticket at least. At this point sufficient evidence could be obtained to unseat the "big four," only that Mr. Blair has so doctored the election law that it is next to impossible to carry a case against a government supporter. Hence the man who would venture to protest an election won under even worse circumstances than the recent one would prove himself a fool of the simplest kind.

But are candidates in the government ticket to denounce and make drunk the electorate to gain their ends without the power to publish the true facts of the case when given by reliable persons? Such an idea is preposterous so far as THE UNION ADVOCATE is concerned as it will continue to publish such facts and when they are presented by reliable parties, and not by the "big four," but the only character damages that deter us from such publication.

A gentleman has suggested to us that Mr. Tweedie wishes to go into court to find out whether he has a reputation for being of injury, and therefore he takes this opportunity of doing so. Be that as it may, there are other places that we mean endeavor to prove the case, and we mean to do so. It has not been told, and that the recent election was a disgrace to the nineteenth century because of the drunkenness and open purchase and sale of votes in the government ticket's interest. We have no fear of the result, and gladly welcome the opportunity of proving to the world how Mr. Tweedie ensures the election of a government ticket in this country.

In referring to the case the Free Dominion Reporter says:- "Bro. Anselm of the Newcastle Advocate ought to be a happy man. He is about to fill up the morning paper with newspaper editor. He has a full fledged responsible journalist but the only and irresponsible Lemuel J. Tweedie, Surveyor General, and high official of the Crown Lands. The alleged libel regarding the liquor supplied at the polls has been proved to be a libel. Mr. Tweedie has been accused of 'indirections' of this kind and has lived through them. Why? We can hear rather from the next public man remark upon the floors of the legislature that he could not live within the salary of his office. He has been knocking around the hotels, and treating the 'big four' to a dinner at the expense of the public. He has been running up beyond the income from that office. We never heard that he wanted to see section of the libel act, 1894, to reduce damage on his character for that statement. However, we shall watch his interest how he comes out, and if he wants any pointers on the Act of 1894, he knows where to get it, free of charge. We may call upon you."

The World of Saturday says:- "Mr. Pitts volunteers to act as counsel for his Newcastle confere in the pending suit for libel. He will enter the case with the prestige of having been the Attorney General over on law points and with the interest of the public in the defence, and Mr. Tweedie retains the Attorney General, forensic features will fly, as Mr. Blair will put forth all his powers in a desperate effort to regain the actual leadership of the bar."

Chatham to be Incorporated. The ratemakers of Chatham, at a public meeting held last week, endorsed an incorporation bill which had been referred to a committee to draw up. Under incorporation the ratemakers should manage the affairs of their town with much greater wisdom than they have, and they will do it themselves instead of trusting it to two councillors to do for them.

There are few towns of equal size and population to Chatham that are not incorporated, and the wonder is that Chatham, and Newcastle too, are so far behind in the matter of self government. It is to be hoped that Newcastle will soon follow the lead of her sister town and get out of the rut it has been in for so many years.

Scott Act Cases. Convictions for violations of the Canada Temperance Act had been some time ago secured against Mrs. Rigby and Mrs. Conway, Chatham, and on Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, both were arrested and lodged in the lock up, each being released upon the payment of $50 and costs.

On Thursday last a raid by search warrants was made on the premises of Michael Kain, Chatham, for liquor. Ten square feet were found concealed under a false cover in a table. Liquor was seized and a previous warrant for Kain's arrest, on a charge of being drunk, was served and he was escaped. A complaint having been made against Robert Stewart, Newcastle, for selling liquor contrary to law, papers were served and he was expected to come off to-day.

In the afternoon as the hour for the further opening ceremonies approached, the building was thronged with inquisitive and curious persons, and some time spent in inspecting the various rooms and dormitories, etc., prior to taking their seats in the auditorium. Three pianos and two organs were grouped in front of the choir, and shortly after three o'clock the chairman, P. Hennessy, Esq., took the chair, His Lordship the Bishop of Chatham occupying the seat at the chairman's right, and His Honour Judge Wilkinson on his left.

Then with a burst of harmony from the instruments in the Overture—Excelsior Polka, tried by J. Muller, the portieres were drawn aside, and the scholars appeared arranged in tiers on either side of the back ground of the recess, mostly dressed in white. The overture was played on the pianos and organs by Misses Mary Ryan, Mary Wheeler, Helene Fiset, Nellie Hennessy, Amy Fiset, Marie Hogan, Minnie Dalton, Alice Dalton, Corinne Fiset, Helen Black, Mrs. P. McEvoy. At the conclusion of the overture the choir was brought forward, Mr. Hennessy, one and delivered the following address:-

Played by Mrs. P. M. Foy, Miss Helen Black, Mollie Hennessy, J. Dalton, Ryan, M. Hogan, M. Wheeler, N. Hennessy, M. Carter.

