anyway, as many as a thousand of these persons every day. But while the Charleston earthquake was exceptionally severe for one outside of certain areas, it is by no means the heaviest which North America has experienced since its discovery. There is a tradition, of very great age, which tells how what is now New Brunswick and Nova Scotia were rocked by a frightful earthquake and the valleys of several rivers changed, one among them being the St. John, but within historical times, there have been several shakes very far beyond that which worked so much harm in the southern city. We mention this without going into particulars as to dates, which are of no particular value in this connection. It is well, however, that nervous people should know that Canada at one time, New England at another, and the Southern States at another, have been shaken by very much more severe earthquakes than that of Tuesday last. The great Canadian earthquake extended over several years, and these further south for considerable though less periods. There is, therefore, no reason for any feeling of nervousness on the subject, or for any surprise that a change has occurred in the physical condition of the continent. At the same time one cannot fail to be impressed with the possibility of the Charleston incident being repeated further north. A very little more of a shake would have laid New York in ruins, and no one can estimate what such a calamity would imply. The science of seismology is too much in its infancy to enable anyone to form any but the most general conclusions, but there seems to be some reason to believe that periods of maximum disturbance occur, and that we are passing through one of these at the present time.

THE BARBED WIRE ON THE OFFICERS' SQUARE FENCE. A correspondent who in clothes were torn by the barbed wire along the officers' square fence the other day, asks if there is any law to force the authorities to remove the wire or to protect people in some way from its dangers. For the information of our correspondent we publish below an extract from the law bearing on this point. It is the duty to see that the law is enforced:—

1. All wire fences heretofore erected, or that may hereafter be erected, where the same are line fences, or fences erected along public highways or railway tracks, shall be protected by having placed thereon, at intervals of not less than ten feet, a top rail or near the top of the posts, a top rail not less than three inches in diameter, well secured and kept in repair, not being to be held to prevent the reduction to less dimensions of any wire or of any iron or steel fence or fence in ditches or villages, or fences already constructed thereon, a top piece or rail in already thereon, or hereafter erected, shall be liable to a penalty of not exceeding ten dollars for each each default to comply with the requirements of this section, and summary conviction as provided by law.

SHAKEN BY EARTHQUAKE. Terror and Destruction in the Southern States and Parts in Northern Cities Reported from the People of Alabama.

New-York Sun. It is remembered that on Friday last, the day before the disastrous earthquake in Greece, a shock of earthquake was felt in Charleston, and that on Saturday, the day of the Greek earthquake, Charleston suffered another shock earlier in the day than the shock in Athens, and Augusta, Ga., was also affected. Italian towns on the Mediterranean were shaken too. The great earthquake of 1755, or its sequel, was seventeen days in getting to this country from Lisbon. The immediate coincidence of last week's shocks in two continents suggests that they may have had origin underneath the Atlantic, and that yesterday's convulsion, with its conjectured concomitant of a tidal wave, had a similar place of birth, if not the same.

A considerable part of the United States was shaken by last evening's earthquake. The area over which the convulsion extended is much greater than that affected by the shocks of 1854. In that year the shock was not felt south of Washington, west of the Alleghenies or north of the St. Lawrence. It was the most severe close to the seaboard and in about this latitude. Last night's disturbance was felt as far south, according to the reports at hand, as Alabama, and as far west as Chicago.

From still further west comes an interesting account of a phenomenal earthquake from an artisan well and from the Yellowstone region a report of an unaccountable awakening of a geyser that has been doing nothing of late. Perhaps our earthquake sharp will be able to tell whether last night's shock and these occurrences had anything to do with one another.

In the earthquake of 1854 the vibration passed from south to north, according to the most trustworthy observations, while the vibration last evening seemed to be from west to east. There is a wide difference of opinion as to the duration of the disturbance. The duration of the shock of 1854 was variously estimated at from 1 1/2 seconds to 1 1/4 minutes, the briefest limit being the estimate of the more experienced observers. The most impressive feature of the disturbance of two years ago—the characteristic rumbling, like that which might be produced by the grating together of masses of rock—is not mentioned in any of the accounts of last night's earthquake.

