VOL. 15.-NO. 9.

SACKVILLE, N. B., THURSDAY, JULY 17, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 738.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

—Treat your wife as you did your sweetheart, and you will have a sweetheart all your life.

—American apples will find a good market this year in England, as the crop there is short.

—The agricultural laborers in the Venetian and Mantuan provinces, Italy, have struck for higher wages.

—There are no less than 2,400 cow stables in New York city, the occupants of which are never pastured.

—Since March last 240,000 more hogs have been packed in the United States than in the same part of 1883.

—Prospects of an early and abundant harvest in the whole of our North-west Territory are very promising.

—The reductions made in the rents of Irish peasantry by the Land Commission will amount this year to nearly $15,000,000.

—Of the 3,107 cargoes of animals imported into the United Kingdom in 1883, there were 136 cargoes in which contagious diseases of animals were detected.

—A herd of 6,000 head of cattle, which had been without water for five days, stampeded at the sight of the Nueces river, and the rush was so great that hundreds were killed and maimed.

—During the year 1883 the amount of compensation paid by local authorities in Great Britain for animals slaughtered under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act was about $136,400.

—The earliest record of foot and mouth disease in the United States and also in Great Britain is the year 1839. Belgium and Holland were invaded that year, whence the disease was imported.

—The Illinois State Veterinarian visited Elgin the other day, and caused the shooting of three horses afflicted with glanders. Mrs. Sorenson, who caught the disease from one of the horses, is dying from it. There is no known remedy.

—In Essex and Kent Counties, Ont., the farmers complain that the corn crop is being greatly damaged, and in some places totally destroyed, by the cut-worms. Some of the farmers say that they have replanted their fields three times this season.

—The Guernseys are to have their herd book in England, where a hopeful future is expected for this fine dairy breed. It appears that dairying is now looked upon as the most profitable department of agriculture in Britain.

—At the sale of Short-horns at Uxbridge, England, Prof. Brown of the Ontario Experimental Farm, secured the highly-bred Bates sows, Baronesse Wildoye and Waterloo Belle 2nd; the former for 30 guineas and the latter for 55 guineas.

—A large part of the $5,000 Dominion grant to the Agricultural and Arts Association is to be given in special and extra prizes to the stock department at the approaching exhibition to be held at Ottawa next autumn.

—It appears from the returns that 1,172 animals were imported into Great Britain last year affected with foot-and-mouth disease. There is little wonder that this dread disease lingers on the island, notwithstanding the active efforts continually put forth to stamp it out.

—The common practice of cruelly burning certain portions of a horse's mouth with a heated iron with the view of removing the disease (generally imaginary) called "lamap," is very severely condemned by the better class of veterinarians, who state that in this way a real trouble is produced while attempting to remove an imaginary one.

—The export of cheese as stated in the parliamentary returns from the Dominion for the year 1883 was 63,340,938 lbs., as against 8,000,000 lbs. in 1871; butter, 8,162,729 lbs.; eggs, 18,451,410 doz.; hares, 13,800; cattle, 67,000; and sheep, 308,692. It is a significant fact that while the total value of the exports of agricultural produce from the Dominion for the year was $25,515,033, that of animals and their produce was $21,165,418.

—A. E. Blount, of Colorado, says, in the N. Y. Tribune, that if farmers will only bandy quick enough seed from the tallest heads of wheat to sow an acre, and put it alone upon some good ground, they will find so much improvement made the first year, that they will continue to pick year after year. Such an operation, he says, cannot fail to convince any intelligent farmer that there is great importance attached to the selection of good wheat.

—Dr. Hunt remarks that farmers are not so healthy as they ought to be. Rheumatism is common among them on account of exposure. Indigestion is also common, and is produced by a want of exercise and an overplus of one kind of food. They are also beset with malarial diseases on account of a lack of drainage about their houses. The butter and milk business injures the wives. The women suffer more than the men from defective drainage about the house and cellar and from decaying matter in the latter. Keep the cellar dry and clean.