The following address was then read by Miss Alice Dalton in a very impressive manner:-

My Lord, Reverend Gentlemen, Honored Friends.

With many a fervent wish have we looked forward to this auspicious occasion which should bring you into our midst. Now, we are here, and we are glad to see you, and our hearts are radiant with delight, and our hearts are bounding with joy while we welcome you to our midst.

My Lord, you have come to assist at the inauguration of our New Convent, and to see the building which we have erected in hallowed walls.

"Blessed is he who cometh in the name of the Lord." As a pastor, father, and friend, you are with us to-day in God's most holy name; you rejoice to see this building, our future convent home, completed and ready for the object of your Lordship's devotion.

We thank you, and we pray that many a year hence you will be able to say in health and strength, in unity with your flock, and smiling approbation and encouragement on the youngest and most cherished portion.

We feel and appreciate the great honor conferred upon us by the presence of my Reverend Gentlemen, and distinguished persons who have come to share in our joy, and mingle in our celebrations.

They can say in eloquent and appropriate words, that the noble monument which stands before us, is a fitting memorial to the great work which we have undertaken, and which we have endeavored to carry out with the aid of your Lordship's assistance.

Our hearts may well expand with gratitude to all those who have proved themselves our benefactors and our supporters. But naturally our thoughts turn towards our own immediate Pastor. A record of over twenty-four years bears testimony to the zeal, the energy, and the entire forgetfulness of self which he has shown in the interests of his flock. No material edifice has sprung up under his supervision, but in the quietness of his life he has accomplished what would have cost a vast sum of money.

Words fail us to do justice to the general character of his life, his particular friendliness and benevolence to this institution. To his munificence we are, to a great extent, indebted for the noble building which stands before us. He has been a constant and generous contributor to the work, and of which all should be justly proud. It is, and must stand as a lasting monument to his memory.

A great many others have a very special claim on our gratitude, and we thank them for their generous contributions to this occasion to say how deeply we feel, and how sincerely we thank all those who have, in any way, favored us.

May future relations between this institution and its numerous benefactors be strengthened by the supply of the building of this institution, may God bless them, and their faithful and unswerving adherence to it.

My Lord, Reverend Gentlemen, Honored Friends, we say again, welcome to our Convent Home.

"Our Beautiful Convent Home"—Solo and Chorus.

Then His Lordship Bishop Rogers arose and addressed those present in his usual affable manner. His lordship thought it would be an interesting and profitable exercise to him to make any general remarks at that time, and he would merely extend to his grateful thanks for their presence on this happy occasion.

It was twenty-six years since the first house was built at Newcastle, and it is now a fine and commodious building, and we are practicing their profession as teachers as well as by public entertainments their good work had become known and appreciated by the people. Alluded to the erection of the Church, the basement of which was so used for a time, and then referred to the erection of the house, and the occupation of it by the Sisters of Charity of Halifax as a school. These sisters had experienced much difficulty in coming and going, there being no railway this far at that time, in summer having to go by steamer to Pictou, and owing to the difficulties they subsequently withdrew and returned to their homes.

He had applied to and visited Montreal, and that all the Sisters of the Congregation de Notre Dame entered into the work.

They had then purchased the residence of Mr. Hebert, where until the present time they had been engaged in teaching.

His Lordship here alluded to the ordination ceremonies which had taken place about that time. Father Babin, of Tracadie, and Father Carter, of Petit Rocher, having been among those invited, and he had listened this forenoon to the beautiful and appropriate educational address by the latter. Referred in complimentary terms to the patient, laborious, self-sacrificing labors of Father Dixon, and his spirit of non-interference, has made him beloved by his people for almost twenty-five years, and now this elegant building was a monument to the noble work which he had done.

He spoke in complimentary terms of the progress should be made. He spoke in complimentary terms of Mr. Hennessy and the financial assistance he had given to the building of this institution, may God bless him and his wife and family.

His Lordship also referred in complimentary terms to the entertainment which had been presented before them, as well as to the operetta so heartily portrayed which so plainly taught the lessons of God's goodness, and he thanked the Rev. Ladies, and all interested for the success they had attained on this occasion, and wished them many happy years of usefulness and success. This building was the outcome of the pastor's zeal and diligence, and he congratulated the citizens on the completion of so great a work.

He spoke in complimentary terms of the reciprocity of good feeling which His Honor Judge Wilkinson had shown ever since he had come to Miramichi, and it was so with many others, and alluded to the late Rev. Mr. Bacon in the kindest terms. He felt thankful for the good feeling which existed among the members of the different denominations which he hoped might long continue. He concluded he apologized for occupying so much of their time in expressing his views of these matters, and with kind wishes and memories to the friends and relatives of the National Aids, concluding with "God Save the Queen."

His Honor Judge Wilkinson thought he would be considered ungrateful if he did not refer to the front and back of the kind words which had been spoken of him and his, and tendered his grateful thanks therefor in an address of some length. The assemblage then dispersed, all expressing their pleasure at being present at so pleasant a gathering.

