WARNING

Microfilming of archival records held by Manuscript Division is intended to protect often fragile originals from damage through handling and to make the material more widely available through inter-institutional loan.

Although original records are generally in good physical condition, researchers should be aware that some documents are faded, that some of the colored paper stock and inks used may not photograph well, and that some type of documents may not reproduce well on microfilm. Negative photostats, too, often fail to appear clearly on microfilm. It should also be noted that because of their size, some documents have to be filmed in several sections. The National Archives of Canada has attempted to the best of its ability, to reproduce what information is legible and provide at least a reference for what is not.

ARCHIVES NATIONALES DU CANADA
Division des manuscrits

AVIS

La division des manuscrits microfilme les documents d'archives pour empêcher que les originaux, souvent fragiles, ne finissent par s'abîmer à l'usage et pour accroître la disponibilité de ces documents au moyen du prêt entre institutions.

Bien que ces originaux soient généralement en bon état, nous rappelons aux chercheurs que certains documents ont pâli à travers le temps, que les encres et les papiers de couleur ne se prêtent pas tous à la photographie et que certains types de documents sont difficiles à reproduire sur microfilm. La reproduction de copies négatives de photostats, souvent ne donne pas une lisibilité parfaite. A noter que certains documents ont dû être microfilmés en plusieurs sections étant donné leur format. Les Archives nationales du Canada se sont néammoins efforcées de reproduire toute l'information lisible et de faire mention des passages qui ne le sont pas.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie. (1874-1950). Prime Minister.

Original, 1641, 1703, 1815-1969, 231.650 m. Photocopies, 1908-1950, 7.250 m. Transcripts, 1893-1950, 17.340 m.
Finding Aid No. 502.

William Lyon Mackenzie King, a grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie, was born in Kitchener (then Berlin), Ontario, 17 December 1874. He attended the University of Toronto (B.A., LL.B.), the University of Chicago, and Harvard University (M.A., Ph.D.). His field of study was Political Economy, with labour problems as his special interest. In 1900, he was appointed the first Deputy Minister of Labour and editor of the of the Labour Gazette. In 1908, he resigned to enter the House of Commons and in 1909 he entered the cabinet as the first Minister of Labour. He left politics after his defeat in the election of 1911 and from 1914 to 1917, he worked for the Rockefeller Foundation investigating industrial relations. He re-entered politics in 1919 after he was chosen leader of the Liberal Party. At the end of 1921, he became Prime Minister and held the post (with the exception of three months in 1926) until his party's defeat in the election of 1930.
He was Leader of the Opposition until October 1935 when the Liberals came back into power. From that time he was Prime Minister until he retired on 15 November 1948. He died 22 July 1950 at his Kingsmere estate.
The W.L. Mackenzie King Papers were deposited in the Public Archives of Canada by the terms of Mr. King's will. The papers were the property of his literary executors until they became the property of the Crown. The final transfer occurred 30 June 1977.

Public Papers.

Primary Series Correspondence, J1 Series. Original, 1889-1950, 44.700 m. (Vol. 1-447).

This series consists of the important correspondence both from the Prime Minister's Office and from Laurier House. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically by author within each year, with enclosures and any replies kept together. The pages of the entire series are numbered consecutively. For the correspondence up to 1921, there are both subject and author indexes. The subject index is in four 10 cm boxes and the author index consists of index cards. The subject index is also available on microfilm reels C-4591 to C-4593. For the 1922-1942 correspondence a detailed subject and author index is available in the form of computer printouts. A detailed subject and author index for the period 1943 to 1950 is in preparation. A subject list for the entire period prepared by the biographers is available in the Political and Public Affairs Archives.

Prime Minister's Office Correspondence, J2 Series. Original, 1921-1930, 1935-1948, 52.000 m. (Vol. 1-520).

This series consists of the subject files remaining after the Primary Series correspondence was selected. A file list is available in two separate bound volumes.

General Correspondence, J3 Series. Original, 1915-1950, 15.200 m. Photocopies, 8 pages. (Vol. 1-161).

This series consists of personal letters which were kept at Laurier House. These letters were left after correspondence was selected for the Primary Series (J1), the Family Papers (J7), and the Personal Correspondence Series (J8). A file list is available in the finding aid. A more detailed author list is available in the Political and Public Affairs Archives.

Memoranda, notes and some correspondence are found in this series, arranged in subject files within four chronological periods (1887-1921, 1922-1932, 1933-1939 and 1940-1950), with additional material at the end. A complete file list is available in a separate bound finding aid and on microfiche.

Originaux, 1641, 1703, 1815-1969. 231.65 m. Photocopies, 1908-1950. 7.25 m. Transcriptions, 1893-1950. 17.34 m. Instrument de recherche no 502.

William Lyon Mackenzie King, petit-fils de William Lyon Mackenzie, est né à Kitchener (alors Berlin), Ontario, le 17 décembre 1874. Il étudie aux universités de Toronto (B.A., LL.B.), de Chicago et Harvard (M.A., Ph.D). Il se spécialise en économie politique et s'intéresse particulièrement aux problèmes ouvriers. En 1900, il est nommé premier sous-ministre du Travail et rédacteur de la Gazette du travail. Il démissionne en 1908 pour entrer à la Chambre des communes; en 1909, il devient le premier ministre du Travail. Il quitte la politique après sa défaite aux élections de 1911 et de 1914 à 1917, il étudie les relations industrielles à la Rockefeller Foundation. Il revient à la politique en 1919 après avoir été élu chef du parti Libéral. En 1921, il devient premier ministre et conserve ce poste (sauf pour quelques mois en 1926) jusqu'à la défaite de son parti aux élections de 1930. Il est chef de l'Opposition jusqu'à la reprise du pouvoir par les Libéraux en 1935. Il réintègre alors son poste de premier ministre qu'il conservera jusqu'à sa retraite en novembre 1948. Il meurt le 22 juillet 1950 dans son domaine de Kingsmere.

Les papiers W.L. Mackenzie King furent déposés aux Archives publiques du Canada conformément au testament de M. King. Les papiers sont demeurés la propriété de ses exécuteurs littéraires jusqu'au 22 juillet 1975, date à laquelle ils sont devenus celle de la Couronne.

Les instruments de recherche des papiers King ne sont pas encore terminés. La description de chaque série comprend une note explicative sur son (ses) instrument(s) de recherche. Consultez les archives des premiers ministres pour les instrument de recherche en préparation.

Les séries suivantes sont disponibles sur microformes: Première série de correspondance (J1), Mémoires et notes (J4) 1887-1939, Discours (J5) 1889-1932 et Journaux intimes (J13). L'instrument de recherche de chacune de ces séries comprend une liste de conversion des microfilms.

W. J. Egan, Esq.,
Deputy Minister of Immigration,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Egan:

Mr. Mackenzie King's nephews, the twin sons of his late brother, Dr. D. Macdougall King are coming to spend a week or two with the Prime Minister at Kingsmere. Their names are Lyon King and Arthur King, aged sixteen.

These boys leave Denver next ~~Saturday morning~~ Friday evening, August 2nd, and arrive in Toronto on the Canadian National Railway train which reaches there from Chicago ~~at 8.25 a.m., Monday~~ Sunday evening, August 4th. You were good enough to say that you would send down word to the border so that "everything would be made easy" in connection with the usual interview with the immigration inspectors. changed 1.VIII.29.

Perhaps I should state that the boys were born in Canada, and went with their mother when one year old to Denver. They are returning to Denver after their holiday here.

Yours faithfully,

W. H. Measures,

Private Secretary.

Dear Mr King,

I was sorry I could not see the boys on their way through Toronto.

Harold and myself wish to have them spend a few days in Toronto on their way home, and would be glad to know when they will be returning this way.

Would you let Harold know when that will be, so we can meet them and look after them.

Hoping to hear from you and looking forward to seeing them again. Yours sincerely

W. A. Kingsland, Esq.,
C/o Canadian National Railways,
Toronto,
Ontario.

Dear Mr. Kingsland:

On August the 3rd you very kindly sent out instructions with reference to the movement of my private car one hundred, and, amongst other things, arranged for a wire to be sent to the conductor on train number four, from ~~Toronto~~ Chicago en route to Ottawa, asking to be advised if my nephews, who were expected to come on that train, were aboard the train, so that no delay might be occasioned in the movement of my car from Toronto to Ottawa, immediately upon the arrival of the train from Chicago. I enclose herewith copies of the message you sent and a copy of the reply which came from Mr. H.C.White to Mr. W.S.Wilson, Station Master at Toronto.) (My nephews were aboard the train that I expected them to come by, and I cannot understand how the conductor in charge of number four could have made the mistake of having the enclosed wire sent to Toronto, or how he could have permitted it to have been sent.

When it came, my messenger, Nicol, at Toronto, telephoned me its contents at once, to Port Hope, where I was staying with Mr. Massey, the ~~American~~ Canadian Minister, ~~to~~ the United States and where I had expected to join my nephews with my car, on the way back to Ottawa, on Sunday evening. I was obliged, in consequence, ~~to~~ to alter my plans, to return to Toronto by motor, and to lose the whole of Monday, which happened to be a Civic Holiday in Toronto, coming down from Toronto to Ottawa on the day train. My engagements which had been made in Ottawa had to be cancelled, and I have not yet overtaken some of the extra obligations which have arisen out of my endeavours satisfactorily to adjust matters. When I got into Toronto, a little after midnight, my nephews were safely in my car, having arrived as I had been advised they would arrive, in time to board the Ottawa train.

I do not wish to make difficulty for anyone in a matter of this kind and would not write you if I felt there were likelihood of such being the case, but I do think there has been some very serious neglect somewhere, and the mistake might have had consequences for myself, in my public position, even more serious than those which have resulted from the loss of the complete day, and the disorganization of its engagements and work. I felt that you would wish to know of the situation and, for that reason alone, am sending on the enclosures to you. My dear Premier:

I have been much chagrined to learn from your letter of 16th instant of the inconvenience and annoyance suffered by you as a result of incorrect information furnished you of the arrival at Toronto of your two Nephews, August 4th.

I had hoped to let you have an almost immediate reply, but the train conductor involved is not under my jurisdiction, and the General Manager of our Grand Trunk Western Lines informs me this man is on leave of absence until August 27th and they have been unable to locate him. As soon, therefore, as we can secure his statement you will hear from me more definitely without delay.

With much regret at the occurence, and assurances of our deep concern,

Yours sincerely,

My dear Premier:

With further reference to your letter of 16th instant and mine of 24th instant in connection with incorrect information furnished you of the arrival at Toronto of your two Nephews, August 4th; we are now in receipt of the following telegram from the General Manager of our Grand Trunk Western Lines -

> "Conductor W.F. McMurray just returned to duty. He advises that Porters paged parlor car and sleepers and Brakeman the coaches, and no one answered when paged, and to make sure Conductor searched through train himself and no boys on train that answered this description."

It would seem that while this Conductor did comply with the instructions, there must have been some oversight or exceptional coincidence which resulted in your Nephews being missed.

I can only add that in view of the extremely careful arrangements always made to insure your personal comfort and satisfactory movement when on our Lines, I am disappointed with the result in this case.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. Kingsland:

I have just received your letter of August 27. I seemed to me that I ought to bring to your attention the error in the wire received concerning the arrival of my nephews at Toronto, more particularly because you had so kindly gone to so much trouble to ensure my own convenience and comfort, in the matter of the movement of my car. I wanted more particularly to express my appreciation of your kindness than to register any complaint. I could not very well do this without letting you know what had actually happened, notwithstanding that I felt it would be sure to give you a feeling of disappointment. Beyond letting you know that, after all the trouble to which you had gone, I shared these feelings, I did not wish to pursue the matter at all. I am only too sorry

Dear Mr. Dyment:

This note will introduce to you my nephew, Arthur King, who is much looking forward to the privilege of having a word with you concerning possible openings along lines for which he believes himself to be qualified.

Arthur is the son of my brother, the late Dr. D. Macdougall King. His brother, whose name is the same as my own, graduated from the University of Toronto ~~several~~ in medicine, and, at present, is on the staff of the Toronto General Hospital. He has received, within the past week, word of his appointment to a three year Fellowship at the Mayo Clinic, where he hopes to specialize in surgery. Arthur, I believe, in his own field of work, is quite as keen and capable as his brother is in medicine. I can vouch for the character of both boys, for I have known them from the day of their birth.

Arthur, at present, is in the employ of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario. I have explained to you the reasons which have caused me to suggest to him that I thought it would be advisable for him to seek a new opening elsewhere. If you could give him a word of direction or advice, which might help toward that end, it would be appreciated not less by myself than by him.

With kind personal regards,
Believe me,
Yours very sincerely,

My dear Dyment:

I hope you did not think it presumptuous of me calling you up, over the long distance 'phone, to have a word with you about my nephew, Arthur King. After your kindness in giving to John Lay, the encouraging word you did, I should not have asked more of you.

Curiously enough, however, at the time I spoke to you of my nephews, it was Arthur King rather than John Lay whom I had mostly in mind, in connection with your particular Company. It so happened that, at the time I spoke, young Lay was seeking a position that offered a little more in the way of oppertunity than the one he was in. This, through the kindness of Mr. Duncan, he has since found with the Massey-Harris Company.

Young Arthur King was, at the time, well secured, and much enjoying his work with the Hydro Electric Power Commission. That appointment, as I explained to you over the 'phone, he secured entirely on his own. I did not, as a matter of fact, know that he was even in Canada, until he had been at work for about a fortnight - he has been living with his mother in Denver, Colorado.

The unfortunate controversy recently precipitated over Hydro Electric matters has caused

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 18) Arthur King - Correspondence and clippings 1929-1943

National Archives of Canada

me to feel a distinct embarrassment about any relative of mine being associated with that particular enterprise. There is not one man in a thousand who would believe other than that his position had been secured through some political influence, or some action of mine. More unfortunate still, I feel there is a distinct risk of the boy's future being much embarrassed, should his relationship to myself become known to those who directly or indirectly may have to do with appointments and promotions. Had I known he was seeking a position in Toronto at the time he was, I would have counselled him strongly, as I did John Lay, to have nothing to do with any Government concern. When the controversy over export licenses arose, I just felt I must make a move on young Arthur King's behalf, and my thought turned almost instinctively, as well as immediately, to yourself.

I do not, of course, know to what extent the different General Electric Companies work in association with each other. It has occurred to me, however, if there should be no opening in the Canadian concern, that in one of the American companies, there might be some chance, though, naturally, I would rather see my nephew who was born here, in Ottawa, grow up a Canadian.

To both Mr. Coffin and Mr. Rice, the work I did some years ago for the General Electric at the Lynn and Erie works was well known. It has occurred to me, were this past association of myself with the General Electric known to others at present in control, it might not be without its advantage to young Arthur King in seeking the kind of opportunity he has in mind.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 18) Arthur King - Correspondence and clippings 1929-1943

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

I believe Arthur's training, and purpose, and equipment generally would fit him admirably for the kind of work in which he would be engaged in an industry concerned with electrical matters.

As I told you, his twin brother Dr. W. L. M. King graduated second in medicine from the University, and is now on the house staff of the Toronto General Hospital. He has, within the past week, been appointed to a three year Fellowship at the Mayo Clinic where he is going in order to specialise in surgery before beginning to practise his profession. I am confident he has a fine career before him.

I believe that in his own line of work young Arthur King is just as able and, if given a chance, likely to go just as far. These two boys are the sons of my late brother, Dr. D. Macdougall King, young Lay being the son of my sister who is married to Harry Lay, at Barrie.

Please excuse me for burdening you with so much in the way of family history. Your interest, however, being so largely personal, I have felt that perhaps I should let you know what your kind interest to my nephews means to me, as well as to them.

With my best of wishes for the New Year,

Believe me, my dear Dyment,

Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

I duly received your letter of the 26th instant with regard to your nephew, Arthur King. I waited before answering, thinking he would probably come in to see me. However, I did not hear from him until the day before yesterday when he telephoned and I was out, and was going to be out most of yesterday, and he could not come today, so he suggested that he would get in to see me on Wednesday of next week. It seems he is not in the Hydro office much and I could not get him by telephone, but he will probably call me and come in to see me on Wednesday. I hope there will be something that we can do for him as I would be very glad indeed to meet your wishes in this regard.

As I said to you the other day, I felt that we would have a good man in John Lay, and we are not forgetting him, but I am glad to know that he is placed with a good firm such as Massey-Harris. I would like to see Arthur King myself as I told you, and will then have him see Mr. Turner.

With kindest regards, and hoping you will have a very happy and successful year, I am,

He told our Mr. Turner, after talking to his present manager, that he could not leave there until March 1st, so that is the date I believe they have fixed for him to come to us.

He also said he would like to go to our Peterboro Works and go through some of the Test Course there, which I may say is very good, and I think his judgment was right in this, where he would get some practical knowledge. I would like, at a convenient moment, to have just a word with yourself, with respect to one of my nephews, who is about to enter the employ of the General Electric Company, in Peterborough, and to take up residence, for a while at least, in your city.

Perhaps we can have a word together in the course of the coming week.

The Honourable G. W. Gordon, P.C., K.C., Peterborough,
Ontario.

My dear Gordon:

On the 1st of March a nephew of mine, Arthur King, who is a son of my late brother, Dr. Macdougall King, is entering the employ of the General Electric Co., at Peterborough, and will take up residence in your city.

My brother, you may recall, was a physician in Ottawa some years before the war. He came down with tuberculosis, and was for a time in a sanatorium at Ste. Agathe, and, later, went to Denver for further treatment, and in Denver subsequently resumed his practise. After publishing a book entitled "The Battle with Tuberculosis and How to Win It", and another book entitled "Nerves and Personal Power", he passed away, leaving his widow with two orphan boys, who were born just at the time of his breakdown in Ottawa.

I have sought to watch over these lads, and am happy to say both have done exceedingly well. They are now twenty-five years of age. The one bearing my name graduated in medicine last year from the University of Toronto, carrying off the Faculty medal, having won scholarships most of the way through. He is now on the staff of the Toronto General Hospital, but in the summer is going to the Mayo Brothers Clinic, where he has received a Fellowship, enabling him to continue studies in his work in surgery for three years, before beginning special practise as a surgeon.

The other boy, Arthur, received a year or two ago an appointment with the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission, which he has held ever since. I knew nothing of the appointment until he had been in this post for some weeks. It was not obtained through any influence of mine, but solely by himself, on the record he had made at Boulder University, and through some friends, unknown to myself, who had interested themselves on his behalf.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 18) Arthur King - Correspondence and clippings 1929-1943

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

I have been most uncomfortable about his employment with the Hydro Electric Company, unless it might be thought that some influence of mine had been responsible for his holding the position he has there. Happily, an ambition of his own, to get into the employ of the General Electric Company, has been gratified by his having recently received a position with that firm. He is going to Peterborough to take a fifteen months student course of testing, etc., to be followed by whatever line of engineering best suited to his capabilities and inclinations.

I am most anxious, when Arthur goes to Peterborough, that he should, if possible, find suitable quarters in which to live. What I would like to have him do is to secure lodging, with one, two, or three meals a day, in some home where he would be sure of the right environment. I would, and I think he would much prefer this, to getting into some regular boarding house. It is quite possible there may be eminently suitable places where he might get some, if not all, of his meals, while residing in some other place.

It has occurred to me that there might be some family, or some widowed woman, who would welcome a chance of having a young man, whose relationships were known and who has been carefully brought up, with the best of habits, etc, secure quarters in their home. What I would like him to have, and what he would want, is one good sized room, with plenty of sunlight (I attach importance to this), which could be made a comfortable sitting-room in the daytime, and his bedroom at night; or two rooms, one suitable for a sitting room and one for a bedroom, the size in that case not being [illegible]. It [illegible] and I am most anxious this side of things should be watched.

It occurred to me that possibly, through your many contacts in Peterborough, you might know of what it might be best for Arthur to do when he goes to Peterborough, so that when he goes there he could explore on his own. I will advise him to go to a hotel at the outset, and then make his own arrangements. While, naturally, I am keeping an eye on both the boys, and would be prepared to vouch for them in different ways, I do not wish them to feel that they are dependent upon me, but, rather, that they have to make their own way, as they have been doing for the most part for sometime past. Therefore, I prefer that in Arthur's case he should satisfy himself as to what he can afford, and what he should take on, rather than that any arrangements should be made as a result of anything in the nature of an undertaking on my part.

In a letter recently received from Arthur, he said: "The only point that I should like to bring in is the one of expense. I don't want to spend in excess of $30. or $32. a month for room and two meals. I arrive at this by the satisfactory conditions I have enjoyed while here in Toronto."

It may be that in what Arthur has in mind he underrates the possibilities. I can, of course, seek to have him do whatever may be most advantageous. I mention this, however, to let you know just what he has in mind, and the basis on which he apparently has been working in Toronto during the time he has been there.

I might mention that when Arthur spoke to the Hydro Electric people about going to the General Electric Company he was told by the Manager that they were very sorry to lose him and that if at any time he wished to return to the Hydro he would find a position awaiting him there.

When I next see Duffus I intend to have a word with him about my nephew along the lines that I am communicating with you. I hope, however, that neither you nor he will feel any obligation in this matter either toward myself or toward my nephew, but if you have a suggestion to make which you think would be helpful to him and to me I should be very grateful for it. I have felt that you would not mind my writing you in this matter.

With kindest regards,

Yours very sincerely,

My dear Mr. King:-

I received your letter of the 5th . instant regarding your nephew Arthur King, and my son who has taken up practice here and who is now twenty-six years of age knows the City well, and we will take an interest in the lad.

My own idea is that the Y.M.C.A. would be perhaps the best place for him to have his room, and that is under the supervision of a very fine type of man whose name is George H. Roper, and I will see that he is given immediate attention.

I will do what I can to make the lad comfortable and I will see that he meets chums that will be of the right type.

When the young man reaches the City I would esteem it a favour if you would tell him to drop into see me and we will study the situation. We will take care that he meets some friends that will appreciate him.

Charlie Stewart's son was down here for a while in the Canadian General Electric and a number of these students do take employment with this Company and succeed very well.

He might be able to get a very comfortable room at Miss Ida M. Wesley's home at 539 George Street where the head of the Commercial Department of the Peterborough

My dear Gordon:

I thank you warmly for your letter just received.

Your suggestion of the Y.M.C.A. as a place of residence for my nephew, Arthur King, seems to me an excellent one. I shall write him of the idea at once.

I shall be glad to give him a note of introduction to you which I shall ask him to present at some future time. Please, however, do not allow my nephew's presence in Peterborough to occasion you the slightest feeling of obligation towards him. You have already done all that I could possibly ask or wish.

Dear Mr. King:-

I just found your letter regarding your nephew Arthur King to-day, upon my return from a few days in Court at Toronto.

My son and I will keep an eye on this boy and make an effort to see that he meets the people that will be the right type.

My home is somewhat of a meeting place for young fellows on Sundays, as my son is living with me and he is not married, and it will be a great pleasure to us to meet your nephew and try to make his stay in Peterborough comfortable.

I had the room next to Gordon Conant's at the Ontario Club for the last few days, and he said that everything was going to be straightened out regarding the matter of power export. Conant and Harry Nixon are very sensible Grits and they are trying to get matters adjusted in a way that will not cause friction, but I do not know what the plan of procedure is.

With kind regards,

My dear Gordon:

Many thanks for your letter of February the 10th, with its further reference to nephew.

Again let me say how much I appreciate your kind interest in him. Let me, however, also repeat that I hope you will not feel any obligation toward him. He has been so much and so long on his own, that I feel confident if he is fortunate enough to get a right footing in social contacts at the start, he will get along quite well.

With kindest regards,
Yours very sincerely,

My dear Gordon:

I should have acknowledged before this your kind letters, in reference to my nephew Arthur King. I did not wish to impose on your kindness, and have, therefore, not said anything about his presence in Peterborough until he had entered upon his duties there.

I let Arthur know of your suggestion of the Y.M.C.A. Apparently, however, Mr. Cruthers the Secretary of the Students' course at the General Electric, had recommended some other place, - 555 King Street, and he thought it advisable to make his quarters there. He, however, intends to look about for something a little better, and I have let him know of the other suggestion of your letter. I have told him of your kindness, and that I thought he might, perhaps, write you some day, and ask if he might call on a Sunday afternoon. Should he do so, I shall be grateful if you could have him meet your son, and for any word of counsel you might feel free to give to him.

I think it was a bit of a wrench to him to leave the Hydro Electric. On the other hand, the course he is taking will be more beneficial in the end for the kind of career he has in view, and I believe he is going to enjoy it.

My dear Prime Minister King:-

My son dropped into see Arthur King yesterday and he is going to spend Sunday afternoon and evening with us.

I am having issued to him a ticket by the Public Library, and I am vouching for him. The Senior Engineer of the Canadian General Electric Company has been on the Public Library Board for a good many years, and I understand there are works of a technical nature that this boy may use.

My son is going to take him out around and have him meet some of the boys up at the Y.M.C.A. where they play squash and there is a very good gymnasium there, and I think it would be a good place for him to put in his extra time.

My secretary, Miss Armstrong, spoke to Dr. A.T. Barr, Minister of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church and he is going to drop around and call on the young man. I felt that it would be some encouragement to him to feel that his Minister is taking an interest in him.

Mr. R.R. Hall,K.C. whom you will remember was a supporter of Sir Wilfred Laurier from somewhere around 1906 died this morning. I wish you would send a telegram of condolence to his wife Mrs.R.R.Hall,459 Reid Street, Peterborough.

Dear Mr. Dyment:

In reply to your letter of April 7th, please be advised that I have had a talk with Mr. Arthur King, to whom you referred in your letter.

Mr. King is now a member of the test group in the Induction Motor Department and appears to be making satisfactory progress. From my conversation with him, I understood that he is fairly well impressed with his work and that he is acclimated to the Peterborough community life. He has already made a number of favourable contacts and seems to be enjoying his new environment.

I shall make it a point to talk to him occasionally and do whatever is possible to help him to the furthest extent.

My dear Prime Minister King:-

My son and Arthur King have been out a few times to the movies and around the City and the lad is getting pretty well acquainted.

He did not feel like moving into another boarding house for some reason of his own, although I think he would have been much more comfortable, and as he has a car of his own he could get to work easily.

This is a splendid location in the Summer and I know that he will enjoy going around the Stoney Lake and different spots in the North.

He is getting acquainted but he is cautious.

Dear Mr. King:-

My wife and I have been spending our week-ends near the height of land at the North end of the County and yesterday my son and Arthur King visited us in the wilderness .

Arthur, I think, is doing very well and he is well tanned and his appetite appears to be pretty fair, although he is a little inclined to be pickish. He played the piano at the hotel and then went sailing with my son in the evening down the lake. He had a good time I think.

One reason I introduced him to this place was that the hotel is in charge of a young fellow who was formerly chief scout master for the boy scouts at Hamilton and he is a very well-behaved chap whose wife and sisters are in charge of the cooking. The regular rough crowd who go to summer resorts where there is drinking and poker playing is absent here. The people who come to this place are nearly all professional men and professional men's families from the States and around Hamilton and London. I thought Arthur could run up there any night he desired or spend his Saturdays and week-ends there and the hotel rates are not at all high. They are about one-half that are found at other summer resorts around the country.

Arthur seems to be quite content and happy now and he has gotten over the little lonesomeness that he felt when he first came to Peterborough.

Dear Mr. King:-

Your nephew, Arthur King, telephoned me last night and he is back in the City. My son happened to be out so the boysdid not have a visit, but they have taken quite naturally to each other, and in addition to that, Arthur has made a large number of friends here and I think that he is enjoying his life in Peterborough.

I was suggesting that he should live at the Y.M.C.A. which is a very fine new building here and the gymnasium , suntan lights, swimming pool and baths are up to date, and in addition to that he could play billiards or bowl at any time that he felt so inclined. However, he did not seem to care to locate there and I think possibly he thought there was too much noise and the place was too crowded. He said that he was well and pleased to return.

Please do not both answering this letter because I know how busy you must be, but I knew that you would like to have a little information as to how the boy is getting along.

My dear Mr. King:-

Arthur King dropped into see us last night and we had a very interesting chat and he stayed until after midnight, and I think he enjoyed the evening very much. My son was away on a short holiday over to Battle Creek, Michigan.

Arthur has been suffering somewhat from a cold for a large part of the Winter, and I think it is starting to drag him considerably, and in addition to that he is not busy at the C.G.E. and some of the employees in his Department have been dropped from the pay-roll.

However, we had a very pleasant evening and I think he felt better after he left, and after this long and tedious Winter he will soon be out in the open and enjoying life much better than he has during the last few months.

He has, more or less become saturated with the spirit that this C.G.E. crowd is rather tough, and no person knows what the future will bring for a young man who is employed by them. However, I have suggested to Mr. A.E. Dyment that he should keep his eye on the lad and see that he gets his share of promotion as he develops, and I know Dyment will do this as he is a very good friend of mine and I know that he has a very high opinion of you.

The real situation is that Arthur is lonesome and I think a little homesick, but he is game and extremely ambitious.

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE MACKENZIE KING, M.P.,

I am somewhat sorry that my son has been pretty busy in his practice and has been out of the City a good deal so that he has not been able to give Arthur all the attention that he should have given him. However, they have plans made for the Summer to do some sailing at one of the lakes up North and my son is an expert sailor as he has been living on the water each Summer since he has been about ten years of age, and Arthur is very much interested in sailing too so I think probably he will be able to spend some week-ends away from this hot City in the North Country.

However, my main purpose in writing you is that this boy is not gaining weight, and every time I have seen him this Winter he has had a cold, and I think he should consult a good doctor and see if he has sinus trouble and what he needs to bring him up, because this long continued condition of cold is likely to run him down and may cause him a serious sickness, although I appreciate that with warm weather coming and him being out in the open the likelihood is that he will probably cure it.

He is very much interested in politics and we spent nearly the whole evening discussing various matters , including E.M. McDonald's book, which I showed to him and he is very anxious to read it.

Duffus' chances look very well here , particularly as there is a very strong C.C.F. candidate who will obtain practically all of the votes that are disgruntled.

Ferguson of Peterborough and Hastings is in a very strong Protestant riding where they do not think much of Manion, and has against him a rather unpopular Tory lawyer, so we think he is safe as well as Fraser and Rickard. However, I think Charles Cameron is in for trouble, and what will happen over in Ontario no person knows.

The Hepburn-Conant combination and the unemployment in Oshawa have stirred up a certain amount of trouble and Billy Moore, of course, is a very old man. However, in our immediate neighbourhood the Liberals all are united, and in spite of a little criticism now and then the organization seems to be complete and the members are active in moving about the riding and keeping in touch with the various organizations.

Dear Mr. King:-

This is a letter that does not need an answer because I know that you are unusually busy.

Arthur King dropped over to see us last night, and he has arranged successfully for a three weeks' or a month's holidays in June, and he is going to Denver for a change. He is happy and looking forward to the visit to his mother with a great deal of anticipation.

I rightly judged that the boy was somewhat homesick and was sick of the humdrum work in the office. He seems to think that he has gone about as far as he can in the practical work and that he could become located in a branch of the Hydro which is independent of the Provincial organization. I rather gathered that it was a department which had a great deal to do with research problems.

He is playing tennis every evening and I think he is beginning to enjoy himself a good deal more.

We have all been watching with a great deal of interest the details of the Royal visit.

Dear Mr. King:-

I met C.A. Salmonsen, the General Manager of the C.G.E. here, and although I have spoken to him several times, I just succeeded in getting from him some news about Arthur, which I thought I should transmit to you.

Arthur has been on about a dozen different jobs here, and he is very argumentative and discursive with the men with whom he is employed, and has reached the point that he is giving his opinion so freely that a good many of these men do not wish to have him on their work.

He probably does not appreciate that those employed at the C.G.E. are not supposed to voice their opinions as to how to run the Company or how to improve the present methods adopted in the Plant.

A couple of days ago the General Manager found him with four other fellows hidden away in a corner enjoying some jokes, and when he ran into them he asked each one of them if they had work to do and they all admitted that they had plenty of work to do, and there was no reason for their idleness.

I do not like to be a spy on the boy, but Salmonsen thinks that he has the impression that he is being rather privileged , because he thinks powers higher up are likely to protect him, so I have the feeling that he should be quietly reproved by someone who is in a position to do it. If you think it wise I will take him in hand.

He is reported to have first-class ability and a great deal of ingenuity, but he has the boy's weakness of not having a very deep sense of responsibility.

I spoke to the General Manager to-day about sending him down to Halifax in the event of the C.G.E. being in charge of the mining of the Port, and giving him some real practical experience in that class of work, and the General Manager is perfectly willing to put him into Halifax or Vancouver, if they have work in either of those cities to do.

PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA,
HOUSE OF COMMONS,
OTTAWA. PERSONAL

My dear Prime Minister King:-

I feel that I was a little hasty in some observations I made about Arthur to some extent.

The boy is a friendly and gentlemanly chap, and he drops over to see us evenings when we are sitting on the verandah, and he is a very entertaining and well-mannered young fellow.

Salmonsen said that he has much ability and has a splendid future ahead of him, and I suppose his unusually inquiring mind is probably a sign of a thirst for knowledge.

Since I wrote you I have been thinking that possibly his tendency to argue with the members of the C.G.E. staff is possibly the result of an unusually inquiring mind, and perhaps he is not very much to blame in seeking information or trying to find out the reason for the existence of certain things.

I was pleased to hear your voice again, and I trust that those sharing the great responsibility with you will bear their share of it.

YOURS TRULY,

PERSONAL

My dear Premier King:-

Arthur dropped around to see us on Saturday, and he is looking very well, and I think he stood the Winter exceptionally well. He is, naturally, anxious about the election, but I told him that we feel very confident in the ridings immediately around here, and so far, the Conservatives are not showing any particular interest in the campaign, except a few of the regular Tory politicians.

My son's wife, who is a member of the University Club of Peterborough, says that Manion has not impressed the women around Peterborough, and my son, who is active in the Twentieth Century Club, tells me the same thing.

The thing looks all right around Town and in the country around.

Please do not bother answering this letter, because it is just a little bit of gossip, and I thought you would be interested.

PERSONAL

My dear Prime Minister King:

I just received your letter about this man Everett Bristol, who was commissioned, I understand to print for Colonel MacLean, Dr. Bruce and a bunch of local Tories, this propaganda, and of course it received the support of the Globe and Mail.

My object in making an attack on him was to stop it, because his armour has holes in it and he knows it. My letter might have that affect and the war profiteers are anxious to get a foothold and the limitations of profits arouse a good many of the greedy ones.

Arthur is getting along well, and he is buying a little motor boat with an automobile top on it, and he proposes to take his mother for a cruise when she comes to visit him. This is a good deal better for the boy than running around the highways in an automobile, and it will have the affect of giving him composure and confidence, as the boat he is buying will cost him only $125.00, and it is not a fast one.

I know you are very busy so I do not expect you to answer my letters. All I wish to do is to just give you a little news now and again about how things are coming along.

With kindest regards, I remain,

Dear Hon. King:-

Although upon one overwhelmed with problems of State, it was most thoughtful and kind of you to invite me to Kingsmere for the past week-end.

I enjoyed my stay and least of all the benefits of the discourse that took place and I am grateful for your advice to me in respect to the question of my accepting a commission in the Militia.

Our trip home was not as pleasant as the drive east because of the rainy weather, however we arrived safely in time for tea and Aitken came over to our flat for a short visit.

I think that the basic difficulties at Fredericton can be easily removed and that if Aitken surrounds himself with things that give him happy pleasant impressions he will be a happier person. Frankly I had no idea of the seriousness of his difficulty - he is not a chap to complain.

I am glad indeed to know that you enjoyed the little change which the trip afforded. To me, as I told you, it was a real pleasure to make your acquaintance, and from now on I shall follow your career with both interest and pride.

I am deeply grateful to you for all your kindness to Arthur. Like you, I did not know just what the problems were which he had wished to talk over with me. I only hope that too much of the time of your visit was not spent in listening to the discussion of Arthur's problems. I should perhaps say that what I was giving Arthur by way of counsel is the sort of thing which I have daily to be saying to myself. Human nature, as I once heard a learned professor at Harvard say, is so weak that it has to invent expedients to keep itself up to its own purpose. We are fortunate when we find the right expedients.

My dear Mr. King:

I was delighted to receive your letter of the 9th instant and it apparently crossed mine.

Both of these boys are good boys, and my son has the advantage of steadiness and caution, which he inherited from his mother, who comes from New England stock. Naturally I am glad of it, because my Highland Scotch hastiness and partisanship, sometimes, carries me a little beyond what I intended.

The boy was delighted with his weekend visit and Arthur came in with him Sunday night, and Arthur was extremely well pleased too.

Arthur is getting along very well and he has a splendid mind.

Extract from letter received from Arthur King, Esq., dated November 19, 1940.

In the paper today, I see the Research Council are advertising for Engineers of my class to take on some radio work. Do you think that were I to apply and were accepted for this work that it might some day develop into research? I do not know how well I am informed, but I suspect that the replies to this ad. will come from graduates of Technical Schools, etc., rather than Engineers of my class. If you, by any chance, have any information or advice on this matter, I would much appreciate having it.

He did not care for the meals where he was, and some of the other boys are leaving, and he will obtain his meals where he was boarding some time ago.

He has a very large room, and it is in a good residential section, and I think he will be quite satisfied.

He is somewhat of a restless fellow, but he is coming along alright, and maturing.

He had a chat with me over the telephone yesterday, and he is coming over to meet some of our friends, Sunday afternoon.

I read with a great deal of interest your address upon the Address from the Throne and I hope that a few dozen of these can be sent to me , so that I can send them to my friends.

In my view, and in the view of several of your friends, this address was the best address you ever gave, and I notice, with the

MEMORANDUM

For the Prime Minister

The advertisement for radio engineers, to which your nephew refers in his recent letter to you, is covered in the attached clipping from the Toronto Globe and Mail.

I find, ~~on enquiry,~~ that the Research Council are working in collaboration with ~~the~~ British engineers and with Canadian service people in developing some highly confidential products for war purposes. The advertisement was designed to establish a list of those available in the radio field for this type of work. No one has yet been employed, nor has any salary scale been fixed, as this would depend entirely on the qualifications of the particular person selected. There are almost sure, however, to be some appointments, and Mr. Arthur King would be well advised to send in a full statement of his qualifications, experience, etc., to the Secretary of the National Research Council.

Dear Mr. King:

I have just had a talk with one of the supervisors of the Nicholls Hospital, and she said that Arthur is very comfortable and resting easily, and not showing any temperature.

It is a little early yet to tell whether there will be any effect, by way of scars, from the burns, but the doctor's opinion at the present time, is that there is not likely to be any scars remaining.

It is impossible to give you any further information, and everything is going along satisfactorily, and the boy is comfortable and seems to be quite contented to have a little rest, because I think he has been working very hard for a great many months.

My son is keeping in touch with him from time to time, and there is little that anyone can do at the present time.

He has a first class doctor, and attendants, and there is nothing for his mother to be apprehensive about.

It was a real pleasure to have a talk with you again, even over the telephone, and your friends, including myself, are pleased with the very successful

REPETITION

Injured Man Is Nephew of P.M.

Although few people knew it, Arthur King, who has bee living in Peterborough for the past four or five years, is a nephew of Prime Minister Mackenzie King. He was painfully burned at noon hour yesterday when an explosion occurred in a 22-foot launch at George street wharf Tuesday. Clark Glassford, who was with him, received severe arm burns and light facial burns.

"There must have been some gasoline escape as the boat stood idle," declared King Tuesday night in hospital. "The motor was covered over by a housing and when it was turned over, a backfire took place which ignited the gasoline."

— "Clark and I were standing right over it. Flames shot out on my face and arms and on the right arm and face of Clark," he said. "I thought my eyes were badly burned and that my clothing was afire, and in the excitement I jumped into the lake to make sure."

Men from a nearby boat came running to give them assistance and the fire department was called to extinguish the fire in the boat. Both men were rushed to the Clinic and later to hospital. King's face was covered by a mask and both arms were completely banadaged except at the fingers. Glassford's right arm was completely wrapped in gauze and his face was covered by an oily substance.

"I was sure happy to know that my eyes were all right," declared King. "That was the part that was worrying me most."

For the Prime Minister:

In accordance with your direction, I telephoned to Mr. Arthur King to say that you have had him in your thoughts at different times recently but, unfortunately, you have not been able to see him; that you would like him to know that, if he could get away this afternoon and go to Room 212, Mr. Turnbull would no doubt look after him to see the proceedings of the Opening of the House. On the other hand, the Prime Minister is speaking on Monday and, perhaps, Mr. King might like to be in the House on that day to hear him, but that he should not leave his work unless convenient to do so.

Mr. King said he would be glad to go to the House this afternoon. He said it would not be possible for him to absent himself from the office on Monday.

Dear Mr.King:

I saw Arthur Friday evening, and, as I was away Saturday, I did not have a chance to write you.

He looks like a member of the Klu Klux Clan,all swathed in bandages,and arpetures for his eyes and mouth. His arms are also bandaged, but he is quite contented, and not suffering very much, and he thinks his wounds will not be permanent.

It apparently was gasoline vapour that blew up, and he did not suffer from any splashes of gasoline on fire.

He had several friends visiting him at the time, I saw him and he is resting most of the day in one of the ferneries, so he is quite contented and happy, and particularly grateful that his eyes were not in any way affected by the explosion.

He is getting along very nicely, and he is one of the luckiest boys alive.

Mr. Nicolls, Director of the Housing Act, has promised his full co-operation in the matter of finding a suitable apartment in Ottawa for Mr. Arthur King.

There are, at present, about 30 or 40 projects for conversion of large homes, under consideration. Mr. Nicolls feels that he is safe in undertaking to promise one definitely for the 1st of July, which will be wholly acceptable.

Mr. Nicolls will telephone again shortly to give the addresses of 2 or 3 apartments in Ottawa which will be especially suitable - one of which is located in front of the Mayfair Apartments.

The conversation I had with Mr. Nicolls was confidential and in the form of enquiry only.

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

Sunday, May 9, 1943

FOR MR. KING:

Mr. Arthur King came over to our house last night and we all had a delightful few hours together. He was in excellent spirits. We had a good talk and some beautiful music, most of which was played by Arthur himself on the piano, and a few indoor games which we all enjoyed.

I mentioned to Arthur in confidence the reasons which may make it impossible for you to be present at his wedding on the 20th instant. Mr. King was naturally greatly disappointed at this word, but expressed the hope that circumstances may change sufficiently to enable you to be with them a week from next Thursday.

As to the matter of securing accommodation in Ottawa, Mr. King has asked me to let you know that he was "extremely grateful" for the interest you have taken in the matter, and would very much like to see the proposed arrangement carried out. He has only signed a month-to-month lease and would greatly welcome a change of residence. It was only as a last resort that he rented the war-time house in Wrightville, and would be delighted to move to an apartment in Ottawa around the beginning of July. He has asked me to keep him informed as to developments. He expects to be back in Ottawa around the first of June, after his honeymoon, by which time Mr. Nicolls, of the Housing Administration, may have some definite word for him, on the strength of which Mr. King will be able to cancel his lease.

I shall be glad to give you more details tomorrow.

The Prime Minister:

I saw Mr. and Mrs. Arthur King at the National Museum, last night, and they both looked very well and happy.

I explained to Mr. King how busy you had been in recent weeks and what your engagements were likely to be this week and next. Also told him of your interview of over an hour with Mr. Nichols, and gave him a copy of the list of places that will be available in September or October. Spoke of the advantages of renting an apartment which is under government supervision.

Mr. King asked me to let you know that he was indeed very grateful to you for the trouble to which you had gone in the matter; that he and Mrs. King will make it a point to look over all of these apartments in the course of the next few weeks.

Mr. King wishes you to know he is going to Toronto, on business, Sunday night, for a few days, and is bringing Mrs. King along with him. He indicated to me he will be communicating with you very soon either by 'phone or by letter.

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

For the Prime Minister.

Arthur King has been interested in the development of the new organization, discussed by Sir Campbell Stuart to take over Commonwealth communications. I now learn that no action is possible for a number of months. Lord Reith, former Governor of the British Broadcasting Corporation, is planning to visit the governments of the various Dominions to discuss this project. He will be in Canada about March 1st. The next meeting of the Commonwealth Communications Council has been put off until July 1st.

If you wish, I will let Arthur King know of this direct or perhaps you will want to give him this word yourself.

MEMORANDUM for the Prime Minister:

Mr.Bonnier, M.P. for Montreal-St.Henry, called this afternoon in connection with a house about which I believe you were enquiring, for the possible use of your niece.

Mr.Bonnier said that a tenant had been in touch with him to say that he might be going to Toronto, possibly about the end of this month. If the tenant moved, his house would be available, and Mr.Bonnier was wondering whether you would wish to consider the matter further.

Mr.Bonnier is in Ottawa today, and will be here tomorrow morning at least. His office is Local 4241.

MISS K. THOMAS WED TO PREMIER'S NEPHEW

Twin Brother of Groom Is Best Man

Kathleen Marion Thomas became the bride of Arthur Macdougall King this afternoon in Trinity college chapel, with Rev. A. S. Madill officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. R. Thomas, New Toronto, and the groom is the son of Mrs. D. Macdougall King, Denver, Colo., and the late Dr. King, and is a nephew of Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Given away by her father, the bride wore a street-length blue crepe suit with matching accessories. Her only attendant was Mrs. G. D. Thomas, sister-in-law of the bride, who wore a gray suit and navy accessories. Best man was Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, twin brother of the groom. At the reception held in St. Hilda's college, the bride's mother wore a teal blue dress with navy accessories. Assisting her was the groom's mother, who wore a blue sheer dress with matching accessories.

Christmas Day, 1927.

My dear Lyon:

I was very glad to receive the Christmas gift from Arthur and yourself, and the love and good wishes which came with it. They have all added very much to my happiness at this Christmas season.

The title of the book, "American Comes of Age," reminds me that early in the New Year is your own and Arthur's birthday, and that you are rapidly reaching the point of coming of age yourselves.

I hope when your birthday anniversary comes around that each of you will have a very happy day

Dear Mr King

I was very pleased that your nephew, Wm L. M. King, won the Ronald Saddington medal in Pathology. I have been watching his work in our Department and can fully assure you that he won his place in the class, by sincere and steady work. It shall be my pleasant duty at the re-assembling of the classes in fall, to make the official presentation of the Medal.

With kindest regards

Very Sincerely
Oskar Klotz

Dear Dr. Klotz:

I was, naturally, very pleased when I read of my nephew having done so well in his fourth year examinations in medicine, and, particularly, of his having won the Ronald Saddington medal in Pathology.

I assure you this pleasure has been many times enhanced by your kind thought in writing me of your own pleasure at my nephew's success, and your appreciative words in reference to his work throughout the year.

When my brother died, I felt that the medical profession had lost one whom, had he been spared, would have done honour to his calling. This has made me hope the more that my brother's work might be worthily carried on by his son. It begins to look as if that hope will be fulfilled. Your communication causes me to feel that I may view it as an expectation.

I know it will add to my nephew's pleasure, as it does very much to my own, to know that at the re-assembling of the classes in the fall, the official presentation of the medal will be made to him by yourself.

Recalling the friendship that existed between Dr. Otto J. Klotz and my father, from the days, I might say, when they were fellow undergraduates at the University of Toronto, and enjoying myself the friendship I have been privileged to share with you, it gives me a special pleasure to know of the regard in which you hold my nephew.

With kindest regards,
Believe me,
Yours very sincerely,

Dear Mr. Henry,

Thank you for your letter of the 9th regarding information for the medical fees my uncle wished to meet. The total amount is $120.00, $20 for the Medical Degree Fee and $100 for the Dominion Council Fees.

The former (i.e. $20 fee) must be paid before October 10th of this year. The other doesn't fall due to sometime next spring. I will write at that time when I know exactly when it is to be paid.

MEMORANDUM

for Mr. King:

When Lyon's letter came in, this morning, I spoke, in Major Creighton's absence, to Mr. Raikes, his Assistant, and explained that you had wired me from the boat, asking that certain matters be attended to, for you, and that for one of these purposes it would be necessary for me to transmit $20.00 to your nephew, Lyon King, in Toronto. I suggested that a Bank Money Order be sent, charged to your account, and that I send to the Bank my personal cheque for the same amount, which they could hold as a cover for the Money Order until your return. Mr. Raikes was kind enough to say that they would issue a Bank Money Order, but would not need my cheque as cover. The Order I have sent to Lyon, today. The $100.00, for the Dominion Council fees referred to in his letter attached, is not needed before next spring.

Dear Mr. King,

I am sending you herewith a copy of the London House Appeal literature as you kindly told me that I might do. I think that it will give you all the information about the House and I hope it will be of interest to you.

You will see that during my father's Chairmanship he was able to raise no less than £200,000 and that we have been able to add a further £50,000 since his death. I feel, however, that we have got as much as we can hope for from Great Britain for a little time to come, and, as it is urgently necessary that we should obtain additional funds if we are to meet our obligations properly, I am naturally anxious to see what support I can get from the Dominions, whose young men come to us. I shall go steadily on with this idea in view, and I have no doubt that, as what we are doing becomes better known, we shall obtain further help.

May I thank you again for so kindly letting me come to see you while I was in Ottawa. It was extremely good of you to do so and I am most grateful to you.

Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

Mrs. King,

Dr. Jones came in this morning to pay his respects. He was one of your brother's physicians in Denver. He will be here tomorrow, Tuesday, at 366 Chateau Laurier & wonders if you could just shake hands. WLM

Dear Mr King:-

Just a little note to thank you again for the perfectly delightful week-end that I spend at Kingsmere. It will long be one of my most cherished memories.

It is a privilege to visit in a home such as yours that is filled have breakfast together before going our separate ways for our days work. We are just waiting now to take Mrs King to the train to leave for Denver.

I hope that Pat felt no ill results from his strenuous tracks and that you are feeling rested after your short vacation from your many duties.

Thanking you again, I am.

Most Sincerely Yours
Margery

My dear Margery,

This is just a line to thank you for your charming little note received in the early part of the week. I am delighted that you enjoyed so much your little visit to Ottawa and Kingsmere.

I need not tell you how many and happy are the memories it will always have for me.

With kindest remembrances and all good wishes,

Dear Dr. Jones;

I can't tell you how sorry I am to have missed the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Jones and yourself. When late Sunday afternoon, Mrs. King, my nephews and I learned that you and Mrs. Jones were at the Chateau, I thought of sending my car to bring you out to the country. Unfortunately, as my sister-in-law and nephews were all leaving for Toronto late the same evening, we doubted whether it would be worth your while coming so far for a very short stay. When, on 'phoning, we found that you and Mrs. Jones were ~~out to~~ at dinner, we gave up the thought of bringing you out, and had a message left to the effect that Mrs. King and the boys would call on you on their way to the train. From what I have since learned, there appears to have been some confusion in the giving or delivery of the message itself.

On Monday, I was kept too busy with matters which had accumulated in the previous week, and on one or two other matters of very urgent concern to get into the City at all. On Tuesday, I had no chance to call at the Hotel till the Cabinet had concluded a rather long and strenuous sitting. To my great dismay, I found that you and Mrs. Jones had left. If ever again you are likely to be coming to Ottawa, I should appreciate a line from you, if possible, in advance. It is often difficult for me to see friends unless I know a little in advance of the time of their coming. Had I known last week that you and Mrs. Jones were to be in Ottawa on Sunday, nothing would have given me more pleasure than to have you share part of the day with Mrs. King, my nephews and myself in my home in the country.

May I thank you sincerely for the letter which you have so kindly sent to me. Its references to my brother touched me more deeply than I can begin to tell you. I might say the same of your great kindness to my nephews, and not only for what you have done for them in so many ways in the past but, perhaps, most of all, for what you have given them of inspiration in remembrance of their father's sterling integrity and courage.

It is most kind of you and Mrs. Jones to extend a welcome to me to your home in Pasadina. Should I ever be so fortunate as to visit that beautiful City at a time of the year when you are both there, I should indeed much welcome the opportunity a visit would afford of making your acquaintance, and thanking you, in

Dr. S. Fosdick Jones,
710 South Orange Grove Avenue,
Pasadena, California.

My dear Dick:

It is nice to hear from you and know that you are so well and getting around and enjoying life.

This young man, Dr. Lyon King, seems to be a very fine chap. His father, Max King, as we knew him in Toronto, was three or four years ahead of me but he was a fraternity brother and I knew him quite well and saw him on several occasions in Denver when he was so very ill. His courage and persistency in the face of his condition was most admirable. Max King was a fine character so I am only too glad to do anything I can for this young man. I am sure he would make us a good fellowship man and I think there is no doubt but what he will be appointed.

We are looking forward to our visit in California in January. I do not know whether we will stay for a while in California or whether we will take one of the boat trips around back to New York. Both Mrs. Henderson and I are looking forward as we always to to our visits in California. I have managed to miss you almost every time we have been out as you have been away.

Best regards,

Very sincerely, (Sgd) Mel. Henderson

Dear Dr Balfour:

When in Toronto last week, my nephew, Dr. Lyon King, permitted me to see the letter which he had received from you.

I do not recall having ever read a communication which touched me more deeply. I said to Lyon, when I read it, that I thought he should secure a strong box in which to place it, as I regarded it of even greater value than the Degree he had recently obtained.

It has made me exceptionally happy to feel that, through the kindness and generosity of friends like yourself and Dr. Jones, my nephews have been given a sense of security greater in many respects than I myself could find it possible to give them. You have helped them to believe in themselves, in their professions, and in the future. To young men starting out in life, nothing could be quite so valuable. What, however, delights me above all else is that you have given them reason to know that what they are and may become in all that is highest and best is owing more than all else to the lives of their father and mother, and what has been left to them of a noble courage and high tradition. For this, I thank you with all my heart.

I had Lyon, Arthur and their mother spending the last week-end with me. We talked together a great deal about their future. Lyon seems most anxious, should the chance ever present itself, to pursue his post-graduate studies at the Mayo Clinic. I cannot but feel that that would be the greatest of all incentives as well as opportunities, should the chance of his so doing present itself. I have no doubt in my own mind that he would do honour to the Institution, should he ever gain an association with it. With the number of applications for admission what they are, I know that he can expect to be admitted on the ground of merit only, ~~and that~~ neither he nor I would wish to have it otherwise. If, however, any act or assurance of mine could be of assistance to Lyon in gaining an opportunity for his future, such as a Fellowship at the Mayo Clinic would afford, I would like you to know that I will be only too ready to do what I can on his behalf.

Dr. Donald C. Balfour,

My dear Lyon:

You will understand why I address you as I have, because remembering you only as a boy of ten in Denver and knowing your mother and father so intimately, it seems the natural thing to do. I not only had the highest admiration and respect for your father, but I think few men have had a greater inspiration for me. His magnificent courage was a greater help to me than any one will ever know. Mrs. Balfour and I have been sorry that we have not seen your mother more often since our days in Denver. She is very fond of your mother and hopes that it will not be long before we shall have a chance to have a visit with her.

I am very much interested to hear of your plans. Through one source or another I have been aware of the fine record you have made at medical school. It must be a great satisfaction to you to be through with those medical studies which one has to complete while in school, and most gratifying to your mother and brother and uncle that you have made such an outstanding record. It would be a privilege to be of any help I could in your further program.

The question of graduate work in medicine is, as you know, rather confused chiefly because of the effort on the part of various organizations and qualifying boards in the different specialties to establish standards for graduate training which are in a general way quite sound; unfortunately, the facilities for worth while graduate training in medicine are quite inadequate to meet the demand. At the present intensive studies are being made to determine what graduate training in medicine is available in North America and espedally the standard of such graduate work. This latter depends on so many factors, such as personnel, and experience and appreciation of responsibilities to graduate students, in addition to the facilities available, that it will probably be some time before there will be sufficient opportunities for acquiring a really worth while training in the specialties.

In so far as your own problem is concerned, namely graduate training in surgery, the length of time which is generally accepted as a minimum is three years following the completion of a satisfactory internship. Our own experience here conforms to that. In other words, we believe that with proper facilities and all other things necessary to get a satisfactory graduate training in three years, the man who has the qualifications of becoming a surgeon can acquire a training adequate to enable him to begin practice of his specialty. In actual fact, however, the men majoring in surgery in the Mayo Foundation are here for an average of fifty-two months, the time after the completion of their formal fellowship of three years being taken up with first assistantships and residencies and so forth. The work of a Fellow in surgery is divided up into at least six months in a minor field, usually pathology, physiology or experimental medicine, a minimum of a year in general diagnosis, which our experience has shown is perhaps the most valuable part of the training, and a minimum of a year as a second assistant in the operating rooms. There is no prescribed program for the Fellows. They choose the services in which they wish to participate and the surgeons with whom they wish to work, and in this respect I think they find there are very distinct advantages. Our affiliation with the University of Minnesota, since the Foundation is a part of the Graduate School of the University, enables Fellows to go up to the University to take either an M.S. or Ph.D., degree in their major field. The general requirements for this are a thesis which is usually based on research work which the Fellow has done, evidence of good work while in the Foundation, and a written and oral examination which are conducted by a combined committee of the faculty of the medical school and the faculty here. The stipend for Fellows is designed to cover the living expenses of a single person, namely $900.00 a year. The requirements for admission as a Fellow in the Foundation are graduation from a grade A medical school, an adequate internship, and satisfactory sponsorship by those who know the candidate well. You will have some idea of our problem of selection when I tell you that we have about 1,500 applications in a year for seventy-five places, that is, for fellowships in the various fields of medicine and the fundamental sciences. There are approximately forty appointed to surgical fellowships during a year. At present there are about 275 Fellows in the Mayo Foundation. It is a wonderful group of men from all over the world, and about eighty medical schools are represented in the groups. A lot of the details concerning fellowships are pretty well covered in the University Bulletin which I am enclosing with this letter, as I think you might be interested in it. If there are any points which are not clear, I shall be glad to have you write me.

Opportunities for graduate training in this country and abroad vary so markedly that I am not sure what I could say in that regard. As far as graduate training in surgery in Great Britain is concerned, it would depend to a considerable extent on what a man intended to do after he acquired such training, that is, particularly where he plans to practice, since an F.R.C.S. especially from England is of such importance as to be a necessity in some places, and in other parts of the world it would not mean much as far as opportunities were concerned. At the same time, some training or at least observation of work going on in Great Britain and on the continent is too valuable in broadening one's viewpoint to be omitted, if one can arrange for it, but such contacts are sometimes more valuable after one has begun to make use of his training in actual practice.

I know these remarks are very sketchy. I am sure that with the fine record you have made you will not be satisfied unless you do get a really worth while graduate training somewhere, and I think it is generally agreed that to attain really high places in any field of medicine such training is necessary. What I would hope would be to have an opportunity some time soon of discussing this problem with you. If, by any chance, your plans include a visit to your mother, you could easily come around this way and we would be glad to have you stay with us while you are here. Then we could go over the possibilities of graduate work throughout the world.

Remember me kindly to your mother when you write. There is just a chance that we shall be in Denver within the next couple of weeks, as we are leaving tomorrow for a short vacation in Wyoming.

With every good wish, and again my congratulations on what you have already accomplished in your medical education,

I am,

My dear Honorable Mr. King,

On my return from a short vacation in the west, I find your letter about Lyon. I feel very gratified that I succeeded at least in conveying to him my desire to be of any help I could in his further education. What you have said in reference to this, and your comments on the training in The Mayo Foundation, are much appreciated. I hope that in the event Lyon should receive a fellowship here you would have no reason to change your opinion.

I have also received a letter from Lyon telling me that you have made it possible for him to come out and visit the Clinic and Foundation. We shall be delighted to see him. It has occurred to me, since you have said in your letter that Mrs. King has been visiting there, that she might be coming with him on her return to Denver. If this be true, Mrs. Balfour and I would like to have them both stay with us, as we have frequently regretted that it has been such a long time since we have seen her.

I know you must understand as well as any one can, because of your long and outstanding career in national and international affairs, why I consider it a privilege to be in a position to offer any guidance and assistance to the family of some one whom I admired as much as I did your brother, and to find that such help is so richly merited, as it is by his son.

With kindest regards, believe me

Very sincerely yours,

I have just received your more than kind letter of the 16th instant. Again may I thank you for your interest in my nephew, Lyon King, and for your words concerning my brother. I am most grateful for both.

Mrs. King returned to Denver some weeks ago. She will, therefore, not have the pleasure of visiting you and Mrs. Balfour, at the time Lyon may be going to see you. I gathered she was expecting you and Mrs. Balfour might be visiting Denver some time this month or next, and was much hoping that she might have the pleasure of seeing you both while you were there.

I must apologise for not having immediately acknowledged your kindness in sending to me, as requested, the particulars respecting London House, which was forwarded from Montreal with your letter of July 24th.

I continue to recall with pleasure the much too short conversation we had together when you were in Ottawa. As the chance offers, I am not hesitating to make known here and there the significance of what is being done at London House, and the opportunity it affords to persons of means to make a contribution to an Empire project of first importance.

At the time I asked for the material which you so kindly sent me, I had in mind the possibility, at some future time, of seeking to gain admission to London House for one of my nephews, who has just completed a seven year course in medicine at the University of Toronto, where he graduated second in his year, and won the Faculty medal. He is, at present, taking a post-graduate course as interne in the Toronto General Hospital. Only today I received word from him that he had been visiting Dr. Balfour, the head of the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minnesota. He seems quite determined, in his own mind, to pursue further graduate studies there. From what he tells me, and from what I have learned from other sources, there seems to be every prospect of his being awarded one of the fellowships, should he, a year from now, as he probably will, be prepared to begin a three year course of post-graduate study in surgery at that institution. Dr. Balfour was a close friend of his father, my late brother, who, as a physician and author, attained a high place in his profession.

My dear Mrs. King:

I should have written you before this about Lyon's visit here. It was a great treat for us to see one of your boys, and I am glad that he, too, enjoyed the visit. It must be of greatest comfort to you that these two fine young men are of such promise and have reached an age that makes many of the apprehensions which come with bringing up children a thing of the past for you.

Lyon said he had decided to submit an application for a fellowship in the Mayo Foundation and, although the formal appointments for next July will not be made until around the first of the year, I need scarcely tell you that I shall make sure that the committee on admissions is well aware of his unusual record. Since the majority of the committee members met him when he was here, they know for themselves about his fine personality and his seriousness.

Lyon is so conscientious about his work and his responsibilities that I think an entire change of environment will perhaps be particularly good for him. Sometimes different contacts require enough change of view in making necessary adjustments that they are very beneficial to young men of such intense ambition as he has. It was fine to see a young man who is as conscious of the sacrifices which have been made for him as Lyon is.

Mrs. Balfour and I would like very much to see you and hope it will not be long before we do.

Sincerely yours,

(Sgd) Donald Balfour

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King,

Please let me thank you for your kind letter of the 30th September, which I would have answered sooner, but I have been away from London for my holiday, and only received it on returning here this morning. I hope that you will excuse the delay.

I am most interested to hear from you that your Nephew, who is studying Medicine, might possibly be coming to London for Postgraduate study at some time in the future. If this should happen, I hope that you will not fail to let me know, and I shall of course see that he is arranged for at LONDON HOUSE, if he would wish to be in residence there during his time in London.

I am just about to fix a date for the Opening of our new buildings at the House, by Her Majesty Queen Mary, during the month of December. These buildings are now nearing completion. They are really very fine indeed and will provide a permanent home for young men who come here from the Dominions, in a way which I am confident will be to their pleasure and advantage.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 18) Dr. William Lyon Mackenzie King and family - Correspondence 1927-1949

I had hoped so much that when Queen Mary came to pay us this special visit, we should be in a position to announce some benefactions from the Dominions, which are so urgently needed for carrying our work further. I am afraid, however, that, up till now, I have had no success in this direction, in spite of making every effort. I shall of course keep on trying, and I have no doubt that, as the House becomes more widely known in course of time, we shall find generous people in the Dominions who will be glad to help us, on account of the value of the House to their young men.

May I tell you again how much I appreciate your having kindly found the time to write to me. It is indeed good of you to think of doing so.

With kind regards,
Yours very sincerely,

W. M. Lyon Mackenzie

Dear Mr. King:

Mrs. Rean and I are looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to having you with us on Saturday next.

I know that there will be many claims on your time while in Toronto, but if at all convenient, I shall be very glad to have you join in a little luncheon with Lyon, Arthur and myself at noon on Saturday in a private dining room at the Royal York Hotel.

If there is anyone else whom you would like to have in the group, please let me know. Lyon suggested that his uncles, Dr. Harold and Bob Wookey might join us.

Dear Mrs. Rean:

Before beginning to think of the duties of the present week which will witness the opening of Parliament on Thursday, I feel I should like to send a line to Mr. Rean and yourself just to say what a great pleasure it has been to me to meet you both, and also how much I have appreciated your many kindnesses of yesterday.

I thought the marriage service a very beautiful one. I do not think I have ever seen a lovelier bride than Margery was. She looked so radiant. I shall never forget the picture of Margery and Lyon as they stood together at the Altar, and later, of the two together standing side by side, in your home, surrounded by their many friends. I am sure they are both going to be very happy and that their lives together will mean much not only to each other, but to all who, to them, are nearest and dearest.

I was sorry not to have had a word of good-bye with Miss Rean before leaving your home, last night. Perhaps you would be so kind as to tell her that I was so glad to have met her during the afternoon, and shall hope for many future opportunities of renewing the association formed at the time. Please tell her I thought that she and her companion bridesmaid looked very beautiful in their lovely gowns, carrying the beautiful bouquets which they had throughout the evening.

With kindest regards to Mr. Rean and yourself, and with all good wishes,

Believe me,

My dear Harold:

I am sending this line just to say again how sorry I was not to be able to accept your kind invitation to visit your home after the wedding reception at Mr. and Mrs. Rean's.

Had I known earlier in the day of your kind thought, I might have been able to arrange to have dropped in for a short time, as I would have liked very much to be able to do. Unfortunately, I promised Mrs. Lindsey, in the course of the afternoon, that as I would not be able to call and see her at that time, I would reserve a few minutes after the wedding reception and before going to the train to call and have a talk with her. I was to have met my sister, Jennie, and her children at Mrs. Lindsey's a short time before going to the wedding, but could not manage to reach Mrs. Lindsey's residence until the moment of leaving for the Church itself. That afforded an additional reason why I felt it imperative not to occasion a second disappointment, particularly as Mrs. Lindsey had herself not been well enough to attend the wedding.

Having several engagements in the city during the day, I had to arrange for the last of the number to be aboard my car at the station a half an hour before the train left. These circumstances, combined, made it quite impossible for me to fit in even a quarter of an hour at your home. I am sorry, indeed, to have missed the pleasure, as I should have much enjoyed a further word with Mrs. Wookey and yourself, and also seeing more of May and her sister, and your brothers and members of the family.

I was sorry, too, hnt to have been able to come up for the dinner which was given by Herbert and yourself in Lyon's honour, but that was quite impossible, with the pressure of public duties what they are on the eve of the assembling of parliament.

I thought the wedding ceremony at the Church very beautiful, and the subsequent reception at Mr. and Mrs. Rean's residence most delightful. How fortunate Lyon is to have such a charming bride! I think they will both be very happy, and I am sure you agree with me that they have a real future before them.

With kind remembrances to Mrs. Wookey and yourself, and kind personal regards,

Dear Mr King.

Thanks for your letter. I quite understood how limited your time was on Saturday and how impossible it was for you to be one of our party at the wedding.

I was also sorry Kirkland and the girls were also unable to come. Perhaps some other time we may have the pleasure of seeing you.

On the whole I think Joyce has done the best thing though I meant confess I was sorry when I first heard of his plans for being married, that he had not waited until his Surgical training was completed. An early marriage so often makes it impossible for promising young men to find the time and the means for the exclusive post graduate training which surgeons these days want. before they can be given an appointment which amounts to anything:

However in his case thanks to Dr Bethune this has been made possible. I am sure that Marjorie is just the type of girl to help him in his career and I have no doubt he has a great future before him.

I hope you continue to have the strength and courage to carry on with your great job in these most difficult times. Sincerely.

Harold

My dear Mr. King:

At our staff meeting last Wednesday your nephew Bill presented some work he has been doing during the past few months in connection with sulfapyridine in the treatment of pneumonia. I wish you could have heard his presentation. He did extraordinarily well and gave such unmistakable evidence of his acute intellect and intense interest in his work that it would have given you every reason to be proud of how he has developed.

This also gives me the occasion to say how happy we are to have Bill and his wife here with us. They have made many friends and seem to be most happily situated both in their work and in their apartment. Bill looks better than he has at any time since he has been here and we can safely predict that he will have an outstanding career in his profession.

I regret very much not being able to see you when in Ottawa on Tuesday. I left my address with your secretary as the Sun Life office.

It was very kind of you to write me as you did. I know something of the tremendous pressure of work and responsibility that is crowding in on you these strenuous days.

Lyon and Margery had a wonderful holiday with us. They are both very well and happy. They are stimulating company, especially to those of us who are growing older. They fully appreciated the circumstances which made it impossible for you to have them go to Ottawa.

Mrs. Rean and I share with thousands of others the conviction that Canada and the Empire are fortunate in having you in your present position at this crisis in our history. We pray that you may have health and strength to carry the tremendous responsibilities which are yours. We sincerely hope that you will not allow some recent happenings here in Toronto to worry you.

Ottawa, January 15, 1942

Mrs. Walter C. Rean,
14 Binscarth Road,
Toronto, Ont.

I thank you and Mr. Rean most warmly for kind invitation your telegram received last night. Despite every effort I have been making, I regret to find it is going to be impossible for me to be absent from Ottawa even for a day before Parliament re-assembles. Am deeply sorry to miss being present at christening and with you all later in day. Kindest regards.

Mackenzie King.

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE MACKENZIE KING,
PRIME MINISTER OF CANADA,
OTTAWA.

My dear Prime Minister King:

PERSONAL

Arthur and his brother Dr. King dropped over to see me today for half an hour visit and both are looking fine. Dr. King congratulated my son, Wilmot Gordon, upon his being the father of a child which is now three months old, while my son was able to reciprocate in congratulating the Doctor upon having two children in his family, the last one being about three months old.

Dr. King is going to Halifax and has said he would not be able to see you when going east and Arthur is looking extremely well and is hard at work.

I know you are extremely busy so please do not bother to acknowledge this letter.

YOURS FAITHFULLY,

Dear Mr. Gordon:

The Prime Minister has asked me to thank you for your letter of the 17th of June. While you were thoughtful enough to suggest that no acknowledgment is necessary, Mr. King wanted you to know that he had received it, and that he warmly appreciates your interest.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Mr. King -

A word of explanation is due you, I feel, for my brief visit to the House. We are en route from Pelawara to Redford N.S. and just in town for a few hours. We leave Montreal tonight so must make the four o'clock train.

We did want to see you at least and carry word to Lyon and Margery of you. I doubt if we see Lyon for some time, according to word received yesterday, but we will be with Margery for the summer.

Kindest regards from us both - Agnes Kear

Dear Mrs. Rean:

It was kind of you to send me a word in reference to your visit to the House of Commons. Until I saw you and Mr. Rean in the gallery, I had no idea that you were in the city, and you had left the gallery and, apprently, the city, before I was able to get in touch with you.

Since your letter was received, May has told me of your visit with Lyon and Margery. I do hope that it has given Mr. Rean and yourself the pleasure that I am sure it would give to the young people. A visit by the sea should prove a welcome and pleasant change.

Please give my love to Margery and Lyon, and to the little people, and with kindest remembrances and regards to Mr. Rean and yourself,

MEMORANDUM

FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

Attached are:

(1) Two copies of two enlargements of negatives showing (a) H.M.C.S. St. Croix; (b) boat leaving St. Croix carrying Surgeon Lieutenant Lyon Mackenzie King to see a sick sailor. These negatives were taken by Able Seaman Ferns, from another ship near the St. Croix. These are for your files.

(2) Note of thanks to sailor (earlier draft was discarded as enlargements were not ready before you went to Washington). (The Director of Naval Information states that "Dear Ferns" is the proper mode of address.)

I am taking the first opportunity since my return from the United States to thank you for your thoughtfulness in sending me, with your letter of November 24th, two negatives showing photographs which you took of H.M.C.S. St. Croix.

I much appreciate your kindness in sending me these two negatives, particularly the one which shows my nephew, the late Surgeon-Lieutenant Lyon Mackenzie King in a seaboat, going to attend a sailor who was ill.

I have instructed my secretary to return the negatives to you, as you requested. I have also directed him to send you an enlargement of each of the photographs, with my compliments.

With best wishes for Christmas and the New Year,

Yours sincerely,

FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

You wish to be reminded about a photograph of Dr. Lyon King to be sent to Dr. Josef Hilpert, 2021 Peel Street, Montreal.

Hilpert, as you will recall, promised to paint a portrait of Dr. King. In addition to the photograph he would like to have some idea of the colouring, hair, eyes and complexion, together with any other details about his appearance which would make it possible for him to make a good painting.

Dear Dr. Hilpert:

I have spoken to Mr. King about your very kind offer to do a portrait of his nephew, Dr. Lyon King, who was lost at sea.

Mr. King did not realize that this was to be a painting by yourself. He hesitates now when he understands this, to accept your kind offer, first because he feels that this is an imposition, and secondly because he feels that it would not be fair to you to attempt a work from a photograph when he himself cannot be too sure that the details of colouring which he would give you would be sufficiently accurate.

He is much appreciative of your kindness, but knows you will understand his reluctance to take advantage of it.

My own good wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Memorandum for Mr. Turnbull:

I enclose a photograph of my nephew, Lieut.-Surgeon Lyon King, which is, I think the best picture of him that I have. If you think well of sending it on to Dr. Hilpert, and will assume all risks in relation thereto, I shall be pleased to have him paint the picture he has in mind. I still feel, however, that it is an imposition to have him do professional work of the kind without consideration in the way of payment therefor. This, unfortunately, I am not in a position to make, nor should I wish to incur indirectly an obligation of any kind. Your memorandum causes me to feel that I might be discourteous and lacking in appreciation of a sincere expression of good-will if I refrain from allowing Dr. Hilpert to carry out his wish.

The enclosed picture is one of Dr. King with his wife and their little son. I would think that this photograph would lend itself to a fine picture of the head and shoulders of the Doctor, which later could be appropriately framed in either a square or oval shaped frame. The Doctor's complexion, as you will recall, was dark rather than fair, his hair dark, his face at times having a rather sallow or tanned colouring. His eyes were dark blue. This picture brings out a characteristic thoughtful expression.

This is the only copy I have of this particular photograph, so should be pleased if care might be taken of it.

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

For the Prime Minister:

Dr. Hilpert, the Montreal artist, who took some photographs of you in your 212 office, has written to me further in regard to the painting of Dr. Lyon King.

On your instructions, I told Dr. Hilpert that you felt it was an imposition to have any work of this kind done, and that in any event it would be rather difficult to supply any accurate records as to colouring, etc. He has, however, assured me that he does not want you to feel that there would be the slightest obligation involved, and that at no time would this prove an embarrassment to you. He likes to do this sort of work and is most anxious that the Prime Minister of Canada should receive some kind of specimen of what he can do as a good-will gesture.

From what I know of Hilpert, I think you can depend on it that he would not try to impose on you or consider the acceptance of this offer as obligating you to him in any particular.

Dear Mr. King.

Gordon and I wish to thank you very much for your Kindness in arranging tickets for us for the session of the House. We considered ourselves very fortunate to be in Ottawa at such a time and to be able to be in the House of Commons.

We have all been following the events of the last few weeks very closely and wish to extend to you our congratulations on your success in this crisis.

Dear Mrs. Pim:

I thank you for your kind note, which I have just received.

I am sorry that I had not the pleasure of seeing you and "Gordon" when you were in Ottawa, but I am glad to know that you found it possible to be present at some of the debates. It is a great relief once again to have the session adjourned, this time I hope until prorogation.

I am glad to hear that Margery and the children are all well.

I am so sorry that it was not until this morning that I saw, for the first time, your charming card of Christmas and New Year greetings with its good wishes from all in the little house so beautifully portrayed on the card which brought them to me. It is only now, at the beginning of the New Year, that I am finding sufficient free time to look at most of the greetings which came to Laurier House or the office during the preceding weeks.

It was most kind of you and Mr. Rean to have my specially in your thoughts, and I thank you warmly for the good wishes you have sent to me. The little sketch of the house is most attractive. I am glad to have this view of it in its winter dress.

Please allow this line to renew to Mr. Rean and yourself, and to all at 587 Sheppard Avenue East, my best of wishes for this New Year.

Re Dr.Godfrey Livingstone Gale

and Mrs.Gale,Nee Elizabeth Durie Thomson,R.N.

Dr.Godfrey Gale was Gold Medalist in his class in medicine and was appointed to the staff of the Medical School of Cheeloo University,in the city of Tsinan,capital of Shantung Province,some five or six years ago. He was married to Elizabeth Durie Thpmson,daughter of Rev.Andrew and Mrs.Thomson,of Toronto, missionaries of the United Church of Canada,in September 1940. Dr.Gale is an Englishman,a missionary of the London Missionary Society. If regular routine is followed,he would be returned to England. He is interned at Shanghai,with wife and little daughter.

Dr.Gale has also a brother,who was with the forces in Singapore,and was made a prisoner by the Japanese. He also is being released. He has a wife and two childre[illegible]

We strongly urge that Dr.Godfrey Gale,with his wife and child,be returned to Canada and not to England. The chief reason is that they will need to ~~recuperate~~ after four years' internement,and this can be done better in Canada than in England, where food and clothing are both scarcer than here. I,and a brother-in-law,Major Christopher Wright,of the British Army,resident in Ottawa,married to Dr.Godfry's sister,have already sent signed statements to the Department of Internal Affairs,Ottawa,guaranteeing whatever finances are required in order to allow that they be repatriated to Canada first,with a view to their going [illegible] to England later. Mrs.Gale,has,I expect,her Canadian pass-port still. She went to China as a nurse,in 1939,and later became engaged to and married Dr.Gale.

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM for the Prime Minister

Re: Mrs. W. L. Mackenzie King's letter about Mrs. Gale and her family

I have had enquiries made in External Affairs and attach a brief memorandum from which it appears that every possible channel is being used to ensure the return of the Gale family to Canada.

The only other thing I can think of doing is to speak personally to Mr. Malcolm MacDonald about the matter. I should be very glad to do that if you so desire.

I was not sure whether you wanted me to draft a letter to Mrs. King or whether you intended to write her yourself?

Memorandum for Mr. Pickersgill.

Re: Repatriation of Dr. Godfrey Gale and Family.

As Dr. Gale and his family are not Canadians, their repatriation will have to be handled by the United Kingdom government representatives, although there will be no difficulty in the way of having them brought to Canada. All that is necessary is for Dr. Gale to tell the United Kingdom government representative that that is what they wish to do.

The Department of External Affairs has advised Mrs. Gale's father, Reverend Andrew Thomson, to write to the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom in Ottawa, asking him to notify the United Kingdom government representatives in the Far East that this family should be sent to Canada instead of the United Kingdom.

In view of the fact that Dr. Gale's wife was a Canadian citizen, the Department of External Affairs has also written to our representative in Manila asking him -

(a) to try to get a message to Dr. and Mrs. Gale telling them to apply to the United Kingdom representative to be sent to Canada,

(b) to bring the case to the attention of the British Consul in Manila.

Memorandum regarding Dr. Godfrey Gale and his Family.

At the Prime Minister's request, the possibility of having Dr. and Mrs. Godfrey Gale and their daughter repatriated to Canada from the Far East has been looked into.

As Dr. Gale is an Englishman, the repatriation will be arranged by the United Kingdom representatives in the Far East, but there is no obstacle in the way of their repatriation to Canada if Dr. Gale indicates to the representative of the United Kingdom on the spot that this is the course he wishes to have followed.

The Department of External Affairs has advised Mrs. Gale's father to write to the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom in Ottawa, requesting him to advise the United Kingdom authorities on the spot that Dr. Gale and his family should be sent to Canada. The Department has also written to the Canadian representative in Manila, asking him to try to get in touch with Dr. and Mrs. Gale to advise them to apply to the United Kingdom representative to be sent to Canada. The Canadian representative has also been directed to bring the matter to the attention of the British Consul at Manila.

Since the Prime Minister's directions were received, this office has been in touch with Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, United Kingdom High Commissioner, who has been kind enough to say that he will do what he can to ensure that Dr. and Mrs. Gale's wishes are carried out.

Dear Dean Cronkhide:

Mrs. King - the widow of my late nephew, Dr. W.L.M. King - has written me that she has in mind taking definite steps toward obtaining, from Harvard University, the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in the Department of Social Relations. Mrs. King has asked if I would mind writing a character reference for her.

I am sure that Mrs. King's own academic record is such that nothing more would be required to gain for her the most favourable consideration in connection with any application she might make to Harvard University for admission as a student in post graduate work.

In applying for admission to the University, I do not hesitate to say that Mrs. King's character would merit the highest recognition.

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

MEMORANDUM

The Prime Minister:

Mrs. Rean, Marjorie King's mother, telephoned this morning to see if it would be possible for her to have a word with the Prime Minister today, either in person or on the telephone.

Mrs. Rean is at the Chateau Laurier, attending the meeting of the National Council of Women, and is returning to Toronto tonight. Mrs. Rean said that, knowing how busy Mr. King is, she hated to bother him, but did not like to return without at least having a word with him on the telephone. Mrs. Rean said she could step over to the House of Commons this afternoon if the Prime Minister should find it convenient to let her have a few minutes there.

Mrs. Rean can be reached at any time today at the Chateau Laurier - 2-6411.

A.E.H.

Will see at H. of C. after Orders of the Day. Mr. Martin advised, and Mrs. Rean advised to be at 212 about 3.30 p.m.

Dear Mr. Noble:

I was pleased to learn that on Sunday, the 29th instant, a memorial service will be held in Rosedale United Church, at which a tablet bearing the names of the men of your congregation who made the supreme sacrifice will be unveiled by His Excellency the Governor General.

I wish very much it might be possible for me to be present at the service, especially as my nephew, the late Surgeon-Lieut. W. L. M. King, is one whose memory is being honoured on the tablet. I doubt, however, if it will be possible for me to arrange to be in Toronto on the day of the service. I feel I ought immediately so to advise you in order that as much space as possible may be made available.

If circumstances were other than what they are, I should greatly have welcomed the opportunity of being present at the service along with my late nephew's widow, Mrs. King, and her children.

Dear Mr. King,

On Sunday, May 29th next, a memorial service will be held in our church at which a tablet, bearing the names of the men of our congregation who made the supreme sacrifice for our country, will be unveiled by His Excellency, the Governor-General.

Your nephew is one whose memory is being honored on this tablet. Knowing your close feeling towards your nephew and inasmuch as you attended his marriage in our church, we felt that you would like to attend this service if it happened that you might be in Toronto around that date.

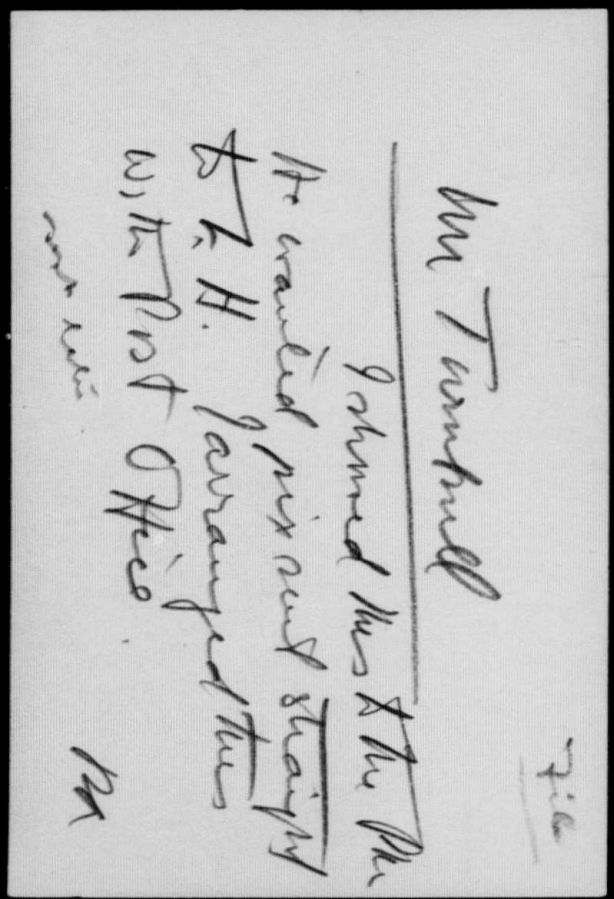

It is anticipated that the capacity of the church will be taxed on this occasion, so it is necessary that admission to this service be by ticket only. If it is possible that you may be able to attend, would you please let me know so that I can send you an admission card and see that space is available for you in the section reserved for next-of-kin directly behind the Governor-General. I have already heard from your niece to the effect that she will be attending with her children.

Yours very truly,

A three year Fellowship in Clinical Surgery provided by the Mayo Foundation for the purpose of training men as surgical specialists. The first two years are spent in the Mayo Clinic doing general surgical diagnostic work, surgical pathology, and also in preparing a thesis on some phase of surgery which particularly interests one. The third year is spent as an interne in hospital, in which one is second assistant to four different staff-men of the Clinic, three months on each service. At the end of that time one is entitled to receive a Master's degree in surgery after passing written or oral examinations. One may then proceed to a fourth year as first assistant to one staff-man for the year. This job pays $1200. a year instead of $900. It is not included in the Fellowship, but many fellows go on and take the extra year if they are fortunate enough to get an appointment.

LONDON HOUSE.

Since this Appeal was issued, in May, 1935, the Governors have been successful in raising a total of £50,000, including the conditional promise of £20,000 from the Carnegie Corporation of New York.

It was hoped that this £50,000 would be applied for the purpose of endowment of the Hall and Library, both of which have been provided by generous donors, and are now being built. Owing, however, to the urgent demand for further residential accommodation, as revealed by the long waiting list of applicants, the Governors have had no alternative but to utilise the £50,000 cash already received, towards building a further block of Students' bedrooms, which will form a continuation of the Library Wing and will carry the new buildings up to the main entrance in Guilford Street. The £50,000 required for endowment, therefore, remains yet to be collected, and it is urgently necessary that this sum should be forthcoming without delay. This is due to the fact that the fees received from Students are on a moderate basis and do not provide anything towards the upkeep and maintenance of buildings.

In order to complete the scheme in its entirety, a further £250,000 will eventually be necessary for replacing the old buildings remaining on the site. When this has been done, it is anticipated that accommodation for 250 Students will be available. The Governors intend to go as far as possible towards securing the whole of this money without delay, and they feel that the success of the House, which has already been clearly demonstrated, is an ample justification for this further appeal.

LONDON HOUSE

(The Hall of Residence for British and Dominion Students in London, established in 1930 by the DOMINION STUDENTS' HALL TRUST)

THE growth of London as an Imperial City is reflected in her increasing importance as a centre of Education, no less than in other ways. Her University, her Hospitals, her Inns of Court, draw to themselves the Students of the Empire. The teaching which London gives and the associations which are formed under her influence will exercise a profound effect on the British Commonwealth of Nations in the future.

There is little or no residential accommodation in London connected either with the University or with other Educational Institutions. To many young men whose homes are in the British Isles, but more particularly to those who come from the Dominions to complete their education in London, the problem of housing themselves conveniently and at a reasonable cost is a serious one. It is probably the chief difficulty with which they are faced in making their arrangements.

LONDON HOUSE was founded in order to meet this need for a home for Students working in London. Its benefits are offered to men from the Dominions and from other parts of the Empire, who are British and of European origin, and to a proportion of men from the British Isles. Its aim is to secure for them, as far as possible, an environment similar to that of the Colleges of some of the Ancient Universities, with the opportunity of meeting men of their own age from other parts of the Empire. It is regarded as essential that the cost of running the House should be moderate, so that the charges are well within the reach of the average Student.

Under the Chairmanship of the late Mr. FREDERICK CRAUFURD GOODENOUGH, the Governors of LONDON HOUSE were able to raise no less than £200,000, of which £28,000 has yet to be received by instalments. From this total sum, £132,000 has been spent on the purchase of the fine freehold island block of residential houses in Mecklenburgh Square, Bloomsbury, W.C. 1, shown on the accompanying plan. The property is most conveniently situated within easy distance of the new site of London University. The greater part of it is still occupied by tenants, but practically the whole of the Caroline Place houses have been converted for the temporary use of the Students and of the Controller and his Staff. There are at present 57 Students in residence and there is a considerable waiting list. The domestic income and expenditure of the House approximately balance and the charges to Students are from £2 5s. od. to £2 9s. od. per week inclusive, according to the period of residence. The candidates for admission are most carefully selected and a very high standard is maintained. The number of Students who have passed through the House, since its opening in 1931, is 240, drawn from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Rhodesias and Great Britain.

