

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., NOV. 3, 1916.

Editorial Brevities.

In a recent issue we referred to conditions at the Kentville jail. Since then another prisoner held for a serious offence has made his escape. It certainly looks as though no investigation should be held. The jail has cost and is costing the people of this county a lot of money, and it seems only reasonable that they should demand that it be of some use.

English As Tea-Drinkers.

WHY THE CUSTOM HAS GROWN IN A FEW YEARS.

One remarkable feature of English domestic life has been the increase in tea-drinking. In 1876 the consumption of tea per head of the population in the United Kingdom was four and a half pounds. In 1915 it was six and three quarters pounds. The increase has been all to the good from the point of view of the nation's sobriety. It represents a real change in habit. Formerly it was customary for business men to dine a bargain over a glass of wine or ale. Now this custom is far more honored, in the breach than in the observance. In busy cities tea is the beverage. The clerk, the foreman, the operative, the working woman, all drink tea, greatly to the advantage of health and pocket.

The great increase in the consumption of tea is very largely due to the efforts of British planters in India. Formerly all tea came from China. Fortunately, however, it was discovered that the tea shrub is a native of Assam, one of the Indian provinces. Energetic Britons started planting in Assam. The present-day Indian planter is a very different individual from the luxurious gentleman of Trim Cingle's Log and the romances of Marryat. His life is one of assiduous toil, sweetened by all too brief rough. Luxury and extravagance are very far from being inevitable concomitants of his existence.

In Darjeeling or Kotagiri he enjoys that sweet half-English air of which the poet sings. In the Terai, which stretches at the foot of the Himalayas he has to contend against all the foibles of a fearful climate. Always and everywhere he is the same cheery and resolute fellow facing with equanimity alike the risks of disease, the difficulties inseparable from the management of native labor and the many plant diseases which are the enemies of all cultivation in the tropics.

The pioneer planter had before them the task of reclaiming those jungle wastes of repelling their fertile extravagance of vegetation by well ordered gardens, of repopulating scanty and fever-infested by larger numbers of orderly and industrious workers from other provinces. The planters are men conversant with modern science, and use ingenious machinery well adapted to the purpose it serves. Large gardens, carefully planted, are cultivated by experts. After plucking, the leaf undergoes many processes. It is withered to condense the sap. It is rolled to squeeze the juice on to the surface. It is oxidized to develop the flavor and aroma. It is fired to dry. It is packed in clean, lead-lined, air-tight chests.

All these processes are performed by clean automatic machinery. Thus the tea from India is pure and free from all contaminating admixture. Coming from healthy, well-matured plants, they contain all the essential elements in rich abundance.

Childhood Ailments.

Childhood ailments in most cases come through some derangement of the stomach or bowels. Baby's Own Tablets have been proved by thousands of mothers to be the greatest medicine known for the cure of these ailments, simply because they regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach. Concerning them Mrs. Napoleon Lambert, St. Ignace, Que. writes: "Baby's Own Tablets are excellent. I am well pleased with their use." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Williams Co., Brockville, Ont.

During the night of Oct. 26th ten German destroyers attempted a raid on cross channel transports. These were, however, unsuccessful in their mission, two being sunk, and the others driven off. One British transport, the Queen, was sunk. She was carrying no troops at the time and her crew was saved. One torpedo boat destroyer was disabled and taken in tow, afterwards grounded. Another boat missing, nine of her crew being rescued, as well as the men of disabled destroyer.

Among the possessions of the Maine Historical Society is a collection of passes issued to vessels engaged in the foreign trade by presidents of the United States, beginning in 1798. Besides Washington, these passes have the signatures of Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, Martin Van Buren and John Tyler.

HAVE YOU BEEN SICK?

Then you realize the utter weakness that robs ambition, destroys appetite, and makes work a burden. For those that struggle and strain that is so essential, nothing has ever equalled or compared with Scott's Emulsion, because its strength-sustaining nourishment invigorates the blood to distribute energy throughout the body while its tonic sharpens the appetite and restores health in a natural, pleasant way. If you are run down, tired, nervous, overworked or lack strength, get Scott's Emulsion today. At any drug store.