Lectures.

Dr. Lucas continued his course of lectures last week. On Wednesday evening he lectured in St. James Hall on "Shots from the muzzle of a gun," to a fair audience. On Thursday evening the Sons of Temperance Hall was well filled to hear his lecture on "The Liquor Traffic and Political Economy."

Mr. Chas. Johnston, W. P. of Newcastle Division, acted as Chairman. The choir sang Recense the Perishing, Miss Maltby acting as organist. Prayer by Rev. Mr. Watson, and then the Doctor was introduced by the chairman. Dr. Lucas said his subject was a big one but he would try to make even the boys present understand it, and briefly explained the groundwork that underlies this political economy. Muscle and money were the props—otherwise labor and capital—that underlay it. Without money the wheels of the commonwealth could not be made to go, it was one of the moving forces absolutely necessary. But he was going to show the greater value of muscle. For humanity sake he was always in favor of labor and capital were at war. They were twin sisters, yet muscle was the elder brother, because muscle existed before money, and he clearly demonstrated this proposition by numerous illustrations. He wanted to show that the liquor traffic was in direct contradiction to the well being of society. What was the value of a man who had reached the age of twenty-five years to the country? He would put it at a valuation of $5000. Paralyze that man with liquor and what he would be worth. Why, instead of being a producer by his labor you eventually had a feed and clothe him; and he would be a weight to the state because of the liquor traffic. Parliament voted $100,000 per year to bring over muscle to this country, while by the liquor traffic we were making useless much of the muscle we had. This was a right system of political economy. The profits of good skilled labor is lessened when the operator gets on the spree and the value of his labor is lost because of our false system of credit. He wanted to show that the liquor traffic, and his labor was lost for the time being, and jails, police, judges and lawyers will be provided for the support of these men who are made drunkards because of the political economy which obtains at the present time. Were jails, judges, policemen, and keepers required to look after the support of these men? They were particularly required to look after the support of these men. What better education could be sent to friends at a present cost.

REPAIRS. The repairs done to the post office here under the supervision of Mr. Sam'l Adams, of Ottawa. Quite a number of faulty stones were taken from the front and sides of the building, new ones placed in position, properly supported, and there is now no fear of the walls tumbling down. A hardwood floor has been laid in the vestibule of the post office, the walls kalsomined and the ceiling whitewashed, very much improving its appearance inside. And now quietness reigns, to the relief of the postmaster and his assistant who have been almost distracted with the hammering and rattle ever since the repairs commenced. Now that everything is in good order again things will go on smoothly as of old.

If anybody will tell me that dyspepsia is not a disease, I will be glad to pay him a dollar.

General Intelligence. A GRATEFUL LETTER. A PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND LADY SPEAKS FOR THE BENEFIT OF HER SEX. Had no Appetite, was Pale and Easily Exhausted-Subject to Severe Spells of Dizziness, and Other Distressing Symptoms. THOMSON, P. E. I., May 20th, 1895. To the Editor of L'Impartial: Dear Sir,-I see by your paper the names of many who have been benefited by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I feel that I ought to say as known as I am sure that many women might be benefited as I have been. For a number of years I have been almost an invalid. I did not know the nature of my malady. I had a tired feeling, being exhausted at the least exertion. I had no appetite, and was very pale. I sometimes felt like lying down never to rise. A dizziness would sometimes take me causing me to drop where I would be. During these spells of dizziness I had a roaring sound in my head. I took medical treatment but found no relief. My husband and father both drew my attention to the many articles which appeared from time to time in your paper concerning the cures wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. At first I had no faith in them, in fact I had lost faith in all medicines and was resigning myself to let things take their course. I ordered more and continued taking the pills for three months and I must say to-day I am as well and strong as ever and the many ailments which I had are completely cured. I attribute my complete recovery to the Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and hope by telling you this that others may be benefited by them. MRS. WILLIAM PERRY. After reading the above letter we sent a request to interview Mrs. Perry and she repeated what she had already stated in her letter. Her husband, William Perry, and her father, Mr. H. Lauder, J. P. and a-berly warden, corroborated her statements.-Ed. L'Impartial.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. People who are suffering from dizziness, nervousness and drive out disease. They cure when other medicines fail and are beyond all question the greatest life-giving medicine ever discovered. Sold by all Dealers, but only in boxes the wrapper around which bears the full trade mark of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Pills offered in loose form, by the hundred or dozen, are imitations and should be avoided, as they are worthless and perhaps dangerous.