Better Butter.

Any person who has to do with the export of dairy products will have heard of Cork butter, a brand which ranks among the choicest coming into the English market. How this extra quality has been reached, with what scrupulous care the food of cows, the very soil on which they graze, the position of the factory, are each chosen, is illustrated in the following description of a Cork factory as fully as in the sketch of a New England creamery, which we quoted the other week. Canadian butter dealers may find it instructive, and dairy men even more so.

A recent visitor to Mr. T. J. Clancy's butter-factory, at Cork, says that the butter is received fresh from the dairies, and is brought in and prepared in the evening, and at night so as to avoid all exposure to heat. The greatest neatness and care are observed in all the processes of its preparation, every minute detail being provided for, so that the butter shall not suffer in its quality or keeping properties. The first care is with regard to selecting the best material, and the second to the manner in which it is prepared.

The butter must be the produce of land not over rich. That of good, sound, stiff land, has the best keeping qualities, and in no part of the world, we believe, can there be found a district more suitable both in climate and in the character of its pastures for making such a product than the district from which the supplies of this factory are drawn.

Next as to manipulation, the butter has to be freed from milk, but this must be done without over-handling or too much working, which will injure the grain. "It is this process," the correspondent states, "and in the packing into tins, that Mr. Clancy's system and appliances are most perfect. The butter is by them made to form one solid, homogeneous body, completely filling the tins without crevices, and it is of uniform make, color and body throughout. The tin-plates used are of the very finest charcoal plates, costing more than double the price at which inferior plates could be purchased. These insure a perfect coating of tin inside the can, so that no part shall the iron come into contact with the butter. To such particularity is this carried that even the cut-edges of the cans are made to be perfectly formed and before filling it with butter, it is then hermetically closed, with only one seam at the closing edge, thus giving the greatest security from leakage or air holes."

Our Canadian country shop-keepers if they desire to explain to their customers why Cork butter commands a hundred and forty shillings per 112 lbs., when best Canadian will bring only a hundred, can give them some valuable hints from the above description. They may not like the term "scientific" butter-making—some of them do not—but they may call it what they like, if they will only adopt the methods which produce good butter.

The Canadian Pacific Railway.

A report of the operations of this company to the end of the year 1883, drawn up, now, contains some general information of a later date. The announcement is made that the line can be completed out of the loan and subsidy; so that further aid. This is welcome intelligence; and we trust the agreeable prospect may be realized. The statement is made very positively by the directors, and they ought to be in a position to know. The original estimates of the cost of construction have not been exceeded; while locomotives are now being manufactured at the company's workshops, Montreal, for less than the price at which they were previously purchased. Within a year, from the present time, the section from Callander to Port Arthur, the directors believe, will be completed. There will then be a continuous line from Montreal to beyond the Columbia river, a distance of about 2,500 miles. The earnings of the road, in 1883, were $5,573,897.64, against $3,326,929.41, in 1882. The mileage earnings, however, decreased, as the road has been pushed on through an unsettled country. The being rapidly pushed on, and by the end of the season, the directors expect to have a continuous line from Montreal to beyond the summit of the Rocky Mountains. That part of the Government section of the road, which lies between Port Moody and Dayton, has the rails laid and the rest of the section is nearly ready for the rails. The directors recommend the company to lease the Manitoba & Northwestern Colonization road, at a rental that will pay interest on bonds at the rate of 12,000 a mile. The amount of capital stock issued, at the end of the year, was $65,000,000; of which $6,067,000 had been redeemed by land sales and cancelled.

A World of Good.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public, is Hop Bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is as pleasant to the taste as some other Bitters, as it is a whiskey drink. It is more like the old-fashioned root beer, that has done a world of good. If you don't feel just right, try Hop Bitters. —Amie News

Athabasca.