The Trustees have received a generous donation of £40,000, which is included in the above-mentioned sum of £200,000, for the erection of a Hall to be built on the Doughty Street frontage. This will be the first permanent building of the House to be erected, and plans for it have already been approved by the Governors.

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

Owing to what has already been achieved, it is possible, as well as urgently necessary, to appeal for further support for the development of LONDON HOUSE. The Carnegie Corporation, who have already been generous donors, have promised a further sum of $100,000, i.e., approximately £20,000, provided that £30,000 can be raised from other sources, and at least this total amount of £50,000 will be required in order that the Trust shall be sufficiently endowed to meet the increased maintenance cost which will arise as soon as the Hall is completed. Beyond this figure, however, more will be necessary in order to provide increased accommodation for Students so that finally the number of Residents may be increased to as many as 300 men. The present hope of the Governors is to secure £30,000 which will earn for them the Carnegie Corporation's promised donation of £20,000, and also to raise as much as possible above that figure towards further building extensions.

The progress already made, the support which has been given and the demand for accommodation amply confirm the belief in which the project for the foundation of LONDON HOUSE was formed. It also justifies a further effort to secure for the House a larger establishment in dignified buildings which will be permanently suited to its work.

LONDON HOUSE owes its inception and its progress mainly to its first Chairman, Mr. F. C. GOODENOUGH. His interest in Education, his intimate connection with the City of London and with many parts of the Empire, due to his position as Chairman of a great Bank with Imperial Affiliations, led him to view the growth of London as an Imperial City, and through this growth the strengthening of the bonds of Empire, as a great object to which in this, as in other ways, he made a signal contribution by his personal efforts.

The proposal has been made that a Memorial of Mr. GOODENOUGH's life and work should be established. Nothing could be more fitting for this purpose, or more closely identified with his own interests and affections, than the completion of LONDON HOUSE, of which he may truly be called the Founder.

Donations made payable to "The Treasurer, Dominion Students' Hall Trust" may be sent to Barclays Bank Limited, 54, Lombard Street, London, E.C. 3, or to any Member of the Council of Governors of the Trust, whose names appear herein.

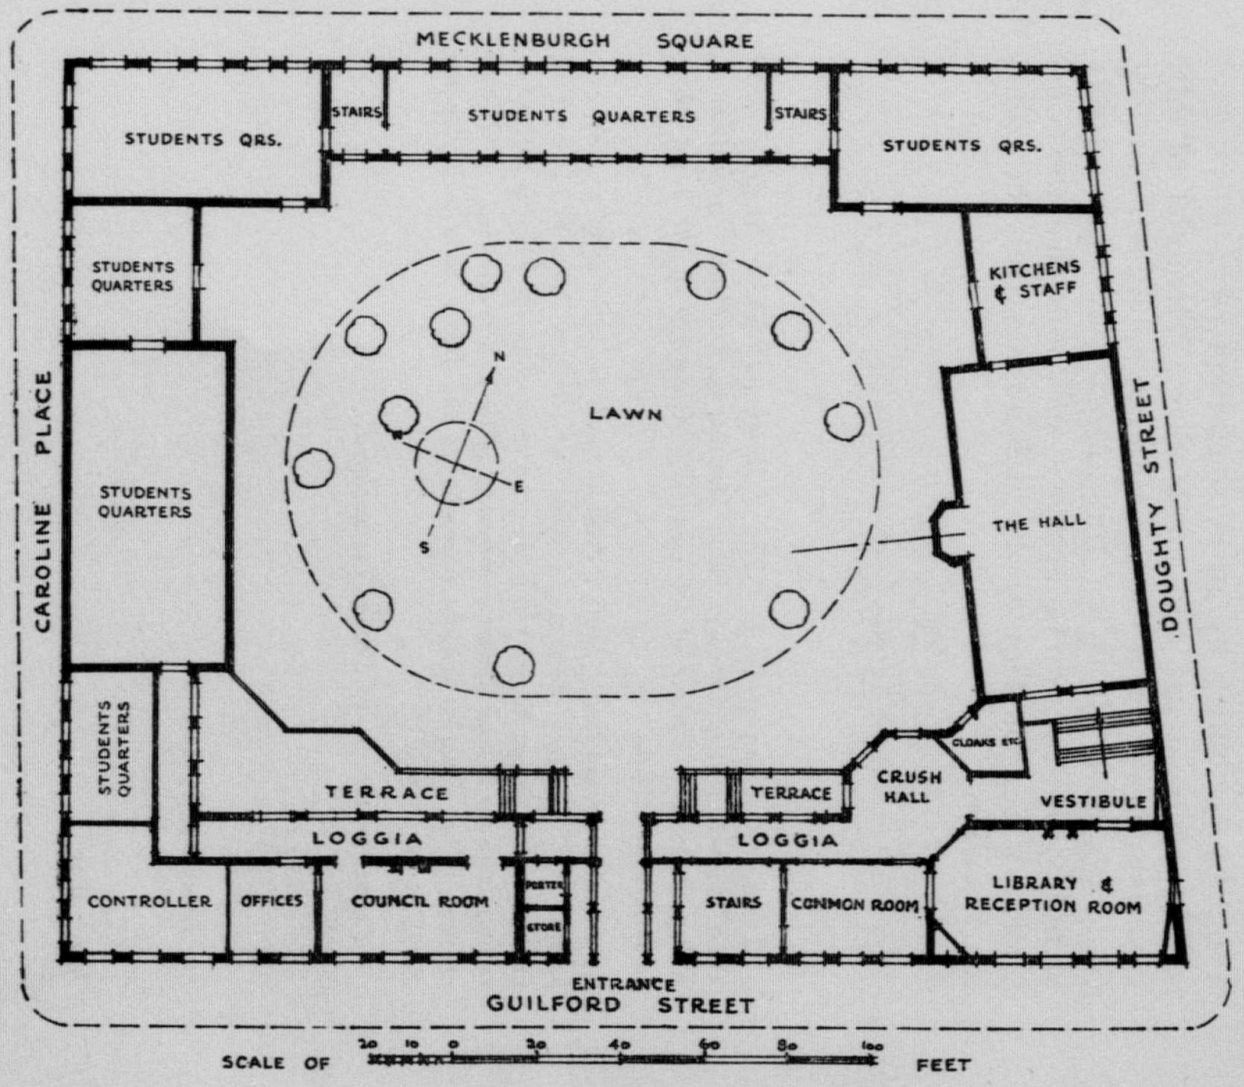

Donations made under Deed, if paid annually for a period of 7 years, may be paid net (i.e., after deduction of Income Tax), and the Donor will be credited in the donation list as having given the gross amount, as the Trust is entitled to recover from the Inland Revenue repayment of the Tax so deducted. The gross amount of the donation will be allowable to the Donor as a deduction for Sur-Tax purposes.

Forms for the use of Donors are enclosed.

STUDENTS FROM THE EMPIRE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—It is proposed to commemorate the conspicuous public services of the late Mr. Frederick Craufurd Goodenough, who was so great a figure in the world of banking and finance and so widely honoured for his integrity of character, the span of his public interests, and the single-minded way in which he devoted his rare energies and administrative powers to large designs.

Mr. Goodenough was not merely a great banking administrator, to whom Barclays Bank owes much of its present strength and prosperity as well as its Imperial developments, but a man who was consumed with a passion for public service. Banking was a part of his creed, for he regarded banking as a great civilizing instrument in human history, but banking was not enough. For 12 critical years he served on the Finance Committee of the Council of the Secretary of State for India, and for six years acted as chairman of that body. Though he was not an Oxford man, the greater part of what has already been raised for the Bodleian Library outside Oxford was the result of his personal efforts. During the last two years of his life he was treasurer of the Westminster Hospital and chairman of their Appeal Committee, at a time when it was necessary to raise a very large sum with the least possible delay in order that the hospital might purchase their new site. Mr. Goodenough undertook the arrangements for this appeal almost single-handed, and shortly before his death the required amount was forthcoming.

But unquestionably the object with which, in his later life, his interests and affections were most closely identified was London House, an institution founded to offer a home to students from the Dominions and other parts of the Empire who are of British and of European origin, and who are studying in London. Without Mr. Goodenough's enthusiasm and hard work this ambitious design would never have been translated into fact. Under his chairmanship and almost entirely through his efforts the governors of the house have been able to raise £200,000 to purchase a fine freehold island block of residential houses in Mecklenburgh Square. The college (for such it is) has started on its career of usefulness, and special significance may be attached to the recognition and generous support which it has attracted from the Rhodes Trust. Since the opening of London House in 1931, 240 students from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Rhodesias, and Great Britain have enjoyed its benefits.

London House can accommodate at present only 57 resident students; the rooms are fully occupied and there is a long waiting list. Each man is provided with a furnished study-bedroom, together with meals, and all the facilities of this hall of residence at a very low figure.

What has been accomplished, however, still falls short of Mr. Goodenough's aspirations. The hall (towards which a generous donation of £40,000 has been received) has yet to be built. The residential accommodation must be enlarged. Fresh endowments are needed to make good the loss of revenue from rents which will result from the construction of the hall and from every fresh extension of the residential quarters. It is necessary, therefore, and indeed urgent, to appeal to the public for further support. The Carnegie Corporation, who have already been generous donors, have promised a further sum of £20,000 provided that £30,000 can be raised from other sources, and at least the total sum of £50,000 will be required in order that the trust shall be sufficiently endowed, and that the increased maintenance cost which will arise as soon as the trustees have erected their hall may be met. We venture, therefore, to ask the hospitality of your columns for our appeal. We wish to secure the £30,000 which will earn the Carnegie Corporation's promised donation, and also to raise as much as possible above that figure towards further building expenses. There can, we feel, be little doubt that London House is destined to fill an important place in the educational life of the Empire, for it will, when the whole design is completed, offer to young men coming from oversea to complete their education in London an environment similar to that of some of the colleges of our ancient universities. No more suitable tribute could be paid to the memory of Mr. Goodenough than the further endowment of this institution, which owes almost everything to his initiative and energy, and no gift made to students coming to London from our Dominions oversea could be more helpfully adapted to their needs.

Contributions may be sent to the Hon. Treasurer of London House, 54, Lombard Street, London, E.C.3.

Yours faithfully,

J. C. SMUTS. LOTHIAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—I should like to give my strongest support to the appeal on behalf of London House which you publish to-day.

Both as an invaluable blessing to the students whom we welcome from the Dominions, and as a recognition of the magnificent public services of Frederick Craufurd Goodenough, London House deserves all the help and encouragement that we can give. I am, &c.,

London House

In a letter published to-day GENERAL SMUTS, MR. BRUCE, SIR ROBERT BORDEN, SIR JAMES PARR, and LORD LUGARD join with the LORD MAYOR of LONDON and other representative signatories in asking the British public to consider a project peculiarly fitted to this year and season. Students from the oversea Empire, already a familiar element in the life of the older University centres, are coming in increasing numbers to London. They are attracted by the opportunities for post-graduate study offered in almost unrivalled variety by the University, the hospitals, and the legal institutions of London, by the British Museum and other great public collections, and indeed by the daily life and work of London itself. It is no more than what is due from London as an Imperial and a university city that they should be made welcome, and it is required by every purpose for which the British Commonwealth exists that the number of those who seek to share and spread its common intellectual heritage should be multiplied.

An oversea student arriving at Oxford or Cambridge has much to help him. An organized collegiate system is there to receive and house him and to give him at once his full share of all that a university offers. Some years ago the beginnings of a like hospitable framework were established in London. By the energy and public spirit of the late F. C. GOODENOUGH, chairman of Barclays Bank and the untiring benefactor of more than one good cause, £200,000 was raised to buy a site in Bloomsbury, near the new headquarters of London University and well placed for access to other important centres, upon which a collegiate centre might come into being, primarily for oversea students, but including as part of its purpose a proportion of students from the United Kingdom. London House, as the centre is known, has had time to prove its worth. It is already giving fifty-seven men many of the benefits of collegiate life. But more accommodation is demanded. A hall and other buildings are required; £20,000 has been promised upon condition that another £30,000 can be found. Whoever shared those minutes of Jubilee Day in which by the power of wireless the Empire shed all abstractions and presented the corporate reality of union, not through the ear alone but almost to the eye, will need no persuasion that the need of London House is a public opportunity. The money which answers the words of GENERAL SMUTS and his fellow-signatories will flow directly to preserve and promote that sense of immediate and personal partnership in an indispensable community which must have been present to every listener while the KING spoke.

LONDON HOUSE

Letter received in support of the Appeal, from former LONDON HOUSE men whose homes are in the Dominions.

Sir,—May we, who come from distant parts of the Empire, express our appreciation of the letter which appeared in the London "Times" of May 10th suggesting a memorial to the late Frederick Craufurd Goodenough?

Because Mr. Goodenough was a quiet man who discouraged attention to himself, we feel that some readers may ask the question which we asked when we first found LONDON HOUSE: "Who is Mr. Goodenough?" Then we learnt that he was a great banker eager, for a reason which we could not at first fathom, to maintain in London a college which might be something of a home, or a home which might be something of a college, for Dominion Students. We found ourselves living comfortably and economically without vexation (inevitable in the usual 'digs') in pleasant surroundings, with self-respect, and free of that sombre pain, which few of us will admit, and from which most of us suffer—loneliness. With the most hospitable intentions, and the kindliest thought, our English hosts can never quite dispel what amounts to homesickness. We have not grown up in England; and that explains everything.

But at LONDON HOUSE, with fifty or sixty others very much of the same breed (and curiously different too) we felt at home. It was not necessary always to be dressed up mentally or socially; the passing moments allowed us the privilege of liking or disliking one another, finally producing a warm affection and esprit de corps. And from LONDON HOUSE we could see England. It would be untrue to say that from Mecklenburgh Square we learnt to love England, because that devotion is born in most of us; but it is true to say that in LONDON HOUSE all of us became easy victims of that mysterious seduction England exerts, enslaving us to the point of making many of us dislike intensely the idea of going home.

Mr. Goodenough saw the immense value in precisely that. We might not be accepted without reservation in an English home—why should we be?—but we could have a home of our own in England. He saw, perhaps with optimism, that some of us might lead our own people in the future, that if a row developed it might be a family row, and that vexed questions need not be solved before they were dissolved in understanding.

In conclusion, we refer again to the question: "Who is Frederick Craufurd Goodenough?" and we answer it the best way we can: "Mr. Goodenough is LONDON HOUSE to a steadily increasing number of men throughout the Empire—a magnificent conception of superb value to the Empire Family, and yet, for us, a simple kindly idea which gave us a home in London which we can never forget.

The Prime Minister is leaving, this evening, to be present tomorrow at the wedding of his nephew and namesake, Dr. W.L. Mackenzie King to Miss Margery L. Rean, of Toronto. The marriage takes place in the Rosedale United Church, Toronto.

The Prime Minister's nephew was born in Ottawa on January 2nd, 1913, at the time that his late father Dr. D. Macdougall King was practising medicine in this city. For a time he lived with his parents in Denver, Colorado, where Dr. and Mrs. D. Macdougall King went to reside. He returned to Canada in 1930 to pursue his studies in medicine at the University of Toronto from which institution he graduated with honours in medicine in 1937 winning the Faculty medal. Upon graduation, Dr. King became an interne at the Toronto General Hospital. Last year, he was awarded a Mayo Foundation Fellowship, and has since been resident at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota.

Miss Margery Rean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Rean, of Toronto, is also a graduate of the University of Toronto from which institution she received the degree of Master of Arts in Psychology. She too, since graduation, has received an appointment at the Mayo Clinic. Upon their marriage, Dr. and Mrs. King will be returning immediately to Rochester.

The Prime Minister's nephew was born in Ottawa on January 2nd, 1913, at the time that his late father, Dr. D. Macdougall King was practising medicine in this city. For a time he lived with his parents in Denver, Colorado, where Dr. and Mrs. D. Macdougall King went to reside. He returned to Canada in 1930 to pursue his studies in medicine at the University of Toronto from which institution he graduated with honours in medicine in 1937, winning the Faculty medal. Upon graduation, Dr. King became an interne at the Toronto General Hospital. Last year, he was awarded a Mayo Foundation Fellowship, and has since been resident at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota.

Miss Margery Rean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Rean, of Toronto, is also a graduate of the University of Toronto from which institution she received the degree of Master of Arts in Psychology. She too, since graduation, has received an appointment at the Mayo

MEMORANDUM for the Prime Minister:

Confidential

Re: Pension for Mrs. W.L.M. King

Miss Bentley (Mr. Macdonald's Secretary) reports that it is the policy of the Department to continue pay and allowances to the dependents of a missing person until the matter has been cleared up in the regular channels. In other words, Mrs. King should continue to receive for 6 months regular assigned pay, dependents' allowance and cost of living bonus, amounting to $177.60 made up as follows:

$101.00 assigned pay,
74.00 dependents' allowance,
2.60 cost of living
$177.60

With adjustments which have been made since the torpedoing of the St. Croix, a revised monthly cheque for the amount of $189.10 will now go forward to Mrs. King until further notice.

It is pointed out, however, that there is a possibility, in view of what is now known of this particular action, and only one survivor having been found, that a decision regarding pensions to be awarded to widows and dependents of officers and men lost at the time of the sinking of the St. Croix, may be reached by the end of the present year.

FOR THE PRIME MINISTER:

You wish to be reminded about a photograph of Dr. Lyon King to be sent to Dr. Josef Hilpert, 2021 Peel Street, Montreal.

Hilpert, as you will recall, promised to paint a portrait of Dr. King. In addition to the photograph he would like to have some idea of the colouring, hair, eyes and complexion, together with any other details about his appearance which would make it possible for him to make a good painting.

Extract from Weekly Summary of Information (Naval Service)
September 23 and September 30, 1943

North Atlantic Area

After a lapse of exactly four months, U-Boat activity was resumed against North Atlantic Convoys when one eastbound was attacked on the 18th of September and two westbound met with reverses on the 19th and 20th.

These three convoys were following routes which, at the time, had taken them all within the vicinity 450 to 550 miles S.W. of Reykjavik. One merchant ship was struck in HX 256 but is still afloat, taken in tow for the U.K. by H.M.R.T. "SAMSONIA". Two U.S. Liberty ships in ON 202 were torpedoed in the early morning of the 20th -- one of these subsequently sank but the other, while abandoned, is apparently still afloat.

By far the most serious losses, involving ships and their personnel, were suffered by the Escort Vessels of the two westbound convoys ON 202 and ONS 18. The first to sustain casualty was H.M.S. "ESCAPADE", who had frustrated a submerged attack on ONS 18 by two submarines on the night of the 19th. During the hunt her Hedgehog exploded and stove in, tearing the bridge. Five members of her crew were killed and twelve wounded and "ESCAPADE" was ordered to return to Clyde independently.

H.M.S. "LAGAN", while investigating Radar contacts obtained, was torpedoed in the early morning of 20th September. She was taken in tow for the U.K. by H.M.R.T. "DESTINY" with an A/S Trawler in company.

ON 202 and ONS 18 had effected a junction by the early evening of the 20th and up to twenty U-Boats were estimated to be within the vicinity of the Convoys. Aircraft had carried out an attack on one submarine and H.M.C.S. "St. CROIX" conducted a hunt. Three torpedoes found their mark in "ST. CROIX" within fifty minutes and, following the last hit, she sank with approximately half her crew lost in the water after ship was abandoned. All living survivors -- 4 officers, including the C.O., and 76 ratings -- were recovered by H.M.S. "Itchen" who sustained a near miss, herself, from a torpedo fired while circling "ST. CROIX".

The second Escort to be torpedoed and sunk was H.M.S. "POLYANTHUS" who had joined and was pursuing a contact, 2,500 yards ahead. She was hit right aft and disintegrated with the loss of her entire complement but one -- an officer recovered by H.M.S. "ITCHEN" remains as the sole survivor. Four others of her crew got clear but died during the night.

During the night of 21st, the convoys were subjected to attacks from every direction, mainly by single U-Boats. However the screen was not penetrated and no further casualties were reported.

A preliminary report of successful counter attacks claims 1 U-Boat badly damaged the night of the 20th; 1 probably hit night of 21st; and 1 rammed, depth charged and sunk early morning of the 22nd. Further, an important recovery was made of a German Radar Decoy.

After having frustrated all attempts to penetrate their screen through the night of 21st September, Convoys ON 202 and ONS 18 did not fare so well during the next 36 hours. Shortly before midnight of the 22nd, attacks were resumed by a dozen or more U-Boats on the surface, about 400 miles S.E. of Cape Farewell. Three cargo vessels, in ON 202 and one in ONS 18 were torpedoed.

In addition, H.M.S. "ITCHEN", while chasing a U-Boat, blew up and sank from causes, as yet undetermined. "ITCHEN", it will be recalled, was carrying all the survivors from "ST. CROIX" and "POLYANTHUS".

Excellent air cover was provided during the night of the 23rd September and undoubtedly helped to prevent any concentrated attack. Light, minor attempts were made, but no further casualties ensued.

A promising attack was carried out by H.M.S. "TWEED" in the early morning of the 25th. Proceeding to meet and support HX 257, "TWEED" encountered and rammed a surfaced submarine. When visibility improved, however, the U-Boat was again sighted some seven hours later, diving, about 20 miles east of the position of the attack. A hunt, lasting until midnight, bore no further results.

Casualties reported in North Atlantic Convoys since the resumption of activities on the 18th September now total 7 merchant ships torpedoed (HX 256 - 1; ON 202 - 5; ONS 18 - 1) of which 2 are known to have sunk. Three Escort Vessels, H.M.C.S. "ST. CROIX", H.M.S. "POLYANTHUS" and H.M.S. "ITCHEN", have been sunk and H.M.S. "LAGAN" was damaged by torpedoing. Moreover, H.M.S. "ESCAPADE" was damaged following an explosion of her Hedgehog.

MOST SECRET

ATTACK BY U-BOATS ON CONVOYS ON 202 AND ONS 18 INVOLVING LOSS OF H.M.C.S. "ST. CROIX"

On the 20th September, these two convoys, both comparatively small in size, were ordered to join together. The effect of this manoeuvre made a convoy of 67 merchant ships, which, with 14 escorts present, was well protected. Also the 9th Escort Group of 5 ships had been detailed to support them and was then in touch. Convoy was proceeding Westward.

2. For several months U-Boats activity in the North Atlantic had been at a very low ebb and no attacks had been made on convoys.

3. The first intimation that the U-Boats had returned to attacking North Atlantic convoys came with the torpedoing of H.M.S. "LAGAN" early in the morning of the 20th Sept. The ship was badly damaged, but was towed safely into harbour. At this time the convoys had not joined company. About 4 hours later two merchant ships were torpedoed and it was clear then that the U-Boats had returned to their practice of pack attack.

4. During the afternoon of the 20th, the two convoys joined and a few hours later, at 2200 G.M.T. (Greenwich Mean Time) approximately, the H.M.C.S. "ST. CROIX" was torpedoed about Mid Atlantic but remained afloat for a short while, before being hit by a second torpedo. H.M.S. "POLYANTHUS" was torpedoed at about the same time and sank immediately, only one survivor being rescued. Eighty-one survivors from "ST. CROIX" were taken on board H.M.S. "ITCHEN" with the one from "POLYANTHUS".

5. During this action the U-Boats were being harried by air and surface craft and it was while proceeding to attack that the "ST. CROIX" was torpedoed.

6. The action continued during the night with half-hearted attacks all of which were frustrated.

7. During the 21st and up to late on the 22nd nothing of importance happened although there was ample evidence that the convoy was shadowed and U-Boats in contact.

8. It was late on the 22nd, as an attack developed, that H.M.S. "ITCHEN" was seen to blow up and it is presumed was hit by a torpedo in some vital part, Three survivors only were saved, one of these being Stoker W. Fisher of H.M.C.S. "ST. CROIX".

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 18) Dr. William Lyon Mackenzie King - re: "St. Croix's" sinking - Secret reports 1943

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

9. During this second attack 3 merchant ships were torpedoed. The escorts and aircraft attacked the U-Boats with vigour and as the convoy neared better air cover, the action was dropped by the U-Boats without further losses to convoy or escort after the 23rd September. While no claims can yet be substantiated, it is fairly clear that the U-Boats were roughly handled. It is reasonable to assume that 2 were sunk, one very severely damaged and several damaged.

10. The Naval casualties from enemy action were H.M.C.S. "ST. CROIX" H.M. Ships "ITCHEN" and "POLYANTHUS" sunk. H.M.S. "LAGAN" damaged. H.M.S. "ESCAPADE" damaged by explosion of hedgehog (a form of depth charge) while engaged in hunting submarine.

11. Merchant Marine casualties - 5 ships torpedoed which are now assumed to be sunk.

12. R.C.A.F. took an important part in this action, made several promising attacks on U-Boats, who, replying with flak (anti-aircraft fire), damaged an aircraft and wounded one of the crew.

Note: The information contained in this statement is for the personal information of the Prime Minister and is not for publication.

Latin Dislike Starts Psychologist's Career

New Member of Mental Hygiene Department of Toronto Reveals Why She Chose Course

(By JESSIE E. MacTAGGART.)
(Staff Writer, The Globe and Mail.)

Because Margery L. Rean didn't like Latin when she came up as a freshette at Western University seven years ago, she selected psychology, the only course in the calendar in which Latin was not compulsory.

And so do events shape themselves from little things! Margery Rean this week has been appointed psychologist to the mental hygiene department of the City of Toronto.

Since that first year when freedom from Latin came her way, there was no need of such inducements to give charm to psychology for Miss Rean. Eager to know and do things, much more exciting was to know why others do things, and so when she graduated from Western Ontario in psychology in 1934, one of only three to graduate in that course that year, she went on to the University of Toronto and graduated with her M.A. in 1936.

Likes Basketball.

She upsets one's ideas of psychologists. She is pretty and young, blonde and blue-eyed, and has a passion for—you'd never guess it! —basketball!

At her home, 118 St. Leonard's Avenue, where she lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Rean, she hesitated last night before she admitted that "not-liking-Latin-beginning."

"It sounds so perfectly ridiculous now, that a little thing like that should start one on a certain course, but really, that was it," she laughed.

Most interesting of her experiences so far, she said, was a summer as psychological interne at the Ontario Hospital at Cobourg.

In her Toronto appointment she will deal exclusively with school children. In the department are two other psychologists. All three seek to make adjustments for schoolchildren when requests are made for such service by principals of schools.

Outlines Work.

"If a child appears dull or backward, or presents a behaviour problem or in any way appears to need psychological assistance, if the parents consent we are called in to study the case and find a solution," Miss Rean explained. "Of course I haven't undertaken my work yet, but I'm very interested in children, and I do think psychology has a great deal of practical application that is not made use of nearly enough, particularly with the young."

She said she did not understand why more students did not take undergraduate courses in this subject. Many take the postgraduate courses, but in Ontario few selected at the beginning of their college

Many take the postgraduate courses, but in Ontario few selected it at the beginning of their college careers. While openings for trained psychologists were not many in the Province, she said, their services were being used in the most unexpected places and with very satisfactory results.

Through college she was interested in basketball, and has since graduation coached inter-college teams at the University of Toronto —the Varsity Seniors and St. Michael's teams.

Premier Will Attend Wedding of Nephew

The Prime Minister is leaving this evening to be present tomorrow at the wedding of his nephew and namesake, Dr. W. L. Mackenzie King, to Miss Margery L. Rean, of Toronto. The marriage takes place in the Rosedale United church, Toronto.

The Prime Minister's nephew was born in Ottawa on January 2nd, 1913, at the time that his late father, Dr. D. Macdougall King was practising medicine in the city. For a time he lived with his parents in Denver, Colorado, where Dr. and Mrs. D. Macdougall King went to reside. He returned to Canada in 1930 to pursue his studies in medicine at the University of Toronto, from which institution he graduated with honors in medicine in 1937, winning the faculty medal. Upon graduation, Dr. King became an interne at the Toronto General Hospital. Last year he was awarded a Mayo Foundation Fellowship, and has since been resident at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minnesota.

Miss Margery Rean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Rean, of Toronto, is also a graduate of the University of Toronto from which institution she received the degree of Master of Arts in psychology. She too, since graduation, has received an appointment at the Mayo clinic. Upon their marriage, Dr. and Mrs. King will be returning immediately to Rochester.

King-Rean Nuptials in Rosedale United Church

A wedding took place Saturday evening in Rosedale United Church, uniting in marriage Margery Little Rean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Rean, and Dr. William Lyon Mackenzie King, son of Mrs. D. Macdougall King, of Denver, Col. The groom's uncle, Right. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King was a guest of honor. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. MacGregor Grant, assisted by Rev. J. Russell Harris. Dr. W. H. Gutzeit was at the organ and during the signing of the register violin selections were played by Mrs. William Bodrug.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in ivory treebark satin with tulle veil and halo of orange blossoms. She wore an heirloom locket given to her grandmother on her wedding day. Her bouquet was of roses and lily of the valley. Her attendants were her sister, Miss Nora Rean, and Miss Elizabeth Thomson, who were gowned alike in deep turquoise faille, with rose circlets in their hair and carried bouquets of spring flowers. The groomsman was Mr. Arthur Macdougall King, twin brother of the groom, and the ushers, Dr. Max MacCutcheon, Dr. Edmond Grise and Mr. Donald Cooke.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, 76 Douglas drive. Mrs. Rean, gowned in fuchsia crepe romaine with small flower hat, sable cape and orchids, received the guests. She was assisted by the groom's mother, in a gown of orchid lace with matching hat and Talisman roses. For travelling, the bride wore a dress of tea blue with Hudson seal coat and black antelope accessories. Dr. King and his bride will live in Rochester, Minn., where the groom has a three-year fellowship, and the bride has been given an appointment in the neurology department of the Mayo Clinic.

Dr. William Lyon MacKenzie King Marries Marjorie Little Rean at Rosedale United Church—Will Live at Rochester, Minn., After Honeymoon Trip

The prime minister of Canada, Rt.-Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, uncle of the groom, was an honored guest at the marriage Saturday evening, of Marjorie Little Rean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Rean, to Dr. William Lyon Mackenzie King, son of Mrs. King and the late Dr. D. Macdougall King of Denver, Col. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. MacGregor Grant and Rev. J. R. Harris in Rosedale United Church. Dr. W. H. Gutzeit presided at the organ and Mrs. William Bodrug gave violin numbers. Candles, ferns and palms decorated the church for the occasion.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore ivory treebark satin made with long sleeves, the skirt extending into a train. Her tulle veil was arranged on the head with a halo of orange blossoms and the bride carried roses and lily of the valley. She wore a heirloom locket given to her grandmother on her wedding day.

The bride was attended by Miss Nora Rean and Miss Elizabeth Thomson, both wearing peacock blue faille made with tight bodices and full skirts. They wore rose halo hats and carried spring flowers in mixed bouquets. Arthur Macdougall King, twin brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Dr. Max MacCutcheon, Dr. Edmond Grise and Donald Cooke.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Douglas Drive, the bride's mother welcoming the guests in a gown of fuchsia crepe romaine, with small flower hat, a sable cape and corsage of orchids. The groom's mother had chosen orchid lace with matching hat and corsage of roses. Later the couple left, the bride travelling in a modish teal blue crepe dress with Hudson seal coat and suede accessories. They will reside in Rochester, Minn., where the groom has a three-year fellowship and where the bride has been given an appointment in the neurology department of the Mayo clinic.

Compliments

To Mrs. Frank A. Schulman, at the cocktail party which she and her husband gave on Saturday afternoon for Mrs. John Lewis of Brantford, wearing a deep parma violet gown with V-neckline and short bolero and a cyclamen jewelled belt. Quite intriguing.

To Mr. J. Harvey Bone, K.C., whose birthday is today. Many happy returns.

To Mrs. R. R. Carr-Harris, at the cocktail party which she and her son, Mr. A. R. Carr-Harris, gave Saturday afternoon. She was the acme of simplicity in a long black cire satin gown without trimming or jewels.

To Mrs. Donald Benson, at the Henderson-Cleland wedding Saturday, wearing a crepe gown of unusual shade of grape-green, with draped shirring in front and matching shade in velvet.

Saturday evening the annual dinner of the college will be held in the banquet hall of the Chateau Laurier at 7.30 p.m.

Sir W. Wilson Jameson, principal medical officer of the Ministry of Health, London, England, will be the guest of honor at the dinner. Honorary Fellowship in the Royal College of Physicians of Canada will be conferred upon Sir Wilson Jameson at Convocation. Other distinguished guests at the annual dinner will include Right Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, High Commissioner for the United Kingdom; Hon. Ian A. Mackenzie, minister of pensions and national health; Dr. A. E. Archer, president-elect of the Canadian Medical Association.

At the scientific meeting, the following lectures will be given: "Recent Advances in Medicine—Psychoneurosis in Time of War," by A. T. Mathers, the 1941 lecturer of the Royal College of Physicians of Canada, and "New and Old in War Surgery," by Col. Edward W. Archibald, the 1941 lecturer of the Royal College of Surgeons of Canada.

No Admirals in Family, Nephew Of Premier King Joining Navy

DR. WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE KING AND SON

Dr. William Lyon Mackenzie King, 29, of Binscarth Ave., nephew of Canada's premier, joins the navy today. Attached to the naval medical service, he will have the rank of surgeon-lieutenant.

"There are no admirals in the family and I have no forbears in the navy," Dr. King gave as a likely reason for selecting the navy in preference to other branches of the service. Dr. King's son, William Lyon Mackenzie King 3rd, 23 months old, bears resemblance to the prime minister. Now that daddy is bound for the navy, the boy likes to study the globe to "see where the navy goes."

Raised in Denver, Colorado, Dr. King attended East Denver high school and the University of Toronto, where he graduated in medicine in 1937. For three years he served in the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn., and for the past year has been resident surgeon in St. Michael's hospital, Toronto.

His father, Dougall MacDougall King, served with the British army in the Boer War. Dr. King will be stationed at an eastern Canadian port. Besides his son he has a three-months-old daughter, Catherine Elizabeth. His wife was formerly Margery Rean of Toronto.

ETATS-UNIS ET CANADA

Il est impossible de croire que, après avoir été si étroitement associés dans l'oeuvre de guerre, les Etats-Unis et le Canada ne trouvent pas désirable de collaborer dans les initiatives de paix, soit pour résoudre les problèmes qui concernent les intérêts particuliers de nos deux pays, soit pour aider au règlement des difficultés internationales. Le ministre des Etats-Unis au Canada, M. Ray Atherton, est revenu sur cette idée dans son dernier discours au "Canadian Club", d'Ottawa.

"Si nous voulons éviter, dit le diplomate américain, que la période d'après-guerre soit la réplique de la dernière après-guerre, c'est-à-dire une préparation pour une autre guerre; si nous devons profiter des pénibles leçons que le 20e siècle nous a données, il nous faut tirer les conclusions salutaires de notre présente collaboration économique. Il va sans dire que cela s'applique à toutes les nations..." En effet, la guerre doit nous avoir rendus plus sages, moins égoïstes, plus sociables. Nous aurons à nous le prouver.

Les relations étaient déjà excellentes entre les Etats-Unis et le Canada. Cependant personne ne niera que le régime d'entr'aide institué il y a deux ans ne les ait améliorées. Nos hommes politiques, nos industriels, nos commerçants, nos financiers, nos éducateurs et nos apôtres sociaux ont été amenés dans une foule de cas à travailler aux mêmes entreprises patriotiques ou charitables. M. Atherton cite l'aménagement de la route militaire de l'Alaska. Ce n'est là qu'un exemple plus remarquable de l'esprit de solidarité auquel nous obéissons.

Il importe maintenant de le conserver cet esprit, de le fortifier et de le mettre en état de servir les causes de la paix comme il a servi les exigences de la guerre. Ne perdons pas trop de temps à tracer des programmes détaillés; envisageons les grandes lignes et posons les principes. Surtout, ainsi que nous le recommande le ministre des Etats-Unis, disposons les volontés de manière à pouvoir continuer l'action commune dès la fin des hostilités.

Nous serions coupables assurément si, avec les immenses ressources que nos pays comptent ensemble, nous allions, faute d'entente, manquer de les utiliser à plein dans l'intérêt des Etats-Unis et du Canada, dans l'intérêt de la paix mondiale. Ne nous exposons pas à mériter un tel reproche !

LOSS OF H.M.C.S. ST. CROIX

Many homes in Canada were saddened to-day by the news that the Canadian destroyer St. Croix has been lost with the loss of 146 of her 147 crew members.

The fact that two P. E. Island boys lost their lives brings the feeling of sadness more closely home to the people of this province.

The St. Croix was torpedoed while on convoy duty in the North Atlantic, the official release from Naval headquarters states. The loss, is a grim reminder of the statements made by various Allied leaders recently that the battle of the Atlantic was not over and that much grim fighting and considerable losses were still ahead before the victory could be counted as won.

A former United States destroyer the St. Croix had served this country well before she finally met her grim fate in the turbulent and dangerous waters of the North Atlantic. She and her crew members had braved the dangers of the seas many times and on at least one occasion she had scored against the underseas prowlers of the enemy.

That was when she gave chase to two U-boats while she was protecting a convoy. One of the submarines was sunk by her at that time.

Canadian Navy's Heavy Loss

The loss of virtually the entire crew of a destroyer is a heavy one for Canada. The torpedoing of the St. Croix, one of the 50 over-age destroyers given Britain by the United States some three years ago in exchange for naval and air bases, is one of those tragic incidents of war which we must accept as the price of ultimate victory. Only one of the crew of 147 was saved, an unusually high price in life.

The convoy battle, in which the St. Croix was attacking U-boats when it in turn was torpedoed, was the one to which Prime Minister Churchill referred a week ago Wednesday in his long speech to the commons. At least five merchant ships were sunk also. It was probably this engagement in which the German propaganda agency claimed 12 destroyers and many freighters were sunk, a grossly exaggerated claim. One U-boat was sunk and probably more.

British and American authorities should give the official total of our losses with little further delay, now that survivors are landed and are telling of the battle.

Canadian Navy's Heavy Loss

The loss of virtually the entire crew of a destroyer is a heavy one for Canada. The torpedoing of the St. Croix, one of the 50 over-age destroyers given Britain by the United States some three years ago in exchange for naval and air bases, is one of those tragic incidents of war which we must accept as the price of ultimate victory. Only one of the crew of 147 was saved, an unusually high price in life.

The convoy battle, in which the St. Croix was attacking U-boats when it in turn was torpedoed, was the one to which Prime Minister Churchill referred a week ago Wednesday in his long speech to the commons. At least five merchant ships were sunk also. It was probably this engagement in which the German propaganda agency claimed 12 destroyers and many freighters were sunk, a grossly exaggerated claim. One U-boat was sunk and probably more.

British and American authorities should give the official total of our losses with little further delay, now that survivors are landed and are telling of the battle.

H.M.C.S. St. Croix

THE people of Canada have to mourn the loss of brave seamen who have given their lives in the Battle of the Atlantic. The Canadian destroyer St. Croix has been sunk in action with the enemy and 146 of her people, all but one of her complement, are reported missing and gravely feared to be lost.

This loss comes home very nearly to all the provinces and people of Canada. Among the missing besides the commander of the vessel, Lt. Commander Dobson of Halifax, is Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, nephew of the Prime Minister.

Thus a personal sorrow in the consequences of this war is added to the lot of Canada's leader, to whom the sympathy of all the Canadian people will go out, in token of their fellow feeling for all the Canadians who have sustained a grievous loss in this casualty of the war at sea.

If the missing list of the St. Croix sinking is confirmed, the sinking constitutes the greatest single Canadian loss of life in naval action so far in the war. There were 142 officers and men lost in the sinking of the destroyer Margaree. The St. Croix is the thirteenth Canadian naval vessel and the fourth destroyer lost in action. She was one of the 50 former United States "four stackers" made over to the Royal Navy.

The St. Croix was lost on convoy duty, hit by enemy submarine torpedo at night, while manoeuvring in protection of the convoy merchant ships. Evidently the sea snakes of the Germans have been scotched but not yet effectually destroyed. The loss of this ship and her Canadian men is the earnest of the continuing danger and deadliness of the new submarine campaign against which Mr. Churchill warned in his recent report to Parliament.

SORROW darkens the homes of 146 gallant Canadian seamen today. All but one of the 147 men aboard H.M.C.S. St. Croix were lost when the Canadian destroyer was sunk by a Nazi submarine in the Atlantic. It is the heaviest Canadian naval loss of the war; there were 142 lost when H.M.C.S. Margaree was sunk.

Windsor and Western Ontario boys were among the brave men who went down with their ship. They were lost in battle against a lurking foe.

Like so many others before them, these boys gave all. They died that the rest of us might live.

St. Croix 'Torpedoed' While On Convoy Duty, Only Single Survivor

Stoker W. A. Fisher of Black Diamond, Alberta, Only One Saved. Premier King's Nephew Listed Among Missing.

Loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix with 146 men was announced today by Navy Minister Macdonald—second proof in a week that German submarines are back in the North Atlantic preying on trans-ocean convoys.

The ship, one of seven United States destroyers turned over to the Canadian Navy after the 50-destroyer exchange for naval bases between Britain and America in pre-Pearl Harbor days, was hit by torpedoes from a submarine and all but one of her complement of 147 are missing.

The sole survivor was stoker W. A. Fisher of Black Diamond, Alta.

On Convoy Duty

The navy gave no details of the engagement in which the St. Croix was lost, except to say the destroyer was "on convoy duty."

The St. Croix is the 13th Canadian naval vessel lost in the war which has seen Canadian ships sailing and fighting in the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Mediterranean. She is the fourth destroyer lost; but first of the former U.S. "four-stackers" received by Canada to go down. Besides the destroyers the navy has lost six corvettes, two patrol vessels and a minesweeper, either by mishap at sea or enemy action.

Heaviest Single Loss

The toll of life in the St. Croix sinking—146 reported—is the navy's largest single loss in men, just topping the loss of 142 when the destroyer Margaree was sunk in the North Atlantic, cut in two by a large steamship while manoeuvering in defence of a convoy against a night submarine attack.

Lt.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson, 42, of Halifax, was in command of St. Croix and is listed among the missing.

So is Lt.-Cmdr. P. F. M. De Freitas of Victoria, recently cited for fine work in command of one of the Canadian ships which assisted the United States navy in operations against the Aleutian Islands in the Pacific. DeFreitas was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, having joined her less than a week before as part of an advanced training course.

Among the missing also was Surgeon Lt. William Lyon Mackenzie King, nephew and namesake of the Prime Minister of Canada. Lieut. King was born in Ottawa. His mother now lives at Bedford, N.S.

From All Provinces

Men from all provinces, many with long records at sea in the ceaseless struggle waged by the Canadian navy against submarines, are missing. The casualty list shows 50 whose next-of-kin live in Ontario, 21 in Quebec, 15 in British Columbia, 14 in Nova Scotia, nine in Manitoba, eight in Saskatchewan, seven in Alberta, six in New Brunswick, and two in Prince Edward Island.

Five have next-of-kin in Newfoundland, three in England, three in the United States and two in Scotland.

Cmdr. Dobson, a master mariner in civilian life, had already won distinction with his ship. He received the Distinguished Service Cross for his handling of the St. Croix in the destruction of a submarine.

Engineroom Artificer Leslie W. Bydwell of Saint John, N.B., also among the missing, was mentioned in dispatches for good service on the same occasion.

Was Formerly McCook

In the United States navy the St. Croix was called the McCook. Following transfer to Canada, like other Canadian destroyers she was renamed for a river and, to commemorate her origin, after a river common to the United States and Canada—the one forming the boundary between Maine and New Brunswick. The other six "four-stackers" were similarly named, the Annapolis, Columbia, Niagara, St. Francis, St. Clair and Hamilton.

A short time ago Prime Minister Churchill was able to announce that no ship had been sunk in the Atlantic for four months but he also said the submarines were back and attacking a convoy at that moment.

At a recent press conference of a marked lull in submarine warfare in the Atlantic and attributed it to the "tremendous battering" the submarines had taken earlier in the summer.

One of the factors in that battering was the introduction of long-range aircraft patrols to fight against a bomber; instead of diving when attacked as they used to do.

There is no indication yet whether in their four-months' licking earlier wounds, the enemy submarine crews have developed better means of combatting surface ships like destroyers and corvettes but some revision in tactics has been expected on their return. In his recent speech Mr. Churchill said the U-boats were no doubt fitted with what was thought to be the newest and best equipment.

In the intensified submarine warfare against Atlantic convoys now apparently reopened, the Canadian navy will play a major role. Convoy operations through western half of the North Atlantic are under Canadian naval control although both British and United States ships may be serving in that area.

The long-range air patrols are carried out by squadrons of the R.C.A.F. using Liberator bombers and operating in co-operation with the Canadian navy.

One of the factors in that battering was the introduction of long-range aircraft patrols over the Atlantic and, as expected, when the submarines again appeared they had heavy anti-aircraft gun installations enabling them to stay on the surface and fight against a bomber, instead of diving when attacked as they used to do.

There is no indication yet whether in their four-month rest, licking earlier wounds, the enemy submarine crews have developed better means of combatting surface ships like destroyers and corvettes but some revision in tactics has been expected on their return. Three Ottawans Are Missing On Lost Destroyer

Nephew of Prime Minister Mackenzie King Also Listed in Casualties.

An Ottawa-born nephew of Prime Minister Mackenzie King as well as two Ottawa and five district men are among the officers and ratings listed as missing after the sinking by enemy action of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix.

The Royal Canadian Navy's official casualty list included the following reported as missing:

Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, 30-year-old son of the late Dr. Macdougall King, who was the only brother of Prime Minister King.

Lt. Cmdr. Paul Simon Major, 30, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Major of 4 Range road.

AB. Leslie Mackenzie Goreham, husband of Mrs. Lillian A. Goreham, 552 Churchill avenue, Westboro.

AB. William Rufus Badour, son of Mrs. Augusta Badour, 45 Bay street, Kingston.

LS. Joseph Thomas Chippendale, son of Sgt. Major and Mrs. Arthur Chippendale, 491 Alfred street, Kingston.

LS. George Othoe Bass, nephew of Mrs. Ada Whittim, Cardinal.

AB. Francis Herbert Savage, son of Mrs. Florence Matilda Savage, Ashton.

Stoker (1st Class) Gordineer Wendell Warner, son of H. Warner, Phillipsville, Ont.

Born in Ottawa

One of the nine officers listed as missing following the sinking of the St. Croix, Lieut. King was born in Ottawa and his father practised medicine in the Capital several years. Dr. King died in Denver, Colo, when Lieut. King was only nine years of age. The young officer's mother now lives at Bedford, N.S.

Lieut. King attended the University of Toronto for courses in arts and medicine in 1930. He was graduated with honors in medicine June 10, 1937, winning the faculty medal, and after interning at Toronto General Hospital from 1937 to 1938, was awarded a fellowship which took him to the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., for a four-year special course in medicine and surgery.

Lieut. King completed this course in 1941, and from 1941 to 1942 was on the staff of St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto. He joined the Royal Canadian Navy June 27, 1942, served in hospital at Halifax, and was posted to the St. Croix in June of this year.

He was married in 1939 to the former Marjorie Little Rean daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Rean, of 14 Binscarth road, Toronto. They have one son, William Lyon Mackenzie King, born in 1940, and a daughter, Elizabeth, born in 1942.

One of Three Brothers.

One of the three Major brothers serving with His Majesty's forces, Lt. Cmdr. Paul S. Major has been on active duty since the beginning of the war. He is a grandson of the late Hon. S. N. Parent, K.C., former premier of Quebec, and a nephew of Hon. Robert Laurier, former Ontario minister of mines. His grandmother, Mrs. M. C. Major, also lives in Ottawa.

The young officer's wife, the former Lucille Prudhomme, and their three children reside at Ville Mount Royal, Montreal. He is a brother of Lieut. R. B. Major, of the Mount Royal Fusiliers, and of Captain Wilfrid Major, of the headquarters staff of the 7th Canadian Division. Both are presently stationed in Eastern Canada.

A graduate of the University of Ottawa and Laval University, Quebec, he practised law in Montreal with the Aime Geoffrion law firm until going on active service with the navy. For some time he was in charge of the Montreal-Cartier division of the R.C.N.V.R., of which he was one of the oldest members.

Five Brothers in Uniform.

Able Seaman Leslie Mackenzie Goreham has five brothers serving in the armed forces, two in the navy, two in the army and one in the air force. A sixth brother also served with the navy, but was discharged last year.

Only 23 years of age, he was married to the former Lillian Lee, who resides with their two small daughters, Leslie and Shirley, at 552 Churchill avenue, Westboro. Of Dutch origin, he is a son of Everett Goreham and the late Mrs. Goreham of Woods Harbor, N.S. He was born and brought up in that Nova Scotian community and came to Ottawa in 1941. After serving with the army for some time, he joined the navy in April, 1941. He was in Ottawa the last time in June and his wife received a letter from him a month ago.

His brothers are Osborne and Harold Goreham, in the Canadian army, Vincent and Wardlow, with the navy, and Ernest, with the R.C.A.F. at Debert. There are two other brothers at home, Everett and Sylvester, the latter having served with the navy until last year. He also has three sisters, Mrs. William Schand and Mrs. Sydney Jeffrey, in the Maritimes, and Mrs. H. Nickerson, in the United States.

Native of Kingston.

A.B. William Rufus ("Sonny") Badour, R.C.N.V.R., 19-year-old son of Mrs. Augusta Badour, Kingston, was born in Kingston and received his education there. Before enlisting in the navy in March, 1942, he was employed at the Simmons hardware in Kingston. He trained in Kingston and then went on active duty. He returned home on furlough last April. Six weeks ago he asked his family not to write to him as he was on draft for sea duty, and since that time they had not heard from him.

He has a brother, Garnet, who recently enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R., and a half-brother, Sgt. Milton Wart, serving overseas in the R.C.O.C. Other members of his family are a half-brother, Myles Wart of Kingston, and three sisters, Ossie and Violet Badour at home, and Mrs. J. M. Stout, who resides in Alaska.

His father, the late William Rufus Badour, died three years ago.

A popular Kingston youth, Leading Seaman Joseph Thomas "Tommy" Chippendale, R.C.N.V.R., is one of three members of his family serving in the present conflict, as his father, Sergeant-Major Arthur Chippendale is stationed in Kingston with the R.C.A.S.C., and a brother, Lance Bombardier James Chippendale, has been overseas for the last three years with the Royal Canadian Artillery.

The young officer's wife, the former Lucille Prudhomme, and their three children reside at Ville Mount Royal, Montreal. He is a brother of Lieut. R. B. Major, of the Mount Royal Fusiliers, and of Captain Wilfrid Major, of the headquarters staff of the 7th Canadian Division. Both are presently stationed in Eastern Canada.

A graduate of the University of Ottawa and Laval University, Quebec, he practised law in Montreal with the Aime Geoffrion law firm until going on active service with the navy. For some time he was in charge of the Montreal-Cartier division of the R.C.N.V.R., of which he was one of the oldest members.

Five Brothers in Uniform.

Able Seaman Leslie Mackenzie Goreham has five brothers serving in the armed forces, two in the navy, two in the army and one in the air force. A sixth brother also served with the navy, but was discharged last year.

Only 23 years of age, he was married to the former Lillian Lee, who resides with their two small daughters, Leslie and Shirley, at 552 Churchill avenue, Westboro. Of Dutch origin, he is a son of Everett Goreham and the late Mrs. Goreham of Woods Harbor, N.S. He was born and brought up in that Nova Scotian community and came to Ottawa in 1941. After serving with the army for some time, he joined the navy in April, 1941. He was in Ottawa the last time in June and his wife received a letter from him a month ago.

His brothers are Osborne and Harold Goreham, in the Canadian army, Vincent and Wardlow, with the navy, and Ernest, with the R.C.A.F. at Debert. There are two other brothers at home, Everett and Sylvester, the latter having served with the navy until last year. He also has three sisters, Mrs. William Schand and Mrs. Sydney Jeffrey, in the Maritimes, and Mrs. H. Nickerson, in the United States.

Native of Kingston.

A.B. William Rufus ("Sonny") Badour, R.C.N.V.R., 19-year-old son of Mrs. Augusta Badour, Kingston, was born in Kingston and received his education there. Before enlisting in the navy in March, 1942, he was employed at the Simmons hardware in Kingston. He trained in Kingston and then went on active duty. He returned home on furlough last April. Six weeks ago he asked his family not to write to him as he was on draft for sea duty, and since that time they had not heard from him.

He has a brother, Garnet, who recently enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R., and a half-brother, Sgt. Milton Wart, serving overseas in the R.C.O.C. Other members of his family are a half-brother, Myles Wart of Kingston, and three sisters, Ossie and Violet Badour at home, and Mrs. J. M. Stout, who resides in Alaska.

His father, the late William Rufus Badour, died three years ago.

A popular Kingston youth, Leading Seaman Joseph Thomas "Tommy" Chippendale, R.C.N.V.R., is one of three members of his family serving in the present conflict, as his father, Sergeant-Major Arthur Chippendale is stationed in Kingston with the R.C.A.S.C., and a brother, Lance Bombardier James Chippendale, has been overseas for the last three years with the Royal Canadian Artillery.

FIFTY ONTARIO SAILORS LISTED AMONG MISSING IN LOSS OF ST. CROIX

Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Nephew of Premier, Included in 14 From Toronto District Not Accounted For—Crew of 146 Missing

LEADING STOKER SCUDAMORE, MIMICO WAS ON ST. CROIX WHEN OTTAWA SANK

Surgeon-Lieutenant William Lyon Mackenzie King, 30, of Binscarth Rd., nephew of Canada's premier, is among the 146 listed as missing with the Canadian destroyer St. Croix. Fifty are from Ontario, including 14 from Toronto district.

Surgeon-Lieutenant King was posted as medical officer on the destroyer last June.

"We have no idea where the action took place," said his father-in-law, Walter C. Rean, Binscarth Rd. "We have been notified only that he is missing."

Mr. Rean said that Surgeon-Lieut. King wrote often but never divulged any details of his experiences. As far as can be ascertained he never returned to Canada after the initial voyage across the Atlantic.

"He had never been to Europe before sailing in June," said Mr. Rean, "and he wrote that he had seen parts of the country where the enemy had created considerable damage. We believed he referred to the south of England."

Born in Ottawa

Born in Ottawa, Jan. 2, 1913, Dr. Lyon Mackenzie King was the son of the late Dr. MacDougall King, who practised medicine in Ottawa some years ago. Dr. MacDougall King, the only brother of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, died in Denver, Colorado, when the boy was only nine years old. Mrs. MacDougall King is still living.

Lyon King went to the University of Toronto in 1930 to take courses in both arts and medicine. He graduated with honors in medicine, June 10, 1937, and won the faculty medal. He played football on one of the junior Varsity teams and was a well-known tennis player.

After being an interne at Toronto General hospital—1937-38—he was awarded a fellowship which took him to Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minnesota for four years' special course in medicine and surgery. He started the course in 1938 and completed it in 1941. He returned to Toronto and was house surgeon at St. Michael's hospital, Toronto, from 1941-42. He joined the Royal Canadian Navy June 27, 1942, and was stationed in hospital at Halifax, N.S.

Lyon King married Jan. 7, 1939, Miss Rean had an M.A. degree from the University of Toronto, with honors in psychology.

Surgeon Lieutenant and Mrs. King have one son, William Lyon Mackenzie, born 1940, and one daughter, Katherine Elizabeth, born 1942.

Surgeon Lieut. King's father served with the British army in the Boer war. His twin-brother, Arthur M. King, is attached to the department of munitions and supply, Ottawa.

Wife of Survivor Voices Gratitude

CALGARY, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—One of the most grateful women in Canada today is Mrs. Marie Fisher, wife of First Class Stoker William A. Fisher of Black Diamond, the only man of 147 to escape the St. Croix torpedoing.

Mrs. Fisher works in a Black Diamond restaurant, on the night shift. Last Monday she got a telegram from Ottawa to say that her husband was missing. Two hours later she got a telephone call, also from Ottawa, to say that her husband was safe.

Mrs. Fisher said that Fisher was proud of being a sailor in the Canadian navy. "He always said in his letters how much se liked the life," she said, "and how much he wanted to get ahead. He always said he'd like to stay in the navy for 21 years."

"Bill" Fisher, now 23 years old, was born in Victoria, B.C., and joined the navy in the fall of 1941. Returning home on leave in 1942, he married Marie Nesbitt, an attractive Black Diamond girl.

Says St. Croix Already Avenged

HAMILTON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—The loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, with loss of almost her entire crew, "will be avenged, nay, I believe that she has already been avenged," Navy Minister Macdonald said in an address prepared for delivery at the opening of the new naval barracks, H.M.C.S. Star, here.

"This ship," said Mr. Macdonald, "was one of the destroyers acquired by us from the United States three years ago. She had given valiant service and had sunk a U-boat in the Atlantic last year.

Now she, herself, in turn has felt the weight and the force of German torpedoes and she will fight no more. . . Other ships and other men will take the place of the St. Croix and her crew, and they will carry on relentlessly and successfully the fight against these underwater marauders."

Loss of St. Croix Will Be Avenged Says Navy Minister

HAMILTON, Oct. 1. — (CP) — Loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, with loss of almost her entire crew, "will be avenged, nay, I believe that she has already been avenged", Navy Minister Macdonald said in an address prepared for delivery at the opening of the new naval barracks, H.M.C.S. Star, here.

"This ship", said Mr. Macdonald, "was one of the destroyers acquired by us from the United States three years ago. She had given valiant service, and had sunk a U-boat in the Atlantic last year. . . .

"A year ago we were able to say that more than 40 percent.—some 47 percent., to be exact—of convoy work in the North Atlantic was borne by Canadian ships, officered and manned by men of the Canadian Navy. That must be ranked as a remarkable achievement.

"The battle against the U-boat still continues and it will continue until the war is won. We may drive the enemy out of Sicily and out of North Africa, we may have an end of the fight in this or that theatre of war before the end of the general struggle—before complete and final victory is ours—but the enemy will fight in the Atlantic to the end . . . He can do none other."

The Minister warned that further attacks against Allied shipping in the Atlantic must be expected, and that "we must be prepared for other bitter blows".

Merchant shipping tonnage, nevertheless, is growing in a degree that "far outstrips" our losses. Naval and air power is greater than before. Despite sinkings and casualties "the line still holds; the men and the ships are still getting through".

Mr. Macdonald said he hoped that it will be possible to have some aircraft carriers in the Canadian Navy within a reasonable time. Next year it is hoped to add cruiser strength to the service.

"Before the end of this year we hope to add 20 new ships to the Canadian Navy of the escort type, and 100 more of the same style and class are either being built or are projected for the Canadian Navy".

More than 400 members of the Canadian Navy have been honored by the King for gallant and distinguished service. More than 1,000 have given their lives, and 13 Canadian naval ships have been sunk.

Two Ottawa Men Among Missing In Convoy Sinking

Only One Man Survives Torpedoing Of St. Croix

Largest single loss of Canadian fighting men, 146 of the 147 aboard the torpedoed Canadian destroyer St. Croix, today was announced by Navy Minister Macdonald.

Sole survivors of the sinking—second proof within the week that German U-boats are back in strength along the North Atlantic sea lanes—was Stoker W. A. Fisher of Black Diamond.

Among the 146 men lost were:

Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, namesake and nephew of Prime Minister King. He was born in Ottawa.

Lieut. Comdr. Paul S. Major, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Major, of 4 Range road, Ottawa. He was a nephew of former Ontario Mines Minister Robert Laurier, M.L.A.;

Able Seaman Leslie M. Goreham, husband of Mrs. Lillian A. Goreham, 522 Churchill avenue, Westboro;

Able Seaman Francis Herbert Savage, son of Mrs. F. M. Savage, of Ashton.

On Convoy Duty.

Except to say the St. Croix was on "convoy duty", the Navy gave no details of the engagement in which the destroyer was lost. She was one of seven United States destroyers turned over to the Canadian Navy after the 50-warship trade for naval bases between London and Washington before Pearl Harbor.

Since coming under the Red Ensign the St. Croix had accounted for at least one U-boat.

While the Navy withheld details, it was believed probable that the St. Croix was engaged in that action where five R.C.A.F. long-range Liberator bombers fought six U-boats in two recent days. It probably, too, was the one mentioned by Prime Minister Churchill in his recent speech before the British House, the action forming the basis for German claims that 12 destroyers and nine merchantmen had been sunk in a west-bound convoy.

(There has been no confirmation of this German claim from Allied sources.)

(Reports from an East Coast Canadian port were survivors of destroyed merchant ships were landed after the Atlantic battle said the St. Croix was picking up survivors of a merchantman when she was hit. A torpedo crashed through her thin armor, apparently into her ammunition stores.

(The detonation set off a terrific explosion which racked her from stem to stern and probably killed many before they even had a chance to jump.

("It was the most terrific sight I've ever seen", said one sailor. "She just seemed to go to pieces all at once.")

Telling of the blast that destroyed the St. Croix, one officer said his ship was six miles away at the time the destroyer was split by the explosion.

"After the explosion we could see a few twinkling lights on the water. They might have been survivors with lights, but when we reached the scene all we found was a bunch of wreckage and one lifebelt with a light on it", he said.

As additional reports are received and security considerations permit, it is probable the St. Croix loss will appear in its full setting as part of a major naval engagement marking the return of the U-boats to the seas, better equipped for fighting off destroyers, corvettes and aircraft assigned to their destruction.

13th to Go.

The St. Croix is the 13th Canadian naval vessel lost in the Second Great War which has seen Canadian ships sailing and fighting in the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Mediterranean. She is the fourth destroyer lost, but first of the former U. S. "four-stackers" received by Canada to go down. Besides the destroyers the Navy has lost six corvettes, two patrol vessels and a minesweeper, either by mishap at sea or enemy action.

The toll of life in the St. Croix sinking—146 reported missing—is the largest single loss in men, just topping the loss of 142 when the destroyer Margaree was sunk in the North Atlantic, cut in two by a large steamship while manoeuvring in defence of a convoy against a night submarine attack.

Lt.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson, 42, of Halifax, was in command of St. Croix and is listed among the missing.

So is Lt.-Cmdr. P. F. M. DeFreitas, of Victoria, recently cited for fine work in command of one of the Canadian ships which assisted the United States Navy in operations against the Aleutian Islands in the Pacific. DeFreitas was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, having joined her less than a week before as part of an advanced training course.

The Navy made public the names of the 146 missing men.

Men from all provinces, many with long records at sea in the ceaseless struggle waged by the Canadian Navy against submarines, are missing. The casualty list shows 50 whose next-of-kin live in Ontario, 22 in Quebec, 15 in British Columbia, 14 in Nova Scotia, nine in Manitoba, eight in Saskatchewan, seven in Alberta, six in New Brunswick and two in Prince Edward Island.

Five have next-of-kin in Newfoundland, three in England,

As additional reports are received and security considerations permit, it is probable the St. Croix loss will appear in its full setting as part of a major naval engagement marking the return of the U-boats to the seas, better equipped for fighting off destroyers, corvettes and aircraft assigned to their destruction.

13th to Go.

The St. Croix is the 13th Canadian naval vessel lost in the Second Great War which has seen Canadian ships sailing and fighting in the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Mediterranean. She is the fourth destroyer lost, but first of the former U. S. "four-stackers" received by Canada to go down. Besides the destroyers the Navy has lost six corvettes, two patrol vessels and a minesweeper, either by mishap at sea or enemy action.

The toll of life in the St. Croix sinking—146 reported missing—is the largest single loss in men, just topping the loss of 142 when the destroyer Margaree was sunk in the North Atlantic, cut in two by a large steamship while manoeuvring in defence of a convoy against a night submarine attack.

Lt.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson, 42, of Halifax, was in command of St. Croix and is listed among the missing.

So is Lt.-Cmdr. P. F. M. DeFreitas, of Victoria, recently cited for fine work in command of one of the Canadian ships which assisted the United States Navy in operations against the Aleutian Islands in the Pacific. DeFreitas was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, having joined her less than a week before as part of an advanced training course.

The Navy made public the names of the 146 missing men.

Men from all provinces, many with long records at sea in the ceaseless struggle waged by the Canadian Navy against submarines, are missing. The casualty list shows 50 whose next-of-kin live in Ontario, 22 in Quebec, 15 in British Columbia, 14 in Nova Scotia, nine in Manitoba, eight in Saskatchewan, seven in Alberta, six in New Brunswick and two in Prince Edward Island.

Five have next-of-kin in Newfoundland, three in England, three in the United States and two in Scotland.

Cmdr. Dobson, a master mariner in civilian life, had already won distinction with his ship. He received the Distinguished Service Cross for his handling of the St. Croix in the destruction of a submarine.

Engineroom Artificer Leslie W. Bydwell, of Saint John, N.B., also among the missing, was mentioned in despatches for good service on the same occasion.

In the United States Navy the St. Croix was called the McCook. Following transfer to Canada, like other Canadian destroyers she was renamed for a river and, to commemorate her origin, after a river common to the United States and Canada — the one forming the boundary between Maine and New Brunswick. The other six "four-stackers" were similarly named, the Annapolis, Columbia, Niagara, St. Francis, St. Clair and Hamilton.

A short time ago Prime Minister Churchill was able to announce that no ship had been sunk in the Atlantic for four months but he also said the submarines were back and attacking a convoy at that moment.

At a recent press conference Navy Minister Macdonald spoke of a marked lull in submarine warfare in the Atlantic and attributed it to the "tremendous battering" the submarines had taken earlier in the Summer.

One of the factors in that battering was the introduction of long-range aircraft patrols over the Atlantic and, as expected, when the submarines again appeared they had heavy anti-aircraft gun installations enabling them to stay on the surface and fight against a bomber, instead of diving when attacked as they used to do.

There is no indication yet whether in their four-month rest, licking earlier wounds, the enemy submarine crews have developed better means of combating surface ships like destroyers and corvettes, but some revision in tactics has been expected on their return. In his recent speech Mr. Churchill said the U-boats were no doubt fitted with what was thought to be the newest and best equipment.

In the intensified submarine warfare against Atlantic convoys now apparently reopened, the Canadian Navy will play a major role. Convoy operations in the western half of the North Atlantic are under Canadian naval control, although both British and United States ships may be serving in the area.

The long-range air patrols are carried out by squadrons of the R.C.A.F. using Liberator bombers and operating in co-operation with the Canadian Navy.

Only One Survivor Listed As Former American Craft Falls Prey to German Sub

Mother of Prime Minister Says Son Was Ship—Ottawa Reveals Largest Single Loss of War For Dominion's Fleet

(Complete casualty list on page 12)

Ottawa, Oct. 1—(CP)—Loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix with 146 men was announced to-day by Navy Minister Macdonald—second proof in a week that German submarines are back in the north Atlantic preying on transocean convoys. The ship, one of seven United States destroyers turned over to the Canadian navy after the 50-destroyer exchange for naval bases between Britain and America in pre-Pearl Harbour days, was hit by torpedoes from a submarine and all but one of her complement of 147 are missing. The sole survivor was Stoker W. A. Fisher, of Black Diamond, Alta.

On Convoy Duty

The navy gave no details of the encounter in which the St. Croix was lost except to say the destroyer was on convoy duty. Just previously the action was the one in which five R.C.A.F. long-range Liberator bombers engaged the submarine in mid-ocean and sank it. The one mentioned by Prime Minister Churchill in a recent speech to the British House of Commons and which formed the basis for a German claim that 12 destroyers and nine merchant vessels had been sunk from a westbound convoy.

(There has been no confirmation of this German claim from Allied sources.)

(Reports from an east coast Canadian port where survivors of the stricken merchant ships were landed after the Atlantic battle said the St. Croix was picking up survivors of a merchantman when she was hit. A torpedo crashed through her thin armour, apparently into her ammunition stores.

(The detonation set off a terrific explosion which racked her from stem to stern and probably killed many before they even had a chance to jump.

(It was the most terrific sight I've ever seen," said one sailor. "She just seemed to go to pieces all at once.")

As additional reports are received and security considerations permit, it is probable the St. Croix loss will appear in its full setting as part of a major naval engagement marking the return of the U-boats to the seas, better-equipped for fighting off destroyers, corvettes and aircraft assigned to their destruction.

Among the missing also was Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, nephew and namesake of the Prime Minister of Canada. Lieut. King was born in Ottawa. His mother now lives at Bedford, N.S.

Lt.-Cmdr. Paul Simon Major, of Montreal, grandson of the late Hon. S. N. Parent, former premier of Quebec province and mayor of Quebec City, was another officer posted missing.

Men from all provinces, many with long records at sea in the Canadian Navy against submarines, are missing. Premier's Nephew Lost in Sinking Of Canadian Ship

Ottawa, Oct. 1. — (CP) — Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, 30, one of the nine officers listed as missing after the sinking by enemy action of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, announced to-day, was born in Ottawa, son of the late Dr. Macdougall King, who practised medicine in the capital some years ago.

Dr. Macdougall King was the only brother of Prime Minister Mackenzie King. He died in Denver, Colo., when Surgeon Lieut. King was only nine years of age. The young officer's mother still is living.

Lieut. King attended the University of Toronto for courses in arts and medicine in 1930. He was graduated with honours in medicine June 10, 1937, winning the Faculty Medal, and after interning at Toronto General Hospital from 1937 to 1938, was awarded a fellowship which took him to the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., for a four-year special course in medicine and surgery.

Lieut. King completed this course in 1941, and from 1941 to 1942 was on the staff of St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto. He joined the Royal Canadian Navy June 27, 1942, served in hospital at Halifax, and was posted to the St. Croix in June of last year.

Loss of the St. Croix.

War exacts its sacrifices from among our bravest and our best. The 146 gallant Canadians lost on the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, men from every province in the Dominion, would have lived to help build a better Canada, but they were caught up in this war our enemies made and they have died in the elementary cause of liberty, in the basic issue of our right to be free men.

The bereavement that has come to the Prime Minister creates a new tie, a sorrowful tie, between him and the thousands of Canadian homes in which the war has left a vacant place. Dr. WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE KING, surgeon lieutenant on the St. Croix, was the son of Mr. MACKENZIE KING'S only brother, Dr. MACDOUGALL KING, and was only 30. This inheritor of an historic name had trained himself for a career of service to his country. He graduated in medicine from the University of Toronto, had four years at the famous Mayo Clinic, served briefly on the staff of St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto before the clear call of duty took him into the Royal Canadian Navy 15 months ago.

Ottawa mourns with the Prime Minister in his proud sorrow, mourns also for the loss of Lieutenant Commander PAUL S. MAJOR, who went down with the same ship. Lieutenant Commander MAJOR, too, was a link with our historic past. A son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. MAJOR, he was a grandson of the late Hon. S. N. PARENT, many years Premier of Quebec and a nephew of Mr. ROBERT LAURIER.

These brilliant young men, MAJOR and KING, represented the two great flowing streams of Canadian life and we like to think that their death together in the greatest of all causes will help convince even the most sceptical among us of our essential national unity.

These men and their shipmates died gallantly, we may be sure, and not in vain. The Royal Canadian Navy has played and is playing a glorious part in this war, and those who sail on our little ships, to victory or to death and sometimes to both, have the gratitude and the deep respect of their countrymen.

War's End Prophecies.

Those who are saying the war will be "over by Christmas"—the United States senator, for example, who declares Germany may collapse at any time—should note a careful despatch The Canadian Press has carried from Washington.

This despatch quotes "those in a position to know" as saying a cross-Channel invasion of the Continent is "almost an impossibility" before next April, and that only the complete collapse of Germany can hasten it. There are, in this survey of the situation, not now enough trained troops for the adventure, [illegible] for "softening up" German defences by air bombing, and Winter weather over the Channel might be dangerous for the vast body of shipping which would be needed to transport troops and their equipment.

It seems clear to us that all our hopes of a very early victory over Germany rest on the possibility of internal collapse, and it seems equally clear that the chances of this happening

These brilliant young men, MAJOR and KING, represented the two great flowing streams of Canadian life and we like to think that their death together in the greatest of all causes will help convince even the most sceptical among us of our essential national unity.

These men and their shipmates died gallantly, we may be sure, and not in vain. It seems clear to us that all our hopes of a very early victory over Germany rest on the possibility of internal collapse, and it seems equally clear that the chances of this happening in the next few months are extremely remote. Germany is solidly in the hands of HITLER and HIMMLER, the army remains formidable and faithful, and no successful revolt of the civilian population which might bring about a crash is conceivable—yet. But also there is nothing to indicate that the German people want to revolt, that they have lost confidence in HITLER or are convinced that the war is lost and they had better admit the fact and make the best of it. Not much can be made any more of the old distinction between Nazi and German. All Nazis are Germans, and most Germans are Nazis—at least to the extent of supporting the war and accepting meekly the blood-stained regime of HITLER and his fellow-criminals. The thoughtful among them may know in their hearts that Germany cannot win, but that state of mind can be a long way from unconditional surrender.

If we take our heads out of the clouds we must realize that on the hard facts Germany will not give up in the near future. Magnificent as has been the Russian assault from the East, STALIN'S armies still are a long way from the Polish border, much farther from Germany itself. They will need another campaign before they can be expected to smash through the iron ring. The Winter undoubtedly will see much progress made, and many sensational events. The conquest of Italy will go on, and invasions may be made at other points—in the Balkans or in Southern France. And meanwhile in factories and training fields preparations will be going ahead for tremendous events—the attack from Britain across the Channel against the hard fortress the Germans have made of Western Europe. If it comes in April and is a complete success, if it is joined with another great sweep forward by the Russians and other invasions through the Balkans, late 1944 could see the end of Germany.

After that we have a final accounting with Japan.

Prime Minister's Nephew Lieut. King on St. Croix

Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, nephew and namesake of Canada's Prime Minister, is among the 146 reported missing with the Canadian destroyer St. Croix. He is the son-in-law of Walter C. Rean, 14 Binscarth Rd., Toronto.

"We have no idea where the action took place. We have been notified only that he is missing," Mr. Rean said yesterday. He added that his son-in-law gave no details of his experiences in his frequent letters, and that it was probable that he never returned to Canada after his initial trip across the Atlantic.

Surgeon-Lieut. King was posted as medical officer on the St. Croix in June, when he made his first voyage to Europe.

He took courses in arts and medicine at the University of Toronto, graduating with honors in medicine on June 10, 1937, and winning the faculty medal. He was a well-known tennis player and played on one of the University of Toronto junior football teams.

In 1937-38 he was an interne at Toronto General Hospital. A fellowship which he was awarded took him to Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., for four years' special course in medicine and surgery. After completing the course in 1941, he became house surgeon at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, until 1942. In June, that year, he joined the R.C.N. and was stationed in hospital at Halifax.

He married Marjorie Rean on Jan. 7, 1939. Miss Rean had an M.A. degree from the U. of T., with honors in psychology. They have a son, William Lyon Mackenzie, born 1940, and a daughter, Katherine Elizabeth, born 1942. Mrs. King lives at Bedford, N.S.

Surgeon-Lieut. King.

Dr. King was born on Jan. 2, 1913, in Ottawa, to the wife of the late Dr. MacDougall King, who practiced medicine there. Mrs. MacDougall King lives in Denver, Colo., where her husband died when Surgeon-Lieut. King was a boy of nine. Dr. MacDougall King, only brother of Canada's Prime Minister, served in the South African War with the British Army.

Counter-Measures Against Hun Subs Highly Successful

LONDON, Oct. 1 — (C.P.) — Two escort vessels in addition to the Canadian destroyer St. Croix were lost in a submarine battle in the Atlantic, marking the renewal of U-boat activity against convoys, it was learned today.

They were the corvette Polyanthus and the frigate Itchen, both of the Royal Navy.

The weight of the losses and the ferocity of the fight were in no way exceptional, and counter-measures against the U-boats were highly successful, it was also learned.

The action apparently was the same one to which Prime Minister Churchill referred Sept. 21 in the House of Commons when he told the House of Commons that no ship had been sunk in the North Atlantic for four months and added that even as he spoke a convoy was under attack.

80 Of 81 Men Saved From St. Croix Lost As Rescue Ship Sinks

Five Officers and 76 Men Of Canadian Destroyer Picked Up by British Frigate Itchen, Which Also Is Torpedoed.

Five officers and 76 men survived the sinking of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, but all but one lost their lives a short time later when the British frigate Itchen was torpedoed after picking them up, the Royal Canadian Navy announced last night.

Not Disclosed Earlier.

This tragic turn of fate was not disclosed by Navy Minister Macdonald when, earlier yesterday, he made public the torpedoing of the St. Croix with all but one of her 147-man complement missing.

At that time the loss of the Itchen was still a secret and her connection with the St. Croix sinking could not be disclosed. Last night in London, however, it was learned the Itchen had gone down.

In Running Battle.

The British corvette Polyanthus also was destroyed, along with an indefinite number of merchantmen in a running battle marking return to the North Atlantic in force of German U-boat "wolf-packs."

Two Canadian officers, on loan to the Royal Navy and serving in the "Itchen," Lieutenant William A. Johnston, R.C.N.V.R., of Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Lieutenant Godfrey T. Archbold, R.C.N.V.R., of Duncan, B.C., are reported "missing, presumed killed in action." They are in addition to the "St. Croix" casualties previously announced.

Next of kin of the missing officers are: Mrs. Katherine M. Johnston (wife), 100 Edward street, Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Mrs. Sheila M. E. Archbold (wife), 19 Balsam street, St. John's, Newfoundland.

The navy statement indicated that the only survivor of the St. Croix, Stoker W. A. Fisher of Black Diamond, Alta., actually survived two torpedoings, the St. Croix and the Itchen.

No Details Given.

The navy gave no details of the St. Croix sinking, except to say this 13th loss of the war was a torpedoing while the destroyer was on escort duty. So far the St. Croix is the only destroyer officially listed as lost in the action.

Survivors from sunken merchantmen landed at the East Coast said a torpedo apparently hit the St. Croix' ammunitions stores and she exploded while she was still picking up survivors from another sunken ship.

Last night's Navy Department statement indicated that they may have been referring to the sinking of the Itchen.

Survivors at an East Coast Canadian port accounted for five merchant vessels sunk but there was no official confirmation of this figure.

A hint the running fight was not all one-sided was given at Hamilton by Navy Minister Macdonald who said the St. Croix would be avenged—"Nay, I believe she has already been avenged."

The loss of life in the St. Croix sinking was the heaviest individual loss suffered by the Canadian navy in this war, topping the 142 lives lost when the destroyer Margaree was sunk in 1941.

The St. Croix was the first of seven former United States destroyers acquired by Canada under the British-American destroyer-navy base deal of pre-Pearl Harbor days to be sunk. In the United States fleet she was called the "McCook."

Lt.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson of Halifax, the commander, and Lt.-Cmdr. P. F. M. DeFreitas of Victoria who commanded a corvette with distinction in the Aleutians and was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, are missing with 144 of their shipmates.

The loss of the St. Croix brought personal bereavement to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, whose nephew and namesake, Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, is missing. Lieut. King is one of two sons of the late Dr. Macdougall King. Following the death of their father the Prime Minister took a personal interest in their welfare and education.

For four months not a ship was sunk in the Atlantic which is the special responsibility of the Royal Canadian Navy for the protection of convoys. This was attributed to the fact that the submarines had taken a bad lacing from Allied naval and air forces and had been called home for refitting and perhaps retraining.

More Battles Anticipated.

Now the U-boats are back and further battles of the kind which has just taken place are anticipated. Whatever the submarines now have that is new, either in equipment or technique, will be employed; and Allied naval authorities will seek to counter it.

The one thing new, as far as official information goes, is the installation of anti-aircraft guns. This was shown when six submarines remained on the surface under attack by Canadian Liberator bombers and threw up a curtain of fire which sent one bomber home damaged.

One of the survivors of the merchant ships spoke of a new and deadly torpedo but there was no official comment on this suggestion in naval circles here.

Not Disclosed Earlier.

This tragic turn of fate was not disclosed by Navy Minister Macdonald when, earlier yesterday, he made public the torpedoing of the St. Croix with all but one of her 147-man complement missing.

At that time the loss of the Itchen was still a secret and her connection with the St. Croix sinking could not be disclosed. Last night in London, however, it was learned the Iitchen had gone down.

In Running Battle.

The British corvette Polyanthus also was destroyed, along with an indefinite number of merchantmen in a running battle marking return to the North Atlantic in force of German U-boat "wolf-packs."

Two Canadian officers, on loan to the Royal Navy and serving in the "Itchen," Lieutenant William A. Johnston, R.C.N.V.R., of Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Lieutenant Godfrey T. Archbold, R.C.N.V.R., of Duncan, B.C., are reported "missing, presumed killed in action." They are in addition to the "St. Croix" casualties previously announced.

Next of kin of the missing officers are: Mrs. Katherine M. Johnston (wife), 100 Edward street, Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Mrs. Sheila M. E. Archbold (wife), 19 Balsam street, St. John's, Newfoundland.

The navy statement indicated that the only survivor of the St. Croix, Stoker W. A. Fisher of Black Diamond, Alta., actually survived two torpedoings, the St. Croix and the Itchen.

No Details Given.

The navy gave no details of the St. Croix sinking, except to say this 13th loss of the war was a torpedoing while the destroyer was on escort duty. So far the St. Croix is the only destroyer officially listed as lost in the action.

Survivors from sunken merchantmen landed at the East Coast said a torpedo apparently hit the St. Croix' ammunitions stores and she exploded while she was still picking up survivors from another sunken ship.

Last night's Navy Department statement indicated that they may have been referring to the sinking of the Itchen.

Survivors at an East Coast Canadian port accounted for five merchant vessels sunk but there was no official confirmation of this figure.

A hint the running fight was not all one-sided was given at Hamilton by Navy Minister Macdonald who said the St. Croix would be avenged—"Nay, I believe she has already been avenged."

The loss of life in the St. Croix sinking was the heaviest individual loss suffered by the Canadian navy in this war, topping the 142 lives lost when the destroyer Margaree was sunk in 1941.

The St. Croix was the first of seven former United States destroyers acquired by Canada under the British-American destroyer-navy base deal of pre-Pearl Harbor days to be sunk. In the United States fleet she was called the "McCook."

Lt.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson of Halifax, the commander, and Lt.-Cmdr. P. F. M. DeFreitas of Victoria who commanded a corvette with distinction in the Aleutians and was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, are missing with 144 of their shipmates.

The loss of the St. Croix brought personal bereavement to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, whose nephew and namesake, Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, is missing. Lieut. King is one of two sons of the late Dr. Macdougall King. Following the death of their father the Prime Minister took a personal interest in their welfare and education.

For four months not a ship was sunk in the Atlantic which is the special responsibility of the Royal Canadian Navy for the protection of convoys. This was attributed to the fact that the submarines had taken a bad lacing from Allied naval and air forces and had been called home for refitting and perhaps retraining.

More Battles Anticipated.

Now the U-boats are back and further battles of the kind which has just taken place are anticipated. Whatever the submarines now have that is new, either in equipment or technique, will be employed; and Allied naval authorities will seek to counter it.

The one thing new, as far as official information goes, is the installation of anti-aircraft guns. This was shown when six submarines remained on the surface under attack by Canadian Liberator bombers and threw up a curtain of fire whch sent one bomber home damaged.

One of the survivors of the merchant ships spoke of a new and deadly torpedo but there was no official comment on this suggestion in naval circles here.

Six, Maybe More, Merchant Vessels Sunk In Attacks

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—German submarines renewed their offensive against North Atlantic supply lines early last week, sinking at least three escort vessels and six or more merchant ships, it was indicated tonight by official navy announcements and the accounts of torpedoed merchant seamen brought here earlier this week.

Disclosure of the mid-Atlantic naval action that spread over ten days with a heavy three-day running fight in the middle, was made today. Naval Minister Macdonald announced the loss of the Canadian destroyer H.M.C.S. St. Croix with 146 of her 147-man crew.

Later in London the admiralty announced the loss of the British frigate Itchen and the corvette Polyanthus.

Others May Have Been Lost.

The merchant ship losses estimate was arrived at from the reports of the more than 100 United States, Norwegian and British seamen brought here by a rescue vessel and later cared for at the Navy League Seamen's Club. Six merchantmen are known sunk, while two or three are possibly lost.

The merchant seamen had said they believed the St. Croix was destroyed by an explosion, touched off by a torpedo in the ammunition chamber, but a naval announcement from Ottawa tonight indicated it was not the St. Croix but the Itchen which was blasted apart.

(The navy said five officers and 76 men survived the St. Croix sinking and were picked up by the Itchen. When the frigate in turn was torpedoed, all except one of the St. Croix crewmen were lost. No indication was given what happened to the Itchen crew.

(The announcement did not say that the Itchen exploded, but it is assumed it did, due to the heavy loss of life among the men picked up from the St. Croix.)

Survivors here told of the escort vessel they saw picking up survivors. They said it had about 75 aboard when a torpedo struck it and it exploded with a terrific blast. A rescue ship churned up to the spot, but there was nothing there except wreckage and a corvette which told them to go on and rejoin the convoy, crewmen said.

Two Liberty Ships.

Seamen brought here included the crews of two United States Liberty ships and a Norwegian vessel. One of the American ships was split in two by the torpedo explosion and slipped beneath the water rapidly. Less than half her crew escaped.

No announcement has been made yet on the number of ships sunk in the long-drawn-out engagement, but it probably totals ten, including both merchant ships and escorts.

Two convoys were involved, a slow one attacked with the loss of one ship on the night of Sept. 18-19 and a faster, following convoy which ran into the wolf packs on Monday, Sept. 20. Two vessels were sunk that day as the Nazis swept up in full force.

Dense Fog Comes.

The next day dense fog came to the aid of the convoy as the ships maneuvered through the blackness with their Asdic sets reporting the presence of enemy underwater craft all about them. Two surfaced subs were sighted at one time through a break in the clouds, some of the survivors said, but they were lost sight of immediately.

Early the next morning two more ships were sunk and the survivors were picked up as the convoy plodded on.

Another merchant vessel was torpedoed later that day, and her crew took to the boats but later returned as she still stayed afloat. While being towed to port, however, she later sank. The crew was taken aboard a corvette, which is believed to have been torpedoed and sunk later, survivors said.

(This may be the Polyanthus.)

Later Friday the convoys ran into more opposition and one ship was hit. Its S.O.S. signal was heard, and it is believed to have sunk later. One or two other vessels also were known to have been damaged, but the seamen brought here did not know their final fate.

St. Croix Is Warning

Ottawa, October 1.—The loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix with all but one of her personnel and the torpedoing of a number of vessels in an Atlantic convoy last week vindicates the warning words spoken in the British House by Prime Minister Churchill that a resumption of fierce U-boat warfare in the Atlantic might be expected.

This latest sea tragedy that will bring sorrow to many Canadian homes will also be an effective rebuke to the recent outcropping of complacency which in spite of recent and repeated utterances of responsible spokesmen has shown an alarming revival.

It is a stern reminder, too, that next to the steady output of planes the most important kind of production still required of this country is ships, naval and commercial. True, the first destroyer to be built in Canada was launched a short time ago at an eastern port, the keel of another was begun in the same dock and next door another is being built. It is also true that within a short time the number of freighters to be launched in this country will reach 200, while up to date about 250 naval craft have been built.

But this rate of production in shipyards must continue, and that means a tremendous demand upon the human and material resources of the Dominion, upon the steady and unrelenting industry of workers and the ceaseless energy of employers. This program, too, involves one of the many heavy demands upon the nation's land transportation facilities.

The latest U-boat success in the Atlantic is challenge to every single feature of the country's war effort—to the determination of its people, to the machinery for getting manpower and making the best distribution of that supply, to the bond buyers and taxpayers, to the many wartime organizations centred here, to the government itself.

Arms Production

Another desperate effort to meet the personnel requirements of the armed forces was announced last night jointly by the three defence ministers. A pooling of recruits is something that probably should have been tried many months ago, but if all that is known about the shortage of men, particularly for the army and the air force, is reliable, pooling is not apt to greatly ease the situation. As a conservation measure it is probably worth while, but a more determined combing of the sources of supply is still overdue.

Whether or not with the present evident limitations on the supply of more or less skilled workers the government can safely plan an expansion of its munitions production is probably difficult to determine but one fact is apparent, and that is there can not safely be any lowering of the sights, for just as food requirements from this country will steadily mount as the hungry people of Europe are freed so there will be a steadily increasing demand for all kinds of war weapons with which to arm the freed.

Already a cargo of arms has been sent to Yugoslavia and certainly more will follow to the indomitable people of that state. The Greeks when their hands are unshackled will want arms with which to fight back at their oppressors, and the same will be true of the French and the Italians and the Belgians and the Dutch and the Norse and the Danes, and much later the Czechs. So it looks as if not only the fighting front, both on land and at sea, will be fully employed the next few months, and as heavy a demand will rest upon the war plants of Canada and the United States.