PETER MITCHELL'S CASE. THE EVIDENCE TAKEN BY THE COMMISSIONER IN CHAMBER TO-DAY. CHATHAM, NOV. 28.-At the instance of the Montreal Street Railway Co. a commission has been issued out of the Superior Court of the province of Quebec to take evidence in Chatham as to the physical and mental condition of Hon. J. B. Mitchell. The evidence to be taken is to be in the suit of Mr. Mitchell vs. the Montreal Street Railway Co. to offset the evidence taken recently at Newcastle by a commission issued at the instance of Mr. Mitchell to examine certain Newcastle witnesses in his behalf. This is an action brought by Mr. Mitchell against the company to recover $15,000 damages for injuries, which he alleges he received in an accident on this road in the City of Montreal almost a year ago. Mr. R. A. Lawlor is the commissioner, Mr. Gordon Edgar, official stenographer, Hon. L. J. Tweedie and Mr. Warren C. Winslow appearing for the company and Robert Murray for Mr. Mitchell. The testimony of many witnesses was taken including that of Mr. D. G. Smith, D. M. Loggie, W. B. Snowball, Hon. J. B. Snowball, Capt. Bullock of Steamer Nelson, John O'Brien M. P. P., William Kerr, President of the Liberal Association and James Carter. Mr. D. M. Loggie had noticed Mr. Mitchell's lameness and other infirmities, and attributed them to the accident, but said if he had not known of the accident he would have attributed them to Mr. Mitchell's advanced years. J. B. Snowball had also noticed his lameness, but thought it was assumed. D. G. Smith attributed his apparent mental and physical decay to his advanced years. Capt. Bullock, who had noticed Mr. Mitchell's lameness, thought one of his legs was longer than the other. John O'Brien, M. P. P., had met Mr. Mitchell every year for a number of years but could not see any apparent change in his condition. The evidence, as a whole, tended to show that whatever infirmities Mr. Mitchell labored under were due to his advanced years and that no change for the worse was apparent since the accident. The commission is adjourned till tomorrow.

AMHERST, Dec. 1.-The most disastrous fire that has occurred at Amherst for years broke out in the Sentinel newspaper building this morning. Dr. Hall, returning from a professional call at three o'clock, discovered smoke pouring out of the lower portion of the Sentinel building, occupied by A. D. Taylor, dry goods merchant. He immediately sounded an alarm. The firemen quickly had powerful streams playing on the building and extinguishing the flames. At first it was feared that the whole block north and south of the building in which the fire broke out was doomed, but the firemen confined it to this and the buildings immediately adjoining, owned by C. A. Black, M. D. Both were totally destroyed. The losses will amount to about $24,000 with about

NOVEL HINT.
 [From the Baltimore Herald.]
 A San Diego (Cal.) woman who was pestered, as many people are, by other folks' chickens scratching up her flower bed and hitting her yard, hit on a novel scheme for conveying a gentle hint to her neighbors. She tied a lot of strong cards with small threads to big kernels of corn and wrote on the cards, "Please keep your chickens at home." The chickens ate the corn and carried the message to their owners in a fashion that was starting and effective.

bartering with the natives. He hoped to clear enough, perhaps, to enable him, with what he had already laid by, to purchase a share in a vessel and become her captain. Then Susan Bartlett was to become his wife.
 The day when the lovers must say farewell came at last. How long they would be separated or when he would return was far more uncertain than that it would be in our day. The occasion was, therefore, not without anxiety and sadness. Moved by a sudden impulse or presentiment Susan snatched from the mantel a valued box, which her aunt had bequeathed her, and gave it to Dick with the request that, whatever happened, he would cherish it as a remembrance of her love.
 Dick was deeply touched in his unsmooth way by this quaint little gift, for he was well aware how greatly Susan prized it; and yet he knew not what to do with it. However, he at last decided to use it for a 'ditty-box,' in which to keep the needles, thread and scissors every sailor needs at sea. As such Susan's box served a good purpose, although resembling a family Bible, which, indeed, it was intended to represent. The box had been made by one of Susan's ancestors, who had been lost at sea, and it had long been kept as an heirloom in Susan's family.
 The voyage out proved lucky, so far as Dick was concerned. He traded off his wares to very good account, and salted down a snug sum, which, for convenience, he put into doubloons, noble gold coins, worth from eight to ten dollars apiece. Inspired by a happy thought, Dick packed the coins in the box Susan gave him. They just filled it, and few would be likely to search for money in an innocent-looking case resembling a book.
 All went well after the brig turned her head toward home, until one afternoon in the neighborhood of Cuba, when a suspicious looking sail was in sight. Pirates were not as thick as they had been in those waters, having been thinned out by cruisers. Still the danger was not quite over; a few piratical craft yet lurked among the islands, and all on the brig, therefore, anxiously scanned the stranger. It was a genuine pirate boat on mischief. The sloop showed her intentions by giving chase to the 'Guiding Star,' which in turn sprang, studding sails, rigtails, and, in fact, everything that would draw. The handsome trader presented a handsome sight gliding over the blue waters under the pressure of her white wings, and yet a terrible spectacle when one considered what a fate she was trying to escape; for all her efforts were useless, as the schooner soon drew within cannon shot, and the balls from her bow chasers came whistling over the water.
 The trader carried two small brass pieces and a few pistols and cutlasses. But of what avail were they or the small crew of eleven men against an enemy whose decks were black with whickered cut-throats, and whose red portholoes bristled with guns?
 The brig could indeed make but a feeble resistance, only sufficient to infuriate but not to beat off the incarnate fiends who soon laid their raskish schooner alongside and swarmed on board the trader armed to the teeth, an overwhelming, tumultuous throng of howling pirates. In the short but desperate fight that ensued the heroic defenders, foremost among them Dick Fletcher, succeeded in killing a number of their assailants. But they were soon overpowered, and not one of them was left alive, as was supposed, to repeat the tale of that bloody day.