The following is taken from a lecture delivered at Winnipeg by Capt. Wm. Kennedy, of St. Andrews, the Arctic navigator:—I would also call attention to the region about Athabasca, which only awaits development. Petroleum is there running to waste; the oil springs have overflowed the shores of the country for a space of more than forty miles, and running down to the river the oil is carried into the lake, where it floats on the surface. The only use at present made of it is by the Indians boiling it to the consistency of pitch and using it from coating their canoes, etc. In the same region the finest and purest salt is thrown from a sort of fountain. It is nearly as fine as flour and brilliantly white. In this same section is found coal, sulphur, copper, asbestos, and other valuable minerals. A letter just received from the quarter dated January the first says: "We have abundance of milk and cream, two of our cows have already calved, and some of our hens, of which we have thirty, have begun to lay almost daily. We have fresh ducks and geese, moose meat, deer's meat, fresh tongue, beef, and occasionally buffalo meat, also delicious whitefish and trout, not a bad bill of fare if we add to it the wild fruits with which the region abounds, and vegetables which cultivation produces. Amongst the fruits I know of are raspberries, strawberries, cranberries, gooseberries, currants, salmon berry, etc., and rhubarb, turnips, carrots, and cabbages grow luxuriantly. At the H. B. Co's posts, both here and at Churchill, there is on nearly the same parallel, they raise cattle in sufficient numbers to supply them with beef, butter and milk. I do not know if any attempt has yet been made to raise wheat at Athabasca, but the Peace River is close up and on the same parallel, and we all know that the finest wheat grown on this continent comes from the valley of the Peace River, a river whose outlet into Athabasca Lake is only the same distance from Churchill that Winnipeg is. Now a branch line from Athabasca would bring the traffic of that country over a portion of this route, and would greatly assist in the formation of settlements, for which (as the extract I have just read proves) the country is capable of affording sustenance. That the region, with its vast wealth, which much longer remain 'unnoticed and unknown,' is not to be dreamed of."

Prof. Brown has arrived at Quebec with 105 head of cattle and sheep for the Experimental Farm, Guelph.

Queen Elizabeth is said to have had a fondness for boiled sea gulls, giblets cheese and hard-boiled eggs, dainties unknown to the nineteenth century bill of fare.

Mr. Sanford Fleming, C. M. G., of Ottawa, has purchased several fine Herefords, which are intended for the farm at Weston, where his son, F. A. Fleming, has established a fine herd.

Emerson, after losing his memory, one day wanted an umbrella, and tried to describe it to his daughter by making a circle in the air over his head, but failing to make her understand, he added, "That thing which strangers take away from you," and he got it.

In a recent lecture at Birmingham, Prof. Max Muller, of Oxford, referring to the Vedas, the sacred books of the Brahmins, which may be termed the Bible of India, said: "It is older than any other book in the Aryan tongue, and surely the knowledge of what the world was like 1,500 years before the beginning of our era, and of what our ancestors thought and believed, nearly 4,000 years ago, is worth having and looking at. It had been, and still was, the foundation of the religion of 165 millions of human beings—who were mostly the subjects of the Empress of India, the Queen of England."

The Elephant and the Buddhist Priest.

Two young ladies were gazing at the white elephant as it stood enthroned in all the sacred emblems of its holy character and the adoring priests who were kneeling devoutly on every side. "How curious it is," remarked one, "that any race of people should be deluded as to worship an elephant."

"It is indeed," replied the other, sadly. "When I look upon this worshipping throng of ignorant, superstitious creatures, and realize how earnest and sincere they are, I cannot but feel that there should be no rest until the missionary message is borne to the last one of these misguided heathen."

"True," said the first speaker; "it is a grand and solemn duty—just at this juncture the animal kingdom is drawing up for the Buddhist priest in the mouth, 'Holy Moses!' he exclaimed, interrupting his devotions, 'ye heathen bastards!' and the young ladies strolled on to the monkeys' cage."

Various Causes.

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition all operate to turn the hair grey, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. AYER'S Hair Vigor will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on bushy, weak, or sickly hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its results, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valuable for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

AYER'S Hair Vigor is colorless; contains neither oil nor dye; and will not soil or clog the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous, imparting an agreeable perfume.