And there will be no money or energy or time to spare for attractive reconstruction programs. Production of food and all other material essential to finishing the fight in Europe must have right of way.

The federal political parties, though, are all now busy with "point" programs. The Liberals, who have been meeting here, have produced one containing 15 points, while the Progressive-Conservative party composed 14 points at Winnipeg, and there hasn't yet been a complete enumeration of the many measures the C.C.F. would adopt were it given a chance to save the nation from perdition. Then, a few weeks ago, Hon. George Drew put over the radio a list of points which totalled 22, and he was later given an opportunity to begin their application.

This production of points, however, can never take the place of the production of munitions and the finding of adequate manpower unless Canadians have decided to ignore the slogan of the new Victory Loan campaign, speed the Victory. A good gamble is that they haven't, and another good bet is that their response this month will be another rebuke to complacency in high or low places.

Toll For The Brave

Another Canadian fighting ship has gone down in action. In a recent North Atlantic battle, H.M.C.S. St. Croix sank with the loss of 146 men: only one man is reported to have survived. A torpedo must have hit the ship in a vital part where her magazines were caused to explode, or perhaps aft where an appalling weight of depth charges would be in readiness to fire. The end would come suddenly under such circumstances.

Once again, Canada is reminded of the unceasing battle where it is being waged day and night, through summer and winter, into this fifth year. It is a cruel, hard battle—with the elements as well as with the Hun. The St. Croix would displace little more than 1,000 tons. Last Thursday, readers were told of the Queen Mary's battle with the elements on one occasion when a mountainous wave drove her over until her upper decks were awash: the Queen Mary has a gross tonnage of 81,235, as compared with the little destroyer's 1,060 tons.

On small ships, destroyers, frigates and corvettes, the navymen put to sea regardless of the weather to do battle against unseen enemies. The U-boats can stay submerged in relative calm while the surface ships are being battered, with decks sometimes continuously awash in one gale after another, perhaps for sixteen days between Newfoundland and Northern Ireland. Sleep in such turbulence is rarely possible for more than occasional brief spells of an hour or so. Meals cannot be served at tables: a mug of cocoa or a basin of hot soup—plates and dishes are luxuries.

So the escorting warships, and the cargo ships in convoy, labor across the North Atlantic's melancholy waste. The only break in weeks of monotony, wearisome monotonous rolling and pitching, is liable to be when the alarm of a submarine is sounded. The enemy's aim is to deliver the attack without warning, with diabolical suddenness . . . as it must have been with the sinking of some of the ships in last week's renewal of Germany's submarine offensive on the Atlantic shipping lanes.

The fighting ships are understood to be fitted with submarine detecting devices. The St. Croix may have been fully aware of the proximity of a U-boat or of several. Rescued seamen from sunken merchant ships—apparently several ships were torpedoed—spoke of a new type of torpedo, deadly and efficient. The U-boats were probably also employing new tactics. Until an official narrative is published, the newspaper reader in comfort at home in Canada can only know that brave lads paid heavy toll.

It is probable that the battle cost British as well as Canadian lives. The Admiralty announced yesterday that the corvette Polyanthus had been lost—without saying where. A German statement claimed that several British warships were sent to the bottom.

It is no secret that the destroyers have suffered severely in incessant actions since the beginning of the war. In less than four years, the Royal Navy had lost 102 destroyers—including three Canadian.

The valor of the fighting men is unshaken, however: the destroyers are probably the most popular arm of the service—largely because it is generally more "matey" on the little ships. The men live together more like a big family. They live bravely, simply—almost it could be said, in the words of Paul, "kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love": for they know, without speaking of it, that the call is liable to come at any time when they are at sea.

After making many voyages, keeping watch in the loneliness of the hour before dawn, in the darkness under grey skies, in fair weather and foul, the men are ready. They serve faithfully, unflinchingly, and they continue to get the ships through.

Loss of the St. Croix.

War exacts its sacrifices from among our bravest and our best. The 146 gallant Canadians lost on the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, men from every province in the Dominion, would have lived to help build a better Canada, but they were caught up in this war our enemies made and they have died in the elementary cause of liberty, in the basic issue of our right to be free men.

The bereavement that has come to the Prime Minister creates a new tie, a sorrowful tie, between him and the thousands of Canadian homes in which the war has left a vacant place. Dr. WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE KING, surgeon lieutenant on the St. Croix, was the son of Mr. MACKENZIE KING'S only brother, Dr. MACDOUGALL KING, and was only 30. This inheritor of an historic name had trained himself for a career of service to his country. He graduated in medicine from the University of Toronto, had four years at the famous Mayo Clinic, served briefly on the staff of St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto before the clear call of duty took him into the Royal Canadian Navy 15 months ago.

Ottawa mourns with the Prime Minister in his proud sorrow, mourns also for the loss of Lieutenant Commander PAUL S. MAJOR, who went down with the same ship. Lieutenant Commander MAJOR, too, was a link with our historic past. A son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. MAJOR, he was a grandson of the late Hon. S. N. PARENT, many years Premier of Quebec and a nephew of Mr. ROBERT LAURIER.

These brilliant young men, MAJOR and KING, represented the two great flowing streams of Canadian life and we like to think that their death together in the greatest of all causes will help convince even the most sceptical among us of our essential national unity.

These men and their shipmates died gallantly, we may be sure, and not in vain. The Royal Canadian Navy has played and is playing a glorious part in this war, and those who sail on our little ships, to victory or to death and sometimes to both, have the gratitude and the deep respect of their countrymen.

Loss of the St. Croix.

War exacts its sacrifices from among our bravest and our best. The 146 gallant Canadians lost on the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, men from every province in the Dominion, would have lived to help build a better Canada, but they were caught up in this war our enemies made and they have died in the elementary cause of liberty, in the basic issue of our right to be free men.

The bereavement that has come to the Prime Minister creates a new tie, a sorrowful tie, between him and the thousands of Canadian homes in which the war has left a vacant place. Dr. WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE KING, surgeon lieutenant on the St. Croix, was the son of Mr. MACKENZIE KING'S only brother, Dr. MACDOUGALL KING, and was only 30. The Loss of the St. Croix

The sinking of the destroyer St. Croix with all but one of its crew of 147 is the greatest loss suffered by the Royal Canadian Navy since this war began. The ship, originally a unit of the United States Navy, was, when it met its doom through a submarine's torpedo, engaged in convoy work. This duty, if it does not offer the zest and excitement of a full-dress naval engagement, is continuously arduous and exacting, and taxes the seamanship and bravery of all who man the ships.

In this work the St. Croix had established a fine record of splendid service, and she received her death blow when she was engaged in picking up survivors from other torpedoed ships. Apparently, though circumstances were adverse to attempts at rescue, over half the ship's company were taken from the sea by a British frigate, only to lose their chance for life when their rescuers' ship fell victim of a second attack. Such is the gallantry of our enemy.

The officers and men of the St. Croix were drawn from all sections of Canada, almost a tenth of them hailing from our own city. Many of them were landsmen who had never set eyes upon the sea until they joined our navy. They proved the adaptability of Canadian youth by transforming themselves within a few years into excellent seamen whose skill was equalled by their courage. They helped to establish for the Canadian Navy a reputation for efficiency and zeal in full conformity with the fine traditions which it has inherited from its parent, the Royal Navy of Britain.

The men of the St. Croix served their country and the cause of freedom well and truly. Their kindred, their friends and the whole Canadian people, while mourning their loss, will take pride in the glory which they helped to win for Canada in, for her, the new field of naval warfare, and enrol them in the gallant company of our heroes.

The Prime Minister's Loss

The toll taken by war is indiscriminate. No distinction is made between the highest in the land and those more humbly situated when the cold impartiality of death descends upon men at war. Among the latest to suffer from its chill application is the Prime Minister of Canada, whose nephew and namesake, Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, was lost when his ship, the destroyer St. Croix, was sunk in the North Atlantic.

Surgeon-Lieut. King was one of two sons of the late Dr. Macdougall King. The Prime Minister was strongly attached to his only brother, and for his brother's sons held an affection more paternal than avuncular in its depth. In many ways Mr. King assumed a responsibility for his brother's family which was parental in extent. When Dr. King was stricken with tuberculosis, Mr. Mackenzie King quietly undertook to support him and his family. Never advanced by Mr. King, this heavy financial responsibility has long been recognized as the true and justifiable reason for his non-participation in the First Great War as a combatant.

World-wide sympathy will be extended to Mr. King in his hour of great loss. To a childless man the loss of his favorite nephew will be a blow of sickening severity; the fact that he died gallantly in the performance of his duty is but cold consolation. The people of Canada have given to Mr. King the highest place in the country; the deadly demands of war have now made him one with many fellow-Canadians mourning loved ones lost. With particular fervor Canadians will offer condolence to the Prime Minister, an expression to which this newspaper makes deeply sincere contribution.

The U-boats Strike Again

Another prophecy made by Mr. Churchill has been swiftly and brutally fulfilled. When he returned to England, he warned that we might expect redoubled efforts from Nazi undersea raiders in the Atlantic, and then last week mentioned a battle in progress on that ocean. And yesterday the people of Canada heard with deep sorrow the bitter news that 146 Canadian seamen and officers were lost when H.M.C.S. St. Croix was torpedoed, an event followed shortly by torpedoing of the British frigate, Itchen, which had picked up five officers and 76 men from the St. Croix. Not only the destroyer's crew died with but one man saved; over a hundred survivors from ships earlier torpedoed in the three-day battle were lost at the same time. The loss is the Canadian Navy's largest since war began, topping by four the crew casualty list of H.M.C.S. Margaree.

Any complacency which might have been felt in this Dominion over the exceptionally good record of the past three months has been shattered by this blow. We have been happily free from major disasters in the war for many months; the brave deeds of the men of our armed forces have been accompanied by comparatively minor casualty lists. The St. Croix is a rude reminder to Canadians that when our leaders speak of a long and grim road ahead, they speak a truth we will do well to heed in future. Stories from the North Atlantic this week, culminating with yesterday's announcement, bring convincing proof that the U-boat pack has returned to that area bent on wholesale destruction and better equipped to fulfil its purpose.

One story told of submarines heavily mounted with anti-aircraft guns giving battle to a bomber force. The pigboats came off second best, but quite obviously their losses were not severe enough to impair seriously their capacity for destruction. Stories then began to emanate from Berlin about the opening round in the renewed war at sea. The German official report listed a dozen naval vessels sunk and an even larger number of merchant ships. Both counts are probably exaggerated, but we have been given shocking proof that they are founded on fact. Apart from the St. Croix announcement, official Allied statements have done no more than deny the German figures. Enough has been revealed, however, during the week ended yesterday, to show that the Battle of the Atlantic is again being fought with intensified fury.

From that new fury we may expect further sorrow. The navy of this country has gallantly assumed the tremendous task of policing the convoy lanes for about half their length, and if the submersibles are again out in force they will be pitted against Canadian ships and Canadian sailors. If the raiders carry more fire power than ever, and if they are well provided with a new torpedo of deadly effectiveness hinted at in the press dispatches, then before measures to combat these new armament features are worked out there may be more losses sustained by the R.C.N. It is a gloomy prospect, but one we have been warned existed, and the validity of the warnings has been brought home to us with awful clarity.

Canadians everywhere mourn today the loss of the sailors and survivors aboard the destroyer St. Croix. Loss of the hundred-odd survivors on the St. Croix and the men of that vessel lost with the Itchen arouses added pity at the tragic irony of being once rescued from the underwater killers only to be later snuffed out by another murderous attack from the same source. The St. Croix survivors were men of many nations, and these lands will join with this country in sorrow over the passing of brave men struck down in the performance of their duty. Apart from the feeling of national loss, communities across the country have been stricken by the news. Two men from this city and two men from this district went down with the St. Croix. We are very sure that we express a sentiment held by all when we offer to their bereaved next-of-kin our deep and heartfelt sympathy.

The St. Croix

HOMES in London, and in other communities large and small in every province of the Dominion, will be darkened by the loss of the destroyer St. Croix which perished with all but one of her crew of 147 men while helping to rid the North Atlantic of the rattlesnake menace of German submarines.

Only a short time ago attention was paid to the phenomenal growth of the Royal Canadian Navy. The loss of the St. Croix is the other side of that picture. Navies are something more than hulls, guns and elaborate machinery, no matter how indispensable such things may be. The ultimate test of a navy is the calibre of its men, rather than the calibre of its guns. Many years ago British people learned the bitter phrase, "the price of Admiralty." It must still be paid by those who go down to the sea in ships.

Long ago a poet wrote these lines:

"Vain mightiest fleets of iron shard
Vain those all-shattering guns
Unless proud England keep unmarred
The brave hearts of her sons."

We hear much these days about national wealth, but we must never forget that the real wealth of Canada, as of every other land is "the brave hearts of her sons." So we salute the men of the St. Croix, who like their fellows of the Margaree, the Fraser, the Ottawa and the corvettes and smaller vessels who have shared their fate, sacrificed their lives not only for the freedom of the seas, but for the freedom of their homes — in London, on prairies and in cities, towns, villages and farmsteads across Canada. At the same time we should salute their comrades of the Silent Service who constantly take the same risks to preserve things they value more than life.

The Price of Admiralty

Blood is indeed the price of admiralty. And Canada is paying.

One of her great achievements in this war has been the expansion of her navy from an insignificant sea force to one which now includes more than 550 ships, many of them Canadian built. Some of these war vessels and their gallant crews were bound to be war casualties. The St. Croix, torpedoed on the rim of the Arctic circle, is the fourth Canadian destroyer to go down, and in this case only one survivor has been reported. Canada has also lost six corvettes, two patrol vessels and a minesweeper since the war began.

The St. Croix was lost in a great enemy submarine attack on a convoy in which a substantial number of Allied war and merchant ships were sunk. The St. Croix herself was torpedoed when picking up survivors from another ship. Many of her men were in turn rescued by a British frigate, but it too was torpedoed, and only one man from the St. Croix survived. Among those lost was the nephew and namesake of Canada's prime minister.

Blood is the price of admiralty. Canada's ships have been on duty in the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Mediterranean, adventuring in Arctic waters, protecting convoys and pursuing submarines. It is a new war-role for Canada to play. She is playing it nobly. The heroic men not only of her warships but of her cargo vessels have made a splendid contribution to the winning of the war.

As the minister of naval defence said yesterday, for every ship lost, there will be many new ships built. They will be needed, for the attack on the convoy in which the St. Croix perished marks the resumption of enemy submarine attacks on an ambitious scale—the old wolf-pack method used once more, but now with improved U-boats. This renewed menace will be met and overcome, but not without losses.

To those whose loved ones went down with the St. Croix, or with the British frigate which rescued part of her crew, the nation's heart goes out in sympathy. On the frigate herself two Canadians were serving and were lost. One was from British Columbia; one from Prince Edward Island. How eloquently that speaks of Canada's participation in this war from coast to coast! And from coast to coast there are those who proudly mourn their dead who have given their lives in what is literally a war for civilization; as Prime Minister King has said, as President Roosevelt said only yesterday—a crusade. It is a crusade by land, by sea and in the air, and in all branches of it Canada's gallant men are playing a noble part.

They proved the adaptability of Canadian youth by transforming themselves within a few years into excellent seamen whose skill was equalled by their courage. They helped to establish for the Canadian Navy a reputation for efficiency and zeal in full conformity with the fine traditions which it has inherited from its parent, the Royal Navy of Britain.

The men of the St. Croix served their country and the cause of freedom well and truly. Their kindred, their friends and the whole Canadian people, while mourning their loss, will take pride in the glory which they helped to win for Canada in, for her, the new field of naval warfare, and enrol them in the gallant company of our heroes.

Sympathy for Mr. King

The fell sickle of war does not discriminate between rank or station, race or creed in choosing its victims, but mows them down in an impartial swath. The greatest in the land have to share with the lowliest the sorrows that it brings to millions, and among the latest sufferers from its deadly reaping is our Prime Minister. His nephew and namesake, Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, went down to a hero's grave in the depths of the North Atlantic Ocean when the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, on which he had done splendid service, was sunk.

He was one of the two sons of the late Dr. Macdougall King. Between the Prime Minister and his only brother the ties of fraternal affection were more than ordinarily deep and strong. Some light is thrown upon it in the felicitous preface which Mr. King wrote for his brother's book "The Battle With Tuberculosis, and How to Win It." It is an open secret that when its author was incapacitated from active work by the dread scourge about which he wrote with such authority, Mr. King unselfishly undertook the support of him and his family, and assumed heavy financial responsibilities which most fair-minded people regarded as a valid excuse for non-participation as a combatant in the last war.

The Prime Minister, apart from the fact that the gallant young doctor was one of his nearest surviving relatives, stood, in a sense, in loco parentis to him and held him in special affection. And to a man who has no children of his own the loss of a favorite nephew will be a particularly severe blow, and the gallantry of his end will be only a partial consolation for his loss. Under the shadow of death partisan feelings can have no place, and will prove no obstacle to the universal flood of sympathy which will go out to the Prime Minister, and to which this newspaper makes its humble contribution.

TOUGH GOING

The sinking of the Canadian destroyer, St. Croix, with only one man saved out of a crew of 148, surely brings home to Canadians the thought that the fangs of the enemy are still deadly. After three or more months of practical immunity to shipping in the North Atlantic, the Germans have struck again with their U-boats. Two convoys were recently attacked; the despatches state that it was a 10-day battle all the way. That the convoy lost from 10 to 11 ships seems to be conceded by what the censor has allowed to pass for publication. There were also escorting war vessels, including the Canadian destroyer, which were lost.

The last speech of Prime Minister Churchill should be called to mind. In that speech he decared, as he announced at the time that a convoy was being attacked in the Atlantic, that only neglect, indifference or complacency on either side of the Atlantic, in Britain or in the United States, would bring any measure of triumph to the U-boat menace. And that can be taken to mean that no matter what new methods the enemy has imposed, the genius and skill of British and Americans will be equal to the test.

The Germans took the summer months, without doubt, in devising new means, new weapons, new defenses in their U-boat warfare. After all, it is the last hope of Hitler to cut the lifeline in the Atlantic. And this can also be said, the U-boat killers have a wonderful lot of targets to aim at. They are never lost for quarry. The Atlantic teems with shipping. That Hitler will score the occasional success may be taken in the stride of war. That the genius of Yank and British seamanship, the skill of the two navies will triumph in the end, is just one of those things in which absolute faith is taken. The struggle is not over, as shown by the news; it will be long and hard. Who can possibly doubt the ultimate issue?

PRIME MINISTER AMONG BEREAVED.

The loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, with all but one of her gallant complement of 147 listed as missing, is a national sorrow in more ways than one.

The sinking of one of the larger ships of our Navy in renewal of U-boat attacks on the North Atlantic comes, of course, as a heavy blow. It is a severe shock to all who had been relaxed, perhaps into a sense of false security, by the welcome blank in Canadian naval losses since March.

But more than that, in terms of human sacrifice and sorrow, the sinking of the St. Croix is a national bereavement that reaches into homes across the length and breadth of the country. The 146 officers and men on the roster of the missing went to war on the seas from centres large and small in every province of Canada, and from the British Isles, Newfoundland and the U.S.

As from other large casualty lists, the widespread grief that has been caused has cut across all classes of the national community. Sharing the loss and bereavement of his fellow citizens whose relatives are among the missing is the Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King. Among the officers lost is his 30-year-old nephew, Surgeon-Lt. William Lyon Mackenzie King.

Mr. King's sorrow is more than ordinary avuncular regret but stems from direct and personal loss of a young man whose welfare had been very close to his heart for some years. Lt. King was one of the twin sons of the Prime Minister's only brother, Dr. Macdougall King, and Mr. King had taken a warmly active interest in his care and career since Dr. King's death in Denver over 20 years ago. To the Prime Minister equally with all the relatives and friends of those who are missing, we offer sincere sympathy.

In paying tribute to the gallant men of the St. Croix, we should honor also the men who went down in the sinking of the merchant ships lost to U-boats in the same engagement in which the destroyer was torpedoed. The grim courage and defiance of risks of merchant seamen has played a vital role, along with the work of Allied warships and sea-patrolling airmen, in gaining ascendancy in the Battle of the Atlantic.

The threat of submarine wolf packs has now been renewed, but it will be smashed again, we feel sure, by the combined vigor of these three fighting services—Navy, Air Force and Merchant Navy.

STOKER FISHER AT THE CANADIAN CLUB.

In the person of Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, Minister of Naval Services, the Canadian Club of Montreal had a distinguished speaker yesterday. But Mr. Macdonald himself would be the first to admit that he was overshadowed by the second speaker on the pre-Victory Loan program—Stoker (1) William Fisher, sole survivor of the officers and men of H.M.C.S. St. Croix, torpedoed in the North Atlantic September 22.

Stoker Fisher is no orator. As he said yesterday, "It's hard for me to make a speech to you like this." But his few and diffident words moved his large audience profoundly.

Mr. Macdonald, in his comprehensive address, had made one statement which stood out with special clarity in his hearers' memory after Stoker Fisher had spoken:

> "Whereas last summer there was submarine activity in the Gulf and lower reaches of the St. Lawrence, this year there was not a single attack in that area. The absence of German submarine attacks in our coastal waters has been due, in my judgment, to the beating the enemy received in the spring. He received that beating, not on our own coast, but in mid-Atlantic, the Bay of Biscay, and at other points hundreds and thousands of miles from our shores."

As the Minister said, events of this year have given the best of all answers to those who a year ago were whining for Canada's navy to be withdrawn from overseas stations to patrol the St. Lawrence and the Gulf. Instead of heeding the voice of short-sighted timidity, Canadian sea fighters adopted the classic principle of naval strategy: "Seek out and engage the enemy". Stoker Fisher, and those less fortunate comrades who lie in the North Atlantic, are the real and effective defenders of Canada.

Le destroyer "Sainte-Croix"

Le destroyer canadien Sainte-Croix, éventré par une torpille, vient de couler avec tout son équipage. Le navire de guerre protégeait un convoi dans l'Atlantique au moment du sinistre qui nous avertit que la bataille navale pour la maîtrise de l'océan n'est pas encore terminée, même si les quatre derniers mois ont été exceptionnellement calmes.

Le Sainte-Croix s'ajoute à la liste des autres victimes de l'embuscade sous-marine de l'ennemi, aux destroyers Fraser, Margaree, Ottawa, aux corvettes Windflower, Weyburn, Spikenard, Lévis, Charlottetown et Louisbourg.

Ces pertes considérables assombrissent le tableau de notre participation à cette guerre en augmentant les deuils, mais elles démontrent aussi que nos marins ne sont pas moins engagés dans le conflit que nos fantassins et nos aviateurs.

"Mais c'est l'un des prodiges de cette guerre", écrivait le grand magazine américain Saturday Evening Post, l'été dernier, "que le Canada, nation agricole de moins de 12,000,000 de population, ait pu contribuer 47 pour cent de la vaste flotte de navires de guerre nécessaire à l'escorte des cargos pendant la traversée."

Le destroyer Sainte-Croix, qui était du nombre des anciens bâtiments américains cédés à la Grande-Bretagne en 1940, sera remplacé dans notre marine par une unité plus puissante et plus redoutablement armée et blindée, de la classe de ceux que l'on met en service actuellement.

Il ne faut pas que se perde sitôt l'excellente tradition navale que le Canada est en train d'établir et qui rehausse à tous les jours son prestige de nation majeure. Souhaitons aussi que le nom si beau de ce vaisseau soit repris, un jour, par un autre destroyer canadien.

BATTLE OF THE ATLANTIC STILL UNWON

Those who think the war is "all over but the shouting" and that we shall win it within the next few months will do well to think over the latest engagement in the Battle of the Atlantic which Canada has come out of with the loss of a destroyer, H.M.C.S. St. Croix and all but one of her crew of 147 officers and men. This is described as the hottest action in the North Atlantic during the past two years, lasting ten days and ending in an estimated loss to the United Nations of three escort and seven merchant ships. Enemy losses are unstated but even if the submarines went unscathed—which is improbable—we can still consider the engagement as a victory since it is clear that almost all of what must have been a large convoy got through safely; thus foiling Hitler in his attempt to prevent us from "delivering the goods."

Not only are the U-boats re-doubling their efforts, rather than relaxing them after repeated reverses; they have also, it seems, equipped themselves with a new weapon of terrible efficiency in some improved torpedo capable of disintegrating the ship it hits. Moreover, their tactics have probably been altered and improved to permit them to get home with so many torpedos as they did on this occasion. In short, it may well be that after having turned in our favor for some time the tide of battle on the Atlantic, is again veering to the enemy side, in which case the organization of our defense will have to be done all over again. Certainly, we shall have to develop an adequate answer to the newest form of submarine attack.

As our thoughts go out in profound sympathy to the bereaved kin of 146 fine young Canadians whom the ocean has engulfed, let us harden our resolve to endure whatever similar sacrifices an almost certainly prolonged Battle of the Atlantic may exact of us all!

Loss Of The St. Croix

The sinking of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix with loss of all but one of her 147-man crew is a grim reminder that the war is by no means over. This heavy toll of casualties is the worst experienced by the Royal Canadian Navy in the war, and brings to thirteen the number of R.C.N. ships lost since the hostilities began. The St. Croix, like many of her sister ships, was on convoy duty in the North Atlantic when torpedoed. This is one of the most arduous and dangerous of all wartime tasks. Due largely to the magnificient work of our naval and air forces, losses from enemy submarine action have been greatly lessened in recent months. But the menace still exists. The St. Croix and her gallant crew were playing their part in subduing it when the disaster occurred.

All parts of Canada are represented in the casualty list. Two Prince Edward Island names, those of Able Seaman J. E. Burriault, Wellington, and Leading Cook J. W. Smith, Emerald Junction, are included. The sympathy of all our citizens goes out to the families of these young men, as of course it does to all who have lost loved ones in the war. On this occasion it is a matter for nation-wide mourning. But there will be pride, too, in the fact that death was met so bravely, and in the cause of freedom and justice for all mankind.

Grave Warning

IN his war review in the British Parliament on September 21, Prime Minister Churchill reported on the lull in U-boat warfare, but warned that it would be renewed. Indeed, even then, he revealed, a convoy was being attacked.

Recollection of those ominous words strikes the Canadian consciousness with sad and heavy impact today . . . for, in all probability, the destroyer St. Croix was one of the escorting vessels in the convoy to which Mr. Churchill referred.

THE sinking of the St. Croix—"by torpedoes launched from an enemy submarine"—with a loss of 146 lives is Canada's greatest naval tragedy in this war. In the casualty-list are the names of men from every province in the Dominion and from Great Britain, the United States and Newfoundland. But one member of the entire ship's company, his home address a little Alberta community, has survived this grievous and distressing disaster.

The St. Croix was one of the "over-age" destroyers taken over from the United States Navy three years ago, at a time when they were sorely needed and gratefully received.

Originally the McCook, she rated as an "old four-stacker," a type of craft well known to many Canadians in the years between this war and the last, and in which, in happier days, Canadian visitors followed more than one fishing schooner race in American waters.

When fifty of these "old four-stackers" were turned over to the British Empire sea forces in September, 1940, the Canadian Navy received seven of them, and the St. Croix is the first of the seven to go down. Recently, on September 7, there was held in the United States a celebration of the third anniversary of the commissioning of "that strange fleet" . . . and "looking back on three years of ceaseless battle," it was announced at that time that "only six (of the fifty) have been reported lost". But, before she finally disappeared from the face of the waters, the St. Croix had played well her part. She went down "with honors gathered and duty done": she had fought the under-sea raiders and had at least one U-boat to her credit.

THESE "sad and heavy tidings" carry not only intelligence of a great sea tragedy, but a lesson—and a warning. They tell us, in language too plain and urgent to be misunderstood, that we have not seen the last of the submarine menace and that, as the Canadian Navy Minister says, "we must be prepared for other bitter blows".

Despite losses (and the St. Croix is the thirteenth ship of the Canadian Navy to be lost in this war) the naval forces of this Dominion have grown steadily. Moreover, Mr. Macdonald announces, "before the end of this year we hope to add twenty new ships to the Canadian Navy"—ships of the escort type—"and 100 more of the same style and class are either being built or are projected". Additionally, as the Minister revealed on the eve of the recent launching of a new Tribal Class destroyer here, "we propose to add cruisers and perhaps some aircraft-carriers to our fleet".

But, speaking at Hamilton yesterday, the Minister gave this solemn warning to the Canadian people:

> "The battle against the U-boat still continues and it will continue until the war is won. We may drive the enemy out of Sicily and out of North Africa, we may have an end of the fight in this or that theatre of war before the end of the general struggle—before complete and final victory is ours—but the enemy will fight in the Atlantic to the end . . . he can do no other."

The St. Croix and her gallant ship's company have done their part. They have made the Supreme Sacrifice; and there is sorrow and anguish in many Canadian homes this day—but it is

CANADA'S HEAVIEST NAVAL LOSS

Canada mourns today the loss of 146 brave men who went down with H. M. C. S. St. Croix when the destroyer was torpedoed and sunk. One man, a stoker, alone survives to tell the story and disclose the fate that had overtaken a gallant warship and its complement of officers and men. There are homes in every part of Canada—many of them in the Maritime Provinces—to which loved ones will not return. In their grief, the bereaved families have the sympathy of all their fellow Canadians who share in their sorrow, but share also in their pride in men who did not hesitate to risk their lives in the protection of their homes and native land and in the defense of freedom.

War cannot be fought without casualties and the Canadian Navy has borne its share. The St. Croix, one of the destroyers received from the United States and rechristened with the name of the river that forms part of the boundary line between this province and the State of Maine, is the thirteenth Canadian warship to be sunk. Before the war, the Canadian Navy numbered fifteen craft. The losses have almost equalled the size of the pre-war fleet, but Canada has still afloat a much greater navy to carry on the war at sea. The losses have been heavy, but they have not been in vain. The Canadian Navy has established a glorious record of work well done. Our shores have been protected, convoys have been escorted, enemy submarines have been sunk or damaged and the sea lanes have been kept open. The British Admiralty has generously praised the work of our naval men, declaring that without their aid the tasks to be performed would have been greater than the Royal Navy could have accomplished. For every Canadian ship sunk many merchantmen have been saved, and for every man who has gone to his death scores have been saved from a similar fate.

There is good reason for the pride with which the record is regarded, but pride in the achievements of the Canadian Navy will not restore to the broken families the men who have given their lives, nor will it save others from a like fate. The sympathy that is felt can be of value only as it is translated into action. That is being done by a grateful government which cares for the material wants of the bereaved families. Sympathy and appreciation can be shown also by the Canadian people by rededication of their efforts to the task of achieving victory as rapidly as possible in order that casualties may cease.

Nobody can estimate how many additional lives might be sacrificed in one extra day of warfare that might be caused by a slackening of effort on the home front.

A Gallant Ship

Yet another gallant ship of the Royal Canadian Navy has fought its last fight. H.M.C.S. "St. Croix," one of the United States destroyers, transferred to the Royal Navy, and then on to Canada in pre-Pearl Harbor days, has become one of the first victims of the renewed German U-boat campaign.

She was engaged on convoy duty, and report says she came to her end while carrying on the merciful work of rescuing seamen of a Merchant ship which had previously been torpedoed. What was shame to the Nazi aggressor was glory for "St. Croix." She took with her all her crew save one, and the tragedy caused the greatest individual-ship loss of life yet suffered by the R.C.N.

Coming at a time when general opinion believed that the battle with the submarines was going very much our own way, the loss strikes us with all the greater force. There is no continued security for those who go down to the sea in ships to do their business in great waters.

Many of the crew of "St. Croix" were well-known here. They will be sadly missed by more than their own immediate families. Their names and the name of their ship will stand high on the honor roll of brave Canadians who have given their lives to ensure that Canada may live.

Toll For The Brave

H.M.C.S. ST. CROIX was a four-stacker, what the Americans call a four-piper—meaning a destroyer with four funnels. She was one of the fifty "overage" U.S. destroyers which the Americans turned over to Britain and Canada in 1940 in return for a loan of bases in the West Indies. She joined our Navy in the moment of the Empire's direst need. Never had we been so pressed for escort vessels to fight the U-boats. Never was our Navy more grateful for added ships.

They were not the newest type of destroyer, these four-stackers. Nor were they the most comfortable. Their hulls were floating knife edges and, seen sideways-on, the four funnels looked like an uneven row of teeth. But they were well armed with guns against submarines, if not against aircraft, and they could hurl many patterns of depth charges from the Y-gun in the stern. They did a grand job for Canada and the Empire at a time when they were most desperately needed—and most of them are still in service doing a grand job today. The men who sail in them respect them for the fine work which they have enabled our seamen to accomplish.

The loss of H.M.C.S. St. Croix is the loss of a gallant ship with a fine record—but, much more than that, it is the loss of one hundred and forty-six gallant Canadian officers and seamen. Every man aboard, but one, went down when she was literally blown up by a Nazi torpedo. Every man is missing, from the Captain, Lieutenant-Commander Andrew Dobson, of Halifax, down to the last Ordinary Seaman, except one sole survivor, Stoker W. A. Fisher of Alberta. Many men from Manitoba went down with her, such as Lieutenant George B. Wright, of Winnipeg. Surgeon-Lieutenant William Lyon Mackenzie King, the Prime Minister's nephew, is among the lost. Death has struck at humble homes and exalted ones.

The expansion of the "little" Canadian Navy into today's great fighting force has been one of the miracles of the national war effort. When the war broke out the Canadian Navy had thirteen ships, today it has over five hundred. The loss of the St. Croix makes the thirteenth Canadian vessel lost in this war. We have lost as many ships as we had at the outbreak of war.

Very gallantly, four destroyers, six corvettes, two patrol vessels and a minesweeper have gone down in service from war's mishaps such as collision, and from enemy bombs or torpedoes. The sinking of the St. Croix, with one hundred and forty-six missing, has brought the Canadian Navy's most grievous loss in men, even greater than the toll when the destroyer Margaree was cut in two. She is the first of our four-stackers to be struck down, though some of the British-manned ones are gone.

Right across the Dominion today are families mourning lost sons and brothers, men who lived in a great tradition and died in a great tradition:

"Toll for the brave,
The brave that are no more."

Toll For The Brave

H.M.C.S. ST. CROIX was a four-stacker, what the Americans call a four-piper—meaning a destroyer with four funnels. She was one of the fifty "overage" U.S. destroyers which the Americans turned over to Britain and Canada in 1940 in return for a loan of bases in the West Indies. She joined our Navy in the moment of the Empire's direst need. Never had we been so pressed for escort vessels to fight the U-boats. Never was our Navy more grateful for added ships.

They were not the newest type of destroyer, these four-stackers. Nor were they the most comfortable. Their hulls were floating knife edges and, seen sideways-on, the four funnels looked like an uneven row of teeth. But they were well armed with guns against submarines, if not against aircraft, and they could hurl many patterns of depth charges from the Y-gun in the stern. They did a grand job for Canada and the Empire at a time when they were most desperately needed—and most of them are still in service doing a grand job today. The men who sail in them respect them for the fine work which they have enabled our seamen to accomplish.

The loss of H.M.C.S. St. Croix is the loss of a gallant ship with a fine record—but, much more than that, it is the loss of one hundred and forty-six gallant Canadian officers and seamen. Every man aboard, but one, went down when she was literally blown up by a Nazi torpedo. Every man is missing, from the Captain, Lieutenant-Commander Andrew Dobson, of Halifax, down to the last Ordinary Seaman, except one sole survivor, Stoker W. A. Fisher of Alberta. Many men from Manitoba went down with her, such as Lieutenant George B. Wright, of Winnipeg. Surgeon-Lieutenant William Lyon Mackenzie King, the Prime Minister's nephew, is among the lost. Death has struck at humble homes and exalted ones.

The expansion of the "little" Canadian Navy into today's great fighting force has been one of the miracles of the national war effort. When the war broke out the Canadian Navy had thirteen ships, today it has over five hundred. The loss of the St. Croix makes the thirteenth Canadian vessel lost in this war. We have lost as many ships as we had at the outbreak of war.

Canadian Navy Sustains a Very Severe Loss

Loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix with 146 seamen is a sore blow to the Royal Canadian Navy. It is, unfortunately, the price of freedom of the seas and that price is not yet fully paid. The navy knows that, but many civilians have little comprehension of the gigantic task so well undertaken by Canada's ships and sailors.

Canada's navy is today responsible for keeping the Atlantic sea lanes open for at least a third of the distance to Britain. While the navy has been many times increased from its post-war establishment, the task is still a staggering one. It demands days and nights of unending vigilance, of endurance sometimes almost beyond human limits, of superb seamanship and fighting skill. All these the navy shows it possesses in abundance, though it says nothing in its own behalf.

Regrettable as the loss of these gallant men is, it may arouse some lethargic Canadians from their calm acceptance of others' sacrifices. Every minute of every day, year in and year out, young Canadians by land, sea and air, are risking their lives for their country. They know the price that must be paid. They are prepared to pay it. It is to be hoped that more and more Canadian civilians will come to share their indomnitable courage.

Very Near To Canada

AN EDITORIAL

LET us not delude ourselves with any ideas about the "remoteness" of this war.

This war is as near to us as tide-water.

Once the seas were barriers between continents and to hostilities. In this war the seas do not divide, they connect: they are highways along and across which war may beat upon any shore.

¶ ¶ ¶ ¶

LESS than two weeks ago it was announced by the Canadian Naval Department that—

> "Enemy submarines mined the approaches to Halifax Harbor in early June, in an arc intended to close the port to shipping.

And that at a time when people were saying the Battle of the Atlantic was "won" — when we were growing confident and complacent about it!

Now, in the news accompanying the announcement of the tragic loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, with all but one of her ship's company, this statement appears:

> "The battle . . . continued almost until the last ship of the convoy had passed through the submarine nets into the haven of this harbor a few days ago."

It is information of this kind that should be given to the Canadian people lest they reach wholly erroneous conclusions about war and its "remoteness".

SIMPLY because no bombs or shells are falling upon Canadian territory is no warrant for believing that hostilities are remote from these shores. They are not remote from these shores: they are very near to these shores.

As men who have been through battle will tell you, it is possible to be amid "peace and quiet" in one part of a city, on one part of a front, while fighting is raging within rifle-shot in some other part.

It is the same in this case. Just out there "beyond our skyline"—yes; even inside our skyline—the enemy may be lurking . . . and striking.

He has been lurking — and striking—out there far oftener than our own people realize. And the news that has been coming to us during the past fortnight should bring us to a realization of the grim and challenging facts.

Loss of the St. Croix

The loss of a gallant ship is always a tragedy, even when its crew is saved. The loss of the Canadian destroyer the St. Croix is a double tragedy because all but one of her crew were lost with her. This is one of the worst blows that has befallen the Canadian Navy since the war began.

So far, there are few details of the action in which the destroyer was lost. When these details become available, Canadians no doubt will hear a story of great courage and great sacrifice in the common cause.

Almost every part of the country will share in the grief at the loss of this ship's company. There was a man from Saskatoon on board and several others from northern Saskatchewan. And so it will be across the country.

The Star-Phoenix extends to those who had relatives aboard the St. Croix its deepest sympathy. Pride will mingle with grief in the knowledge that men lost were serving in one of the most vital theatres of the present war.

60 St. Croix Men Spent Night On Whaleboat

Lost Two Days Later When Rescue Ship Sunk

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—(CP)—The Daily Star today published under a New York dateline a copyrighted interview with William Allen Fisher, 23, of Black Diamond, Alta., only survivor of the 147-man crew of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, sunk in the Atlantic recently during a 10-day running battle with German submarines.

Fisher said 60 members of the St. Croix crew spent a night in a whaleboat before their rescue by the British frigate Itchen, which was sunk September 22, two days after the rescue.

A rowboat carrying other survivors sank when men on floats "insisted" on getting into it. The whaleboat picked up 10 men from the British corvette Polyanthus which was sunk just before the rescue.

When the Itchen was torpedoed, Fisher leaped over the side and "As I hit the water there was another explosion and I felt that my stomach was being squeezed through my ears". He spent a night on a raft and was picked up the next day along with two members of the Itchen crew.

He is leaving the British naval receiving station at Brooklyn tomorrow for a 30-day leave which he will spend at home with his wife.

3 Torpedoes Hit St. Croix, Says Single Survivor

NEW YORK, Oct. 7—(C.P.)—The torpedoing of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix in the renewed Battle of the Atlantic with the loss of 146 of her crew was described today by the sole survivor—William A. Fischer, 23-year-old sailor from Black Diamond, Alta.

Three torpedoes ripped into the four-funnelled warship on Sept. 20, the last one causing an explosion that shot smoke and flame more than 200 feet into the sky and sent the St. Croix to the bottom, Fisher told reporters.

Escaped Two Sinkings.

The young Albertan himself escaped that sinking and the torpedoing two days later of the British frigate Itchen as warships fought a wolf pack of U-boats attacking a convoy. He suffered only a cut on one leg and a broken wrist-watch.

Fisher, recently married, hopes shortly to get a 30-day leave to spend at home.

Loss of the St. Croix was announced in Ottawa last week by the Canadian navy minister, Hon. Angus Macdonald. The British corvette Polyanthus and the Itchen were torpedoed and sunk during the same engagement.

The submarines also sank six or more merchant ships in a convoy, it was indicated by naval announcements and the accounts of torpedoed merchant seamen brought to an east coast Canadian port.

Not With Convoy.

The St. Croix, the Itchen and the Polyanthus were not with the convoy when the attack started. They steamed to the scene under forced draft as soon as they learned of the battle and fought an inconclusive engagement with U-boats during the daylight hours of Sept. 20. This took place about 50 miles from the location of the convoy itself.

Then an airplane advised the warships that there was a disabled submarine on the surface a short distance away. The St. Croix obtained permission from the commanding officer of the striking force to go after this U-boat. Just at dusk she plowed down to attack. At 7.55 p.m. the first torpedo struck the St. Croix in the propellers. A moment later a second torpedo struck amidships, and, as Fisher said: "We stopped, but fast."

"I was going down to the mess deck when the first torpedo hit," he said. "I had to run under the galley gun deck to avoid getting hit by a lot of stuff that was falling.

"Then the order to abandon ship came. I got into the motorboat and helped load quite a few of the injured into it, too. I think six or seven were killed when the first torpedo hit. A few of the boys jumped over the side. We lowered the motorboat and went around picking up some of them.

"As we did this, a third torpedo hit the St. Croix, and there was a big explosion, flames and smoke shooting 200 feet into the air. A short time later the Itchen came up. We went over beside her and they lowered their whale boat."

Bailed Water All Night.

However, some holes were punched in the whale boat as it was being lowered. Fisher and the captain got into the whaler with some other men and bailed all night. Next morning they were picked up by the Itchen.

"As we were going aboard, a torpedo passed 30 feet behind the Itchen," said Fisher. "Then we heard that the motorboat which we had left had picked up so many survivors that it sank and quite a few of the injured were drowned. There were 76 men and five officers off the St. Croix picked up by the Itchen."

The Itchen's turn came 36 hours later.

"My chum and I were standing beside the funnel when a submarine surfaced, ran across our bow and threw a torpedo at us," Fisher continued. "I was thrown about 30 feet by the explosion. I picked myself up, called to my chum and got no answer. So I dived over the side.

"I swam 15 or 20 feet when there was a terrific explosion and the Itchen disappeared. I floated around until a chap gave me a cork float and that helped me up for several hours until a Polish ship in the convoy stopped and picked me up."

Asked what it felt like to lose all his shipmates so suddenly, Fisher said: "The fellows were just like brothers to me. I sailed with them for 14 months and to lose them like that was really a blow."

Torpedoed Twice Within 50 Hours

Vivid Story By Lone Survivor of the St. Croix

NEW YORK, Oct. 7. — (BUP) — The lone survivor of the sinking of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, First Class Stoker William Allan Fisher of Black Diamond, Alta., told a vivid story here today of being torpedoed twice within 50 hours. He was landed in a New Jersey port by a Polish merchantman which picked him up.

The St. Croix was sunk at 8 p.m. on Sept. 20, after going to the aid of a convoy being attacked in the North Atlantic. Fisher was the only man of a crew of 147 to survive.

No Panic on St. Croix.

Fisher said he was on his way down the hatch to the engine room when the first torpedo hit his ship. He said:

"There wasn't a bit of panic on the St. Croix. We didn't even realize where we were hit. The fellows in the engine room didn't figure we were hit at all. We had to go down to tell them before they knew about it.

"We were hit three times, the first two torpedoes hitting aft and the third hit the number two boiler. The ship was pretty far gone by then.

"When the third one hit, the flames went about 200 feet in the air—probably caused by the boilers blowing up.

"We had cut down to about 18 knots when we got it. My ship went down about 45 minutes after the first hit."

Five officers and 76 men of the St. Croix were picked up the following day by the British frigate Itchen, which was also sunk by a U-boat pack at 10 p.m. on Sept. 22, with only three survivors, Fisher and two others, Ordnance Mechanic 4th Class William Clark, of Glasgow, Scotland, and Able-Seaman Peter Flood, of Liverpool, England.

Fisher, in describing the Itchen action, said:

"The Itchen was the worst of the two torpedoings. I was thrown about 30 feet and hit a gun base. I don't remember travelling through the air, but that's what I figure happened. I called for my chum and got no answer from him. I came to pretty quick and heard water coming in.

"As soon as I hit the water, there was another explosion. I can't figure out what happened to the others. I can't remember seeing more than three or four chaps in the water."

Peter Flood said that he heard about nine voices when he was in the water, but that he could not see anyone.

The entire 10-day running battle, beginning on Sept. 19, was shrouded in fog, but the survivors of the Itchen said that their ship must have sunk one U-boat, which they saw partly submerged.

Fisher described the action, saying:

"We know we got one sub which was partly surfaced. We used depth charges. We saw a lot of oil afterwards. So we're pretty sure we got it."

Clark said: "We seemed to be running into one pack after another".

The three survivors believe that the great loss of life can be attributed to the effect of depth charges upon men in the water. "The depth charges", Flood said, "caused so much pressure on our lungs that we were spitting blood for about three days after the Itchen was sunk. In fact, Clark was out cold when we were finally picked up."

A Polish merchantman, which was at first in the front line of the convoy but which had circled around in search for survivors, picked up three men.

"We were hit three times, the first two torpedoes hitting aft and the third hit the number two boiler. The ship was pretty far gone by then.

"When the third one hit, the flames went about 200 feet in the air—probably caused by the boilers blowing up.

"We had cut down to about 18 knots when we got it. My ship went down about 45 minutes after the first hit."

Five officers and 76 men of the St. Croix were picked up the following day by the British frigate Itchen, which was also sunk by a U-boat pack at 10 p.m. on Sept. 22, with only three survivors, Fisher and two others, Ordnance Mechanic 4th Class William Clark, of Glasgow, Scotland, and Able-Seaman Peter Flood, of Liverpool, England.

Fisher, in describing the Itchen action, said:

"The Itchen was the worst of the two torpedoings. I was thrown about 30 feet and hit a gun base. I don't remember travelling through the air, but that's what I figure happened. I called for my chum and got no answer from him. I came to pretty quick and heard water coming in.

"As soon as I hit the water, there was another explosion. I can't figure out what happened to the others. I can't remember seeing more than three or four chaps in the water."

Peter Flood said that he heard about nine voices when he was in the water, but that he could not see anyone.

The entire 10-day running battle, beginning on Sept. 19, was shrouded in fog, but the survivors of the Itchen said that their ship must have sunk one U-boat, which they saw partly submerged.

Fisher described the action, saying:

"We know we got one sub which was partly surfaced. We used depth charges. We saw a lot of oil afterwards. So we're pretty sure we got it."

Clark said: "We seemed to be running into one pack after another".

The three survivors believe that the great loss of life can be attributed to the effect of depth charges upon men in the water. "The depth charges", Flood said, "caused so much pressure on our lungs that we were spitting blood for about three days after the Itchen was sunk. In fact, Clark was out cold when we were finally picked up."

A Polish merchantman, which was at first in the front line of the convoy but which had circled around in search for survivors, picked up three men.

New York, Oct. 7—The sole survivor of a torpedo attack in the Atlantic which claimed the lives of 146 Canadian seamen in the sinking of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix during a 10-day running fight with a pack of enemy U-boats, told his story today. He is William Allan Fisher, 23, former Turner Valley, Alberta, oil driller.

Able Seaman Fisher told his story from a British naval receiving station in Brooklyn. He was brought there in a merchant ship which rescued him after his first rescue ship was sent to the bottom. Fisher is waiting a 30-day-day leave which will take him back to his 20-year-old wife, Marie Louise, in Black Diamond, Alberta. His left foot was hurt during the sea battle.

THOUGHT OF MY WIFE

And what does a man think about when he sees all his mates either dead or drowning? "I thought of my wife. She's a pretty girl. I could still see her picture while everything else went blank," he said.

"We were part of an escort detailed to a large convoy," Fisher related. "We received a signal that submarines were about. We stayed astern of the convoy, but on Sept. 20 we had to come up and take on oil from a tanker in the convoy. On our way back to our position we saw a Canadian four-motored Liberator signalling us. We were told that they had spotted a submarine and dropped depth charges.

"We 'flashed' two boilers and made for the spot at 24 knots. As we neared, we had to reduce speed. As we slowed up we were hit in the screws."

Was No Panic

Fisher said there was no panic and no one thought of abandoning ship.

"But in two minutes another torpedo struck, this time near the [illegible] and water began to pour in," he went on. "The captain, Lieut.-Commander Dobson, then issued orders to abandon ship." That was just before 8 o'clock and dusk was gathering and a slight wind blew, even though the sea was calm.

Some men were injured by the explosions which followed the torpedoes, some were burned and cut. They were put in the motor launch before it was lowered over the side. The motor boat pulled away. Meanwhile attempts were made to lower a 50-passenger oar-driven "whaler." Two attempts resulted in two large holes being gouged into the bottom of the whaler. Carley floats were dumped over the side and the men began jumping into the water.

"No one seemed worried then," Fisher related. "Many of the crew laughed that they would be due for 29 days survivors' leave."

The rowboat pulled away from the sinking destroyer, and picked men out of the water.

"Even then I thought the ship would be saved," Fisher said. "Then I saw the captain dive off the boat. I knew every one was off then and that the captain had given up hope."

As Lieut. Commander Dobson headed for the motor boat, he saw two men struggling in the water.

He towed them to Carley floats and then made for the row boat. Fisher was in charge of the motor boat.

"Bailed All Night"

"The captain asked for volunteers to help bail water from the whaler so that men could stay in it," Fisher related. "I bailed all night. We had to or else we would have sunk."

While Fisher and his mates bailed water, the captain and his row boat crew continued picking up men, transferring the injured from the Carley floats to the boat and lashing the floats together so they would not become separated

"No one in the boats died during the night," the survivor went on. "It was toward morning that everything happened. Men on the Carley floats insisted on getting into the rowboat. As the men got in it settled lower in the water. Just before the rescue ship came along, it sank.

"The whaler did not have any injured men aboard. They were oil-grimed and cold. I saw men who were tough, big men. They hung out all night in the hope a boat would pick them up. Then when the boat did come into view they died. I guess they couldn't hang out any longer. We dropped them into the sea."

Sixty men were still alive on the whaler. The ship which headed to their rescue was the Royal Navy frigate Itchen, completed last September. As the frigate steamed through the lifting morning mist, the men in the whaler received the signal that the Itchen would come directly to their rescue. As the Itchen neared, a torpedo was seen to explode 30 yards to her stern. A message was flashed to the Polyanthus, a corvette of the Flower class, to come out of the convoy escort and circle the Itchen while the men were taken aboard.

Sank in 10 Minutes

"The Polyanthus was just coming in and she was struck," Fisher said. "I guess she went down in about 10 minutes. We rescued 10 men in our whaler. By this time the Itchen had lowered some motor boats. I was the first one taken off the whaler. They treated us fine. Let us eat the officers' food and sleep in their salon."

Three men died after being taken aboard the rescue ship

"The Itchen headed for the convoy," Fisher went on. "Some of us were given jobs to do. I did watch. On Sept. 22, two days after we were rescued, we were ordered to our action stations bcause sub-marines were around. We had three orders. The first started at 6 at night. There was another one at 7 and again at 9 At 9 o'clock I was standing beside the funnel when a torpedo struck.

"I was knocked 30 feet and landed against a gun platform. As I crawled toward the rail I kept yelling for my pal Stoker Rod MacKenzie, of Sydney. MacKenzie had been torpedoed six times before. He didn't answer and I jumped over the side. As I hit the water there was another explosion and I felt that my stomach was being squeezed through my ears."

"The water just cracked," said Fisher. When he reached down to tug off his boots, his left boot was missing. It had been blown off.

Fisher grabbed a board and looked to see other men jumping from the ship. Most of them drowned. A Carley float drifted by and Fisher jumped on. During the night others jumped on, but most of them died.

King "Swell Fellow"

Surgeon-Lieut. Mackenzie King, nephew of Canada's prime minister, went down with the Itchen. He was on his way to the ship's sick bay when the first torpedo struck. Some men saw him later but it is believed he fell into the water when that section containing the sick bay was hit by a second torpedo.

"He was a swell fellow and everybody liked him; he was really one of the men," Fisher said.

At least one enemy U-boat was sunk by the Itchen. During the first night, after picking up the St. Croix survivors, a submarine was detected. Searchlights picked out the submarine as it crossed the bow of the Itchen. A shell from the forward gun sent the sub gurgling to the bottom.

The Itchen, heading the convoy at the time it was attacked, sank as merchant ships in the convoy continued steaming by. One ship broke position and picked up the survivors.

"There were only three of us on the raft in the morning . . . only three from three ships," Fisher related. "We were cold and tired. I was out of my mind. The crew gave us rum, and that helped. I was put to bed and slept for more than a day.

"On the second day there was another alert. The U-boats were still chasing us. I was told to go to my station. I'm not ashamed. I cried and said I wouldn't go. The captain understood. He sent me back to bed."

Fisher is leaving the base tomorrow. He is going home for a rest.

Torpedoed Twice Within 50 Hours

Vivid Story By Lone Survivor of the St. Croix

NEW YORK, Oct. 7. — (BUP) — The lone survivor of the sinking of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, First Class Stoker William Allan Fisher of Black Diamond, Alta., told a vivid story here today of being torpedoed twice within 50 hours. He was landed in a New Jersey port by a Polish merchantman which picked him up.

The St. Croix was sunk at 8 p.m. on Sept. 20, after going to the aid of a convoy being attacked in the North Atlantic. Fisher was the only man of a crew of 147 to survive.

No Panic on St. Croix.

Fisher said he was on his way down the hatch to the engine room when the first torpedo hit his ship. He said:

"There wasn't a bit of panic on the St. Croix. We didn't even realize where we were hit. The fellows in the engine room didn't figure we were hit at all. We had to go down to tell them before they knew about it.

"We were hit three times, the first two torpedoes hitting aft and the third hit the number two boiler. The ship was pretty far gone by then.

"When the third one hit, the flames went about 200 feet in the air—probably caused by the boilers blowing up.

"We had cut down to about 18 knots when we got it. My ship went down abouf 45 minutes after the first hit."

Five officers and 76 men of the St. Croix were picked up the following day by the British frigate Itchen, which was also sunk by a U-boat pack at 10 p.m. on Sept. 22, with only three survivors, Fisher and two others, Ordnance Mechanic 4th Class William Clark, of Glasgow, Scotland, and Able-Seaman Peter Flood, of Liverpool, England.

Fisher, in describing the Itchen action, said:

"The Itchen was the worst of the two torpedoings. I was thrown about 30 feet and hit a gun base. I don't remember travelling through the air, but that's what I figure happened. I called for my chum and got no answer from him. I came to pretty quick and heard water coming in.

"As soon as I hit the water, there was another explosion. I can't figure out what happened to the others. I can't remember seeing more than three or four chaps in the water."

Peter Flood said that he heard about nine voices when he was in the water, but that he could not see anyone.

The entire 10-day running battle, beginning on Sept. 19, was shrouded in fog, but the survivors of the Itchen said that their ship must have sunk one U-boat, which they saw partly submerged.

Fisher described the action, saying:

"We know we got one sub which was partly surfaced. We used depth charges. We saw a lot of oil afterwards. So we're pretty sure we got it."

Clark said: "We seemed to be running into one pack after another".

The three survivors believe that the great loss of life can be attributed to the effect of depth charges upon men in the water. "The depth charges", Flood said, "caused so much pressure on our lungs that we were spitting blood for about three days after the Itchen was sunk. In fact, Clark was out cold when we were finally picked up."

A Polish merchantman, which was at first in the front line of the convoy but which had circled around in search for survivors, picked up three men.

Fisher said he was on his way down the hatch to the engine room when the first torpedo hit his ship. He said:

"There wasn't a bit of panic on the St. Croix. We didn't even realize where we were hit. The fellows in the engine room didn't figure we were hit at all. We had to go down to tell them before they knew about it.

"We were hit three times, the first two torpedoes hitting aft and the third hit the number two boiler. The ship was pretty far gone by then.

"When the third one hit, the flames went about 200 feet in the air—probably caused by the boilers blowing up.

"We had cut down to about 18 knots when we got it. My ship went down about 45 minutes after the first hit."

Five officers and 76 men of the St. Croix were picked up the following day by the British frigate Itchen, which was also sunk by a U-boat pack at 10 p.m. on Sept. 22, with only three survivors, Fisher and two others, Ordnance Mechanic 4th Class William Clark, of Glasgow, Scotland, and Able-Seaman Peter Flood, of Liverpool, England.

Fisher, in describing the Itchen action, said:

"The Itchen was the worst of the two torpedoings. I was thrown about 30 feet and hit a gun base. I don't remember travelling through the air, but that's what I figure happened. I called for my chum and got no answer from him. I came to pretty quick and heard water coming in.

"As soon as I hit the water, there was another explosion. I can't figure out what happened to the others. I can't remember seeing more than three or four chaps in the water."

Peter Flood said that he heard about nine voices when he was in the water, but that he could not see anyone.

The entire 10-day running battle, beginning on Sept. 19, was shrouded in fog, but the survivors of the Itchen said that their ship must have sunk one U-boat, which they saw partly submerged.

Fisher described the action, saying:

"We know we got one sub which was partly surfaced. We used depth charges. We saw a lot of oil afterwards. So we're pretty sure we got it."

Clark said: "We seemed to be running into one pack after another".

The three survivors believe that the great loss of life can be attributed to the effect of depth charges upon men in the water. "The depth charges", Flood said, "caused so much pressure on our lungs that we were spitting blood for about three days after the Itchen was sunk. In fact, Clark was out cold when we were finally picked up."

A Polish merchantman, which was at first in the front line of the convoy but which had circled around in search for survivors, picked up three men.

SURVIVOR TO TELL PREMIER HOW HERO-NEPHEW PERISHED

Able-Seaman Fisher to Meet Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King

ST. CROIX ECHO

Special to The Star

Mon[illegible]al, Oct. 12—From the man who saw him last, Prime Minister Mackenzie King will hear how his nephew and namesake, a surgeon-lieutenant on the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, died. The story will be told in Ottawa Wednesday when Able Seaman Bill Fisher, the sole survivor of the sinking, arrives on his way to Black Diamond, Alta., for a reunion with his wife.

Fisher, a rangy lad from Alberta's oil fields, was aboard the St. Croix when the first torpedo struck in the north Atlantic last Sept. 20. He was one of the survivors of the St. Croix picked up by the Itchen, a British frigate, and the only St. Croix crewman who survived when the Itchen was torpedoed.

Earlier, Fisher related how Surgeon Lieut. King, after the first torpedo ripped into the Itchen—a blast that sent Fisher 30 feet across the deck—started for the ship's sick bay to assist injured survivors.

"He must have walked down the galley and near the sick bay when the second torpedo hit," Fisher related. "He could have got off the ship if he hadn't started for the sick bay." Fisher described Surgeon-Lieutenant King as "a swell guy", who was held in high regard by his shipmates.

Able Seaman Fisher recalled how the Canadian seamen remained cool when death loomed. "They didn't have to be ordered to stay to their jobs," he said. "They just stayed there until orders came for them to abandon ship. I saw sailors with complete disregard for the safety of their own skins drag the wounded along the deck to a spot where they could be placed on Carley floats."

Lieut.-Commander Dobson, last man to leave the ship, towed two drowning seamen to Carley floats as he left the ship, Fisher related. "After putting these men on the floats, he swam to the motorboat," he said. "His behavior was typical of that of every seaman."

Lone Survivor Of St. Croix Arrives To Meet Mr. King

"I've never been asked so many questions in my life", said Stoker Bill Fisher, of Black Diamond, Alta., 23-year-old survivor of the torpedoed Canadian destroyer St. Croix, on his arrival at Union Station from Montreal last night. He will remain in Ottawa today to meet Prime Minister King before continuing his journey to his western home.

Tired from the ordeal during the sinking of the St. Croix and the rescue ship H.M.S. Itchen, on which he was a passenger for 36 hours, and a full day spent in giving interviews to the press, Bill declined to comment further on his experiences as he stepped off the train.

Co-incidental with the meeting of Fisher and the Prime Minister, Mr. King's nephew and namesake, Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, lost his life in the sinking of the St. Croix.

Fisher's last public appearance Tuesday was at a Victory Loan luncheon in Montreal at which Navy Minister Macdonald delivered the main address. The sailor will join his wife in the West shortly and start a 30-day leave.

In Montreal Fisher spent a busy day being interviewed and photographed, spoke at a Victory Loan luncheon and made an appearance at a Victory Loan rally at City Hall.

A Lesson of the St. Croix

By J. F. B. LIVESAY.

THE loss of the St. Croix again calls attention to the ceaseless struggle between the offensive and the defensive for supremacy in naval warfare, ever since the Roman triremes took the measure of the Carthaginian galleys.

That warfare has been waged down the centuries to the time when Drake's lighter and quicker manoeuvring warships were thereby able to concentrate a greater fire-power on the vitals of the great clumsy Spanish galleons; to that later day when the more rapid and accurate fire of Nelson's speedy 70-gun ships-of-the-line destroyed the 100-gun enemy leviathans; and to that modern years, 1905, when Jack Fisher, by launching his first Dreadnought, outmoded all the world's capital ships, particularly those the Kaiser was so feverishly building.

As offensive power grew, so defensive armor toughened and thickened, until today the capital ships of both Britain and America have proved their abilities to trade more than even blows with the best the enemy can produce — superior in gunfire, speed and defensive armor.

The new German submarines, now equipped for surface battle, in addition to their superior secondary armor, capable of holding at a distance our attacking bombers, seem to be armed also with a gun of sufficient power to make it more than an equal fight with our corvettes and able, on occasion, to stand up to the older type of destroyer.

For although the St. Croix was sunk by a torpedo, it is clear enough that it was only the enemy's confidence in his offensive surface power, driven by speed superior to that of the convoy, that enabled the submarine to pack the track and harrass the convoy through 10 days of Arctic weather, relatively secure—as compared with the older U-boats—from the bomber of the sky and our racing surface escort. At the vital moment, the pack was there for the kill, and the St. Croix was a victim.

The St. Croix herself was far more vulnerable than modern destroyers are likely to prove. For she was one of the U.S.N. four-stackers, laid down during and immediately after the last war, and turned over to Britain two years ago at a grave and critical moment in the Battle of the Atlantic. Who knows but what their contribution represented the margin of victory over defeat in the struggle for the command of the North Atlantic?

But they are flimsily built—"sardine cans," our men of an Eastern Canadian port derisively called them—and it must be recognized that they are now definitely outmoded and, as modern replacements become increasingly available, their function is the guarding of ports and estuaries rather than on the battlefront of the high seas.

In this historic struggle the corvettes for a time appeared a satisfactory answer to the submersible, but if, as we surmise, this is now equipped with a heavy piece, the corvette itself is outmoded, until it also is equipped with a still heavier gun, both in range and weight of metal. And that means a bigger platform and larger tonnage.

Time will show.

Farewell, brave sons of Canada! Our tears
Break through the ramparts of our righteous pride.
We mourn your gift of precious unlived years—
The flaming hopes that perished when you died.
Farewell, brave sons of Canada! You laid
Your all on freedom's altar that mankind
Might forge ahead, inspired and unafraid,
With man to rights of man no longer blind.

On every wind that sweeps the tumbling waves
The voice of death is echoed far and wide,
And gallant men drift down to lonely graves
To know no more the pulse of time and tide.
Farewell, brave sons of Canada! Your loss
Is glory to our crown—weight to our cross.

ENSIGN FROM LOST DESTROYER—Displayed in Vancouver for the first time, a torn but glorious ensign from the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, sunk by enemy action in the Atlantic recently, was one of the features of a Victory Loan rally held by Canadian National Railways system employees. The ensign was brought home by Signalman Gordon DesBrisay, son of Dr. H. A. DesBrisay, Vancouver, while on furlough a few weeks before he went down with his ship. Holding the flag in this picture are, left to right, J. Davidson, machinist, Port Mann shops, who spoke on behalf of labor at the C.N.R. rally; W. T. Moodie, general superintendent; W. R. Devenish, vice-president and general manager, Winnipeg, and W. C. Mainwaring, executive committee National War Finance Committee, principal speaker at the meeting, attended by 700 National system employees.

ST. CROIX TO SAIL AGAIN!

Kootenays Combine Quotas To Replace Lost Destroyer

Victory Loan campaign in the Kootenays will be given a definite impetus during the final week of the campaign by a dramatic decision of the three units there—Nelson, Trail and East Kootenays — to combine their general public quotas and to put this combined quota over the top for the purpose of replacing the Canadian destroyer St. Croix.

"The St. Croix will sail again!" is the Kootenays slogan.

The destroyer was torpedoed in the North Atlantic last September with the loss of 146 men. There was only one survivor.

The combined public quota of the Kootenays—$2,725,000—is approximately the cost of a new destroyer.

The campaign will be supported by special events, including a speaking tour by Lt. Eric Johnson, R.C.N.V.R., who enlisted at Dawson in May, 1941, for active service after several years with the R.C.N.V.R., and was almost immediately loaned to the British Navy. He has seen much action in the Shetland patrol and in the Mediterranean, but has escaped so far without a scratch. He is home on furlough.

DISPLAY ENSIGN.

A weather-beaten ensign from the St. Croix will be displayed during the Kootenay campaign by courtesy of Dr. H. A. DesBrisay of Vancouver, whose son, Signalman Gordon DesBrisay, brought the ensign here a few weeks before he was lost on the St. Croix.

Great enthusiasm has been aroused in the district affected, which includes Rossland, Trail, Nelson, Kaslo, Kimberley, Cranbrook and the smaller towns nearby.

Rear-Admiral V. G. Brodeur, R.C.N., commanding officer Pacific Coast, sent the following message to the Trail unit (and messages of a similar nature to each of the other two units):

NAVY CHEERED.

"No member of the Canadian Naval Service can fail to be cheered and uplifted by the news that an effort to 'replace the St. Croix' will be undertaken by the united people of the Kootenays during the final week of the fifth Victory Loan. Your enterprise lends realism to the basic purpose of the drive—to keep our fighting men supplied with all the weapons they need to seek out the enemy and destroy him. You are honoring the memory of a great and gallant warship and the 146 brave men who died with her. May all good fortune bless your campaign."

The lone survivor is Stoker William A. Fisher, who was born in Victoria and who survived the torpedoing of the St. Croix and the British frigate Itchen, which had picked up many of the men from the St. Croix who died when the Itchen was also subsequently sunk by a U-boat pack which torpedoed 10 vessels in 10 days, these ships belonging to two Canada-bound convoys. Seventeen men of the St. Croix were British Columbians. The St. Croix was picking up survivors from four freighters when she was sunk.

NAVAL MEN HONOR CREW OF ST. CROIX

Impressive Service Held at Notre Dame Church — Wreath Is Cast on Water

A naval farewell to those who went down on H.M.C.S. St. Croix was enacted yesterday afternoon when Capt. J. E. W. Oland dropped a wreath on the waters of the St. Lawrence in mid-stream and watched it drift slowly away.

The little drama of the Silent Service was witnessed by hundreds of sailors in port as all those on ships in dock were piped to the various quarterdecks to participate from a distance. Standing with bared heads the navy lads said a silent good-by to former shipmates as the ship bearing the wreath slid out of Victoria Basin into the St. Lawrence River.

A short religious service on board preceded the dropping overboard of the wreath.

In the morning an impressive tribute to the men of the St. Croix was paid in Notre Dame Church where Father H. Boudreau, Roman Catholic naval chaplain, sang a Requiem Mass. A flag draped bier stood surrounded by tall candles in the centre of the church while a naval bugler O/S. Maurice Gervais, sounded the Last Post at the conclusion of the service. The ceremony was largely attended as representatives of all branches of the armed forces, government officials and families and friends of the lost crew gathered to pay their respects.

Fr. Boudreau compared the St. Croix to the Holy Cross as a symbol of pain and death and offered comfort to relatives by recalling the heroism of a gallant ship's company who gave their lives in action.

Capt. J. E. W. Oland, D.S.C., R.C.N., naval officer in charge, Port of Montreal, represented Vice-Admiral P. W. Nelles, C.B., R.C.N., Chief of Naval Staff. Cmdr. M. R. Campbell, officer commanding H.M.C.S. Donnacona and Cartier, represented Naval Minister Angus L. MacDonald. Senator Thomas Vien represented Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Seated in the sanctuary were Father J. E. Moreau, Hon. Capt. A. Raymond, Hon. Capt. A. Lefebvre, Hon. Capt. Reeves Gravel, Father P. Joseph Belanger, Arthur Dubeau, cure, Father Georges Hamel, Flt.-Lt. G. J. Fitzgerald, Flt.-Lt. J. A. Trottier, Flt.-Lt. J. H. Minard and Hon. Capt. G. E. Lacasse.

Present during the services were Maj.-Gen. L. R. Lafleche, Maj.-Gen. E. J. Renaud, accompanied by Capt. J. Langevin and Lt. P. Dansereau, Col. Paul Grenier, Paul E. Parent, director of public relations, R.C.A.F. The 2nd Battalion, Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal, sent an official delegation of officers including Maj. F. Coupal, Capt. Leo Thibault, Capt. A. L. Bataille, Lt. R. Gravel, Lt. R. J. Giroux, Lt. R. Merrill, Capt. R. Larue, Lt. J. Larue and Hon. Lt.-Col. R. Gauvreau.

Mucking Contest Feature Of Porcupine Celebration

(Special Despatch to The Globe.)

Timmins, May 30.—J. Maki, employee of the McIntyre Mines, walked off with honors in the first section of the mine mucking contest, a feature of the fair celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the discovery of the Porcupine gold mines held this week. Contestants and their times were: J. Maki, 15 minutes 22 seconds; C. Laurin, 16 minutes 9 seconds; O. Limberg, 21 minutes 27 seconds; J. Potillos, 21 minutes 40 seconds; Dan Burns, 22 minutes 47 seconds; W. Legace, 23 minutes 45 seconds. The contest consists of mucking ore from one box to another. The second section of the contest will be run off next Monday night. Prizes of $25 $15 and $10 will be awarded the winners.

Sir John Simcoe's Grandson To Be Honored at Simcoe

(Special Despatch to The Globe.)

Simcoe, May 30.—A visit from Wiloughby P. Cole of Southampton, England, grandson of Sir John Graves Simcoe, after whom this town was named, was announced for next week by officers of the Norfolk Historical Society. Mr. Cole, who is now visiting in Canada, will be here on June 8 and 9 next, as guest of the society. According to legnad, Governor Simcoe passed through this district frequently at one time camping in Tynnwood Park under a tree which has since borne his name.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

Timmins, May 30 — (Special.) — Probably the first couple in the Porcupine camp to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gloster, Timmins, marked the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage this week. They were recipients of a purse of gold from their children and numerous other gifts and congratulatory messages from friends. Both are 70 years of age and enjoying good health. They have three sons, six daughters, thirty-four grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. Natives of England, they came to Timmins in 1921.

HIGH-GRADING TRIAL.

Timmins, May 30. — (Special.) — Nicholas Ferri, arrested on a charge of high-grading on May 16, when police discovered a cache of high-grade ore during a liquor raid on his residence, was committed for trial by Magistrate Atkinson Tuesday. He elected for trial before a higher court.

The sinking occurred in one of the major naval engagements of the war, which lasted for 10 days, on the rim of the Arctic circle. The sole survivor was Stoker W. A. Fisher of Black Diamond, Alta.

In the same action several merchant ships were torpedoed. Survivors of these vessels included a girl stowaway, Dommenellia James, 19, a native of the British West Indies.

The St. Croix was picking up survivors, and had taken about 75 aboard, when she received her death blow. A torpedo—evidently a new type—went speeding into her thin armor plate and crashed through, apparently into her ammunition stores. The detonation set off a terrific explosion which racked her from stem to stern, and probably killed many before they even had a chance to jump.

All told, more than 100 U.S. Norwegian and British seamen who saw the St Croix go down, reached here. They said they did not know how many ships were lost, but some estimated the total at three escort ships and seven merchant ships.

Former U.S. Vessel

The navy gave no details regarding the loss of the St. Croix, one of seven U.S. ships turned over to the Canadian navy after the 50-destroyer exchange for naval bases between Britain and the U.S. in 1940.

It is believed that the naval action was the one mentioned by Premier Winston Churchill and the same one which formed the basis of a German claim that 12 destroyers and nine merchant vessels had been sunk from a westbound convoy. (There has been no confirmation of this claim from Allied sources.)

The toll of life in the St. Croix sinking is the largest single loss in men, topping the loss of 142 when the destroyer Margaree was sunk in the North Atlantic, cut in two by a large steamship while manoeuvring in defence of a convoy against a night submarine attack.

Lieut.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson, 42, of Halifax, was in command of St. Croix and is listed among the missing. So is Lieut.-Cmdr. P. F. M. Defreitas of Victoria, recently cited for fine work in command of one of the Canadian ships which assisted the United States navy in operations against the Aleutian islands in the Pacific. DeFreitas was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, having joined her less than a week before as part of an advanced training course.

Among the missing also was Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, nephew and namesake of the

JOINT MILITARY TALKS PLANNED WITH RUSSIANS

Marshall Said Slated to Command Western Europe Invasion Forces

TO MEET SOON

London, Oct. 1—(AP)—Russia's brilliantly successful offensives on the Eastern front, with all its tremendous implications for the whole course and duration of the war, has led to a definite decision for early and intimate British-U.S.-Soviet military staff discussions, even in advance of the forthcoming three-power diplomatic meeting.

This was learned today from a non-British source.

The rush of events on the fighting fronts—at a pace that had not been foreseen—has made it plain that a meeting here will have a military flavor more marked than had appeared likely a few weeks ago.

It now is probable that Russian staff officers will participate in it; in fact, that military men of all three countries will take part not only in a general conference along with their diplomatic chiefs, but have their own sessions among themselves.

Newspapers today printed reports that Gen. George C. Marshall, U.S. army chief of staff, who is said to have been chosen commander-in-chief of all Allied forces in Britain and leader of the invasion of western Europe, probably will come

U.S. Fifth Army Enters Italy's Third City to Find Germans All Gone—Hope to Have All Harbor Facilities Working in Eight Days

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Oct. 1—The Fifth Army today captured Naples, Italy's third greatest city, and threw the German defenders back upon the defences of Rome, which is 120 airline miles to the north.

Naples fell like a ripe plum into Gen. Mark W. Clark's lap at 8.50 a.m., when the first reconnaissance unit of the Fifth Army entered from the coast road. Correspondents reported thousands of cheering Italians lined the city's streets to greet the victors.

The British and American forces found the city of 925,000 empty of Germans, who for a week had engaged in an orgy of destruction and terrorism designed to burn and tear down every installation that would be of benefit to Allied forces and to hamper Italian co-operation with the liberating armies.

Wife Told Lone Survivor Missing Then Ottawa Telephones 'Safe'

Special to The Star

Black Diamond, Alta., Oct. 1—"I can tell you I'm the happiest girl in the world today." That's how Marie Fisher, wife of Stoker W. A. Fisher, only survivor of the St. Croix, feels today. She is a waitress in a lunch counter.

Mrs. Fisher experienced the two extremes in emotion all in the space of two hours. She received a wire from Ottawa informing her her husband was missing. "I felt as if the world had come to an end," she said. "I rushed to tell Bill's mother, who lives on a farm eight miles away, and about two hours later I received a telephone call telling me my husband was safe. That just about bowled me over."

"I was so happy I couldn't even speak. It was as if I had dreamed Bill was lost and then woke up to find it wasn't so. Now my heart aches for those mothers and wives who have no hope. I know how they feel from the two hours I spent."

Among the oil derricks they remember Bill Fisher as an easy-going, quiet, dependable sort of lad who worked hard. He has three sisters and four brothers, one Harry, with the R.C.A.F.

Bill joined the navy in the fall of 1941, trained at Esquimalt and Halifax, then came home in 1942 to marry Marie Nesbitt.

Invasion Forces

TO MEET SOON

London, Oct. 1—(AP)—Russia's brilliantly successful offensive on the Eastern front—with all its immense implications for the whole course and duration of the war—has led to a definite decision for early and intimate British-U.S.-Soviet military staff discussions, even in advance of the forthcoming three-power diplomatic meeting.

This was learned today from a non-British source.

The rush of events on the fighting fronts—at a pace that had not been foreseen—has made it plain that a meeting here will have a military flavor more marked than had appeared likely a few weeks ago.

It now is probable that Russian staff officers will participate in it; in fact, that military men of all three countries will take part not only in a general conference along with their diplomatic chiefs, but have their own sessions among themselves.

Newspapers today printed reports that Gen. George C. Marshall, U.S. army chief of staff, who is said to have been chosen commander-in-chief of all Allied forces in Britain and leader of the invasion of western Europe, probably will come here with Cordell Hull, U.S. secretary of state.

U.S. Fifth Army Enters Italy's Third City to Find Germans All Gone—Hope to Have All Harbor Facilities Working in Eight Days

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Oct. 1—The Fifth Army today captured Naples, Italy's third greatest city, and threw the German defenders back upon the defences of Rome, which is 120 airline miles to the north.

Naples fell like a ripe plum into Gen. Mark W. Clark's lap at 8.50 a.m., when the first reconnaissance unit of the Fifth Army entered from the coast road. Correspondents reported thousands of cheering Italians lined the city's streets to greet the victors.

The British and American forces found the city of 925,000 empty of Germans, who for a week had engaged in an orgy of destruction and terrorism designed to burn and tear down every installation that would be of benefit to Allied forces and to hamper Italian co-operation with the liberating armies.

A steamship laden with ammunition exploded in Naples harbor after an Allied air raid, the Berlin radio said today. The steamship first was set afire and then exploded, "causing a great number of dead and considerable damage to harbor facilities," the broadcast said.

Capture of the first great prize of the Italian campaign came 23 days after Allied invasion forces landed at Salerno.

It was believed the harbor at Naples can be cleared for Allied use in eight days despite extensive demolitions and severe damage it has suffered from Allied bombers.

Clearing of the harbor will eliminate a grave problem of supply. Since the invasion began, every ton of shipping to feed and equip the Fifth Army has gone across the beaches in the slow and painful process of supply by small boats and vessels.

Naples fell after the Fifth Army had flanked it by the capture of the Avellino road junction 30 miles east of Naples.

The Germans were reported retreating along the whole line right across southern Italy.

"The Eighth Army advance continues according to plan," today's communique said. It was in contact with the German rearguard, and captured a number of points, but there was no specific report of the British and Canadian progress.

It was disclosed that the north-west African air forces in September dropped more than 15,000 tons of bombs on Italy, the biggest monthly total yet reached in this theatre. The best previous total was 12,000 tons in July.

DYNAMITE BLAST TAKES 13 LIVES

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 1—(BUP)—Thirteen dead and scores of wounded were counted today after 48 tons of dynamite blew up at the Paulo Frontin station of the Sao Paulo-Rio Grande railway yesterday.

The dynamite was loaded in a box car which caught fire while alongside a stationary passenger train. Efforts were made to move the box car, but it exploded too soon to avoid heavy casualties.

Sweden Bans Shipment Of Nazi Oil to Norway

Stockholm, Oct. 1—(BUP)—The Swedish foreign office announced today that all rail shipment through Sweden of oil destined for other countries has been banned, which means Germany no longer will be able to use that route for shipments to Norway and Finland.

The ban will be a serious handicap to the Germans in maintaining their supplies of oil needed by forces in northern Norway. However, Norwegian quarters believed the Germans have sufficient for a few months in that area.

Norwegian sources said the Germans have been shipping three trains weekly of 12 tank cars each to Narvik carrying loads of gasoline and oil.

U.S. AMBASSADOR TO SOVIET UNION

W. AVERELL HARRIMAN

Washington, Oct. 1—W. Averell Harriman was nominated by President Roosevelt today to be U.S. ambassador to Russia.

Harriman was named to succeed Admiral William H. Standley, who returned recently to make a report on the Soviet government's attitude toward projected Anglo-American-Russian war talks. Before leaving Moscow, the 71-year-old Standley made it known he did not want to return to his diplomatic post.

Harriman, who will be 52 next month, has been lease-lend administrator in London since 1941. Born to wealth—he was the son of E. H. Harriman, railroad builder—the president's choice for the Moscow position has been prominent in Washington almost from the beginning of the new deal.

He first went to Moscow as a personal envoy of President Roosevelt in September, 1941, to arrange for U.S. aid to Russia in its fight against Hitler's invading German armies.

He again went to Moscow as a special representative of the president in August, 1942, to negotiate a renewal of the Moscow protocol. He is known to be very friendly toward the Russians and a strong believer in close U.S. co-operation with the Soviet Union during and after this war.

Following his first trip to Moscow, he brought back to President Roosevelt a vivid impression of Soviet Premier Josef Stalin. One of the reports which pleased the president particularly was Harriman's statement that the Soviet dictator had a sense of humor.

He is regarded as a member of that group of leading U.S. business men who are eager to do business with the Soviet Union after the war.

ABOUT KIEV, BOTH SIDES HURLING IN BIG FORCES

Artillery, Infantry and Planes in Fight for Great Base—Russians Only 30 Miles From Vitebsk and in Places 100 Miles From Old Polish Border

London, Oct. 1—Soviet troops are at the gates of Gomel, hinge of the southeastern defences of White Russia and the last German-held bastion east of the Dnieper, a Moscow dispatch said today.

30 Miles From Vitebsk

It added that the Russians are less than 30 miles from Mogilev, Vitebsk and Orsha, and at places were only a little more than 100 miles from the old Polish border.

The Russians forced another crossing of the Sozh river and captured Cherikov, 50 miles southeast of Mogilev.

Meanwhile, the battle of Kiev, expected to be one of the decisive struggles of the war, raged with unabated fury with both Russians and Germans throwing tremendous forces of artillery, infantry and air power into the fight to achieve mastery of the Dnieper line.

The Germans were entrenched in the ancient city-fortress high on the western cliffs of the Dnieper river, while the pick of the Russian Ukrainian armies faced them across the 100-yard water barrier that separates Kiev from its eastern bank suburbs, already in Soviet hands.

Russ Take Krichev

On the White Russian front, a Russian communique said Red army troops stormed into Krichev, strategic rail junction 87 miles east of the Dnieper, on the road to Mogilev and Minsk. Other columns, the bulletin declared, captured Bayevo and Lebedevo, east and southeast of Orsha, another rail centre, while in a continuation of their drive on Zhlobin, third important transportation hub in this area, Soviet spearheads overwhelmed the towns of Svetilovichi, Etalki and Ivanovka.

The navy gave no details regarding the loss of the St. Croix, one of seven U.S. ships turned over to the Canadian navy after the 50-destroyer exchange for naval bases between Britain and the U.S. in 1940.

It is believed that the naval action was the one mentioned by Premier Winston Churchill and the same one which formed the basis of a German claim that 12 destroyers and nine merchant vessels had been sunk from a westbound convoy. (There has been no confirmation of this claim from Allied sources.)

The toll of life in the St. Croix sinking is the largest single loss in men, topping the loss of 142 when the destroyer Margaree was sunk in the North Atlantic, cut in two by a large steamship while manoeuvring in defence of a convoy against a night submarine attack.

Lieut.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson, 42, of Halifax, was in command of St. Croix and is listed among the missing. So is Lieut.-Cmdr. P. F. M. Derreitas of Victoria, recently cited for fine work in command of one of the Canadian ships which assisted the United States navy in operations against the Aleutian islands in the Pacific. DeFreitas was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, having joined her less than a week before as part of an advanced training course.

Among the missing also was Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, nephew and namesake of the prime minister of Canada. Lieut. King was born in Ottawa. His mother now lives at Bedford, N.S.

Lt.-Cmdr. Paul Simon Major of Montreal, grandson of the late Hon. S. N. Parent, former premier of Quebec province and mayor of Quebec city, was another officer posted missing.

U.S. Fifth Army Enters Italy's Third City to Find Germans All Gone—Hope to Have All Harbor Facilities Working in Eight Days

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Oct. 1—The Fifth Army today captured Naples, Italy's third greatest city, and threw the German defenders back upon the defences of Rome, which is 120 airline miles to the north.

Naples fell like a ripe plum into Gen. Mark W. Clark's lap at 8.50 a.m., when the first reconnaissance unit of the Fifth Army entered from the coast road. Correspondents reported thousands of cheering Italians lined the city's streets to greet the victors.

The British and American forces found the city of 925,000 empty of Germans, who for a week had engaged in an orgy of destruction and terrorism designed to burn and tear down every installation that would be of benefit to Allied forces and to hamper Italian co-operation with the liberating armies.

A steamship laden with ammunition exploded in Naples harbor after an Allied air raid, the Berlin radio said today. The steamship first was set afire and then exploded, "causing a great number of dead and considerable damage to harbor facilities," the broadcast said.

Capture of the first great prize of the Italian campaign came 22 days after Allied invasion forces landed at Salerno.

It was believed the harbor at Naples can be cleared for Allied use in eight days despite extensive demolitions and severe damage it has suffered from Allied bombers.

Clearing of the harbor will eliminate a grave problem of supply. Since the invasion began, every ton of shipping to feed and equip the Fifth Army has gone across the beaches in the slow and painful process of supply by small boats and vessels.

Naples fell after the Fifth Army had flanked it by the capture of the Avellino road junction 30 miles east of Naples.

The Germans were reported retreating along the whole line right across southern Italy.

The Eighth Army advance continues according to plan," today's communique said. It was in contact with the German rearguard, and captured a number of points, but there was no specific report of the British and Canadian progress.

It was disclosed that the northwest African air forces in September dropped more than 15,000 tons of bombs on Italy, the biggest monthly total yet reached in this theatre. The best previous total was 12,000 tons in July.

DYNAMITE BLAST TAKES 13 LIVES

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 1—(BUP)—Thirteen dead and scores of wounded were counted today after 48 tons of dynamite blew up at the Paulo Frontin station of the Sao Paulo-Rio Grande railway yesterday.

The dynamite was loaded in a box car which caught fire while alongside a stationary passenger train. Efforts were made to move the box car, but it exploded too soon to avoid heavy casualties.

Sweden Bans Shipment Of Nazi Oil to Norway

Stockholm, Oct. 1—(BUP)—The Swedish foreign office announced today that all rail shipment through Sweden of oil destined for other countries has been banned, which means Germany no longer will be able to use that route for shipments to Norway and Finland.

The ban will be a serious handicap to the Germans in maintaining their supplies of oil needed by forces in northern Norway. However, Norwegian quarters believed the Germans have sufficient for a few months in that area.

Norwegian sources said the Germans have been shipping three trains weekly of 12 tank cars each to Narvik carrying loads of gasoline and oil.

U.S. AMBASSADOR TO SOVIET UNION

W. AVERELL HARRIMAN

Washington, Oct. 1—W. Averell Harriman was nominated by President Roosevelt today to be U.S. ambassador to Russia.

Harriman was named to succeed Admiral William H. Standley, who returned recently to make a report on the Soviet government's attitude toward projected Anglo-American-Russian war talks. Before leaving Moscow, the 71-year-old Standley made it known he did not want to return to his diplomatic post.

Harriman, who will be 52 next month, has been lease-lend administrator in London since 1941. Born to wealth—he was the son of E. H. Harriman, railroad builder—the president's choice for the Moscow position has been prominent in Washington almost from the beginning of the new deal.

He first went to Moscow as a personal envoy of President Roosevelt in September, 1941, to arrange for U.S. aid to Russia in its fight against Hitler's invading German armies.

He again went to Moscow as a special representative of the president in August, 1942, to negotiate a renewal of the Moscow protocol. He is known to be very friendly toward the Russians and a strong believer in close U.S. co-operation with the Soviet Union during and after this war.

Following his first trip to Moscow, he brought back to President Roosevelt a vivid impression of Soviet Premier Josef Stalin. One of the reports which pleased the president particularly was Harriman's statement that the Soviet dictator had a sense of humor.

He is regarded as a member of that group of leading U.S. business men who are eager to do business with the Soviet Union after the war.