 But Dick, in one fortunate that his shipmates, escaped death almost miraculously. He received a terrible blow on the head from the butt of a musket. His thick cap must have broken the force of the stroke, which, although it stunned and felled him, did not crush his skull. In the onward rush of the foe he was left for dead near the companion way, and under the corpse of a man he had shot down at the instant he himself fell to the deck. In the meantime, having disposed of the crew of the brig, the pirates proceeded to pilage the prize.
 When Dick came to himself he had the presence of mind to remain perfectly still, although suffering intense pain from his wound. The blood which ran down his face increased his ghastly appearance and served to deepen the impression that he was actually dead.
 He could hear the pirates rummaging all over the ship. So far as he could judge, they had nearly finished their search for treasure and were preparing to scuttle the prize, preferring that means of destruction to burning her, as less likely to attract the attention of cruisers. All on a sudden they were thrown into a wild panic, and furious oaths and confused orders rang over both vessels. Dick understood Spanish enough to gather from the clamor that an English frigate, attracted by the roar of the guns, was now coming down fast toward the scene of action. There was not a moment to be lost, and the shrill orders of the captain and officers of the pirate were heard commanding their men to hasten aboard the schooner and make sail.
 This unexpected turn of affairs led Dick to hope almost against hope that his treasure might have been undiscovered by the ruffians. His safety meant much to him; perhaps his entire future depended upon it. To his horror, at that very moment he heard one of several men who were still in the cabin exclaim: "Hallo! what's that lying on the shelf in the bunk? We haven't examined that yet."
 "Oh, come along," said another, "tumble out there, or I'll blow your heads off," yelled the second lieutenant of the corsair just then, putting his head down the companion way. Without another word the men sprang on deck and skipped aboard the schooner, which immediately sheered off and strained every effort to escape the frigate.
 Struggling to his feet, Dick staggered below, and v only living person left on board. The bodies of his shipmates and of the dead pirates strewn the deck, as well as goods dragged from the hatches. The hull and rigging were also torn by the broadsides of the enemy.

 But his attention was soon called to the rapid firing, which showed that the frigate was closing with the schooner. The combat was fierce but short. The pirates were greatly overmatched, and, finding further resistance useless, lowered their black flag. The frigate sent an officer and boat's crew to take possession. They had only reached the schooner when her captain touched a match to her magazine. The vessel blew up with an appalling explosion that hurled scores of souls into eternity.
 After picking up a few survivors the cruiser squared her way to the brig, and sent off a boat to render such assistance as might be required. Finding her leaking and otherwise badly damaged, the British captain ordered her to be set on fire.
 Dick was taken to the frigate with his sea-chest, in which he had already carefully stowed his Bible and his treasure. Two days after these stirring events an American vessel was sighted bearing northward. Dick was transferred to her and in due time sailed into Boston harbor. There he took passage on a schooner bound to Maine.
 The consternation of the people when he reached home and told his story may well be imagined, for the captain and most of the crew of the 'Guiding Star' hailed from that neighborhood. Susan was one of few who met Dick with rejoicing.
 "Well, I suppose you lost everything," she said to her lover, after the first greeting was over.
 "I guess I lost some damage; but I managed to save the box you gave me," he answered, with a twinkle in his eye. "I'll bring it around and show you how well I kept it."
 The next time he called to see his Susan Dick took the box with him; but when she reached out her hand to take it she was surprised to find how heavy it had grown.
 "For the land sake, Dick, what in the world have you got in it?" she exclaimed.
 When she saw the pile of yellow, shining doubloons, glittering like the sunlight of the tropics, Susan almost fell back in a faint. She had never seen so much gold before in all her life. To her it seemed a large fortune.
 "Yes, Susie, darling, that's all ours. Them's the profits I made on my venture. Them pirates didn't see it, or leastways, they didn't suspicion what was in that ere Bible, lying so innocent like in my bunk. It all belongs to you, sweetheart; for if it hadn't been for that ere box you gave me our hopes would have gone by the board. All you've got to do now is to name the day and we'll get married. Next y'you're I'm going master of the new schooner that's to be launched to-morrow. We are going to name her the 'Gentle Susan,' and you shall be my mate." Independent.