PANE IN RICHMOND. Richmond, Aug. 31.—To-night at 11 o'clock Richmond presents a scene of excitement and confusion equaling, if not surpassing, the time the city was evacuated by the confederate forces. The streets are thronged, the volunteer military moving in two ranks, and the air around with the drum beat. The violent earthquake shock at 10 o'clock brought the people out and got them ready for the sensational scenes that followed for half an hour afterward. The pent-up alarm bell began clanging a most unusual circumstance. This was soon followed by the ringing of fire bells. Then a second alarm was turned out, which sent the whole fire department out to the State prison.

As they were being quieted, however, the city was becoming more excited as rumors of a general uprising convicts were spread in the town. The marching soldiers made the matter worse. It is safe to say that the entire city was awake. Men, women, and children were in the streets, while with the moving mass pouring to the penitentiary. Many of the women were terror-stricken by the earthquake. One lady actually advised her carriage driver to knock up the carriage. She then put her children in, got in herself, and bade the driver to be ready to drive off at her word of command.

TRAGIC SHOCKS IN COLUMBIA, S. C. COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 31.—A terrific earthquake of fully three minutes duration struck this city at 9 1/2 p. m. The whole city awoke and shook like an aspen leaf. Men, women, and children rushed from halls and houses into the streets, while the men, women, and children of the city were in a state of confusion. The streets were filled with frightened people. An immense mass meeting was being held in the Court House, and the mass was being held from cellar to dome. The audience rushed for the exits and the speakers declared the hall to be full.

TRAGEDY IN SAVANNAH AND OTHER GEORGIA CITIES. SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 31.—About 9 o'clock to-night this city was visited by a very severe shock of earthquake, which was followed at intervals of two or three minutes by four others. People in every part of the city were thrown into confusion and rushed from their houses into the streets, and sought refuge in public squares and other places where they would be out of danger of falling buildings. Negroes were particularly terrified, and many buildings were about the streets wringing their hands and giving vent to exclamations of terror. Churches fell, and many buildings suffered other damage of similar nature. Clocks were stopped and lamps and ornaments shaken from tables and mantels. No buildings were demolished, so far as is known at 10 30 o'clock, and no lives were lost or injured to persons. Despatches from the surrounding country describe experience similar to that of this city.

ATLANTA, Aug. 31.—The city was visited to-night by three distinct shocks of earthquake at 9 o'clock. They were accompanied by a running fire. At the first shock people, but few of whom had retired, were frightened, but did not know to what to attribute the strange sensation, but in almost every instance thought it was caused by something running about their houses, which they had time to consider a second and third shock, and many buildings and windows being rattled, and brick and ornaments falling from their positions. From every part of the city, the people rushed wild from their houses. Several judges and public meetings were in session, and these great shocks pulled many into the street, many of the secret society officers plunging down in full regalia. The scene at the meeting was one of great confusion. Negroes fell upon their knees and began to pray, declaring that they were hurriedly taken from the upper stories of several buildings smashed through the houses, in several instances with considerable damage.

ROCKING IN WASHINGTON. WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—A smart shock of earthquake was felt here at 10 o'clock this evening. It lasted for fifteen or twenty seconds, and was distinctly perceived all over the city. In the neighborhood of the treasury building the shock was sufficiently severe to rattle windows and set rocking chairs in motion. The desks in the Associated Press office in the Corcoran Building began to vibrate in a peculiar but unmistakable fashion that suggested an earthquake. A few minutes later the janitor reported that the upper stories of the building were rocking back and forth, and the night manager of the Western Union Telegraph office made a similar announcement, with the additional information that the clock on the western wall of the room had stopped. Telephone messages from a gentleman connected with the Associated Press office, who lives on Massachusetts avenue, and from other points in the city, reported that the ornaments on mantelpieces were rattling. The telegraph operators in Atlanta a few minutes before this had notified the Washington operators that the "shake" was coming, and to look out for it, but no attention was paid to the warning, as it was regarded as a joke.