ABOUT KIEV, BOTH SIDES HURLING IN BIG FORCES

Artillery, Infantry and Planes in Fight for Great Base—Russians Only 30 Miles From Vitebsk and in Places 100 Miles From Old Polish Border

London, Oct. 1—Soviet troops are at the gates of Gomel, hinge of the southeastern defences of White Russia and the last German-held bastion east of the Dnieper, a Moscow dispatch said today.

30 Miles From Vitebsk

It added that the Russians are less than 30 miles from Mogilev, Vitebsk and Orsha, and at places were only a little more than 100 miles from the old Polish border.

The Russians forced another crossing of the Sozh river and captured Cherikov, 50 miles southeast of Mogilev.

Meanwhile, the battle of Kiev, expected to be one of the decisive struggles of the war, raged with unabated fury with both Russians and Germans throwing tremendous forces of artillery, infantry and air power into the fight to achieve mastery of the Dnieper line.

The Germans were entrenched in the ancient city-fortress high on the western cliffs of the Dnieper river, while the pick of the Russian Ukrainian armies faced them across the 100-yard water barrier that separates Kiev from its eastern bank suburbs, already in Soviet hands.

Russ Take Krichev

On the White Russian front, a Russian communique said Red army troops stormed into Krichev, strategic rail junction 57 miles east of the Dnieper, on the road to Mogilev and Minsk. Other columns, the bulletin declared, captured Bayevo and Lebedevo, east and southeast of Orsha, another rail centre, while in a continuation of their drive on Zhlobin, third important transportation hub in this area, Soviet spearheads overwhelmed the towns of Svetilovichi, Etalki and Ivanovka.

10-DAY SEA FIGHT ON RIM OF ARCTIC CIRCLE REVEALED

Newfoundland, three in England, three in the United States and two in Scotland.

Commander Dobson, a master mariner in civilian life, had already won distinction with his ship. He received the distinguished service cross for his handling of the St. Croix in the destruction of a submarine. Engineroom Aritificer Leslie W. Bydwell of Saint John, N.B., also among the missing, was mentioned in dispatches for good service on the same occasion.

The St. Croix is the 13th Canadian naval vessel lost in the great war which has seen Canadian ships sailing and fighting in the Atlantic, the Pacific and the Mediterranean. She is the fourth destroyer lost, but first of the former U.S "four-stackers" received by Canada to go down. Besides the destroyers the navy has lost five corvettes, two patrol vessels and a minesweeper, either by mishap at sea or enemy action.

Two Subs Sunk, Six Damaged

One of the surviving officers from a lost U.S. ship, Selvyn N. Grey, Hoboken, N.J., said he knew of at least two U-boats sunk by escorts and at least six others damaged.

Other survivors said they saw one U-boat caught in the beam of a searchlight and blasted out of the water by gunfire from an escorting warship.

They told of ships breaking in half as torpedoes ripped into their hulls, of injured and dying men struggling for hours in the icy, oil-thick water, of exploding depth charges, and a once-sleek destroyer loundering in her death throes.

The battle started a week ago Saturday and continued almost until the last ship of the convoy had passed through the submarine nets into the haven of this harbor.

"Like Second Murmansk"

One survivor described the battle as "a close second to the Murmansk run fights" in which he had taken part. He told how the U-boats attacked in packs, scoring their successes despite heavy seas and thick fog.

"They stuck with us like leeches," he said. "It was impossible to shake them off. They picked on our escorts just as much as the merchant ships. All who came through it can count themselves very lucky."

Describing the St. Croix disaster, one officer said the four-funnelled destroyer seemed "to go up in one blast." He said: "I have never seen an explosion at sea quite like it. She seemed to go to pieces all at once.

"We were about six miles away at the time," he said. "After the explosion, we could see a few lights twinkling on the water. They might have been survivors with lights but when we reached the scene all we found was a bunch night before we got it I went down to the messes and got all the lookouts I could out on deck." It was the third torpedoing for the captain, but so far he hasn't lost one of his crew.

The other Liberty ship was hit amidships in the engine room. Many of her crew were believed to have been sucked down by the sinking vessel as they tried to break loose the lifeboats which had become jammed in the explosion. The captain was washed overboard without a lifebelt as he was trying to free one of the lifeboats.

George W. Orsham, 19, of Hopkinsville, Kentucky, said: "I ran to the lifeboat deck and saw the ship break in two. Then a big wall of water came over me. I thought it was just a wave and I hung on to the railing. The pressure was becoming greater in my ears and suddenly I realized I was hanging on to the ship as it was going down. I let go and my lifejacket pulled me back to the surface."

Jack Kirschbaum, 19, of Brookville, Indiana, who was on the return trip of his first voyage to sea, said: "There was a terrific concussion. I was hurled against the ceiling of the wheelhouse and hurt my leg. I gathered myself up and got to the lifeboat deck, but found the boats jammed. The ship started to break up and I ran back aft and jumped over. When I came up, the after part had disappeared." He clung to a floating boom, but slipped off just before a rescue launch reached his side.

Kenneth Watkins of Morgantown, West Virginia, who served with the Victoria Rifles in Montreal from 1937 to 1940, was among the survivors—a shipmate of Allen.

"Every one of us will be ready to go back to sea in a week or so," he said. "All we need is a little rest to cool our nerves. As for me I want to go back with the same 'Old man' (captain)."

O. H. Artz of Rabaul, New Guinea, typical sea dog, who fled from the Japs the day after they captured his home city by sailing 1,400 miles to Australia in a 14-foot boat, broke his glass eye in the concussion caused by the torpedo explosion.

Third mate Victor Wosfold of the rescue ship picked one of the survivors off the forepart of the freighter which had "broken its back."

The rescued men were loud in their tribute to the crew of the rescue ship, a peacetime British coaster, which stayed behind the convoy for four hours to pick up the survivors of the Liberty ships.

"It was a sitting target for the U-boats, but the crew thought of us fellows before their own lives," one survivor said.

Asdic equipment and other detectors told the convoy the U-boats were still around them, two of them directly astern—a station they had held for 48 hours. Later that day a FOOD, plenty of it and hot, was the first request of these merchant seamen when they landed at an East Coast Canadian port after surviving a terrific battle between ships of their Allied convoy and a German submarine pack. This picture was taken at a Navy League home.

MISSING CAPTAIN OF THE ST. CROIX

Lieut. Commander Andrew H. Dobson, D.S.C., R.C.N.R., of Halifax N.S., is reported missing after H.M.C.S. St Croix, the destroyer on which he was serving, was torpedoed while on convoy duty in the Atlantic.

FOUR COMMITTED FOR TRIAL IN DRAFT CONSPIRACY CASE

Norman Stephen Freed by Court, Naiffe, Allen, Douglas and Irwin Held

BAIL IS REDUCED

There was nothing in the evidence that R. A. Irwin, former registrar of selective service, received any money, Magistrate Pritchard said this afternoon in special court as the preliminary hearing of four men charged with conspiracy in draft deferments concluded. Irwin, however, was committed for trial with Naiffe Stephen, Robert Allen and Robert Douglas. Charges against Norman Stephen, brother of Naiffe, were dropped.

In the Irwin case, the court said: "There is evidence that on several files in his office and under his control, with respect to men who were seeking deferments through Allen and Naiffe Stephen, Irwin made certain notations and in several instances the files under the jurisdiction or control of Irwin were mislaid or disappeared. There is further evidence that Naiffe Stephen was observed in his office.

"As to Naiffe Stephen, the evidence is that he had in his possession when arrested six call-up notices for different individuals ordering them to report for military training. There also is evidence that he received from various individuals large sums of money for the purpose of obtaining deferments, and evidence that in the cases referred to, defegments were granted.

ABSENTEEISM IS CUT 60 P.C. BY INGLIS

Staff Has Grown From 500 to 17,000, Official Reveals

Lee Ainsworth, vice-president and general manager of John Inglis Company Ltd., told today's joint meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, at the Royal York hotel of the growth of his company since the outbreak of the war, with an increase in employees from 500 to 15,000.

"At the outbreak of the war the Bren gun contract called for 12,000 guns to be delivered over a period of five years—the present capacity is over 10,000 per month," he said.

The company was one of the first to use women in machine shop work, and now 60 per cent. of the plant's production machines are operated by women.

Absenteeism, he said, has been reduced 60 per cent. by providing service facilities on the premises, and by reducing the hours of work to three eight-hour shifts. Employees are automatically dismissed after four days' absence without leave.

I let go and my lifejacket pulled me back to the surface."

Jack Kirschbaum, 19, of Brookville, Indiana, who was on the return trip of his first voyage to sea, said: "There was a terrific concussion. I was hurled against the ceiling of the wheelhouse and hurt my leg. I gathered myself up and got to the lifeboat deck, but found the boats jammed. The ship started to break up and I ran back aft and jumped over. When I came up, the after part had disappeared." He clung to a floating boom, but slipped off just before a rescue launch reached his side.

Kenneth Watkins of Morgantown, West Virginia, who served with the Victoria Rifles in Montreal from 1937 to 1940, was among the survivors—a shipmate of Allen.

"Every one of us will be ready to go back to sea in a week or so," he said. "All we need is a little rest to cool our nerves. As for me, I want to go back with the same 'Old man' (captain)."

O. H. Artz of Rabaul, New Guinea, typical sea dog, who fled from the Japs the day after they captured his home city by sailing 1,400 miles to Australia in a 14-foot boat, broke his glass eye in the concussion caused by the torpedo explosion.

Third mate Victor Wosfold of the rescue ship picked one of the survivors off the forepart of the freighter which had "broken its back."

The rescued men were loud in their tribute to the crew of the rescue ship, a peacetime British coaster, which stayed behind the convoy for four hours to pick up the survivors of the Liberty ships.

"It was a sitting target for the U-boats, but the crew thought of us fellows before their own lives," one survivor said.

Asdic equipment and other detectors told the convoy the U-boats were still around them, two of them directly astern—a station they had held for 48 hours. Later that day a

FOUR COMMITTED FOR TRIAL IN DRAFT CONSPIRACY CASE

BAIL IS REDUCED

There was nothing in the evidence that R. A. Irwin, former registrar of selective service, received any money, Magistrate Pritchard said this afternoon in special court as the preliminary hearing of four men charged with conspiracy in draft deferments concluded. Irwin, however, was committed for trial with Naiffe Stephen, Robert Allen and Robert Douglas. Charges against Norman Stephen, brother of Naiffe, were dropped.

In the Irwin case the court said: "There is evidence that on several files in his office and under his control, with respect to men who were seeking deferments through Allen and Naiffe Stephen, Irwin made certain notations and in several instances the files under the jurisdiction or control of Irwin were mislaid or disappeared. There is further evidence that Naiffe Stephen was observed in his office.

"As to Naiffe Stephen, the evidence is that he had in his possession when arrested six call-up notices for different individuals ordering them to report for military training. There also is evidence that he received from various individuals large sums of money for the purpose of obtaining deferments, and evidence that in the cases referred to, deferments were granted.

ABSENTEEISM IS CUT 60 P.C. BY INGLIS

Staff Has Grown From 500 to 17,000, Official Reveals

Lee Ainsworth, vice-president and general manager of John Inglis Company Ltd., told today's joint meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, at the Royal York hotel of the growth of his company since the outbreak of the war, with an increase in employees from 500 to 15,000.

"At the outbreak of the war the Bren gun contract called for 12,000 guns to be delivered over a period of five years—the present capacity is over 10,000 per month," he said.

The company was one of the first to use women in machine shop work, and now 60 per cent. of the plant's production machines are operated by women.

Absenteeism, he said, has been reduced 60 per cent. by providing service facilities on the premises, and by reducing the hours of work to three eight-hour shifts. Employees are automatically dismissed after four days' absence without leave.

...ships.
...ds of ships breaking in ...ir torpedoes ripped into their ...hulls, of injured and dying men ...ruggling for hours in the icy, oil-...tick water, of exploding depth ...charges, and a once-sleek destroyer ...foundering in her death throes.

The battle started a week ago Sunday and continued almost ...till the last ship of the convoy ...had passed through the submarine ...pen into the haven of this harbor.

"Like Second Murmansk"

One survivor described the battle ...as "a close second to the Murmansk ...run fights" in which he had taken ...part. He told how the U-boats ...stuck in packs, scoring their ...successes despite heavy seas and ...thick fog.

"They stuck with us like leeches," ...he said. "It was impossible to ...shake them off. They picked on ...our escorts just as much as the ...merchant ships. All who came ...through it can count themselves ...very lucky."

Describing the St. Croix disaster, ...one officer said the four-funnelled ...destroyer seemed "to go up in one ...blast." He said: "I have never seen ...an explosion at sea quite like it. ...She seemed to go to pieces all at ...once.

"We were about six miles away ...at the time," he said. "After the ...explosion, we could see a few lights ...twinkling on the water. They ...might have been survivors with ...lights but when we reached the ...scene all we found was a bunch ...of wreckage and one lifebelt with ...a light on it." A corvette was ...standing by, apparently looking for ...survivors, and told the rescue ship ...to continue on.

Two Convoys Merged

The submarine attacks started on two separate westbound convoys but these convoys were merged into one after a few days, to pool the escort. The first ship was lost out of the slower convoy on Saturday, Sept. 18. It was hit five minutes after Prime Minister Churchill broadcast that not one Allied ship had been lost in the North Atlantic to U-boats for four months, survivors said. (In the same broadcast, Churchill said a convoy was being attacked as he spoke.)

The following day, the faster convoy was attacked. A British frigate was the first ship hit—torpedoed as it rushed to attack a U-boat which had been detected. Twenty minutes after it had left the convoy, it sent out an S.O.S. that it had its bow blown off. Another escort ship went to her aid and took her in tow. It was believed to have subsequently sunk.

It was early Monday morning that "all hell broke loose" in the organized convoy itself, survivors said. Just as dawn was breaking, two U.S. Liberty freighters were hit within a few minutes of each other. One "broke its back" and its after-part sank in less than two minutes. Many of her crew were thrown into the water by the blast. Only 38 — about half the crew—were picked up out of the oil-coated sea.

The second Liberty ship stayed afloat for four hours and all hands were saved by its lifeboats when a rescue ship picked them up.

Sub Upset Elopement

Among the survivors was Jerome Davis, Negro boatswain from Baltimore, who tried a new way of eloping with a girl, but he failed—no, it wasn't the father-in-law's fault He clung to a floating boom, but slipped off just before a rescue launch reached his side.

Kenneth Watkins of Morgantown, West Virginia, who served with the Victoria Rifles in Montreal from 1937 to 1940, was among the survivors—a shipmate of Allen.

"Every one of us will be ready to go back to sea in a week or so," he said. "All we need is a little rest to cool our nerves. As for me I want to go back with the same 'Old man' (captain)."

O. H. Artz of Rabaul, New Guinea, typical sea dog, who fled from the Japs the day after they captured his home city by sailing 1,400 miles to Australia in a 14-foot boat, broke his glass eye in the concussion caused by the torpedo explosion.

Third mate Victor Wosfold of the rescue ship picked one of the survivors off the forepart of the freighter which had "broken its back."

The rescued men were loud in their tribute to the crew of the rescue ship, a peacetime British coaster, which stayed behind the convoy for four hours to pick up the survivors of the Liberty ships.

"It was a sitting target for the U-boats, but the crew thought of us fellows before their own lives," one survivor said.

Asdic equipment and other detectors told the convoy the U-boats were still around them, two of them directly astern—a station they had held for 48 hours. Later that day a number of U-boats were sighted. Two surfaced submarines came within sight of the rescue ship with its 108 survivors aboard. Both times the latter ship escaped. Once the submarine was manoeuvring, apparently to launch a torpedo, when a heavy bank of fog closed in over the rescue ship and screened it from attack.

Just before midnight that night as the rescue ship was about to rejoin the convoy, its crew saw the escort ship, which they believed to be the St. Croix, blow up. Half an hour later two more merchant ships were torpedoed, but when the rescue ship reached their side, two other freighters were already picking up survivors. One of them was believed to have been sunk later with its load of rescued seamen.

Ordered to Return

Shortly before 5 o'clock the same morning another U.S. merchant ship was hit. The rescue ship was taking its crew aboard when a corvette in the convoy came up and ordered them to return to their vessel, saying it was not sinking. The crew returned, remanned their vessel, and with the corvette remaining close by, proceeded on its way. It later sank. The crew was picked up by the corvette and were being taken to St. John's, Nfld., when the latter ship was torpedoed, according to convoy reports.

On Friday, a week ago today the convoy ran into another U-boat nest closing in on the ships. Heavy fog closed in after several hours of dodging the submarines and shielded the convoy again.

The fog remained until last Monday noon. Shortly after it lifted another S.O.S. was picked up from a ship which could not be seen. Crews of ships which arrived here safely did not know if any survivors were picked up.

The battle continued as the con-

Lieut. Commander Andrew H. Dobson, D.S.C., R.C.N.R., of Halifax N.S., is reported missing after H.M.C.S. St Croix, the destroyer on which he was serving, was torpedoed while on convoy duty in the Atlantic.

EVEN HIMMLER CAN'T REMEDY DEFEATISM

Report 32 More Germans Executed for Talking, Looting

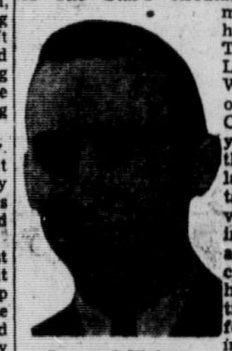

London, Oct. 1 — Thirty-two more Germans have been executed for defeatism and for looting bombed towns, the B.B.C. said today. It said Heinrich Himmler, Gastapo chief, had ordered anyone who doubts a German victory to be shot.

Fritz Groebe, 57, German owner of a farm machinery store, was one of the defeatists executed.

A Berlin dispatch to the Swiss newspaper Der Bund said an incidental warning to German citizens declared Groebe tried to shake by critical remarks "the confident attitude" of many he came in contact with, in his business. The judgment against him said his criticism was "heavily directed against the Reich leadership and individuals heads of the government," and added "such persons have no right to live during the heavy battle for the existence of the German nation."

FORMER STAR MAN YEAR ON ST. CROIX

Happy today is Mrs. Alice Weber, of The Star's circulation department. Her husband, Telegraphist Leonard Weber was on the St. Croix for a year. He left the destroyer last July to take an advanced course in telegraphy at St. Hyacinthe, where he is now stationed. Before enlisting in the navy Weber worked in The Star's mailing room for almost four years. He was 22 when

BAIL IS REDUCED

There was nothing in the evidence that R. A. Irwin, former registrar of selective service, received any money, Magistrate Pritchard said this afternoon in special court as the preliminary hearing of four men charged with conspiracy in draft deferments concluded. Irwin, however, was committed for trial with Naiffe Stephen, Robert Allen and Robert Douglas. Charges against Norman Stephen, brother of Naiffe, were dropped.

In the Irwin case, the court said: "There is evidence that on several files in his office and under his control, with respect to men who were seeking deferments through Allen and Naiffe Stephen, Irwin made certain notations and in several instances the files under the jurisdiction or control of Irwin were mislaid or disappeared. There is further evidence that Naiffe Stephen was observed in his office.

"As to Naiffe Stephen, the evidence is that he had in his possession when arrested six call-up notices for different individuals ordering them to report for military training. There also is evidence that he received from various individuals large sums of money for the purpose of obtaining deferments, and evidence that in the cases referred to, deferments were granted. I have no hesitation in finding that there is sufficient evidence to send him on for trial.

"As to Allen, there is evidence that he was shadowed by the police. He was seen almost daily in the company of Naiffe Stephen and other young men who were applicants for deferment. Further, that money was exchanged between him and Naiffe Stephen. Books and papers were found in Allen's home with names of requisitioned men.

Regarding Douglas, Magistrate Pritchard said: "While the evidence is not strong, there is evidence that he jointly occupied room 214, 331 Bay St., with Naiffe Stephen. There is further evidence that he paid the rent for the premises and also that he cashed cheques issued by Naiffe Stephen. The R.C.M.P. further allege that they shadowed him and that he was seen in the presence of Naiffe."

"Regarding Norman Stephen, the only evidence that in any way links him with this charge is the fact that he happens to live with his brother, Naiffe, and that, whether knowingly or not, he received a deferment of his call-up. I cannot find on the evidence enough to justify that this accused be sent for trial."

J. Sedgwick, counsel for Irwin, strenuously objected to the proceedings. He claimed they were improper in the respect that his client should have been warned as to whether or not he had anything to say. He said:

"I should have been given the opportunity to call witnesses. I protest the way this has been done. It is useless for me to call them now. I wanted to call witnesses before you made up your mind. I will not now call them and I want my protest noted. I suggest that I should have been heard. I have never been so treated in a criminal court. My client is of previous good character. This is unheard of in a criminal case.

Those committed applied for bail and in each case it was reduced by 50 per cent. Naiffe Stephen's was cut from $20,000 to $10,000. Irwin's and Allen's bail was set at $5,000 and that of Douglas at $2,500.

"There is not a great deal of evidence against Norman Stephen," said John Robinette, special crown counsel. "He never reported for training, yet his master sheet was marked M.F.M. 12, which indicated that he had volunteered for active service and was rejected."

After the committal, Judge Parker was called into court and set bail for the four committed. Joseph Sedgwick, counsel for Irwin, told his honor that he desired to have his client tried before a judge without a jury.

"It would be unwise for me to make such a decision until the crown sees the attorney-general," said Judge Parker.

"I have already spoken to the attorney-general and so has Mr. Sedgwick," said John Robinette, crown counsel. "I propose, on Monday, to make formal application for a fiat directing that the case be tried with a jury in the supreme court of Ontario."

Mr. Sedgwick said that he would oppose this.

"In view of the crown's remarks, I will not take their election until Tuesday," said Judge Parker.

warship.

They told of ships breaking in half as torpedoes ripped into their hulls, of injured and dying men struggling for hours in the icy, oil-thick water, of exploding depth charges, and a once-sleek destroyer foundering in her death throes.

The battle started a week ago Saturday and continued almost until the last ship of the convoy had passed through the submarine nets into the haven of this harbor.

"Like Second Murmansk"

One survivor described the battle as "a close second to the Murmansk run fights" in which he had taken part. He told how the U-boats attacked in packs, scoring their successes despite heavy seas and thick fog.

"They stuck with us like leeches," he said. "It was impossible to shake them off. They picked on our escorts just as much as the merchant ships. All who came through it can count themselves very lucky."

Describing the St. Croix disaster, one officer said the four-funnelled destroyer seemed "to go up in one blast." He said: "I have never seen an explosion at sea quite like it. She seemed to go to pieces all at once.

"We were about six miles away at the time," he said. "After the explosion, we could see a few lights twinkling on the water. They might have been survivors with lights but when we reached the scene all we found was a bunch of wreckage and one lifebelt with a light on it." A corvette was standing by, apparently looking for survivors, and told the rescue ship to continue on.

Two Convoys Merged

The submarine attacks started on two separate westbound convoys but these convoys were merged into one after a few days, to pool the escort. The first ship was lost out of the slower convoy on Saturday, Sept. 18. It was hit five minutes after Prime Minister Churchill broadcast that not one Allied ship had been lost in the North Atlantic to U-boats for four months, survivors said. (In the same broadcast, Churchill said a convoy was being attacked as he spoke.)

The following day, the faster convoy was attacked. A British frigate was the first ship hit—torpedoed as it rushed to attack a U-boat which had been detected. Twenty minutes after it had left the convoy, it sent out an S.O.S. that it had its bow blown off. Another escort ship went to her aid and took her in tow. It was believed to have subsequently sunk.

It was early Monday morning that "all hell broke loose" in the organized convoy itself, survivors said. Just as dawn was breaking, two U.S. Liberty freighters were hit within a few minutes of each other. One "broke its back" and its after-part sank in less than two minutes. Many of her crew were thrown into the water by the blast. Only 38 — about half the crew—were picked up out of the oil-coated sea.

The second Liberty ship stayed afloat for four hours and all hands were saved by its lifeboats when a rescue ship picked them up.

Sub Upset Elopement

Among the survivors was Jerome Davis, Negro boatswain from Baltimore, who tried a new way of eloping with a girl, but he failed—no, it wasn't the father-in-law's fault

He clung to a floating boom, but slipped off just before a rescue launch reached his side.

Kenneth Watkins of Morgantown, West Virginia, who served with the Victoria Rifles in Montreal from 1937 to 1940, was among the survivors—a shipmate of Allen.

"Every one of us will be ready to go back to sea in a week or so," he said. "All we need is a little rest to cool our nerves. As for me I want to go back with the same 'Old man' (captain)."

O. H. Artz of Rabaul, New Guinea, typical sea dog, who fled from the Japs the day after they captured his home city by sailing 1,400 miles to Australia in a 14-foot boat, broke his glass eye in the concussion caused by the torpedo explosion.

Third mate Victor Wosfold of the rescue ship picked one of the survivors off the forepart of the freighter which had "broken its back."

The rescued men were loud in their tribute to the crew of the rescue ship, a peacetime British coaster, which stayed behind the convoy for four hours to pick up the survivors of the Liberty ships.

"It was a sitting target for the U-boats, but the crew thought of us fellows before their own lives," one survivor said.

Asdic equipment and other detectors told the convoy the U-boats were still around them, two of them directly astern—a station they had held for 48 hours. Later that day a number of U-boats were sighted. Two surfaced submarines came within sight of the rescue ship with its 108 survivors aboard. Both times the latter ship escaped. Once the submarine was manoeuvring, apparently to launch a torpedo, when a heavy bank of fog closed in over the rescue ship and screened it from attack.

Just before midnight that night as the rescue ship was about to rejoin the convoy, its crew saw the escort ship, which they believed to be the St. Croix, blow up. Half an hour later two more merchant ships were torpedoed, but when the rescue ship reached their side, two other freighters were already picking up survivors. One of them was believed to have been sunk later with its load of rescued seamen.

Ordered to Return

Shortly before 5 o'clock the same morning another U.S. merchant ship was hit. The rescue ship was taking its crew aboard when a corvette in the convoy came up and ordered them to return to their vessel, saying it was not sinking. The crew returned, remanned their vessel, and with the corvette remaining close by, proceeded on its way. It later sank. The crew was picked up by the corvette and were being taken to St. John's, Nfld., when the latter ship was torpedoed, according to convoy reports.

On Friday, a week ago today the convoy ran into another U-boat nest closing in on the ships. Heavy fog closed in after several hours of dodging the submarines and shielded the convoy again.

The fog remained until last Monday noon. Shortly after it lifted another S.O.S. was picked up from a ship which could not be seen. Crews of ships which arrived here safely did not know if any survivors were picked up.

The battle continued as the con-

Lieut. Commander Andrew H. Dobson, D.S.C., R.C.N.R., of Halifax N.S., is reported missing after H.M.C.S. St Croix, the destroyer on which he was serving, was torpedoed while on convoy duty in the Atlantic.

EVEN HIMMLER CAN'T REMEDY DEFEATISM

Report 32 More Germans Executed for Talking, Looting

London, Oct. 1 — Thirty-two more Germans have been executed for defeatism and for looting bombed towns, the B.B.C. said today. It said Heinrich Himmler, Gastapo chief, had ordered anyone who doubts a German victory to be shot.

Fritz Groebe, 57, German owner of a farm machinery store, was one of the defeatists executed.

A Berlin dispatch to the Swiss newspaper Der Bund said an incidental warning to German citizens declared Groebe tried to shake by critical remarks "the confident attitude" of many he came in contact with, in his business. The judgment against him said his criticism was "heavily directed against the Reich leadership and individuals heads of the government," and added "such persons have no right to live during the heavy battle for the existence of the German nation."

FORMER STAR MAN YEAR ON ST. CROIX

Happy today is Mrs. Alice Weber, of The Star's circulation department. Her husband, Telegraphist Leonard Weber was on the St. Croix for a year. He left the destroyer last July to take an advanced course in telegraphy at St. Hyacinthe, where he is now stationed. Before enlisting in the navy Weber worked in The Star's mailing room for almost four years. He was 22 when

BAIL IS REDUCED

There was nothing in the evidence that R. A. Irwin, former registrar of selective service, received any money, Magistrate Pritchard said this afternoon in special court as the preliminary hearing of four men charged with conspiracy in draft deferments concluded. Irwin, however, was committed for trial with Naiffe Stephen, Robert Allen and Robert Douglas. Charges against Norman Stephen, brother of Naiffe, were dropped.

In the Irwin case, the court said: "There is evidence that on several files in his office and under his control, with respect to men who were seeking deferments through Allen and Naiffe Stephen, Irwin made certain notations and in several instances the files under the jurisdiction or control of Irwin were mislaid or disappeared. There is further evidence that Naiffe Stephen was observed in his office.

"As to Naiffe Stephen, the evidence is that he had in his possession when arrested six call-up notices for different individuals ordering them to report for military training. There also is evidence that he received from various individuals large sums of money for the purpose of obtaining deferments, and evidence that in the cases referred to, defegments were granted. I have no hesitation in finding that there is sufficient evidence to send him on for trial.

"As to Allen, there is evidence that he was shadowed by the police. He was seen almost daily in the company of Naiffe Stephen and other young men who were applicants for deferment. Further, that money was exchanged between him and Naiffe Stephen. Books and papers were found in Allen's home with names of delinquents."

Regarding Douglas, Magistrate Pritchard said: "While the evidence is not strong, there is evidence that he jointly occupied room 214, 331 Bay St., with Naiffe Stephen. There is further evidence that he paid the rent for the premises and also that he cashed cheques issued by Naiffe Stephen. The R.C.M.P. further allege that they shadowed him and that he was seen in the presence of Naiffe."

"Regarding Norman Stephen, the only evidence that in any way links him with this charge is the fact that he happens to live with his brother, Naiffe, and that, whether knowingly or not, he received a deferment of his call-up. I cannot find on the evidence enough to justify that this accused be sent for trial."

J. Sedgwick, counsel for Irwin, strenuously objected to the proceedings. He claimed they were improper in the respect that his client should have been warned as to whether or not he had anything to say. He said:

"I should have been given the opportunity to call witnesses. I protest the way this has been done. It is useless for me to call them now. I wanted to call witnesses before you made up your mind. I will not now call them and I want my protest noted. I suggest that I should have been heard. I have never been so treated in a criminal court. My client is of previous good character. This is unheard of in a criminal case.

Those committed applied for bail and in each case it was reduced by 50 per cent. Naiffe Stephen's was cut from $20,000 to $10,000. Irwin's and Allen's bail was set at $5,000 and that of Douglas at $2,500.

"There is not a great deal of evidence against Norman Stephen," said John Robinette, special crown counsel. "He never reported for training, yet his master sheet was marked M.F.M. 12, which indicated that he had volunteered for active service and was rejected."

After the commital, Judge Parker was called into court and set bail for the four committed. Joseph Sedgwick, counsel for Irwin, told his honor that he desired to have his client tried before a judge without a jury.

"It would be unwise for me to make such a decision until the crown sees the attorney-general," said Judge Parker.

"I have already spoken to the attorney-general and so has Mr. Sedgwick," said John Robinette, crown counsel. "I propose, on Monday, to make formal application for a fiat directing that the case be tried with a jury in the supreme court of Ontario."

Mr. Sedgwick said that he would oppose this.

"In view of the crown's remarks, I will not take their election until Tuesday," said Judge Parker.

Lee Ainsworth, vice-president and general manager of John Inglis Company Ltd., told today's joint meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, at the Royal York hotel of the growth of his company since the outbreak of the war, with an increase in employees from 500 to 15,000.

"At the outbreak of the war the Bren gun contract called for 12,000 guns to be delivered over a period of five years—the present capacity is over 10,000 per month," he said.

The company was one of the first to use women in machine shop work, and now 60 per cent. of the plant's production machines are operated by women.

Absenteeism, he said, has been reduced 60 per cent. by providing service facilities on the premises, and by reducing the hours of work to three eight-hour shifts. Employees are automatically dismissed after four days' absence without leave.

out of the slower convoy on Saturday, Sept. 18. It was hit five minutes after Prime Minister Churchill broadcast that not one Allied ship had been lost in the North Atlantic to U-boats for four months, survivors said. (In the same broadcast, Churchill said a convoy was being attacked as he spoke.)

The following day, the faster convoy was attacked. A British frigate was the first ship hit—torpedoed as it rushed to attack a U-boat which had been detected. Twenty minutes after it had left the convoy, it sent out an S.O.S. that it had its bow blown off. Another escort ship went to her aid and took her in tow. It was believed to have subsequently sunk.

It was early Monday morning that "all hell broke loose" in the organized convoy itself, survivors said. Just as dawn was breaking, two U.S. Liberty freighters were hit within a few minutes of each other. One broke its back and its afterpart sank in less than two minutes. Many of her crew were thrown into the water by the blast. Only 38 — about half the crew—were picked up out of the oil-coated sea.

The second Liberty ship stayed afloat for four hours and all hands were saved by its lifeboats when a rescue ship picked them up.

Sub Upset Elopement

Among the survivors was Jerome Davis, Negro boatswain from Baltimore, who tried a new way of eloping with a girl, but he failed—no, it wasn't the father-in-law's fault this time—it was a Nazi submarine.

He was forced to bring his prospective bride, Miss James—from her hiding place in his cabin when the freighter on which he had planned to take her from England, where she had lived for some time, to the United States, was torpedoed. They got in a lifeboat together and were picked up by a rescue ship on which they were brought to this port—unfortunately for him. She is now being cared for temporarily in the Seamen's Institute, New York, with a glancing blow which did not cause excessive damage.

William V. Duffy, a lucky Irishman from Chicago, came through the ordeal with no greater physical injury than skinned knuckles, but recalled the experience as a "psychological nightmare." He was one of four saved of an engine room crew of 14 aboard one U.S. ship. The blast killed the entire engine room crew on watch at the time.

Duffy told of spending three hours in the freezing water and blinding oil before being picked up by a British rescue ship. He assisted in getting a shipmate out of the water, but the latter died shortly afterward.

Saw U-Boat Explode

Some Negroes reported seeing a U-boat explode after a direct shell hit from a warship.

"It was the best fireworks I ever saw," one said. "The shot must have hit his magazine. There was a great blast of flame and the sub was done."

Another group of survivors was from a Norwegian merchantman which sank within four minutes of being struck by a torpedo. Eight of the crew, seven men and a Danish woman stewardess, were lost out of a total of 36. The survivors were picked up by a Danish ship with Panamanian registry.

as the rescue ship was about to rejoin the convoy, its crew saw the escort ship, which they believed to be the St. Croix, blow up. Half an hour later two more merchant ships were torpedoed, but when the rescue ship reached their side, two other freighters were already picking up survivors. One of them was believed to have been sunk later with its load of rescued seamen.

Ordered to Return

Shortly before 5 o'clock the same morning another U.S. merchant ship was hit. The rescue ship was taking its crew aboard when a corvette in the convoy came up and ordered them to return to their vessel, saying it was not sinking. The crew returned, remanned their vessel, and with the corvette remaining close by, proceeded on its way. It later sank. The crew was picked up by the corvette and were being taken to St. John's, Nfld., when the latter ship was torpedoed, according to convoy reports.

On Friday, a week ago today, the convoy ran into another U-boat nest closing in on the ships. Heavy fog closed in after several hours of dodging the submarines and shielded the convoy again.

The fog remained until last Monday noon. Shortly after it lifted another S.O.S. was picked up from a ship which could not be seen. Crews of ships which arrived here safely did not know if any survivors were picked up.

The battle continued as the convoy neared the Canadian coast. Right up until a few hours before the surviving ships put into port here, depth charges were being dropped on suspected U-boats. Despite the protection it offered the convoy, the heavy fog was a hazard at times to the ships.

Corvettes Collided

Two corvettes collided almost [illegible] with a glancing blow which did not cause excessive damage.

[illegible] the corvettes [illegible] should be taken back to England unless provision can be made to have her accompany Davis to the United States.

She was smuggled aboard the American freighter at a British port.

Girl Stowaway a Mystery

The first the captain knew of her, he said, was when she started to climb the nets to the rescue ship.

Some survivors required hospital treatment. With one arm, which had been broken in a bus accident in Britain, still held in a sling, young red-headed Clyde A. Allen of Newport, Rhode Island, not only saved his own life but that of the ship's puppy mascot, Douglas.

Survivors of both Liberty ships said they couldn't realize their ships had been hit until after they took to the water.

"It was the last thing we expected—things had been quiet out there so long," said Earl Cromer, of Lockland, Ohio. But his vessel's skipper, one of the two Negro masters in the U.S. merchant navy, "had a premonition something was going to happen."

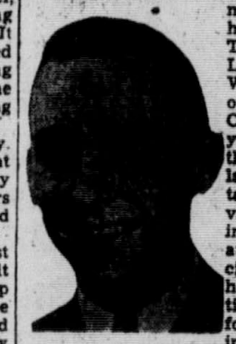

Three Times Torpedoed

"A couple of days before I started to leave my clothes on when I went to bed," he said. "The premonition seemed to grow with me and the [illegible] Det. Bond said an incidental warning to German citizens declared Groebe tried to shake by critical remarks "the confident attitude" of many he came in contact with, in his business. The judgment against him said his criticism was "heavily directed against the Reich leadership and individuals heads of the government," and added "such persons have no right to live during the heavy battle for the existence of the German nation."

FORMER STAR MAN YEAR ON ST. CROIX

Happy today is Mrs. Alice Weber, of The Star's circulation department. Her husband, Telegraphist Leonard Weber was on the St. Croix for a year. He left the destroyer last July to take an advanced course in telegraphy at St. Hyacinthe, where he is now stationed. Before enlisting in the navy Weber worked in The Star's mailing room for almost four years. He was 22 when he was called for service with the R.C.N.V.R. He volunteered two weeks after the war began.

Haunted By 'Murder' For 11 Years Confesses, Finds 'Victim' Alive

Newark, N.J., Oct. 1 — Seaman Joseph L. Carey, 42, wounded in the Allied landing at Oran, spent many sleepless nights in a Liverpool hospital.

One memory returned to haunt him endlessly — an eight-year-old girl dropping to the ground, blood flowing from stab wounds in her chest, neck and wrists. He saw himself stepping back from her limp body, the knife in his hand.

The scene remained with him when he returned, and he decided to confess. His confession solved the mystery of the kidnapping and stabbing of Anna Kleinhandler in a woods near Springfield, N.J., in October, 1932.

The seaman believed her dead, but Anna, now 19, is in a Newark high school. After the stabbing she wandered to a farm, where she was treated and taken to a hospital.

Carey is in custody.

papers were found in Alice's home [illegible]

Regarding Douglas [illegible] Pritchard said: "While the evidence is not strong, there is evidence that he jointly occupied room 214, 351 Bay St., with Naiffe Stephen. There is further evidence that he paid the rent for the premises and also that he cashed cheques issued by Naiffe Stephen. The R.C.M.P. further allege that they shadowed him and that he was seen in the presence of Naiffe."

"Regarding Norman Stephen, the only evidence that in any way links him with this charge is the fact that he happens to live with his brother, Naiffe, and that, whether knowingly or not, he received a deferment of his call-up. I cannot find on the evidence enough to justify that this accused be sent for trial."

J. Sedgwick, counsel for Irwin, After the commital, Judge Parker was called into court and set bail for the four committed. Joseph Sedgwick, counsel for Irwin, told his honor that he desired to have his client tried before a judge without a jury.

"It would be unwise for me to make such a decision until the crown sees the attorney-general," said Judge Parker.

"I have already spoken to the attorney-general and so has Mr. Sedgwick," said John Robinette, crown counsel. "I propose, on Monday, to make formal application for a fiat directing that the case be tried with a jury in the supreme court of Ontario."

Mr. Sedgwick said that he would oppose this.

"In view of the crown's remarks, I will not take their election until Tuesday," said Judge Parker.

SURVEY SHOWS 449 HOUSES NOW VACANT IN TORONTO

Assessment Department Reveals Total of 951 Dwellings Not Tenanted

A survey by the civic assessment department produced at today's meeting of the sub-committee on housing revealed a total of 449 vacant houses in Toronto. The survey was begun Jan. 2 of this year and completed Aug. 2.

It was suggested that the majority of the vacant houses were being held for sale.

Harry Matson, executive secretary of the assessment department, said the information was as yet [illegible] as to how many of these houses were habitable.

Other figures showed that there were vacant 118 apartments out of a total of 15,216; 55 duplex suites out of 9,238; eight triplex suites out of 2,049, and 324 apartments located over stores out of 15,053.

"These figures are inconsistent with a survey conducted by the street cleaning commission which show only 67 vacant houses, including apartments over stores," said Ald. Stewart Smith, chairman.

"It would be logical to assume that at least 100 of these 449 houses are in good shape and ready for occupancy," Ald. Smith said.

"No doubt many of them have been condemned, but we should find out what percentage are fit for habitation," stated Ald. Leslie Saunders.

Frank Dearlove, housing officer of the welfare department, said that, despite the survey, "If a family were evicted today we couldnt find a home for them."

Ald. Saunders: "We want to know how many vacant homes there are for rent right now. Some of those listed aren't fit for habitation are they?"

Mr. Watson: "Uninhabitable homes are not included."

He said that the number of vacancies were considerably lower than last year. "Each time a survey is made the number is substantially less, he said. All the 334 vacant apartments over stores have independent entrances from the street, he said. "This type of apartment, however, is not much sought after, although most of them are not in good shape."

A. W. Laver, welfare commissioner, said that many houses would have to be considerably repaired for occupation, but have not been condemned by civic authorities.

"We have soldiers' families living in intolerable conditions, but the fact is that many real estate owners do not want to rent these houses, but are holding them for sale," Ald. Smith said.

300 FLEE BY SEA AS DENMARK JEWS GESTAPO SOUGHT

Stockholm, Oct. 1 — (AP) — Three hundred Jews escaped the Gestapo in Nazi-dominated Denmark today by fleeing across the narrow sound in rowboats and other small craft and landing at Landskrona and Halsingborg, Sweden. The refugees said a general round-up of Jews got under way last night when new contingents of Gestapo agents and blackshirts arrived to reinforce Nazi secret police. Danes aided the Jews in their escape.

out of the slower convoy on Saturday, Sept. 18. It was hit five minutes after Prime Minister Churchill broadcast that not one Allied ship had been lost in the North Atlantic to U-boats for four months, survivors said. (In the same broadcast, Churchill said a convoy was being attacked as he spoke.)

The following day, the faster convoy was attacked. A British frigate was the first ship hit—torpedoed as it rushed to attack a U-boat which had been detected. Twenty minutes after it had left the convoy, it sent out an S.O.S. that it had its bow blown off. Another escort ship went to her aid and took her in tow. It was believed to have subsequently sunk.

It was early Monday morning that "all hell broke loose" in the organized convoy itself, survivors said. Just as dawn was breaking, two U.S. Liberty freighters were hit within a few minutes of each other. One broke its back" and its afterpart sank in less than two minutes. Many of her crew were thrown into the water by the blast. Only 38 — about half the crew—were picked up out of the oil-coated sea.

The second Liberty ship stayed afloat for four hours and all hands were saved by its lifeboats when a rescue ship picked them up.

Sub Upset Elopement

Among the survivors was Jerome Davis, Negro boatswain from Baltimore, who tried a new way of eloping with a girl, but he failed—no, it wasn't the father-in-law's fault this time—it was a Nazi submarine.

He was forced to bring his prospective bride—Miss James—from her hiding place in his cabin when the freighter on which he had planned to take her from England, where she had lived for some time, to the United States, was torpedoed. They got in a lifeboat together and were picked up by a rescue ship on which they were brought to this port—unfortunately for him. She is now being held by immigration authorities pending an investigation. He was presumed the 18-year-old girl would be taken back to England unless provision can be made to have her accompany Davis to the United States.

She was smuggled aboard the American freighter at a British port.

Girl Stowaway a Mystery

The first the captain knew of her, he said, was when she started to climb the nets to the rescue ship.

Some survivors required hospital treatment. With one arm, which had been broken in a bus accident in Britain, still held in a sling, young red-headed Clyde A. Allen of Newport, Rhode Island, not only saved his own life but that of the ship's puppy mascot, Douglas.

Survivors of both Liberty ships said they couldn't realize their ships had been hit until after they took to the water.

"It was the last thing we expected—things had been quiet out there so long," said Earl Cromer, of Lockland, Ohio. But his vessel's skipper, one of the two Negro masters in the U.S. merchant navy, "had a premonition something was going to happen."

Three Times Torpedoed

"A couple of days before I started to leave my clothes on when I went to bed," he said. "The premonition seemed to grow with me and the rescue ship was about to rejoin the convoy, its crew saw the escort ship, which they believed to be the St. Croix, blow up. Half an hour later two more merchant ships were torpedoed, but when the rescue ship reached their side, two other freighters were already picking up survivors. One of them was believed to have been sunk later with its load of rescued seamen.

Ordered to Return

Shortly before 5 o'clock the same morning another U.S. merchant ship was hit. The rescue ship was taking its crew aboard when a corvette in the convoy came up and ordered them to return to their vessel, saying it was not sinking. The crew returned, remanned their vessel, and with the corvette remaining close by, proceeded on its way. It later sank. The crew was picked up by the corvette and were being taken to St. John's, Nfld., when the latter ship was torpedoed, acording to convoy reports.

On Friday, a week ago today the convoy ran into another U-boat nest closing in on the ships. Heavy fog closed in after several hours of dodging the submarines and shielded the convoy again.

The fog remained until last Monday noon. Shortly after it lifted another S.O.S. was picked up from a ship which could not be seen. Crews of ships which arrived here safely did not know if any survivors were picked up.

The battle continued as the convoy neared the Canadian coast. Right up until a few hours before the surviving ships put into port here, depth charges were being dropped on suspected U-boats. Despite the protection it offered the convoy, the heavy fog was a hazard at times to the ships.

Corvettes Collided

Two corvettes collided almost head-on in the fog, each thinking the other was a submarine and trying to ram it. Luckily they struck with a glancing blow which did not cause excessive damage.

William V. Duffy, a lucky Irishman from Chicago, came through the ordeal with no greater physical injury than skinned knuckles, but recalled the experience as a "psychological nightmare." He was one of four saved of an engine room crew of 14 aboard one U.S. ship. The blast killed the entire engine room crew on watch at the time.

Duffy told of spending three hours in the freezing water and blinding oil before being picked up by a British rescue ship. He assisted in getting a shipmate out of the water, but the latter died shortly afterward.

Saw U-Boat Explode

Some Negroes reported seeing a U-boat explode after a direct shell hit from a warship.

"It was the best fireworks I ever saw," one said. "The shot must have hit his magazine. There was a great blast of flame and the sub was gone."

Another group of survivors was from a Norwegian merchantman which sank within four minutes of being struck by a torpedo. Eight of the crew, seven men and a Danish woman stewardess, were lost out of a total of 36. The survivors were picked up by a Danish ship with Panamanian registry.

FORMER STAR MAN YEAR ON ST. CROIX

Happy today is Mrs. Alice Weber, of The Star's circulation department. Her husband, Telegraphist Leonard Weber was on the St. Croix for a year. He left the destroyer last July to take an advanced course in telegraphy at St. Hyacinthe, where he is now stationed. Before enlisting in the navy Weber worked in The Star's mailing room for almost four years. He was 22 when he was called for service with the R.C.N.V.R. He volunteered two weeks after the war began.

Haunted By 'Murder' For 11 Years Confesses, Finds 'Victim' Alive

Newark, N.J., Oct. 1 — Seaman Joseph L. Carey, 42, wounded in the Allied landing at Oran, spent many sleepless nights in a Liverpool hospital.

One memory returned to haunt him endlessly — an eight-year-old girl dropping to the ground, blood flowing from slab wounds in her chest, neck and wrists. He saw himself stepping back from her limp body, the knife in his hand.

The scene remained with him when he returned, and he decided to confess. His confession solved the mystery of the kidnapping and stabbing of Anna Kleinhandler in a woods near Springfield, N.J., in October, 1932.

The seaman believed her dead, but Anna, now 19, is in a Newark high school. After the stabbing she wandered to a farm, where she was treated and taken to a hospital.

Carey is in custody.

papers were found in Allen's home with names of delinquents.

Regarding Douglas, Magistrate Pritchard said: "While the evidence is not strong, there is evidence that he jointly occupied room 214, 331 Bay St., with Naiffe Stephen. There is further evidence that he paid the rent for the premises and also that he cashed cheques issued by Naiffe Stephen. The R.C.M.P. further allege that they shadowed him and that he was seen in the presence of Naiffe."

"Regarding Norman Stephen, the only evidence that in any way links him with this charge is the fact that he happens to live with his brother, Naiffe, and that, whether knowingly or not, he received a deferment of his call-up. I cannot find on the evidence enough to justify that this accused be sent for trial."

J. Sedgwick, counsel for Irwin, After the committal, Judge Parker was called into court and set bail for the four committed. Joseph Sedgwick, counsel for Irwin, told his honor that he desired to have his client tried before a judge without a jury.

"It would be unwise for me to make such a decision until the crown sees the attorney-general," said Judge Parker.

"I have already spoken to the attorney-general and so has Mr. Sedgwick," said John Robinette, crown counsel. "I propose, on Monday, to make formal application for a fiat directing that the case be tried with a jury in the supreme court of Ontario."

Mr. Sedgwick said that he would oppose this.

"In view of the crown's remarks, I will not take their election until Tuesday," said Judge Parker.

SURVEY SHOWS 449 HOUSES NOW VACANT IN TORONTO

Assessment Department Reveals Total of 951 Dwellings Not Tenanted

A survey by the civic assessment department produced at today's meeting of the sub-committee on housing revealed a total of 449 vacant houses in Toronto. The survey was begun Jan. 2 of this year and completed Aug. 2.

It was suggested that the majority of the vacant houses were being held for sale.

Harry Matson, executive secretary of the assessment department, said that no information was as yet forthcoming as to how many of these houses were habitable.

Other figures showed that there were vacant 113 apartments out of a total of 15,216; 55 duplex suites out of 9,238; eight triplex suites out of 2,049, and 334 apartments located over stores out of 15,053.

"These figures are inconsistent with a survey conducted by the street cleaning commission which show only 67 vacant houses, including apartments over stores," said Ald. Stewart Smith, chairman.

"It would be logical to assume that at least 100 of these 449 houses are in good shape and ready for occupancy," Ald. Smith said.

"No doubt many of them have been condemned, but we should find out what percentage are fit for habitation," stated Ald. Leslie Saunders.

Frank Dearlove, housing officer of the welfare department, said that, despite the survey, "If a family were evicted today we couldnt find a home for them."

Ald. Saunders: "We want to know how many vacant homes there are for rent right now. Some of those listed aren't fit for habitation are they?"

Mr. Watson: "Uninhabitable homes are not included."

He said that the number of vacancies were considerably lower than last year. "Each time a survey is made the number is substantially less, he said. All the 334 vacant apartments over stores have independent entrances from the street, he said. "This type of apartment, however, is not much sought after, although most of them are not in good shape."

A. W. Laver, welfare commissioner, said that many houses would have to be considerably repaired for occupation, but have not been condemned by civic authorities.

"We have soldiers' families living in intolerable conditions, but the fact is that many real estate owners do not want to rent these houses, but are holding them for sale," Ald. Smith said.

300 FLEE BY SEA AS DENMARK JEWS GESTAPO SOUGHT

Stockholm, Oct. 1 — (AP) — Three hundred Jews escaped the Gestapo in Nazi-dominated Denmark today by fleeing across the narrow sound in rowboats and other small craft and landing at Landskrona and Halsingborg, Sweden. The refugees said a general round-up of Jews got under way last night when new contingents of Gestapo agents and blackshirts arrived to reinforce Nazi secret police. Danes aided the Jews in their escape.

Says St. Croix Already Avenged

HAMILTON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—The loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, with loss of almost her entire crew, "will be avenged, nay, I believe that she has already been avenged," Navy Minister Macdonald said in an address prepared for delivery at the opening of the new naval barracks, H.M.C.S. "This ship," said Mr. Macdonald, "was one of the destroyers acquired by us from the United States three years ago. She had given valiant service and had sunk a U-boat in the Atlantic last year.

Now she, herself, in turn has felt the weight and the force of German torpedoes and she will fight no more. . . Other ships and other men will take the place of the St. Croix and her crew, and they will carry on relentlessly and successfully the fight against these underwater marauders."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(A.P.)—President Roosevelt said today the objective of Allied forces in Italy is to free Rome, the Vatican and the Pope, much in the manner of a crusade, while at the same time avoiding all possible destruction.

Mr. Roosevelt showed some skepticism at a press conference about news reports that the Germans might make their next stand on the line of Rome, now that the Allies have entered Naples. He said he did not think even Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean, knew where the next stand would be.

He said three minutes before the news conference opened he had received a flash from the general saying that Allied troops had entered Naples.

The President said there was one thing he could say—that naturally the advance is going to continue and that every effort is being made by the Allies to prevent damage to Rome and the Vatican. They are doing everything possible to prevent active fighting leading to destruction in Rome.

Holy Father Not Free

It is clear the Germans occupy Rome and that the Vatican is essentially surrounded, the President said. German troops are in the colonnade around St. Peter's Square, and while he did not wish to say that the Holy Father was in a state of siege, he pointed out that complete freedom cannot be had if troops are in your front yard and inspect every one coming in and going out.

Asked whether he thought it possible the German armies might attempt to induce destruction by the Allies, he said that was perfectly possible.

The resolution was sponsored by the temperance societies of Quebec, in both French and English groups.

Battle of Kiev Is Raging With Unabated Fury

Both Sides Hurl Forces Into What May Be Decisive Struggle of War.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—The Battle of Kiev, expected here to be one of the decisive struggles of the war, raged with unabated fury today with both Russians and Germans throwing tremendous forces of artillery, infantry and air power into the fight to achieve mastery of the Dnieper line.

The Germans were entrenched in the ancient city-fortress high on the western cliffs of the Dnieper river, while the pick of the Russian Ukrainian armies faced them across the 100-yard water barrier that separates Kiev from its eastern bank suburbs, already in Soviet hands.

In the battle may rest the fate of the German armies in the great Dnieper bend south of Kiev and in the Crimea, as well as control of the Black Sea.

Storm Into Krichev

On the White Russian front to the north, a Russian communique said, Red Army troops stormed into Krichev, strategic rail junction 57 miles east of the Dnieper on the road to Mogilev and Minsk. Other columns, the bulletin declared, captured Bayevo and Lebedevo, east and southeast of Orsha, another rail center, while in a continuation of their drive on Zhlobin, third important transportation hub in this area, Soviet spearheads overwhelmed the towns of Svetilovichi, Staiki and Ivtanovka.

Premier Joseph Stalin hailed the fall of Krichev in another order of the day. The Russian communique said 2,200 Germans were killed, numerous prisoners taken, and 170 towns captured in the drives on White Russia. Gains of ffom six to seven miles were recorded.

"When the starboard inner (engine) caught fire and Don feathered he would not have been able to make another circuit of the field," said Bombardier PO. H. M. Macdonald of West Vancouver, B.C.

"He set down the kite just as well as if he had the use of all four motors."

Flt. Lt. Don Paterson is the 25-year-old son of Senator and Mrs. N. M. Paterson of 500 Wilbrod street. Enlisting in the R.C.A.F. in June, 1940, he went overseas with his brother, Flt. Lt. John N. Paterson, in February last.

In December 1942 he married the former Elizabeth Catherine Mackintosh of Toronto, who resides there with her parents.

Now she, herself, in turn has felt the weight and the force of German torpedoes and she will fight no more. . . Other ships and other men will take the place of the St. Croix and her crew, and they will carry on relentlessly and successfully the fight against these underwater marauders."

German Navy Claims 18 Allied Vessels

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—The German news agency, D.N.B., claimed in a broadcast today that German navy sank 18 Allied merchantmen, totalling 113,300 tons during September.

U-boats accounted for 88,700 tons of this figure, the broadcast said.

[illegible] Allied destroyers [illegible] sunk, damaged and [illegible] were destroyed.

Commission Training Ship

HAMILTON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—His Majesty's Canadian ship Star, former name inland training ship of the Royal Canadian Navy, was commissioned today in Eastwood Park.

Today on Europe's Battlefronts

The following summary of the most important news this morning's issue of the London News Chronicle has been issued to The Associated Press by its London News Bureau. (Copyright, 1943, by The Southam Co.)

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The German withdrawal from Naples is [illegible] of an orderly series of sharply-fought rearguard actions with delaying tactics such as minefields and the destruction of bridges. It is probable the enemy will take to the mountains again for his next stand. However, the Eighth Army already constitutes a threat to his left flank. British casualties up to September 20, killed, wounded and missing, were 5,211, the United States less than 3,500.

As for Marshal Badoglio's offer of help to General Eisenhower at their meeting aboard the British warship Nelson, The Times Algiers correspondent says this help cannot be much in land operations as Italian soldiers, apart from a few fanatical black-shirts now in the German camp, are utterly weary of war. However, Badoglio could furnish men for work behind the war-fronts, unloading ships, [illegible] and [illegible] and thus release Allied soldiers for [illegible]

The Times diplomatic correspondent, she will need to take a bigger share in the fighting than hitherto.

The plight of those Italians in German power in northern Italy is desperate. They would have helped the Allies but now the Germans are bent on exterminating them as they have already done with the so-called Communists in Naples. A Communist, in the Nazis' eyes, means anyone who refuses to go as a slave laborer to Germany. Italy's position will be discussed by the Allied foreign ministers' forthcoming conference, which The Times contradictions Washington reports, says may or may not be held in London.

Harriman Named Envoy to Russia

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(A.P.)—W. Averell Harriman was nominated by President Roosevelt today to be United States Ambassador to Russia.

Harriman was named to succeed Admiral William D. Standley, who returned recently to make a report on the Soviet government's attitude toward projected Anglo-American-Russian war talks.

Harriman, who will be 52 next month, has been lease-lend administrator in London since 1941. Born to wealth—he was the son of E. H. Harriman, railroad builder—the President's choice for the Moscow position has been prominent in Washington almost from the beginning of the New Deal.

Given $3,000 Award In Undefended Suit

Because the defendant did not appear in court in person or represented by counsel, Mr. Justice J. A. Hope, presiding in the Ontario Supreme Court this morning, gave judgment for the plaintiff for $3,000 and costs in a damage suit brought by Michael Nelligan, 60-year-old elevator operator against Alice Mabel Lindsay, both of Ottawa.

The plaintiff's claim was that he was [illegible] and injured by a car driven by the defendant at the corner of Nepean and Kent streets on June 23, 1941. He was stand would be.

He said three minutes before the news conference opened he had received a flash from the general saying that Allied troops had entered Naples.

The President said there was one thing he could say—that naturally the advance is going to continue and that every effort is being made by the Allies to prevent damage to Rome and the Vatican. They are doing everything possible to prevent active fighting leading to destruction in Rome.

Holy Father Not Free

It is clear the Germans occupy Rome and that the Vatican is essentially surrounded, the President said. German troops are in the colonnade around St. Peter's Square, and while he did not want to say that the Holy Father was in a state of siege, he pointed out that complete freedom cannot be had if troops are in your front yard and inspect every one coming in and going out.

Asked whether he thought it possible the German armies might attempt to induce destruction by the Allies, he said that was perfectly possible.

Wife of Survivor Voices Gratitude

CALGARY, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—One of the most grateful women in Canada today is Mrs. Marjorie Fisher, wife of First Class Stoker William A. Fisher of Black Diamond—the only man of 147 to survive the St. Croix torpedoing.

Fisher, [illegible] works in a Black Diamond [illegible] on the night shift, [illegible] Monday she got a telegram from Ottawa to say that her husband was missing. Two hours later she got a telephone call, also from Ottawa, to say that her husband was safe.

Mrs. Fisher said that Fisher was proud of being a sailor in the Canadian navy. "He always said in his letters how much he liked the life," she said, "and how much he wanted to get ahead. He always said he'd like to stay in the navy for 21 years."

"Bill" Fisher, now 23 years old, was born in Victoria, B.C., joined the navy in the fall of 1939. Returning home on leave in 1941, he married Marie Nesbitt, an attractive Black Diamond girl.

Report Convoy Passes Gibraltar Str[illegible]

MADRID, Oct. 1.—(A.P.)—A large Allied convoy, strongly escorted by warships, [illegible] through the Strait of Gibraltar yesterday en route from the Mediterranean to the Atlantic, dispatches from La Linea said.

The dispatches also reported that about 35 merchant ships and the British aircraft carrier Formidable and Illustrious were lying in the bay at Gibraltar, apparently awaiting clearance [illegible]

Black Marketer Given Jail Term And Fined $900

Convicted of operating a "one-man black market" in foodstuffs, nine charges in all in addition to another charge laid under the Meat and Canned Foods Act, Rene Charette, of 161 Clarence street, was this morning sentenced by Magistrate Glenn E. Strike to serve three months in jail on one count and was fined $100 and costs on each of the other charges, a total of $900 or the alternative of six months in jail on each count, the jail sentences to be concurrent.

Charette pleaded guilty to all offences. He operated his private commercial vehicle, a truck, a greater distance than 35 miles, in fact drove it between Ottawa and Montreal in the course of his business; he failed to keep adequate books or records available for inspection showing clearly and correctly his prices and terms of sale; being a wholesale distributor, he unlawfully sold jams at prices higher than the maximum allowed by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board; he failed to keep a

Fined For Having Loose Gas Coupons

Magistrate Glenn Strike this morning fined Rene Auger, 39, of 188 Hinchey avenue, $75 and costs when he pleaded guilty to having five loose coupons. Auger was caught by a police constable when he drove through a red light, and for this offence the penalty was $4 and costs.

J. L. Villeneuve, 24, an airman in the R.C.A.F., admitted having 13 commercial gas coupons in his possession, but due to extenuating circumstances the magistrate levied a fine of only $50 and costs in this case.

Salam Berthiaume, of Edwards, Ont., owner of a house at 268 Clarence street, pleaded guilty to collecting a higher rent than allowed by the law, and was fined $25 and costs. His tenant, Mrs. Laura Gosselin, admitted paying the higher figure, and for this offence she was fined $5 and costs.

Germans Flee On Corsican Fronts

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—The Algiers radio, quoting a French communique, said today that the Germans had been forced to [illegible] all fronts in Corsica.

"Mixed Drinking"

A recommendation to "petition provincial government that all mixed drinking be stopped and that men and women drink in separate rooms, so that all promiscuous drinking throughout Canada could be eliminated," was contained in a resolution passed by the Canadian Temperance Federation at its meeting in the Chateau Laurier this morning. The resolution was sponsored by the temperance societies of Quebec, in both French and English groups.

The report of the resolutions committee was presented by Rev. J. Stanley Packham of Saskatoon. A resolution suggesting the "establishment in Canada of regional hospitals and clinics to treat inebriates without cost where necessary," and urging that "courts should commit habitual drunkards to these hospitals rather than to prison," was unanimously passed.

"That a committee on temperance education be appointed by the provincial governments to promote better temperance education in the schools and among young people, as well as adults, and that the provincial governments provide a grant for this purpose," was a resolution to be sent to each [illegible] temperance society [illegible] action.

With [illegible] whole [illegible] methods [illegible] purposes, the [illegible] resolution:

[illegible] this federation still [illegible] to its objectives, namely, the final and complete elimination of the liquor traffic from our national life, we believe that the huge profits made by liquor producers and liquor sellers constitute a grave menace to political integrity and good citizenship, we believe that the proposition to eliminate the private operation and profit in the liquor business under a system that would prevent government departments from being financed by liquor profits is one that should be carefully studied by temperance people. Therefore, the federation recommends that the executive be instructed to set up a committee to study the question and refer the results of such study to each unit for their consideration and report."

Only by Govt. Sale.

It was the opinion of the federation "that all sale and distribution of liquor should be only through government stores."

Rev. H. W. Avison, of Dominion United church, Ottawa, reported that the C.C.F. had refused to accept contributions to its party funds from brewers or distillers, and expressed the opinion that the federation should express its appreciation of the stand taken by the C.C.F. Following discussion a suggested resolution was referred to the resolutions committee.

Dnieper bend south of Kiev and in the Crimea, as well as control of the Black Sea.

Storm Into Krichev

On the White Russian front to the north, a Russian communique said, Red Army troops stormed into Krichev, strategic rail junction 57 miles east of the Dnieper on the road to Mogilev and Minsk. Other columns, the bulletin declared, captured Bayevo and Lebedevo, east and southeast of Orsha, another rail center, while in a continuation of their drive on Zhlobin, third important transportation hub in this area, Soviet spearheads overwhelmed the towns of Svetilovichi, Staiki and Ivanovica.

Premier Joseph Stalin hailed the fall of Krichev in another order of the day. The Russian communique said 2,200 Germans were killed, numerous prisoners taken, and 170 towns captured in the drives on White Russia. Gains of from six to seven miles were recorded.

Frank MacIntyre Glebe Head Boy

Frank MacIntyre was elected head boy of Glebe Collegiate and president of the Student Council, and Jean Scott, head girl and vice-president of the council, by the [illegible] of the fifth forms at the Collegiate today.

Frank MacIntyre is the son of Col. (Lt. R.) MacIntyre, general manager of the Canadian Legion War Services, and Mrs. MacIntyre of 181A Fourth avenue. An honor student as well as a fine athlete, Frank plays football for the school team, bones, skis and plays basketball.

Jean Scott, also an honor student, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Scott, 381 Huron avenue. Miss Scott is active in the school sports, particularly basketball, and in the past year did a splendid job as president of the war work committee, planning and co-ordinating the school war work program.

Space Committee Goes to Ash-Heap

Another wartime innovation which saw the light of day scarcely more than a year ago—the government interdepartmental space planning committee—has been relegated to the ash-heap.

From all accounts the committee, which started out with high hopes and the best of intentions, just didn't seem to function the way it was hoped it would.

The purpose of the committee was to smooth out disagreements and misunderstandings between various departments in respect to the allocation of office space, new buildings, etc. In theory the committee sounded good, but in practice it was found that it didn't know as much about a particular department's requirements as the head of that department.

2 Motors Damaged

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(C.P. cable)—Flt. Lt. Don Paterson of Ottawa, son of Senator Norman McLeod Paterson, brought down his Lancaster bomber to a perfect landing following Wednesday night's R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. raid on Bochum, although both inboard engines were cut and one caught fire as he was circling the field, it was disclosed today.

"When the starboard inner (engine) caught fire and Don feathered he would not have been able to make another circuit of the field," said Bombardier P/O. H. M. Macdonald of West Vancouver, B.C.

"He set down the kite just as well as if he had the use of all four motors."

Flt. Lt. Don Paterson is the 28-year-old son of Senator and Mrs. N. M. Paterson of 500 Wilbrod street. Enlisting in the R.C.A.F. in June, 1940, he went overseas with his brother, Flt. Lt. John N. Paterson, in February last.

In December 1942 he married the former Elizabeth Catherine Mackintosh of Toronto, who resides there with her parents.

German Munitions Vessel Explodes

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—A steamship [illegible] which [illegible] exploded in the harbor of Naples after an Allied air raid, the Berlin radio said today.

The steamship first was set afire in the air raid, and the blaze attracted many people whom the Italian police were unable to disperse, the broadcast said, continuing:

"Suddenly the steamship (apparently German) exploded, causing a great number of dead and considerable damage to harbor facilities. A report about the event was not published at the time in order not to give the enemy useful information."

Says St. Croix Already Avenged

HAMILTON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—The loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, with loss of almost her entire crew, "will be avenged, nay, I believe that she has already been avenged," Navy Minister Macdonald said in an address prepared for delivery at the opening of the new naval barracks, H.M.C.S. Star, here.

"This ship," said Mr. Macdonald, "was one of the destroyers acquired by us from the United States three years ago. She had given valiant service and had sunk a U-boat in the Atlantic last year.

Now she, herself, in turn has felt the weight and the force of German torpedoes and she will fight no more. . . other ships and other men will take the place of the St. Croix and her crew, and they will carry on relentlessly and successfully the fight against these underwater marauders."

German Navy Claims 18 Allied Vessels

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—The German news agency, D.N.B., claimed in a broadcast today that the German navy sank 18 Allied merchantmen, totalling 113,200 tons during September.

U-boats accounted for 88,700 tons of this figure, the broadcast said.

In the same period, it was claimed, 17 Allied destroyers were sunk and three destroyers and a cruiser were damaged.

Commission Training Ship

HAMILTON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—His Majesty's Canadian ship Star, former little inland training ship of the Royal Canadian Navy, was commissioned today in Eastwood Park.

Another wartime innovation which saw the light of day scarcely more than a year ago—the government interdepartmental space planning committee—has been relegated to the ash-heap.

From all accounts the committee, which started out with high hopes and the best of intentions, just didn't seem to function the way it was hoped it would.

The purpose of the committee was to smooth out disagreements and misunderstandings between various departments in respect to the allocation of office space, new buildings, etc. In theory the committee sounded good, but in practice it was found that it didn't know as much about a particular department's requirements as the head of that department.

2 Motors Damaged

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(C.P. cable)—Flt. Lt. Don Paterson of Ottawa, son of Senator Norman McLeod Paterson, brought down his Lancaster bomber to a perfect landing following Wednesday night's R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. raid on Bochum, although both inboard engines were cut and one caught fire as he was circling the field, it was disclosed today.

"When the starboard inner (engine) caught fire and Don feathered he would not have been able to make another circuit of the field," said Bombardier PO. H. M. Macdonald of West Vancouver, B.C.

"He set down the kite just as well as if he had the use of all four motors."

Flt. Lt. Don Paterson is the 25-year-old son of Senator and Mrs. N. M. Paterson of 500 Wilbrod street. Enlisting in the R.C.A.F. in June, 1940, he went overseas with his brother, Flt. Lt. John N. Paterson, in February last.

In December 1942 he married the former Elizabeth Catherine Mackintosh of Toronto, who resides there with her parents.

German Munitions Vessel Explodes

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(C.P.)—A steamship laden with ammunition exploded in the harbor of Naples after an Allied air raid, the Berlin radio said today.

The steamship first was set afire in the air raid, and the blaze attracted many people whom the Italian police were unable to disperse, the broadcast said, continuing:

"Suddenly the steamship (apparently German) exploded, causing a great number of dead and considerable damage to harbor facilities. A report about the event was not published at the time in order not to give the enemy useful information."

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(CP)—The Moose Squadron of the Canadian bomber group, led by Wing Cmdr. M. M. Fleming, of Ottawa, marked up its 1,000th sortie of 1943 when it took part in Wednesday night's heavy R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. attack on Bochum in the Ruhr.

Lt.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson, 42, of Halifax, was in command of St. Croix and is listed among the missing.

So is Lt.-Cmdr. P. F. M. DeFreitas, of Victoria, recently cited for fine work in command of one of the Canadian ships which assisted the United States Navy in operations against the Aleutian Islands in the Pacific. DeFreitas was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, having joined her less than a week before as part of an advanced training course.

The Navy made public the names of the 146 missing men.

Men from all provinces, many with long records at sea in the ceaseless struggle waged by the Canadian Navy against submarines, are missing. A short time ago Prime Minister Churchill was able to announce that no ship had been sunk in the Atlantic for four months but he also said the submarines were back and attacking a convoy at that moment.

At a recent press conference Navy Minister Macdonald spoke of a marked lull in submarine warfare in the Atlantic and attributed it to the "tremendous battering" the submarines had taken earlier in the Summer.

One of the factors in that battering was the introduction of long-range aircraft patrols over the Atlantic and, as expected when the submarines again appeared they had heavy anti-aircraft gun installations enabling them to stay on the surface and fight against a bomber, instead of diving when attacked as they used to do.

There is no indication yet whether in their four-month rest, licking earlier wounds, the enemy submarine crews have developed better means of combating surface ships like destroyers and corvettes, but some revision in [illegible] Mr. Churchill said the U-boats were no doubt fitted with what was thought to be the newest and best equipment.

In the intensified submarine warfare against Atlantic convoys now apparently reopened, the Canadian Navy will play a major role. Convoy operations in the western half of the North Atlantic are under Canadian naval control, although both British and United States ships may be serving in the area.

The long-range air patrols are carried out by squadrons of the R.C.A.F. using Liberator bombers and operating in co-operation with the Canadian Navy.

She is the fourth destroyer lost, but first of the former U. S. "four-stackers" received by Canada to go down. Besides the destroyers the Navy has lost six corvettes, two patrol vessels and a minesweeper, either by mishap at sea or enemy action.

The toll of life in the St. Croix sinking—146 reported missing—is the largest single loss in men, just topping the loss of 142 when the destroyer Margaree was sunk in the North Atlantic, cut in two by a large steamship while manoeuvring in defence of a convoy against a night submarine attack.

Lt.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson, 42, of Halifax, was in command of St. Croix and is listed among the missing.

So is Lt.-Cmdr. P. F. M. DeFreitas, of Victoria, recently cited for fine work in command of one of the Canadian ships which assisted the United States Navy in operations against the Aleutian Islands in the Pacific. DeFreitas was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, having joined her less than a week before as part of an advanced training course.

The Navy made public the names of the 146 missing men.

Men from all provinces, many with long records at sea in the ceaseless struggle waged by the Canadian Navy against submarines, are missing. The casualty list shows 50 whose next-of-kin live in Ontario, 22 in Quebec, 15 in British Columbia, 14 in Nova Scotia, nine in Manitoba, eight in Saskatchewan, seven in Alberta, six in New Brunswick and two in Prince Edward Island.

Five have next-of-kin in Newfoundland, three in England, three in the United States and two in Scotland.

Cmdr. Dobson, a master mariner in civilian life, had already won distinction with his ship. He received the Distinguished Service Cross.

Sudden Death.

Ontario's Provincial Police Commissioner, Colonel Thomas Wilson, died suddenly at his home in Toronto on Thursday. He was 68 years of age.

Colonel Wilson was born in Ireland and came to Canada as a boy. He was appointed Provincial Police Commissioner in 1909.

Surviving are his wife, a son, Lieut. Thomas Wilson, R.C.A.F., and a daughter, Mrs. Ralph Bell, of Toronto.

The funeral will be held on Saturday, with interment in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

SUNK IN ATLANTIC.

Ottawa's Minister of Munitions and Supply, C. D. Howe, said on Thursday that the St. Croix was sunk in the Atlantic for four months but he also said the submarines were back and attacking a convoy at that moment.

At a recent press conference Navy Minister Macdonald spoke of a marked lull in submarine warfare in the Atlantic and attributed it to the "tremendous battering" the submarines had taken earlier in the Summer.

One of the factors in that battering was the introduction of long-range aircraft patrols over the Atlantic and, as expected, when the submarines again appeared they had heavy anti-aircraft gun installations enabling them to stay on the surface and fight against a bomber, instead of diving when attacked as they used to do.

There is no indication yet whether in their four-month rest, licking earlier wounds, the enemy submarine crews have developed better means of combating surface ships like destroyers and corvettes, but some revision in tactics has been expected on their return. In his recent speech Mr. Churchill said the U-boats were no doubt fitted with what was thought to be the newest and best equipment.

In the intensified submarine warfare against Atlantic convoys now apparently reopened, the Canadian Navy will play a major role. Convoy operations in the western half of the North Atlantic are under Canadian naval control, although both British and United States ships may be serving in the area.

The long-range air patrols are carried out by squadrons of the R.C.A.F. using Liberator bombers and operating in co-operation with the Canadian Navy.

13 DIE IN BLAST.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 1.—(BUP)—Thirteen dead and scores of wounded were counted today after 48 tons of dynamite blew up at the Paulo Frontin station of the Sao Paulo-Rio Grande Railway yesterday.

W. R. COOMBS.

After a lengthy illness, William Robert Coombs died at his home as Bowesville, this morning. He was 48 years of age.

He was married 21 years ago to the former Mary Ethel Lusk and they farmed in the Bowesville district for many years. For the past two years he was fireman at Uplands Airport. He was a member of the United Church.

Left to mourn his loss are his mother, Mrs. William Coombs; his wife; four sons, John, David, James, and Milton, all at home; two daughters, Barbara, of the staff of the Dependents' Allowance Board, and Marion, in the Naval Branch, Department of National Defence; a brother, Eli, of Mountain road, and a sister, Mrs. A. Knowles, of Vancouver, B.C.

The funeral service will be held in the chapel of Hulse & Playfair, 315 McLeod street, on Sunday, at 1.45 p.m. Rev. B. Mallalieu, of Manotick, will conduct. Interment will be in Johnston's Corners cemetery.

ARTHUR R. BAKER.

A veteran of the First Great War, Arthur Robert Baker, 363 Cumberland street, died on Thursday in Ottawa Civic Hospital after an illness of three weeks, in his 68th year. He was employed in the Records branch of the Canadian Army, and was a member of the Canadian Legion.

Mr. Baker was born in Sussex, England, and lived for many years, before and after the last war, in Humboldt, Sask., where he farmed, until he came to Ottawa. His wife, Violet, predeceased him by some years. Two sons survive him, Cpl. Russell Baker, R.C.A.F. Service Police, Trenton, Ont., and Robert, serving overseas with the Canadian Army.

The funeral will be held on Saturday. Service will be conducted at George H. Rogers, Ltd., 172 Elgin street, and interment will be in Beechwood cemetery.

Hamilton, Oct. 1.—(CP)—Loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix with loss of almost her entire crew "will be avenged; nay, I believe that she has already been avenged," Hon. Angus Macdonald, minister of defence for naval affairs, said in an address prepared for delivery at the opening of the new naval barracks, H.M.C.S. Star, here.

"This ship," said Mr. Macdonald, "had given valiant service, and had sunk a U-boat in the Atlantic last year.

"Now, she will fight no more . . . other ships and other men will take the place of the St. Croix and her crew. They will carry on relentlessly and successfully the fight against these underwater marauders."

Hamilton, Oct. 1—(CP)—Loss of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix with loss of almost her entire crew, "will be avenged; nay, I believe that she has already been avenged," Hon. Angus Macdonald, minister of defence for naval affairs, said in an address prepared for delivery at the opening of the new naval barracks, H.M.C.S. Star, here.

"This ship," said Mr. Macdonald, "had given valiant service, and had sunk a U-boat in the Atlantic last year.

"Now, she will fight no more . . . other ships and other men will take the place of the St. Croix and her crew. They will carry on relentlessly and successfully the fight against these underwater marauders."

Mr. Macdonald said he hoped it will be possible to have some aircraft carriers in the Canadian navy within a reasonable time. Next year it is hoped to add cruiser strength to the serviee.

"Before the end of this year we hope to add 20 new ships to the Canadian navy of the escort type, and 100 more of the same style and class are either being built or are projected for the Canadian navy.

"More than 400 members of the Canadian navy have been honored by the King for gallant and distinguished service. More than 1,000 have given their lives, and 13 Canadian naval ships have been sunk."

R.C.N.V.R. divisions have given the naval service more than 80 per cent. of its enrolment, "and the accomplishments of these civilians have rightly commanded the admiration not only of their own fellow citizens but of every member of the United Nations," the minister said.

"A year ago we were able to say that some 47 per cent. of convoy work in the North Atlantic was borne by Canadian ships, officered and manned by men of the Canadian navy," he said.

"The battle against the U-boat continues. It will continue until the war is won. We may drive the enemy out of Sicily and out of North Africa, we may have an end of the fight in this or that theatre of war before the end of the general struggle—before complete and final victory is ours—but the enemy will fight in the Atlantic to the end . . . He can do none other."

He warned that further attacks against Allied shipping in the Atlantic must be expected, and "we must be prepared for other bitter blows."

Merchant shipping tonnage is growing in a degree that "far outstrips" our losses. Naval and air power is greater than before. Despite sinkings and casualties "the line still holds, the men and the ships are still getting through."

JUNIOR HORSE SHOW TO AID BOMB VICTIMS

Glen Mawr Academy Scene of Saturday Afternoon Competition

The sixth annual Glen Mawr junior horse show and gymkhana will be held at the Glen Mawr Riding academy, R. R. No. 1, Todmorden, Saturday afternoon, to raise money for the Red Cross British Bomb Victim's Fund.

This junior riding club was organized six years ago by Miss Ruth Edwards and more than 50 of her pupils, varying in age from 4 to 15 years, will compete in the various classes.

Mrs. Churchill Mann and Mrs. Bruce King will judge the events. Fourteen-year-old Gordon Henderson will announce the show.

The Red Cross British Bomb Victim's Fund will benefit from the sale of programs and a voluntary collection in addition to which each member has donated 25 cents. The proceeds from a raffle for a goat will also be added to the fund.

The route to get to Glen Mawr stables is as follows: East on Lawrence Ave., then north on Bayview Ave. to York Mills Rd., then east to the first crossing turning south to the stables.

HIGH SCHOOL ENROLMENT CUT AS 'TEEN AGERS TAKE JOBS

Most Decrease in Higher Forms, District Principals Say

LIKE HIGH WAGES

The tendency for older boys to leave school and start work at ages earlier than they did during peace years is cutting into the enrolment figures of secondary schools, high school principals said today.

"A number of our students have left school this year and last year to go to work," said E. H. Glenn, principal of Mimico high school. "They are choosing present high wages in preference to training for the future. Most of our decrease is in the higher forms, third, fourth and fifth."

Ernest Worden, principal of the Weston Collegiate and Vocational school, said that their average enrolment in pre-war years was 1,200 students. "This year's enrolment is about 900," he said. "But our loss of senior boy students was greater during the first two years of the war than it has been since. During expansion of industry here early in the war we suffered badly. TRY BASIC ENGLISH IN 2 NIGHT CLASSES

Board of Education Body Decides on Experiment

Basic English is to be tried out in the night classes in King Edward and Jesse Ketchum public schools when they open next month. This was decided by the advisory vocational committee of the board of education.

Dr. C. C. Goldring, superintendent of schools, told the committee, "there is no possibility of any great use being made of Basic English in the secondary schools of any English-speaking city." The secondary school students, he said, are nearly all from English-speaking homes and "after having spent seven or eight years in public school, they use far more than the 850 words of Basic English. It would be of service, however, in teaching English to recent arrivals from non-English-speaking countries."

ENGINEER REMUSTERS HEADS PILOTS' CLASS

Special to The Star

Brantford, Oct. 1—Nineteen-year-old Charles Konyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Konyer, Haddington Ave., Toronto, was honor student yesterday in one of the largest classes to graduate as pilots from No. 5 S.F.T.S., R. C. A. F., here. Konyer was for two years employed as an engineer at R. C. A. F. elementary flying schools before he remustered to become a pilot himself.

Canadian navy have been honored by the King for gallant and distinguished service. More than 1,000 have given their lives, and 13 Canadian naval ships have been sunk."

R.C.N.V.R. divisions have given the naval service more than 80 per cent. of its enrolment, and the accomplishments of these civilians have rightly commanded the admiration not only of their own fellow citizens but of every member of the United Nations," the minister said.

"A year ago we were able to say that some 47 per cent. of convoy work in the North Atlantic was borne by Canadian ships, officered and manned by men of the Canadian navy," he said.

"The battle against the U-boat continues. It will continue until the war is won. We may drive the enemy out of Sicily and out of North Africa, we may have an end of the fight in this or that theatre of war before the end of the general struggle—before complete and final victory is ours—but the enemy will fight in the Atlantic to the end . . . He can do none other."

He warned that further attacks against Allied shipping in the Atlantic must be expected, and "we must be prepared for other bitter blows."

Merchant shipping tonnage is growing in a degree that "far outstrips" our losses. Naval and air power is greater than before. Despite sinkings and casualties "the line still holds, the men and the ships are still getting through."

U.S. FLIER FIGHTS OFF 5 JAPS

Washington, Oct. 1—The navy reported today that a U.S. reconnaissance plane fought off five Japanese Zero fighter planes near Nauru island in the south Pacific, shooting down one and possibly two.

FOURNIER SUGGESTS OTTAWA MAY AID SEWAGE PLANT

"If You Start Now, No Reason Government Can't Help"

AS REHABILITATION

"We will be prepared, even though the war were to end with unexpected suddenness, to go ahead with public works to take up the slack in employment which will occur when those in the armed services are demobilized." So stated Hon. Alphonse Fournier, minister of public works, Ottawa, in Toronto today.

Mr. Fournier was invited to attend a conference with members of city council, Toronto district M.P.'s and M.P.P.'s, harbor and transportation officials and other interested parties to discuss possible post-war projects.

Municipal corporations must do public work but whether they will be subsidized I do not know. Programs must also be planned by provincial and federal governments.

Referring to the proposed sewage plant for Toronto, Mr. Fournier said: "While I will make no commitment on the part of the government, it is my opinion that if you start off the plant, I don't see why it would prohibit the government from helping you after the war."

Mayor Conboy stated that projects in which the city is most interested as post-war planning schemes are completion of the sewage disposal plant. R. C. Harris, commissioner of works, stated that proper protection of the island is necessary as it in itself provides protection to the Toronto harbor.

W. C. McBrien, T.T.C. chairman, said it is the intention of the commission to submit to Toronto citizens after the war a proposal for a rapid transit system in the city.

R.A.F. SHOOTS DOWN NEW GERMAN PLANE

Lose 188 R.A.F., R.C.A.F. Bombers on Nine Sept. Raids

London, Oct. 1—The four-engined bombers of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. were idle last night, presumably grounded by bad weather.

British Typhoons yesterday sank a small coastal freighter and set fire to a second. All planes returned safely.

Meantime, it was disclosed, the Germans are using a new Messerschmitt fighter-bomber known as 41-OH, at least one of which has been shot down by the R.A.F.

Although often anchored to their bases by bad weather during September, the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. made nine major night raids, once hitting at Berlin, twice giving Mannheim-Ludwigshafen a going over, once hammering Munich, and once striking the Alpine tunnel at Mondane, France. These efforts cost a total of 188 R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers, an average of about 21 per raid.

MADMAN HOLDING KIDNAPPED NURSE

Honesdale, Pa., Oct. 1—The search for an escaped inmate of the state hospital for the criminal insane at Farview turned today to Camden, N.J., where the nurse he kidnapped in his flight made a dramatic telephone call to her father.

Philip Murray said his daughter, Clara, 26, a technician at the Pennsylvania state institution, called him at his home in Honesdale this morning and said she was "all right" but "he won't let me go."

TO AID BOMB VICTIMS

Glen Mawr Academy Scene of Saturday Afternoon Competition

The sixth annual Glen Mawr junior horse show and gymkhana will be held at the Glen Mawr Riding academy, R. R. No. 1, Todmorden, Saturday afternoon, to raise money for the Red Cross British Bomb Victim's Fund.

This junior riding club was organized six years ago by Miss Ruth Edwards and more than 50 of her pupils, varying in age from 4 to 15 years, will compete in the various classes.

Mrs. Churchill Mann and Mrs. Bruce King will judge the events. Fourteen-year-old Gordon Henderson will announce the show.

The Red Cross British Bomb Victim's Fund will benefit from the sale of programs and a voluntary collection in addition to which each member has donated 25 cents. The proceeds from a raffle for a goat will also be added to the fund.

The route to get to Glen Mawr stables is as follows: East on Lawrence Ave., then north on Bayview Ave. to York Mills Rd., then east to the first crossing turning south to the stables.

FRENCH DRIVE NAZIS FROM CORSICA PASS

London, Oct. 1—The Algiers radio said today that San Stefano pass in northern Corsica, one of the last few points held by the Germans, has been captured by French troops, and that the Germans had been forced to flee on all fronts.

STRIKE CLOSES RAIL SHOPS

Detroit, Oct. 1—(AP)—All car and engine repair work in the Detroit shops of the New York Central Railroad System was at a standstill today, company officials reported, because an estimated 600 employees remained away from their jobs.

Most Decrease in Higher Forms, District Principals Say

LIKE HIGH WAGES

The tendency for older boys to leave school and start work at ages earlier than they did during peace years is cutting into the enrolment figures of secondary schools, high school principals said today.

"A number of our students have left school this year and last year to go to work," said E. H. Glenn, principal of Mimico high school. "They are choosing present high wages in preference to training for the future. Most of our decrease is in the higher forms, third, fourth and fifth."

Ernest Worden, principal of the Weston Collegiate and Vocational school, said that their average enrolment in pre-war years was 1,200 students. "This year's enrolment is about 900," he said. "But our loss of senior boy students was greater during the first two years of the war than it has been since. During expansion of industry here early in the war we suffered badly. There were fewer comforts in homes then and the opportunities for boys to make good money tempted numbers of them from the high school classrooms. Now I believe that, since parents have better jobs and there is more money around, it is having the opposite effect of enabling children to remain in school longer."

Mr. Worden said there seemed to be no decrease at Weston collegiate this year from the enrolment of a year ago. The decrease was all in the two years previous, he said.

Reg King, principal of Scarboro high school, said he had observed a similar trend—a sudden movement of boys from schools to jobs early in the war, but a slackening off of that movement this year. "Most of them are lower school boys, the older boys seem to have more sense and realize the importance of education," he said.