 The next time he called to see his Susan Dick took the box with him; but when she reached out her hand to take it she was surprised to find how heavy it had grown.
 "For the land sake, Dick, what in the world have you got in it?" she exclaimed.
 When she saw the pile of yellow, shining doubloons, glittering like the sunlight of the tropics, Susan almost fell back in a faint. She had never seen so much gold before in all her life. To her it seemed a large fortune.
 "Yes, Susie, darling, that's all ours. Them's the profits I made on my venture. Them pirates didn't see it, or leastways, they didn't suspicion what was in that ere Bible, lying so innocent like in my bunk. It all belongs to you, sweetheart; for if it hadn't been for that ere box you gave me our hopes would have gone by the board. All you've got to do now is to name the day and we'll get married. Next y'you're I'm going master of the new schooner that's to be launched to-morrow. We are going to name her the 'Gentle Susan,' and you shall be my mate." Independent.

Physicians
 prescribe Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites because they find their patients can tolerate it for a long time, as it does not upset the stomach nor derange the digestion like the plain oil.
 Scott's Emulsion is so much easier to digest than the plain oil as milk is easier to digest than butter. Besides, the fish-fat taste is taken out of the oil, and it is almost palatable. The way sickly children, emaciated, anemic and consumptive adults, gain flesh on Scott's Emulsion is very remarkable.
 Don't be persuaded to accept a substituted Scott's Emulsion.

That Label Case.

Our thanks are due to many kind friends for their offers of assistance in the threatened action for libel for allowing a correspondent to tell what he saw in the vicinity of one of the polls, where, as in others, liquor was dispensed freely to influence voters, and liquor being sent in to the man who would venture to protest against it, and to the man who would vote for a candidate that he next to do the election law that it is next to impossible to carry a case against a government supporter. Hence the man who would venture to protest an election won't even vote for a candidate that he next to do the election law that it is next to impossible to carry a case against a government supporter.

The New Convent Building.

In the afternoon as the hour for the further opening ceremonies approached, the building was thronged with invited guests and others, and some time spent in inspecting the various rooms and dormitories, etc., prior to taking their seats in the auditorium.

With many a fervent wish we look forward to this annual occasion which should bring you into our midst. Now, that this day is shining upon us in all its splendor, and our faces radiant with delight, our hearts are bounding with joy while we sit you a most cordial welcome.

My Lord, you have come to assist at the inauguration of our New Convent, and to scatter blessings within and around its hallowed walls. Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord. As pastor, father, and friend, you are with us today in God's most holy name; you represent the highest and noblest of our race, and we find you all in health and strength, ministering to our needs, and only material obstacles hindering our progress on the upward and onward path.

We feel and appreciate the great honor conferred upon us by the presence of so many Reverend Gentlemen, and distinguished persons who have come to share in our joy, and mingle in our rejoicings. Truly our thoughts turn towards our Father, and we find you all in health and strength, ministering to our needs, and only material obstacles hindering our progress on the upward and onward path.

Our little Convent, wherein so many happy days were spent, has yielded to the present more commodious and suitable, and the humble monument which stood on the site of our old building, has been replaced by a more substantial and enduring structure, which we hope will stand for many years to come.

Our hearts will expand with gratitude to all those who have provided themselves our benefactors and friends. Quite naturally our thoughts turn towards our Father, and we find you all in health and strength, ministering to our needs, and only material obstacles hindering our progress on the upward and onward path.

Words fail us to do justice to the generosity of Mr. Hennessy, the particular friend and benefactor of this institution. To his munificence we are, to a great extent, indebted for the noble building that today stands a credit to the town of Newcastle, and of which all should be justly proud. It is, and must be, a lasting monument sacred to his memory.

A great many others have a very special claim on our gratitude; we take pleasure in this occasion to say how deeply we feel, and how sincerely we thank all those who have, in any way, favored us. My future relations between this institution and its numerous benefactors be such that they will be remembered by the people of the town of Newcastle, and of which all should be justly proud.

My Lord, Reverend Gentlemen, Honored Friends, we say again, welcome to our Convent Home. "Our Beautiful Convent Home"—Solo and Chorus.

Then His Lordship Bishop Rogers addressed the assembly, and in a most happy manner. His Lordship thought it would be an intrusion to make any extended remarks at that time, and he would merely extend to them his grateful thanks for their presence on this happy occasion, and would ask them whether they were twenty-six years since the first band of nuns came to Newcastle and by practicing their profession as teachers as well as by public instruction.

His Lordship then referred to the present time, and the occupation of it by the Sisters of Charity of Halifax as a school. These sisters had experienced much difficulty in coming and going, there being no railway that far at that time, in summer having to go by steamer to Pictou, and owing to the difficulties they subsequently withdrew and other arrangements were made. He had applied to and visited Montreal, and that all the Sisters of the Congregation de Notre Dame entered into the work.