Two shocks occurred, the second shock of longer duration and more severe than the first, and a few seconds later it was felt in all parts of the city and created considerable consternation. Several meetings in progress in various parts of the city were broken up by the frightened members, thinking the buildings were falling, rushing into the street. Although the Opera House the large audience became frightened by the shaking of the building and a stampede ensued. The occupants of the galleries, mainly gentlemen, jumped to their feet as soon as the shaking began, and rushed pell-mell down the stairs, falling over one another in their effort to escape from the building, and stopped for nothing until they reached the street.

IT WAS VOICED. New York, Sept. 1.—The Fourth Ward appears to have got the worst of it down town. Some of the taller tenements received a violent earthquake shock at 10 o'clock, and the occupants scurrying to the street. No one thought it was an earthquake at first, and the shaking was attributed to the age and weakness of the structures. In the Swamp the shaking was so strong that there was not a house from which the tenants did not rush into the streets, frightened half out of their wits. Mothers crouched trembling on the sidewalks, holding their children in their arms, and refused to return to their dwellings until they were authorized by the police to do so. There would be no more shocks to-night.

WASAW, Sept. 1.—A severe earthquake shock was felt here at 9 55 p. m. Occupants of many residences and business places rushed into the open air, many being badly scared. The amount of territory undetermined by the manufacture of salt here is not large enough to have caused any such disturbance by even a general cave in.

ALBANY, Aug. 31.—Earthquake shocks were distinctly felt in various parts of this city at about 10 p. m., lasting from two to five seconds. In one of the residences on Ten Broeck street four distinct shocks were experienced. No damage whatever was done.

THE CAUSE OF THE EARTHQUAKE. Major Powell of the Geological Survey says that there is a line of weakness in the crust of the earth beginning some where south of Raleigh, N. C. and extending in a line along the Allegheny past Richmond, Washington, Baltimore and Troy, N. Y.; that this line of weakness is marked by a displacement, in some places this displacement being a fracture in the rocks, in other places a fault.

LATER. WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The following despatch was received by cable to-day from Queen Victoria:—

THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. I desire to express my profound sympathy to the sufferers by the late earthquake, and await with anxiety fuller intelligence, which I hope may show the effects to have been less disastrous than reported.

THE QUEEN. WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Replying to a request from secretary Tophay of the British Association for advancement of science, at Birmingham, Eng., the Queen sent the following in regard to the earthquake, to-day: The earthquake is the most severe on record the United States and affected the greatest area. These shocks spread with great rapidity in all directions with a velocity varying from 25 to 65 miles a minute, over an area of 100,000 square miles, one quarter of the United States, embracing 26 states, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Atlantic seaboard to Central Mississippi valley.

ANOTHER SHOCK. New York, Sept. 3, 11 a. m.—The associated press is informed by the Western Union Telegraph Co. that another heavy shock of earthquake occurred at Charleston a few minutes ago. All their wires to that city have been lost.

EFFECTS OF THE EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS IN MANY CITIES AND TOWNS. In Dennison, O., a meeting broke up in a panic. In Canton, O., four shocks were felt in motion being from north to south. In Schenectady, N. Y., many persons here made sick from two to three hours.

THE SHOCKS WERE SLIGHT IN MACON, GA., and vicinity, and no damage to property is reported. Three or four persons only have been found in New Orleans and vicinity who felt the shock.

IN ALEXANDRIA, VA., people ran into the streets in their night clothes, houses shook, and clocks were stopped. Throughout southwestern Virginia and East Tennessee there were severe shocks, lasting from three to five minutes.

IN some towns in Delaware lands were overturned in so no of the dwellings. In Wilmington the shocks were very slight.

IN Decatur, Ill., the shock rattled and shook articles in dwellings, and swayed business buildings slightly north and south.

IN Hamilton, O., boarders in hotels ran from their rooms in fright, and many were said to have stayed one and a half inches.

IN Jacksonville, Ill., buildings vibrated from east to west, tables and other articles tipped, and people were greatly frightened.

An earthquake shock, lasting half a minute, was felt in London, Ont., on Wednesday night. It rattle windows rattled and doors trembled.

Mr. Frederick Vanterbilt is presently to be the owner of the most expensive and beautiful yacht in a world—even the Nanouma and the Atlanta yielding the palm to a craft that will cost at least $450,000.