For sale by all druggists.

It is a maxim worthy of being written in letters of gold that there is no method so certain of defeating the plots of wicked men against us than by acting uprightly.

Mental pleasures never cloy; unlike those of the body, they are increased by repetition, approved of by reflection, and strengthened by enjoyment.

GENERAL NEWS.

—The contract for seventy cases of condensed milk for the Hudson Bay expedition has been awarded to Graham & Co., of Truro, N. S.

—The recent discovery of a nickel mine in California, said to equal the famous Comstock in richness, has opened up a new industry in the mining regions.

—A Quebec ship-builder has received an order from the Argentine Government, for a 400 ton vessel. It will be constructed especially for navigation of the River Plate.

—Farmer Russell, a negro, burned his wheat stubble at Fredericton, a few days ago, and barely escaped with his life when eleven old bomb-shells, which had lain there for twenty years, exploded.

—The Mark Lane Express is authority for the statement that the English Government has decided on asking Parliament to impose duties on foreign cattle for the encouragement of cattle breeding and rearing.

—A Chicago minister in search of a sensation has been having Chicago liquor analyzed. He found concentrated lye and arsenic in rye whiskey, turpentine and blue vitriol in gin, ceramic acid, fusel oil and arsenic in "forty-year-old Kentucky Bourbon," spirits of cognac, ether, sulphur and arsenic in brandy. But the most potent poison of all was found in largest quantities in all samples, viz.: alcohol.

Several notable happy marriages have been made on a two hours' courtship, but it is a pretty safe rule to know the girl for at least three days and a picnic.

Strangled.

There is a legend in some Spanish book about a noisy reveller who, at night, returning home with others, saw a light shine from a window, and climbed up to look.

And saw within the room, hanged to a hook, His own self-strangled self, grim, rigid white, And who, struck sober by that livid sight, Feasting his eyes, in tongue-tied horror stood.

Has any man a fancy to peep in And see, as through a window, in the Past, His nobler self, self-choked with coils of sin, Or sloth or folly? Round the throat whip—fast!

The noose give the throat a stiffened grip, 'Tis but thyself. Look well. Why be aghast?

SCIRRO, N. Y., Dec. 1, 1879.

I am the Pastor of the Baptist Church here, and an educated physician. I am not in practice, but am my sole family physician, and give advice in many chronic cases. Over a year ago I recommended your Hop Bitters to my invalid wife, who had been under medical treatment of Albany's best physicians several years. She has become thoroughly cured of her various complicated diseases by their use. We both recommend them to our friends, many of whom have also been cured of their various ailments by them.

GENERAL NEWS.

—Lobsters are more plentiful at Richmond for twenty-five years ago.

—Miracle of Josephine holding Court in the morning to the costumiers and ordering her wardrobe in such endless profusion that the bills caused no end of trouble between herself and the Little Corporal, and no little ingenuity was required on her part to get a suit worn even once, when it was discarded. Had Josephine lived three-quarters of a century later her despair would have been absolute to select out of the multitude of prevailing fashions and styles—a wealth and abundance that have grown out of the multiplicity of modern invention and machinery. Unfortunately, in the race between human invention and good taste the former has "got away" with the latter; nothing can be more grotesque than some of the fashionable styles of the day. Paris sent forth some months ago an extended bustle—a sort of plateau formation, and notwithstanding its manifest absurdity, it has taken like fire to the health and run all over the European capitals and now threatens to devastate the West even to the fastness of the wilderness.
The immense rail and fardingle, in which Queen Bess concealed herself when she went to St. Paul's to see the execution of the Duke of Guise, has been revived, and the Spanish Armada, has afforded amusement to all succeeding generations, but it is not a whit more unnatural than the collection of skirts and steel that follow a fashionable woman on her rounds. We are told the human form divine is a masterpiece of beauty; its lines and curves and motions are a perfection of grace. The Greeks gave us canons of beauty that modern criticism pronounce faultless, yet we depart more and more from those chaste and simple folds of drapery they taught us and hide the human form beneath a bulging deformity of cotton jeans and steel wires.