He had then purchased the residence of Mr. Robart, where until the present time they had been engaged in teaching. His Lordship then alluded to the ordination ceremonies which had taken place about that time. Father Robinson, of Tracadie, and Father Foster, of Petit Rocher, having been among those ordained, and he had listened this forenoon to the beautiful and appropriate educational address by the latter. Referred to in complimentary terms to the patient, laborious, self-sacrificing labors of Father Dixon, these, with his spirit of non-interference, has made him beloved by his people for almost twenty-five years, and now this elegant building was a monument to the good work done here.

Now with greater facilities to carry on the work greater progress would be made. He then referred to the complimentary terms of Mr. Hennessy and the financial assistance he had given to the building of this institution, may God bless him and his wife and family.

His Lordship also referred in complimentary terms to the entertainment which had been presented before them, as well as the operetta so beautifully portrayed which so plainly taught the lessons of God's goodness, and he thanked the Rev. Ladies, and all interested for the success they had attained on this occasion, and wished them many happy years of usefulness and success. This building was the outcome of the pastor's zeal and diligence, and he congratulated the citizens on the completion of so great a work.

He spoke in complimentary terms of the reciprocity of good feeling which His Honor Judge Wilkinson had shown ever since he had come to Miramichi, and it was so with many others, and alluded to the late Rev. Mr. Bacon in the kindest terms. He felt thankful for the good feeling which existed among the members of the different denominations which he hoped might be increased. In conclusion he apologized for occupying so much of their time in expressing his views of these matters, and with kind wishes and memories of those he had alluded to.

National Air, concluding with God Save the Queen. His Honor Judge Wilkinson thought he might be considered ungrateful if he did not thank the Rev. Ladies, and the Rev. Clergy, and the kind words which had been spoken of him and his, and tendered his grateful thanks therefor in an address of some length. The assembly then dispersed all expressing their pleasure at being present at so pleasant an entertainment.

Lectures.

Dr. Lucas continued his course of lectures last week. On Wednesday evening he lectured in St. James' Hall on "Shots from the muzzle of a gun," to a fair audience. On Thursday evening the Sons of Temperance Hall was well filled to hear his lecture on "The Liquor Traffic and Political Economy."

Mr. Chas. Johnston, W. P. of Newcastle Division, acted as Chairman. The choir sang "Rescue the Perishing," Miss Malby acting as organist. Prayer by Rev. Mr. Wason, and then the lecture was introduced by the chairman. Dr. Lucas said his subject was a big one but he would try to make even the boys present understand it, and briefly explained the groundwork that underlies this political economy. Muscle and money were the props—otherwise labor and capital—that underlie the whole of the world's commerce, and could not be made to go, it was one of the moving forces absolutely necessary. But he was going to show the greater value of muscle than of money, and he was always ready when labor and capital were at war. They were twin sisters, yet muscle was the elder born, because muscle existed before money, and he clearly demonstrated this proposition by numerous illustrations. He wanted to show that the liquor traffic was in direct contradiction to the well being of society.

What was the cause of the liquor traffic? He reached the age of twenty-five years at a valuation of $8000. Paralyze that man with liquor and what was he worth? Why, instead of being a producer by his labor, he eventually had to feed and clothe him; he was a dead weight to the state because of the liquor traffic. Parliament voted $150,000 per year to support the liquor traffic, while by the liquor traffic we were making useless much of the muscle we had. Was this a right system of political economy? The profits of good skilled labor is lessened when the operator gets on the spree and the value of his labor is lost because of our false system of political economy. 25,000 men were put into jails during the year from among the mechanical class because of the liquor traffic, and their labor was lost for the time being, and jails, police, judges and keepers had to be provided to look after those men who are made drunkards because of the political economy which obtains at the present time. Were jails, judges, policemen, and keepers required to look after the men who are made drunkards? They were particularly required to look after publicans and their patrons. Why the cost of these services were enormous—$1,000,000 at the city of Halifax, $13,000 were realized there per year for licenses. The police of that city cost $40,000 per year. Allowing that half of them only was needed because of the sale of liquor and that was $20,000, we have realized from licenses, and this seven thousand dollars were supplied by a lot of fools, and besides this, benevolent and other institutions had to be established to care for the poor and the earnings when they could work, and when they could not they would go into institutions provided for them by a lot of fools who pay to have them thus provided for because of the present system of political economy.

Lunatic asylums were peopled chiefly by the product of grog shops, four to one as against those sent there by business difficulties. One thousand millions of dollars were spent in the United States yearly for liquor, more than half of it by the poorer classes. Put half of the immense amount directed to the liquor traffic, and the occupation of it by the Sisters of Charity of Halifax as a school. These sisters had experienced much difficulty in coming and going, there being no railway that far at that time, in summer having to go by steamer to Pictou, and owing to the difficulties they subsequently withdrew and other arrangements were made. Youths Corner. DICK FLETCHER'S DOUBLOONS.