It appears, oddly enough, that one of the most learned critics of the ballet in England is a clergyman, the Rev. Steward Headlam. He defends a ballet and thinks it ought to be encouraged instead of frowned upon.

Lieutenant Henon, of the Galata, suggests that a race should take place between his yacht and some other single-masted American craft around the Bermuda islands and back to New York, for the purpose of testing their seagoing qualities.

A couple were riding out in the country, when they passed a barnyard in which were two calves. The young lady observed, "I see those two little cowlets." "You are mistaken," remarked the young man, "they are not cowlets, but bullocks."

The America of Dickens, and the America of to-day, says a writer in Time, are two very different countries. It is the difference between the self-conceited, sensitive, half-formed hobbledy-hoed American, and the sober, experienced, sensible, full-grown man of thirty.

The one place in the country where the most railroad trains pass is said to be the Union Depot, Elizabeth, N. J. A man was put on for the purpose last week to count up 3,255 as a total, and in one day of 24 hours 623. It is a crossing at the street level, too.

The leaders of a workingman's demonstration in Belgium made these rules:—First, no one was to sing a song or play an instrument unless he knew how to do it; secondly, no one was to get drunk while the demonstration was going on; and thirdly, all demonstrators were to go to the cafes after the day's festivities were over, to exchange political ideas.

A Galway billiard having been questioned as to whether he had spoken to any of the locked-up jury during the night, gravely answered, "No, my lord; they kept calling out for me to bring them whisky, but I always said, 'gentlemen of the jury, it is my duty to tell you that I am sworn not to speak to you.'"

We feel puzzled over this announcement, which we find in a newspaper: "A widow married a young man, and her daughter-in-law married her father. By the widow's marriage with the son, she became her husband's grandmother, consequently great grandmother to a son, the issue of this marriage. Now, as the son of a great grandmother must be a grandfather or great-uncle, this boy must be his own grandfather." We don't see another's a wild heron, caught on the coast, but suppose the widow married first, then her husband was not her grandson till afterwards, and what was he to do then?

The railways of Great Britain carried last year 57,213,000 passengers, 183,774,000 tons of minerals, and 73,511,000 tons of merchandise. Of the passengers 63,752,117 travelled third class. The rolling stock consists of 15,190 locomotives, 33,565 passenger vehicles, and 464,182 goods wagons. Working expenses absorbed 53 per cent of the gross receipts.

A recent advertisement contains the following:—If the gentleman who keeps the shoemaker with a red head will return the umbrella of a young lady with white-bone ribs and an iron handle, to a slate-roofed grocery's shop he will hear some thing to his advantage, as the same is the gift of a deceased mother, not to more with the name engraved on it."

Three American horses are to be shipped to Ross Bonheur, the famous French painter of animals. One was bred on the Sun river, in the Rocky Mountains; another is a wild heron, caught on the headquarters of the Niobrara, and the third is a Mustang from the Bravo river, in the State of California.

A deputation of twenty-one French workmen who recently visited England were expected in a fortnight to glean such information as to enable them to "describe the social and political organization of Great Britain," including the whole system of local government and the co-operative movement, trades unionism, and benefit and building societies.

A San Francisco man told a member of the grand jury of the republic that Gen. Grant was the greatest orator he had ever seen. "Why," said he, "when he made his reply to the address of welcome that was fired at him in this city six or eight years ago he removed his coat, made his speech, and went on smoking. His cigar hadn't gone out. It's a pity we have only one public speaker of that kind in about ten millions."

MOONDYNE.

THE GOLD MINE OF THE VASS.

"Well," said Will, in his earnest way when interested, "as you know, the sandalwood is cut away in the bush, from sixty to a hundred miles from the shipping station at Bunbury. It is cut by ticket-of-leave men. From them it is bought by speculators, who team it to Bunbury, and from these fellows, who manage to control the wood, your agent buys it at the wharf, paying whatever price is asked."