—A large eagle attempted to carry off a little girl belonging to D. S. Abbott, of Grafton, Maine, a few days since, according to a vigorous report. The bird had often been about the place with his eye on the child, and on Saturday he took his chance. She has been man who happened to be in the vicinity there a quiet over them and secured both eagle and child.

—The "Ethel Emerson," Leonard and Toward, struck Spectacle Island, off the Nova Scotia coast, last Sunday morning, during a heavy gale with thick fog. She has got off with an attempt will be made to tow her to Yarmouth. The "Ethel Emerson" is 176 tons and was built in 1882 and was owned by Mr. Wm. Hickman, of Dorchester. She was on a voyage from Portsmouth, N. H., to Bay Chaleur, by ballast.

The Turn of an Accident.

(Harper's Bazar.)

It was six o'clock of a crisp October morning, and John Boyd a farmer, rousing from his sound night's sleep, sprang out of bed with the alert readiness of a man who knows the value of the first hour of the day. It was a tavern bed from which he jumped; home and his cares were many miles away; but a long ride lay before him, and he washed and dressed briskly, as one in haste, humming a cheerful air, meanwhile, as became a man who felt himself in good spirits, and had ample reason for being so. For, he it known, this year had proved the best for the farmers since John had been his own master. Harvests had been large, prices high, and John on his way back from the annual market, carried a sense of freedom and liberation at his heart from the final extinguishment of a mortgage on his farm—a mortgage which had pressed so heavily on his conscience, as did the burden of Christmas and New Year's. The burden was lifted now, and, further than that, John carried in his fat, red wallet, two hundred dollars over and above, toward the expenses of the next year. He had never been so "beforehand" before, and the sensation was a joyful one.

"My neck is out of the collar, now," he muttered to himself, as he brushed his thick, brown hair. "I should be a fool indeed if I put it in again. No mortgages for me!"

Then, his toilet completed, he ran down stairs, two steps at a time.

Farmer-like, his first visit was to his horses. They were munching their corn very satisfactorily, and after a look or two, and a pat, John returned to the inn, where a jangling bell announced a breakfast. It was smoking on the table—a substantial meal of the kind universal in taverns thirty years ago; and John Boyd, whose appetite was of the kind proverbially said to accompany a good conscience, was doing it ample justice, when a sudden instinct led him to thrust his hand into the inner pocket which held the two hundred dollars. The wallet was gone!

In the suddenness of the shock, John felt himself turn pale, and then flush painfully, as he confusedly tried to remember if he had taken out the wallet, and when. Under his pillow—there it was! He recollected distinctly, or so it seemed, putting it there, for security's when he went to bed the night before. With a muttered excuse he left the table, and hurried upstairs. The door of the room stood open, and the maid-servant was putting fresh sheets on his bed, and the soiled linen was lying in a heap on the floor.

Towards the heap John hurried, and began turning it over.

"Where is my lost something, sir?" asked the maid.

John straightened himself to answer. He had not noticed the maid before, though she had waited upon the table at supper. Now he observed that she was young and rather pretty, with a trim, slender figure, beautiful glossy hair, neatly dressed and braided, and a pair of sweet, apprehensive blue eyes. Her voice was soft, too; and she had a shy, modest manner, which suggested an idea of refinement. All these things Farmer Boyd observed in a flash, and instinctively noting, weighing, estimating by that wonderfully rapid process of which the human mind is capable, while yet his thoughts were full of his money and his loss.

"Yes, I am looking for my wallet, which I left under my pillow. Did you find it?"

The girl's face blanched to a deadly whiteness, and her eyes dilated as with sudden terror.

"No, sir," she said, her voice trembling and sinking away as she spoke. "I didn't see any wallet."

John looked at her distrustfully; but there was something in the pale face which disarmed suspicion.

"I'd like to search the bed," he said. "It may have slipped under the mattress."