T. W. Martin, principal of Brampton high school, said that the falling off of pupils due to the opening up of war jobs was mostly two years ago. He said the decrease this year from a year ago was only 31 students, but that a comparison with the enrolment of three years ago showed a decrease of 70 students.

"The tendency seems to be for boys to quit immediately after passing their entrance, or not quit at all," said Irving McNaughton, principal of Whitby high school. "If they come on to first form high school instead of going to work, they seem to stick to schooling then until fourth or fifth year."

TRY BASIC ENGLISH IN 2 NIGHT CLASSES

Board of Education Body Decides on Experiment

Basic English is to be tried out in the night classes in King Edward and Jesse Ketchum public schools when they open next month. This was decided by the advisory vocational committee of the board of education.

Dr. C. C. Goldring, superintendent of schools, told the committee, "There is no possibility of any great use being made of Basic English in the secondary schools of any English-speaking city." The secondary school students, he said, are nearly all from English-speaking homes and "after having spent seven or eight years in public school, they use far more than the 850 words of Basic English. It would be of service, however, in teaching English to recent arrivals from non-English-speaking countries."

BURIED 'MID SPUDS ABOARD QUEEN MARY

London, Ont., Oct. 1 — (CP) — Nearly buried in potatoes when a dozen large sacks broke open during a storm last winter which almost capsized the liner Queen Mary, Canadian soldiers were able to find humor in the situation. Engineer Officer Leslie P. Smith, London, Queen Mary crew member for the past 16 months, revealed this during a visit here today.

"When the big wave struck and put the ship on her side there were several soldiers just ahead of me," he recalled. "We were all thrown in a heap on the bulkhead. A dozen big bags of potatoes stored beside us broke open. When we tried to get back on our feet we stumbled, tripped and slipped on the potatoes. As serious as the situation was—we thought it was the end of the Queen Mary—it was the funniest sight I've ever seen."

Flower Vandals In Cemeteries Are Few Now, Officials Report

Flower vandalism in suburban cemeteries has subsided almost to the vanishing point, district officials reported today. A few complaints received from lakeshore points are, for the most part, isolated cases where persons lingering after funerals caused annoyance by removing floral pieces, they said.

Recently, three hours after mourners had left a graveside in Oakville, flowers were left strewn on the ground while baskets had vanished, officials reported.

Disappearance of baskets from graves also was reported recently at Streetsville cemetery, L. Lee, superintendent, said.

At Brampton no recent cases of flower removals have been reported, it was stated by Norman Robinson, cemetery superintendent. "Since we started locking all gates at entrances to the cemetery here each evening, we have had no further complaints of petty vandalism," he said.

Brampton municipal officials said that in recent years there have been only a few instances where visitors had carried away floral tokens from graves while the cemetery was open to the public.

In the last year there have been no reports of fences being torn down as at Richmond Hill, or tombstones being overturned as in Derry West, police said.

Special to The Star

Brantford, Oct. 1—Nineteen-year-old Charles Konyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Konyer, Haddington Ave., Toronto, was honor student yesterday in one of the largest classes to graduate as pilots from No. 5 S.F.T.S., R. C. A. F., here. Konyer was for two years employed as an engineer at R. C. A. F. elementary flying schools before he remustered to become a pilot himself.

Half of the class members were from Australia and formed the largest group of men from "down under" to be winged at one time at No. 5.

The "Aussies" represented a variety of vocations in civilian life, including Bob Eggleston, an architect; James Duffy, an importer; Bob Boyd, a rancher, and Jack Blair, a shipping clerk. Others were from sheep stations.

BLAME THAT SICK HEADACHE ON YOUR LIVER

Headache is often Nature's warning the system is "backfiring" with impurities. A sluggish liver not producing enough liver bile, is generally to blame.

Your liver must produce 1 to 2 pints of bile daily to help digest fatty foods, promote regularity. If it slows down, poisons accumulate. This leads to sick headaches, sour stomach, indigestion, biliousness, bad breath, a worn-out, half-sick feeling. Use gentle, all-vegetable way to stimulate liver bile is with BILE BEANS.

"The Medicine That Copies Nature", Bile Beans contain 10 pure vegetable extracts which act on liver, stomach and kidneys ever so gently. These small liver pills do not gripe, nauseate or weaken like harsh purgatives. Mild, yet effective.

For a peppier, brighter tomorrow, try Bile Beans tonight. Prove for yourself their amazingly gentle action. Over 7 millions boxes used last year, convincing evidence of how greatly they are helping others. 25

FIFTY ONTARIO SAILORS LISTED AMONG MISSING IN LOSS OF ST. CROIX

LEADING STOKER SCUDAMORE, MIMICO WAS ON ST. CROIX WHEN OTTAWA SANK

Surgeon-Lieutenant William Lyon Mackenzie King, 30, of Binscarth Rd., nephew of Canada's premier, is among the 146 listed as missing with the Canadian destroyer St. Croix. Fifty are from Ontario, including 14 from Toronto district.

Surgeon-Lieutenant King was posted as medical officer on the destroyer last June.

"We have no idea where the action took place," said his father-in-law, Walter C. Rean, Binscarth Rd. "We have been notified only that he is missing."

Mr. Rean said that Surgeon-Lieut. King wrote often but never divulged any details of his experiences. As far as can be ascertained he never returned to Canada after the initial voyage across the Atlantic.

"He had never been to Europe before sailing in June," said Mr. Rean, "and he wrote that he had seen parts of the country where the enemy had created considerable damage. We believed he referred to the south of England."

Born in Ottawa

Born in Ottawa, Jan. 2, 1913, Dr. Lyon Mackenzie King was the son of the late Dr. MacDougall King, who practised medicine in Ottawa some years ago. Dr. MacDougall King, the only brother of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, died in Denver, Colorado, when the boy was only nine years old. Mrs. MacDougall King is still living.

Lyon King went to the University of Toronto in 1930 to take courses in both arts and medicine. He graduated with honors in medicine, June 10, 1937, and won the faculty medal. He played football on one of the junior Varsity teams and was a well-known tennis player.

After being an interne at Toronto General hospital—1937-38—he was awarded a fellowship which took him to Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minnesota for four years' special course in medicine and surgery. He started the course in 1938 and completed it in 1941. He returned to Toronto and was house surgeon at St. Michael's hospital, Toronto, from 1941-42. He joined the Royal Canadian Navy June 27, 1942, and was stationed in hospital at Halifax, N.S.

Lyon King married Jan. 7, 1939, Miss Rean had an M.A. degree from the University of Toronto, with honors in psychology and rigged up an emergency wireless to send out distress signals. He was mentioned in dispatches.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Tipe, Sackville St., parents of Stoker Carl Tipe, had not been told of the destroyer's sinking Thursday night. Carl's sister and three brothers had withheld the official notification. "Mother is in the hospital, and we did not want her or my father to know about it until we had more news," said Carl's sister, Mrs. L. Izzotti. "Now I guess we'll have to tell my father."

Born in Penetanguishene, Stoker Fred Landrigan, 22, missing, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert (Tony) Landrigan of Dovercourt Rd. Stoker Landrigan enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. when the family moved here from Midland in 1941.

He was educated in Midland and trained with the R.C.N.V.R. at Halifax and in Newfoundland. All the family received letters from him Monday morning. Monday evening the telegram arrived, informing them that he was missing.

Broker in Navy

Enclosed in a letter to his mother was a parachute-silk handkerchief, with the silhouette and the name of the St. Croix in one corner.

"I'd like to tell our son Leonard about his brother Fred," Mr. Landrigan said, "but I don't know how to reach him. Leonard is in the R.C.N.V.R., too. He enlisted July 15."

"It has been a long time since we saw Fred," his mother added. "It was a year ago August that he had his last leave at home. We are going to keep on hoping that news will come soon, and that it will be good news."

Stoker John E. McKeown, missing, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward McKeown of Springhurst Ave. Born in Toronto, he attended St. Mary's separate school. He worked several years with the C.P.R. before enlisting. He has been in the navy for three years. He was unmarried.

Able Seaman Alex. Turner, missing, came from Scotland to Toronto as a child. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Turner, Sr., Britannia Ave.

"They'll never sink the St. Croix," he told his wife on his last visit home. "St. Croix means Holy Cross, and they'll never be able to come

'ASKED TO BE KILLED'. YOUTH SAYS OF GIRL

Kissed Victim, 17, After Her Death, Condemned Slayer, 20, Declares

Port Arthur, Oct. 1 — "She told me about a book she had read, which described death by strangulation." Samuel Zadorozny, 20, of Fort William, said in relating incidents which led up to the death of Antoinette Rosetti, 17, according to evidence submitted yesterday.

Zadorozny was sentenced to hang Dec. 4. A few nights before the girl died, Zadorozny said, Antoinette had pleaded: "You'll take my life and yours, but before, don't forget how I want to be dressed."

He met her again on the night of May 31. She told him about the book she had read. "I got up to leave at 12.15 and she caught hold of me. Something snapped in me and I grabbed her by the neck and I held her. I couldn't let go. After she was dead I tiptoed to the kitchen, got a bread knife, but something came over me and I found I didn't want to die.

"I weakened and put the knife back. I went back into the room where she was. I closed her mouth and kissed her full on the lips. I wrote a letter, put it in my pocket and went to the police station."

NAZI TROOPS ATTEMPT MUTINY IN DENMARK

Two Awaiting Execution Overpower Guards and Flee From Prison

Stockholm, Oct. 1—(AP)—Attempts by some German soldiers to organize a mutiny among Nazi troops garrisoned in Denmark are reported by the Free Danish press service here. It said two Nazi soldiers awaiting execution on mutiny charges had escaped from military prison.

The soldiers overpowered a guard and fled from the prison at Hjoerring, in the northern part of Jutland, where strong Nazi forces are guarding against a possible Allied invasion, it was said.

The press service said the escaped soldiers had been court-martialled for trying to induce other German soldiers to revolt.

The Luetzow, one of the key warships of the German navy, was reported back in the Baltic sea today after spending most of the summer in a Norwegian hideout at Alten Fjord.

'ASKED TO BE KILLED' . YOUTH SAYS OF GIRL

Kissed Victim, 17, After Her Death, Condemned Slayer, 20, Declares

Port Arthur, Oct. 1.—"She told me about a book she had read, which described death by strangulation," Samuel Zadorozny, 20, of Fort William, said in relating incidents which led up to the death of Antoinette Bosetti, 17, according to evidence submitted yesterday.

Zadorozny was sentenced to hang Dec. 4. A few nights before the girl died, Zadorozny said, Antoinette had pleaded: "You'll take my life and yours, but before don't forget how I want to be dressed."

He met her again on the night of May 31. She told him about the book she had read. "I got up to leave at 12.15 and she caught hold of me. Something snapped in me and I grabbed her by the neck and I held her. I couldn't let go. After she was dead I tiptoed to the kitchen, got a bread knife, but something came over me and I found I didn't want to die.

"I weakened and put the knife back. I went back into the room where she was. I closed her mouth and kissed her full on the lips. I wrote a letter, put it in my pocket and went to the police station."

Two Awaiting Execution Overpower Guards and Flee From Prison

Stockholm, Oct. 1—(AP)—Attempts by some German soldiers to organize a mutiny among Nazi troops garrisoned in Denmark are reported by the Free Danish press service here. It said two Nazi soldiers awaiting execution on mutiny charges had escaped from military prison.

The soldiers overpowered a guard and fled from the prison at Hjoerring in the northern part of Jutland where strong Nazi forces are guarding against a possible Allied invasion, it was said.

The press service said the escaped soldiers had been court-martialled for trying to induce other German soldiers to revolt.

The Luetzow, one of the few warships of the German navy, was reported back in the Baltic sea today after spending most of the summer in a Norwegian hideout at Alten Fjord.

A Reuters news agency dispatch from Stockholm three days ago said rebellious crews had sabotaged the

Born in Ottawa

Born in Ottawa, Jan. 2, 1913, Dr. Lyon Mackenzie King was the son of the late Dr. MacDougall King, who practised medicine in Ottawa some years ago. Dr. MacDougall King, the only brother of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, died in Denver, Colorado, when the boy was only nine years old. Mrs. MacDougall King is still living.

Lyon King went to the University of Toronto in 1930 to take courses in both arts and medicine. He graduated with honors in medicine, June 10, 1937, and won the faculty medal. He played football on one of the junior Varsity teams and was a well-known tennis player.

Lyon King married Jan. 7, 1939, Miss Rean had an M.A. degree from the University of Toronto, with honors in psychology.

Surgeon Lieutenant and Mrs. King have one son, William Lyon Mackenzie, born 1940, and one daughter, Katherine Elizabeth, born 1942.

Surgeon Lieut. King's father served with the British army in the Boer war. His twin-brother, Arthur M. King, is attached to the department of munitions and supply, Ottawa.

Was in Earlier Sinking

Able Seaman Ronald E. Grant, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Grant, Arlington Ave., is also missing. He was aboard the corvette Windflower, the sixth Canadian ship lost this war, when it was in collision in the Atlantic and sank in 1941. He was one of 44 men saved.

Born in Moose Jaw, Sask., he attended Vaughan Road collegiate and enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. at 17.

A member of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve since 1924 who went active at the commencement of the war, Leading Stoker Fred H. Scudamore, 36, of Alexander St. Mimico, is missing, according to official word received by his brother, Stanley Scudamore.

"The sinking of the St. Croix almost took two from our home," asserted Stanley Scudamore, himself a naval veteran who was wounded in action in the last war. "Our son, Petty Officer Bill Scudamore, was serving on the same destroyer with his uncle until less than two weeks ago when he was transfered to Hamilton to take further naval training."

Leading Stoker Scudamore was born in England and came to live at Mimico with his brother soon after the last war. He had served 12 years with the R.C.N.V.R. For two years a maintenance man for Gypsum Lime Co., Toronto, and, for five years before that, worked for Cutten and Foster Auto Fabric Co., Church St. He is unmarried.

He first served on the Niagara, another U.S. destroyer traded to Canada, but for the past two and a ...fax and in Newfoundland. All the family received letters from him Monday morning. Monday evening the telegram arrived, informing them that he was missing.

Stratford Man Missing

Engine Room Artificer George Richard Corby is the first Stratford naval man reported missing in the present war. His sister, Winnifred, recently enlisted in the U.S. nursing service. His parents received last word from him Sept. 5, when he was on furlough in England with an uncle and aunt.

Leading Stoker Wilmer James Winch of Wiarton, missing, survived a previous torpedoing and spent a month's leave with his family. Stoker Winch is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Winch, Wiarton. A brother, Floyd, is with the R.C.O.C. and another, Elmer, is with the merchant marine. His wife and daughter, age two, live in Wiarton.

Able Seaman Ronald James Long, of Windsor, missing, was born in Peterboro and went to Windsor when a child. He lived here until 1934, when the family moved to Toronto. He enlisted in Toronto three years ago.

First Class Stoker Gordon Franklin Barnhart, 22, of Fort Erie, listed as missing, enlisted two years ago, while in the R.C.N.V.R. He is a graduate of the Douglas Street public school and Fort Erie high school.

Coder Joseph Griffith Bell of Sarnia received ourns last winter in the Knights of Columbus hut fire at St. John's, Newfoundland. He was a member of basketball, football and swimming groups at Sarnia. His father enlisted a few weeks ago in the navy.

Leading Stoker George Othoe Bass, 32, of Cardinal, is the only son of George Bass, St. Catharines, and the late Mrs. Bass. He was employed for some time as a locomotive engineer. He enlisted over three years ago.

Kaiser Liberty Vessel Rammed on Outward Trip—Victim of Sub When Coming Home

IN MID-ATLANTIC

An East Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 1—(CP)—No "mystery ship" in a fiction sea saga ever had a more colorful career than this one of Henry Kaiser's Liberty ships that was "jinxed" from the time she left New Orleans until she was sunk by a Nazi submarine in mid-Atlantic last week.

She ran aground twice in the Mississippi river, losing her port anchor and a 10-inch hawser while getting under way after the second occasion.

She was no sooner in the Caribbean sea when she was attacked by two submarines. It was beginning to look like curtains but two U.S. patrol boats happened on the scene just in time to score a double victory.

By that time, crew members were getting anxious, so they threw two black cats overboard in hopes of getting rid of the "jinx."

"I told them at the time they shouldn't have pitched those two damned black cats overboard," 18-year-old Charles M. Salisbury of Lynchburg, Va., told a newsman when the survivors reached this port.

Not Superstitious But—

"We never were superstitious, but—," chimned in Charles Gunderson, 18, of Stoughton, Mass., who was beginning to doubt his earlier convictions.

When the freighter reached New York, one of the ship's dogs walked ashore and stayed there. When the pet did not return, the captain's nerves began to jangle, so he took his clothes and left on a Friday the 13th. He just wouldn't take a "jinx ship" across, he said.

The new captain got another propeller, a new anchor and a 10-inch hauser. Everything went fine after that, but not for long.

They were two days out from New York when they were rammed twice within two hours in collisions with other ships. However, they managed to reach England safely.

On the westbound trip they finally got it—this time for keeps. The Liberty ship was struck amidships near the engine room. Everything buckled under the crash, even the bunks.

By JOSE SHERCLIFF
Special Cable to The Star

Lisbon, Oct. 1 — Hundreds of thousands of French boys and girls won't go to school this year following a decree by the Vichy minister of education, that schools and colleges must be closed in all zones endangered by Allied bombardments.

Instructions have been issued to all prefects and mayors throughout France that where it is impossible to evacuate children to safe areas all steps must be taken that schools full of children shall not be allowed to exist in cities and industrial centres.

In certain cases schools may be partially open, classes being 'staggered" so that few pupils are together at one time. Small classes also may be held in different parts of towns but far apart from each other.

In order to supplement educational facilities, the ministry is arranging correspondence classes and regular radio classes so that children in remote districts or those in safe areas where it is difficult to organize schools, may continue studies under their parents or other supervision. School teachers are to be provided with bicycles so that they can do regular rounds visiting classes or supervising the work of children at home both in town and country. No date has been set for the reopening of the schools.

A member of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve since 1924 who went active at the commencement of the war, Leading Stoker Fred H. Scudamore, 36, of Alexander St. Mimico, is missing, according to official word received by his brother, Stanley Scudamore.

"The sinking of the St. Croix almost took two from our home," asserted Stanley Scudamore, himself a naval veteran who was wounded in action in the last war. "Our son, Petty Officer Bill Scudamore, was serving on the same destroyer with his uncle until less than two weeks ago when he was transfered to Hamilton to take further naval training."

Leading Stoker Scudamore was born in England and came to live at Mimico with his brother soon after the last war. He had served 12 years with the R.C.N.V.R. For two years a maintenance man for Gypsum Lime Co., Toronto, and, for five years before that, worked for Cutten and Foster Auto Fabric Co., Church St. He is unmarried.

He first served on the Niagara, another U.S. destroyer traded to Canada, but for the past two and a half years he had been with the St. Croix. He was on the St. Croix a year ago when it stood by as the Canadian destroyer Ottawa sank after being torpedoed. He lost five friends with the Ottawa's sinking.

Sank Six Subs

Scudamore told relatives that the St. Croix had about six enemy subs to her credit and on one occasion made prisoners of a Nazi sub crew. He had experienced several blitzes at English seaports early in the war.

Before enlisting with the R.C.N.V.R. two years ago, Signalman William S. D. Pudney, Kingsway Cres., now missing, was employed in a Toronto meat-packing plant. The first word of him received for some time by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. H. Pudney, was official notification late last week of his fate.

Leading Coder Selwyn Arthur Adamson, missing, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Adamson, Indian Valley Trail, Port Credit. He was home on leave in July. His last letter was received by his parents a week ago. Educated at Erindale public school and Port Credit high school, Leading Coder Adamson enlisted in Nov., 1941, while employed at the Edison Ediphone Co. of Hamilton. He has a brother, Gilbert, in the navy, and one brother, David, at home. His sister, Molly, is with the British Air commission in Washington, D.C.

Mentioned in Dispatches

Petty Officer Frank A. Russ, 24, missing, was in charge of the wireless room of the St. Croix, his wife, formerly Jeanette Rennie, Welland Ave., said. A resident of Vananda, B.C., he was in the navy for seven years. He was on the Saguenay when the ship was badly damaged son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wilen, Wiarton. A brother, Floyd, is with the R.C.O.C. and another, Elmer, is with the merchant marine. His wife and daughter, age two, live in Wiarton.

Able Seaman Ronald James Long, of Windsor, missing, was born in Peterboro and went to Windsor when a child. He lived here until 1934, when the family moved to Toronto. He enlisted in Toronto three years ago.

First Class Stoker Gordon Franklin Barnhart, 22, of Fort Erie, listed as missing, enlisted two years ago, while in the R.C.N.V.R. He is a graduate of the Douglas Street public school and Fort Erie high school.

Coder Joseph Griffith Bell of Sarnia received ourns last winter in the Knights of Columbus hut fire at St. John's, Newfoundland. He was a member of basketball, football and swimming groups at Sarnia. His father enlisted a few weeks ago in the navy.

Leading Stoker George Othoe Bass, 32, of Cardinal, is the only son of George Bass, St. Catharines, and the late Mrs. Bass. He was employed for some time as a locomotive engineer. He enlisted over three years ago.

sunk by a Nazi submarine in mid-Atlantic last week.

She ran aground twice in the Mississippi river, losing her port anchor and a 10-inch hawser while getting under way after the second occasion.

She was no sooner in the Caribbean sea when she was attacked by two submarines. It was beginning to look like curtains but two U.S. patrol boats happened on the scene just in time to score a double victory.

By that time, crew members were getting anxious, so they threw two black cats overboard in hopes of getting rid of the "jinx."

"I told them at the time they shouldn't have pitched those two damned black cats overboard," 18-year-old Charles M. Salisbury of Lynchburg, Va., told a newsman when the survivors reached this port.

Not Superstitious But—

"We never were superstitious, but—," chimned in Charles Gunderson, 18, of Stoughton, Mass., who was beginning to doubt his earlier convictions.

When the freighter reached New York, one of the ship's dogs walked ashore and stayed there. When the pet did not return, the captain's nerves began to jangle, so he took his clothes and left on a Friday the 13th. He just wouldn't take a "jinx ship" across, he said.

The new captain got another propeller, a new anchor and a 10-inch hauser. Everything went fine after that, but not for long.

They were two days out from New York when they were rammed twice within two hours in collisions with other ships. However, they managed to reach England safely.

On the westbound trip they finally got it—this time for keeps. The Liberty ship was struck amidships near the engine room. Everything buckled under the crash, even the bunks.

Can't Launch Boats

The lifeboats took a terrific beating. Not one of them could be launched. They were either jammed or twisted.

But despite the fact they had picked a hoodoo freighter to start, all the surviving crewmen were anxious to get back to the United States to get on another of Kaiser's ships, because as one man said, "We were just victims of hard luck, I guess."

Early Bird Catches Worms And They Are All Germans

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN

With the 5th Army in Italy, Sept. 27—(Delayed)—A little group of U.S. early birds, taking their morning spin over the Italian front in their P-36 fighter-bombers, made an unexpected killing today. They got German aircraft of various shapes and sizes in four separate bits of action.

On their way to the German rear, they caught a Junkers 52 transport over the sea and shot it down. Then, deciding that there must be more where the first came from, they visited Viterbo airdrome north of Rome and blew up five more 52s on the ground with damage to others.

Thereupon, the Americans decided to call on Lake Bracciano, also north of Rome, where they blew up two float planes and hit another. On the way home they shot down a Heinkel-111 over the sea.

All this happened in inclement weather.

Moscow, Sept. 30—(Delayed)—Kiev is a city in the front line today. Russian troops established on the left bank of the Dnieper, after the capture of Darnitsa junction where the lines from Poltava and Konotop join and which is to central Kiev what Clapham Junction is to Charing Cross, hardly need field glasses to watch the defence preparations of the Germans on the opposite side. Baptism of Fire For Kiev

The battle for Darnitsa in which the enemy put in the most powerful tank counter-attack cost the Germans enormous losses and gave Kiev proper its baptism of fire. In the final stages of the fighting the Russian advance was held up by a concentration of German artillery. Soviet dive bombers were summoned up to blast the German batteries. As the Russian planes arrived, a squadron of Messerschmitts appeared through a low cloud. Russian troops watched breathlessly as fighters escorting the dive-bombers pounced on the Messerschmitts, and raised a deafening cheer as the first of them to be knocked out dived a flaming wreck on the rooftops of Kiev.

But it was the capture of their Kremenchug bridgehead down the river that was yesterday's bitterest blow to the Germans. Prisoners' statements make it absolutely clear that far from deliberately abandoning it, they intended to hold it indefinitely, use it as a base for counter-attacks and make it fulfil the same function in breaking down Russian attempts to cross the river as the Poltava wedge fulfilled in the earlier phase of the Ukraine battle.

Defence Area Jammed

Photographs taken by Soviet reconnaissance planes on Sept. 20 show the bridgehead area of 10 miles by 25 around the city jammed with troops, tanks, guns and every kind of equipment, taking up defensive positions. There were remnants of almost all the crack in-had erected, in addition to a railway bridge, had already been smashed by the Russian air force, and as fugitives streamed towards the remaining bridges, dive-bombers roared down to pound these, too. And rather than risk crossing, many groups of the enemy preferred to wait shivering with their hands up, by the river bank, to be captured.

Finally, the entire German outer defence ring was smashed, and at mid-day yesterday Soviet tanks ground their way into the city streets, shooting up the remaining enemy strongholds. Last night Kremenchug, the largest town on the Dnieper's left bank above Zaporozhe and through which cargo after cargo of looted food had passed to Germany—many left behind to be retaken by the Soviets—was in flames visible a dozen miles off. And the Germans on the other side of the sandy, shallow river, which is more easily crossable here than almost anywhere else—they made their first crossing here in 1941—were feverishly awaiting a new Russian assault.

BUT IT'S GONE NOW

London, Oct. 1—(BUP)—Russia has inflicted a major economic disaster upon Hitler by winning back, just as he was beginning to make them pay, the vast Soviet resources upon which he had counted to beat the Allied blockade, British economic experts said today.

Two years of reckless expenditure of blood, material and billions of dollars had netted the Nazis territories originally greater than the combined areas of Texas, New Mexico and California, but Soviet scorched earth tactics cut their dividends to almost nothing.

The conquered areas normally produced more than half of Russia's coal, iron ore and steel and more than two-thirds of her wheat, but the Germans were able to extract only the smallest driblets of foodstuffs and raw materials for shipment to the Reich, it was said.

This year Hitler had hoped to begin reaping the harvest of his conquests in earnest, however. Reichsmarshal Goering even promised the German people publicly just a year ago that it soon would be possible to increase home front rations with foodsuffs from the Ukraine. Hitler spoke in a similar vein last Nov. 8.

Economic experts provided the following summary of what the Nazis thus far have gleaned from conquered Russian territory:

Wheat—Last year enough to feed about one-fourth of their eastern front forces; this year, by putting the captive Russian population on a starvation diet, enough to feed their whole army; but with little or none for shipment to the Reich. Total Ukraine production this year was about 6,000,000 tons compared with the normal average of 18,000,000 tons.

Vegetable oils—Ukraine this year produced about 30,000 tons, representing only a tiny fraction of German needs.

Iron ore—About 5,000,000 tons believed extracted from the huge Krivoirog deposits which normally produce 15,000,000 tons annually. Little or none reached the Reich. The Russians thoroughly destroyed all equipment at one large, central mine which produced the bulk of the ore mined in the district.

Manganese — About 165,000 tons obtained from pit-head dumps at Moscow, Sept. 30—(Delayed)—Kiev is a city in the front line today. Russian troops established on the left bank of the Dnieper, after the capture of Darnitsa junction where the lines from Poltava and Konotop join and which is to central Kiev what Clapham Junction is to Charing Cross, hardly need field glasses to watch the defence preparations of the Germans on the opposite side. They are blowing up buildings to clear the field of fire, busily fixing wire entanglements and digging trenches above the river where unbuilt-on ground north and south permits. All this is being done under constant harassing from Soviet artillery and ground-strafing aircraft.

Baptism of Fire For Kiev

The battle for Darnitsa in which the enemy put in the most powerful tank counter-attack cost the Germans enormous losses and gave Kiev proper its baptism of fire. In the final stages of the fighting the Russian advance was held up by a concentration of German artillery. Soviet dive bombers were summoned up to blast the German batteries. As the Russian planes arrived, a squadron of Messerschmitts appeared through a low cloud. Russian troops watched breathlessly as fighters escorting the dive-bombers pounced on the Messerschmitts, and raised a deafening cheer as the first of them to be knocked out dived a flaming wreck on the rooftops of Kiev.

But it was the capture of their Kremenchug bridgehead down the river that was yesterday's bitterest blow to the Germans. Prisoners' statements make it absolutely clear that far from deliberately abandoning it, they intended to hold it indefinitely, use it as a base for counter-attacks and make it fulfil the same function in breaking down Russian attempts to cross the river as the Poltava wedge fulfilled in the earliest phase of the Ukraine battle.

Defence Area Jammed

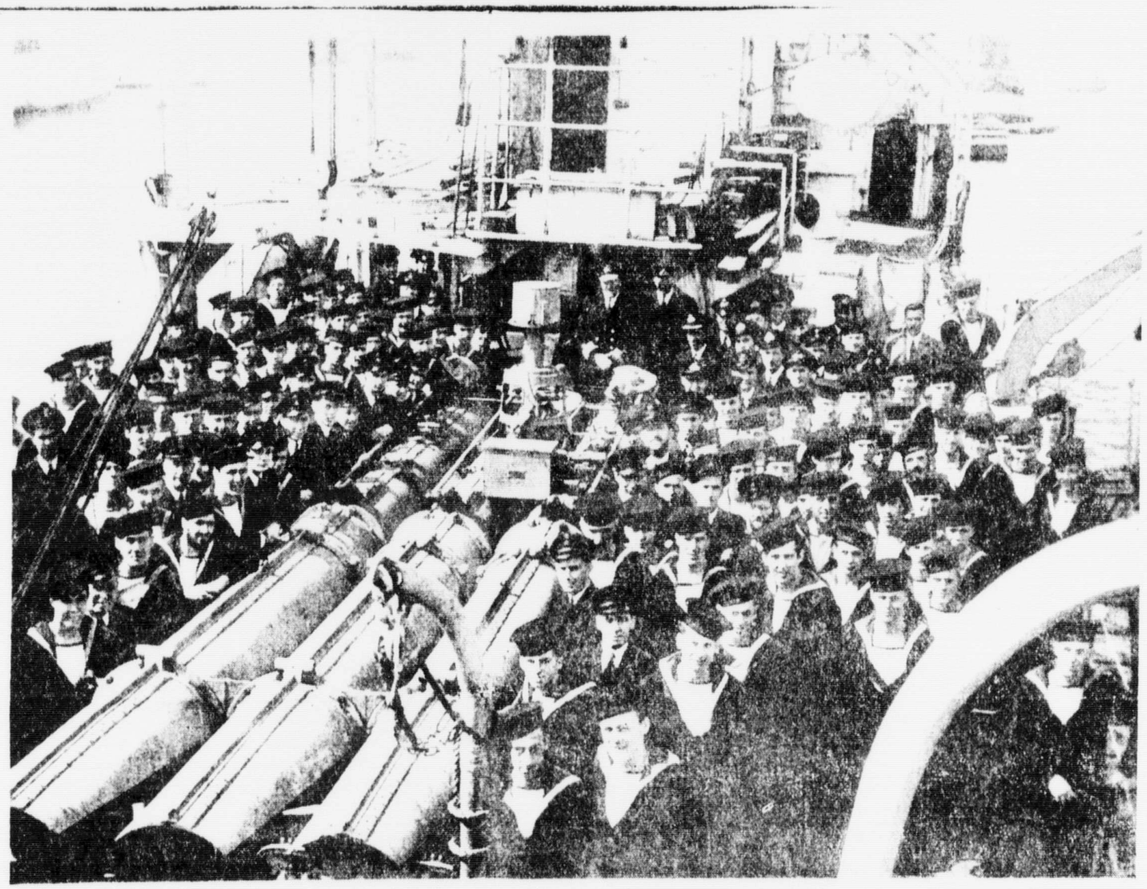

Photographs taken by Soviet reconnaissance planes on Sept. 20 show the bridgehead area of 10 miles by 25 around the city jammed with troops, tanks, guns and every kind of equipment taking up defensive positions. There were remnants of almost all the crack German divisions which had been fighting in the Ukraine since the beginning of the campaign, and they had been reinforced by fresh troops from Germany.

Behind the bridgehead, which had been established on a front of 60 miles, the Germans had built a network of defences. Every village had been fortified, and the roads leading to the river were protected by concrete pillboxes and anti-tank obstacles. Behind the river, which is from 200 to 300 yards wide, the Germans had built a second line of defences. Every bridge, which they had erected, in addition to a railway bridge, had already been smashed by the Russian air force, and as fugitives streamed towards the remaining bridges dive-bombers roared down to pound these too. And rather than risk crossing, many groups of the enemy preferred to wait shivering with their hands up, by the river bank, to be captured.

Finally, the entire German outer defence ring was smashed, and at mid-day yesterday Soviet tanks ground their way into the city streets, shooting up the remaining enemy strongholds. Last night Kremenchug, the largest town on the Dnieper's left bank above Zaporozhe and through which cargo after cargo of looted food had passed to Germany—many left behind to be retaken by the Soviets—was in flames visible a dozen miles off. And the Germans on the other side of the sandy, shallow river, which is more easily crossable here than almost anywhere else—they made their first crossing here in 1941—were feverishly awaiting a new Russian assault.

RUSSIANS DENY HITLER SUPPLIES HE HAD TO HAVE

Foe Was Counting on Donets Wheat, Coal This Winter

BUT IT'S GONE NOW

London, Oct. 1—(BUP)—Russia has inflicted a major economic disaster upon Hitler by winning back, just as he was beginning to make them pay, the vast Soviet resources upon which he had counted to beat the Allied blockade, British economic experts said today.

Two years of reckless expenditure of blood, material and billions of dollars had netted the Nazis territories originally greater than the combined areas of Texas, New Mexico and California, but Soviet scorched earth tactics cut their dividends to almost nothing.

The conquered areas normally produced more than half of Russia's coal, iron ore and steel and more than two-thirds of her wheat, but the Germans were able to extract only the smallest dribbets of foodstuffs and raw materials for shipment to the Reich, it was said.

This year Hitler had hoped to begin reaping the harvest of his conquests in earnest, however, Reichsmarshal Goering even promised the German people publicly just a year ago that it soon would be possible to increase home front rations with foodstuffs from the Ukraine. Hitler spoke in a similar vein last Nov. 8.

Economic experts provided the following summary of what the Nazis thus far have gleaned from conquered Russian territory:

Wheat—Last year enough to feed about one-fourth of their eastern front forces; this year, by putting the captive Russian population on a starvation diet, enough to feed their whole army, but with little or none for shipment to the Reich. Total Ukraine production this year was about 6,000,000 tons compared with the normal average of 18,000,000 tons.

Vegetable oils—Ukraine this year produced about 30,000 tons, representing only a tiny fraction of German needs.

Iron ore—About 5,000,000 tons believed extracted from the huge Krivoirog deposits which normally produce 15,000,000 tons annually. Little or none reached the Reich. The Russians thoroughly destroyed all equipment at one large, central mine which produced the bulk of the ore mined in the district.

Manganese—About 165,000 tons shipped from pit-head dump at

There were remnants of almost all the crack infantry and tank divisions which had been fighting so desperately in the area west of Kharkov and around Poltava, and at the last moment a division which had been smashed in the Kharkov battle and sent to the rear to get fresh drafts reappeared at full strength to help hold the bridgehead. Three days before the town's fall orders were issued to the defenders under Hitler's own signature, telling them they must hold on to the last man. And a letter to his wife in Cologne, found in a Kremenchug street on a German soldier's body, shows how confidently the garrison hoped to make a stand.

"For the last week or two," the letter runs, "we haven't been retreating, we've been running like rabbits, with the Russians always hanging on our tail. Our company is down to 11 men: many had run away like tramps, barefooted and throwing away their arms. I have never felt such burning shame. Now, thank God, we've stopped, and with reinforcements pouring in are standing holding Kremenchug. Now we've dug in, and for the first time in a month feel like soldiers, not runaway criminals hunted by the police."

Had Triple Defence Belt

The Germans organized a strong triple defence belt around Kremenchug, using heights to the east and northeast and banks of the Dnieper's tributary river Phel After artillery and air preparation, Soviet infantry drove wedges into the lines, which split up the defenders and compelled them to retire individually to the Dnieper. Some of the crossings which the Germans had erected, in addition to a railway bridge, had already been smashed by the Russian air force, and as fugitives streamed towards the remaining bridges, dive-bombers roared down to pound these, too. And rather than risk crossing, many groups of the enemy preferred to wait shivering with their hands up, by the river bank, to be captured.

Finally, the entire German outer defence ring was smashed, and at mid-day yesterday Soviet tanks ground their way into the city streets, shooting up the remaining enemy strongholds. And the Germans on the other side of the sandy, shallow river, which is more easily crossable here than almost anywhere else—they made their first crossing here in 1941—were feverishly awaiting a new Russian assault.

Can't Prepare Defence

Superman efforts which the Russians are making to maintain the speed of their pursuit of the enemy columns retreating on a broad front into White Russia are having a disrupting effect on attempts of the German command to form a new defensive crust.

The Russian tactics of driving deep wedges into enemy-held territory and cutting the roads of retreat behind the Germans—tactics which already have resulted in the liberation of more than one column of White Russian peasants being driven west from their homes to slavery—are made most difficult by the nature of the country. Many swamps as well as small rivers, prevent tracked vehicles operating to any extent across open country. They also limit the number of places where the Germans need to sow mines as they retire.

How the Soviet forces, despite all these obstacles, are keeping in relentless contact with the enemy is verified by a captured German major, a battalion commander of the 396th infantry regiment, who was taken prisoner while retreating towards Gomel.

"Our division several times tried to hold intermediate lines in retreat," he said, "but as soon as we started digging in, Soviet forces appeared again and attacked, giving us no time to prepare our defence. On one water line we were ordered to stand at any cost, but less than an hour after our rearguard had disengaged from the Russians affording our main body as we thought, ample time to get consolidated, Soviet troops appeared before our new position and after a brief air and artillery barrage, forced a crossing and compelled us again to retreat."

Moscow, Oct. 1—While guerrillas are doing their best to wreck German communications, the Russians themselves are working hard on their own supply lines, particularly on railways. They know that their ability to follow up the retreating enemy and to maintain their pressure on him depends to a great extent on the speed with which they can reconstruct shattered lines and bridges.

Special railway troops have been trained to a high degree of efficiency and speed. In the past six months, for instance, these troops have relaid more than 5,000 miles of track in frontal zones, in addition to building new railways of both wide and narrow gauge in strategic areas. In a fortnight more than 800 miles of line were repaired along four fronts, together with a number of stations and junctions.

A lot of fine work is also being done on the building of new bridges. German demolitions are very thorough. Neat bridges are now brought up to the front in sections carried by special trains, and piers and arches are then assembled on the spot.

Daring Manoeuvre

Details are now available about the daring manoeuvre which resulted in the capture of the last sizeable Taman port of Temryuk, on the Sea of Azov.

While the main Soviet forces were making a frontal assault on the German positions around the town, other forces made a descent on the coast west of the port and crossed the big salt water lake called Kuchansky Liman, in small boats. Other groups, landing farther along the coast of the Sea of Azov, made a flank attack through high reeds in low-lying, swampy ground, and reached the road which connects Temryuk with the west.

With their defences disorganized by these attacks, the Germans were obliged at night to abandon the port and roll back across the Kuban river, leaving strong defence positions and big amounts of war material. Both banks of the Kuban river have now been cleared by the Russians.

The persistent Nazi statement that they are withdrawing in order to shorten their line led me to measure the line as it was two days ago and as it was six months ago. The fact is that although the Germans have given up some 70,000 square miles of territory, the present front from the Black sea to Smolensk is about 850 miles long, while the front six months ago from the Black sea to the same latitude as Smolensk was about 800 miles. It is evident, therefore, that if the Nazis continue to shorten their line in this way for much longer, they are going to need a lot more troops.

THANKSGIVING DAY MONDAY, OCT. 11TH

Ottawa, Oct. 1—(CP) — Thanksgiving day, is to be observed Monday, Oct. 11, this year, is a statutory holiday and is expected to be widely observed in Canada, officials state.

The federal civil service takes the holiday, one of the few holidays it observes in wartime. The government, in an order-in-council, also has recommended that employers generally observe the day, and it has been written into many employer-employee agreements as a holiday.

Most war industries are expected to close. So far as could be learned no plans for official ceremonies have been made.

GIVE COAL PRIORITY TO EMPTIEST BINS

Consumers With Less Than 25 p.c. of Needs to Get Preference

Special to The Star

Ottawa, Oct. 1—Priority on coal deliveries up to 25 per cent. of their annual fuel requirements must now be given by dealers to consumers who have less than one-quarter of their yearly needs on hand.

This order has been issued by the coal controller, E. J. Brunning, to assure the most equitable distribution of available supplies.

"The new regulation applies only to consumers who use less than 50 tons of coal a year," Mr. Brunning declared. "It provides that customers who agree to accept 25 per cent. of their requirements in class B fuel in order to obtain 75 per cent. in class A, must take delivery of the former within 30 days of delivery of the class A fuel."

Class A fuel includes all anthracite larger than buckwheat, low volatile bituminous, briquettes and coke. Class B refers to all other types of coal fuel.

STRENGTH, NOT SPEED SAID NEED OF TANKS

Ability to Take Punishment Required, Engineers Hear

If the tank is to survive as a weapon of war, its main ability must be to take heavy punishment rather than high-speed performance. This opinion was given by L. E. Carr, technical director of the British ministry of supply mission at Washington, to the joint three-day meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the Engineering Institute of Canada at the Royal York hotel.

Charles Staunton, Washington, suggested cities like Toronto would do well to develop airports, like Toronto Island, near downtown business districts. "If airports were only 15 minutes from business sections," he said, "cities 100 miles away would be within commuting distance by air."

London, Oct. 1—Speaking of the price the Germans must be made to pay, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Poland's prime minister, at a special press conference for Canadian correspondents, said:

"More and more great bombing raids are what they need. The Germans have won and lost many wars, but this is the first time they have been made to really pay for their warmongering. I am not a cruel man and have no wish to see the complete annihilation of all Germans, but we must not be fooled by them again. They have already made their plans to quickly achieve economic domination over the continental countries even after they have lost the war. They must be stopped.

"When Poland lives again all our minority groups will have full freedom and equal opportunity with us—all but the Germans."

He said the Germans were becoming frantic about their growing manpower shortage and were taking drastic steps to make good the loss. "They are moving our Polish children into the Reich where they are trying to Germanize them," he said "They are even bringing expectant Finnish mothers into their country so the children will be born German. If they steal enough of Europe's children their comparative post-war strength may one day make them dangerous again."

JAPANESE OIL DEPOTS IN BURMA DESTROYED

New Delhi, Oct. 1—(AP)—Japanese oil reserves at three depots in Burma were destroyed and enemy positions near Kanzauk were shot up yesterday by British aircraft.

R.A.F. Beaufighters hit an oil refinery along the Irrawaddy in a morning raid, destroying one large tank, damaging two others and leaving three smaller tanks burning. The fires still were blazing in the afternoon when other formations swept over the vicinity. They attacked an oil tank at Chauk, and an oil barge and two steamers in the river.

INFLICT HEAVY LOSS ON KWANTUNG JAPS

Chungking, Sept. 30—(Delayed)—(AP)—Heavy fighting is continuing in the Fu river section of Kiangsi province where the Chinese, after checking a Japanese advance, in turn launched a determined counter offensive, a Chinese high command communique said today.

In Kwantung province, Chinese forces attacked enemy-held positions east of Canton, near the Canton-Kowloon railway and inflicted "heavy casualties on the top-heavy Japanese."

Manganese — About 165,000 tons obtained from pit-head dumps at the great Nipopol mines where normal production was 1,000,000 tons yearly. The mines still are in Nazi hands, but they are expected to fall as soon as the Russians cross the Dnieper in strength.

Coal—About 8,000,000 tons believed extracted from the Donets basin which normally produces about 80,000,000 tons annually or 60 per cent. of Russia's entire coal output. At least 5,000,000 tons annually was needed to operate railroads in the conquered areas. The Nazis actually had to bring in additional coal from Silesia to keep the Ukrainian industries running.

Sugar—The Nazis themselves admitted that of 163 sugarbeet factories which fell into their hands, only five were undamaged, and even after they had been rebuilt, many of them did not produce enough for shipment to Germany.

Cotton, flax, wood—No evidence the Germans secured enough of any of these for shipment to Germany.

Exchange of Prisoners Between Britain and Germany is Planned

Stockholm, Oct. 1—(BUP) — A Swedish foreign office spokesman has confirmed reports that negotiations are under way for an exchange of invalided British and German prisoners of war. He denied, however, that his government is participating in the discussions, but said Sweden is willing to render "technical" assistance.

The spokesman expressed regret that news of the negotiations had been divulged prematurely by a Gotenburg newspaper, which said the date of the exchange and the technical details were expected to be settled within the next 24 hours.

Under a "preliminary agrement," already reached, it said, the exchange would be made at Gotenburg with the Swedish liner Drottningholm and the British Aaltntis and the Empress of Russia transporting the prisoners. It added that the British liners were expected to arrive within a week and that arrangements already have been made for the reception of the prisoners.

"When Poland lives again all our minority groups will have full freedom and equal opportunity with us—all but the Germans."

He said the Germans were becoming frantic about their growing manpower shortage and were taking drastic steps to make good the loss. "They are moving our Polish children into the Reich where they are trying to Germanize them," he said "They are even bringing expectant Finnish mothers into their country so the children will be born German. If they steal enough of Europe's children their comparative post-war strength may one day make them dangerous again."

JAPANESE OIL DEPOTS IN BURMA DESTROYED

New Delhi, Oct. 1—(AP)—Japanese oil reserves at three depots in Burma were destroyed and enemy positions near Kanzauk were shot up yesterday by British aircraft.

R.A.F. Beaufighters hit an oil refinery along the Irrawaddy in a morning raid, destroying one large tank, damaging two others and leaving three smaller tanks burning. The fires still were blazing in the afternoon when other formations swept over the vicinity. They attacked an oil tank at Chauk, and an oil barge and two steamers in the river.

INFLICT HEAVY LOSS ON KWANTUNG JAPS

Chungking, Sept. 30—(Delayed)—(AP)—Heavy fighting is continuing in the Fu river section of Kiangsi province where the Chinese, after checking a Japanese advance, in turn launched a determined counter offensive, a Chinese high command communique said today.

In Kwantung province, Chinese forces attacked enemy-held positions east of Canton, near the Canton-Kowloon railway and inflicted "heavy casualties on the top-heavy Japanese."

begin reaping the harvest of his conquests in earnest, however, Reichsmarshal Goering even promised the German people publicly just a year ago that it soon would be possible to increase home front rations with foodsuffs from the Ukraine. Hitler spoke in a similar vein last Nov. 8.

Economic experts provided the following summary of what the Nazis thus far have gleaned from conquered Russian territory:

Wheat—Last year enough to feed about one-fourth of their eastern front forces; this year, by putting the captive Russian population on a starvation diet, enough to feed their whole army; but with little or none for shipment to the Reich. Total Ukraine production this year was about 6,000,000 tons compared with the normal average of 18,000,000 tons.

Vegetable oils—Ukraine this year produced about 30,000 tons, representing only a tiny fraction of German needs.

Iron ore—About 5,000,000 tons believed extracted from the huge Krivoirog deposits which normally produce 15,000,000 tons annually. Little or none reached the Reich. The Russians thoroughly destroyed all equipment at one large, central mine which produced the bulk of the ore mined in the district.

Manganese — About 165,000 tons obtained from pit-head dumps at the great Nipopol mines where normal production was 1,000,000 tons yearly. The mines still are in Nazi hands, but they are expected to fall as soon as the Russians cross the Dnieper in strength.

Coal—About 8,000,000 tons believed extracted from the Donets basin which normally produces about 80,000,000 tons annually or 60 per cent. of Russia's entire coal output. At least 5,000,000 tons annually was needed to operate railroads in the conquered areas. The Nazis actually had to bring in additional coal from Silesia to keep the Ukrainian industries running.

Sugar—The Nazis themselves admitted that of 163 sugarbeet factories which fell into their hands, only five were undamaged, and even after they had been rebuilt, many of them did not produce enough for shipment to Germany.

Cotton, flax, wood—No evidence the Germans secured enough of any of these for shipment to Germany.

Exchange of Prisoners Between Britain and Germany is Planned

Stockholm, Oct. 1—(BUP) — A Swedish foreign office spokesman has confirmed reports that negotiations are under way for an exchange of invalided British and German prisoners of war. He denied, however, that his government is participating in the discussions, but said Sweden is willing to render "technical" assistance.

The spokesman expressed regret that news of the negotiations had been divulged prematurely by a Gotenburg newspaper, which said the date of the exchange and the technical details were expected to be settled within the next 24 hours.

Under a "preliminary agrement," already reached, it said, the exchange would be made at Gotenburg with the Swedish liner Drottningholm and the British Aaltntis and the Empress of Russia transporting the prisoners. It added that the British liners were expected to arrive within a week and that arrangements already have been made for the reception of the prisoners.

voyage across the Atlantic.

"He had never been to Europe before sailing in June," said Mr. Rean, "and he wrote that he had seen parts of the country where the enemy had created considerable damage. We believed he referred to the south of England."

Born in Ottawa

Born in Ottawa, Jan. 2, 1913, Dr. Lyon Mackenzie King was the son of the late Dr. MacDougall King, who practised medicine in Ottawa some years ago. Dr. MacDougall King, the only brother of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, died in Denver, Colorado, when the boy was only nine years old. Mrs. MacDougall King is still living.

Lyon King went to the University of Toronto in 1930 to take courses in both arts and medicine. He graduated with honors in medicine, June 10, 1937, and won the faculty medal. He played football on one of the junior Varsity teams and was a well-known tennis player.

After being an interne at Toronto General hospital—1937-38—he was awarded a fellowship which took him to Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minnesota for four years' special course in medicine and surgery. He started the course in 1938 and completed it in 1941. He returned to Toronto and was house surgeon at St. Michael's hospital, Toronto, from 1941-42. He joined the Royal Canadian Navy June 27, 1942, and was stationed in hospital at, Halifax, N.S.

Lyon King married Jan. 7, 1939, Miss Rean had an M.A. degree from the University of Toronto, with honors in psychology.

Surgeon Lieutenant and Mrs. King have one son, William Lyon Mackenzie, born 1940, and one daughter, Katherine Elizabeth, born 1942.

Surgeon Lieut. King's father served with the British army in the Boer war. His twin-brother, Arthur M. King, is attached to the department of munitions and supply, Ottawa.

Was in Earlier Sinking

Able Seaman Ronald E. Grant, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Grant, Arlington Ave., is also missing. He was aboard the corvette Windflower, the sixth Canadian ship lost this war, when it was in collision in the Atlantic and sank in 1941. He was one of 44 men saved.

Born in Moose Jaw, Sask., he attended Vaughan Road collegiate and enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. at 17.

A member of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve since 1924 who went active at the commencement of the war, Leading Stoker Fred H. Scudamore, 36, of Alexander St. Mimico, is missing, according to official word received by his brother, Stanley Scudamore.

"The sinking of the St. Croix almost took two from our home," asserted Stanley Scudamore, himself a naval veteran who was wounded in action in the last war. "Our son, Petty Officer Bill Scudamore, was serving on the same destroyer with his uncle until less than two weeks ago when he was transfered to Hamilton to take further naval training."

Leading Stoker Scudamore was born in England and came to live at Mimico with his brother soon after the last war. He had served 12 years with the R.C.N.V.R. For

She said Carl has served aboard the St. Croix since he completed his training at Halifax. "He was expecting to get a transfer to another ship soon," she related.

He enlisted at Montreal. "He was crazy about the navy," said Mrs. Izzotti. "It just suited him. The last job he had was in Toronto. Before that he spent several months on lake boats. He always wanted to travel."

Mrs. Izzotti received a scarf from her brother the day the telegram arrived advising he was missing. Stoker Tipe was born in Toronto and attended Park school.

Born in Penetanguishene, Stoker Fred Landrigan, 22, missing, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert (Tony) Landrigan of Dovercourt Rd. Stoker Landrigan enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. when the family moved here from Midland in 1941.

He was educated in Midland and trained with the R.C.N.V.R. at Halifax and in Newfoundland. All the family received letters from him Monday morning. Monday evening the telegram arrived, informing them that he was missing.

Broker in Navy

Enclosed in a letter to his mother was a parachute-silk handkerchief, with the silhouette and the name of the St. Croix in one corner.

"I'd like to tell our son Leonard about his brother Fred," Mr. Landrigan said, "but I don't know how to reach him. Leonard is in the R.C.N.V.R., too. He enlisted July 15."

"It has been a long time since we saw Fred," his mother added. "It was a year ago August that he had his last leave at home. We are going to keep on hoping that news will come soon, and that it will be good news."

Stoker John E. McKeown, missing, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward McKeown of Springhurst Ave. Born in Toronto, he attended St. Mary's separate school. He worked several years with the C.P.R. before enlisting. He has been in the navy for three years. He was unmarried.

Able Seaman Alex. Turner, missing, came from Scotland to Toronto as a child. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Turner, Sr., Britannia Ave.

Enlisting in October, 1941, he trained at Toronto, Esquimalt and Halifax. In June, 1942, he married Frances Lee. His wife resides on Harbord St.

"I never saw anyone so in love with his ship," his wife said. "He was home last July, and said all the crew had so much faith in their ship that nothing could happen. They had a lot of good luck with the ship, especially at the time of the sinking of the Ottawa."

"They'll never sink the St. Croix," he told his wife on his last visit home. "St. Croix means Holy Cross, and they'll never be able to come near it. If they do, it will have to be a surprise, sneak attack when we are not prepared for action."

TOSS CATS IN SEA, LOSE DOG CAPTAIN QUITS, SHIP IS SUNK

Kaiser Liberty Vessel Rammed on Outward Trip—Victim of Sub When Coming Home

IN MID-ATLANTIC

An East Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 1—(CP)—No "mystery ship" in a fiction sea saga ever had a more colorful career than this one of Henry Kaiser's Liberty ships that was "jinxed" from the time she left New Orleans until she was sunk by a Nazi submarine in mid-Atlantic last week.

She ran aground twice in the Mississippi river, losing her port anchor and a 10-inch hawser while getting under way after the second occasion.

She was no sooner in the Caribbean sea when she was attacked by two submarines. It was beginning to look like curtains but two U.S. patrol boats happened on the scene just in time to score a double victory.

By that time, crew members were getting anxious, so they threw two black cats overboard in hopes of getting rid of the "jinx."

"I told them at the time they shouldn't have pitched those two damned black cats overboard," 18-year-old Charles M. Salisbury of Lynchburg, Va., told a newsman when the survivors reached this port.

Not Superstitious But—

The new captain got another propeller, a new anchor and a 10-inch hauser. Everything went fine after that, but not for long.

They were two days out from New York when they were rammed twice within two hours in collisions with other ships. However, they managed to reach England safely.

On the westbound trip they finally got it—this time for keeps. The Liberty ship was struck amidships near the engine room. Everything buckled under the crash, even the bunks.

Voluntary Contribution Made at No. 6 Training School

Campaign headquarters of the United Welfare fund received a donation of $170 from Individual subscriptions at No. 6 Initial Training school, where Canadian airmen are training for aircrew duties.

A collector for the fund stated that no canvass had been conducted, but an appeal had been made to the men when they were on pay parade. They were told about the fund and its objective and asked to contribute if they felt inclined to do so.

Squadron Leader A. A. Vernon, officer commanding, said the men had voluntarily turned in $170 out of their pay.

NAZI TROOPS ATTEMPT MUTINY IN DENMARK

Two Awaiting Execution Overpower Guards and Flee From Prison

Stockholm, Oct. 1—(AP)—Attempts by some German soldiers to organize a mutiny among Nazi troops garrisoned in Denmark are reported by the Free Danish press service here. It said two Nazi soldiers awaiting execution on mutiny charges had escaped from military prison.

The soldiers overpowered a guard and fled from the prison at Hjoerring, in the northern part of Jutland, where strong Nazi forces are guarding against a possible Allied invasion, it was said.

The press service said the escaped soldiers had been court-martialled for trying to induce other German soldiers to revolt.

The Luetzow, one of the key warships of the German navy, was reported back in the Baltic sea today after spending most of the summer in a Norwegian hideout at Alten Fjord.

(A Reuters news agency dispatch from Stockholm three days ago said rebellious crews had sabotaged the Tirpitz, Scharnhorst and Luetzow at Alten Fjord following news of surrender of the Italian fleet. There was no confirmation.)

Deny Hundreds of Thousands Chance for Schooling In France

By JOSE SHERCLIFF
Special Cable to The Star

Lisbon, Oct. 1 — Hundreds of thousands of French boys and girls won't go to school this year following a decree by the Vichy minister of education, that schools and colleges must be closed in all zones endangered by Allied bombardments.

Instructions have been issued to all prefects and mayors throughout France that where it is impossible to evacuate children to safe areas all steps must be taken that schools full of children shall not be allowed to exist in cities and industrial centres.

In certain cases schools may be partially open, classes being 'staggered" so that few pupils are together at one time. Small classes also may be held in different parts of towns but far apart from each other.

In order to supplement educational facilities, the ministry is arranging correspondence classes and regular radio classes so that children in remote districts or those in safe areas where it is difficult to organize schools, may continue studies under their parents or other supervision. School teachers are to be provided with bicycles so that they can do regular rounds visiting classes or supervising the work of children at home both in town and country. No date has been set for the reopening of the schools.

Sights Set on $20,000,000,000

New York, Oct. 1 — (CP) — "Dig, brother, dig," was the call today as the U.S. third war loan went on to shake additional dollars from the pockets of individuals. The drive, the largest financing operation in world history, has reached its goal of $15,000,000,000, but the treasury has set its sight on $20,000,000,000.

The treasury announced in Washington last night that the drive had gone $532,000,000 over its goal. A final tabulation will be made Oct. 18.

"Our son, Petty Officer Bill Scudamore, was serving on the same destroyer with his uncle until less than two weeks ago when he was transfered to Hamilton to take further naval training."

Leading Stoker Scudamore was born in England and came to live at Mimico with his brother soon after the last war. He had served 12 years with the R.C.N.V.R. For two years a maintenance man for Gypsum Lime Co., Toronto, and, for five years before that, worked for Cutten and Foster Auto Fabric Co., Church St. He is unmarried.

He first served on the Niagara, another U.S. destroyer traded to Canada, but for the past two and a half years he had been with the St. Croix. He was on the St. Croix a year ago when it stood by as the Canadian destroyer Ottawa sank after being torpedoed. He lost five friends with the Ottawa's sinking.

Sank Six Subs

Scudamore told relatives that the St. Croix had about six enemy subs to her credit and on one occasion made prisoners of a Nazi sub crew. He had experienced several blitzes at English seaports early in the war.

One brother, Cpl. George Scudamore, is with the 1st Armored Corps in England. Another nephew, Aircraftman George Scudamore, Mimico, is with the R.C.A.F. His brother, Stanley, joined the Canadian navy on Aug. 6, 1914, and went to sea on Aug. 20. He was invalided home with injuries after action in 1916.

Before enlisting with the R.C.N.V.R. two years ago, Signalman William S. D. Pudney, Kingsway Cres., now missing, was employed in a Toronto meat-packing plant. The first word of him received for some time by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. H. Pudney, was official notification late last week of his fate.

Leading Coder Selwyn Arthur Adamson, missing, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Adamson, Indian Valley Trail, Port Credit. He was home on leave in July. His last letter was received by his parents a week ago. Educated at Erindale public school and Port Credit high school, Leading Coder Adamson enlisted in Nov., 1941, while employed at the Edison Ediphone Co. of Hamilton. He has a brother, Gilbert, in the navy, and one brother, David, at home. His sister, Molly, enlisting. He has been in the navy for three years. He was unmarried.

Able Seaman Alex. Turner, missing, came from Scotland to Toronto as a child. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Turner, Sr., Britannia Ave.

Enlisting in October, 1941, he trained at Toronto, Esquimalt and Halifax. In June, 1942, he married Frances Lee. His wife resides on Harbord St.

"I never saw anyone so in love with his ship," his wife said. "He was home last July, and said all the crew had so much faith in their ship that nothing could happen. They had a lot of good luck with the ship, especially at the time of the sinking of the Ottawa."

"They'll never sink the St. Croix," he told his wife on his last visit home. "St. Croix means Holy Cross, and they'll never be able to come near it. If they do, it will have to be a surprise, sneak attack when we are not prepared for action."

Stratford Man Missing

Engine Room Artificer George Richard Corby is the first Stratford naval man reported missing in the present war. His sister, Winnifred, recently enlisted in the U.S. nursing service. His parents received last word from him Sept. 5, when he was on furlough in England with an uncle and aunt.

Leading Stoker Wilmer James Winch of Wiarton, missing, survived a previous torpedoing and spent a month's leave with his family. Stoker Winch is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Winch, Wiarton. A brother, Floyd, is with the R.C.O.C. and another, Elmer, is with the merchant marine. His wife and daughter, age two, live in Wiarton.

Able Seaman Ronald James Long, of Windsor, missing, was born in Peterboro and went to Windsor when a child. He lived here until 1934, when the family moved to Toronto. He enlisted in Toronto three years ago.

First Class Stoker Gordon Franklin Barnhart, 22, of Fort Erie, listed as missing, enlisted two years ago, while in the R.C.N.V.R. He is a graduate of the Douglas Street public school and Fort Erie high school.

she left New Orleans until she was sunk by a Nazi submarine in mid-Atlantic last week.

She ran aground twice in the Mississippi river, losing her port anchor and a 10-inch hawser while getting under way after the second occasion.

She was no sooner in the Caribbean sea when she was attacked by two submarines. It was beginning to look like curtains but two U.S. patrol boats happened on the scene just in time to score a double victory.

By that time, crew members were getting anxious, so they threw two black cats overboard in hopes of getting rid of the "jinx."

"I told them at the time they shouldn't have pitched those two damned black cats overboard," 18-year-old Charles M. Salisbury of Lynchburg, Va., told a newsman when the survivors reached this port.

Not Superstitious But—

"We never were superstitious, but—," chimned in Charles Gunderson, 18, of Stoughton, Mass., who was beginning to doubt his earlier convictions.

When the freighter reached New York, one of the ship's dogs walked ashore and stayed there. When the pet did not return, the captain's nerves began to jangle, so he took his clothes and left on a Friday the 13th. He just wouldn't take a "jinx ship" across, he said.

The new captain got another propeller, a new anchor and a 10-inch hauser. Everything went fine after that, but not for long.

They were two days out from New York when they were rammed twice within two hours in collisions with other ships. However, they managed to reach England safely.

On the westbound trip they finally got it—this time for keeps. The Liberty ship was struck amidships near the engine room. Everything buckled under the crash, even the bunks.

Can't Launch Boats

The lifeboats took a terrific beating. Not one of them could be launched. They were either jammed or twisted.

But despite the fact they had picked a hoodoo freighter to start, all the surviving crewmen were anxious to get back to the United States to get on another of Kaiser's ships, because as one man said, "We were just victims of hard luck, I guess."

Burned in Hut Fire

Coder Joseph Griffith Bell of Sarnia received burns last winter in the Knights of Columbus hut fire at St. John's, Newfoundland. He was a member of basketball, football and swimming groups at Sarnia. His father enlisted a few weeks ago in the navy.

Leading Stoker George Othoe Bass, 32, of Cardinal, is the only son of George Bass, St. Catharines, and the late Mrs. Bass. He was employed for some time as a locomotive engineer. He enlisted over three years ago.

but an appeal had been made to the men when they were on pay parade. They were told about the fund and its objective and asked to contribute if they felt inclined to do so.

Squadron Leader A. A. Vernon, officer commanding, said the men had voluntarily turned in $170 out of their pay.

and fled from the prison at Hjoerring, in the northern part of Jutland, where strong Nazi forces are guarding against a possible Allied invasion, it was said.

The press service said the escaped soldiers had been court-martialled for trying to induce other German soldiers to revolt.

The Luetzow, one of the key warships of the German navy, was reported back in the Baltic sea today after spending most of the summer in a Norwegian hideout at Alten Fjord.

(A Reuters news agency dispatch from Stockholm three days ago said rebellious crews had sabotaged the Tirpitz, Scharnhorst and Luetzow at Alten Fjord following news of surrender of the Italian fleet. There was no confirmation.)

this war, when it was in collision in the Atlantic and sank in 1941. He was one of 44 men saved.

Born in Moose Jaw, Sask., he attended Vaughan Road collegiate and enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. at 17.

A member of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve since 1924 who went active at the commencement of the war, Leading Stoker Fred H. Scudamore, 36, of Alexander St. Mimico, is missing, according to official word received by his brother, Stanley Scudamore.

"The sinking of the St. Croix almost took two from our home," asserted Stanley Scudamore, himself a naval veteran who was wounded in action in the last war. "Our son, Petty Officer Bill Scudamore, was serving on the same destroyer with his uncle until less than two weeks ago when he was transfered to Hamilton to take further naval training."

Leading Stoker Scudamore was born in England and came to live at Mimico with his brother soon after the last war. He had served 12 years with the R.C.N.V.R. 4,500,000 MAGAZINES SHIPPED TO SAILORS

Navy League Has Also Supplied 86,000 Books

Nearly 4,500,000 magazines have been collected and distributed to merchant seamen by the magazine depot, Navy League of Canada, it was revealed at the quarterly meeting of the executive, Ontario division, at the Alexandra Palace hotel, on Thursday. The report showed that over 86,000 book[illegible] 32,000 packs of playing cards had also been supplied to sailors of the merchant marine.

The sea cadet committee reported that corps of cadets in Ontario had increased over the past year from 14 to 34, involving an increase in personnel from 2,100 last year to more than 5,000 enrolled at present.

An illuminated address was presented to Mrs. J. H. Rooney, for three years chairman of the magazine committee. Mrs. Rooney resigned her post today in order to join her husband, Lieut.-Commander Rooney, commanding officer of H.M.C.S. Bytown, in Ottawa.

146 LOST ON CANADIAN DESTROYER

7 Merchantmen and 3 Escort Ships Sunk, Survivors Say

Two Ottawa Men Among Missing In Convoy Sinking

Only One Man Survives Torpedoing Of St. Croix

Largest single loss of Canadian fighting men, 146 of the 147 aboard the torpedoed Canadian destroyer St. Croix, today was announced by Navy Minister Macdonald.

Sole survivors of the sinking—second proof within the week that German U-boats are back in strength along the North Atlantic sea lanes—was Stoker W. A. Fisher of Black Diamond.

Among the 146 men lost were:

Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, namesake and nephew of Prime Minister King. He was born in Ottawa.

Lieut. Comdr. Paul S. Major, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Major, of 4 Range road, Ottawa. He was a nephew of former Ontario Mines Minister Robert Laurier, M.L.A.;

Able Seaman Leslie M. Gorehan, husband of Mrs. Lillian A. Gorehan, 522 Churchill avenue, Westboro.

Able Seaman Francis Herbert Savage, son of Mrs. F. M. Savage, of Ashton.

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Oct. 1.—Victims of the first German U-boat attack in North Atlantic waters for nearly four months, more than 100 United States, Norwegian and British merchant seamen landed here earlier this week.

Their ships went down in mid-Atlantic on the rim of the Arctic Circle when a U-boat wolf pack attacked two west-bound convoys in a running battle which lasted three days.

Selwyn Gray, of Hoboken, N. J., an officer aboard one merchant ship, said he knew of at least two U-boats sunk by convoys and at least six others damaged.

Survivors said today they did not know how many ships were lost, but some estimated the total at three and possibly four score.

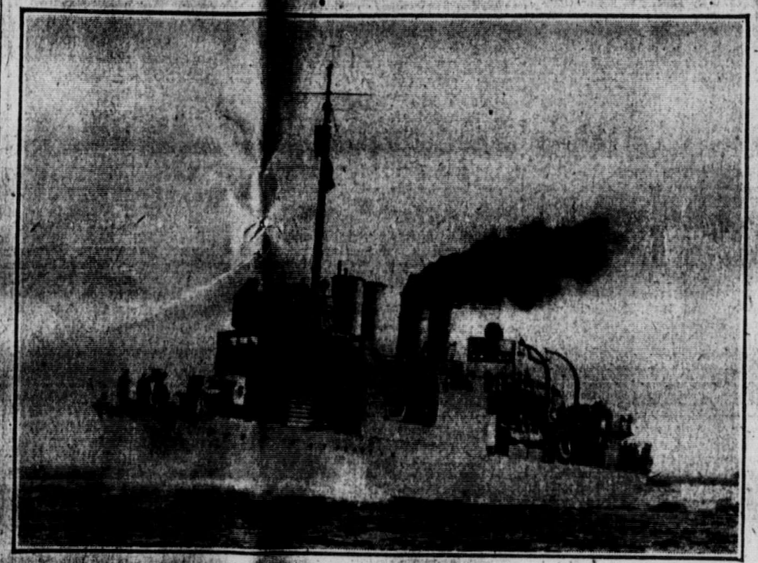

Stowaway Negress Among Survivors

EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Oct. 1.—(CP)—Among the survivors of merchant ships sunk by U-boats who have arrived here is a lone female stowaway from England. She is an 18-year-old Negress who had been smuggled aboard one of the vessels by the boatswain, also a Negro. He planned to get her into the United States, but the torpedoing spoiled his well-laid plans.

Soviet Forces Threaten Gomel Defence Line

Four Cities To Vitebsk in Danger By Attack

MOSCOW, Oct. 1. — (AP) — Russian forces driving deeper hourly into White Russia are gravely threatening the German defence line extending from Gomel northward to Vitebsk.

Four cities of the German northern line immediately threatened by Soviet forces were Gomel, Mogilev, Orsha and Vitebsk.

After taking Krichev the Red Army pushed westward along the rail line, drawing to within 50 miles of that objective.

At Gomel, Russian forces have thrown an arc within 12 miles of the city's outskirts. Forces moving in toward that goal captured Svetilovichi. The crossing simultaneously opened another possible avenue for a northward drive upon Mogilev.

City of 925,000 Found Empty Of Germans

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Oct. 1. —(AP)—The Anglo-American 5th Army today captured Naples, Italy's third greatest city, and threw the German defenders back upon the defences of Rome, which is 120 airline miles to the north.

The British and American forces which clattered into Naples found the city of 925,000 empty of Germans, who for a week had engaged in an orgy of destruction and terrorism designed to burn and tear down every installation that would be of benefit to Allied forces and to hamper Italian co-operation with the liberating armies.

The special Allied Headquarters bulletin announcing the fall of Naples did not give the time at which Allied troops seized the greatest city and port they have won on the Continent of Europe.

Capture of Torre Annunziata, nine miles south of Naples' city limits, was announced at Allied headquarters today, but field despatches said the town was taken late Wednesday.

Two Ottawa Men Among Missing In Convoy Sinking

Only One Man Survives Torpedoing Of St. Croix

Largest single loss of Canadian fighting men, 146 of the 147 aboard the torpedoed Canadian destroyer St. Croix, today was announced by Navy Minister Macdonald.

Sole survivors of the sinking—second proof within the week that German U-boats are back in strength along the North Atlantic sea lanes—was Stoker W. A. Fisher of Black Diamond.

Among the 146 men lost were:

Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, namesake and nephew of Prime Minister King. He was born in Ottawa.

Lieut. Comdr. Paul S. Major, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Major, of 4 Range road, Ottawa. He was a nephew of former Ontario Mines Minister Robert Laurier, M.L.A.;

Able Seaman Leslie M. Goreham, husband of Mrs. Lillian A. Goreham, 522 Churchill avenue, Westboro;

Able Seaman Francis Herbert Savage, son of Mrs. F. M. Savage, of Ashton.

Stowaway Negress Among Survivors

EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Oct. 1.—(CP)—Among the survivors of merchant ships sunk by U-boats who have arrived here is a lone female stowaway from England. She is an 18-year-old Negress who had been smuggled aboard one of the vessels by the boatswain, also a Negro. He planned to get her into the United States, but the torpedoing spoiled his well-laid plans.

CP and BUP Despatches.

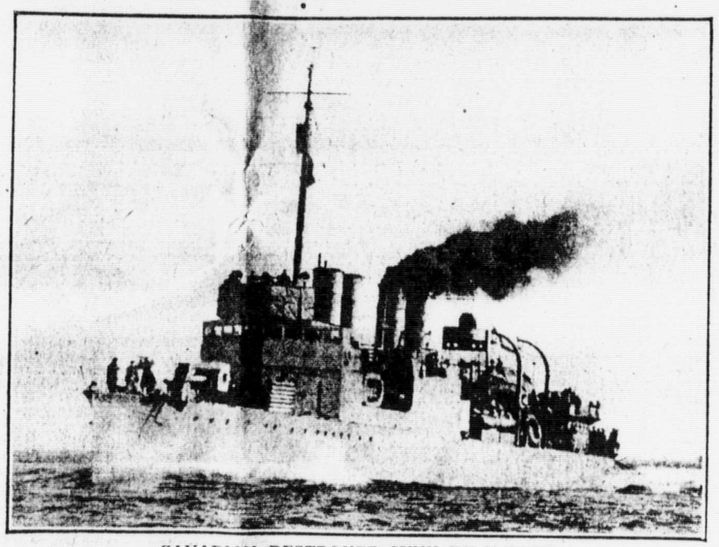

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Oct. 1.—Victims of the first German U-boat attack in North Atlantic waters for nearly four months, more than 100 United States, Norwegian and British merchant seamen landed here earlier this week.

Their ships went down in mid-Atlantic on the rim of the Arctic Circle when a U-boat wolf pack attacked two west-bound convoys in a running battle which lasted three days.

Selwyn Grey, of Hoboken, N. J., an officer aboard one merchant ship, said he knew of at least two U-boats sunk by escorts and at least six others damaged.

Survivors said they did not know how many ships were lost, but some estimated the total at three and possibly four escort ships and seven merchant ships.

One of the warships sunk was the Canadian destroyer St. Croix

REPEAT
REPETITION

Except to say the St. Croix on "convoy duty", the Navy no details of the engagemen which the destroyer was lost. was one of seven United S destroyers turned over to Canadian Navy after the 50-v ship trade for naval bases tween London and Washington fore Pearl Harbor.

Since coming under the Re Ensign the St. Croix had account ed for at least one U-boat.

While the Navy withheld details, it was believed probable that the St. Croix was engaged in that action where five R.C.A.F. long-range Liberator bombers fought six U-boats in two recent days. It probably, too, was the one mentioned by Prime Minister Churchill in his recent speech before the British House, the action forming the basis for German claims that 12 destroyers and nine merchantmen had been sunk in a west-bound convoy.

(There has been no confirmation of this German claim from Allied sources.)

(Reports from an East Coast Canadian port were survivors of destroyed merchant ships were landed after the Atlantic battle said the St. Croix was picking up survivors of a merchantman when she was hit. A torpedo crashed through her thin armor, apparently into her ammunition stores.

(The detonation set off a terrific explosion which racked her from stem to stern and probably killed many before they even had a chance to jump.

("It was the most terrific sight I've ever seen", said one sailor. "She just seemed to go to pieces all at once.")

Telling of the blast that destroyed the St. Croix, one officer said his ship was six miles away at the time the destroyer was split by the explosion.

"After the explosion we could see a few twinkling lights on the water. They might have been survivors with lights, but when we reached the scene all we found was a bunch of wreckage and one lifebelt with a light on it", he said.

To Exchange Invalided British and German Prisoners

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 1.—(BUP)—A Swedish Foreign Office spokesman has confirmed reports negotiations were under way for an exchange of invalided British and German prisoners of war, but denied that his government was participating in the discussions.

Under a "preliminary agreement" already reached, it is said, the exchange would be made at Gothenburg, Sweden, with the Swedish liner Drottningholm and the British Atlantis and Empress of Russia transporting the prisoners.

The two British liners were expected to reach Gothenburg within the week, and arrangements already have been made for reception of prisoners, it said.

Oregon Over the Top and 7 Men on Raft Get 'Square' Meal

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Oregon has filled its war bond quota in the third war loan drive in the United States and the state's seven men on a raft earned the reward today of a square meal—about an inch square.

Doctors denied them anything more substantial, after their 13 thrilling days aboard a United States Navy raft in Portland's honor.

Pledged to stick it out until the state filled its quota, they were lifted from the river last night as Oregon reached its $104,000,000 goal.

Bearded and weak, they wobbled ashore with cries of "Oh, boy, we eat again".

Doctors announced they would sip only fruit juices.

The men's reaction was violent. So finally a tiny bit of fish and crackers was allowed.

The seven, all war workers picked for hardiness, began the fair lighthearted[illegible], expecting to be rescued within six days. Rations dwindled rapidly. Toward the end they had only a small piece of pemmican (dried meat cake) and two milk tablets daily. Each man estimated he had lost at least 10 pounds, and one claimed he had lost 50.

Allies Will Free Rome and Pope

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today the objective of Allied forces in Italy is to free Rome, the Vatican and the Pope, much in the manner of a crusade, while at the same time avoiding all possible destruction.

It is clear the Germans occupy Rome and that the Vatican is essentially surrounded, the President said. German troops are in the Colonnade around St. Peter's Square, and while he did not wish to say that the Holy Father was in a state of siege, he pointed out that complete freedom can not be had if troops are in your front yard and inspect every one coming in and going out.

The Allied march northward looks toward freeing Rome, the Vatican and the Pope, he said, and it is hoped Rome's monuments and shrines and historical spots can be restored without destruction. But, in the last analysis, it will be the Germans and not the Allies who decide that, he emphasized.

Asked whether he thought it possible the German armies might attempt to induce destruction by the Allies, he said that was perfectly possible.

Dr. Macdougall King was the only brother of Prime Minister Mackenzie King. He died in Denver, Colo., when Surgeon Lieut. King was only nine years of age. The young officer's mother still is living.

Lieut. King attended the University of Toronto for courses in arts and medicine in 1930. He was graduated with honors in medicine June 10, 1937, winning the Faculty Medal, and after interning at Toronto General Hospital from 1937 to 1938, was awarded a fellowship which took him to the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., for a four-year special course in medicine and surgery.

Lieut. King completed this course in 1941 and from 1941 to 1942 was on the staff of St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto. He joined the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve June 27, 1942, served in hospital at Halifax, and was posted to the St. Croix in June of last year.

He was married in 1939 to the former Marjorie Little Rean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Rean, of 14 Binscarth Road, Toronto. They have one son, William Lyon Mackenzie King, born in 1940, and a daughter, Elizabeth, born in 1942.

To Exchange Invalided British and German Prisoners

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 1.—(BUP)—A Swedish Foreign Office spokesman has confirmed reports negotiations were under way for an exchange of invalided British and German prisoners of war, but denied that his government was participating in the discussions.

Under a "preliminary agreement" already reached, it is said, the exchange would be made at Gothenburg, Sweden, with the Swedish liner Drottningholm and the British Atlantis and Empress of Russia transporting the prisoners.

The two British liners were expected to reach Gothenburg within the week, and arrangements already have been made for reception of prisoners, it said.

Sweden Halts Transit Of Fuel to Germany

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Sweden halted today the transit of fuel oil over its railway system from abroad to any other country, the Foreign Office announced.

Germany, the country mainly affected, will be obliged to fall back on the sea route to keep her troops in Norway and Northern Finland supplied.

The Foreign Office spokesman explained that oil was not cover-

...all its immense implications for the whole course and duration of the war—has led to a definite decision for early and intimate British-American-Soviet military staff discussions, even in advance of the forthcoming three-power diplomatic meeting.

This was learned today from a non-British source.

The rush of events on the fighting fronts—at a pace that had not been foreseen—has made it plain that a meeting here will have a military flavor more marked than had appeared likely a few weeks ago.

It now is probable that Russian staff officers will participate in it; in fact, that military men of all three countries will take part not only in a general conference along with their diplomatic chiefs, but have their own sessions among themselves.

Oregon Over the Top And 7 Men on Raft Get 'Square' Meal

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 1.—(AP)—Oregon has filled its war bond quota in the third war loan drive in the United States and the state's seven men on a raft earned the reward today of a square meal—about an inch square.

Doctors denied them anything more substantial, after their 13 gruelling days aboard a United States Navy raft in Portland's harbor.

Pledged to stick it out until the state filled its quota, they were lifted from the river last night as Oregon reached its $104,000,000 goal.

Bearded and weak, they wobbled ashore with cries of "Oh, boy, we eat again".

Doctors announced they would sip only fruit juices.

The men's reaction was violent. So finally a tiny bit of fish and crackers was allowed.

The seven, all war workers picked for hardiness, began the affair lightheartedly, expecting to be rescued within six days. Rations dwindled rapidly. Toward the end they had only a small piece of pemmican (dried meat cake) and two milk tablets daily.

Each man estimated he had lost at least 10 pounds, and one claimed he had lost 50.

Large Allied Convoy Cleared at Gibraltar

Another member of the crew was FO. C. H. Johnson, of Strome, Alta.

Flt. Sgt. Harry Golding, of Meadow Lake, Sask., a mid-upper gunner in a Lancaster, reported fires could be seen burning as the aircraft crossed the European coast after the raid on the Ruhr industrial city.

His aircraft was caught in a cone of searchlights for five minutes but the pilot evaded the beams by diving 2,000 feet.

Other Canadians in the raid included Sgts. Alex Cossar, of Cobourg, Ont.; Louis Bean, of Salmon Arm, B.C.; Ralph Herbert, of Kelowna, B.C., and WO. Cec Hergott, of Edmonton.

Allies Will Free Rome and Pope

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today the objective of Allied forces in Italy is to free Rome, the Vatican and the Pope, much in the manner of a crusade, while at the same time avoiding all possible destruction.

It is clear the Germans occupy Rome and that the Vatican is essentially surrounded, the President said. German troops are in the Colonnade around St. Peter's Square, and while he did not wish to say that the Holy Father was in a state of siege, he pointed out that complete freedom can not be had if troops are in your front yard and inspect every one coming in and going out.

The Allied march northward looks toward freeing Rome, the Vatican and the Pope, he said, and it is hoped Rome's monuments and shrines and historical spots can be restored without destruction. But, in the last analysis, it will be the Germans and not the Allies who decide that, he emphasized.

Asked whether he thought it possible the German armies might attempt to induce destruction by the Allies, he said that was perfectly possible.

Mixed Drinking Ban Is Urged By Federation

A recommendation to "petition provincial governments that all mixed drinking be stopped and that men and women drink in separate rooms so that all promiscuous drinking throughout Canada could be eliminated was contained in a resolution passed by the Canadian Temperance Federation at its meeting in the Chateau Laurier this morning. The resolution was sponsored by the temperance societies of Quebec, in both French and English groups.

The report of the resolutions committee was presented by Rev. J. Stanley Packham, of Saskatoon. A resolution suggesting the "establishment in Canada of regional hospitals and clinics to treat inebriates without cost where necessary", and urging that "courts should commit habitual drunkards to these hospitals rather than to prison", was unanimously passed.

Want Committee.

"That a committee on temperance education be appointed by the provincial governments to promote better temperance education in the schools and among young people, as well as adults, and that the provincial governments provide a grant for this purpose", was a resolution to be sent to each provincial Temperance Society for consideration and action.

With a view of studying the whole problem of the present methods of liquor sales and as an expression of its purposes, the Federation, after discussion, passed the following resolution:

"That while this Federation still adheres to its objectives, namely, the final and complete elimination of the liquor traffic from our national life, we believe that the huge profits made by liquor producers and liquor sellers constitute a grave menace to political integrity and good citizenship, we believe that the propostion to eliminate the private operation and profit in the liquor business under a system that would prevent Government departments from being financed by liquor profits is one that should be carefully studied by temperance people. Therefore, the Federation recommend that the executive be instructed to set up a committee to study the question and refer the results of such study to each unit for their consideration and report."

Liberty Ship Jinxed After Black Cats Tossed Overboard

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Oct. 1.—(CP)—No "mystery ship" in a fiction sea saga ever had a more colorful career than one of Henry Kaiser's Liberty ships that was "jinxed" from the time she left New Orleans until sunk by a Nazi submarine in mid-Atlantic last week.

Less than half of her crew arrived here recently to tell the tale of their strange ship. Even her former captain quit and went ashore when his nerves got the best of him after the first leg of their trip—from New Orleans to New York.

She ran aground twice in the Mississippi river, losing her port anchor and a 10-inch hawser. In the Caribbean Sea she was attacked by two submarines. Two United States patrol boats happened on the scene just in time to score a double victory. The crew threw two black cats overboard in hopes of getting rid of the "jinx".

"I told them at the time they shouldn't have pitched those two damned black cats overboard", 18-year-old Charles M. Salisbury, of Lynchburg, Va., told a newsman.

When they reached New York, one of the ship's dogs walked ashore and stayed there. When the pet did not return, the captain's nerves began to jangle, so he took his clothes and left on a Friday, the 13th. He just wouldn't take a "jinxed ship" across, he said. The new captain got another propeller, a new anchor and a 10-inch hawser.

They were two days out from New York when they were rammed twice within two hours in collisions with other ships.

On the west-bound trip they finally got it—this time for keeps. The Liberty ship was struck amidships near the engineroom. Everything buckled under the crash, even the bunks.

Lifeboats took a terrific beating. Not one could be launched. "I just took one look at mine and jumped overboard fast", said Robert M. Davidson, 21, of Oakman, Ala.

But despite the fact they had picked a hoodoo freighter to start, all the surviving crewmen are anxious to get back to the United States to get on another of Kaiser's ships, because, as one man said, "We were just victims of hard luck, I guess".

Tenant Fined $5 On Rental Charge

A tenant, Mrs. Laura Gosselin, who rents one half of a double house at 268 Clarence street, was fined $5 and $2 costs this morning in Ottawa Police Court for paying a rent in excess of the fixed maximum rental.

Mrs. Gosselin rented her house from Salam Grandmaison. It was shown she willingly paid a rent of $28, when no application had been made by the landlord for increased rent for premises which had previously rented for $25.

Mrs. Gosselin signed cheques in favor of her landlord for $25, though she was paying $3 separately to make up her total rent of $28. E. H. Charleson prosecuted.

Salam Grandmaison, the landlord, answered a charge of breach of the rentals regulations, and was fined $25 and $2 costs or one month in jail. He was represented by H. P. Hill.

Miss Lily Stratton, Ottawa Painter, Dies in Hospital

Well known for many years as a portrait and landscape painter, and a great lover of nature, Miss Lily Stratton, daughter of the late Stephen Stratton and Emma Swinburn, died on Thursday in an Ottawa hospital. Born in the Capital, she had resided here all her life. For many years she lived at 224 Cooper street, and had a Summer home at Westboro. Her sister, Miss Mary Stratton, who also was an artist, predeceased her by three years.

Miss Stratton was a member of several women's clubs in the city. She was an honorary vice-president of the Ottawa branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada, a member of the executive of the Ottawa women's Liberal Club, a member of the Women's Canadian Historical Society, and several other literary and art clubs.

Miss Stratton was always interested and willing to help where possible in every good cause and often lent her home for welfare work. She was a member of Dominion United Church, and its Women's Association.

Only surviving relatives are the members of the family of her late brother, T. E. Stratton.

The funeral will be held on Saturday. Service will be conducted at the parlors of George H. Rogers Ltd., 172 Elgin street, at 2.30 p.m., and interment will be in Beechwood cemetery.

Tenant Fined $5 On Rental Charge

A tenant, Mrs. Laura Gosselin, who rents one half of a double house at 268 Clarence street, was fined $5 and $2 costs this morning in Ottawa Police Court for paying a rent in excess of the fixed maximum rental.

Mrs. Gosselin rented her house from Salam Grandmaison. It was shown she willingly paid a rent of $28, when no application had been made by the landlord for increased rent for premises which had previously rented for $25.

Mrs. Gosselin signed cheques in favor of her landlord for $25, though she was paying $3 separately to make up her total rent of $28. E. H. Charleson prosecuted.

Salam Grandmaison, the landlord, answered a charge of breach of the rentals regulations, and was fined $25 and $2 costs or one month in jail. He was represented by H. P. Hill.

Miss Lily Stratton, Ottawa Painter, Dies in Hospital

Well known for many years as a portrait and landscape painter, and a great lover of nature, Miss Lily Stratton, daughter of the late Stephen Stratton and Emma Swinburn, died on Thursday in an Ottawa hospital. Born in the Capital, she had resided here all her life. For many years she lived at 224 Cooper street, and had a Summer home at Westboro. Her sister, Miss Mary Stratton, who also was an artist, predeceased her by three years.