"You would have him do more?" asked MacKay. "I would change the whole plan, sir, if it were my concern. First, I would lease all, or as much as I could, of the sandalwood land direct from the government, then I would set my hired cutters to work, and then carry the wood in my own teams to the wharf. The original cost can be decreased at least fifty per cent. And, besides this, there are other valuable substances, such as gum, tan-bark, and skins, that could be carried and shipped at the same time."

"The merchant listened attentively to the broad outline of Will's plans, which he spoke about quite freely, as one outside the matter, but familiar with it. "Mr. Sheridan," said Mr. MacKay at length, "our company has decided to change our agent in Western Australia, and it gives me great pleasure to offer you the position. I will see," he added, interrupting Will's surprised exclamation, "that you shall have sufficient power at your disposal to carry out your ideas with regard to the extension of the trade."

"Will hardly heard another word for the rest of the evening. His mind scarcely took in the change, from the poor unknown sailor, at one step, to a man of large influence and position, for such would be the Australian agent of so wealthy a company. When he returned to the ship his face glowed with excitement, as he related the wonderful story to his old friend Captain Mathews, who became even more excited than Will—and declared many times over his glass of "Old Tom," that "they were beginning to see things right at last," and that "no man could do land business so well as him who was trained at sea," and "divers other sentences filled with wisdom drawn from personal pride and marine philosophy."

THE WOODCUTTER'S TAVERN.

"Curse that fellow!" hissed Lane Scotty through his clenched teeth, "I hate him!" The word was emphasized by a blow on the rickety table that made the glass jump. The scene was a public house in the light of the gas lamps of Bunbury, Western Australia, the fine six months after Will Sheridan had assumed the sandalwood agency. The speaker was a ticket-of-leave man, a wiry, red-eyed fellow of middle age, whose face had the cunning ferocity of a ferret. His auditors were a shaggy crowd of woodcutters and convict teamsters, the latter group sitting with him at a long table.

"Don't talk so loud, Scotty," said a rough-looking man of immense stature, with an axe strapped on his back, who leant smoking against the fireplace; "don't shout so, my friend, or Agent Sheridan will hear it, and kick you out of the team he gave you for charity."

"Kick me out?" retorted Scotty, with an oath; "the daren't touch me. Curse his charity; he gave me a team for his own interest."

"Bah!" said a big woodcutter, without moving, "you're always a brag. He gave you work and wages to you and a lot of your ugly gang there, for downright charity; and, like the hounds you always were, you have no thanks to you."

"Though the gang so broadly referred to were at the table with Scotty, no one resented the woodcutter's epithet, though dark looks were flung at him. "This agent has ruined the sandalwood trade," said Scotty, addressing himself to the aroused woodcutters. "Before he came here, a poor man could win a few pounds; but now we ain't any better than chain gang men."

A murmur of approval from the teamsters followed the remark, and Scotty felt that he had struck a popular note. Even one or two of the woodcutters at another table struck the board in approval.

"No, you ain't any better than chain-gang men, that's true," said the brawny bearer of the axe, still quietly smoking; "nor you never were. There's where the whole boiling lot of you ought to be still. You talk of ruining poor men," he continued, slightly shifting his position, so as to face Scotty, "you damned fox! I know you—and these men know you!" pointing to the group of woodcutters. "Before this new system came with this new agent, you and your rats there had the whole trade in your hands. You bought from the cutters at your own price, and you paid them in rum. You cheated the woodcutters and swindled the dealers, till the wonder was that some day you weren't found chopped to pieces for your villainy."

"That's true as Gospel," said one of the woodcutters who had lately applauded Scotty. "You're an infernal set of wampies, you are!"

Scotty and his ill-looking crew realized that the woodcutter "had got the drop on them sure."

A stamping and tramping in the outer room or store suggested new arrivals, as the place was a kind of inn. All eyes were turned on the door, where entered, one after another, about a dozen powerful fellows, in the picturesque garb of stockriders, who noisily but good-humoredly sat them down to the large central table, and called for something to eat and drink.

The interrupted discussion was not resumed, but a whispered and earnest comment on the new-comers began among Scotty's gang.

"Where do you fellows hail from?" asked the big woodcutter, after waiting a while, and in a friendly tone. "From Dardanup," said one of the stockriders. The whispering between Scotty and his friends ceased, the last word passed round being strongly emphasized, "Dardanup Irish."