A Soldier's Experience.

So many enquirers have come to us as to the condition of Pte. Paul Davidson, reported seriously wounded some time ago, that we are publishing the following extract from a letter received from him this week:—

I have been trying to save all my strength until I got properly started but now I am getting on fine, have quite an appetite. While I think of it I'll tell you what I get to eat. Breakfast, two scrambled eggs, toast and milk; dinner, mashed potatoes and butter (baby fashion) and half a chicken; supper, some sort of jelly, toast and milk. As an extra about nine at night I have another glass of milk, and between times I have all the grapes, bananas and apples I can eat.

Now I'll try to tell you all about it and how it happened. On the 28th of August we took train at Omer and travelled all that night and till noon the next day. By saying we took train I mean that we were packed into box cars so tight that we couldn't stretch out. Oh no, soldiers don't ride first class. When we got to our destination we started on a four days march and perhaps it didn't rain! At nights, or rather when we stopped, we were billeted in old barns or houses. Sometimes there was a roof and sometimes there wasn't. The worst day we started at about midnight and marched all night and until four the next afternoon. At noon we rested for a quarter of an hour for tea but it happened that our cooks didn't get five going so we had to go without. Believe me, when I got to that barn (which happened to be a good one) it didn't take me long to get my pack off, pull off my boots and slip on the straw.

On the 1st of September we got to within half a mile of Albert and as there were no billets we slept out. The next day we rested and I visited the town or rather the ruins of the town. An enclosing a post card of the cathedral. The statue is of the Madonna holding the Child out in front of her. It hangs right over the street and the French have a story that when it falls the war will end, but I am afraid it will not for a long while. It was at Albert that the Somme drive started and about seven miles from here I was hit.

On the 7th we went into reserves in what is known as "Chalk Pit". At one time it was Fritz's front line. The next morning we went into supports and in the p. m. relieved the Australians who had made an advance the night before and had been badly cut up. Here the trouble commenced. Fritz was sending over a steady stream of shells and our fellows got it pretty heavy. In some places it was so bad we had to get up and run above the line. One place I thought none of us would get past, he seemed to be getting everyone. After going about a mile we came to the end of the trench and had to take to shell-holes and as we could get no further we spread out, dug in and no time was wasted. I rolled up in my rubber sheet and slept till dark. Along about midnight two other fellows and myself were sent out to patrol. That is go out as far as you dare and get in a shell-hole and watch proceedings.

The next day was quiet. Fritz hadn't seemed to be able to find our range. About seven in the evening word came from the front line that everyone was either dead or wounded and for us to keep a sharp lookout. The first line ways had been in bad condition and we weren't much better. A fellow couldn't go down the trench without jumping over a dozen or 1200 or at least pieces of them. In fact I slept on one poor fellow (an Australian) the first night and thought he was a bundle of clothes till I woke in the morning.

Shortly after this, report came through that I was to be put on sentry to watch for Fritz. What I was supposed to do was to keep strict watch over the top but I thought to myself that was no place for a sane man, so took a peek and then climbed into a little hole that was dug in the side of the trench. No sooner had I done so than a whizz-bang came right down on top of me, causing a wound about the size of one's hand just above my left knee, a small wound on my right thigh and shattering my right knee pretty badly. The stretcher bearer happened to be handy and had hardly dragged me a few yards away before two more came over and caught the fellow who had taken my place on the shoulder and made an end of another fellow who was there. I thought we were all gone for sure but neither he nor I got a scratch. He bound up my wounds and put a rifle on my leg to keep it still and pulled me to a more secluded spot. About midnight a carrying party from another battalion came to carry out the wounded. They carried me about a hundred yards and dropped me three or four times while they were at it, but the trench was so narrow they couldn't get the stretcher any further. They attempted to take me over the top. Got me up O. K. and one of the fellows got up after and no sooner was he up than he got sniped in the arm. This sort of discouraged them and two had it. They took me down again and put me into a sort of dug-out where I slept till morning.