Miss Stratton was a member of several women's clubs in the city. She was an honorary vice-president of the Ottawa branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada, a member of the executive of the Ottawa women's Liberal Club, a member of the Women's Canadian Historical Society, and several other literary and art clubs.

Miss Stratton was always interested and willing to help where possible in every good cause and often lent her home for welfare work. She was a member of Dominion United Church, and its Women's Association.

Only surviving relatives are the members of the family of her late brother, T. E. Stratton.

The funeral will be held on Saturday. Service will be conducted at the parlors of George H. Rogers Ltd., 172 Elgin street, at 2:30 p.m., and interment will be in Beechwood cemetery.

110 Squadron Original Home After Epic Experiences

By SCOTT YOUNG.

AN EASTERN UNITED STATES PORT, Oct. 1.—Remember old 110 Squadron, the first flying Canadians to land in Britain in this war? Remember how you heard about them first, flying the old Lysanders on coastal defence work with the Army in the days when our part of the world worried more about saving Britain than beating Germany? Remember how they were broken up, fought as the backbone of subsequent Canadian air formations, fought from Lysanders, then Wellingtons, then Halifaxes?

If you remember some names, maybe one is a Sgt. Russ Harling, from Winnipeg, an air gunner. His name is known better than some of the rest because Russ Harling was in the fight longer than any other original of 110, but one. And now Russ Harling is on his way home.

He's a pilot officer now, with a D.F.C. beneath the air gunner's wing on his left breast, and he is something a little different from the strong small man who used to play tennis at the Winnipeg Canoe Club and speed-skate.

He's still a strong small man, but now he's impatient, with clipped speech and little time for laughter. Maybe he'll lose that impatience and regain the laughter, but the patience and easy-going humor of normal life does not stand up well under 300 hours of Lysanders, 13 operations on Wellingtons, 20 on Halifaxes, four hours on a liferaft about a year ago, and another 22 hours on a liferaft in the bitter cold of a North Sea day last February. And that is how it has been with Russ Harling.

Russ has been away from home for more than 3 1-2 years, and he was the second last survivor of Canada's original fighting squadron to leave Britain. The last one still is working out his time over there—another Winnipegger, Flt. Lt. Art McMillan. They joined up about the same time, back in August, 1939, and they fought it all through together.

Now, after a leave and a course, Russ will go back into the air again—but this time in Canada, his outstanding operational service a valuable stock-in-trade for training gunners to follow the vapor trails of the brave little band of Canadians who flew from the first of the war

The people who knew Russ before may find him a little different. He may never tell them how he has come to change, but perhaps it was because of that day last Autumn when his Wellington came down in the sea, and another gunner broke his back, and another crewman drowned. Russ could hear him shouting when he couldn't get out of the aircraft in time.

Or perhaps the change will be because of that day in February, not long after his marriage, when the Jerries knocked out two motors on one wing of his Halifax, and they ditched, but this time 110 miles from England, the cold sea breaking over them continuously. That time there was so little hope of rescue that, as Russ says now, "we never expected to come out of that alive".

He was posted missing then, and, it almost killed Dorothy, his attractive English bride. But air-sea rescue found the raft and brought Harling and his crewmates back, suffering from cold and shock, but not seriously hurt.

The Harlings are on the way home with an infant son.

Russ got his D.F.C. a few weeks ago, and the citation summed up a lot in a few words—about his shooting down one JU88, and one FW190, his two ditchings, and general record of faithful and courageous services. It didn't mention how Russ got five enemy aircraft probably destroyed, in addition to his two confirmed. It didn't mention the friends who fought with him in those early days, and some in the late days, who never will come back to Canada again.

Also it didn't mention something that Russ always must think of in the future when someone asks him about his D.F.C., or about how things were fighting this war in the air. That will be his memory of the time he went before his group captain for final permission to return home and the groupie asked him how long he had been in England. Russ said that he arrived with the old Canadian 110.

The groupie dropped the papers he was holding, stretched a hand across the desk and said: "Go home, and good luck". Then he added slowly: "I didn't think any of you chaps were left alive".

The experiences of Sgt. Allan John Fyffe, in his travels through India, Iraq, South Africa and Egypt, have been varied and colorful. He is with the R.C.A.F. attached to the R.A.F. Ferry Command in the Middle East.

In the Trans-Jordan and Palestine, the oranges he had missed so much while in Britain he picked off the trees. In Egypt, he had his picture taken for about $3.25, and visited the Sphinx, the Blue Mosque Temple and the Pyramids. In Bombay, he was surprised to find people sleeping in the streets at night. Here also he danced with beautiful Indian girls, but he still thinks the girls back home are tops.

Sgt. Fyffe, who will be 22 on Monday, has learned many valuable lessons from these experiences which he will never forget.

Rabbi Says Jews' Lot Shows World Trend

Speaking at the congregation B'nai Jacob on the second day of the Jewish New Year this morning, Rabbi Oscar Z. Fasman used as his sermon topic, "A Pin on the Map". He described the heavy casualties sustained by the Jewish people in the war against Fascism, and he asserted that the safe test of whether the forces of darkness have been finally routed will be the treatment of Jews at the end of the war.

"Just as a general observes the progress of his campaign by sticking pins into a map to mark the various positions", Rabbi Fasman said, "and explains to his staff that a particular pin marks the most critical spot on the battlefield, so does the treatment of Jews clearly indicate the direction in which mankind is moving.

"It was an undeniable sign that Hitlerism represented a retrogressive step in the march of humanity when the Nazis singled out the Jewish people as the special victim of their system. It will be equally undeniable that the United Nations have restored humanity to its potential grandeur if they will outlaw anti-Semitism, grant to the overwhelmed Jewries of Europe a fresh chance to take their rightful place in their respective countries, and establish for the uprooted hundreds of thousands in Israel unrestricted access to the Holy Land with the right of developing their ancient Homeland into a Jewish commonwealth."

...replaced with the laughter, but the patience and easy-going humor of normal life does not stand up well under 300 hours of Lysanders, 13 operations on Wellingtons, 20 on Halifaxes, four hours on a liferaft about a year because of that day in February, not long after his marriage, when the Jerries knocked out two motors on one wing of his Halifax, and they ditched, but this time 110 miles from England, the cold sea breaking over them continuously. That time there was so little hope of rescue that, as Russ says now, "we never expected to come out of that alive".

He was posted missing then, and it almost killed Dorothy, his attractive English bride. But air-sea rescue found the raft and brought Harling and his crew-addition to his two confirmed. It didn't mention the friends who fought with him in those early days, and some in the late days, who never will come back to Canada again.

Also it didn't mention something that Russ always must think of in the future when someone asks him about his D.F.C., or about how things were fighting this war in the air. That will be his memory of the time he went before his group captain for final permission to return home and the groupie asked him how long he had been in England. Russ said that he arrived with the old Canadian 110.

The groupie dropped the papers he was holding, stretched a hand across the desk and said: "Go home, and good luck". Then he added slowly: "I didn't think any of you chaps were left alive".

Flyer Danced in India Thinks Our Girls 'Tops'

The experiences of Sgt. Allan John Fyffe, in his travels through India, Iraq, South Africa and Egypt, have been varied and colorful. He is with the R.C.A.F. attached to the R.A.F. Ferry Command in the Middle East.

In the Trans-Jordan and Palestine, the oranges he had missed so much while in Britain he picked off the trees. In Egypt, he had his picture taken for about $3.25, and visited the Sphinx, the Blue Mosque Temple and the Pyramids. In Bombay, he was surprised to find people sleeping in the streets at night. Here also he danced with beautiful Indian girls, but he still thinks the girls back home are tops.

Sgt. Fyffe, who will be 22 on Monday, has learned many valuable lessons from these experiences which he will never forget.

SERGE JAROFF, conductor of the original Russian Chorus, the Don Cossacks, who will appear at the Auditorium on Saturday, October 9th. Tickets are now on sale at the Auditorium.

of whether the forces of darkness have been finally routed will be the treatment of Jews at the end of the war.

"Just as a general observes the progress of his campaign by sticking pins into a map to mark the various positions", Rabbi Fasman said, "and explains to his staff that a particular pin marks the most critical spot on the battlefield, so does the treatment of Jews clearly indicate the direction in which mankind is moving.

"It was an undeniable sign that Hitlerism represented a retrogressive step in the march of humanity when the Nazis singled out the Jewish people as the special victim of their system. It will be equally undeniable that the United Nations have restored humanity to its potential grandeur if they will outlaw anti-Semitism, grant to the overwhelmed Jewries of Europe a fresh chance to take their rightful place in their respective countries, and establish for the uprooted hundreds of thousands in Israel unrestricted access to the Holy Land with the right of developing their ancient Homeland into a Jewish commonwealth."

German Warships May Roam South Atlantic

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 1.—(A.P.)—The reported return of the Leutzow, crack Nazi warship, to the Baltic Sea area, after spending most of the summer in a Norwegian hideout, aroused new speculation today regarding the future role of Germany's battleship navy.

The consensus here was that before the Leutzow, the Tirpitz or the Scharnhorst, all three of which reportedly participated in the recent raid on Spitzbergen, are ready for any heavy action they will need to spend some time in drydock for overhauling.

However, Swedish correspondents who have recently returned from Berlin said the general impression there was that Admiral Karl Doenitz, commander of the German navy, is placing full reliance on submarines and will keep the big German battleships only active enough to make them a potential threat to hold a large portion of the British home fleet nailed.

To South Atlantic?

Another Berlin suggestion, the correspondents said, was that Doenitz may send the Tirpitz and Scharnhorst into the South Atlantic, now that the opening of the Mediterranean route to Russia has eliminated the necessity of the Allies using the longer and more dangerous route around Norway to Murmansk.

Since the west coast of Norway is vulnerable to attack from Allied long-range bombers — aircraft blasted the Nazi base at Trondheim on July 24—other Germans were said to believe the battlefleet might be kept in Baltic Sea bases, from where it could oppose any attempted invasion of northern Germany.

Some observers also cited the possibility that the Germans may send some heavy fleet units in the Baltic to tackle the remnants of the Russian fleet now based at Kronstadt, in case Hitler is forced to evacuate troops from the Leningrad front and from Finland.

Several Chaplains Affected by Order

The new ruling to retire all military officers at the age of 60 years and to remove chaplains from active duty fields at the age of 51 years affects 18 Protestant and nine Catholic chaplains.

Brigadier the Rev. G. A. Wells, principal Protestant chaplain of the Canadian army since October, 1939, is one of those affected and retired this week. His assistant, Col. the Rev. C. G. Hepburn, rector of All Saints' church, returned to Ottawa under the regulation retiring chaplains from active duty.

Major the Rev. A. MacDonell, assistant to the principal Catholic chaplain, has been retired, as well as Major the Rev. Ewen McDonald of Alexandria and Lt.-Col. the Rev. J. R. O'Gorman of Timmins.

Lt.-Col. the Rev. R. C. MacGillivray, former senior Roman Catholic chaplain of the 2nd Canadian Corps, also is returning from overseas but will be available for chaplain duty in Canada. He has been recommended as assistant principal chaplain (R.C.) at Ottawa headquarters, to replace Maj. MacDonnell.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30—(C.P.)—Macdonald College authorities said today this year's registration at the school for teachers would do little to aid the thinning ranks of Protestant teachers in the province. Registration is not expected to number more than 75 this term.

Women Will Stay at Home and Raise 4 Children Each

Stephen Leacock's plan for Canadian women is presented in October Chatelaine. Is Canada's most famous humorist kidding us again or is he speaking as the sober economics expert?

How Can We Ensure the Peace?

Will your baby boy of today grow up only to die in the next world war? Will each generation of the future have to build new war memorials? Or can we hope for a peace that will endure?

Sir Norman Angell, one of Britain's most distinguished minds, examines these questions for Chatelaine readers.

With Our Nurses In Action

Wallace Reyburn, formerly assistant editor of Chatelaine and now war correspondent for the Montreal Standard, cables a first-hand account of his visit to the Canadian nurses on duty in Sicily.

For You and Your Family

"My Day"

Ever longed for a whole day by yourself, just to indulge in the "works," so you could look and feel alluring? Adele White, Chatelaine's Beauty Editor, shows in two pages of pictures just how to take a day off to relax and beautify yourself, keep poised and purposeful, trim and trigger-keen for the job ahead.

Chatelaine's Cover Dress

Here is a dress designed exclusively by Simplicity experts for presentation on Chatelaine's cover. It's a basic wartime dress—economical of material; easy to make; a joy to wear any day, all day; and in one of the new sharp colors, like our choice of coral, it does things for the spirits, too. It will be available in Simplicity pattern, No. 4788.

FIFTY ONTARIO SAILORS LISTED AMONG MISSING IN LOSS OF ST. CROIX

Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Nephew of Premier, Included in 14 From Toronto District Not Accounted For—Crew of 146 Missing

LEADING STOKER SCUDAMORE, MIMICO WAS ON ST. CROIX WHEN OTTAWA SANK

Surgeon-Lieutenant William Lyon Mackenzie King, 30, of Binscarth Rd., nephew of Canada's premier, is among the 146 listed as missing with the Canadian destroyer St. Croix. Fifty are from Ontario, including 14 from Toronto district.

Surgeon-Lieutenant King was posted as medical officer on the destroyer last June.

"We have no idea where the action took place," said his father-in-law, Walter C. Rean, Binscarth Rd. "We have been notified only that he is missing."

Mr. Rean said that Surgeon-Lieut. King wrote often but never divulged any details of his experiences. As far as can be ascertained he never returned to Canada after the initial voyage across the Atlantic.

"He had never been to Europe before sailing in June," said Mr. Rean, "and he wrote that he had seen parts of the country where the enemy had created considerable damage. We believed he referred to the south of England."

Born in Ottawa

Born in Ottawa, Jan. 2, 1913, Dr. Lyon Mackenzie King was the son of the late Dr. MacDougall King, who practised medicine in Ottawa some years ago. Dr. MacDougall King, the only brother of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, died in Denver, Colorado, when the boy was only nine years old. Mrs. MacDougall King is still living.

Lyon King went to the University of Toronto in 1930 to take courses in both arts and medicine. He graduated with honors in medicine, June 10, 1937, and won the faculty medal. He played football on one of the junior Varsity teams and was a well-known tennis player.

After being an interne at Toronto General hospital—1937-38—he was awarded a fellowship which took him to Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minnesota for four years' special course in medicine and surgery. Mentioned in Dispatches

Petty Officer Frank A. Russ, 24, missing, was in charge of the wireless room of the St. Croix, his wife, formerly Jeanette Rennie, Welland Ave., said. A resident of Vananda, B.C., he was in the navy for seven years. He was on the Saguenay when the ship was badly damaged and rigged up an emergency wireless to send out distress signals. He was mentioned in dispatches.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Tipe, Sackville St., parents of Stoker Carl Tipe, had not been told of the destroyer's sinking Thursday night. Carl's sister and three brothers had withheld the official notification. "Mother is in the hospital, and we did not want her or my father to know about it until we had more news," said Carl's sister, Mrs. L. Izzotti. "Now I guess we'll have to tell my father."

She said Carl has served aboard the St. Croix since he completed his training at Halifax. "He was expecting to get a transfer to another ship soon," she related.

He enlisted at Montreal. "He was crazy about the navy," said Mrs. Izzotti. "It just suited him. The last job he had was in Toronto. Before that he spent several months on lake boats. He always wanted to travel."

Mrs. Izzotti received a scarf from her brother the day the telegram arrived advising he was missing. Stoker Tipe was born in Toronto and attended Park school.

Born in Penetanguishene, Stoker Fred Landrigan, 22, missing, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert (Tony) Landrigan of Dovercourt Rd. Stoker Landrigan enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. when the family moved here from Midland in 1941.

He was educated in Midland and trained with the R.C.N.V.R. at Halifax and in Newfoundland. All the family received letters from him Monday morning. Monday evening the telegram arrived, informing them that he was missing.

FIFTY ONTARIO SAILORS LISTED AMONG MISSING IN LOSS OF ST. CROIX

Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Nephew of Premier, Included in 14 From Toronto District Not Accounted For—Crew of 146 Missing

LEADING STOKER SCUDAMORE, MIMICO WAS ON ST. CROIX WHEN OTTAWA SANK

Surgeon-Lieutenant William Lyon Mackenzie King, 30, of Binscarth Rd., nephew of Canada's premier, is among the 146 listed as missing with the Canadian destroyer St. Croix. Fifty are from Ontario, including 14 from Toronto district.

Surgeon-Lieutenant King was posted as medical officer on the destroyer last June.

"We have no idea where the action took place," said his father-in-law, Walter C. Rean, Binscarth Rd. "We have been notified only that he is missing."

Mr. Rean said that Surgeon-Lieut. King wrote often but never divulged any details of his experiences. As far as can be ascertained he never returned to Canada after the initial voyage across the Atlantic.

"He had never been to Europe before sailing in June," said Mr. Rean, "and he wrote that he had seen parts of the country where the enemy had created considerable damage. We believed he referred to the south of England."

Born in Ottawa

Born in Ottawa, Jan. 2, 1913, Dr. Lyon Mackenzie King was the son of the late Dr. MacDougall King, who practised medicine in Ottawa some years ago. Dr. MacDougall King, the only brother of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, died in Denver, Colorado, when the boy was only nine years old. Miss MacDougall King is still living.

Lyon King went to the University of Toronto in 1930 to take courses in both arts and medicine. He graduated with honors in medicine, June 16, 1937, and won the faculty medal. He played football on one of the junior Varsity teams and was a well-known tennis player.

After being an intern at Toronto General hospital—1937-38—he was awarded a fellowship which took him to Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minnesota for four years' special course in medicine and surgery. Surgeon Lieut. King's father served with the British army in the Boer war. His twin-brother, Arthur M. King, is attached to the department of munitions and supply, Ottawa.

Was in Earlier Sinking

Able Seaman Ronald E. Grant, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Grant, Arlington Ave., is also missing. He was aboard the corvette Windflower, the sixth Canadian ship lost this war, when it was in collision in the Atlantic and sank in 1941. He was one of 44 men saved.

Born in Moose Jaw, Sask., he attended Vaughan Road collegiate and enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. at 17. A member of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve since 1924 who went active at the commencement of the war, Leading Stoker Fred H. Scudamore, 36, of Alexander St. Mimico, is missing, according to official word received by his brother, Stanley Scudamore.

"The sinking of the St. Croix almost took two from our home," asserted Stanley Scudamore, himself a naval veteran who was wounded in action in the last war. "Our son, Petty Officer Bill Scudamore, was serving on the same destroyer with his uncle until less than two weeks ago when he was transfered to Hamilton to take further naval training."

Leading Stoker Scudamore was born in England and came to live at Mimico with his brother soon after the last war. He had served 12 years with the R.C.N.V.R. For two years a maintenance man for Gypsum Lime Co., Toronto, and, for five years before that, worked for Cutten and Foster Auto Fabric

Kaiser Liberty Vessel Rammed on Outward Trip—Victim of Sub When Coming Home

IN MID-ATLANTIC

An East Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 1—(CP)—No "mystery ship" in a fiction sea saga ever had a more colorful career than this one of Henry Kaiser's Liberty ships that was "jinxed" from the time she left New Orleans until she was sunk by a Nazi submarine in mid-Atlantic last week.

She ran aground twice in the Mississippi river, losing her port anchor and a 10-inch hawser while getting under way after the second occasion.

She was no sooner in the Caribbean sea when she was attacked by two submarines. It was beginning to look like curtains but two U.S. patrol boats happened on the scene just in time to score a double victory.

By that time, crew members were getting anxious, so they threw two black cats overboard in hopes of getting rid of the "jinx."

"I told them at the time they shouldn't have pitched those two damned black cats overboard," 18-year-old Charles M. Salisbury of Lynchburg, Va., told a newsman when the survivors reached this port.

Not Superstitious But—

"We never were superstitious, but—," chimned in Charles Gunderson, 18, of Stoughton, Mass., who was beginning to doubt his earlier convictions.

AIRMEN DONATE $170 TO UNITED WELFARE

Voluntary Contribution Made at No. 6 Training School

Campaign headquarters of the United Welfare fund received a donation of $170 from individual subscriptions at No. 6 Initial Training school, where Canadian airmen are training for aircrew duties.

A collector for the fund stated that no canvass had been conducted, but an appeal had been made to the men when they were on pay parade. They were told about the fund and its objective and asked to contribute if they felt inclined to do so.

Squadron Leader A. A. Vernon, officer commanding, said the men had voluntarily turned in $170 out of their pay.

13th. He just wouldn't take a "jinx ship" across, he said.

The new captain got another propeller, a new anchor and a 10-inch hauser. Everything went fine after that, but not for long.

They were two days out from New York when they were rammed twice within two hours in collisions with other ships. However, they managed to reach England safely.

On the westbound trip they finally got it this time for keeps. The Liberty ship was struck amidships near the engine room. Everything buckled under the crash, even the bunks.

Can't Launch Boats

The lifeboats took a terrific beating. Not one of them could be launched. They were either jammed or twisted.

But despite the fact they had picked a hoodoo freighter to sta

NAZI TROOPS ATTEMPT MUTINY IN DENMARK

Two Awaiting Execution Overpower Guards and Flee From Prison

Stockholm, Oct. 1—(AP)—Attempts by some German soldiers to organize a mutiny among Nazi troops garrisoned in Denmark are reported by the Free Danish press service here. It said two Nazi soldiers awaiting execution on mutiny charges had escaped from military prison.

The soldiers overpowered a guard and fled from the prison at Hjoerring, in the northern part of Jutland, where strong Nazi forces are guarding against a possible Allied invasion, it was said.

The press service said the escaped soldiers had been court-martialled for trying to induce other German soldiers to revolt.

The Luetzow, one of the key warships of the German navy, was reported back in the Baltic sea today after spending most of the summer in a Norwegian hideout at Alten Fjord.

(A Reuters news agency dispatch from Stockholm three days ago said rebellious crews had sabotaged the Tirpitz, Scharnhorst and Luetzow at Alten Fjord following news of surrender of the Italian fleet. There was no confirmation.)

Deny Hundreds of Thousands Chance for Schooling In France

By JOSE SHERCLIFF
Special Cable to The Star

Lisbon, Oct. 1 — Hundreds of thousands of French boys and girls won't go to school this year following a decree by the Vichy minister of education, that schools and colleges must be closed in all zones endangered by Allied bombardments.

Instructions have been issued to all prefects and mayors throughout France that where it is impossible to evacuate children to safe areas all steps must be taken that schools full of children shall not be allowed to exist in cities and industrial centres.

In certain cases schools may be partially open, classes being 'staggered" so that few pupils are together at one time. Small classes also may be held in different parts of towns but far apart from each other.

In order to supplement educational facilities, the ministry is arranging correspondence classes and regular radio classes so that children in remote districts or those in safe areas where it is difficult to organize schools, may continue studies under their parents or other supervision. School teachers are to be provided with bicycles so that they can do regular rounds visiting classes or supervising the work of children at home both in town and country. No date has been set for the reopening of the schools.

TOSS CATS IN SEA, LOSE DOG CAPTAIN QUITS, SHIP IS SUNK

Kaiser Liberty Vessel Rammed on Outward Trip—Victim of Sub When Coming Home

IN MID-ATLANTIC

An East Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 1—(CP)—No "mystery ship" in a fiction sea saga ever had a more colorful career than this one of Henry Kaiser's Liberty ships that was "jinxed" from the time she left New Orleans until she was sunk by a Nazi submarine in mid-Atlantic last week.

She ran aground twice in the Mississippi river, losing her port anchor and a 10-inch hawser while getting under way after the second occasion.

She was no sooner in the Caribbean sea when she was attacked by two submarines. It was beginning to look like curtains but two U.S. patrol boats happened on the scene just in time to score a double victory.

By that time, crew members were getting anxious, so they threw two black cats overboard in hopes of getting rid of the "jinx."

"I told them at the time they shouldn't have pitched those two damned black cats overboard," 18-year-old Charles M. Salisbury of Lynchburg, Va., told a newsman when the survivors reached this port.

Not Superstitious But—

"We never were superstitious, but—," chimned in Charles Gunderson, 19, of Stoughton, Mass., who was beginning to doubt his earlier convictions.

AIRMEN DONATE $170 TO UNITED WELFARE

Voluntary Contribution Made at No. 6 Training School

Campaign headquarters of the United Welfare fund received a donation of $170 from individual subscriptions at No. 6 Initial Training school, where Canadian airmen are training for aircrew duties.

A collector for the fund stated that no canvass had been conducted, but an appeal had been made to the men when they were on pay parade. They were told about the fund and its objective and asked to contribute if they felt inclined to do so.

Squadron Leader A. A. Vernon, officer commanding, said the men had voluntarily turned in $170 out of their pay.

13th. He just wouldn't take a "jinx ship" across, he said.

The new captain got another propeller, a new anchor and a 10-inch hauser. Everything went fine after that, but not for long.

They were two days out from New York when they were rammed twice within two hours in collisions with other ships. However, they managed to reach England safely.

On the westbound trip they finally got it this time for keeps. The Liberty ship was struck amidships near the engine room. Everything buckled under the crash, even the bunks.

Can't Launch Boats

The lifeboats took a terrific beating. Not one of them could be launched. They were either jammed or twisted.

But despite the fact they had picked a freedom freighter to

NAZI TROOPS ATTEMPT MUTINY IN DENMARK

Two Awaiting Execution Overpower Guards and Flee From Prison

Stockholm, Oct. 1—(AP)—Attempts by some German soldiers to organize a mutiny among Nazi troops garrisoned in Denmark are reported by the Free Danish press service here. It said two Nazi soldiers awaiting execution on mutiny charges had escaped from military prison.

The soldiers overpowered a guard and fled from the prison at Hjorring, in the northern part of Jutland, where strong Nazi forces are guarding against a possible Allied invasion, it was said.

The press service said the escaped soldiers had been court-martialled for trying to induce other German soldiers to revolt.

The Luetzow, one of the key warships of the German navy, was reported back in the Baltic sea today after spending most of the summer in a Norwegian hideout at Alten Fjord.

(A Reuters news agency dispatch from Stockholm three days ago said rebellious crews had sabotaged the Tirpitz, Scharnhorst and Luetzow at Alten Fjord following news of surrender of the Italian fleet. There was no confirmation.)

New York, Oct. 1—(AP)—Jesse H. Jones, U.S. secretary of commerce, said last night that "when the war is over, government should get out of active industry as soon as it can, without too much unnecessary loss."

Deny Hundreds of Thousands Chance for Schooling In France

By JOSE SHERCLIFF
Special Cable to The Star

Lisbon, Oct. 1 — Hundreds of thousands of French boys and girls won't go to school this year following a decree by the Vichy minister of education, that schools and colleges must be closed in all zones endangered by Allied bombardments.

Instructions have been issued to all prefects and mayors throughout France that where it is impossible to evacuate children to safe areas all steps must be taken that schools full of children shall not be allowed to exist in cities and industrial centres.

In certain cases schools may be partially open, classes being "staggered" so that few pupils are together at one time. Small classes also may be held in different parts of towns but far apart from each other.

In order to supplement educational facilities, the ministry is arranging correspondence classes and regular radio classes so that children in remote districts or those in safe areas where it is difficult to organize schools, may continue studies under their parents or other supervision. School teachers are to be provided with bicycles so that they can do regular rounds visiting classes or supervising the work of children at home both in town and country. No date has been set for the reopening of the schools.

New York, Oct. 1.—(CP)—"My brother, dig," was the call today as the U.S. third war loan went on to shake additional dollars from the pockets of individuals. The drive, the largest financing operation in world history, has reached its goal of $15,000,000,000, but the treasury has set its sight on $20,000,000,000.

The treasury announced in Washington last night that the drive had gone $532,000,000 over its goal. A final tabulation will be made Oct. 18.

PTE. W. G. DONALDSON IN ARMY OF MONTY

Pte. W. G. Donaldson, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Donaldson, Dunraven Dr., Silverthorne, is fighting with Gen. Montgomery's 8th Army and writes: "I could not wish to be with a better outfit."

Pte. W. G. Donaldson

Born in Toronto Pte. Donaldson attended Silverthorne public school and York Memorial collegiate. He worked for Massey-Harris before enlisting in May, 1940. He trained at the Army Trade school, Hamilton, and graduated as a mechanic. He went overseas in November, 1942, and went to Sicily with the invasion force in July.

Arlington Ave., is also missing. He was aboard the corvette Windflower, the sixth Canadian ship lost this war, when it was in collision in the Atlantic and sank in 1941. He was one of 44 men saved.

Born in Moose Jaw, Sask., he attended Vaughan Road collegiate and enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. at 17.

A member of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve since 1924 who went active at the commencement of the war, Leading Stoker Fred H. Scudamore, 36, of Alexander St. Mimico, is missing, according to official word received by his brother, Stanley Scudamore.

"The sinking of the St. Croix almost took two from our home," asserted Stanley Scudamore, himself a naval veteran who was wounded in action in the last war. "Our son, Petty Officer Bill Scudamore, was serving on the same destroyer with his uncle until less than two weeks ago when he was transfered to Hamilton to take further naval training."

Leading Stoker Scudamore was born in England and came to live at Mimico with his brother soon after the last war. He had served 12 years with the R.C.N.V.R. For two years a maintenance man for Gypsum Lime Co., Toronto, and, for five years before that, worked for Cutten and Foster Auto Fabric Co., Church St. He is unmarried.

He first served on the Niagara, another U.S. destroyer traded to Canada, but for the past two and a half years he had been with the St. Croix. He was on the St. Croix a year ago when it stood by as the Canadian destroyer Ottawa sank after being torpedoed. He lost five friends with the Ottawa's sinking.

Sank Six Subs

Scudamore told relatives that the St. Croix had about six enemy subs to her credit and on one occasion made prisoners of a Nazi sub crew. He had experienced several blitzes at English seaports early in the war.

One brother, Cpl. George Scudamore, is with the 1st Armored Corps in England. Another nephew, Aircraftman George Scudamore, Mimico, is with the R.C.A.F. His brother, Stanley, joined the Canadian navy on Aug. 6, 1914, and went to sea on Aug. 20. He was invalided home with injuries after action in 1916.

Before enlisting with the R.C.N.V.R. two years ago, Signalman William S. D. Pudney, Kingsway Cres., now missing, was employed in a Toronto meat-packing plant. The first word of him received for some time by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. H. Pudney, was official notification late last week of his fate.

Leading Coder Selwyn Arthur Adamson, missing, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Adamson, Indian Valley Trail, Port Credit. He was home on leave in July. His last letter was received by his parents a week ago. Educated at Erindale public school and Port Credit high school, Leading Coder Adamson enlisted in Nov., 1941, while employed at the Edison Ediphone Co. of Hamilton. He has a brother, Gilbert, in the navy, and one brother, David, at home. His sister, Molly, [illegible] Toronto, is attended St. Mary's separate school. He worked several years with the C.P.R. before enlisting. He has been in the navy for three years. He was unmarried.

Able Seaman Alex. Turner, missing, came from Scotland to Toronto as a child. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Turner, Sr., Britannia Ave.

Enlisting in October, 1941, he trained at Toronto, Esquimalt and Halifax. In June, 1942, he married Frances Lee. His wife resides on Harbord St.

"I never saw anyone so in love with his ship," his wife said. "He was home last July, and said all the crew had so much faith in their ship that nothing could happen. They had a lot of good luck with the ship, especially at the time of the sinking of the Ottawa."

"They'll never sink the St. Croix," he told his wife on his last visit home. "St. Croix means Holy Cross, and they'll never be able to come near it. If they do, it will have to be a surprise, sneak attack when we are not prepared for action."

Stratford Man Missing

Engine Room Artificer George Richard Corby is the first Stratford naval man reported missing in the present war. His sister, Winnifred, recently enlisted in the U.S. nursing service. His parents received last word from him Sept. 5, when he was on furlough in England with an uncle and aunt.

Leading Stoker Wilmer James Winch of Wiarton, missing, survived a previous torpedoing and spent a month's leave with his family. Stoker Winch is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Winch, Wiarton. A brother, Floyd, is with the R.C.O.C. and another, Elmer, is with the merchant marine. His wife and daughter, age two, live in Wiarton.

Able Seaman Ronald James Long, of Windsor, missing, was born in Peterboro and went to Windsor when a child. He lived here until 1934, when the family moved to Toronto. He enlisted in Toronto three years ago.

First Class Stoker Gordon Franklin Barnhart, 22, of Fort Erie, listed as missing, enlisted two years ago, while in the R.C.N.V.R. He is a graduate of the Douglas Street public school and Fort Erie high school.

Burned in Hut Fire

Coder Joseph Griffith Bell of Sarnia received burns last winter in the Knights of Columbus hut fire at St. John's, Newfoundland. He was a member of basketball, football and swimming groups at Sarnia. His father enlisted a few weeks ago in the navy.

Leading Stoker George Othoe Bass, 32, of Cardinal, is the only son of George Bass, St. Catharines, and the late Mrs. Bass. He was employed for some time as a locomotive engineer. He enlisted over three years ago.

Advance Past Naples After Great Welcome By City's Survivors

Lieut.-Gen. Mark Clark's 5th Army Making Good Progress Despite Sharp Opposition Offered by [illegible] Forces.

[illegible] Norgaard, War Correspondent.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Oct. 2.—(A.P.)—British and American troops, [illegible] welcomed by the surviving population of Naples, forged on [illegible] that devastated city today and fought steadily northward toward Rome and the next defence line of the Germans.

(A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Allied Headquarters quoted a military spokesman as saying "the road to Rome is now open. The town of Benevento is directly threatened."

(He added that the Anglo-American 5th Army is "already well north of Naples." Benevento is 32 miles northeast of Naples.)

Meeting sharp opposition by German tanks, mortars and machine guns, the forces of Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark were said in a communique to be making good progress, both to the north of the captured port city and to the east.

The British 8th Army of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, which includes the Canadian 1st Division, speedily spread over all the Foggia Plain, meanwhile, and captured Serracapriola, 18 miles north of Foggia, and Lucera, 12 miles northwest of that air base center, Allied headquarters announced.

All the Monte Gargano Peninsula—the spur of the Italian boot—also has been occupied in a 30-mile advance by Gen. Montgomery's spokesman said.

Says Govt. Ready For Public Works

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—(C.P.)—Toronto officials and members of parliament conferred yesterday with Hon. Alphonse Fournier, works minister, on post-war projects and were assured that the federal government will be prepared to proceed with public works "even if the war ends with unexpected suddenness."

Mr. Fournier told the conference that while he could make no commitment, the government probably would be prepared to aid the city after the war in construction of a new sewage disposal plant.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 2.—(A.P.)—Hitler has ordered Marshals Erwin Rommel and Albert Kesselring, his commanders in northern and central Italy, to hold a "blood wall" in northern Italy in an effort to keep Allied armies from the borders of Germany, Berlin dispatches to the Swedish press said today.

Stockholm Also Hears Reports Some Nazi Officers In Favor of Showdown With Royal Navy During Coming Winter.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(C.P. cable)—Dispatches to London morning papers today from Stockholm reported belief is current that the German high command has taken initial steps toward evacuation of Norway. The reports coincided with rumors heard in Stockholm that some Nazi officers are advocating a showdown with the Royal Navy this winter.

"Some 20,000 troops—mostly belonging to armored units—have been withdrawn from northern Norway in the last six weeks," said Ralp Hewins, Daily Mail special correspondent in Stockholm. "A few replacements have been made. Evacuation now is speeded up owing to the rapid Russian advance and particularly because of increasing probability that the Red Army will reach the Gulf of Riga before winter."

If the Russians reached the gulf they would completely relieve Leningrad and the naval base of Kronstadt, and the Russian fleet would have anchorages 300 miles farther westward. Germany would then be forced to strengthen her Baltic fleet, a step which Stockholm said Hitler has already taken by dispatching the battleship Lutzow into the Baltic.

The German commanders were instructed to "defend the fortress of Europe to the last drop of blood," the Stockholm-Tidningen correspondent said.

Whether that line will be along the Po river or somewhere else in northern Italy was not disclosed by the Germans who have conscripted thousands of Italian men for work with the Nazis' Todt organization in building fortifications.

A German commentator told the correspondent the "blood wall" was a "guarantee that the Nazi armies in the fortress of Europe will be able to hold their positions many years if necessary until the Allies are convinced the war is futile."

Military commentators were quoted as acknowledging that Kesselring was withdrawing his forces to the "wall" and hinted that they expected further intensification of the Allied offensive in Italy.

Other dispatches said the Germans apparently were preparing to defend Rome in the hills to the south, around Castel Gandolfo, the Pope's summer residence.

A dispatch to the Dagens Nyheter from Switzerland said that German forces in the Naples sector were being withdrawn toward Rome to build a defence around the capital.

Allies' Treatment Of Italy Causing Some Uneasiness

By A. C. Cummings

From the London News Bureau of The Evening Citizen.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Marked uneasiness at the Allies' treatment of Italy as a co-belligerent is expressed in the United Kingdom press today as a result of reports from Washington that recognition of Marshal Badoglio's stop-gap government may be impending.

"Is Italy bargaining with the Allies already?" it is asked, and misgivings are expressed at the state department's spokesman's tribute to the House of Savoy as a repository of "liberal parliamentary traditions"—an astonishing assertion in view of its toleration of every Fascist evil of the last 21 years.

"Official silence on the subject," says the Liberal News-Chronicle, "gives rise to an ugly suspicion that during the recent Eisenhower-Badoglio negotiations the Badoglio government, despite having bound itself to accept the terms notified at the time of surrender, has been bargaining with the Allies for some relaxation and amelioration of those terms in return for making war against Germany.

Stronger Dismay.

The Labor Daily Herald expresses even stronger dismay and inquires, "are we buying Italian military support by revising or modifying the political and economic conditions which were to be imposed on Italy after armistice? Are we committing ourselves to the future of King Victor and Marshal Badoglio and prejudicing our claims and those of our Allies at a peace conference?"

Mixed Opinions Prevail On Control In Peacetime

By Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—Jack Canuck, who has, on most issues, a pretty clear picture as to what kind of a world he wants after the war, has not yet made up his mind as to whether he wants war-born government controls of business, industry and agriculture to be part of this picture. He is just as much undecided about this today as he was a year ago.

In the past 12 months, there has been much public debate on the issue of continuing wartime controls after the war, and apparently this debate has not helped the average Canadian make up his mind.

In August, 1942, and again today, Gallup Poll opinion reporters put the issue to a cross-section of Canadians in this form:

"Since the war started, the government has taken a bigger and bigger share in the control of business and industry. Some people say this control should continue after the war. Do you agree or disagree?"

Army of Yugoslavs Waits for Signal Of Allied Landing

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 2.—(A.P.)—A despatch reaching here from Switzerland today quoted Gen. Draja Mihailovic, Yugoslav patriot chieftain, as declaring his army was "ready and waiting the promised signal from the Allies" to attack Nazi occupation forces.

The despatch quoted him further as saying his troops are not at present participating in the battles being waged against the Axis in northeastern Italy and along the Adriatic coast.

The despatch was from the Dagens Nyheter's Zurich correspondent who said Mihailovic had sent him a personal letter by a traveller recently arrived from the Balkans. The correspondent, whose name is given as Singer, said he had become personally acquainted with the general while working in Yugoslavia some years ago.

"I already have told the British and Americans my army is ready and will begin to fight when the first Allied division lands in Yugoslavia," the letter said.

Must Comply With Coal Regulations

Enforcement officers of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board have been instructed to make any investigations which may be necessary to assure that orders of the coal controller are being complied with, it was announced today by the Munitions and Supply Department.

The investigations apply particularly to Order No. Coal 5, dated July 5, 1943, and anyone found to be contravening the provisions of this order will be liable to prosecution.

Chief clauses of Order No. Coal 5, effective only in Ontario and Quebec, are:

1. Consumers are not permitted to place orders with more than one dealer at the same time.

2. Consumers are required to state the amount of coal required to heat their premises and to declare the amount of fuel on hand.

3. Dealers must not make deliveries of Class A fuel without first obtaining C.C. 55 forms signed by customers.

4. Dealers must not deliver more fuel to any premises than the amount permitted under the order.

Brazil Is Aroused By U-Boat Attack

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 2.—(A.P.)—German U-boats, inactive for weeks in South Atlantic waters, returned on Sept. 26 to sink the 4,988-ton Brazilian motorship Itapage, it was announced last night.

Today Brazilian newspapers published new demands that Brazil avenge its losses to its merchant fleet. The Itapage was the 23rd Brazilian ship lost in 19 months.

The question uppermost in most minds here is whether the Itapage fell victim to a lone marauder or whether a new pack of U-boats has been ordered out to harass South Atlantic shipping lanes.

Late dispatches from Macelo, where survivors were landed, indicate six passengers and 19 members of the crew still are missing from the sailing list of 35 passengers and 72 crewmen. Approximately 80 survivors were reported suffering from wounds received when the U-boat crew machine-gunned the ship's lifeboats and from the effects of an explosion on board which followed the torpedoing.

Soviet Bombers Start Softening Nazi Defences

Russian and German Land Armies Locked in Titanic Struggle for Kiev.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(C.P.)—With the Russian and German Ukrainian armies locked in a terrific struggle for Kiev and the lower Dnieper river valley, Red Army air force bombers have unleashed a bombardment against three White Russian rail centers barring the way to invasion of German-held Poland and the Baltic states.

The Moscow radio said today that Mogilev, Orsha and Vitebsk, strongly fortified German bases in White Russia, were pounded for the second straight night by large formations of Russian bombers.

This operation evidently was intended to soften up Nazi defence lines and pave the way for advancing Red Army forces which yesterday surged forward over rain-soaked terrain to reach the Pronya river, 29 miles east of Mogilev and 17 miles west of Cherikov, capture of which was announced earlier in the day.

Kill 5,000 Germans.

The Soviet columns rolled westward through 460 towns and villages, killing more than 5,000 Germans and collecting huge stocks of abandoned war material the Germans had failed to destroy, a communique said.

The war bulletin, detailing land advances in the White Russian sector, said other drives were aimed at Gomel and Vitebsk. The Germans brought up artillery to meet the advance on Vitebsk and counter-attacked several times, it said, but Red army shock troops battled their way to a stubbornly defended height.

Gomel Heavily Defended.

The Germans also were fighting desperately to hold Gomel, further to the south. Here defences studded with numerous blockhouses and pillboxes checked the Soviet forces, although they succeeded in breaking through at some points. Red army troops were reported within 11 miles of Gomel several days ago.

bombers teamed up yesterday for their first double blow at Germany from African bases.

In this first demonstration of the offensive wallop that eventually may rock Germany from the south as well as the west, especially when the four-engined bombers are based in Italy, American planes made a 1,800-mile round trip flight, their longest from their African bases, to pound Munich.

Other American planes, returning to a target which they hit on a 2,500-mile jaunt from their Middle East bases on Aug. 13, attacked an aircraft factory at Wiener Neustadt, 25 miles southeast of Vienna.

The Allied airmen lost 14 planes in these two blows and in raids in Italy in which night bombers attacked lines of the German retreat from Naples. Pontoon bridges at Grazzanise, 20 miles north of Naples, and Formia on the Appian Way 44 miles northwest of Naples, were attacked in the night forays.

Between 55 and 60 German fighters attacked in the Munich area. The bombers' gunners accounted for eight of them.

Airplane Plant Hit

Direct hits also were reported on the Henschel aircraft factory at Wiener Neustadt. These attacks were intercepted by about 80 German fighters.

An air force announcement said the victories by their gunners had not yet been counted up.

Hagen, which has a population of 150,000, is 10 miles south of Dortmund, often the target for the big R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. night bombers. It is in the center of the Ruhr region with important iron and steel foundries, engineering and armament works and has a big railway center with extensive yards and railway car repair shops.

One of the principal industries is the Accumulatoren Fabrika A.G. which makes batteries, motors and other electrical equipment for submarines.

Making Inroads.

An announcement that two bombers were lost underscored evidence that Allied planes have made inroads on the strength of the German air force in recent months.

The target—the eleventh Nazi city bombed by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. in the last 10 nights—represented a blow at both industry and communications.

It is the junction of several important railroads linking its factories with other Westphalian industrial centers.

The raid also marked another step in bomber command's expansion of its campaign against enemy facilities which in the last week has seen a number of seldom-touched targets blasted, like Aachen, Darmstadt and Brunswick. Hagen has been bombed only twice before.

Over Rhineland.

The Berlin radio said the bombers were over the Rhineland and Westphalia — which includes the Ruhr industrial area.

Earl of Plymouth Dead

CARDIFF, Wales, Oct. 2.—(C.P.)—The Earl of Plymouth, former parliamentary under-secretary for foreign affairs and chairman of the non-intervention committee during the Spanish civil war, died here last night. He was 64. His eldest son, Viscount Windsor, will succeed him.

Mrs. Achille Lamarche

Mgr. O. Lalonde, assisted by the Rev. Fathers F. M. Raymond, as deacon and J. Desjardins as subdeacon, chanted requiem high mass for Mrs. Achille Lamarche this morning in St. Patrick's church. Interment was in Notre Dame cemetery.

A German commentator told the correspondent the "blood wall" was a "guarantee that the Nazi armies in the fortress of Europe will be able to hold their positions many years if necessary until the Allies are convinced the war is futile."

Military commentators were quoted as acknowledging that Kesselring was withdrawing his forces to the "wall" and hinted that they expected further intensification of the Allied offensive in Italy.

Other dispatches said the Germans apparently were preparing to defend Rome in the hills to the south, around Castel Gandolfo, the Pope's summer residence.

A dispatch to the Dagens Nyheter from Switzerland said that German forces in the Naples sector were being withdrawn toward Rome to build a defence around the capital.

Today in Europe

The following summary of war news and comment from this morning's issue of The London Times has been cabled to The Evening Citizen by the London News Bureau. (Copyright, 1943, by The Southam Co.)

LONDON, Oct. 2.—When British and United States troops entered Naples and thus captured one of the most important harbors in the Mediterranean, they found a devastated city whose inhabitants gave the troops a hysterical welcome, so glad were they to get rid of the Germans who had been shooting some of them as "Communists."

Italian air officers who escaped from the city before the Allies arrived, told The Times Algiers correspondent that the Nazis had destroyed most of the public buildings, factories, wharves and warehouses completely, shops had been burned, roads blocked and streets mined. So great were rejoicings by those Italians still in Naples that they cheered even British and United States war correspondents on their arrival and fired rifles in the air, crying, "Saved, saved," and "Liberty for everyone now." Five German divisions retreated from Naples altogether and the Allies are now in pursuit of them.

The Volturno river is likely to be the next line of Nazi defence, says The Times military expert. It enters the sea twenty miles north of Naples and runs in places through marshy country that could be easily defended. Possibly the German high command may make an even greater withdrawal in order to shorten its lines still further.

Commenting on the new Badoglio cabinet, The Times diplomatic correspondent says it is really a small military directorate in no way representative of civilian Italy. Its task will be to carry on with the Allies as a co-belligerent on the terms laid down by the armistice.

...pressed in the United Kingdom press today as a result of reports from Washington that recognition of Marshal Badoglio's stop-gap government may be impending.

"Is Italy bargaining with the Allies already?" it is asked, and misgivings are expressed at the state department's spokesman's tribute to the House of Savoy as a repository of "liberal parliamentary traditions"—an astonishing assertion in view of its toleration of every Fascist evil of the last 21 years.

"Official silence on the subject," says the Liberal News-Chronicle, "gives rise to an ugly suspicion that during the recent Eisenhower-Badoglio negotiations the Badoglio government, despite having bound itself to accept the terms notified at the time of surrender, has been bargaining with the Allies for some relaxation and amelioration of those terms in return for making war against Germany.

Stronger Dismay.

The Labor Daily Herald expresses even stronger dismay and inquires, "are we buying Italian military support by revising or modifying the political and economic conditions which were to be imposed on Italy after armistice? Are we committing ourselves to the future of King Victor and Marshal Badoglio and prejudicing our claims and those of our Allies at a peace conference?"

Reference in Washington to "the House of Savoy's splendid tradition as leaders of liberal parliamentary government," are received with amazement here in view of King Victor's record alone.

Army of Yugoslavs Waits for Signal Of Allied Landing

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 2.—(A.P.)—A despatch reaching here from Switzerland today quoted Gen. Draja Mihailovic, Yugoslav patriot chieftain, as declaring his army was "ready and waiting the promised signal from the Allies" to attack Nazi occupation forces.

The despatch quoted him further as saying his troops are not at present participating in the battles being waged against the Axis in northeastern Italy and along the Adriatic coast.

The despatch was from the Dagens Nyheter's Zurich correspondent who said Mihailovic had sent him a personal letter by a traveller recently arrived from the Balkans. The correspondent, whose name is given as Singer, said he had become personally acquainted with the general while working in Yugoslavia some years ago.

"I already have told the British and Americans my army is ready and will begin to fight when the first Allied division lands in Yugoslavia," the letter said.

Must Comply With Coal Regulations

Enforcement officers of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board have been instructed to make any investigations which may be necessary to assure that orders of the coal controller are being complied with, it was announced today by the Munitions and Supply Department.

The investigations apply particularly to Order No. Coal 5, dated July 5, 1943, and anyone found to be contravening the provisions of this order will be liable to prosecution.

Chief clauses of Order No. Coal 5, effective only in Ontario and Quebec, are:

1. Consumers are not permitted to place orders with more than one dealer at the same time.

2. Consumers are required to state the amount of coal required to heat their premises and to declare the amount of fuel on hand.

3. Dealers must not make deliveries of Class A fuel without first obtaining C.C. 55 forms signed by customers.

4. Dealers must not deliver more fuel to any premises than the amount permitted under the order.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(C.P.)—Thirty-one persons died in a Baltimore tannery fire which was started by a carelessly discarded cigaret, the Berlin radio said today in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press.

Some Changes In News Policy

Because of further drastic reduction in the amount of newsprint paper allotted under government order, plus the ever-increasing pressure of war news, The Evening Citizen must take immediate conservation measures, entailing some condensation of news as well as restriction of advertising lineage. Every Canadian newspaper is faced with the same problem.

For example, beginning next Monday, there will have to be curtailment of the space devoted to certain minor social, club and other events, hitherto gladly covered as a contribution to community life. Reluctantly, also, we must discontinue publication of the now unwieldy flood of individual pictures of members of the armed forces arriving overseas or celebrating birthdays abroad.

Only by such measures, and by closer editing throughout the paper, will it be possible to maintain the world-wide major news and feature services expected by Evening Citizen readers. We believe that the more concise presentation of events will be highly acceptable to the general public.

The change is a wholly unavoidable war measure, and readers are assured that we shall cut our cloth to their best advantage.

...formations of Russian bombers.

This operation evidently was intended to soften up Nazi defence lines and pave the way for advancing Red Army forces which yesterday surged forward over rain-soaked terrain to reach the Pronya river, 29 miles east of Mogilev and 17 miles west of Cherikov, capture of which was announced earlier in the day.

Kill 5,000 Germans.

The Soviet columns rolled westward through 460 towns and villages, killing more than 5,000 Germans and collecting huge stocks of abandoned war material the Germans had failed to destroy, a communique said.

The war bulletin, detailing land advances in the White Russian sector, said other drives were aimed at Gomel and Vitebsk. The Germans brought up artillery to meet the advance on Vitebsk and counter-attacked several times, it said, but Red army shock troops battled their way to a stubbornly defended height.

Gomel Heavily Defended.

The Germans also were fighting desperately to hold Gomel, further to the south. Here defences studded with numerous blockhouses and pillboxes checked the Soviet forces, although they succeeded in breaking through at some points. Red army troops were reported within 11 miles of Gomel several days ago.

Success of Drive Depends on C.S.

Whether or not the United Way Campaign succeeds in reaching its objective depends on the Civil Service and Industrial Divisions, Arthur A. Crawley, chairman, said today.

With an additional sum of $73,000 needed if the fund is to reach its objective, he said campaign officials were hopeful about the ultimate results. Several divisions had secured their quotas and others hoped to do so. Headquarters will remain open all next week to complete the work, although the campaign officially ends today.

...the big R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. night bombers. It is in the center of the Ruhr region with important iron and steel foundries, engineering and armament works and has a big railway center with extensive yards and railway car repair shops.

One of the principal industries is the Accumulatoren Fabriks A.G. which makes batteries, motors and other electrical equipment for submarines.

Making Inroads.

An announcement that two bombers were lost underscored evidence that Allied planes have made inroads on the strength of the German air force in recent months.

The target—the eleventh Nazi city bombed by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. in the last 10 nights—represented a blow at both industry and communications.

It is the junction of several important railroads linking its factories with other Westphalian industrial centers.

The raid also marked another step in bomber command's expansion of its campaign against enemy facilities which in the last week has seen a number of seldom-touched targets blasted, like Aachen, Darmstadt and Brunswick. Hagen has been bombed only twice before.

Over Rhineland.

The Berlin radio said the bombers were over the Rhineland and Westphalia — which includes the Ruhr industrial area.

There was no official indication to back up the German claim that American heavy bombers were also in the night attack, but this is the first time ... [illegible] ... the fourth consecutive night ... R.A.F.'s first warning flights over Berlin but only leaflets were dropped on the German capital at that time.

Cordell Hull Observes His 72nd Birthday

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(A.P.)—United States State Secretary Cordell Hull, master of many a tough job in his long public career, celebrated his 72nd birthday today resting for one of the biggest—perhaps even historic—tasks ever thrust his way.

With Mrs. Hull, he vacationed at Hot Springs, Va., awaiting a presidential assignment expected to take him on his first Atlantic crossing by air to either Moscow or London for a momentous conference with British and Russian emissaries. It may point the course for the post-war world.

Toll For The Brave

Another Canadian fighting ship has gone down in action. In a recent North Atlantic battle, H.M.C.S. St. Croix sank with the loss of 146 men: only one man is reported to have survived. A torpedo must have hit the ship in a vital part where her magazines were caused to explode, or perhaps aft where an appalling weight of depth charges would be in readiness to fire. The end would come suddenly under such circumstances.

Once again, Canada is reminded of the unceasing battle where it is being waged day and night, through summer and winter, into this fifth year. It is a cruel, hard battle—with the elements as well as with the Hun. The St. Croix would displace little more than 1,000 tons. Last Thursday, readers were told of the Queen Mary's battle with the elements on one occasion when a mountainous wave drove her over until her upper decks were awash: the Queen Mary has a gross tonnage of 81,235, as compared with the little destroyer's 1,060 tons.

On small ships, destroyers, frigates and corvettes, the navymen put to sea regardless of the weather to do battle against unseen enemies. The U-boats can stay submerged in relative calm while the surface ships are being battered, with decks sometimes continuously awash in one gale after another, perhaps for sixteen days between Newfoundland and Northern Ireland. Sleep in such turbulence is rarely possible for more than occasional brief spells of an hour or so. Meals cannot be served at tables: a mug of cocoa or a basin of hot soup—plates and dishes are luxuries.

So the escorting warships, and the cargo ships in convoy, labor across the North Atlantic's melancholy waste. The only break in weeks of monotony, wearisome monotonous rolling and pitching, is liable to be when the alarm of a submarine is sounded. The enemy's aim is to deliver the attack without warning, with diabolical suddenness . . . as it must have been with the sinking of some of the ships in last week's renewal of Germany's submarine offensive on the Atlantic shipping lanes.

The fighting ships are understood to be fitted with submarine detecting devices. The St. Croix may have been fully aware of the proximity of a U-boat or of several. Rescued seamen from sunken merchant ships—apparently several ships were torpedoed—spoke of a new type of torpedo, deadly and efficient. The U-boats were probably also employing new tactics. Until an official narrative is published, the newspaper reader in comfort at home in Canada can only know that brave lads paid heavy toll.

It is probable that the battle cost British as well as Canadian lives. The Admiralty announced yesterday that the corvette Polyanthus had been lost—without saying where. A German statement

It is probable that the battle cost British as well as Canadian lives. The Admiralty announced yesterday that the corvette Polyanthus had been lost—without saying where. A German statement claimed that several British warships were sent to the bottom.

It is no secret that the destroyers have suffered severely in incessant actions since the beginning of the war. In less than four years, the Royal Navy had lost 102 destroyers—including three Canadian.

The valor of the fighting men is unshaken, however: the destroyers are probably the most popular arm of the service—largely because it is generally more "matey" on the little ships. The men live together more like a big family. They live bravely, simply—almost it could be said, in the words of Paul, "kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love": for they know, without speaking of it, that the call is liable to come at any time when they are at sea.

After making many voyages, keeping watch in the loneliness of the hour before dawn, in the darkness under grey skies, in fair weather and foul, the men are ready. They serve faithfully, unflinchingly, and they continue to get the ships through.

The Royal Navy's battlefront is 60,000,000 square miles of ocean; it covers half the world's seas. Despite the help from the Royal Canadian Navy and Allied navies, the Royal Navy has to carry the main burden still and this requires great endurance from men and ships.

U.S. navy secretary, Frank Knox, asked Britons to combat the notion in America that they feel that once Hitler is beaten the war will be over. In Canada, too, the magnitude of the job of beating the Japs needs also to be remembered.

British 8th Army troops are far from responsive to Badoglio's message that "Italian soldiers will march side by side with British comrades. . . ." The Italian marshal's record as "Duke of Addis Ababa" would hardly commend him as an ally.

Treasury Board Attitude 'Not Encouraging'

The Civil Service Commission, The Journal this morning was officially informed, is completing preparation of a memorandum for presentation to the Treasury Board petitioning for "statutory increases in grade one salaries up to $75 per month".

This submission in writing of the case for the Government's low-paid junior employes follows informal talks which officers of the Commission have had with Treasury Board officials.

MOSCOW, Oct. 2.—(BUP)—Russian armored and motorized forces have broken through the forward fortifications of the German defence line across White Russia in a drive to the Pronya river, 25 miles east of Gomel, front despatches revealed today.

Hitler Orders 'Blood Wall' To Halt Allies

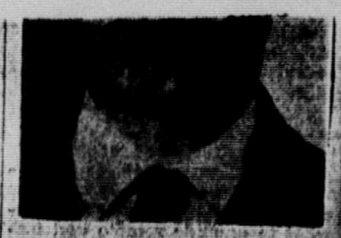

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 2. —(CP)—Hitler has ordered Marshals Erwin Rommel and Albert Kesselring, his commanders in northern and central Italy, to hold a "blood wall" in northern Italy in an effort to keep Allied armies from the borders of Germany, Berlin despatches to the Swedish press said today.

The German commanders were instructed to "defend the fortress of Europe to the last drop of blood", the Stockholms-Tidningen correspondent said.

Whether that line will be along the Po river or somewhere else in northern Italy was not disclosed by the Germans, who have conscripted thousands of Italian men for work with the Nazis' Todt organization in building fortifications.

A German commentator told the correspondent the "blood wall" was a guarantee that the Nazi armies in the fortress of Europe will be able to hold their positions many years if necessary until the Allies are convinced the war is futile".

Military commentators were quoted as acknowledging that Kesselring was withdrawing his

Report Germans Have Started Evacuate Norway

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(CP)—Despatches to London morning papers today from Stockholm reported belief is current that the German High Command has taken initial steps toward evacuation of Norway.

The reports coincided with rumors heard in Stockholm that some Nazi officers are advocating a showdown with the Royal Navy this Winter.

"Some 20,000 troops [illegible] belonging to Armored Divisions [illegible] been made. Evacuation now is speeded up owing to the rapid Russian advance and particularly because of increasing probability that the Red Army will reach the Gulf of Riga before Winter."

If the Russians reached the gulf they would completely relieve Leningrad and the naval base of Kronstadt, and the Russian fleet would have anchorages 300 miles further westward. Germany would then be forced to strengthen her Baltic fleet, a step which Stockholm said Hitler has already taken by despatching the battleship Luetzow into the Baltic.

There was no authoritative comment in London on the Stockholm reports, but it is thought unlikely the Germans would evacuate Norway unless the Allies launched an invasion which made headway. On the other hand, nothing would please the Royal Navy more than a chance to come to grips with the German fleet. If the German Navy could be sunk practically the entire home fleet could be rushed to the Pacific where it would be of more use against Japan.

British More Popular With French People

LONDON, Oct. 2. — (BUP) — British popularity is rising in France while American prestige is falling rapidly, a French underground leader said today, asserting that the French people are "appalled" at the destruction caused by American air raids on the country.

The underground leader, one of three who just has arrived in London to open an office under the direction of the French National Committee of Liberation, said British low-level bombing has proved far more accurate than the American technique.

They said that if demand for the toys and games could be met sales would skyrocket past the record $250,000,000 mark set in 1929.

Holding sales at the predicted level was described as "a highly creditable job" by John C. Goodall, the mart's general manager, considering the industry had to find alternate merchandise for many

8th Army Drives 18 Miles North Of Foggia

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(CP)—A Reuters News Agency despatch from Allied Headquarters, North Africa, quoted a headquarters' spokesman today as saying that the Allied advance now is "going full speed ahead toward Rome".

"The road to Rome now is open. The town of Benevento is directly threatened", the spokesman said. Benevento, next major town on the road to Rome, is 32 miles northeast of Naples.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Oct. 2. (AP)—The successful advance of the Anglo-American Army continues after the capture of Naples and steady progress is being made to the east of that city as well, Allied Headquarters announced today.

The British 8th Army, of which the Canadian 1st Division is a part, in its drive up the Adriatic coast has occupied San Severno, 18 miles north of Foggia, and Lucera, 15 miles northwest of Foggia, and is pushing out to the northwest of both towns.

To Block Retreat.

Striking furiously to block the German retreat from the Naples area, Allied bombers attacked pontoon bridges at Grazzanise, 20 miles north of Naples where there is a crossing of the Volturno River, official bulletin said.

Formia, a coastal city along the ancient Appian Way, 44 miles northwest of Naples, also was heavily attacked last night.

Meeting unusual resistance, the Allied air forces lost 14 planes and shot down 11 enemy aircraft, Headquarters announcement said.

The Allied losses included 7 bombers which did not come back from raids on Munich and Wiener Neustadt in Germany.

Swiss despatches to Stockholm quoted Italian sources as saying the Germans were withdrawing from the Naples area to prepare new defence positions in historic Castelli Romani region along the Appian Way about 15 miles southeast of Rome.

Here, in the picturesque Alban Hills visible from Rome itself and a popular tourist centre, are located the villages of Albano, Marino, Genzano, Nemi and Castel di Papa, Castel Gandolfo, Frascati and others—all clustered around the crater lakes of Albano and Nemi and the Basin of Ariccia.

Russian Armored Forces Break Nazi Defences

Drive Across White Russia To Pronya River

By HENRY SHAPIRO.

MOSCOW, Oct. 2.—(BUP) Russian armored and motorized forces have broken through the forward fortifications of the German defence line across White Russia in a drive to the Pronya river, 25 miles east of Gomel, front despatches revealed today.

Military sources said the push to the east bank of the Pronya had gashed the Nazi defences, partially unhinging the centre of the Vitebsk-Orsha - Mogilev - Gomel line and expediting the Red Army task of smashing through on the road to Poland.

Attitude 'Not Encouraging'

The Civil Service Commission, The Journal this morning was officially informed, is completing preparation of a memorandum for presentation to the Treasury Board petitioning for "statutory increases in grade one salaries up to $75 per month".

This submission in writing of the case for the Government's low-paid junior employes follows informal talks which officers of the Commission have had with Treasury Board officials.

The attitude of Treasury Board was "not encouraging", The Journal was told, as the proposed increases for the Grade 1 employes "seemed to be running into the stone wall of the Finance Department's anti-inflationary policy".

The Commission's memorandum recommending a maximum of $75 per month for the junior employes will be based upon the McTague report which is believed to have advocated relaxation of the Government's wage control policy for the benefit of labor earning less than 50 cents an hour.

The Commission, it was learned, will ask the Treasury Board how justification could be made of "discrimination between the depressed groups in the Civil Service and those same classes in the open labor field".

Hitler Orders 'Blood Wall' To Halt Allies

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Hitler has ordered Marshals Erwin Rommel and Albert Kesselring, his commanders in northern and central Italy, to hold a "blood wall" in northern Italy in an effort to keep Allied armies from the borders of Germany, Berlin despatches to the Swedish press said today.

The German commanders were instructed to "defend the fortress of Europe to the last drop of blood", the Stockholms-Tidningen correspondent said.

Whether that line will be along the Po river or somewhere else in northern Italy was not disclosed by the Germans, who have conscripted thousands of Italian men for work with the Nazis' Todt organization in building fortifications.

Landing Barge Penetrated Boulogne Area?

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(BUP)—The official German news agency DNB said today that a 200-ton British landing barge penetrated the harbor area of Boulogne on the French coast last night, but was set afire and sunk by shellfire.

Boulogne lies on the invasion coast across the English Channel from Hastings and Folkestone.

The despatch was broadcast by the Berlin radio.

(The U. S. Federal Communications Commission said DNB identified the craft as a "light British vessel" which later was observed drifting outside the port.)

Allied sources declined comment on the report.

However, residents of the English southeast coast saw gun flashes on the French coast between Boulogne and Cape Gris Nez last night coinciding with the passage overhead of British bombers, apparently bound for Germany. One particularly heavy explosion was observed, followed by a fire, and there were reports of a naval shelling of the French coast.

British More Popular With French People

LONDON, Oct. 2. — (BUP) — British popularity is rising in France while American prestige is falling rapidly, a French underground leader said today, asserting that the French people are "appalled" at the destruction caused by American air raids on their country.

The underground leader, one of three who just has arrived in London to open an office under the direction of the French National Committee of Liberation, said British low-level bombing had proved far more accurate than the American technique.

"While the French appreciate the necessity for air raids, they are appalled at the destruction the United States airmen inflict," he said.

Santa Claus Will Have Full Bundle Of Toys This Year

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Santa Claus, apparently maintaining the same tireless energy in wartime as in days of peace, will pack an almost normal load of toys into his sleigh for distribution to youngsters of the United States this Christmas.

Although deprived of many of his old properties because of shortage of materials and vexed because of insufficient workers, Santa has been putting in an extremely busy year trying to meet a 20 percent upturn in ahead-of-season demand for toys and games.

The toy and game manufacturers and distributors in Chicago's merchandise mart who help set the stage for Santa said today indications were the retail sales will total around $200,000,000 — approximately 10 percent under last year's total. They said that if demand for the toys and games could be met sales would skyrocket past the record $250,000,000 mark set in 1929.

Holding sales at the predicted level was described as "a highly creditable job" by John C. Goodall, the mart's general manager, considering the industry had to find alternate merchandise for many

Report Germans Have Started Evacuate Norway

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(CP)—Despatches to London morning papers today from Stockholm reported belief is current that the German High Command has taken initial steps toward evacuation of Norway.

The reports coincided with rumors heard in Stockholm that some Nazi officers are advocating a showdown with the Royal Navy this Winter.

"Some 20,000 troops—mostly belonging to armored units—have been withdrawn from Northern Norway in the last six weeks", [illegible] special correspondent in Stockholm. "A few replacements have been made. Evacuation now is speeded up owing to the rapid Russian advance and particularly because of increasing probability that the Red Army will reach the Gulf of Riga before Winter."

If the Russians reached the gulf they would completely relieve Leningrad and the naval base of Kronstadt, and the Russian fleet would have anchorages 300 miles further westward. Germany would then be forced to strengthen her Baltic fleet, a step which Stockholm said Hitler has already taken by despatching the battleship Luetzow into the Baltic.

There was no authoritative comment in London on the Stockholm reports, but it is thought unlikely the Germans would evacuate Norway unless the Allies launched an invasion which made headway. On the other hand, nothing would please the Royal Navy more than a chance to come to grips with the German fleet. If the German Navy could be sunk practically the entire home fleet could be rushed to the Pacific where it would be of more use against Japan.

Raid Follows Twin U.S. Attacks From South

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(BUP)—R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers dropped perhaps 1,000 tons of explosives on the Nazi iron and steel centre of Hagen in the southeastern Ruhr last night in a swift follow-up to twin American daylight raids—the first from Northwest African bases—on southern Germany.

Preliminary reports indicated the night attack on Hagen, 15 miles south of Dortmund, was well concentrated, the Air Ministry announced. Though the bomb-pocked Ruhr is one of the most heavily protected areas of Germany, only two 'planes were lost. All Canadian 'planes returned safely, R.C.A.F. Headquarters announced.

Aerial Pincers.

Closing an aerial pincers from west and south on Germany, Northwest African based American four-engined bombers yesterday blasted the Munich area of Southern Germany and a Messerschmitt factory near Vienna. The double assault gave further evidence that virtually all Germany now is within range of Allied bombers.

Flying Fortresses scored hits on buildings in the Munich area and shot down eight of 35 to 40 intercepting enemy fighters, while Lightning fighters [illegible] added number out of [illegible] challenging fighters on the flight to Vienna.

Lightning fighters accompanied the Fortresses part of the way to Germany, but they crossed the Alps on the final leg unescorted. One Fortress shot down at least four enemy fighters. Fourteen Allied aircraft were lost.

First Raid on Hagen.

Last night's raid was the first of the war on Hagen and was designed to smash German efforts to re-establish industries salvaged from the devastation of other cities in the Ruhr. Hagen's peace-time population of 85,000 was believed to have been swelled to 150,000 by an influx of evacuees from elsewhere in the Ruhr.

British More Popular With French People

LONDON, Oct. 2. — (BUP) — British popularity is rising in France while American prestige is falling rapidly, a French underground leader said today, asserting that the French people are "appalled" at the destruction caused by American air raids on their country.

The underground leader, one of three who just has arrived in London to open an office under the direction of the French National Committee of Liberation, said British low-level bombing has proved far more accurate than the American technique.

"While the French appreciate the necessity for air raids, they are appalled at the destruction the United States airmen inflict," he said.

The underground office in London, it was explained, has been established to give the patriot movemen tofficial representation with the British Government, to protect the interests of other underground leaders arriving here, and to furnish technical advice to Anglo-American military staffs planning the invasion of Europe.

Labor Conciliator Made Bishop By Pope

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Monsignor Francis J. Haas, chairman of President Roosevelt's Committee on Fair Employment Practices, has been appointed Bishop of Grand Rapids, Mich., by Pope Pius XII, the Apostolic Delegation announced today.

Probe Infractions Of Coal Control

Investigation of suspected infractions of coal control regulations are already under way in a number of centres, the Munitions Department announced today.

The department said enforcement officers of the Prices Board have been instructed to make any investigations which may be necessary to assure that coal control orders are complied with. Persons contravening the regulations are subject to prosecution.

In particular, the investigations apply to the order issued last July 5 which prohibits consumers from placing orders with more than one dealer at the same time and requires the completion of a form by the purchaser before coal can be delivered.

Blood Wall To Halt Allies

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Hitler has ordered Marshals Erwin Rommel and Albert Kesselring, his commanders in northern and central Italy, to hold a "blood wall" in northern Italy in an effort to keep Allied armies from the borders of Germany, Berlin despatches to the Swedish press said today.

The German commanders were instructed to "defend the fortress of Europe to the last drop of blood", the Stockholms-Tidningen correspondent said.

Whether that line will be along the Po river or somewhere else in northern Italy was not disclosed by the Germans, who have conscripted thousands of Italian men for work with the Nazis' Todt organization in building fortifications.

A German commentator told the correspondent the "blood wall" was a "guarantee that the Nazi armies in the fortress of Europe will be able to hold their positions many years if necessary until the Allies are convinced the war is futile".

Military commentators were quoted as acknowledging that Kesselring was withdrawing his forces to the "wall", and hinted that they expected further intensification of the Allied offensive in Italy.

Canadian Premier's Nephew, A Denverite, Lost at Sea

A Denver nephew of the prime minister of Canada was one of the casualties when the Canadian destroyer St. Croix went down in a battle with U-boats during a recent attack on an Allied convoy in the North Atlantic, it was disclosed here yesterday.

Word of the death of Surgeon Lt. William Lyon Mackenzie King, a son of Mrs. McDougall King, 946 Washington st., was telephoned to the mother yesterday by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King was uncle of Lieutenant King, who grew up and went to school in Denver.

The prime minister informed Mrs. King her son had been killed when the St. Croix was sent to the bottom. He had been ship surgeon while the St. Croix convoyed a group of ships from England to Canada. There was only one survivor of the destroyer, which carried a complement of 147 men, press dispatches reported Friday night.

His First Voyage

Mrs. King disclosed her son's death came on his first assignment at sea, an assignment for which he petitioned Canadian Navy superiors and which, in a recent letter to his mother, he termed "glorious."

Lieutenant King was given leave from duties as chief surgeon at a Canadian Navy base hospital at Halifax, N. S., to accompany the convoy to England and back.

He was born in Ottawa Jan. 2, 1915, one of twins born to Dr. and Mrs. McDougall King. When Dr. King came to Colorado in 1914, he brought his family with him and they settled in Denver. Dr. King died here in 1921.

Lieutenant King and his twin, Arthur King, now an engineer in Denver, were graduated from East Denver high school.

Study at Mayo's

Lieutenant King entered the University of Toronto Medical school while his brother chose the University of Colorado. Lieutenant King was graduated with honors from Toronto and was an interne at Toronto General Hospital before he went to Rochester, Minn., to attend Mayo Clinic, from which he was graduated with a master's degree in surgery.

He was resident surgeon at a Toronto Hospital in July, 1942, when he was selected by the Canadian Navy to head a surgery staff at the Halifax naval base hospital.

He lived with his wife, the former Marjorie Kean of Toronto, and their two children, William Jr., three, and Catherine Elizabeth, 18 months, in Bedford, N. S., a few miles from Halifax.

Mrs. King received a delayed letter from her son Thursday and another a few moments after she received the tragic news from Prime Minister Mackenzie King yesterday.

Loss of Surgeon-Lieut. W. L. M. King on St. Croix Regretted by Hospital Staff

During his internship at Toronto General Hospital before joining the Canadian navy Surgeon-Lieut. W. L. Mackenzie King was on duty at the emergency wing and other parts of the hospital. He was popular with all his fellow-workers, and his loss while serving on H.M.C.S. St. Croix has caused deep regret among them.

As a parting gift when Dr. King left the hospital one of the technical workers there who is a collector of Canadiana, gave him a brief letter in the handwriting of his ancestor, William Lyon Mackenzie, first mayor of Toronto.

"I'm delighted to have it," Dr. King told the donor, "for I don't happen to possess a memento of this sort. Next time I am in Ottawa I will show it to the Premier. I know he will be interested."

Now you are asked to make a "sacrifice."

The "sacrifice" you are asked to make is to do without things you want but do not need—in order to buy more bonds, and speed the victory.

Let's talk sense. Canadian lads like those of the St. Croix make a sacrifice. We, in buying Victory Bonds to the very limit of our ability do the least that can be expected of us.

Remember the St. Croix!

It was very kind of you to write me so sympathetically of the loss of my nephew at the time of the torpedoing of the St. Croix. Your kind thought brought me much comfort and, may I add, hearing from you gave me not a little pleasure.

I am glad to know that Canada's war effort is appreciated in Ireland as I believe it is throughout the United Kingdom. By avoiding conscription for service overseas, we have managed to keep the country united. What is more, there has never been a time when ships were available to take overseas the numbers of men who have enlisted voluntarily for service in any quarter of the globe. That makes Canada's war effott finer than ever.

I am enclosing one or two publications which may serve to recall

Dear Lady Borden:

How very kind of you to have sent me such a welcome and helpful letter! I was sorry, however, to learn from it that you yourself had been far from well and that the day on which it was written was the first on which you had been downstairs for some little time. That only makes me the more grateful to you for your kind thought and for its words. I do hope that the progress you had made at the time of its writing has continued and that your strength has been steadily returning.

I shall not fail to let Mrs. Macdougall King know of your kind words of sympathy for her as well as for me, also my nephew's wife. For the past year she has been living at Bedford, Nova Scotia, as my nephew was on duty at the naval hospital at Halifax. The voyage on the St. Croix was one Mervoluntarily undertook in order to have some experience in active service at sea. He has left a young son of three who bears his name, a bears his name, and a little girl just a year old. I have no doubt that the little lad will some day be able to carry on his father's work, just as my nephew did the work of his own father, for the short time he was privileged to practice his profession.

Personally, I believe so strongly in the survival of human personality that I have no doubt whatever that both father and son are continuing to exert their influence for good on the lives that are dear to them. If our vision was a little clearer than it is we should see that we are all part of one great company, working toward the fulfilment of some far-off Divine event.

I think often of Sir Frederick and yourself and of the happy hours I was privileged to enjoy at Stadacona Hall. These memories of the past are a very real possession. They too are a part of the present and the future in a much more way than most of us can begin to imagine.

I thank you most warmly for your words in reference to my public work. It is a great inspiration as well as comfort to me to know that you feel I am carrying on the work of the party in a manner worthy of those who entrusted its duties to my special care. Whoever could have imagined when we were all together that I should live to see the day when I would be in my twenty-fifth year of leadership of the party, and within that time to have entered upon the seventeenth year in office as Prime Minister! It makes me very happy to think that this would have been a source of satisfaction to Sir Wilfrid, Sir Frederick, Mr. Fisher and others to whom I shall always feel I owe so much. Dear Mr. Rogers:

Will you please accept my very sincere thanks for your kind letter of October the 4th. I appreciate deeply its words in reference to my nephew Surgeon Lt. W.L.M. King.

I wish to thank you particularly for your kindness in calling on Mrs. King. I know what it would mean to her to have had the privilege of a word with you at this time of her great sorrow. The fact that you knew Dr. King personally would make your visit more than doubly welcome.

May I avail myself of this letter to express to you my own very sincere sympathy in the loss of your only brother. There is a remarkable parallel in the promising careers of these two young men so suddenly brought to a close. It is, as you say, a great consolation in the knowledge that their lives were given in the defence of good against the powerful onslaught of evil which this world has known. There is even greater consolation in the faith which, I am sure, we share, that lives thus sacrificed are in no sense lost in the great economy of God but continue to minister to the good of mankind in the realms which we think of as Beyond but which are a part of the Here and Now.

My dear Tom:

I thank you most warmly for your kindest of letters; also for enclosing the editorial from the Toronto Globe and Mail.

The loss by enemy action at sea of my nephew, Max's boy, Surgeon Lieutenant W. L. M. King, has been a great blow to his wife, mother, and twin brother Arthur. I, too, have felt very much the loss to our country, and to his profession, of one so exceptionally qualified as a surgeon and physician, to render the best of service to his fellowmen. However, I believe so strongly in the survival of human personality, after so-called death, that I look on the passing of such a life quite differntly than most men are apt to do.

The stoker, Fisher, who was the sole survivor of the St. Croix crew, told me that Lyon had completed bandaging the wounds of some nine or ten of the men who were injured and who were being transferred from the St. Croix into a motor boat, in which he, Fisher, was stationed. Lyon had just handed down one of the men and said: "I must go and get some more bandages". He went on into the sick bay, and the St. Croix was gone, either through a second torpedo or some other reason, before he returned.

Were one to use the English, instead of the French, it would be literally tmue that Lyon's life was sacrificed on the "Holy Cross" in performing a mission of mercy and in an endeavour to save the lives of others. He could not have followed nor could he have left a nobler tradition.

I still look forward, dear Tom, to having, ere long, another real talk with you. As you know, up to the present, I have not had a day which I could call my own, though I have, fortunately, managed to have many quiet hours at Kingsmere, where work has been a pleasure.

With my affectionate remembrances to Mrs. Eakin, Hàèap, and yourself,

Reverend Thomas Eakin,

Dear Mr. Breen:

I thank you most warmly for your kind letter of the 15th instant. I am most grateful for all that it expresses of your personal good-will, confidence and regard. I am deeply grateful as well for the cutting from "The Canadian Register" of October 9th, enclosed with your letter. But for your thought I should have had no knowledge of it. I should have been sorry to have missed entirely so generous a tribute.

I am writing Dr. Casey today to express my appreciation of his editorial. I hope you will not mind my mentioning that it was brought to my attention by your letter.

Dear Dr. Casey:

In a letter received this morning from Mr. J. Lawrence Breen of Maxville, Ontario, Mr. Breen kindly enclosed a copy of the editorial from "The Canadian Register" of October the 9th, headed "Sympathy to Mr. King". But for Mr. Breen's kindness, I should not have known of this very generous tribute.

Having seen the editorial I should like immediately to thank you most warmly for all that it expresses. It brings to me a measure of sympathy and credit which is much beyond what I deserve. I am, however, not the less grateful for its words, as they help to keep present to my mind the appreciation which in the long run those of impartial mind have come to have of public men who, from day to day, seek to serve no

Dear Mrs. Frisbee,

Among the many letters I have received since the loss of the St. Croix, few if any have touched me more deeply than the one which came from you a day or two ago.

I am pleased indeed to know that you and Dr. Brown knew so well my nephew and his wife, and that you held them both in such high esteem. The glimpses your letter affords into the tenderness of his nature, and the high purpose he had at heart are all the more welcome because they were known so well to those who knew him best.

I was told yesterday by the sole survivor of the torpedoing of the St. Croix that he had spoken with my nephew just shortly before the ship went down. Dr. King had just completed treating the wounds of some of the men who were injured and had passed on to him (the one survivor a sailor whom he had just treated) and said: "I must go and get some more bandages." These were his last words as the ship sunk before he returned.

There is great consolation in the thought that he was fulfilling at the end the great mission and purpose of his life -- that of helping to heal and to save the lives of others.

I shall share your letter with Dr. King's mother and wife and twin brother, all of whom will, I know, receive from it a consolation in every way equal to my own.

With very sincere thanks and with kind personal regards,

Believe me,

Yours very sincerely,

St. Croix Dead To Be Honored

Memorial Service Planned for Friday

Several hundred naval personnel are expected to parade for a special memorial church service to take place at Notre Dame Church at 10 a.m. Friday to commemorate the officers and ratings of H.M.C.S. St. Croix, lost at sea last September when their vessel was torpedoed.

Of the crew of 147 all ranks, only one survived. Among those lost were one officer, one petty officer and 17 ratings from Montreal and district.

Officers and ratings of H.M.C.S. Donnacona and H.M.C.S. Cartier, under the command of Comdr. M. R. Campbell, R.C.N.V.R., will leave their Mountain street barracks at 9.15 a.m. and march south to Dorchester street, east to Beaver Hall Hill, south to McGill street and east to Notre Dame street to the church.

It is expected that there will also be a large detachment from the naval port control. Capt. J. E. W. Oland, naval officer in charge of the port of Montreal, and other officers will attend. Invitations also have been sent to the senior military and air force officers in the district.

The service will be conducted by Rev. Hormidas Boudreau, Roman Catholic chaplain of H.M.C.S. Donnacona and H.M.C.S. Cartier. Arrangements have been made by the women's auxiliary of H.M.C.S. Cartier.

My dear Mr. Speaker:

I should be grateful if you would be so kind as to represent me at the special memorial church service to take place at Notre Dame Church at 10.00 a.m. tomorrow, Friday, to commemorate the officers and ratings of H.M.C.S. St. Croix lost at sea last September when the vessel was torpedoed.

I should be grateful if you would convey the expression of my deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Major and, should the opportunity present itself, to the bereaved families of other officers and ratings.

I should like to have been present at the service in person myself. Unfortunately, with my engagements here, this will be quite impossible.

Dictated en route to New York,
December 10, 1943

Surgeon Captain A. McCallum, O.B.E., V.D., M.D.,
Medical Director General, R.C.N.,
Department of Naval Defence,
Naval Service,
Ottawa, Ont.,
Canada.

You will be the first to appreciate the reasons which have made it difficult for me to send an earlier acknowledgment of your letter of November the 13th. I have been much touched by your kindness in writing to express the sympathy of the medical officers under your command as well as your own personal sympathy in the loss of my nephew Surgeon-Lieutenant W.L.M. King, R.C.N.V.R.

I am most grateful for all that your letter expresses but particularly for your own appreciation of my nephew's character and of the place he had come to have in the regard of members of his profession and fellow officers in the Naval Service.

It was exceedingly kind of you to call on Mrs. King, and I know that your visit to her brought not less of consolation than your letter has brought to me, and will afford to other members of the family, and most of all to his mother.

Your letter is one which I am proud to have. For the little son who bears his father's name and my own, it will, in years to come, if he is spared, be one of his most valued possessions.

With my warmest thanks and with every good wish to yourself,

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 18) Dr. William Lyon Mackenzie King - re: Death of Dr. William Lyon Mackenzie King - Acknowledgements to messages of sympathy 1943

Dear Mr. Stothers:

It is exceedingly kind of you to have written me of the loss of my nephew at the time of the St. Croix disaster. The words of your letter have been a source of real consolation to me. They will, I know, be a source of even greater consolation to Surgeon Lieutenant King's wife and mother. I shall not fail to remind them of the beautiful lines from Tennyson's "The Princess" which you have so kindly quoted in your letter.

My nephew has left a young son, now three years of age, who bears his name, which is also mine. I have not the least doubt that to live for him and his little sister, a child of one year of age, will be the purpose which the doctor's wife will have from now on most at heart.

I am glad to see from your hand-writing that you apparently continue to be vigorous, notwithstanding your advancing years. Please let this letter bring with its thanks as always my warmest and best of wishes to you and my kindest remembrances as well.

My dear Sir William:

Ever since you telephoned to me, expressing your sympathy in the loss of my nephew and namesake, I have meant to write and tell you how deeply I was touched by your characteristic thought and kindness. Unfortunately, the demands from day to day have been as pressing as ever and I have had little or no chance for correspondence.

Your message to me will be a great comfort to my nephew's mother, his wife, and to his twin brother Arthur, to all of whom, as opportunity offers, I shall make it known.

My brother Max, as you know, had twin sons, the one Dr. W.L.M.King, whose life was lost through enemy action at sea; and the other, Arthur, who at present is in Ottawa engaged on a technical phase of war work with the Department of Defence. Ever since my brother's death, I have shared with his widow the education and fortunes of the boys. I took a special interest in Lyon, a graduate from the University in both arts and medicine, with the Faculty Medal in the latter, and who, after a year as an interne at the Toronto General Hospital, spent four years on a Fellowship at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester. He came back to Canada during the war and, before joining the Navy, was for a short time on the staff of St. Michael's Hospital, in Toronto. He gave eleven years of his life to studies preparatory to becoming a highly and specialized trained surgeon. It was his ambition to carry on in this way hiw own father's work.

I had a talk, a day or two ago, with the sole survivor of the St. Croix. He told me that he had seen Dr. King bandaging the wounds of nine or ten of the injured and that he, Dr. King, had handed down one of the wounded men to him, to be carried in a motor launch to another ship. After handing over the wounded sailor, my nephew said: "I must now go and get some more bandages". It was while he was on his way to or from the sick bay of the ship for this purpose that the St. Croix was hit for a second or third time and sank before his return.

Dr. King has left a little boy and a little girl. The former carries his name, which is also mine. He has left a fine tradition to his little son.

I have no doubt that some day he too will help to carry on the tradition of service with which his name will have a permanent association in the history of our country.

I am still hoping for a chance to get up to Toronto again before very long and to have another good talk with you.

Yours always very sincerely and gratefully

My dear Mrs. Moss,

I cannot thank you too warmly for the beautiful letter of sympathy which you sent me at the time of the St. Croix disaster. I have had it on my desk intending to send a reply written in my own hand. Unfortunately, the pressure of public duties has been such that I have had no chance to write. If I do not send this word at once, weeks may again slip by and I may again be delayed for some indefinite time.

No words could be more meaningful than those of your letter, and I thank you from my heart for all that it expresses. Having in mind your loss, my own is relatively so remote as scarcely to be deserving, in any way, of comparison. Like you, I share so firmly the belief in the survival of human personalit~~y~~e, that the death of those we love means only their transition to a life of ampler opportunity and service, and closer guardianship of our own lives.

I hope that with you the assurance of this has deepened with the passing of time.

Joan and Godfroy both keep very well. We all had a good summer at Kingsmere, though I was able to be there but a portion of the time.

Jack and Molly and the children are also well. Their little dog, Pat, which had been lost for a few days, with great grief to all, fortunately was found yesterday morning and all is well again.

Please let this brief line bring to you, as always, my best of wishes and kindest remembrances.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Senator Dennis:

It was most kind of you to send me, under separate cover, the original of Chambers' drawing on the loss of the destroyer St. Croix. The drawing, as you say, is a very real memento of a naval action which will live in Canadian history, and one which is not without a very special personal interest to myself.

The drawing, as you will recall, pictures a young sailor looking toward the St. Croix. It will interest you to know that the picture of this young sailor, as it appears in the drawing, is as like the twin brother of my nephew who was drowned as a picture of the kind could be. When I looked at the drawing, it was as if the one brother who, by the way, is at present doing special work on cables for the Department of Defence, were drawing aside a curtain to greet the St. Croix in its mission upon the high seas.