Together they turned the mattress, but no wallet was visible.

"That off horse of yours has got his shoe loose, somehow," announced Mr. Nash, the landlord, suddenly appearing at the door. "I thought I'd better tell you, so that you can stop at the blacksmith's as you pass, and get him to put in a couple of nails. Why, what's the matter?"

John explained.

The landlord looked very grave. He whistled softly to himself for a minute, with his eyes fixed on the tumbled bedding; then he went to the head of the stairs, and called his wife. Presently they came in together, and the landlady's face looked very red and troubled.

"Such a thing never happened in my house before," she protested.

"But there's only one person that has been in your room since you came, beside yourself, and she's the person you must reckon with," pointing to the maid, who, with white cheeks and downcast eyes, leaned against the wall as if awaiting sentence of banishment.

"Oh indeed, indeed, I didn't take it! I never saw any wallet," she said; but her voice was drowned in Mrs. Nash's louder tones.

"And pray who else took it, do you suppose? Who else had the chance? Answer me that! It serves me just right for taking in a girl with no recommendation—no girl I didn't know nothing about, not so much as her name, or where she came from, or where her folks are. Five weeks to-morrow, that's all the time she's been in the house, sir; but this is the end of it. The last time I'll ever have a help I don't know the long and short of, so you needn't be afraid to stop with us again—no, nor none of your friends either; as for her, out she packs this very day!"

"I'd better go for the constable, hadn't I? If you're sure it was under the pillow you put it," said the landlord.

"Oh, don't, please don't!" pleaded the girl, weeping bitterly.

"Give the gentleman his wallet back, then, and perhaps he'll let you off."

"I can't. I haven't got it; Oh, please believe me! Don't send me to jail!" she urged.

The landlady only answered by an expression of disgust. And, showing her apron over her head, the poor girl wept in silence, saying no more.

John had held his peace during this altercation, sharply eyeing the persons concerned in it, meanwhile. The Nashes knew something about it. They were of good reputation as far as he was aware. The maid was a stranger to them, as to him but, in spite of the circumstances, and her manner, which was hardly less suspicious, he could not bring himself to believe her guilty. He was not a hasty man, and he was a just one with a kind heart to back his temperate judgments; and after a few minutes' reflection he made up his mind what to do.

"I can't swear that I put the wallet under the pillow, or anywhere else," he said. "I'm pretty sure that I did, but my thoughts about it are confused, somehow, and it may be that I left it at Bolton, where I slept Tuesday night. I don't want no injustice done on my account. Don't cry like that, addressing yourself to the girl—I'll tell you what I'll do. Will you get the bay mare shod during the day?"—to Mr. Nash—and if you'll lend me a saddle I'll ride back to Bolton and make inquiry there. If I find the money, well and good, if I don't it will be time enough to talk further about it to-morrow."

"I'm sure it's good of you to take so much trouble," declared the landlady. "But whether or no, the girl don't stay here. I'll have no suspected thief in my house!"

"There'll be nothing to suspect her of, if I find the money," rejoined John. "Don't give the poor thing a bad name till you know that she deserves it." Then he left the room, unmindful of the look of gratitude which shone upon him from the blue eyes of the girl, who had dropped her apron, and who gazed after him till his door was shut.

His reflections were not agreeable, as he retraced his footsteps over the dusty highway, travelled but yesterday with so light a heart. The loss of his money meant a good deal to John Boyd. The force of anxiety seemed to settle again upon his shoulders, as he thought over the probabilities of its non-recovery. "But I won't give in without a fight for it," he thought, grimly, as he urged his horse forward.

Miles seemed doubly long when measured by a heavy heart, and what with dust, heat, and the continual effort to clear his mental conclusion as to when and where he had lost his wallet, the young farmer was fagged and dispirited enough, before noon was fairly come.