When it got light two went in search of a field-dressing station and assistance; but as they did not return in two hours the remaining two started in an opposite direction. Found Mack who brought four other fellows, and making a flag out of a field dressing fastened to a rifle, put me over the top and carried the stretcher on their shoulders for a mile. We came to a small railway with trucks to carry the wounded, was transferred to an ambulance and taken to Albert. Here I got some nice hot cocoa, went under an anaesthetic and had my leg put in splints. Just came out of chloroform in I got to Panmureville and was at once taken to the operating room, and as my knee was to be badly shattered they had to amputate just above the knee. Over here one sees fellows every where in the same condition and it is not so bad after all. I came out of the anaesthetic about eight that night and although I don't remember much about it, I guess I caused quite a bit of trouble. Was there until the 10th of September and then sent to Bonlogne. Was there two days. Took the boat on the 12th at six o'clock, arrived in Southampton the next morning about eight, and reached Liverpool hospital about eight that night. Since then things have gone on the regular routine. At present have dressings every four hours, day and night. Have two nurses and a sister in the ward in day time and a nurse at night. Have a gramophone and piano in the ward, and so plenty of music. Expected to be here on my back until Christmas and then should be home in a couple of months. My left leg is healing nicely and as you can see by this record my hand is doing well. There is no need to worry for I am out of all danger.

Have made any amount of friends and have my regular visitors who come in about twice a week. Very nice gentlemen by the name of Brown, one of Liverpool's wealthy traders, comes in every second night. He has a car and has promised to take me anywhere I wish to go as soon as I get around. Has also invited me to make his home mine when I get around. I just had my hand dressed and it has all dried up to nothing, and I just have a dry dressing on it. My skin cracks.

Red T Shoes

WHEN you put your foot into shoes that were never intended for you—nature rebels. It doesn't help to have shoes a size or two larger—chafing is just as bad as squeezing. The remedy is to choose from a line that considers the natural needs of the human foot—not just one perfect foot—but all kinds of feet.

Red T Shoes offer comfort, ease, and that true style that follows when your feet are properly fitted, because in the complete line there is probably a last and a style for every pair of feet that enter a shoe store.

Ask your dealer to show you your size in a Red T Shoe.

Wolfville Boy's Letter.

The following is a letter received this week by Mrs. (Rev.) C. P. Wilson from her son Harold, who is serving with the St. F. X. Stationary Hospital, at present in England:

No. 9, St. Hosp.,
Care of Military Hospital,
Bramshott,
England.

Dear Mother:—Here it is Tuesday night, so you will see I am a couple of days behind with my letter this week but as you read on you will ascertain the reason.

Well just after I had written your letter a week ago I received the bunch of papers dated the 9th. I sent you a photo card of a zep, that was destroyed. I hope you will have received it.

This Stationary Hospital is no 'safety first' job. I know of two hospital that have been shelled.

I think you would find it interesting if you would take 'The Lady of the Lake,' read it through and follow it with those post cards I sent you and the books. I will go to Ireland all right if I get a chance. Some of our boys went there and visited the Lakes of Killarney and kissed the Blarney Stone in Blarney Castle.

I suppose college opens by this time. Would like to step in and see the girls and boys. Be sure and write good long letters as it takes them so long to come.

Well, we left Bramshott a week ago today. We were about six hours on the train. This hospital was run by the Imperial Government but since we have taken it over it will be run exclusively by Canadians. It contains about seven hundred beds. There are Australian, Imperial and Canadian patients in it. When we first came here we had our rations from the Army Service Corps and were in big marquees, only seven to a tent with real spring beds; but when we were in Chenton we had eight in a little bell tent. I have been working very hard since I came back from Northampton yesterday afternoon. I haven't had time to write until now. My friend Sloan, from Kentville, is in the officers' mess right next door. No I get an occasional feed from him.