As I mentioned to Mrs. Depasta and yourself last night, I am very sorry that so many unforeseen obligations have followed each other in such quick succession since the delightful evening I dined at the Greek Legation that I have not had an opportunity of sending to Mrs. Depasta and yourself some word of my appreciation of your great kindness on that occasion.

I would not like the occasion to pass without just a line to tell you both how greatly I had enjoyed every moment of it and how pleasant are the memories it has added to those of a similar occasion a year ago.

I should also like to thank Mrs. Depasta and yourself most warmly for the expression of sympathy you so kindly sent me at the time the word came of the loss of my nephew, Surgeon Lieutenant W. L. M. It is so kind of you to have sent me the copy of Janet's letter, enclosed with yours, which I have just received. For both letters I cannot thank you too warmly. When you write to Janet, please tell her that I was not a little touched by the words of the particular paragraph in her letter to you, and was especially pleased to know that Margery King had the good fortune to have had her so near by.

I had a letter last night from Reverend A. A. Rogers, the Senior Chaplain of the Navy. In it he says, speaking of my late nephew, "On Saturday afternoon I visited his young widow, Mrs. Margery L. King, Cappa Villa, Bedford, N.S. It is not for me to speak of our conversation, but I will say that I came away marvelling at her high courage and poise and determination to 'carry on'".

My dear Prime Minister,

This little note is just to take to you the assurance of our true sympathy in the great loss you have suffered.

It is bad enough for all of us to have so many of our most brilliant young men destroyed before they have fulfilled their promise - but to wife or parent (and we know that he was like a son to you) such a blow is very hard.

Colin and I have thought

OFFICE OF THE MINISTER

CANADA

DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL WAR SERVICES

Ottawa,
October 2, 1943.

Sir:

My wife and I, and so many more of your friends, are deeply grieved at the news of the loss to Canada and to his family of your namesake, the gallant naval officer who went down with ST. CROIX.

Dr. King was the son of your brother of whom you spoke to me in the tower of Laurier House in February, 1930. I have never forgotten what you told me at that time. Now, to the representative of Dr. King's father, with the members of my family, may I express deepest sympathy, which we do with a feeling of pride that two Canadians, one the uncle, the other the nephew, each in his way, have proven their great love of Canada and of suffering humanity. Death, with a final gesture, having made of the nephew a glorious example and a fond memory, it is timely to recall the words of our Saviour - "Greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his life for his friends".

Respectfully yours,

Dear Mr. King:-

Might I express to you my sincere regret in the loss of your nephew. He has answered the last call -- in the service of his country. It brings the tragedy of war close to home.

Many times you have referred to this tragedy. And how true it is! You now join unfortunately with many who are experiencing it.

It cannot help but be a gratifying thought that the supreme sacrifice was made to the end that this country could survive. The unfortunate part is that so many of our young men must make the same contribution.

He gave promise of a great future. He had builded well. He had an excellent background of professional and academic training. He also bore a great name.

Would it be too much to suggest that while he is lost, he is

Dear Sir:

I write to express my sincere sympathy to you on the occasion of the loss at sea, while serving on the "ST. CROIX", of your nephew Surg. Lt. W.L. MacK. King, R.C.N.V.R. I knew your nephew personally, and knew also of his reputation as a medical man among his colleagues here. Both as a man and as a doctor he was highly regarded, and his death has caused a genuine sorrow.

On Saturday afternoon I visited his young widow, Mrs. Marjorie L. King, Cappa Villa, Bedford, N.S. It is not for me to speak of our conversation, but I will ssy that I came away marvelling at her high courage and poise and determination to "carry on". The two children are perhaps hardly old enough to appreciate the great loss they have sustained; Mrs. King will become increasingly conscious of the magnitude of the blow as the days come and go. She will need the friendship and understanding of friends, but, I am confident that given these, and fortified by the God of all comfort, she will be equal to the days of her tribulation. For her, and for others like her, we must surely give God praise.

I think I can appreciate, sir, something of your feeling at this time. Just six months ago yesterday my only brother was killed overseas—a fighter pilot in Squadron 421, R.C.A.F. He was only twenty-eight years of age; a Ph.D. from the University of Toronto, with a brilliant future before him. His death was indeed a heavy blow. Yet it seems that we are destined to pass through tragedy to a place of triumph— the victory of those things dear to the mind and heart of God. And if in the process our loved ones are cruelly taken from us we have the consolation of our faith, namely, that noghing is more rewarding or more richly rewarded than the devoted service they chose to render. That God may grant you courage and strength in this time of bereavement, and in these days of great decisions, is my prayer.

My dear Billy:

I cannot express in any adequate degree my profound sympathy with you in your great loss. It was tragic and glorious too and perhaps the glory of it may in some measure mitigate your sorrow. You have a host of sympathizers. I enclose an Editorial from the Globe and Mail, you may not have seen it. and a friend of mine called me up to say "although I am a strong opponent of Mr. King politically, I have always admired his private life and his family attachment.

God bless and comfort you, Billy.

As always with deep affection,
Tom.

Sympathy To Mr. King

"PALE DEATH, with impartial step, knocks at the poor man's cottage and the palaces of kings." So wrote the great poet Horace two thousand years ago, and if we needed evidence of the truth of his words it is being supplied by the casualty lists of this horrible war. Already among the members of the British Commonwealth it has knocked on the door of the Royal House and only yesterday it stalked into the home of our own Chief of Government, whose nephew and namesake, Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, went to a watery grave when the destroyer St. Croix was lost in the North Atlantic.

The press has told the story of the extremely intimate and affectionate relations which existed between the uncle and the nephew. In doing so it revealed a phase of the Prime Minister's character unknown to many because of a certain aloofness or reserve attributed to Mr. King. It is a beautiful picture of devotion and self-sacrifice; it is the very human side of Mr. King—humanity at its purest and noblest. The lifted veil brings the head of our Government very much closer to us, and so it is not so much to the Right Honorable gentleman as to the paternal uncle that our sympathy is so universally extended.

Public life, high and honored office has its penalties as well as its rewards. Those raised to a pedestal are under constant scrutiny. There will always be those who praise and those who criticize. It is a tribute to the innate kindness of the human heart that in this intimate personal loss suffered by the Prime Minister of Canada, partisan feelings are completely obliterated in the common instinct to consider Mr. King as one of ourselves and not as one who walks with the gods on Olympus.

For the wide constituency for which it speaks The Canadian Register offers deepest and sincerest sympathy to the Prime Minister.

—D.A.C.

Sympathy for Mr. King

The fell sickle of war does not discriminate between rank or station, race or creed in choosing its victims, but mows them down in an impartial swath. The greatest in the land have to share with the lowliest the sorrows that it brings to millions, and among the latest sufferers from its deadly reaping is our Prime Minister. His nephew and namesake, Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, went down to a hero's grave in the depths of the North Atlantic Ocean when the Canadian destroyer St. Croix, on which he had done splendid service, was sunk.

He was one of the two sons of the late Dr. Macdougall King. Between the Prime Minister and his only brother the ties of fraternal affection were more than ordinarily deep and strong. Some light is thrown upon it in the felicitous preface which Mr. King wrote for his brother's book "The Battle With Tuberculosis, and How to Win It." It is an open secret that when its author was incapacitated from active work by the dread scourge about which he wrote with such authority, Mr. King unselfishly undertook the support of him and his family, and assumed heavy financial responsibilities which most fair-minded people regarded as a valid excuse for non-participation as a combatant in the last war.

The Prime Minister, apart from the fact tha the gallant young doctor was one of his neares surviving relatives, stood, in a sense, in loc parentis to him and held him in special affection And to a man who has no children of hi own the loss of a favorite nephew will be a par ticularly severe blow, and the gallantry of his end will be only a partial consolation for his loss. Under the shadow of death partisan feelings can have no place, and will prove no obstacle to the universal flood of sympathy which will go out to the Prime Minister, and to which this newspaper makes its humble contribution.

Dear Mr Mackenzie King,

I am shocked to see that your nephew Surgeon Lieut. W.L. Mackenzie King is amongst those missing in the recent terrible disaster to the S^t Croix. Although he must have been a school-boy when I was in Ottawa, I think he would be one of your brother's sons and I hasten to send you my deepest sympathy in what must be a grave loss to you. Although it is over we have so far had no alarm even, and generally speaking we have fair sort of a time. But we come across many soldiers, sailors & merchantmen who tell us their grim stories and we do as much as we can for them. We have the Pilot Hollandais and hear much about our adopted land of Roumelia. Perhaps this will be crossed out by censor but it is no news for you!

I still have my mother with us although she is in her 82nd year and full of ideas, music etc. She sends you her sympath & greetings. Of course we could not get up to our apple orchard this year but hope to do so next.

My husband also sends his regards. We hope to see you down here again for a holiday as soon as war ceases.

With renewed sympath and good wishes to yourself. Sincerely yours,

Doris Malcolm Purcell.

25 years since I last my dear and only Brother at Gallipoli. I find time does nothing to soften the blow but rather as years go on one seems to miss one's nearest ones — especially if one are a very small family as in our own case and I think yours.

Sometime when not too rushed I would so much like to hear about your nephew and I think the other brother?

I often wonder how you are standing up to the terrific strain of public life in this terrible war and fear you must be overwhelmed with the difficulties and disasters. Here in Bermuda we are well off and although fairly well prepared for air-raids etc.

Extract from letter from J. Burgon Bickersteth, Esq.,
20 Chesham Place, London, S.W.I, England, dated Nov. 26, 1943:

I have purposely not written to you all these long war years because I knew how terribly occupied you are, but now I feel I simply must send you a few lines about your nephew's loss at sea. As you are aware, I knew the boy well and was tremendously fond of him, as indeed were all who knew him. At the University he was very popular and naturally I used to see a great deal of him there. Many a time was he up in my rooms in Hart House at night. Then I saw far less of him after he took his degree in 1937, I think. But when he came back from the States he usually came in and had a chat. I came over here in the spring of 1940 and did not see him again till a few weeks ago when he came up and grasped my hand at the Canadian Officers' Club. We had lunch together. He told me he was on leave in between two ships and he was anxious to see something of the Canadian Army. It happened that Price Montague was in the Club at the moment and I immediately introduced the boy to him. Price Montague immediately said he would make arrangements for him to visit some of the troops and when we left the Club half an hour later the two of them crossed the road to the C.M.H.Q. and I expect the General made what plans were necessary. He was thrilled to meet the boy as he attended your father's law lectures.

I am so sorry, Mr. King, for you and all those to whom the lad was dear. He was a brilliant student and an oustanding career must have been his, had he survived. God has ruled otherwise and it is difficult to know why one has been taken who would unquestionably have done great things for Canada. The lad is in good company. Many fine boys have given their all and I intend to see that the younger generation - all those young fellows who will come up through our university in post-war years - realize what they owe to those who have died for Canada and our great cause. For to Hart House I have every intention of returning. When

Like all good citizens of the Dominion, I regret to learn of the disaster that has recently befallen our Naval Services in the Atlantic, and at the unfortune loss of your namesake, Surgeon Lieutenant King.

Knowing how you must feel over such bereavement, and also aware of how much you thought of your nephew, I want to convey to you, Mr. King, my sorrow, and that of the members of above organization at the unfortunate loss of the son of a brilliant father.

This is another of the tragedies of this terrible conflict in which so many of our young men are called upon to endure. It seems to me that life's trials are with us from the cradle to the grave. Sincerely Yours, John Kelly.

Dear Mr.King,

On my behalf and that of the members of our organization, I wish to extend you our very sincere sympathy and condolance in the loss of Dr. W.L.Mackenzie King in the torpedoing of the "St.Croix".

The loss of so brilliant a young officer at so early an age who gave every promise of becoming an outstanding member of his profession is one that brings sorrow not only to his family but members of his profession and those who appreciated his readiness by serving on the "St.Croix"to make any sacrifice required. He was true to the great name which he bore and his willingness to do whatever he could to contribute to the effort necessary to once and for all smash the forces of evil which are seeking to enslave the world.

Believe me,my daar Prime Minister,

Brantford, Ont.,
Oct. 4th/43.

To the Right Honourable W. L. MacKenzie King:

Dear Sir:-

Canadians of Armenian extraction mourn the loss of the destroyer St.Croix and one hundred and forty six brave men of Canada who gave their lives for the freedom of their homes, their country and mankind everywhere.

We Canadian Armenians express our most heartfelt sympathies to you for your personal loss and, through you, to the families of these brave men.

We salute those who constantly take risks to preserve the things they value more than life itself.

Canadian Armenians of Brantford.

Will you permit me to join the great company of citizens and personal friends who are expressing to you their sympathy in the loss of your nephew and namesake, who must have been very dear to you.

It is part of the great price which Canada is paying and must pay for the liberties we cherish, and the supreme tragedy of war is that it takes from us the young manhood whose lives are full of promise both for themselves and for the nation.

Please accept this expression of the regret and sympathy of muself and of those associated here with me.

Dear Mr. King:

I returned to Toronto today and have learned of the sad loss which you have sustained. I know something of your personal interest and concern, across the years, on behalf of your nephew, and we have known Mr. and Mrs. Rean for many years.

It seems to me, so frequently, the voice of Providence is speaking to the hearts and minds of the people of this world, in the terrible price human families pay, for the absence of good-will and understanding and false ambitions.

We realize that your Nephew performed a wonderful service back and forth across the sea-lanes of the world, but there is that sense of deep personal loss to you, and in the name of The Navy League of Canada, as well as personally, our hearts go out to you in deepest sympathy.

Yours faithfully,

The news that your nephew and namesake was among the gallant Canadians who lost their lives on the ill-fated destroyer, the "St. Croix", saddened me deeply. May I offer you my sincere sympathy in your great loss.

I should like to take this opportunity of telling you that it is a source of unlimited pride to hear the people on this side single out Canada in praise of the magnitude of her war production effort, which could only be attained by your wise and steady leadership. I trust that you will always be blessed with your usual good health in the heavy burden which you are so ably carrying.

With renewed sympathy, and kind regards, I remain,

Ottawa, October 1st. 1943.

Excellency,

It was with a very deep feeling that I read today the sad news of the loss of 146 heroic Canadians, among them Your Excellency's nephew, Surgeon Lieutenant William Lyon Mackenzie King, when H.M.C.S. St. Croix was destroyed by enemy action.

With all my heart I hope that the list of those missing is, at least in part, exagerated and that the number of survivors will increase.

At the same time I wish to present to Your Excellency my deepest sympathy in this moment of sadness agraveted by the loss of one of yours closest relatives.

Under Your Excellency's learned leadership Canada has done and is doing the most admirable and heroic effort for the defense of the highest ideals of humanity.

The antire Continent, specialy my own Country, gratefully admires the wonderful effort of the Canadian People and feels proud that such an heroic People is part of the American Continent.

I am sure to interpret the feelings of President Vargas, of the Minister of Foreign Affairs and of the Brazilian People as I here extend to Your Excellency and to the Canadian People our deepest simpathy.

I avail myself of this opportunity to renew to Your Excellency the assurance of my highest consideration.

CANADIAN NATIONAL TELEGRAPH COMPANY

(OPERATING ITS OWN LINES AND THOSE OF THE GREAT NORTH WESTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY, THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC TELEGRAPH COMPANY AND CANADIAN GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS). HEREINAFTER CALLED THE COMPANY.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS UPON WHICH TELEGRAPH AND CABLE MESSAGES SHALL BE TRANSMITTED ARE PRESCRIBED BY ORDER NO. 49274, DATED DECEMBER 5TH, 1932, OF THE BOARD OF TRANSPORT COMMISSIONERS FOR CANADA AND PUBLISHED IN THE CANADA GAZETTE.

It is agreed between the sender of the message on the face of this form and this company that this company shall not be liable for damages arising from failure to transmit or deliver, or for any error in the transmission or delivery of, any unrepeated telegram, whether happening from the negligence of its servants or otherwise, or for delays from interruptions in the working of its lines, for errors in cipher or obscure messages, or for errors from illegible writing, beyond the amount received for sending the same.

To guard against errors, the Company will repeat back any telegram for an extra payment of one-half the regular rate; and, in that case, the Company shall be liable for damages suffered by the sender to an extent not exceeding $200.00, due to the negligence of the Company in the transmission or delivery of the telegram.

Correctness in the transmission and delivery of messages can be insured by contract in writing, stating agreed amount of risk, and payment of premium thereon at the following rates, in addition to the usual charge for repeated messages, viz: one per cent. for any distance not exceeding 1000 miles, and two per cent. for any greater distance.

This Company shall not be liable for the act or omission of any other company, but will endeavor to forward the telegram by any other telegraph company necessary to reaching its destination, but only as the agent of the sender and without liability therefor. The company shall not be responsible for messages until the same are presented and accepted at one of its transmitting offices; if a message is sent to such office by one of the company's messengers, he acts for that purpose as the sender's agent; if by telephone, the person receiving the message acts therein as agent of the sender, being authorized to assent to these conditions for the sender. This company shall not be liable in any case for damages, unless the same be claimed, in writing, within sixty days after receipt of the telegram for transmission.

My dear Prime Minister: —

I learned — only last night — of the tragic news. I was informed that Dr. King, your nephew, on active service in the North Atlantic, was posted by the R.C.N

The Right Honourable
W.L. Mackenzie King.

Those who die for Canada are giving their life so that Belgium may be resurrected and free again.

I pray you to accept, my dear Prime Minister, my profound sympathy.

Ottawa,
October 6, 1943

Dear President Davis:

I have just received your kind letter of the 4th instant. Let me thank you for it most warmly.

But for the great pressure of my public duties, I would have written before this to express to Mrs. Davis and yourself - particularly Mrs. Davis - my very deep sympathy with you both in all that the loss of May's boy at sea has meant to her, to your wife and yourself.

I might add I also understood some days ago that Mrs. Davis was either at Denver or on her way out. Arthur yesterday received a very kind message from her which brought the word that ehs had arrived safely in Denver and was there with May. I am sure that nothing will mean quite so much to Mrs. King at this time as to have her sister with her. I am indeed glad to know that this has been made possible through her kindness and your own.

The loss of Lyon's life at sea is one of the inevitable sacrifices which war brings. It is impossible for any of us to see behind the veil but my faith is such that I firmly believe that God's own designs far transcend any wisdom of ours. When we think of how many lives have been sacrificed under circumstances which leave little comfort in their wake, one cannot but be grateful that if Lyon's passing was inevitable, it should have been under circumstances which made so apparent its heroic and self-sacrificing character.

I should not like to venture an opinion as to what it may be best for May to do in the matter of giving up her home in Denver, or changing her place of residence. She will doubtless be the best judge of what would bring to herself most in the way of comfort and happiness. She has lived many years in Denver; has many friends there, and her own home. Whether it would be wise at her years to change all this would depend, of course, on what the alternative possibilities might be. What these would mean to her, she, of course, would, I imagine, be better able to judge than anyone else.

It was indeed fortunate that May had the visit she had to the East, this year, and that, in the course of it, she was able to spend a little time with both her boys and with her sister and yourself. From what she and Arthur have told me, I know how very much each of these visits meant to her, and what happy memories they have left. They will be a great consolation to her in her present sorrow.

Dear Mr. King :

I wanted to thank you for your kindness and tact in passing on to May the sad news of the loss of Lyon. It has been a great shock to her. My sister Gladys has gone to Denver for a few days.

After careful thought and discussion with my brothers, I have advised May to come to Toronto, and terminate her residence in Denver. It has for some long while, been my opinion that the days of her living alone in Denver should be ended.

She and Gladys will partially close up her house and arrange to sell it as soon as it can be done to advantage.

May will stay at Northampton for a short while, and then come on here to us, until we get her settled, and plans worked out to keep her busy and as happy as we can make her.

I will advise you, as we work things out.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King,

Perhaps you will like to have a line from me telling you directly how busy is and what her immediate plans are. But first I want to tell you how much you have helped all of us in our common sorrow. It was hard that it had to be you who should tell her each time of the boy's loss, but that kept her thinking of the news had come through some other means. Your voice helped her appreciate still more, and his and your concern.

And now again your long letter helped signally. It took her far on her way. You really succeeded in putting some of your strength into her.

Bro., as you know, would like to have her near her relatives and the lonely when I first came repeatedly begged me to take her back to her own people. She didn't feel that she could face the many homes & loneliness now as she had done before. But this & the 2nd Provides. She has won her way back, inch by inch, wrestling with her physical weakness, and fighting with her whole mind to keep hold & him and her happiness in him even as the thimbles along those dreadful days.

But we both realize that it is unwise, as you say, to make a radical change in one's way of life under great emotional strain.

I further go back in September with some doubt in my mind, chiefly on the score of her living alone. We had arranged for a maid but steady income plus a moderate interest & banking or rent of the upstairs apartment. And this is a good house for her in many ways. She is much attached to it and it is near her friends. But to my mind it lacks sunlight and sufficient convenience for her as the girl's older. She has no proper bedroom and there is no place for a maid or a nurse should she be ill - or should she be able to get one. I don't quite like her being alone now this thyroid Kennedy appears before me here.

She longs to be near Lyon's children and Marjorie, & to hold Kitty and Kingsley fast & something of him in keeping Marjorie. She doesn't want to hamper Marjorie and I think she could well live independently in Toronto and perhaps do some teaching again. Kingsley is to come away together, to Northampton, in the 20th, leaving the way open to return, or to stay in the East - wherever her work chance may happen may seem to be.

Should you think there plans unwise in any particular, we would be grateful

Greatly pleased and relieved receive your letter of the tenth, also May's of day before. You are both, I think, very wise in not attempting to decide at present upon final plans. May need have no concern for Margery or her children or for Arthur and Kathleen. They will manage all right. What to May herself is likely to be most satisfactory day in and day out as time goes by would seem to me the most important consideration. That I believe can be best decided when May is absent from her own home at Denver and amid other surroundings. You and she will know best time at which absence from Denver likely to afford most helpful guidance in reaching final decision. I think you are very wise closing no doors meanwhile.

My dear Premier:-

Just a note of heartfelt sympathy for you on the loss, so recently, of your nephew and namesake. Even if it happened gloriously while fighting for the preservation of the homes and honor of his country, it is none the less a very sad bereavement.

However, you are not alone. There are so many grand young men of all nations - bad as well as good- giving their lives for what they believe in/that haartbreaks are everywhere as numerous as falling Autumn leaves.

Only a few months ago I too lost my nephew who was also my namesake - my brother Billy's son - He likewise was an Officer in our Navy- on his way at the time to take over a promotion as Chief Engineer on a Destroyer— A fine able and ambitious lad who promised like your own nephew to go far. It's war and we have to take it philosophically.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 18) Dr. William Lyon Mackenzie King - Messages of sympathy - Judiciary 1943

You can do so with some satisfaction for surely you have contributed your part in this world ~~s~~ shattering struggle - a part for which Canada will for ever give you credit and great honor - which I think the whole world will not soon forget.

I wish to send also my sincere good wishes and this suggestion - the latter because I am older, your friend and interested - Don't permit petty partisan and often unpatriotic gibes to swerve you from your objective, or even worry you.

My father used to say " You can't waste valuable time paying attention to every cur that barks at your heels".

Yours Sincerely,

It was with the utmost sorrow that I heard over the radio and later read in the press that your nephew and namesake had gone down with the St. Croix. What a shock this news must have been for you and I hasten to extend my heart felt sympathy.

War is indeed no respecter of persons, and hard as the shock must be for you, nevertheless you must, at the same time, be very proud that one so near and dear to you has given his life in the cause of humanity. What appals me at the moment is the frightful loss of young Canadian lives we must expect before Victory is finally won.

impose myself upon you.
Actually all I wanted to see you about was to offer my services, in any way you saw fit, to the Liberal Party. I am very much concerned with the C.C.F. growth, realizing as I do how unfit their leaders are to form a government and that their sole object is to seize the reins of power regardless of how this is to be accomplished.

As soon as the doctor removes the caste from my leg I am starting out to reorganize this riding and it will keep me going to complete it before winter sets in. The C.C.F. is not strong but our Party friends have been busy since early summer and are using the fact that John Blackett was born here to their advantage.

Mother and Josephine are both quite well. The latter is teaching school temporarily and has also taken on the job as local

Dear Mr. King:

May I express to you my deep and heartfelt sympathy in the loss of your nephew and namesake, Surgeon Lieutenant William Lyon Mackenzie King.

It seems unanswerable that this splendid young man, who in living could contribute so much to humanity, was called upon to give his life to preserve for others those things for which he should have lived.

Your courage, forbearance and fortitude seem unlimited.

Yours faithfully,

W. A. Fraser.

My dear Mr. King-

Ross and I were deeply shocked to read that your nephew Surgeon-Lieutenant King is among the missing with the Saint Croix.

So you, perhaps more than anybody in Canada, the loss of a Canadian destroyer is a fearful tragedy, but when that destroyer is bearing one so near and dear as this brilliant young fellow-mates alike, your sorrow must be unspeakable.

Dear Mr King:-

Ever since reading about the loss of his life in the service of Canada of your nephew and namesake I have felt I should join with the multitude of other friends and supporters who will have conveyed to you their sympathy. I hope you will pardon my delay in doing so - due to pressure of work in helping to close out one formation, move from one Coast to the other and help commence another. Many factors in addition to those normally attending the passing of one in the Service seem to make this a case of more than usual sadness;- the untimely death of his gifted father leaving him fatherless at an early age - the great promise he showed for a brilliant future of service in his chosen profession - the fact that his death now leaves a baby son in turn fatherless - also a young widow practically at the beginning of married life - all combine to make his passing seem almost unbearably tragic and must be a cause of great grief and sorrow to you.

That this should be added to the other heavy burdens you are carrying seems hard. I hope

Dear Mr. Prime Minister:-

The loss of the St. Croix and her fine men is a great blow to you officially and personally, and I cannot let the day go by without expressing the depth of my sympathy. Your nephew had long years of useful service before him, so I shall hope with you that he will be found and return safely to his family. But if he has gone I know you will take great comfort from the knowledge that his great adventure has begun and just the same fields of service are there before him,and the companionship of his good and kind father.

OCTOBER SECOND,

Rt.-Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King,
Prime Minister of Canada,

My dear Mr. King:

I know you will be receiving a great many messages these days on account of the tragic, yet heroic, passing of your nephew, Bill King.

I feel impelled, however, to send you these few lines to assure you that you have my deepest sympathy in this bereavement.

As I have told you, your brother and I were in the same year, 1902, and for two of our years together I sat by his side in lectures; then, young Bill has been in our home many times with our young folk, and his wife grew up with our children at Couchiching.

I was stunned last night when I first read the news and I am still in rather a daze because of the sadness and tragedy of it all. War is terrible and it takes our noblest and best.

Strangely enough, we were talking about him at our dinner table three or four days ago when a very close friend of Bill's, Morris Thompson from Winnipeg, was our guest.

The only thing that can make such a tragedy as yours bearable is that you possess plenty of faith and hope.

Yours very sincerely,

Oswald C. J. Withrow

PERSONAL

The Rt-Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King,
Laurier House,
Ottawa, Ontario.

My dear Mr. King:-

Will you please accept my sincere and heartfelt sympathy in the loss of your heroic and beloved nephew.

These are splinters from the Cross that are falling upon practically every home in our nation.

You will at once recognize that these brave warriors do not die, but simply inhabit Eternity. They shine as stars, to be the beacon light, the guidance, and the inspiration for those who are left to carry on.

With my warmest personal regards, and deep feeling of regret,

Sincerely yours,

My dear Billy.

Mrs Buckingham, my daughter Sophia, and I are here enjoying the autumn beauty of this lovely place. The tragedy of The St Croix, which was told in last nights paper, and the loss of your nephew, which brought it close home to us, has saddened our little holiday. It seems such a short time since I knew Max, first as a small boy at Berlin, and then as a lively young lad at Beverley St. I grieve sorely for his mother, who must have counted much on him.

I trust you continue in your usual good health, at which I marvel greatly, and that you will soon see a happy issue of all your endeavors. Mrs Buckingham, and Sophia, join me, in affectionate sympathy, and regard.

Yours sincerely.

Dear Mr. King,

Mrs. Barker and I wish to extend to you our very deepest sympathy in the loss of your brave nephew, Surgeon Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King.

May God sustain you in your heavy burdens of state, during these tragic years of war.

Our second son is a Lieutenant in the Queens Own Rifles in England and our youngest son is in the R.C.A.F. now stationed in Alaska. It is a strain on parents to have their dear sons so far away, but they are on a just cause, and I trust victory and peace will soon come to the Allies.

Very sincerely Yours, are of no doubt to you, is the lack of appreciation of the people of Ontario to the fine Government which we have had. I'm sure people are learning more to-day than they ever have. there does seem to be more of an equality among workers, and there is find most of these prosperous people agitating for a change - and they cried fine no reason whatever for their attitude - and so many liberals not voting. I'm quite convinced that Mr Nixon deserved their support. and they gave him such unanimous support at their convention in Toronto -

Wonderque that we should have been honoured by such a Conference. I feel quite convinced that you were entirely responsible for the honour - and how proud you may well be, of the fine friendships which you enjoy, with the two finest men in world affairs today.

My dear Mr. King

You will get many letters of sympathy & kind, but I feel I wanted to let you know deeply I feel for you. I know so well what it means to lose a young loved boy - There is always something so sad about seeing youth go - I know too he was like you dear boy, & how you did everything for your brother's family - You gave me that wonderful book about him - So many thousands are having to part with their dear lads, but that doesn't make it any easier to bear one's own sorrow. Still they may all be doing better work where they are, & as I said from the first, it's not Pat & I was sorry for, only myself - Please do not answer this. I do not want to add to your many burdens. With my deepest sympathy

Yours very Sincerely

Dear Canon Cody: Your kind message brings to my mind your own personal loss in the last war. Of each and all of these young men, I am certain it can truly be said:

"Somewhere, surely, afar,
In the sounding labour-house vast
Of being, is practised that strength,
Zealous, beneficent, firm!"

I am indeed pleased to know that to the recognition of my nephew's special qualifications as a surgeon may be added your appointment of him as assistant resident fellow to take special course at Toronto University in brain surgery from January. My warmest thanks to you.

Dear Sir:

I was much distressed to learn of the recent loss of your distinguished nephew Surgeon Lieutenant W. L. M. King when the Canadian destroyer St. Croix was torpedoed and I express to you my most sincere sympathy in your bereavement.

Surgeon Lieutenant King had a brilliant University career and was assured of a most successful future. His untimely death not only brings a keen loss to you and his wife and family but means that his country and his profession will both be the poorer for his passing.

As his professor in Anatomy at the University of Toronto I came to know him well, for his work was outstanding and he also took advanced studies under my direction for his F.R.C.S. examinations. He had exceptional ability coupled with a winning personality and would have been a prominent leader in his profession. His tragic loss is to be greatly lamented but the memory of his heroic sacrifice will be highly honoured.

Yours sincerely

Dear Mr. King:

I was indeed sorry to learn of the great loss you have sustained and I do desire you to know how deeply I feel for you, under the circumstances. Why one so young and with so promising a future should be cut down is hard for us to understand.

I would like here to refer to the letter you wrote me on the death of Mrs. Eagen - a letter of such sympathy and hope that I have repeatedly re-read it, more frequently now, as the shadows lengthen. I fear I am not one of those who can subscribe to the thought expressed in the hymn-line, "They fly forgotten, as a dream ....."

With sincere sympathy and may God continue to Bless you in your work, believe me,

Will you please let the Chief know how sorry we are to hear about his nephew. However, there is still a chance that he is all right. I have had such good news about other friends two months after.

Dr. King and my son were in the "U" at the same time and the Dr. has often been at the house before they went overseas. Let's hope for the best.

One of our friends was shot down over the target in Germany, and of course reported missing and is still officially so, but two months later we received a card from him stating that he is a prisoner in Germany unhurt, so you see things can happen that way.

Dear Mr. King,

May I join with all your friends in sending you my sympathy on the occasion of the sad loss of your nephew. People in Toronto speak very highly of him, and there are many who will miss him, I know.

But he has not gone empty-handed, though so young, into the other world. His 'short life in the saddle' had as much achievement in it as many a 'long life by the fire.'

Heaven must be a wonderful place that days with so much brightness of youth in it!

With much regard,

How sad it is that one who had fitted himself to carry on the fine traditions of his father should so suddenly be gone. Your sorrow at his going will be mingled with so many memories of other days and other loved ones- and my heart goes out to you.

that these magnificent boys have been true to something bigger than themselves. But how bitter it is that freedom has to be bought at such a price.

Knowing you, I know how deeply you feel the horror of this war - and how this personal loss will add immeasurably to your already too heavy burden.

God has given you strength in a wonderful way to carry on as no other man in Canada could have done - and I know you will be sustained.

Your faith and your belief in the spiritual life has been a bulwark to my own faith and has helped me to go on. I am grateful to you for so much - and that is why I wish I might offer you some real comfort at this time -

I ask you particularly not to answer this note. I only want you to know you are in my thoughts and prayers.

I wonder if you feel as strongly as I do that the ever growing cloud of witnesses ~~are~~ is standing by and is keeping us to see this thing through -

This is one of the times I do wish I could run over to see you and understanding that I could give to comfort and understand that I feel in my heart. I know that the words you require - and here is so little one can say upon you, yet there is so little one can say do help. I shall never forget your father's kind message did for me the night I left dear. But even if it were possible you those present days, I probably should say nothing more than "My dear, I am sorry - we are thinking of you". Do not let letter you write me this summer so is the duties, you more I can be of a family nature where far we can and yet here you are, faced not only with overwhelming problems of state, but with grief and also as well. turbulent Lonsehold, that it's taken me all my time & catch up.

The results of the elections were disappointing and irritating, but of course the truth of the matter is that the bumptious one from Elgin had so disgusted the electorate at large that it reacted against the party. Malcontents of all kinds flocked in Conservative, unfortunately. The important thing is that Canada herself is doing a job, and the results are becoming more and more gratifying. I scold myself because at times I get so lonesome for Art on his hazardous job; because I worry about George on convoy duty; because I'm reluctant at the thought of Dinnie following Bill to England; because it hurts to see poor old Grandpa B. a permanent patient in Hospital, and because sometimes my four little bounding Britishers are a bit overwhelming. But after all, I'm far luckier than I deserve. My conscience stands, I'm well - far too well-fed; I've seen my own darlings within the last

My dearKizzie:

Your warm-hearted and kindest of letters has just been received. Indeed, you are much more deserving of sympathy than I am. So far as I am personally concerned, there is no occasion for sympathy at all unless it be that so much that should go to others - to his mother, his wife and his brother - has come my way in the words which have been spoken or written in reference to my namesake nephew.

I do, none the less, thank you warmly for your kindest of letters and send to you, in return, my own understanding sympathy for all that you, yourself, have so magnificently borne from the beginning of the war up to the present time.

Dear Mrs. McGee:

Mr. Mackenzie King has asked me to say how deeply he appreciates the letter which he has received from you expressing sympathy in the loss of his nephew, Surgeon Lieutenant W. L. M. King, R.C.N.V.R., with other officers and men aboard His Majesty's Canadian Destroyer St. Croix, recently lost by enemy action in the North Atlantic. Mr. King wishes me to thank you very warmly for your kind thought and for the words of your message to him.

Mr. King is forwarding a copy of your letter to Dr. King's wife and mother and brother, to all of whom he is sure it will mean very much, as it has to him.

men personal griefs are often more difficult to overcome than are those of national importance.

Sometimes when one suffers a bereavement such as yours it is some slight consolation to know that one has the sympathy of one's friends. I do therefore want you to know that you have the deepest sympathy of this friend and admirer. One thing death cannot do and that is take away one's memories and I trust that you have many many happy memories of your nephew which in the years to come will be some slight joy to you.

I am sure that even your political opponents – including apparently The Toronto Globe & Mail – have sympathy for you in this personal loss of yours. With all the harsh, unfair and even cruel criticism which is time and time again being made against you by your opponents in this hour of national peril (PERIL) I often marvel at the manner in which you endure it. Only when history in its true perspective records your public life will you be properly vindicated as a truly great Canadian.

This letter requires no reply. You were kind enough to acknowledge receipt of one I wrote you when I was in Ridean Military Hospital. Since then I have been moved here where I am now Assistant Judge Advocate-General for

To the Right Honorable Wm. Lyon Mackenzie King
Prime Minister of Canada.

Dear Mr. King, I am so very sorry that you have to bear the loss of your beloved and gallant nephew. Knowing as I do how strong are your affections for your kith and kin, I can understand how deep is your grief and how sorrowful the regret that you are cut off from the pleasures and the pride of the future which he would inevitably have attained in his chosen career. You have also lost the precious comradeship with him down the years ahead, and you have great cause for mourning his death.

And I believe that the stout faith and high courage you manifested so helpfully to us through the sad funeral days of Normandy passing, will sustain you now, in your own bereavement.

– I knew many passages from Shelley's "Death of Adonais" and often recalled some phrase, but could not for a long time bring myself to the reading of the entire poem, so poignantly pathetic is its brief – At length one day I read it, alone, and aloud, pacing my Study as I did it through, for it compelled me by its pathos and its power to my feet – so feathery, yet so high and glowing, and it comforted me, inexpressibly.

I would like to hear you go through its rich imagery – finding its theme & the poet that "early lost his voice", as when you interpreted for us all, Norman's well loved "Happy Warrior" –

Very often I say those other matchless lines – "In my Father's house are many mansions", but I needed the present outbreak of emotion, as well as its serene utterance which surmounts grief and space. I shall be thinking of you, bearing this lonely longing for the young lucky life in which you were so interested, and the heavy cares of State which so pull upon strength and time, and I pray you will be greatly blessed with health, to carry on.

Very truly your friend,

Jean Mackenzie Rogers.

Dear Mrs. Rogers:

I have received this morning your very kind letter. It is so understanding in its expression of sympathy that I cannot thank you too warmly for it.

You are quite right in believing that my faith in the survival of human personality is so strong that my nephew's passing has brought to me, I might almost say, more in the way of assurance that he has entered upon a larger field of opportunity of service than of the sense of loss. At the same time, I realize how very much his passing must mean to his wife, his little son and daughter, and to his mother, all of whom had very much to expect from his promising career. It is for them that my heart goes out in deepest sympathy.

I am dictating this letter from my little cottage at Kingsmere, where I have come to overtake a vast arrears of correspondence. I have not at hand a copy of Shelley's poems, but on my return to the City I shall give myself the pleasure and inspiration of re-reading "Adonais". I thank you for recalling it to my mind. I might say of Norman, as I have said of my nephew, that I become increasingly conscious of his continued presence, and less and less of the sense of separation.

Dear Miss Petrie:

It is very kind of you to write me of the death of my nephew Lyon through enemy action at sea. You, better than almost any one else, would appreciate what this loss would mean to his mother and wife in particular, to his twin brother, and also to myself. I shall not fail to let the others know of your kindness in writing and of the exoressions of sympathy you have so generously sent. They will, I know, be,as I have been, greatly touched by your thought of the two boys from their earliest days.

It is a sad thing for the world that so many able young men are seemingly being lost to its service in times like our own. I personally believe that in the enenomy of God there is no such thing as loss. I believe in the survival of human personaluty after death and feel sure these lives continue their great work in what we speak of as the Beyond through their influence on the thoughts and lives of others who remain, and the large company who follow on.

Dear Mr. King:

This is a very belated time to write you to say how very very sorry I was to hear of the tragic death of your nephew Lyon.

At the time I could not write, it was too sad. I wanted to, but words could not express what I felt, so just put off making the excuse you would have so many letters you would never miss mine, and if you thought of me at all you would understand how I felt about Lyon. I went over and over again the two young lads as I knew them, how they used to hang on to my arm when we went out together, and how they grew up so clever, and such a credit to you, it just keep us wondering why?

What a blow it must have been to you, and yet you have to go on facing great responsibilities. You were more than an Uncle to these boys. It must have been very hard on you who took such an interest in them. Please accept my heartfelt sympathy and convey same to his mother from me.

Please do not trouble to answer this, but I did want you to know how sorry I was to learn about your dear nephew.

Sincerely yours,

Marjorie Petrie.

Honorable Sir:

Enclosed list of items comprising my collection of Canadiana dealing with William Lyon Mackenzie is sent in the hope that you might consider purchase of them for yourself, or for the National Archives. It had been my hope that some time in the future I could present them to the proper custodians without charge. However, belonging to a class whose salaries have had no increase but whose expenses and taxes have increased radically, I find myself under the compulsion of raising a little money to pay income tax and, I hope, subscribe again modestly to the next Victory Loan. To set a price on such things is difficult. They will assuredly be priceless, because irreplaceable, in years to come. And the importance of W.L.M. in the story of Democracy in Canada, no matter how grudgingly admitted in some quarters, grows year by year. I would suggest that a figure somewhere between fifty and a hundred dollars would be reasonable? Your own offer, if interested, would be gratefully considered.

One of the best letters of W.L.M. I had, it was dated from Rochester during the post-Rebellion period, I gave to a young surgeon for whom I had a great admiration, and whose friendship I enjoyed during his internship at the General Hospital here ---- Dr. William Lyon Mackenzie King. He was so happy to get it, bless his heart!, and it has been a grateful memory for me since his valiant sacrifice at sea, that I gave him this small pleasure. You may be assured that no young medico was ever more respected or beloved with us all at the hospital, than he was.

Hoping to hear from you soon, and with apologies for bothering you at so urgent a time in your leadership, I am,

Most sincerely,

(Sgd) Percy Ghent)

May I say how touched I have been to learn of your friendship with my nephew, the late Dr. W. L. M. King, and of your kindness in having presented to him, in the course of his lifetime, a letter of his great grandfather written from Rochester during the post-rebellion period. No doubt his widow has this latter among the most precious of his few possessions which she still retains of their happy home and life together. I am particularly pleased to have the words of appreciation of his character which your letter brings to me. I shall see that they are conveyed to Mrs. King.

You will pardon me for expressing my sympathy in the loss of your namesake nephew. When I tell you that I was clinic nurse to Dr. G. Walter Holden of Denver at the time of your brother's illness there, and since my return frequently heard of the boys through Mrs. Holden, a friend of Mrs. King. Dr. Holden, Medical Superintendent of Agnes Memorial Sanatorium was both friend and physician to your brother.

I much regret to have been prevented from sending an earlier acknowledgment of your kind letter of January the 18th, in which you speak of your friendship with my nephew, Dr. W. L. M. King.

May I now say that I have been both touched and pleased to read your tribute to him. Your letter has been very enheartening to me at this time, and I thank you warmly for it.

Please accept my best of wishes and kind regards.

THE TORONTO WESTERN HOSPITAL

TORONTO, ONTARIO January 18th, 1945.

OFFICE OF THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT

Rt. Hon. W.L. Mackenzie King,
OTTAWA,
Ontario.

Dear Mr. King :-

For some time I have hesitated to write and express my feelings of deep regret at the loss of your nephew, and my friend, who was also your namesake. I hesitated because I was a member of the Armed Forces and because I have not had the privilege of meeting you personally. I am asking Mrs. McNaughton to pass this on to you so that she may explain that it comes with sincerity.

Bill King was a member of my class in Medicine, at the University of Toronto, so that our associations were in those happy student days when life was very simple. They were very happy days indeed and Bill's industry, energy and high intellectual gifts were a constant source of inspiration to those of us who knew him well. His loss is all the more tragic because, like his father, he was lost before the world could benefit completely from the products of a brilliant mind. I am aware of how deeply the loss must have affected you for I know he counted on you very much and such attitudes make losses of this kind all the more difficult to bear.

I would like you to know that I admire your quiet courage and your vision which have carried you through the many trials and losses which you have sustained in these anxious years, - years in which you have guided Canada through the most critical period in her history.

Yours sincerely,

WRF:EM

William Lyon Mackenzie King,
Prime Minister of Canada,
Ottawa.

It was with the greatest pleasure my confreres and I learned of your safe return to our country shores. I have long felt that you are one of the few possessors of a true international brain. It is a great privilege to think that you have been for so long at this country's service. You are in the minds of all your like thinking citizens unquestionably the great statesman that Sir Wilfrid precited. It is one of my greatest pleasures to remember meeting you upon two occasions at my very distinguished grandfather Mr. Peter Ryan's home, and we have always held you in the highest affection. May your so terribly useful life be long continued. It is also a pleasure to add that my late father-in-law, Dr. Henry Sproatt, our most distinguished gothic arthitect, held you in the highest admiration - a compliment by him rarely conferred. In conclusion may I say it was to me a constant source of delight to have been given the privilege of teaching your nephew William. He was a source of joy to any teacher of surgery. In my opinion there was no young surgeon who offered his promise. His loss at sea was a dreadful tragedy not alone to the whole field of surgery but to me personally. I held him in highest affection and admiration and we became very close friends. Again wishing you a continued life of usefulness to this country and hoping that one day I may discuss William's career with you, I am yours very truly,

CANADIAN NATIONAL TELEGRAPH COMPANY

(OPERATING ITS OWN LINES AND THOSE OF THE GREAT NORTH WESTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY, THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC TELEGRAPH COMPANY AND CANADIAN GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS). HEREINAFTER CALLED THE COMPANY.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS UPON WHICH TELEGRAPH AND CABLE MESSAGES SHALL BE TRANSMITTED ARE PRESCRIBED BY ORDER NO. 49274, DATED DECEMBER 5TH, 1932, OF THE BOARD OF TRANSPORT COMMISSIONERS FOR CANADA AND PUBLISHED IN THE CANADA GAZETTE.

IT IS AGREED BETWEEN THE SENDER OF THE MESSAGE ON THE FACE OF THIS FORM AND THIS COMPANY THAT THIS COMPANY SHALL NOT BE LIABLE FOR DAMAGES ARISING FROM FAILURE TO TRANSMIT OR DELIVER, OR FOR ANY ERROR IN THE TRANSMISSION OR DELIVERY OF, ANY UNREPEATED TELEGRAM, WHETHER HAPPENING FROM THE NEGLIGENCE OF ITS SERVANTS OR OTHERWISE, OR FOR DELAYS FROM INTERRUPTIONS IN THE WORKING OF ITS LINES, FOR ERRORS IN CIPHER OR OBSCURE MESSAGES, OR FOR ERRORS FROM ILLEGIBLE WRITING, BEYOND THE AMOUNT RECEIVED FOR SENDING THE SAME.

TO GUARD AGAINST ERRORS, THE COMPANY WILL REPEAT BACK ANY TELEGRAM FOR AN EXTRA PAYMENT OF ONE-HALF THE REGULAR RATE; AND, IN THAT CASE, THE COMPANY SHALL BE LIABLE FOR DAMAGES SUFFERED BY THE SENDER TO AN EXTENT NOT EXCEEDING $200.00, DUE TO THE NEGLIGENCE OF THE COMPANY IN THE TRANSMISSION OR DELIVERY OF THE TELEGRAM.

CORRECTNESS IN THE TRANSMISSION AND DELIVERY OF MESSAGES CAN BE INSURED BY CONTRACT IN WRITING, STATING AGREED AMOUNT OF RISK, AND PAYMENT OF PREMIUM THEREON AT THE FOLLOWING RATES, IN ADDITION TO THE USUAL CHARGE FOR REPEATED MESSAGES, VIZ: ONE PER CENT. FOR ANY DISTANCE NOT EXCEEDING 1000 MILES, AND TWO PER CENT. FOR ANY GREATER DISTANCE.

THIS COMPANY SHALL NOT BE LIABLE FOR THE ACT OR OMISSION OF ANY OTHER COMPANY, BUT WILL ENDEAVOR TO FORWARD THE TELEGRAM BY ANY OTHER TELEGRAPH COMPANY NECESSARY TO REACHING ITS DESTINATION, BUT ONLY AS THE AGENT OF THE SENDER AND WITHOUT LIABILITY THEREFOR. THE COMPANY SHALL NOT BE RESPONSIBLE FOR MESSAGES UNTIL THE SAME ARE PRESENTED AND ACCEPTED AT ONE OF ITS TRANSMITTING OFFICES; IF A MESSAGE IS SENT TO SUCH OFFICE BY ONE OF THE COMPANY'S MESSENGERS, HE ACTS FOR THAT PURPOSE AS THE SENDER'S AGENT; IF BY TELEPHONE, THE PERSON RECEIVING THE MESSAGE ACTS THEREIN AS AGENT OF THE SENDER, BEING AUTHORIZED TO ASSENT TO THESE CONDITIONS FOR THE SENDER. THIS COMPANY SHALL NOT BE LIABLE IN ANY CASE FOR DAMAGES, UNLESS THE SAME BE CLAIMED, IN WRITING, WITHIN SIXTY DAYS AFTER RECEIPT OF THE TELEGRAM FOR TRANSMISSION.

NO EMPLOYEE OF THE COMPANY SHALL VARY THE FOREGOING.

CLASSES OF SERVICE

TELEGRAMS

A FULL-RATE EXPEDITED SERVICE.

NIGHT MESSAGES

DAY LETTERS

A DEFERRED DAY SERVICE AT RATES LOWER THAN THE STANDARD TELEGRAM RATES AS FOLLOWS: ONE AND ONE-HALF TIMES THE TEN-WORD DAY MESSAGE RATE FOR THE TRANSMISSION OF 50 WORDS OR LESS, AND ONE-FIFTH OF THE INITIAL RATE FOR SUCH 50 WORDS FOR EACH ADDITIONAL 10 WORDS OR LESS. THE MINIMUM CHARGE FOR TRANSMISSION OVER THE COMPANY'S LINES OF ANY DAY LETTER WILL BE 45 CENTS.

DAY LETTERS MAY BE FORWARDED BY THE COMPANY AS A DEFERRED SERVICE, AND THE TRANSMISSION AND DELIVERY OF SUCH DAY LETTERS ARE, IN ALL RESPECTS, SUBORDINATE TO THE PRIORITY OF TRANSMISSION AND DELIVERY OF FULL-RATE MESSAGES.

DAY LETTERS MAY BE DELIVERED BY THE COMPANY BY TELEPHONING THE SAME TO THE ADDRESSEES, AND SUCH DELIVERIES SHALL BE A COMPLETE DISCHARGE OF THE OBLIGATION OF THE COMPANY TO DELIVER.

DAY LETTERS ARE RECEIVED SUBJECT TO THE EXPRESS UNDERSTANDING AND AGREEMENT THAT THE COMPANY DOES NOT UNDERTAKE THAT A DAY LETTER SHALL BE DELIVERED ON THE DAY OF ITS DATE ABSOLUTELY AND AT ALL EVENTS; BUT THAT THE COMPANY'S OBLIGATION IN THIS RESPECT IS SUBJECT TO THE CONDITION THAT THERE SHALL REMAIN SUFFICIENT TIME FOR THE TRANSMISSION AND DELIVERY OF SUCH DAY LETTER ON THE DAY OF ITS DATE DURING REGULAR OFFICE HOURS, SUBJECT TO THE PRIORITY OF THE TRANSMISSION OF FULL-RATE MESSAGES UNDER THE CONDITIONS NAMED ABOVE.

NIGHT LETTERS

ACCEPTED UP TO MIDNIGHT AT REDUCED RATES, TO BE SENT DURING THE NIGHT AND DELIVERED ON THE MORNING OF THE NEXT DAY AFTER THEIR DATE. AT PLACES WHERE THE COMPANY'S OFFICES ARE NOT OPEN ON SUNDAYS, DELIVERY WILL BE MADE ON THE MORNING OF THE NEXT ENSUING BUSINESS DAY. THE RATES FOR NIGHT LETTERS ARE STILL LOWER THAN THE STANDARD NIGHT MESSAGE RATES, AS FOLLOWS: THE STANDARD DAY RATE FOR 10 WORDS FOR THE TRANSMISSION OF 50 WORDS OR LESS AND ONE-FIFTH OF THE INITIAL RATE FOR SUCH 50 WORDS FOR EACH ADDITIONAL 10 WORDS OR LESS. THE MINIMUM CHARGE FOR TRANSMISSION OVER THE COMPANY'S LINES OF ANY NIGHT LETTER WILL BE 30 CENTS.

NIGHT LETTERS MAY, AT THE OPTION OF THE COMPANY, BE MAILED AT DESTINATION TO THE ADDRESSEES, AND THE COMPANY SHALL BE DEEMED TO HAVE DISCHARGED ITS OBLIGATION IN SUCH CASES WITH RESPECT TO DELIVERY BY MAILING SUCH NIGHT LETTERS AT DESTINATION, POSTAGE PREPAID.

Dear Dr. Pratt:

I have delayed a reply to your kind telegram of June 23rd, until I might have an opportunity of sending you something more than a mere line of acknowledgment for your very kind message which greeted me shortly after my return to Canada from my recent visit to London.

Your grandfather, Peter Ryan, and your father-in-law, Dr. Henry Spreatt, to whom you refer in your telegram, were both valued friends of mine. In the excellence of their work in different fields of activity, both Mr. Ryan and Dr. Sproatt made enduring contributions to our national life. What you tell me of their regard for myself is something that I am indeed grateful to know.

I have been deeply touched by the words of your message in reference to my nephew, Dr. W. L. M. King, It delights me to know that you held so high an opinion of his gifts as a surgeon. I shall treasure in remembrance all that you say of him.

I need scarcely say how deeply touched I have been by your own much too generous references to myself and such service as I have sought to give our country over the years I have been in public life. Your words will always have their association with the memorable events of recent weeks.

With all good wishes,

Yours sincerely,

My dear W. L. King:—

I am truly at a loss for words to express my sympathy in the great bereavement you have suffered in the loss of one in whose life you have been closely bound for many years. I know how meaningless mere words are in the face of such sorrow.

Consolation can come only from the realization of the great cause for which your gallant husband gave his life and from the well-springs within the spirit. For, judging by the many conversations I have been privileged

Dear Mr. King;

I wish to give you the assurance of my sympathy and prayers in the personal trial which has been added to the weight of care you have been carrying for so many months.

I trust that God, in His Infinite Goodness, may shower blessings upon the relatives of Surgeon King, if it be that, even yet, a Miracle does not send him back to his Little Children.

May God give you strength and inspiration from day to day.

Sincerely
Teresa Dewan

of October 4th, 1943

The H.M.C.S. "St.Croix" was lost in the action in which the above casualties were involved. Surgeon Lieutenant W.L.Mackenzie King who went down with the "St. Croix" was well known here. He was posted to Camp Hill Hospital for some time immediately prior to going to sea and did considerable surgery at our hospital. He was a good surgeon and very popular here. His loss is keenly felt by our Medical Staff."

Dear Mr. Nicholson

Since I got back to my room here I have had several calls from friends who have asked me to express for them their sympathy in the loss we have all sustained in the death of Dr. Mackenzie King. I have replied to each of these calls, but I am writing you as I know you will be glad to have a message from me.

We are all very sad at the passing of the Prime Minister. He was a great man and a great Canadian. His services to the country will be remembered for many years to come. I am sure that you will be glad to have a message from me.

Dear Mr. King -

You have been much in my thoughts since hearing of your sad bereavement. The loss of your beloved nephew must have been a terrible blow to your heart - the harder to bear while carrying almost a superhuman burden of responsibility. Please

But on second thought when there is time to recover we know - "God is in His Heaven, All's right with the world" - that there is a job yet to be done - that we must carry on - and "With God be the rest."

Carrying on is not easy however - so I am writing this letter as no doubt have many others to let you know although we cannot help we are standing by with an understanding heart - and that

It is hard to see the brave and young so badly needed now and in the difficult days to come taken before they seem to have lived yet so long as they fulfil a worthy destiny what do a few years mean? Compared to eternity life is but a flash after all - be it twenty or seventy years. Why do we take it all so hard? But yet we do - for we are not yet gods and sometimes when Fate

This thought however can not that you are not the kind of human beings that ask exemption from what others have to bear - and that sympathy will surely bring solace - feeling as

This a sad period in your life in the loss of your fine nephew who went down with his ships in the North Atlantic. The disaster is beyond our powers. Of course you have the sympathy of all Canada. Yes, the civilized world. Our enemies as Roosevelt has said in case of Japan are not civilized. The same can be applied to the German war-party.

I wish to call your attention to a short poem by "Stinger" that may be found in Tennysons work. It is in "The Princess" & I should hope you have seen it before this hand. I quote it on the next page. I feel great Sympathy for the Widow & hope She has already known this.

Dear Sir:

I am somewhat diffident in giving expression to a subject one more or less tries to avoid, and yet in these days of remembrance I feel I am meeting the wishes of the Medical Officers under my command as well as my own urging when I convey to you our condolences in the loss of your nephew, Surgeon Lieut. W.L.M. King, R.C.N.V.R.

It was my privilege to meet him upon several occasions, the last time only a month or so before his final voyage when he discussed with me, in my office, his proposed refresher course starting at New Year's under Dr. W.E. Gallie at the Toronto General Hospital.

In his comparatively short career in the Navy he had developed a great affection for the Service, was devoted to duty and proved himself a gallant Officer. I have heard from his fellow Officers, who were more closely associated with him at Halifax, of his strong desire to carry his full share of responsibility, to take his turn at sea (which has become a ritual even amongst Medical Officers), and to generally share in all character building measures which seem so peculiarly "Navy".

It was my pleasure to call upon Mrs. King in Toronto last Sunday, and my admiration for her general bearing under the circumstances was profound.

Again, Sir, upon behalf of the Medical Branch of the Royal Canadian Navy, I should like to extend most heartfelt sympathy.

Respectfully yours,

with him in the Office when I left hospital only six weeks ago. He was in most excellent health & spirits. Like any of us he would have much preferred to be at his own chosen work. However he had adjusted himself to the hard and was really enjoying it. He had started good laughs about life in the Services and how able to GO is just round much about Canada that he wanted to know. He also spoke of Canada's own wars and children and of future plans. He was very sorry that he could not stay over night but we did keep him for tea and he saw something of this institution. I would like you and Mr Mackenzie to know how much I appreciate all that you and he with Mr Bruce were doing for me during so much happy and confident. I am sure he would have made a great success of the practice of surgery.

Dear Mr. King:

I am neurological surgeon to the Hospital for sick children and the Toronto Western Hospital. I knew your nephew Bill fairly well, especially when he spent a summer at the childrens Hospital between his 5th and 6th years. I liked him very much and I found him an earnest and sincere student of medicine. A deep interest in the welfare of his patients and a very keen desire to further his knowledge of medicine were undoubtedly his chief motives in our profession. He was a frequent visitor in my brother's home in Rochester, Minn. and also I believe in the home of my uncle there. I know that he was very popular at the Mayo Clinic.

My chief reason for writing you this note is that I spent a very happy hour with him in the Officers' Mess of this hospital only 5 or 6 weeks ago. He was in most excellent health and spirits. Like any of us he would have much preferred to be at his own chosen work. However, he had adjusted himself to his life in the navy and was really enjoying it. We had several good laughs about life in the services and he was able to tell us first hand much about Canada that we wanted to know. We also spoke of course, of our wives and children and of future plans. We were very sorry that he could not stay over night but we did keep him for tea and he saw something of this institution. I would like you and his wife to know that I have never seen him looking so well, happy and confident. I am sure he would have made a great success of the practice of surgery.

From the information we have there seems to be little doubt that this gallant life has been lost in the great cause for which we fight. I for one am proud indeed to have been associated with him in the past, and grateful for the chance of renewing friendship and exchanging ideas so recently. I have not his wife's address but I would like very much that she know that in our conversation he spoke of her and of his children with great love and affection. I would like her to know also that I consider he had made a great success of his life and of his profession.

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King,

I have hesitated to add another to the pile of letters which must almost inundate you; but I can't forbear telling you how deeply I sympathize with you in the loss of your valiant nephew.

I imagine an added poignancy to your grief is that he was your namesake, but I imagine also the pride you have in knowing that he bore proudly & gave up unselfishly the

that he has become
Name a Synonym with Canada.
I hope & pray that his letter for wife

Dear Sir

We wish to express to you our sincere sympathy in the death of your nephew, who was lost in the sinking of H.M.C.S. St. Croix. My husband and I both came from Aberdeen Scotland and both of us lost a brother in the last war and understand what a trial it means to lose those we love. My husband served through out the last war and the Boer, suffering in Africa. He was 83 years in the Royal Navy and would like to convey our sincere sympathy

Dear Mr.Prime Minister;-

In sending you this letter to express my sympathy in the great loss you sustained in the tragic death of your Nephew ,while fighting for his King and Country,I realize that I may be taking a liberty, but our whole family,and particularly his Mother, suffered so keenly, when my Grand Nephew an Officer in the R.C.A.Force,(and Grand son of my sister- the late Lady Holt) was killed in an attack over Germany on his twentieth Birthday I decided to write and tender my apoligies for intruding.

Last May I vaguely recalled a recuting speech delivered ny a young Officer in the Irish Rangers,but last night I ran across the speech delivered at Coatic-in an old SCRAP BOOK,carrying the speech,in part,made in the beginning of the First World War which so impressed me at the time and from which I derived a measure of comfort and consolation in thinking of young PETER HOLT'S death I decided to quote it in the hope that it might help you,as it did me,and particularly your Nephew's Motherin her great loss.

" He (the Officer) predicted that the spirits of those who died at Festubert
" and Longemarck,and of the thousands yet to die would haunt the shirkers for " ever,and claimed that in donning the Khaki a man was performing the highest " religious duty, Some who went would never return but those who die gallantly
" ffghting for their King and Country will after a momentry agony have their " ears opened to hear the bugle sound the reveille on the Sun lit hills of " heaven and their eyes opened to behold the CHRISTIAN soldier of NAZARETH
" face to face in whose cause they have made the great sacrifice "

My thanks and congratulations on the solendid work you have done and are doing to further the war effort with such gratifying results .

Please understand that I do not expect a reply to this letter,but I will be thankful if it helps your Nephew's Mother.

In the passing years I have met all Canadian Prime Ministers from Sir Wilfred down with the exception of your distinguished self, and while in Edingurgh in 1924 I am glad to say that I had the honour and pleasure of shaking hands with your friend Winston Churchill,and with millions of others I hope that he will be spared for many years.

Yours faithfully.

EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM C. M. RIEF, ESQ., 5839 HUTCHISON STREET, MONTREAL, QUEBEC, TO THE PRIME MINISTER, DATED OCTOBER 18, 1943.

May I be permitted to extend to you my most sincere sympathy on the death of your nephew and namesake, Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King. His loss, coming at a time when you are overburdened with the cares of State, must have affected you deeply.

Whenever I read the casualty list, I am filled with grief and rage - grief for the sorrowing relatives, and rage that through no fault of their own or their Government, our best and finest young men should have to sacrifice their lives in a war brought about by the cupidity and stupidity of European statesmen.

I knew Lieut. King's father, your late brother, Dr. Macdougall King, quite well. I was a patient at the Laurentian Sanitarium in 1913 at the time he was under treatment there.

Dear Mr. King.

My wife & I learned with sorrow that Jane nephew Ryan is missing at sea and we wish to offer our heartfelt sympathy.

Words, we know, are of little avail at such a time. He died in the service of his Country and in the cause for which many brave men have been called upon to make their supreme sacrifice. To those who are left there is a deep sense of loss and in his case for Canada the loss of a life of exceptional promise.

We know, too, that it is not necessary for us to see where the true source of our comfort is to be found. In His word there are many passages to which we are sure Jane will turn at this time.

These few lines, Mr Kerr, are merely an inadequate expression of my sympathy for you at this time. Pegeen asks that I add a sincere word on her behalf.

The gallant circumstances surrounding the tragedy of the Ste Rosaire have added further to the high traditions of the young Canadian Navy in which you have always taken such a keen interest. October 4, 1943

My dear Friend:

There is sadness in my own heart and a great sympathy for you and his family as I take from the newspaper a tender and appealing picture of Surgeon-Lieut. William Lyon Mackenzie King, a young father holding a little son on his knee.

Seven years ago I wrote wishing that a son had been among your many blessings. You replied on Dec. 7th, 1936 telling at some length about your nephew and namesake, of his fine scholastic record and purpose in life. You felt that he had the qualities to reach up among the great in his profession; you wrote then: ... "my nephew " who bears my name and that of his great grandfather " who, I believe, will greatly honour both."

He did. But his maker chose for him a shorter life here and a way of closing it that honours you more than great family names. His surgeon war to save him and the ocean received him along with a gallant ships company all of whom were offering their brave young lives to protect others.

May God spare his little boy to carry on.

Affectionately,
H. V. Cann

Prime Minister of Canada

Dear Sir:

The sad news of your nephew, Dr. King, losing his life in a transport sunk at sea, came to me over the radio. Knowing how dear he was to you I am writing to express my sympathy for I knew him & liked him so much.

He was assistant to my surgeon at Rochester & he & his wife were good friends of my daughter & her husband, Dr. Joe Brown.

I wanted you to know what he said to me for I believe it showed the measure of the man & the high ideal he had for his profession. He said "When I made

I wish I could express to you how much my wife and I feel for you at this sad moment.

But even while my heart rebels at the seeming cruelty of the destination and decimation of the years, it has room only for admiration and gratitude that your uncle was spared to you for so long a time and that you had the privilege of being with him during the last days of his earthly life. I am sure that you realize that you would not have wished it otherwise for him. Because one in your position seems unnecessarily hard.

I am thankful to know that you are blessed with the faith and the knowledge that have been such a great consolation to me and will be to you as you realize that your nephew will continue his fine work on the other side just as I feel certain

My dear Mr. King:

We have just learned the distressing news that Bill has been lost at sea while on combat duty. Knowing of your admiration and affection for him and your confidence that he would attain preeminence in his profession, I extend to you my sincere sympathy. For myself, I feel a sense of real personal loss for I have known Bill through his boyhood days and during the period of his fellowship here and had looked forward to following his career in his profession with every confidence that he would make a great name for himself. The fact that he has given his life for the cause for which Great Britain and the allies are fighting adds much to the memory of a grand boy and I want you to know of our sympathy to you and of our sorrow at his passing.

With warm personal regards,

Sincerely,

Donald C. Balfour

May I extend to you my most sincere sympathy and warmest appreciation of the loss fate has so recently inflicted.

I had the privilege of knowing Bill King very well during his first year in Canada. We both attended U. C. - he was a homesick boy from Denver and I was a homesick boy from Edmonton. We went to our first dances together, studied together - played chess and squash together. GOVERNMENT HOUSE
WINNIPEG

October 7, 1943.

My dear King:

I should like to extend the very sincere sympathy of both my wife and myself in the loss of your nephew in the sinking of the St. Croix. I did not know him, but of course knew your brother well, as well as your father, and watched the progress of his illness with great regret. I presume you have been a virtual father to this young man, and will feel his loss very keenly.

It is a terrible thing that we should have to lose so many of the very finest of our young men in protecting the country from the present onslaught of barbarism. The only comfort is that they give their lives in defence of their families, their homes, and everything they value most, and no man can do more than give his life for his country. I watch the casualty lists closely, for I write a letter to the family of every man killed or missing from Manitoba, and I am constantly reminded of the loss which this country is suffering.

For you there is one compensation. No man in the country has contributed so much to the defence of Canada and to procuring the means by which the German barbarians can be effectually defeated. When the facts come to be known, your services will be appreciated as they deserve to be, and those who are so fond of slinging stones will be covered with shame.

I do not know whether your nephew was married or had any family, but if he had, I should appreciate it if you would tender to them my deepest sympathy.

Yours sincerely,

Lieutenant-Governor.

Merry Christmas AND Happy New Year

O heart that knows the poignant stab of pain
  Without becoming broken by its power,
Life's bitter loss will yet be turned to gain
  When you have won the victor's certain dower,

Yours is the strength by which the weak ascends,
  The oak whereon the climbing ivy clings;
It is your virtue that must make amends
  For bruised and broken lives that have no wings.

Take courage then,dear heart that feels and knows,
  The future will be fashioned by your dreams,
As from some hidden font a river flows
  Or day succeeds the early morning gleams.

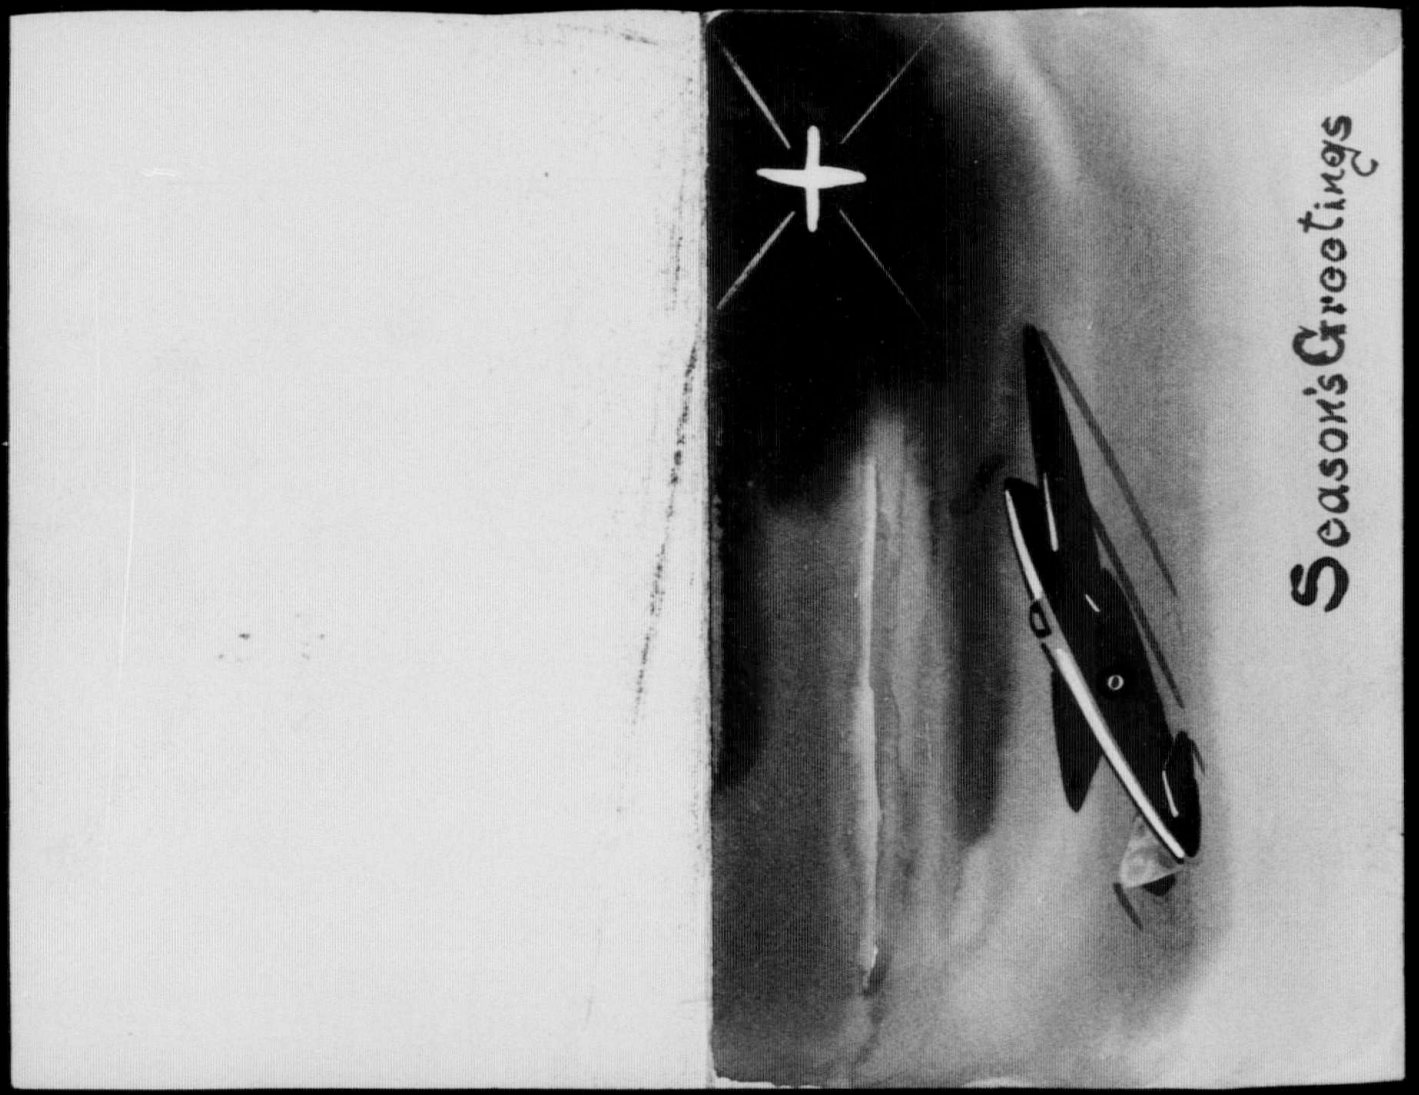

For,as a sequel to the long duress
  Whereby the plan of nature is expressed,
Your pain endured will purchase happiness
  As slowly growing good becomes the best.

OTTAWA, Ontario.

Dear Mr. King:

You will be receiving, under separate cover, the original of Chambers' drawing on the loss of the destroyer St. Croix. I thought you would like to have this drawing as a memento, if a sad and sorrowful one, of a naval action that will live in Canadian history and in which your nephew played his full part.

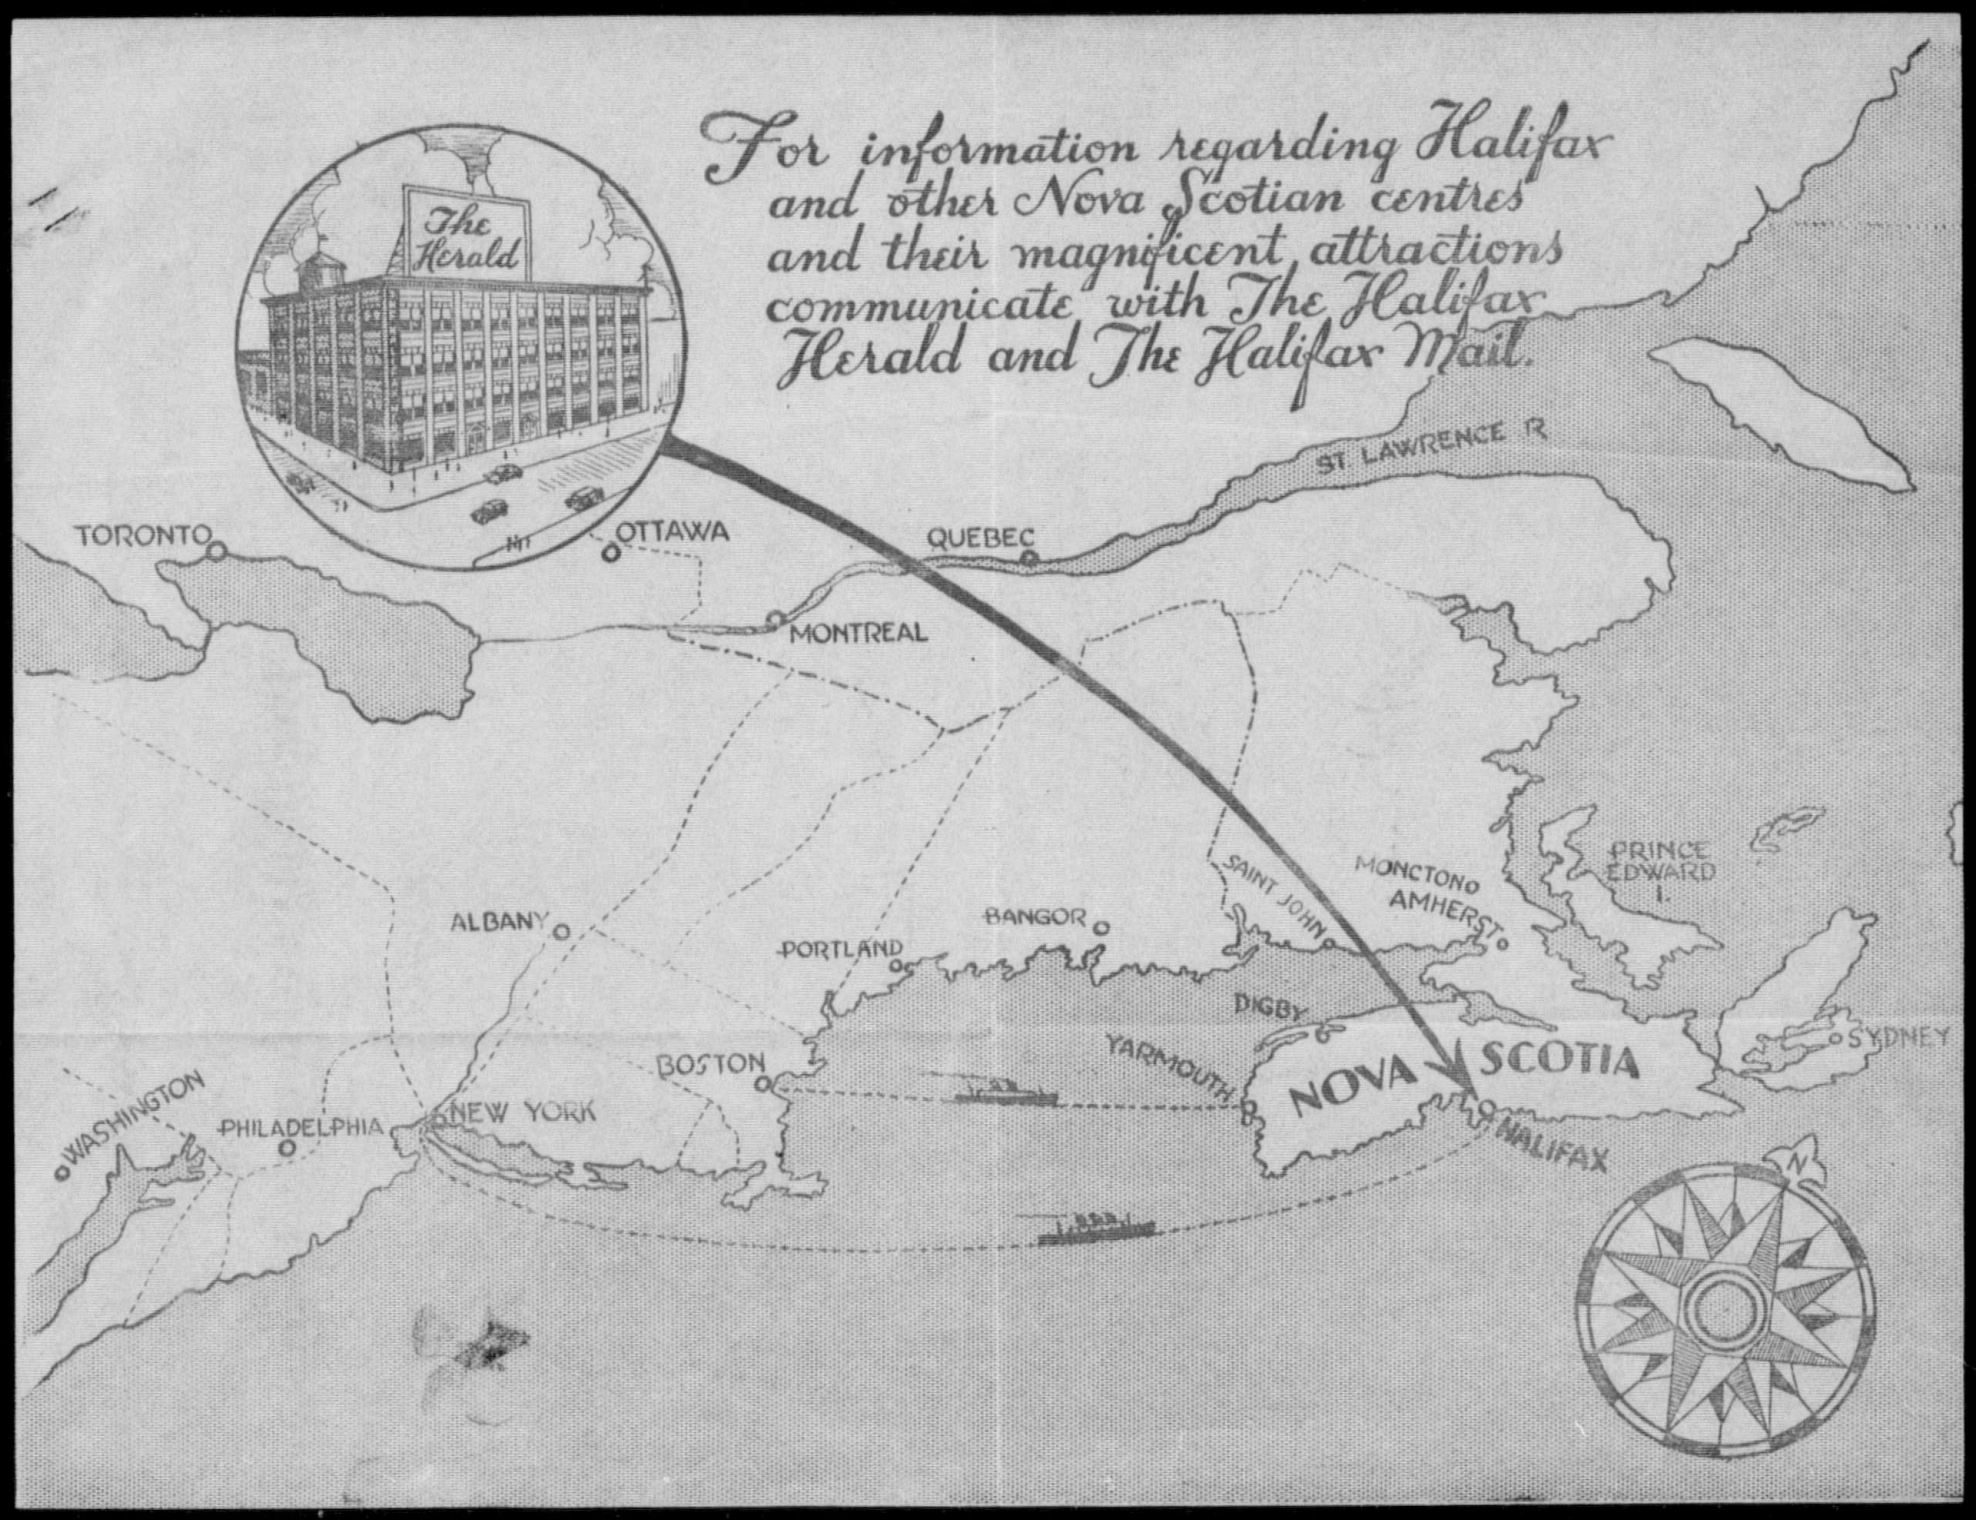

May I again express to you my sincerest sympathies with you and yours in this heavy loss you have sustained.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. King:

Both Mrs. MacLeod and myself are sincerely sorry that this harvest season of the year should find you heavily bereaved, and we would like to extend our sympathy. A little more than a year ago my own nephew, Flight Lieutenant MacLeod Hees, was killed in service with the flying corps. He was my sister's child and, as she had died shortly after largely in our family. I know, consequently, the depth of attachment that can spring up under these circumstances and I think I can appreciate something of the feeling of loss that you are

It is impossible for it to

George C. McCullagh, Esq.,
Toronto Globe and Mail,
Toronto, Ont.

Dear Mr. McCullagh:

May I extend to you the expression of my personal sympathy in the bereavement which you have sustained in the recent passing of your father. In one of her books, George Eliot has the following passage:

> '"The theatre of all my actions is fallen"; said an antique personage when his chief friend was dead; and they are fortunate who get a theatre where the audience demands their best.'

Your father having been spared to you to the great age to which he lived, I am sure you must be experiencing, at the moment, feelings wholly akin to those quoted in this passage. There will, however, be great consoldation to you at this time in the thought that your father was spared to you over so many years, and that you were able to bring to his advancing years, the pride which, as your father, he must have felt in your attainments.

I have just seen the editorial in the Globe and Mail of October the 2nd, in which such kindly reference is made to the close relationships enjoyed between my nephew William Lyong Mackenzie King and myself, and between his late father and myself. I should like to thank you and, through you, the Globe and Mail for so generous an expression of sympathy which the editorial extends.

May I express in equal measure my thanks for the editorial of the same day entitled "The loss of the St.Croix".

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. King:

While your letter of October 9 does not call necessarily for a reply, I do feel impelled to acknowledge it and to express wonderment at the extraordinary likeness in the "St. Croix" cartoon.

Surely we cannot put all these manifestations down to mere "coincidences". Surely there must be some inscrutable influence that guides the hand and pen when an artist in Halifax sets down on paper the likeness of a young man he has never seen and in relation to an incident in Canadian history in which that young man's brother was so heroically involved.