"There was a colony of Irish stockriders at Dardanup, five months ago had emigrated there forty years before, when the Western Colony was free from the criminal taint. The families were all related to each other by inter-marriage; and the men of the whole settlement, who had been born and reared in the bush, were famous throughout the colony for strength, horse-manship, good-fellowship, and hard fighting qualities."

"From Dardanup—ah!" said the big woodcutter, with a mischievous smile at Scotty's group. "Then you are Agent Sheridan's new teamsters, maybe?"

"Ay, we're going to take those teams up to-morrow," said a strong fellow; and then, to call the waiter, he hammered the table with his enormous fist.

"Why," said the woodcutter in his bland way, "it might be as your're the Maguire boys from Dardanup?"

"Only eight Maguires in this crowd," said the table-hammerer, with a pleasant look round the circle. Scotty and one or two of his friends here gently left their seats, and sauntered toward the door.

"Don't go," said the woodcutter presagingly; "don't be in a hurry, Scotty, man; why isn't he ten minutes ago since you wanted to chop up that d—d Sheridan and his teamsters?"

Scotty scowled at the woodcutter. "A man can come and go as he pleases, can't he?" he growled. "My boy, don't leave the friends as you wanted to meet, just now. Here, you Dardanup fellows, this is your ginger in the teams; this is your 'boss,' as Yankee Sullivan says. This is the fellow that says Agent Sheridan dar'n't order him, and that the agent went down on his knees and begged him to drive his black ox team."

"He'll never drive it again," said one of the Dardanup men. "Why won't he?" demanded one of Scotty's friends.

"Because I'm going to drive that team," said the six-foot Australian, wheeling his seat with an ominous velocity.

"Ho, ho, ha, ha!" roared the big woodcutter, enjoying the fallen crest of the bragging; "but you can't leave the team, Maguire; Scotty will make ribbons of you."

And the man with the axe heavily stamped on the floor in his boisterous enjoyment of Scotty's discomfiture. The Dardanup man rose and walked toward Scotty, who sank back with a sudden dismay that he stumbled and fell headlong, while a waiter, entering with a tray of plates and glasses, tumbled across the prostrate bully.

At this there was a loud laugh, and the six-footer from Dardanup sat down again. Scotty, too, was wise enough to profit by the hilarity; he picked himself up, laughing with the rest.

"Come," he cried in a jolly tone, but with a humiliated aspect, as if he feared his offer would be refused, "let us have a drink and smoke hands, no matter who has the team."

"Bravo!" cried the Dardanup men, who were just as ready to drink as fight. The bottle was passed round, and every man drank with Scotty, except the big woodcutter.

Scotty handed him the bottle and a glass, noticing that he had not tasted. "No, thank you," said the big man, with a shake of the head, "none of that for me."

A few moments afterwards one of the Dardanup men held up his glass to the big man of the axe. "Drink with me," he said.

"Ay, lad," said the woodcutter, "pass your bottle, I'll drink with you all night."

Scotty pretended not to have noted nor heard; but as soon as he could he slipped from the room with his associates. The Dardanup men at a mighty supper, and afterwards had a wild time, in which the woodcutter was a partner.

Powerful and hearty fellows, full of good nature, but dangerous men to rouse these young Australians, and their strong blood was excited by the new enterprising they had undertaken.

A combination had been made among the ticket-of-leave teamsters and buyers against the new agent of the sandalwood trade, who had revolutionized the old system. It had come to a serious pass with the business, and Agent Sheridan, knowing that a weak front would invite ruin, had resolved to test the opposition at once, rather than wait for its bursting. To be Continued.

A Voice in the Room says. A good story comes from a boys' boarding-school in Jersey. The dirt was monotonous and disgusting, and the learned principal decided to introduce some old-style happy results. One bright lad, the smartest in the school, decided to give a little more in his nose, and pushing back his plate, showed a red nose. "No, please," said the principal, "my lad, do not do so. You will ruin your nose. My lad, do not do so. You will ruin your nose. My lad, do not do so. You will ruin your nose."