BY S. G. W. BENJAMIN. Dick Fletcher was as likely a young man of his years as lived on the coast of Maine. All who knew him said he was smart as lightning, and bound to be master of a ship before long, although not yet twenty-one, for he was quite as good at a trade as in seamanship.

This was important in days when sea captains had to manage the sale or purchase of a cargo no less than the navigation of a ship. Dick was mate of the brig 'Guiding Star,' bound to the Spanish main. He had laid in a private stock of knick-knacks and notions, intending to make a good profit only living person left on board. The bodies of his shipmates and of the dead pirates strewed the deck, as well as goods dragged from the latches. The hull and rigging were also torn by the broadsides of the enemy.

But his attention was soon called to the rapid firing, which showed that the frigate was closing with the schooner. The comat was fierce but short. The pirates were greatly overmatched, and, finding further resistance useless, lowered their black flag. The frigate sent an officer and boat's crew to take possession. They had only reached the schooner when her captain touched a match to her magazine. The vessel blew up with an appalling explosion that hurled scores of souls into eternity.

After picking up a few survivors the cruiser squared her way to the brig, and sent off a boat to render such assistance as might be required. Finding her leaking and otherwise badly damaged, the British captain ordered her to be set on fire.

Dick was taken to the frigate with his sea-chest, in which he had already carefully stowed his Bible and its treasure. Two days after these stirring events an American vessel was sighted bearing northward. Dick was transferred to her and in due time sailed into Boston harbor. There he took passage on a schooner bound to Maine.

The consternation of the people when he reached home and told his story may well be imagined, for the captain and most of the crew of the 'Guiding Star' hailed from that neighborhood. Susan was one of few who met Dick with rejoicing.

'Well, I suppose you lost everything,' she said to her lover, after the first greeting was over.

'I guess I lost some damage; but I managed to save the box you gave me,' he answered, with a wrinkle in his eye. 'I'll bring it around and show you how well I kept it.'

The next time he called to see his Susan Dick took the box with him; but when she reached out her hand to take it she was surprised to find how heavy it had grown.

'For the land sake, Dick, what in the world have you got in it?' she exclaimed.

When she saw the pile of yellow, shining doubloons, glittering like the sunlight of the tropics, Susan almost fell back in a faint. She had never seen so much gold before in all her life. To her it seemed a large fortune.

'Yes, Susie, darling, that's all ours. Them's the profits I made on my venture. Them pirates didn't see it, or, leastways, they didn't suspicion was in that ere Bible, which so innocent like in my bunk. It all belongs to you, sweetheart; for if it hadn't been for that ere box you gave me our hopes would have gone by the board. All you've got to do now is to name the day and we'll get married. Next y'g's I'm going master of the new schooner that's to be launched to-morrow. We are going to name her the 'Gentle Susan,' and you shall be my mate.' 'Independent.'

'Farm and Household. As important part of the profit in butter making must always be in making the best use of skimmed milk. The old practice was to feed it exclusively to growing pigs; but if the dairy is near a city or large village a better use for the skim milk is to make cottage cheese. This is especially valuable in summer time, and the product of a large dairy may often be sold at retail at a price that will add at least one-third to the sum received for the butter. There will be some who from the milk made into cottage cheese, and this has a limited value for the pigs if properly supplemented with other food. In feeding skim milk to pigs much more can be made of it if it is fed with a grain ration. Skim milk is excellent for growing; but is not a complete ration. A very little lin seed meal cooked to a porridge and stirred with it makes as good a food as the whole milk, either for growing or fattening animals. If this is supplemented with clover, either cut for mowing or for pasture, pork can be made cheaper than in summer than on any other kind of food. O most farms the calves get more than their share of milk, so far as profit is concerned. If the calf is merely fattened for veal it will not pay to keep it longer after the age required by law to make wholesome veal. The milk it will require after that age will yield better returns if judiciously fed to growing pigs. Of the skim milk saved for'

'Tumble out there, or I'll blow your heads off,' yelled the second lieutenant of the corsair just then, putting his head down on the companion way. Without another word the man sprang on deck and skipped aboard the schooner, which immediately sheered off and strained every effort to escape the frigate.

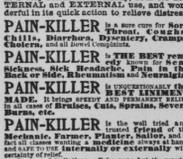

Struggling to his feet, Dick staggered below, and was enraptured to find his precious store of gold just as he had left it in his bunk. It had not been touched. He soon ascertained also, that he was the prescribe Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites because they find their patients can tolerate it for a long time, as it does not upset the stomach nor derange the digestion like the plain oil.

Scott's Emulsion is a much easier to digest than the plain oil as milk is easier to digest than butter. Besides, the fish-fat taste is taken out of the oil, and it is almost palatable. The way sickly children, emaciated, anemic and consumptive adults, gain flesh on Scott's Emulsion is very remarkable.