He stopped to dine at a little tavern attached to a toll-gate, and, with some vague hope that the money might have been picked up on the road by some one, mentioned his loss. The toll-keeper shook his head, and said, "You're your only chance, he said. 'If it was on the road you dropped it, there's no likelihood that you'll ever hear of it again. The dust is eight inches deep. I should say, and there's been three big drives of sheep, and one of bullocks along since yesterday, so if your wallet was lying there, they must have trampled it under pretty thoroughly. It is buried deep enough, you may be sure, unless, which is just as likely to happen, some one has picked it up and made off with it. Your chance is a slim one, I reckon."

Cold comfort this; but John was forced to agree with his opinion. Despondently he rode through the afternoon, scanning the way as he went, for, despite the toll-keeper's faint hope still lingered in his heart, though the track, deep in dust, and charred and trampled by the crowded droves, presented a sorry field for either hope or discovery.

He had gained the top of a long hill from which Bolton was dimly visible, when a moving object far ahead caught his eye, and he now in his stirrups in order to see more clearly. As he did so, his horse made a false step, stumbled, and threw him forward in the saddle so that his head grazed the horse's neck. It was in this position that a tiny object, a patch of red, not over an inch square, in the dust beneath, caught his eye. His heart gave a little leap, then he called himself a fool, but all the same he dismounted to examine. Already a random hoof-stroke had loosed the red patch from right, but John recollected the spot, and stooping, dug and scooped till it again became visible. His fingers recognized a solid substance. Trembling with excitement, he continued to dig; another second, and the object was uncovered. Hfied with joy, John Boyd held in his hand his wallet, buried deep by the hurrying herds, and uncovered for one passing moment that his eye might rest upon it, and he might have ridden over the lost treasure, and never dreamed what lay beneath his horse's feet.

"And some folks say there ain't no God!" was his mental comment, as he looked down at the wallet. John spoke half-aloud. Then, for John Boyd's religion, though a homely, was a true one—he bent his head, and said a few words of thanks-giving; after which, jumping on his horse, he took the backward route, eager to tell his good fortune, and exonerate the poor girl, who, as he remembered with self-reproach, must have passed a painful day under the stigma of undeserved suspicion.

The heat was yielding to evening freshness, and he urged his horse, impatient to get matters straight, but, with his best endeavour, it was after 11 o'clock before he at last drew rein in front of Nash's hotel. He was expected, that was evident, for lights were burning, and both Nash and his wife hurried to meet him, with the warm matter of congratulatory length which was in part changed to cheerfulness when they heard of the recovery of the wallet.

"There, what did I tell you?" cried the husband. "Haven't I been a-saying and a-saying all day that as likely as not this scare would turn out all for nothing? And you would not listen to a word, but just kept on to that poor thing inside there, and she nothing to blame all the time. I declare, it's too bad the way women act to each other—and folks calling them the 'softer sex'! A man would be ashamed to be so hard. Well, do tell! And so the money was a-laying there in the dust all the time! Well, I'm mighty glad for your sake and ours too. Go right in, sir, and wife! Give you some supper. I'll see to the horse."

Mrs. Nash waited on the meal in grim silence. She seemed only half-rejoiced at the denouement.

Odds and Ends.

—He didn't want to call the other fellow a hog, but he said that if he was snoked and eluded up he would make good ham sandwiches.

—"Were you ever caught in a sudden squall?" asked an old yachtman of a worthy citizen. "Well I guess so," responded the good man. "I have helped to bring up eight babies."

—A California editor recently received a cord of wood, in payment for a subscription, which was piled in front of the office at a late hour. The next morning he found six sticks left. This fact led the editor to believe that the morals of the town were improving. A year ago there wouldn't have been a stick left.

—"I can swim the whelpool at Niagara," said a stranger to a hardware man on Woodward avenue yesterday. "Can you?" "I feel that I can. I should like some advice from you. Would you try it if you were me?" "No sir—no, sir, I wouldn't think of such a thing. A man who hasn't been in a bath-tub for a year, or had on a clean shirt for a month, wouldn't stand the ghost of a shower with a whelpool. You'd better go tackle a drink of water, and gradually work up to it."