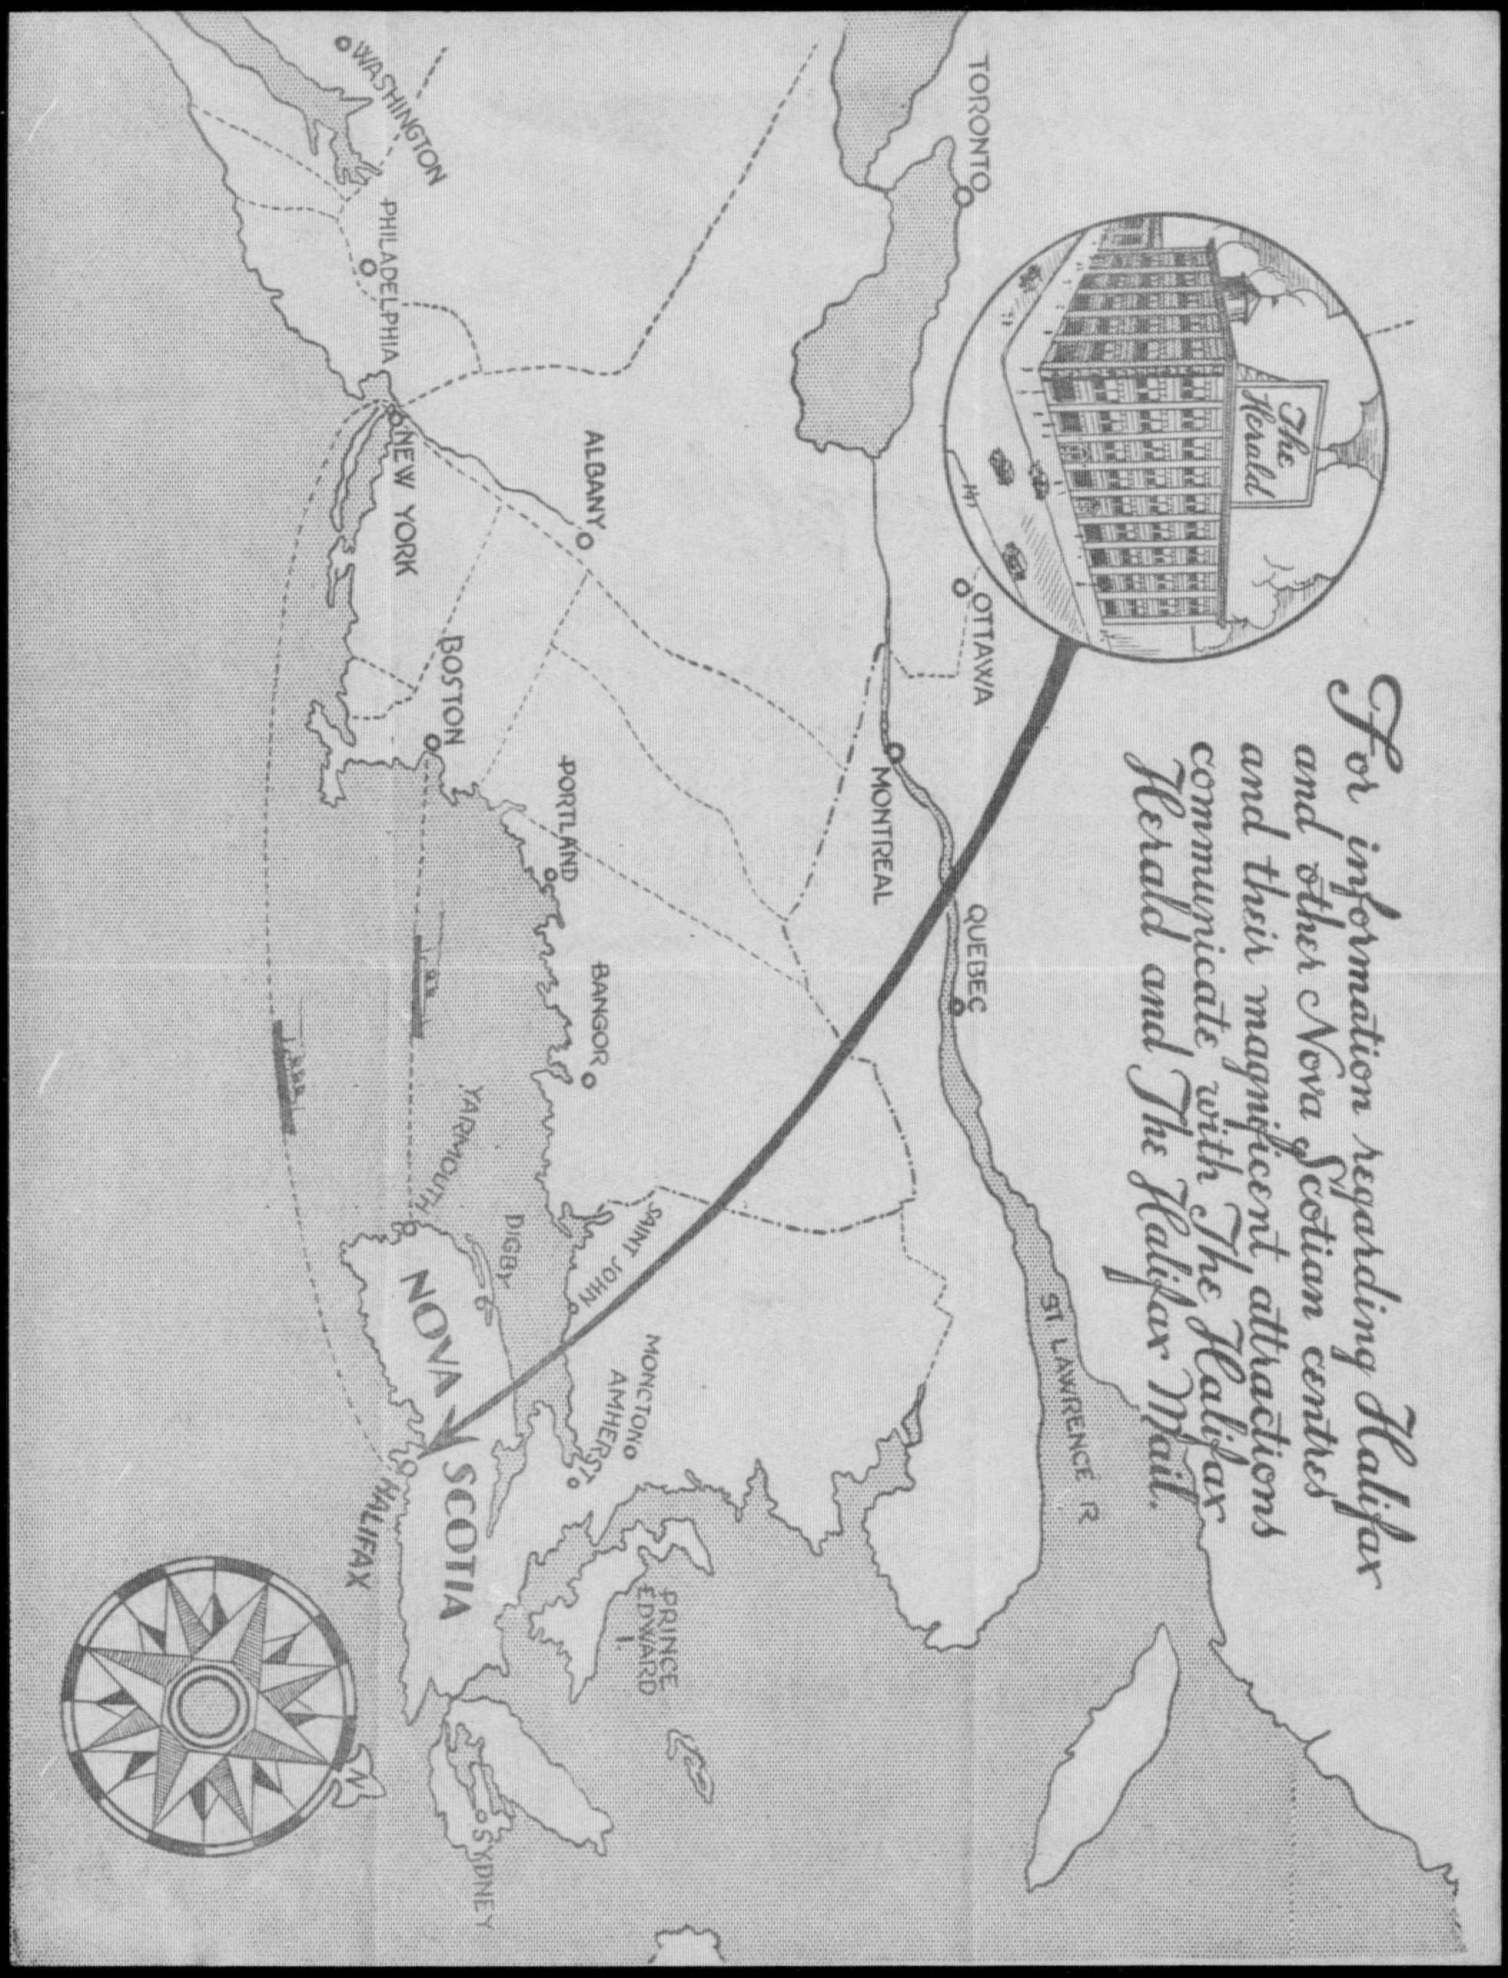

The explanation of these mysteries is beyond human understanding.

Yours sincerely,

THE KING'S HOTEL
REGINA CANADA

Evening Oct 2nd/43.

My dear Mr King:-

This morning when passing through Wpg. I learned from the Free Press that your nephew and name sake had been lost at sea.

I remember the time this young man's father your brother was taken.

I lost a brother about the same time, he left three boys and a baby girl. You entertained the girl at Laurier House one evening for dinner with Mr Johnston and myself.

This family grew up almost as my own & I know how close one gets to young people in whom there is a special interest.

The shock I received when I read the report this morning has remained with me throughout the day. I hasten now to extend my deepest sympathy.

Your friends will be consoled in the knowledge that you read your Bible every day and you will get comfort and encouragement from its pages.

With all kind thoughts and every good wish in this your time of sorrow and bereavement.

Believe me to be,

Yours most Sincerely

COPY

BEDFORD, Nova Scotia,
October 4th.

Dear Mother:-

Many thanks for the snapshot -- copy of Mrs. Stephenson's letter (nice to know approximately where Angus is) and the clippung. Allan Magee is a fine looking lad; is his fiancée in England or is she going over to join him?

This afternoon I am having the first meeting of the Bedford Officers' Wives Red Cross Group. I don't know why the organizing has fallen to me --- it is not a very enthusiastic group and they accomplish very little.

To-morrow, we were to have gone to have dinner with Amilda and Norman; however, she called this morning and put it off. Norman has to go away on Victory Loan business.

I wrote Jane Edwards on receipt of your letter. I asked her out Saturday -- unfortunately she could not come as she was working; she wanted to come to-day but I put her off on account of the Red Cross meeting. I am going into town Thursday, when Jane is going to lunch with me.

Yesterday morning Charles, Helen, Michael, Ann and I set out for Windsor; we took along a picnic lunch --- unfortunately the day turned cold and damp. As we drove up to school, we met the girls walking home from Church. Joan ran out of line and jumped in the car. She looks so well and seems very happy. She has grown in the short time she has been there. Joan brought two little friends with her --- the children all had a good time and ate lots of food.

We got back here shortly before four, just in time to meet our tea guests: Betty Blackmore, George McCullagh's sister, whose husband is now stationed at Eastern Air Command; he could not come as he was working; F/O Lorne Hutcheson of Connaught Lab in peace-time, and the Silvers. We had a nice tea party - they all left about 6.30.

Last night we had quite a shock, as Charles,when he called E.A.C.,was told that an airplane out of Sydney had crashed - six killed, among them W/C Al Lott. Charles had the office make enquiries; we were most relieved to find Bob had not been in the aircraft. It is a tragedy to lose a man like Lott -- apart from the sadness caused by his death and the five other members.

Margery King is wonderfully cheerful --- she is making plans to move home to her mother's. She was so pleased when I told her what excellent speeches Uncle Willie had made at the Nat. Lib. Convention --- she was feeling so upset for him, to have to go through with such an important Convention --- of course, he knew days before of the loss of his favourite nephew.

We are all fine, and all are feeling sorry that Helen is leaving us Friday.

Tell Aunt Agnes that we are looking forward to seeing Jane, and that we hope she will make this her home whenever she has leave or time off.

Fondest love from us all,

spirituality of war.

It is said that you must once again play father to another generation and that as many young women must bring up their children alone. I believe the courage of these boys and girls the assume responsibilities so willingly.

The Liberal workers must learn how a bright ahead for you, but you carried it wonderfully well I think all came away with a vision to the new Dominion in the future.

Our boy Angus is close to Mrs Stephenson, the former Violet Astor, niece of Lord Willingdon and he is able to assist his dears with her which is a great joy. The youngest Robert is stationed at Sydney which is the reason for Janet's concern.

THE TORONTO WESTERN HOSPITAL

TORONTO, ONTARIO

Office of the General Superintendent

January 18th, 1945.

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King,
OTTAWA,
Ontario.

Dear Mr. King:-

For some time I have hesitated to write and express my feelings of deep regret at the loss of your nephew, and my friend, who was also your namesake. I hesitated because I was a member of the Armed Forces and because I have not had the privilege of meeting you personally. I am asking Mrs. McNaughton to pass this on to you so that she may explain that it comes with sincerity.

Bill King was a member of my class in Medicine, at the University of Toronto, so that our associations were in those happy student days when life was very simple. They were very happy days indeed and Bill's industry, energy and high intellectual gifts were a constant source of inspiration to those of us who knew him well. His loss is all the more tragic because, like his father, he was lost before the world could benefit completely from the products of a brilliant mind. I am aware of how deeply the loss must have affected you for I know he counted on you very much and such attitudes make losses of this kind all the more difficult to bear.

I would like you to know that I admire your quiet courage and your vision which have carried you through the many trials and losses which you have sustained in these anxious years, - years in which you have guided Canada through the most critical period in her history.

Yours sincerely,

W. R. Feasby, M. D.

Dear Dr. Feasby:

I much regret to have been prevented from sending an earlier acknowledgment of your kind letter of January the 18th, in which you speak of your friendship with my nephew, Dr. W. L. M. King.

May I now say that I have been both touched and pleased to read your tribute to him. Your letter has been very enheartening to me at this time, and I thank you warmly for it.

Please accept my best of wishes and kind regards.

W. R. Feasby, Esq., M.D.,
General Superintendent,
The Toronto Western Hospital,

P.S. I am sending a copy of your letter to my nephew's mother, Mrs. D. Macdougall King, Denver Colorado, and to his widow, Mrs. W. L. M. King, R. R. No. I, York Mills, Ont.

of population as would enable them to retain the benefits which in the first place such a change would certainly give them. After the lecture questions were invited and a great many of the audience availed themselves of the opportunity of catechising Mr. G. who however was never at a loss for an answer however much ~~or~~less satisfaction his replies may have given his questioners.

Next month I expect to have to take a trip to Ottawa on the occasion of my brother's marriage. I have not the least idea what the best man is supposed to do on such an occasion, and am horribly funky about it. I suppose however that I shall have to brace up when the time comes and like the immortal-

My dear Willie,

Your long unacknowledged letter has not I assure you been neglected without many a sting from an angry conscience. I have tried to think that if you ever thought of it at all, there were so many ~~all~~ important matters concerning your University just now, that my small lâcheté would at least be unnoticed if not pardoned.

Now however that your quarrel with the authorities in the matter of "Pomposus v. Probus" as Byron has it, has been submitted to arbitration, I hasten also to make my peace.

The fact is life in London has with me been pursuing such an uneventful course, that I have little if any news to relate. I have not done anything in the Society line with the exception of a very occasional dance or card party. Most of my evenings are spent under the homely light of the coal oil with a book as my vis à vis. Three evenings a week, by way of recreation I go round to the art school here to have a lesson or two in drawing.

Last Tuesday we had a lecture from the celebrated Henry George, author of "Progress & Poverty". He speaks very slowly but makes some very good arguments for his theory of the Single tax.

While it certainly seems that a tax on land would prevent much unwarrantable speculation & monopoly in that limited element of production, and as a means of revenue, has great advantages over the other complicated and expensive means in use, I cannot see that the labouring classes would be ultimately ~~be~~ very much benifited unless they chose to exercise such a prudential check on the progress

Sir P. Sidney forget myself and say to my unfortunate brother "thy necessity is greater than mine"! The mis(s) guided youth does not appear to see his extremity yet though, judging by the letters he writes, full of his bliss approaching.

A friend of mine Leefe who was in Berlin for a while is stationed in Ottawa now so I shall have the additional pleasure of seeing him.

We have a Mr. McGillivray here now as our accountant. He knows you all well, and was speaking of your sisters the other day as two of the finest girls he knows [This is not my Taffey] He seems a very decent fellow, though just a little with.

My dear Willie,

Many thanks for your very kind letter of the 24th

I need not say that it will be the greatest pleasure to see you all again, and I hope you will express to Mrs King my great obligation to her for her kind invitation. My brother and I shall if possible effect a only endorse any selection made by herself. I hope she will forgive my presumption in this matter, and if from any reason it will not be convenient, you of course will not hesitate to tell me that I am a horrid nuisance and consign me to - Jericho.

The crows are coming back so I suppose we shall soon have Spring. March has been consistently feminine all through the month, but I hope the foolishness of the lamb will be inaugurated on April Fool's Day.

Looking forward to seeing you all in a week or Two, believe me, with Kindest regards to each of your circle. Yours very sincerely Harry McCay.

junction in Toronto and thence storm Ottawa in company. I expect to leave here on the afternoon of Friday the 19th April and to proceed to Ottawa on Saturday.

I am sensible of the inconvenience I shall cause, but at the same time am selfish enough to avail myself of Mrs King's generous hospitality.

Now for a further trial of her goodness! I have been cudgelling the region where brain should reside, as to the shape of a small wedding present for my brother's fiancée, and it struck me that I would be bold enough to ask Mrs King's assistance in the selection of some trifle. I enclose a draft for $25 but if Mrs King should see fit to round a purchase off with a V or X X'tra I shall only be too pleased to remit the required amount. You will see that my main requirement is "multum in parvo". The "multum" may of course be as large as a Kitchen table (very useful to a young couple) or as diminutive as a thimble (very useful for mending).

Please assure Mrs King that if she will take the trouble to do this piece of shopping for me that there is the fullest assurance placed in her judgement and widest carte blanche. It will be quite unnecessary to submit anything for my approval which would

My dear Willie,

Two days ago I saw a paragraph in the "Globe" newspaper which stated in not too eulogistic terms that you had been appointed to the fellowship at Chicago which you spoke about when I last saw you. I am delighted at your success and take this opportunity of offering my congratulations. It must be very gratifying to have your hard work recognised in so satisfactory

We have rather a decent lot of fellows at our boarding house table here. There are four of us besides the indigenous family of four. We have a solid ~~Scotchman~~ Scotchman, a small and youthful Canadian, both in the British Bank; & one of my own countrymen, of rather a harum scarum type, but a thorough gentleman; who has been a rover, from Australia to the West Indies, finally coming to this country to look after a still more shiftless younger brother. After rescuing the prodigal from the wolves, he himself got financially stranded, and was on the point of bargaining with a farmer for the winter to do "chores" for his keep, when he got a small place in the Local Master's office. He has had pretty hard luck in this country for which he blames everyone but himself. He tells us most wonderful stories of his a manner, and will help to cheer you up for your finals at the University. I should like to have been with you when you first heard the news, I can well imagine a great scene of rejoicing at Beverley Street.

When do you go to the "Wicked City"? There is certainly room on "the other side" for the spread of true principles of political economy, and I have no doubt you will have good opportunity for sowing the Good seed. You might begin by converting them to free trade, when perhaps our Government might profit by a good example.

I suppose you are now plunged in the agony of an exam: so I shall not expect to hear from you until after you have polished off the last paper. When you get a little leisure again, a line or two will be welcomed.

I finished Thorold's "6 centuries" last night. It is a book from which you have to quarry conclusions out of heavy strata of statistics but I enjoyed reading it. The author sits on my friend Hy George pretty hard. I was pleased to see; and while he shows that contrary to popular opinion the labourer of today is worse off than his ancestor of the 13th & 15th centuries, he omits the correct note when he says that all amelioration must come from within. No wholesale scheme of confiscation, but a beneficent combination of the Labourers will enable them to get a fair days pay for the fair days work.

adventurous career, and is very entertaining sometimes. He reminds me very much of poor Paddy Wood though he has not the same command of profanity that the Irishman possessed.

We have a splendid garden here though rather neglected. Some of us have been amusing ourselves trying to bring it into some order. Digging is a first rate tonic.

Tonight I expect to go with Hewitt (the ~~comm~~ fellow countryman referred to) to the Baldwins to supper. They are very nice people I believe, but I don't know why I am asked there, perhaps the Bishop, who is very absent-minded imagines that I am a son of the "true" Church. I have had no time for cricket yet this year but expect to have a game one of these days. Let me know

My dear Willie

Just a line to congratulate you upon the splendid showing of Toronto in the elections. We had tremendous excitement here yesterday evening I stood with Tom Turnbull and some others in the middle of a cheering crowd in front of regret at leaving many behind in Toronto. Among these he says the Kings were prime favourites.

I met a Miss Barker here the other day who lives (I think) on Beverley Street and knows you.

I suppose Waterloo is rejoicing over Seagram's victory. They wanted Turnbull to go down to vote for him, but we managed to keep him here.

Old Tennill and Dr Bowlby were here the other day at the Synod. With very kind regards to all yours very sincerely the "Advertiser" office from 6 to 12 last night. This morning we are all hoarse and suffering from stiff necks.

We trust that Stephen's defeat is only temporary for if the recount does not in partisan hands give him enough of his 236 rejected ballots to elect him, it is confidently asserted that there is sufficient evidence of bribery to unseat Beattie.

I intended also to write some time ago and tell you that I noticed how well you came off in the LLB exam. and I must now congratulate you on your success very heartily. Don't forget your promise to stop over in London en route for Chicago.

Steven has returned to London, apparently his joy at seeing his friends here again is second to his

My dear Willie,

For you see I must ask you to let me still so address you, although I feel rather impertinent in so saluting the learned and distinguished W. King. And here by the way let me ask you to please drop the "Mr" if you should again be good enough to write me.

I was delighted to see your letter on my desk this morning and still more enjoyed reading your interesting account of your visit to England.

I had heard some time since of the pleasure you had given my mother and the others of the Catford establishment by your visits to them. They all wrote saying what a pleasure those visits had been to them. I must thank you also personally for taking the time to hunt them up for distances in London are so great that you have to make a great deal of time going from one point to another.

My brother Douglas and all of us are deeply indebted to Mr & Mrs King and your sisters and Max for the kindness he received from them at Beverley Street. I had the great pleasure also of spending a short visit there while Douglas was in Toronto. I was sorry to again miss seeing you and having a good chat over past & present events. I hope when you return from abroad I may be more fortunate in seeing you.

I gave Mr Turnbull and Mr Dewar your message. They were very pleased to hear good accounts of you and ask me to remember them to you. I shall try and give your messages to the others you mention before Cong.

I do not know that much of importance has occurred worth recording in Canada of late. Of course you have heard that we sent a contingent to South Africa, to help mother Britannia against those "horrid Boers".

Among the Londoners who went

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 19) Lay family - Correspondence 1895-1933

were George Sifton, and George Macbeth (brother of Miss Macbeth who visited the Downies in Berlin). They got to Africa safely and we expect soon to hear that President Kruger has taken alarm at their arrival and has thrown up the sponge.

It is to be hoped that the serious reverses of which we have mournfully heard lately will not be repeated but that the early success of the British arms will bring a speedy end to the conflict. Whether the war might have been avoided is open to argument, but evidently the Boers have long been preparing for a fight, and we have to "see the thing through" now.

London the less has been rather upset this summer and fall by a street railway strike which commenced in May and was only called off the other day. The strikers refused any other settlement but a guarantee that none but union labour would be employed. They required the discharge of the non-union men and tried to bring the most extreme use of boycotting and intimidation to ruin the traffic and bring the Company to grief in. They inflicted a loss of $100000 on the Company and now find themselves (such of the few who have not long since got work elsewhere) out of position with the wrecks ahead of them.

I sympathise with the men in their endeavours to improve their position, but think their demands were unreasonable and that they were ill advised in the matter. John Cameron of the "Advertiser" supported them through thick & thin!

He has by the way a sort of debating club which meets at his house periodically to discuss and settle (!) current questions. Hon David Mills is the chief strength of the Club although one or two of the local clergymen are good men. We have some interesting squabbles there sometimes.

Please excuse this rather hurried scrawl but today being mail day I thought I would try and get this off. Once more thanking you for your kind letter and with very good wishes for a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Believe me as ever Your very sincere friend Harry Mackay.

Dear Mr. Stewart,-

I have received this morning your letter of the 22nd instant referring to our phone conversation, enclosing interim receipt - 59570 Norwich Union which covers $2000 on household effects of Dr. MacDougall King while stored in Storehouse No. 34-36 Nicholas St., Ottawa.

I have spoken with Dr. King's wife about the insurance and she has authorized me on the Doctor's behalf to have you make out a new policy as suggested by you for $2000 at the rate mentioned in your letter, on the understanding that as communicated by you to me over the phone, that just as soon as Dr. King removes his furniture to apartments or a residence, you will reduce the rate to what the regular rate for an apartment or residence would be and allow him the difference between that rate and the rate paid on effects stored in storage warehouse which I take to be what you mean by a considerable rebate as mentioned in your letter of the 22nd.

You will notice that one of the policies makes mention of the circumstance that the household effects include the Doctor's books and surgical instruments. These of course, should be included, and if necessary, special mention made of them in the policy.

You were kind enough to state that if the piano were stored at Lindsay's instead of at the warehouse, you would endorse in the policy that it should cover the piano as well as the other household effects. If it is necessary to divide the amount, the piano better be insured at $500 and the balance on the household and office effects. The household effects would be transferred to the warehouse on Friday of this week and it might be well to have the policies dated from that time.

Yours very truly,

Dear Mr. Clark:

My brother, Dr. MacDougall King is at present at the Laurentian Sanitarium of St. Agathe. He is desirous of spending the winter in Denver, Colorado, and Dr. Holden, Superintendent of the Agnes Memorial Sanatorium at Denver has consented to his being admitted as a patient there.

I understand that it will be necessary to obtain a special permit for my brother's admission to the United States, seeing that he is suffering from tuberculosis, and I understand from my friend Col. Foster, Consul-General here that you are the proper person to apply to for this permit. I am anxious to take my brother to Denver sometime during September, and if in the interval you could obtain from the authorities at Washington, the necessary permit I would be very grateful.

I cannot say at the moment whether we will go by Grand Trunk Railway or Canadian Pacific Railway, but it will be by direct route from Montreal to Chicago: crossing either at Port Huron or Detroit. It would be very embarrassing if after starting, there should be any delay or trouble at the frontier because of some technicality not having been duly complied with.. I hope, therefore, that it may be possible to have the matter arranged in advance, so that I can assure my brother that no delay will be occassioned.

I will, of course, be only too glad to personally give whatever assurances the authorities may require.

I might add that my brother was for some time a resident of Denver and practiced medicine there. Until taking ill in the spring of this year he has been practicing in Ottawa for eight years past.

Dear Mr. Salton:

Confirming our conversation over the phone today, I have asked the Manager of the Bank of Montreal in this city to send you on November 1st a cheque drawn on my savings bank account for $57 being payment in full of premium due on two policies which my brother, Dr. D. MacDougall King, holds in the Manufacturers Life Insurance Co. The policies are respectively No. 105032 for $1000, premium, $22.40 and also 132562 for $1000, premium $34.60, total premium $57.

Should the Manager fail to send you this cheque on the date mentioned please draw on me for that amount, and your draft will be honoured by the Bank. Also kindly have receipt sent to me in care of the Manager of the Bank, as Mr. Parker, the Manager, has kindly undertaken to have it deposited with other papers I have in the Bank's vaults.

I would be obliged if, at the time payment is made you would also send a line to my brother, Dr. D. MacDougall King, address 1601 Poplar St., Denver, informing him that the premiums on his two policies have been paid. Please note the address here mentioned, and see that if necessary the change it indicates from the place of previous residence in Denver, is recorded on the books of your Company.

OF CANADA

It is agreed between the sender of the following message and this Company, that said Company shall not be liable for damages arising from failure to transmit or deliver, or for any error in the transmission or delivery of an unrepeated telegram, whether happening from negligence of its servants or otherwise, or for delays from interruptions in the working of its lines, for errors in cypher or obscure messages, or for errors from illegible writing, beyond the amount received for sending the same.

To guard against errors, the Company will repeat back any telegram for an extra payment of one-half the regular rate, and in that case it shall not be liable for damages beyond fifty times the amount received for sending and repeating.

Correctness in the transmission of messages can be insured by contract in writing, stating agreed amount of risk, and payment of premium thereon at the following rates, in addition to the usual charge for repeated messages, viz.: one per cent. for any distance not exceeding 1000 miles, and two per cent. for any greater distance.

This Company shall not be liable for the act or omission of any other Company, but will endeavor to forward the telegram by any other Telegraph Company necessary to reaching its destination, but only as the agent of the sender and without liability therefor. The Company shall not be responsible for messages until the same are presented and accepted at one of its transmitting offices; if a message is sent to such office by one of the Company's messengers, he acts for that purpose as the sender's agent; if by telephone, the person receiving the message acts therein as agent of the sender, being authorized to assent to these conditions for the sender. This Company shall not be liable in any case for damages, unless the same be claimed, in writing, within sixty days after receipt of the telegram for transmission.

MR. MEASURES:

The Department of Immigration does not appear to have any record of an application from Greutzinger, of Mildmay, Ontario, for a domestic servant, presumably from some European country.

Referring to Mrs. Lay's application, perhaps it might be well for her to write the representative in Montreal of the North German Lloyd Company, giving them the information contained in my previous memo on this subject, and asking them to see that she is advised as to the date of sailing from the port of Europe. I understand that this information is only available after the maid's passage has been prepaid.

I have just been speaking to the North German Lloyd office in Montreal and with this additional information (the date of the letter of authority from the Department) they will investigate further. The Official said that if the passage was prepaid a cable would be sent from the European port when the domestic servant sailed.

The Department of Immigration has an application from Mrs. Lay for a maid, who will come from Lithuania.

The letter from the Immigration Department to the North German Lloyd Steamship Co., Montreal authorising the company to carry this passenger as an immigrant, was only issued on April 25.

The Department says the maid might not reach Canada for possibly two months from that date, the delay being dependent on passport formalities and the sailings of the steamship company.

DEPARTMENT OF IMMIGRATION AND COLONIZATION

OTTAWA, October 19th, 1927.

Dear Mrs. Lay:-

15th inst.

I duly received yours of the 5th instant advising that Mrs. Seagram had shown you Mr. Fraser's letter of October 3rd in reference to the Lithuanian girl, Stasia Norveluite, and in which some reference was made to the possibility that Olga Pufall, whose admission to Canada Mrs. Seagram recently applied for, might act likewise and not report for employment in Mrs. Seagram's home. I note that you had a somewhat similar experience in the case of Antonina Verykas.

In view of the fact that notwithstanding your experience in the previous case you have applied for another maid from Continental Europe, namely, Marta Martyke, I am approving of the application and forwarding same to the Baltic America Steamship Line, who had submitted the application to the Department and who I presume will complete the arrangements for the transportation. Would you be good enough to let me know when Marta Martyke comes forward and commences employment as a domestic in your home, and also how she is getting along and whether she is giving satisfaction.

Yours very truly,

Alex Gillis

Assistant Division Commissioner.

MEMORANDUM

MR. KING: Enquiry of Immigration Dept.re maid for Mrs. Lay

The Commissioner, Mr. W.R.Little, is sending a written report concerning the delay in the arrival of a maid for Mrs. Lay.

He is also sending a cable tonight to London containing instructions to have Marta Martyke sent forward at once.

The situation seems to be that the maids, for whom permission was obtained in June last to enter Canada, landed in Montreal, and then disappeared; the Department of Immigration believe they went to the United States. When application was then made for another pair of maids, the Department set about tracing the original immigrants, and neglected to pay any further attention to the new application.

OFFICE OF
THE DEPUTY MINISTER OF IMMIGRATION AND COLONIZATION
OTTAWA, CANADA.

October 29th, 1927.

Memorandum: Mr. Measures.

With reference to your telephone conversation of yesterday afternoon with Mr. Little concerning the application of Mrs. Lay, Barrie, Ontario, for the admission to Canada from Poland of Marta Martyke, whom Mrs. Lay desired to engage as a domestic, I may say that on August 15th you inquired with regard to the selection of two German speaking domestics for Mrs. Lay and Mrs. Seagram of Barrie, who apparently had been in touch with Reverend Mr. Gretzenger of Mildmay, an agent for the Baltic America Line, working on a commission basis. Mr. Blair, then Acting Deputy Minister in my absence in the Old Country, sent you on the same date letters addressed to Mrs. Lay and Mrs. Seagram by Commissioner Jolliffe, containing an indication of what should be done in order to bring about the immigration of the two domestics.

On August 27th we received from the Baltic America Line, Montreal, applications from Mrs. Lay and Mrs. Seagram for the admission respectively of Marta Martyke and Olga Pufall. When these papers came to hand it was learned from the Departmental records that there had just previously arrived in Canada from Europe two domestics destined to Mrs. Lay and Mrs. Seagram, and whose names had been furnished by Reverend Mr. Gretzenger. It consequently was thought well to inquire what had become of these two young woman and the new applications were thereupon acknowledged to the Baltic America Line with an intimation that certain inquiries were necessary. The maid who had previously been selected for Mrs. Lay by Reverend Mr. Gretzenger was Antonina Verykas, a Lithuanian. She was admitted at the port of Halifax on July 23rd upon the understanding that she was destined as a domestic to Mrs. Lay but she remained with an alleged uncle in Montreal, who apparently has left that city and cannot be located. The maid who was destined to Mrs. Seagram, namely, Stasia Norveluite, also a Lithuanian and who arrived in company with Antonina Verykas, proceeded only to Montreal where from our inquiries it would appear she remained only a couple of weeks, when she proceeded to Windsor, Ontario, for the purpose of joining as soon as possible a sister in Grand Rapids, Michigan. The circumstances surrounding these two cases.....

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 19) Lay family - Correspondence 1895-1933

Archives nationales du Canada

these two cases rather clearly indicated that the applications of Mrs. Lay and Mrs. Seagram, while submitted in all good faith, were used merely to facilitate the admission to Canada of two young women who intended to take the first opportunity of proceeding to the United States.

After learning the outcome of the two previous applications the Division Commissioner wrote to Mrs. Seagram setting out the circumstances as had been learned by the Department and intimating that the person or persons who had interested her in making the application had not been altogether straightforward in their dealings in the matter, as it was quite apparent that the real destination was the United States. Mrs. Seagram did not reply directly to the letter but handed it to Mrs. Lay, who wrote the Division Commissioner under date of the 5th instant. As a result of Mrs. Lay's letter it was decided to authorize the admission of Marta Martyke and Olga Pufall subject, of course, to the requirements applicable to domestic servants, and the letters of conditional entry were forwarded to the Baltic America Line under date of the 19th instant and at the same time Mrs. Lay and Mrs. Seagram were informed by the Assistant Division Commissioner of the action.

Yesterday evening, at your request, a cablegram was dispatched to our Director in London instructing that our Danzig Officer communicate with Marta Martyke and that she be allowed to come forward to Mrs. Lay subject to the requirements in the matter of health and passport. The Baltic America Line, which has the arrangements for the transportation in hand, were also notified in order that they might complete the transportation arrangements.

Ottawa, December 27, 1927.

Dear Mr. Forke:

My sister, Mrs. Lay, of Barrie, recently secured a domestic servant,named Martha Martyke, from Poland, through Mr. Gretzenger, an agent for the Baltic America Line. The girl is now in her employ. She came out along with another servant, engaged by Mrs. Seagram of Barrie. Neither of these girls knew anyone when they left Poland. On the way out a man on board the vessel tried to persuade both of them to come with him to the States. He has since written to the girl proposing some arrangement whereby she can get into the United States. The latest communication in the matter is one which has come to my sister herself from this individual. He evidently believes that she has an employment agency at Barrie. The communication has been sent on to me by my brother-in-law.

I wish you would have this matter taken up, both by your own authorities and the United States authorities, and see if an example cannot be made of the parties responsible for what is quite evidently a deliberate plan on the part of some Americans to capture girls crossing from Europe to Canada for employment. What their purpose may be I cannot say.

The records of your Department will show that early in the year two other girls were brought out, intended for service with my sister, Mrs. Lay, and Mrs.Seagram of Barrie. Both were met on a steamer in a manner similar to the present case, and neither came on to their employment, but went through to the States.

Evidently there is a complete system operating in this matter, which should be gone into very thoroughly and carefully, and I shall watch with interest the success of your Department and the American authorities in dealing with the man Gottleib Hinz of Chicago, who is evidently back of the whole business.

I enclose the letter from my brother-in-law, as well as other correspondence.

Yours very sincerely,

The Honble. Robert Forke,

SWORN STATEMENT OF FELIZ J. WENGIERSKI, made at 3137 S. Morgan St., Chicago, Ill. to Inspector Harold K. Bowen.

SWORN:

"Mr. Gottlieb Hinz came to me and called on telephone and messages were sent by Western Union and also written by myself for him by his direction and I signed his name to these communications in accord with his directions because he is blind. These communications were sent to his niece, a relative of Mrs. Hinz, by name of Martha Montik, also to M Miss Lay, Barrie, Ont. Mr. & Mrs. Gottlieb Hinz were worried because they feared the girls were in hands of White Slave traffic operators

"They feared Miss Lay might be in that business but have since become convinced she is straight. When no information was received from Miss Lay and Mrs. Segram we were about to take the matter up with the police authorities but after information was received then we were all satisfied. Had the girls communicated right away all this would never have happened. They should have replied immediately.

"In regard to the statement made in letter dated Dec. 20, 1927---- "Please arrange for me if she can't be brought to any hotel in Windsor, Ont? will say Mr. Hinz wanted to pay the girls a visit but changed his mind finding they were safe. If Miss Lay or Mrs. Segram had answered instead of refering the matters to others all would have been alright then. Mr. Hinz is blind and it is difficult for him to travel and Windsor would be nearest place for him to travel to.

"I don't know why Mr. Gottlieb Hinz wanted that paragraph in that particular suspicious manner. The statement the girls made that they had no relatives was incorrect. If there was anything wrong why should the letter bear the name of Gottlieb Hinz?

"Mrs. Lay and the girls were suspicious of anything that might possibly entrap the girls and Mr. & Mrs. Gottlieb Hinz were also suspicious. This matter is now adjusted and no suspicions exist now."

(Signed) Felix Wengierski.

My dear Lay:

It is most kind of you to have written me of your disappointment at our having missed each other when you were in Ottawa. I can assure you that my disappointment was even greater than your own.

On the day I learned you and Audrey were in the city I unfortunately had an engagement to dine with the American Minister, and extended the invitation to tea, as it was the only free moment I had in the day. When I found you could not come to tea and invited you to dinner for the following evening, I had wholly overlooked the funeral of Mr. Goodison, which was at Barrie on the following day and made it necessary for me to leave Ottawa that evening. Maid for Mrs. Lay

MR. KING:

I telephoned Miss Burnham your message about wages. She said this was perhaps a difficulty, because the maids like to go to large cities. Miss Burnham said she would feel free, in view of your message, to offer $30 instead of $25 for a maid. She is telegraphing to St. John, NB to ascertain whether she can get a maid who is landing there during the next day or two.

DEPARTMENT OF IMMIGRATION AND COLONIZATION

OTTAWA, February 25th, 1929.

Dear Mr. Measures,

With further reference to the case of Stasia Norviliute, a Lithuanian domestic, who came forward to Canada on assurance of employment given by Mrs. J. H. Seagram, of Barrie, Ontario, and our conversation over the telephone of November 29th last, you will probably be interested in a report which has been received from our Agent at Montreal in regard to this girl, who arrived at Halifax, July 23rd, 1927, and which reads in part as follows:-

"She stated that, upon arrival, she did not proceed to her destination at Barrie, Ont., because she was not feeling well and could not undertake the work expected of her there. She maintained steadfastly that nobody advised her to stay in Montreal, but that she did it of her own accord because she knew there was quite a colony of Lithuanians in this city and she expected to fare better here than in a small town. She expressed her willingness to work as a domestic, but claims that she cannot find any such employment because of the fact that she is yet unable to speak either English or French.

She returned from Brooklyn on the 25th ultimo, arriving at Windsor Station at 8 A.M. (D.&H. train). She occupied a sleeper berth, but had lost her ticket stub. On her passport, my officer found the following vise: "Admitted at Houses Point, N.Y., on December 21st, 1928, paragraph 2, section 3, Immigration Act of 1924, for 3 months, Joseph A. Bentley, Immigration Inspector". While in Brooklyn, she was staying with her sister, Mrs. Thos. Pozle (nee Charlotte Norviliute) of 53 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn.

Upon her return to Montreal, she resumed her work with the T. Eaton Co. Ltd., at their factory in the Caron Bldg., Bleury Street, this city, where she earns from $8.00 to $12.00 per week as button sewer. She states that she is learning English and the interview bears out the fact that she is making progress in this respect. She has been in the employ of the Eaton Company since August 16th, 1927, and is said to be a good employee.

When questioned regarding Miss Antonina Verakite, she stated that she has known that girl as a co-passenger, but that she has not seen her since their arrival in this country. She does not know of the present whereabouts of the Verakite girl."

Maid for Mrs. H. M. Lay

Mr. King:

Miss Burnham, Queen 3000, Local 321, telephoned to say that there has been a hitch in her arrangements to supply a maid to Mrs. Lay at Barrie. When she landed at St. John, the girl agreed to go to Barrie. When she arrived in Toronto, the girl changed her mind and refused to go to Barrie. I asked Miss Burnham whether an additional amount in wages would have proved any inducement. Miss Burnham said she could not say; but she thought it probably would have made no difference. Miss Burnham said the girl evidently had friends in Toronto, and intended to stay there in a large city. Miss Burnham said that the only thing to do now is to cable England again, and this she is doing. In the meantime she has asked the Toronto office to explain the matter at once to Mrs. Lay, and also to continue to be on the lookout in Toronto for a suitable maid.

MINISTER OF NATIONAL DEFENCE

Private.

Rt. Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, C.M.G.,P.C.,M.P.,
Prime Minister of Canada,
Ottawa, Canada.

Dear Mr. King,

I was away all day yesterday, and your telegram reached me this morning. In the meantime the Deputy has been looking into the matter of the Camp Borden Bank Account.

I have talked with Mr. Lay myself to-day, and the Deputy has gotten further information this afternoon, and is communicating with Mr. Lay again. Apparently the situation is complicated somewhat by the fact that the Bank of Montreal is the official Government bank. The Commerce had been used collectively in cashing the officers' cheques, and they were asked to provide better facilities, but, on consideration, they felt that they could not do this. Our Pay Services thought that as the Bank of Montreal had provided these facilities at Petawawa, they would probably be willing to provide them for Borden, and they accordingly were asked and accepted, and sent in the money for the pay on the 15th instant.

The matter was just taken up as routine, and did not come to my attention, and if it had, no doubt I would have concurred in the action taken, as neither the officers nor myself knew anything of the personal considerations which might be involved. I think the thing to do now is for the Commerce to reopen the matter by way of reconsideration of the Department's representations for the improvement of the service. I anticipated that if the Department terminated the arrangements which the Bank of Montreal had made, and went back to the Commerce, the former might make representations to the Finance Department, claiming an infringement of their rights as the official Government bank. I have gone into the situation with Mr. Saunders, Deputy Minister of Finance, and he tells me that the Finance Department will be satisfied with whatever arrangements this Department makes. Mr. Desbarats is telephoning Mr. Lay.

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

Yours very truly,

mw.

Dear Mr. Junor:

I enclose the little card which I shall be grateful if you will have placed with the plates which you were kind enough to say you would send to my sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay, at Barrie, Ontario. It might be as well to get the box off during the present week, having it marked "Not to be opened until Christmas Day." I am sending my sister a letter which she will receive on Christmas Day, telling her that this has been arranged between us. I should like again to thank you for telling me of my sister's wishes in the particular mentioned, and also for giving me so much of your time on the day that I called and had the pleasure of looking, with you, at the many beautiful pieces of china in your store.

Coming down on the train at night I asked Mr. Malcolm about the statement you had heard attributed to him, namely, that over 95% of the furniture sold in Canada was made in our country, and he told me that he believed that to be quite correct.

Wishing you the compliments of the season,

Sir John Aird,
President,
Canadian Bank of Commerce,
Toronto,
Ontario.

My dear Sir John:

In a letter received yesterday from my sister, Mrs. Lay, she mentions that Mr. Lay will, on account of age, be retiring from the Bank this summer, being granted, as is customary, a year's leave of absence from the date of his retirement.

Apparently Mr. Lay, who is now sixty-four years of age, has been kept on beyond the age at which retirement is generally effected in the case of managers of the Bank, and both he and my sister are appreciative of this, and naturally hesitate to ask for any special consideration on account of Mr. Lay's many years of continuous and faithful service. At the same time, I can see from the letter which I have received from my sister, that the matter is naturally causing them both great concern, as a drop of $1200 out of a salary of $4,000, is certain to mean a good deal, in view particularly of the fact that they have, as you know, a young family of four children, the eldest of whom, John, is just about to enter the university. All four children, in fact, have still to receive whatever higher education may be theirs.

No doubt Mr. Lay's record of service to the Bank is well known to you personally. He has, I believe, been almost forty-two years with the Bank, and in that period of time, excepting the two or three weeks out of each year which he has had for vacation, there have been but two occasions on which he has had any furlough; one of two months, at the time he was married to my sister twenty-four years ago, and which included time occupied in his moving from the Yukon to Ontario, and the other, at an earlier time, for a period of three months. Until two years ago, Mr. Lay had been away from the Bank on account of illness only two half days, in all the time of his forty-two years' association with the Bank. He is at present one of the oldest members of the staff of the Bank, and I have been wondering whether, in view of these circumstances, the Bank authorities might be prepared to give some special consideration to a term of service which has been so long and uninterrupted. I believe that there is a sort of unwritten law in most banks that once in every seven years a manager might ask for an extended leave.

I know that Mr. Lay himself would never ask for any special consideration, and I would hesitate to do so on his behalf if I did not think that there were, in the circumstances as I have outlined them, reasons wherein the Bank would be justified in taking into account, in connection with the services of one who has been a member of its staff for over forty years, the fact that over that entire period of time there has been no absence from duty through illness or any other cause, beyond the time of the two furloughs mentioned, and vacations in some years of only two weeks, and never more than three.

You will, I am sure, not misunderstand the motives which prompt me to send you this letter. I know that both Mr. and Mrs. Lay would not wish me to do anything which might appear to occasion the least embarrassment to yourself or other officers of the Bank, and I naturally would equally refrain from writing, did I feel that you would do other than accept this letter in the spirit in which it is being written. I would not like you, in Mr. Lay's case, to depart from any principle or practice to which the Bank has rigidly adhered; but if there have been in the past circumstances where long and meritorious services of the kind have received some special recognition, I should feel particularly pleased if Mr. Lay's services might be granted a like consideration.

With kind personal regards,

Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) W.L. Mackenzie King

ADDRESS REPLY TO
"THE GENERAL MANAGER"

Head Office.

Toronto, 2 12th April 1930

Personal and Private

Dear Mr Mackenzie King:

Referring to your letter of 8th instant regarding Lay, about two years ago he spoke to Logan about retiring, at which time he was building his conservatory, and he then had in mind, we assume, that he would amuse himself, probably profitably. In July last, however, he spoke to Logan again pointing out that he would like another year's extension, which was very cheerfully granted, so that we assumed there was no question that it was Lay's wish to retire in July this year.

I did not reply to your letter sooner because I learned that Logan had an appointment with Lay to discuss the whole subject on Thursday last. At that interview it was quite obvious that Lay had in mind that he would like to be relieved of the management of the Barrie branch, and an arrangement has now been made whereby he goes on to the staff of relieving Managers at full salary. While no specific time is set, Logan has intimated to him that he may expect to be held in that capacity, with residence at Barrie, for at least two years. Lay has talked the matter over with Mrs Lay and he writes to-day to the effect that the arrangement suits them both admirably. I hope this covers the whole situation to your entire satisfaction.

It is possible that Lay in the first instance, in his modesty, felt that he was doing the right thing in intimating that he would like to retire, having in mind the fact that the age for this is sixty years, and we probably took his decision too literally. However, the arrangement now concluded is highly advantageous to Lay and I trust pleasing to you. At the end of two years the matter can be reconsidered.

With kind regards, I am

Yours faithfully

Dear Mr. Jolliffe:

This will confirm our telephone conversations.

Mr. Mackenzie King's sister, Mrs. H. M. Lay, whose address is "Boulderfel," Barrie, Ontario, is anxious to learn whether she can arrange the passage from Ireland of a female domestic, who is a sister of a gardener employed by Mr. Lay. The name of the domestic is Eileen Delaney, Abbyleix Road, Maryborough, Queen's Co., Ireland.

I understand that the £3 rate is not applicable to residents of the Irish Free State, and that to be permitted to take advantage of this rate Eileen Delaney would have to reside for six months in Northern Ireland. You asked me whether the Department should endeavour to have Eileen Delaney come out under the £10 rate scheme. I said that Mrs. Lay would like such an arrangement made as soon as possible. You asked me whether Mrs. Lay would pay the girl's fare. I said that the girl would pay her own fare, if she came out under this £10 rate scheme.

My dear Sir John:

I received, on my return from Bermuda yesterday, your more than kind letter of April 12th. I received, at the same time, a letter from my sister, Mrs. Lay, telling me of the conversation Mr. Lay had had with Mr. Logan, and what had been arranged. Needless to say, both letters have given me the greatest possible pleasure and satisfaction.

Nothing could be more appreciative of the kindness of Mr. Logan and yourself than the words of my sister's letter. The fact that the Bank has caused Mr. Lay to feel so completely that his many years of faithful services with the Bank have merited the recognition they have won for him, has brought with it feelings of pride and happiness, quite as great, I believe, as those evoked by the sense of security and freedom from financial embarrassment which the arrangement itself has brought.

I need scarcely add that my feeling of pleasure and gratitude to Mr. Logan and yourself is only second to that of my sister and Mr. Lay.

the Bank, and I have been wondering whether, in view of these circumstances, the Bank authorities might be prepared to give some special consideration to a term of service which has been so long and uninterrupted. I believe that there is a sort of unwritten law in most banks that once in every seven years a manager might ask for an extended leave.

I know that Mr. Lay himself would never ask for any special consideration, and I would hesitate to do so on his behalf if I did not think that there were, in the circumstances as I have outlined them, reasons wherein the Bank would be justified in taking into account, in connection with the services of one who has been a member of its staff for over forty years, the fact that over that entire period of time there has been no absence from duty through illness or any other cause, beyond the time of the two furloughs mentioned, and vacations in some years of only two weeks, and never more than three.

You will, I am sure, not misunderstand the motives which prompt me to send you this letter. I know that both Mr. and Mrs. Lay would not wish me to do anything which might appear to occasion the least embarrassment to yourself or other officers of the Bank, and I naturally would equally refrain from writing, did I feel that you would do other than accept this letter in the spirit in which it is being written. I would not like you, in Mr. Lay's case, to depart from any principle or practice to which the Bank has rigidly adhered; but if there have been in the past circumstances where long and meritorious services of the kind have received some special recognition, I should feel particularly pleased if Mr. Lay's services might be granted a like consideration.

June 13, 1931

Sir John Aird,
President,
Canadian Bank of Commerce,
Toronto, Ontario.

My dear Sir John:

I have been a little perturbed by a communication from Mr. Lay informing me that he has received word from the General Manager of the Bank of Commerce that, in accordance with the arrangement by which he was to be retained on full pay to the 9th of July, 1932, it has been decided to grant him the customary year's leave of absence on full salary from the 9th of July, 1931.

In your letter to me of April the 12th, 1930, marked personal and private, you say, in reference to an interview which Mr. Logan had had with Mr. Lay a day or two previous:

"An arrangement has now been made whereby he goes on to the staff of relieving Managers at full salary. While no specific time is set, Logan has intimated to him that he may expect to be held in that capacity, with residence at Barrie for at least two years. Lay has talked the matter over with Mrs. Lay and he writes to-day to the effect that the arrangement suits them both admirably. I hope this covers the whole situation to your entire satisfaction."

And in conclusion you say: "The arrangement now concluded is highly advantageous to Lay and I trust pleasing to you. At the end of two years the matter can be reconsidered."

In the many matters to which you are obliged to give attention, it is just possible that you yourself may have forgotten the arrangement made at the time as set forth in your letter, or that possibly Mr. Logan, in his recent communication to Mr. Lay, has either had no knowledge of it or also forgotten it.

It is quite true that any change is likely to affect me personally only indirectly, and at best in remote contingencies, but I was so positive in the assurances which, on the strength of your letter, I gave both my sister and Mr. Lay at the time, and we were all so genuinely pleased at the consideration shown Mr. Lay after his many years of service to the bank, that I should be very sorry if any disappointment, especially one which will involve a pecuniary loss, should be experienced by Mr. and Mrs. Lay at this time.

Mr. Lay, I know, hesitates to raise any question himself. He is naturally diffident and modest, and both he and mysaister are so appreciative of your kindness and that of Mr. Logan that they would make a sacrifice financially rather than raise any question which might cause either you ot Mr. Logan the slightest embarrassment.

I too share their feelings in that respect. At the same time I feel that you and Mr. Logan, not less than Mr. and Mrs. Lay and myself, would wish to see any undertaking of the Bank of Commerce fulfilled to the letter, and believing that such would be your wish, I have felt that, in view of your letter to me, you would not feel I was intruding unduly were I, in connection with Mr. Logan's recent communication to Mr. Lay, to bring its representations to your attention at this time.

With kindest regards, believe me, my dear Sir John,

Yours very sincerely,

Toronto, 2 CANADA 16th June 1931

My dear Mr Mackenzie King:

I have received your letter of 13th instant, and am sorry that you think that the arrangement we have made to place Mr Lay upon the list of pensioners of the Bank's Pension Fund does not comply with the undertaking conveyed to you in my letter of 12th April 1930.

I would assure you, however, that the difference in plan is purely technical. What we wished to do was to arrange that after 9th July 1932 the Pension Fund should bear that portion of Mr Lay's remuneration properly chargeable to that Fund under its rules.

The arrangement in Mr Lay's case provides for the payment of his salary in full until 9th July 1932. The practical effect of the change of plan, therefore, is the same as if we had retained him technically on the active list to that date and, apart from the consideration to which I have referred, there are certain advantages from the Bank's point of view which I shall not enter into in detail unless you care to be advised more fully on this point.

The present arrangement, however, does not necessarily close the door to further consideration next year, and I have much pleasure in reaffirming that further attention will be given his case at that time.

I trust that this explanation of the matter will be entirely acceptable to you and to Mr and Mrs Lay but I shall be pleased to amplify these advices if you so desire, or to give the fullest consideration to any further representations which you may desire to make, if our attitude is not entirely acceptable to you.

With kind personal regards,

Yours faithfully

My dear Sir John:

I am sorry that the pressure of my public duties within the past few days has prevented me from acknowledging sooner the receipt of your kind communication of June 16th. In addition, I wished before writing to communicate with Mr. and Mrs. Lay.

The exception taken in my communication to you of the 13th instant was not intended to refer in any way to the purely technical difference ~~in~~ to which you refer in your reply of June 16th. It was to what I conceived to be a change in the plan whereby Mr. Lay's active association with the Bank would be for one year's less time than I had been led, from your letter of April 12, 1930, to believe it would be. In that letter, as you recall, you said: "an arrangement has now been made whereby he (Mr. Lay) goes on the staff of Relieving Managers at full salary. While no specific time is set, Logan has intimated to me that he may expect to be held in that capacity, with residence at Barrie, for at least two years"; and elsewhere: "at the end of the two years the matter can be reconsidered".

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 19) Lay family - Correspondence 1895-1933

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

I did not assume, on receiving your letter, that one of the two years therein mentioned was in lieu of the year's leave of absence to which Mr. Lay, apart from all else, had become entitled. I assumed that the arrangement referred to meant that for two years Mr. Lay would be continued on the staff of Relieving Managers and at the end of that period his position would be reconsidered, which I took to mean that he would either be definitely retired at that time, with the customary grant of a year's leave of absence, or that he would be retained as Relieving Manager or in some other association with the Bank, should such appear desirable from the Bank's point of view.

Apparently, Mr. Logan, in discussing matters with Mr. Lay, had in mind the substitution of a year in active service as Relieving Manager for the year's leave of absence to which Mr. Lay had become entitled. If the arrangement, as mentioned in your letter to me, was not as I had assumed it to be, I was of course wrong in taking from it the meaning I did and in raising the expectations of Mr. and Mrs. Lay to the point I did in telling them of its representations.

From the perusal of your letter of April 12, 1930, you will, I am sure, see wherein I, without knowledge of anything that may have passed between Mr. Logan and Mr. Lay, had every reason to believe that the arrangement was as I have indicated and as I assured both Mr. and Mrs. Lay I gathered from your letter it was. You will also, I am sure, see wherein they were justified in having their expectations raised in the manner described. They would naturally feel that anything said by you, as President of the Bank, would be the governing word in the event of any question being raised at any time.

Naturally, I am most anxious not to occasion either yourself or the Bank the slightest embarrassment, and I shall gladly accept, as I am sure Mr. and Mrs. Lay will, whatever you yourself may feel is the correct interpretation to be given to the arrangement made at the time.

With kindest regards,

Believe me,

Dear Mr King:

The delay in answering your letter of 24th ultimo regarding Mr Lay's case has been caused by the absence from the city of the General Manager and myself during the last week or ten days.

I am sorry that you still think that the change of status arranged by us for Mr Lay is not in accordance with the spirit of the undertaking conveyed to you in my letter of 12th April 1930. In order that you may feel quite satisfied on this point, however, I have the authority of the General Manager to say that the conditions set forth in that letter will remain unchanged,as we find that we can make some other internal adjustment which will attain the financial object aimed at by us in placing Mr Lay on the Pension Fund.

You understand, of course, that Mr Lay has not been called upon for any relief work. To do so would entail his absence from Barrie for considerable periods of time which, it was our understanding, would not have been in accord with his private plans. At the same time, as long as he was attached to the Staff of Relieving Managers, the Staff Department felt that they could call upon his services and this was another reason for changing his status as, under the revised plan, he would be entirely free of any obligation to perform any duties for the Bank.

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

With regard to your remarks respecting the "year's leave of absence", I may say that this is customary with officers who retire on pension at the usual age of sixty, or possibly sixty-one. It would not necessarily follow, however, that an officer who is retained for a considerably longer period would be entitled, in addition to such retention, to a further year's leave of absence. In giving you this explanation, however, I would assure you the question of the treatment of Mr Lay in this respect when the time comes is in no way prejudiced.

We are advising Mr Lay that we have decided to revert to the original arrangement.

With kind personal regards,

Yours faithfully

President

Dear Dr. Thistle:

Jennie has written me of her recent consultation with you and the result of the x-ray examination. My mind is immensely relieved to know that her condition is not worse than it is and that, if she will only take the necessary rest and care of herself, there is reason to hope that the ulcer, which is occasioning her trouble, will again become dormant.

I am writing to you, first of all, to thank you for what you are doing for Jennie. She has told me of how good you have been to her. I also write to ask if you would mind writing Mr. [illegible] Lay a personal letter, or, if you prefer, Jennie herself, enphasizing how very important it is that she could carry out the advice you have given, if she hopes to avoid something much more serious. My own fear is that Jennie will make light of the situation, and will continue to feel that she can do as she has been doing during the past year, provided she is just a little careful. What she needs to be told is that she must be in bed so many hours every day, and by such and such an hour every night, and that this regimen must be followed for so many weeks or months, or whatever the time may be.

A letter, in which Jennie wrote me of her visit to Toronto, was finished at midnight. She said she had intended to write during the afternoon, but that some people had come in and taken up her time. She must be told that the door must be barred against some people altogether - that they must be told that she is resting under the Doctor's orders. Do please tell her this in as plain language as you possibly can.

I have just come through a siege of arthritis myself, in having failed to have my teeth examined as often I should have. It was not neglect; it was simply that I felt no ailment of any kind, until I was struck all of a blow. The regimen I myself have had to follow,to get along as far as I have, makes me realize even more than perhaps I otherwise would, how important in Jennie's case it is to have the truth of her situation brought home to her and to Harry. He must see that she obeys your orders.

I hope you and Hazel are keeping well. I was sorry to hear that, like so many of us, the depression has hit you pretty hard. You would vote for a Tory government, however, so you must take part of the blame upon yourself! However,there is always a possibility of things improving, and I believe they will improve in the New Year.

Let me send to you and to Hazel my very best of wishes for 1934, and with them my kindest of personal remembrances as well.

Yours very sincerely,

My dear Mr Kemp

Thanks again Father with reference to Dr Jennis's condition. I was relieved to have the diagnosis of chronic duodenal ulcer confirmed by the X Ray examination. There was the danger that the trouble might turn out to be something worse. Ulcer on the stomach itself is a more serious matter than ulcer of the duodenum because of the liability of chronic gastric ulcer to take on malignant changes. The examination showed nothing wrong on the stomach the duodenum or first portion of the bowel just beyond the stomach. The

My dear Doctors

I cannot thank you too warmly for your kindness in writing me as you have of Jennie's condition. It is an immense relief to my mind to know exactly the nature of the trouble and an equal relief to know that Jennie is in your hands. Why she did not consult you months ago, I fail to understand. It is such a pity that people do not give physicians their real chance.

Jennie should have gone to bed the minute she returned from you, and stayed there right through the Christmas Season. In a letter received from her this morning, she says that she is going to do so as soon as Jean leaves but that it is impossible to do that while the Christmas holidays are on. That sort of thing is really too unfortunate. I should have thought that, having been spared something more serious, she would not have lost a moment in seeking immediately to effect the cure that is now so necessary. However, human nature is hard to change. If you can get Jennie to rest for a month or two, once she takes to bed for a fortnight, you will be rendering all of us a very great service.

I hope you will not hesitate to continue to impress upon her just to what her condition may lead if she does not now effect a complete cure. Harry, too, must be impressed with this. I question if he has ever realized what Jennie's condition is, for she is always making light of any trouble she has.

I was indeed sorry to hear from Jennie that you and Hazel had had such a hard pull of late. I suppose no profession has suffered more as a conseqqence of the depression than your own. I do hope that the worst is over and that the New Year may help to restore your fortunes. Please let this letter bring my love and best of wishes to Hazel and yourself, and especially my very grateful thanks for your interest in and care of Jennie.

I was in both the Women's and the Men's Committee Rooms to-day and every person who spoke about the address last night remarked on how splendidly he performed.

I felt that you would be quite interested to know how the audience felt regarding his efforts at supporting our candidate.

My dear Phronie:

You see, I am not quite so diffident as you are in the formality of my address. I hope, hereafter, you will continue to use my Christian name in correspondence, as I am sure you would in conversation.

It was most kind of you to write me of John Lay's speech at Port Hope. I am sending on your letter to Jennie, that she too may have the pleasure of reading what you have written.

I am glad to know that John did so well. It is particularly interesting to know of the glimpses you discovered of his likeness in feature and manner to other members of the family. How amazingly interesting and farreaching are the influences of heredity!

Your letter has served to revive a host of very happy memories associated with Woodside days. Some time I hope I may have the opportunity of talking them over with you again. Should I once more be in the vicinity of Port Hope, I shall not fail to call and see you.

I hope you will extend my congratulations to your mother at the interest which she continues to have in political affairs, and give to her my best of wishes for continued health and strength.

I should like very much to see you and your sisters again. I can see, as plainly as if it were before me, the photograph of you all, and your brother, which you had at the time of your visit to Berlin. I hesitate to think of how many years ago that was.

I trust you will pardon me for sending you a dictated letter, instead of writing by hand. For months past, I have suffered rather severely from an attack of arthritis, which is only now beginning to disappear. With the exhaustion I experienced at the close of the session, I have to save my energies in as many directions as

MEMORANDUM

Ottawa,
January 14, 1936

DR. SKELTON:

This note is from my nephew, John Lay, who graduated from Toronto a couple of years ago, and is at present in the office of the Speaker of the Ontario Legislature.

He is a lad of fine character and ability, and will, I believe, succeed in a post such as that which he has in mind.

I have never encouraged any of my relatives to enter the Public Service, nor have I ever spoken a word on their behalf. I do not intend to depart from this rule. On the other hand, I should not like to have any one of them feel that I was blocking his path.

In the circumstances, I should be very grateful if you would send a communication yourself to John Lay, indicating just what the opportunities are in the direction he has in mind, and what will be required in the way of preparation and examination before his wishes can be carried out.

Kindly return the attached letter.

Dear Mr. Lay,

The Prime Minister tells me that you are interested in the possibility of an opening in the Canadian External Affairs Service. I am very glad to know that, as I have very pleasant recollections of our meeting some years ago when you were about to take up your naval duties in England.

Entrance to the Canadian External Affairs Service has, with the exception of the initial year of the establishment of our Legations, always been effected through competitive examinations held by the Civil Service Commission. Successful candidates are appointed as vacancies occur to posts as Third Secretary; those so appointed are eligible as opportunity permits for promotion to the higher grades of Second Secretary, First Secretary and Counsellor. The ranking of candidates depends on their standing in three tests -

1. A written examination consisting of an Essay in English or French to test the candidate's command of his mother tongue, and papers on Current International Affairs and two or more options chosen as a rule from International Law, Economics, Political Science and Canadian Constitutional Law.
2. A grading of the candidate's education and any experience considered useful in the Service.

King, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie (MG 26 J 7 volume 19) Lay family - Correspondence 1934-1942

National Archives of Canada
Archives nationales du Canada

3. An oral test to judge of the candidate's general grasp of affairs and his facility in personal contacts.

The Department is represented in the tests. The last competition was held about two years ago. Some hundred young Canadians wrote in Canada, England and France, of whom some twenty made the written tests and ten or twelve the oral test. Of these successful candidates three have thus far been appointed.

I enclose a copy of the Civil Service Commission's notice of the last competition, and a set of the papers then set.

I do not know when the next competition will be held, as that will depend on governmental policy as to the expansion of the Service, or upon changes in the existing staff.

I understand you can speak French and Spanish. Could you give me particulars of your training in these languages, and the extent of your command of them, both as to writing and as to speaking.

If you will call in any time you are in Ottawa, I shall be glad to talk over the matter with you further.

Yours sincerely,

O.D.Skelton

Dear Mr. Purvis:

First of all, let me thank you again for your kindness in coming to Ottawa on Saturday afternoon for the purposes of the talk which Mr. Dunning, Mr. Rogers and I had the privilege of having with you.

I hope I did not take undue advantage of your courtesy in making mention of my nephew, John Lay.

My nephew came to Ottawa only a week ago to talk with Dr. Skelton, Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, with regard to a post in the diplomatic service. This, I told both Dr. Skelton and my nephew, would not be possible so long as I was at the head of the Government. To avoid all possible suspicion of political influence, I have had to close so many doors of opportunity, which seemed to present themselves to the mind of my nephew, that I have felt it was up to me to try and assist him in finding an opening in some business enterprise which could not be held to be in any way associated with government.

My nephew's name is John Legge Lay. His father, Harry M. Lay, was for forty years a manager of one of the Banks of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Mr. Harry Lay is a son of the late Horatio Nelson Lay, C.B., who, with Lord Elgin, negotiated the first commercial treaty between China and Britain, and was responsible for the original organization of the Customs Service of China. Mr. Lay's mother was a daughter of Dr. Legge, who was Professor of Oriental Languages at Oxford.

John Lay graduated from the University of Toronto in June, 1934. During his under-graduate studies, he specialized in modern languages, having in view either commercial or diplomatic service, with possible association with foreign countries.

Mr. Lapointe, who met John in Quebec and at the University, told me that he had been impressed with his ability to converse in French.

Since graduation, he has been looking about for some suitable opening. He spent part of one year as a teacher at Ridley College, and, when the change of government came in Ontario, secured a post in the office of the Speaker. ~~This position, which he hoped from the beginning might be only temporary, he is anxious to relinquish.~~ I knew nothing of this appointment until I saw mention of it in the press. I then immediately expressed my regret that, even thus remotely, young Lay had secured a position which some might contribute to political influence on my part.

I am writing young Lay today to tell him that you have kindly said that, when you are in Toronto, you will ask him to come and have a talk with you. His Toronto business address is: C/o the Speaker's Office, Parliament Buildings - Telephone: Adelaide 7053. His residence address is: 96 Walmer Road, - Telephone: Kingsdale 0550. Should it better suit your convenience to have Lay come and see you himself at any other place, I should be glad to arrange this at any time, or he himself would do so, I am sure, upon receiving a telegram from you.

In writing Lay, I am emphasizing the fact that he must not expect more from an interview than a possible word of advice. He understands how difficult it is for anyone at this time to find positions of any kind.

I trust you will not allow my word to you to cause you any inconvenience or a sense of the remotest kind of obligation. Unless young Lay is able to make it wholly apparent that he is the type of person that is being sought for, for some particular work, neither he not I would wish to have him considered at all.

With renewed thanks for your kindness in permitting me to speak to you on a matter so immediately personal,

Believe me,

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Miss Gates:

I was very sorry to miss you and John when you called on me when I was in Toronto for Percy Parker's funeral. This is the first moment I have had in which to acknowledge the very kind letters which I found from John and yourself on my return to the car, and also the box of candy which accompanied them.

I was sorry that the Sunday you were in Ottawa I was so greatly fatigued, and unable to give much time or thought to anyone or anything. The strain, for many months past has been very great, and it is only by taking advantage of Sundays as a day for complete rest that I manage to get through at all. That you enjoyed your visit to Laurier House, notwithstanding the little courtesy I was able to extend to John and yourself, has relieved my mind very much. I must confess that my mind was greatly relieved as well when I learned that you and John had reached Toronto without any mishap before Easter Sunday was over.

I have been enjoying the chocolates almost every evening since they were received, and sharing, occasionally, a part of one with Pat. We both send our warmest thanks to you for this very acceptable gift.

With kindest remembrances and all good wishes,

My dear Ralston:

It is extremely kind of you to have had in mind the conversation I had with you concerning my nephew, John Lay. I enclose herewith a memorandum regarding Lay's educational and other qualifications, together with his Toronto address.

I think you will be favourably impressed with young Lay when you meet him, but let me emphasize again how I hope you will not permit your regard for myself, or any expressed interest I might have in my sister's children, to influence the judgment of yourself, or of any of your friends, with respect to having Lay taken on in any post for which he otherwise would not appear to be well and wholly qualified.

With kind regards,

My dear Mr. King,

I have your letter of June 12th and regret that I do not appear to be more active in connection with helping, if I can, to find something for John Lay.

I have discussed his possibilities with the executives of two concerns, but I found that I did not have sufficient information. Your letter and memo give me just what I want.

I am going to Toronto tomorrow night and have written John telling him to be ready for a telephone message from me

CONDITIONS

Sec. 1. The Carrier of any of the goods herein described shall be liable for any loss thereof or damage thereto except as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 2. In the case of shipments from one point in Canada to another point in Canada, or where goods are shipped under a joint tariff, the Carrier issuing this bill of lading, in addition to its other liability, hereunder, shall be liable for any loss, or damage, or injury to su ch goods from which the other Carrier is not by the terms of this bill of lading relieved, caused by or resulting from the act, neglect or default of any other Carrier to which such goods may be delivered in Canada, or under such joint tariff or over whose line or lines such goods may pass in Canada or under such joint tariff the onus of proving that such loss was not so caused or did not so result being upon the Carrier, issuing this bill of lading. The Carrier issuing this bill of lading shall be entitled to recover from the other Carrier, on whose line or lines the loss, damage, or injury to the said goods shall have been sustained the amount of such loss, damage, or injury as it may be required to pay hereunder, as may be evidenced by any receipt, judgment or transcript thereof. Nothing in this section shall deprive the holder of this bill of lading or party entitled to the goods of any remedy or right of action which he may have against the Carrier issuing this bill of lading or any other Carrier.

Sec. 3. The Carrier shall not be liable for loss, damage, or delay to any of the goods herein described caused by the act of God, the King's or public enemies, riots, strikes, defect, or inherent vice in the goods, or the act or default of the shipper, or owner; for differences in weights of grain, seed, or other commodities caused by natural shrinkage or discrepancies in elevator weights when the elevators are not operated by the Carrier, unless the weights are evidenced by Government certificate; the authority of law or by quarantine. For loss, damage, or delay, except where cartage is to be performed by the Carrier or its agents, caused by fire occuring after forty-eight hours (exclusive of legal holidays) or in the case of bonded goods seventy-two hours (exclusive of legal holidays) after written notice of the arrival of said goods at destination or at port of export (if intended for export and not covered by a through bill of lading) has been sent or given, the Carrier's liability shall be that of warehouseman only. Except in case of negligence of the Carrier (and the burden of proving freedom from such negligence shall be on the Carrier), the Carrier shall not be liable for loss, damage or delay occuring while the goods are stopped and held in transit upon the request of the party entitled to make such request. When in accordance with general custom, on account of the nature of the goods, or at the request of the shipper, the goods are transported in open cars, the Carrier (except in case of loss or damage by fire, in which case the liability shall be the same as though the goods had been carried in closed cars) shall be liable only for negligence, and the burden of proving freedom from such negligence shall be on the Carrier.

Sec. 4. No Carrier is bound to transport said goods by any particular train or vessel, or in time for any particular market or otherwise than as required by law, unless by specific agreement endorsed hereon. Every Carrier in case of physical necessity shall have the right to forward said goods by any railway or route between the point of shipment and the point of destination; but if such diversion be from a rail to a water route the liability of the Carrier shall be the same as though the entire carriage were by rail.

The amount of any loss or damage for which any Carrier is liable shall be computed on the basis of the value of the goods at the place and time of shipment under this bill of lading (including the freight and other charges if paid, and the duty if paid or payable and not refunded) unless a lower value has been represented in writing by the shipper or has been agreed upon or is determined by the classification or tariff upon which the rate is based, in any of which events such lower value shall be the amount to govern such computation; whether or not such loss or damage occurs from negligence.

When under the terms of the classification of special reduced tariffs, the goods are carried at owner's risk, such conditions are intended to cover only such risks as are necessarily incidental to transportation and shall not relieve the Carrier from liability for any loss, damage or delay which may result from any negligence or ommission of the Carrier, its agents or employees and the burden of proving freedom from such negligence or ommissions shall be on the Carrier.

Notice of loss, damage or delay must be made in writing to the Carrier at the point of delivery, or to the Carrier at the point of origin, within four months after delivery of the goods, or in case of failure to make delivery, then within four months after a reasonable time for delivery has elapsed. Unless notice is so given the Carrier shall not be liable.

Any Carrier or party liable on account of loss of or damage to any of said goods, or reimbursing to the insured the premiums paid in respect thereof shall have the full benefit of any insurance that may have been effected upon or on account of said goods so far as this shall not avoid the policies or contracts of insurance.

Sec. 5. Grain in bulk consigned to a point where the Carrier has an elevator or warehouse, or where there is a public or licensed elevator or warehouse, may be there delivered and placed with other grain of the same kind and grade without respect to ownership: Provided that this shall not apply to a point of final delivery if it is otherwise expressly noted hereon, unless the grain is not promptly unloaded after written notice of arrival has been sent or given to the person named herein. Grain so delivered shall be subject to a lien for elevator charges in addition to all other charges hereunder.

Sec. 6. Goods not removed by the party entitled to received them within forty-eight hours (exclusive of legal holidays) or in the case of bonded goods, within seventy-two hours (exclusive of legal holidays) after written notice has been sent or given may be kept in car, station, or place of delivery or warehouse of the Carrier, subject to a reasonable charge for storage and to the Carrier's responsibility as warehouseman only, or may at the option of the Carrier (after written notice of the Carrier's intention to do so has been sent or given), be removed to and stored in a public or licensed warehouse at the cost of the owner and there held at the risk of the owner and without liability on the part of the Carrier, and subject to a lien for all freight and other lawful charges, including a reasonable charge for storage.

Goods in carloads shipped from a private siding or a station, wharf, or landing, where there is no duly authorized agent, shall be at the risk of the owner until the car is lifted or bill of lading is issued by the Carrier, and thereafter, shall be at the risk of the Carrier. Goods in carloads destined to a private siding or station, wharf or landing, where there is no duly authorized agent, shall be at the risk of the Carrier until placed on the delivery siding.

All goods shall be subject to necessary cooperage and baling at owner's cost.

Sec. 7. No Carrier shall be bound to carry any documents, specie, or any articles of extraordinary value not specifically rated in the published classification or tariffs unless a special agreement to do so (the duty of obtaining such special agreement to be on the Carrier when the nature of such goods is disclosed herein) and a stipulated value of the articles are endorsed hereon. If such goods are carried without a special agreement and the nature of the goods is not disclosed hereon the Carrier shall not be liable for any loss or damage thereto.

Sec. 8. The owner or consignee shall pay the freight and all other lawful charges accruing on said goods, and if required, shall pay the same before delivery. If upon inspection it is ascertained that the goods shipped are not those described in this bill of lading, the freight charges must be paid upon the goods actually shipped, with any additional penalties lawfully payable thereon.

Sec. 9. Except in case of diversion from rail to water route, which is provided for in Section 4 hereof, and except as provided hereafter, if all or any part of said goods is carried by water over any part of said route, such water carriage shall be performed subject to the liabilities, limitations and exemptions provided by statute and to the conditions contained in this bill of lading not inconsistent with such statute or this section, and subject also the condition that no carrier or party in possession shall be liable for any loss or damage resulting from the perils of the lake, sea, or other waters; or from explosion, bursting of boilers, or breaking of shafts not arising from the negligence of the Carrier, or from any latent defect in hull, machinery, or appurtenances or from collision, stranding or other accidents of navigation or from prolongation of the voyage. And any vessel carrying any or all of the goods here described shall be at liberty to call at intermediate ports, to tow and be towed, and assist vessels in distress and to deviate for the purpose of saving life or goods.

The term "water carriage" in this section shall not be construed as including lighterage or car-ferriage across rivers, or in lake or other harbors, and the liability for such lighterage or car-ferriage shall be governed by the other sections hereof.

If the goods are being carried under a tariff which provides that any Carrier or Carriers party thereto shall be liable for loss from perils of the sea then as to such Carrier or Carriers the provisions of this section shall be modified in accordance with the provisions of the tariff which shall be treated as incorporated into the conditions of this bill of lading.

Sec. 10. Every party, whether principal or agent, shipping explosives or dangerous goods without previous full written disclosure to the Carrier or its agent of their nature, shall be liable for all loss or damage caused thereby and such goods may be warehoused at owner's risk and expense, or destroyed without compensation.

Sec. 11. Any alteration, addition or erasure in this bill of lading shall be signed or initialed in the margin by an agent of the Carrier issuing the same, and if not so signed or initialed shall be without effect, and this bill of lading shall be enforceable according to its original tenor.

Dear Sir,-

With reference to your letter of the 24th of March, I am advised by the Naval Dockyard at Esquimalt, B.C., that these lanterns were shipped by C.N.R. on March 23rd.

I enclose a shipping notice for the above which I have just received.

Will you kindly tell Mr. King that I am very sorry there has been such a delay, and that I hope they eventually arrive in good condition and are more or less what he wanted.

I am,

Dear Dr. Simpson:

I was pleased to receive this morning your letter of October the 12th.

I was also much pleased to see by the morning paper that you were retaining the portfolio of Education, which you have filled so admirably during the last three years. I know how greatly Mrs. Lay and Mr. Lay and the members of their family share my pleasure at your re-election.

With best of wishes for the future, and with kindest regards,

My dear Prime Minister:

Knowing your great interest in a suitable business connection for John Lay, I send you his note to me, received this morning. Evidently he is considering offers from Massey-Harris and Canadian General Electric pending his interview with Ontario Paper Company. There would appear to be every reason to believe that he will be well established shortly.

Dear Mr. Howe -

I wish to thank you very sincerely for arranging for a very pleasant and profitable interview for me with Mr. Duncan, and for all the trouble for you that it must have entailed. Mr. Duncan has offered to take me on, at a slight sacrifice from the salary I at present am receiving, and give me an opportunity to learn the business thoroughly, from the factory up. I would be given all sorts of opportunities to show what I could do, and would be pushed as fast as I was able to advance. The prospects for advancement appeared to me to be pretty excellent, with the foreign field particularly in mind. I left him with the suggestion that I come home and think it over for a day or so, before giving him any decision. With so many ways opening up at the same moment, I hardly know what to decide. One of the possibilities is with the Canadian General Electric. All three companies seem to present possibilities.

Very many thanks again for your troubles on my behalf. I shall let you know the outcome as soon as I come to a decision.

Yours faithfully,

My dear Howe:

In returning my nephew's letter, -- which I enclose herewith, may I again thank you, not less on my own behalf than his, for the good offices in bringing him in touch with Mr. Duncan of the Massey-Harriss Company, and also for having had in mind other possible openings.

I am hoping that as a result of further conversation young Lay may have with Mr. Duncan, he may find the opportunity of future advancement sufficient to cause him to incur, for a while, the present financial sacrifice which, I understand from him, it will be necessary meanwhile for him to make. Having on more than one occasion prevented his acceptance of any government position, notwithstanding that what he regarded as an attractive opening or two, had come, apart altogether from any influence on my part, and, indeed, wholly without my knowledge, has caused me to feel a certain responsibility for his future - a responsibility not lessened by the circumstance

Personal. Nov. 25th, 1937.

Dear Mr. King:

Thanks for your very kind note of November 3rd in the matter of John Lay.

I spent yesterday in Toronto, and saw Mr. Duncan, who told me that, as Lay had written to say that he was having some difficulty about deciding to make a change involving a reduction in salary, Duncan had removed that difficulty by offering to start him with Massey-Harris at his present salary.

Mr. Duncan stated he was very favourably impressed with young Lay, and expressed the belief that he could be trained rapidly for a responsible position.

My own feeling is that Massey-Harris offers the type of work that will interest Lay and encourage him to seek advancement. I know that one difficulty, before Mr. Duncan was placed in charge, was lack of capable direction at head office, and that there is every opportunity for advancement for properly qualified men.

I sincerely hope that you will have a very pleasant holiday, and look forward to your return.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Mr. King:

I received with a great deal of pleasure your letter of January 3rd, dealing with your nephew, Mr. John Lay, and I want to assure you that you are in no way indebted to me for having taken this young man into our organization, because I am always on the look-out for men of good education and experience to bring into our Company. I was therefore delighted to give your nephew an opportunity when my friend, Mr. Howe introduced him to me.

I believe that the future of all large enterprises, such as ours, depends primarily on the quality of the personnel which they are successful in gathering around them, and I look upon it as an important part of my job and responsibility to gather around me young men on whose shoulders the responsibility of this business can rest in years to come.

We are putting your nephew through a course of training in the factory which lasts six months. It is hard work and no doubt very different to what he has been accustomed to, but I know from my own personal experience that it is of great value, and I am sure from what I am told of the way he has started out that he will make a success of it.

With kind personal regards, and all good wishes, I remain

Dear Mr. Duncan:

Replying to your inquiry regarding John Lay,

I beg to advise that this young man has been working in our Service Dept. since being employed by this Branch. He has acquired considerable knowledge of service work on our general line of machines and, during the past month, he has been working on Combines. He has been out on the territory erecting and starting these machines.

I am pleased to advise that Mr.Lay has been making excellent progress in this line of work. He has lots of ambition and is very quick to learn. He has a very pleasing disposition, gets along real well with the men with whom he is working and also with our farmer customers.

We intend to keep Mr. Lay on Combine service work in the country until harvest is completed.

Yours very truly,

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King -

Knowing how interested you naturally are in the progress which your nephew is making in this Company, I am attaching to this letter one which I have just received from the Manager of our Ontario Branch in response to my enquiry.

I should like to add to it that I am very well pleased indeed with the progress which your nephew is making. He has now completed his period of training in the factory, and has been doing experting work in the country during the last few weeks. When I was in London the day before yesterday, I was very glad indeed to hear him well spoken of by our local Branch Manager.

None of the men with whom he is working have any idea of his connection with yourself, and their judgement of his work can, therefore, be looked upon as entirely unbiased.

I am very glad indeed that John Lay has joined our Organization. We are always on the lookout for young men of promise who are willing to work their way up in the organization and who are qualified to do so with success, and I really believe that your nephew is going to take advantage of the opportunities which are being given him.

OFFICE OF THE DEPUTY MINISTER OF NATIONAL DEFENCE

PRIVATE AND CONFIDENTIAL

MEMORANDUM

THE HONOURABLE THE MINISTER

The Department of Education of the Province of Ontario has now reported the marks obtained by Mr. H.M. Lay, a candidate for entrance to the Royal Military College, which unfortunately indicate that he has failed to obtain junior matriculation standing.

From the attached list, you will note that he has failures in Latin Authors and Latin Composition, which failures reduce the subjects passed below the necessary minimum number. The marks obtained in Algebra and Geometry, which are compulsory subjects, are also low, being just over a pass. This does not affect the situation except that in competition with other candidates, they materially reduce the average and would lessen the chances for Mr. Lay's recommendation by the Board had he passed in all subjects.

R.M.C. Regulation 36 reads, in part, as follows: "To be eligible for selection for admission to the College, a candidate must have obtained a "pass" standard in the matriculation examinations of any Province in Canada or of any University approved by the Minister".

This information which I now respectfully submit as rendering Mr. Lay ineligible for admission is regretted exceedingly, please.

Dear Mr. Henry:

On July 8th, the Prime Minister addressed a private note to Mr. Mackenzie, asking for a report on the application by Harry Lay, Jr., for admission to Royal Military College.

A report has come forward, in the Minister's absence, today, of which I enclose a copy for the Prime Minister's information.

It has not been the policy of the Minister to interfere with the rankings given by the Board of Selection, and in the present case, Mr. Mackenzie will not likely return to Ottawa prior to the opening of the College. If any further representations are to be made in this matter, I think I would have to take them up by telephone with the Minister at Vancouver.

Dear Mr. Duncan:

I am sorry not to have had an earlier opportunity of thanking you for your very kind letter of July 29th, and its enclosure. After my return to Ottawa from Toronto, at the time of the Canadian Crops Reunion, one obligation followed so closely upon the heels of another that, until today, I have had little or no chance for anything in the way of personal correspondence.

It was indeed kind of you to permit me to see the letter from Mr. McAllister, Manager of the Ontario Branch, and to write me as you did of John Lay. I am delighted to know that he has made good in the way he has, and that he gives promise of being the right man in the right place.

I was visiting my sister, Mrs. Lay, and her husband, on Friday afternoon last, and I took with me your letter and its enclosure, to permit Mr. and Mrs. Lay to read them. Naturally, they were much delighted to know that their boy had measured up as he had.

It would seem that John has found just the kind of work to which, from the time of his entering university, he had been looking forward, and for which, while there, he sought to prepare himself. I shall be greatly surprised if you do not find him equal to such further opportunities as may come his way.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

My nephew, Harry Lay, Jr., of Barrie, Ontario, is, I understand, very anxious to get into the Air Service on a short service commission. I also understand that any application must be supported by character references.

I, of course, know my nephew intimately. I have followed his development from year to year with the closest interest and attention. I have had only the highest admiration for his character year after year as it has developed and revealed itself. His habits are all that could be desired in any young man. He neither drinks nor smokes, and his moral character is exemplary. In the community in which he lives he is generally recognized as outstanding among the younger men.

For some time, his heart has been very much in the national service, in one of the defence forces of Canada, particularly the Air Force. This, I believe, is an inherited desire and aptitude. His father, Mr. H. M. Lay, comes of a family which has a long and honourable record in the defence forces of the United Kingdom. His grandfather, on his mother's side, (my father) was a member of the volunteer forces of Canada at the time of the Fenian Raid. His father before him came to Canada with a detachment of the Royal Horse Artillery from Scotland, in the thirties, and served in the Canadian Rebellion of 1837-38. Lay's maternal grandfather, W. L. Mackenzie, also came of a family which had a long and highly honourable record of military service. Mackenzie's readiness to defend the cause of freedom, as he saw it, with his life, was also evident in his part in the Rebellion of 1837-38.

If given a commission, I believe young Lay would do honour to any service of which he might become a member.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

I received a visit the other day from a young man by the name of Edward A. Pickering, who I understand was your Private Secretary for a number of years. He came to see me in connection with his desire to find a position in private industry, and if possible, with our Company.

I told him I did not believe that his best interests would be served by joining a company such as ours at the present time unless he were willing to go through a period of apprenticeship similar to that undertaken by your nephew, John Lay. I understand, however, that he feels his obligations would not permit him to accept a position with our Company on this basis.

It is just possible, of course, that in view of our probable increased activities in connection with war supplies, positions may be open which do not require the same experience in our business as those available at the present time. Therefore, I have taken note of Mr. Pickering's application for future reference.

Meanwhile, I should appreciate it very much if you could have one of your secretaries write me in connection with Mr. Pickering's services in your Department, and if possible state what you thought of his ability. This information will naturally be kept strictly confidential.

I should like to take this opportunity to tell you that your nephew has made a very excellent impression on our organization. He has gone through a thorough period of training, and although the work has often been hard, and probably discouraging at times, he has acquitted himself splendidly in the various positions which he has occupied. Our Sales Manager feels that he has an excellent future in this Company.

What is particularly gratifying in connection with John Lay is that he has done all this entirely on his own merit. I asked him when he came here to say nothing of his relationship to you, and I, on my side, have been careful to refrain from any mention of it.

I had arranged to send him to France toward the end of this month, but unfortunately the war has changed our plans. For the present he will either stay in the West or be brought back to Ontario, and if the latter, probably to Toronto, where I hope we can increase his field of activity.

So frequently, trials which we give to men who come into our organization with equipment similar to that of John Lay's, do not work out very well, and it is a matter of great satisfaction to the writer and no little encouragement, to find men who have joined our organization doing as well as your nephew has.

I have no doubt that you are very busy these days, but I hope you are standing the strain without injury to your health.

I was glad to see from a picture of Charlie Dunning in the paper the other night, that

Dr. Roy Simpson
Hospital for Sick Children
67 College Street
Toronto, Ontario

Dear Doctor Simpson:

I received the following wire this morning, which I expected yesterday:-

" Doctor John Lawrence University of California Berkeley treats Leukemia by intravenous injection artificially radio activated substances on experimental basis only research supported in part by National Cancer Institute suggest you communicate directly with Lawrence if you desire for possible experimental therapy your patient in Berkeley stating reference by me stop"Signed Thomas Parran.

I immediately telephoned to Mr. Heeney in the Prime Minister's Office, and he requested me to telephone your doctors in the Hospital for Sick Children. I got in touch with Doctor Olford and he wrote down the telegram in full, I think, as quoted above. I tried to persuade him to have you, as a result of my discussion with Mr. Heeney, discuss the matter with the child's father, and if he so desires, that you telephone long distance to Doctor John Lawrence, University of California, Berkeley, and discuss the matter with him. Doctor Harrison, Head of the Hygienic Institute of the United States Public Health Services, led me to believe, over the telphone, that they had not had any encouraging results but I think that I would approach Doctor Lawrence with an open mind and have him tell you directly.

I read the telegram as requiring the child to be removed to Berkeley, California, but this may not be intended.

Very cordially yours,

R.E. Wodehouse, M.D.
Deputy Minister

Dear Dr. Wodehouse:

Mr. Heeney has told me how helpful you have been in attempting to locate the special treatment for leukemia, of which my nephew, Mr. John Lay, had heard, and which he thought might be of assistance in the case of his little son.

I should like you to know how deeply I appreciate all that you have done, and even though it would now appear that the treatment in question is unlikely to give much ground for hope, it will be a comfort to the young parents to know that

MEMORANDUM

November 29th, 1939.

Confidential

For the Prime Minister:

Dr. Wodehouse, the Deputy Minister of Pensions and National Health, has been most helpful and has taken a great deal of trouble in trying to trace the origin of the special treatment for leukemia, of which Mr. John Lay spoke to me over the long distance telephone, on Saturday afternoon last.

Dr. Wodehouse has communicated with the U. S. Public Health Authorities and has finally traced, I think, the source of the report to which Mr. Lay referred. He has also passed this information on to Dr. Roy Simpson, who is attending Mr. Lay's child. The result is not very encouraging.

-- I am attaching a copy of a letter which Dr. Wodehouse wrote yesterday to Dr. Simpson concerning the treatment.

In case the Prime Minister would like to drop a note of thanks to Dr. -- Wodehouse, I am attaching a short draft, for approval or revision.