Well, we are in huts for winter quarters now, so let her rain. I happened to go in the officers' cook house today and here was Spiddel, from Kentville, talking to Sloan, so I went in. He is attached as Chaplain to the Provisional Battalion. Claude Smith, Dr. Smith's son, is in the hospital here.

Well, I must tell you why I did not write Sunday. Friday night, about ten o'clock, we were told we were going to Northampton to play Saturday morning, at eleven, we set out for the station with six other players besides our own. We arrived in London, at Waterloo station, and crossed in the tubes just in time to catch the train. Our station here is twenty-five miles from Portsmouth and forty-five miles from London. Northampton is about sixty miles the other side of London. It is a city of one hundred and fifty thousand people, so quite a little place. All the best bands, Coldstream Guards and Scots Guards play there.

When we arrived there was a band at the station to meet us and the streets were lined with twenty thousand people or more. We were taken to the City Hall, where addresses of welcome were read to us, then we were assigned to the different hotels. We stayed at a hotel called the 'Pleasure,' some stayed at the 'Rum,' on 'Shiel Street.' So you see they have funny names over here.

We had free seats at the theatre Saturday night, we played in the park on Sunday afternoon and in the theatre Sunday night. They gave us more addresses and our officers who went with the band responded. We had to leave one piece out on account of a sepp, raid, but fortunately it was near London and one was brought down. We had a fine time there. We were the first bunch of Canadians who were ever there, especially a band. They were certainly fine people. They think the Canadians are all right too.

On the way home we saw Col. Borden on the train. He said the Brigade was on the way over and thought they were coming here. We are here for quite a while, I expect it is only a small place, two miles from the nearest town.

Well, so long, mother dear, for this week. Your loving son,
HAROLD WILSON.

The Proud Lady.

That you, my son, go forth to fight
Is very fair and meet,
And it is I shall be the Proud Lady
When you ride down the street.
There's a nose shall hear me heave a sigh
When you ride down the street.
That you, my son, are stout and brave
No man will dare gainsay,
But it's I must smile with the sword
at my heart.

A Drunkard's History.

No man ever became a drunkard in a day (says the Rev. Curtin in 'The Pioneer'). No man ever set out with the avowed purpose of becoming a drunkard. We point the finger of scorn at the victims of drink and say "Why don't he quit drinking?" If I were he I would take the pledge. You know the most disgusting spot that ever filled a drunkard's grave and thought the acle-fame thing he could boast of being able to take a drink or leave it alone. But the time came when the beast was in vain, for he was helpless in the grasp of that vice. The panther never stole with half the stealth, to make the final leap upon his victim, as does intemperance creep upon its prey.

The human being for whom I have the greatest sympathy is the drunkard. Not that I admire the drivelling, idiotic counterfeits of man. Not that I condone his crime. Not that I can overlook the suffering and grief, and hunger and want he has caused but in his helpless, pitiable condition he needs sympathy and assistance. Strange it is how very often the sun-dial, best-attended of men fall victims their nature so that we call them by no other name than devil. Yet they once felt secure perhaps as they do now, never dreamed that they would lose control, and here they are now, slaves bound hand and foot, ready to be cast into hell.

A Russian Traveller's Testimony.

The Daily Chronicle of December 7, 1915, contains a striking testimony from Mr. J. B. Dane as to the benefits of prohibition in Russia. He says: "I have returned recently from a trip through Russia and Siberia. I can positively state that in no hotel, club, or shop can any spirits, wine or beer of any kind whatever be obtained. There is an impression in Great Britain that the Russian interdiction only applies to vodka, but I can assure you that it applies to every form of alcoholic liquors."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Giving to others does not exhaust our own supply. The Apostles had twelve baskets full of pieces after all the people were fed. It is always so. The more love and sympathy we give out to others the more we have in our own hearts. Showing kindness to those we meet does not empty our own hearts of kindness.—J. R. Miller.

Parcels For Prisoners of War in Germany Must Be Very Strongly Packed.

The Post Office Department has been notified by the British Post Office that many parcels sent from Canada to prisoners of war in Germany are being received in London in a damaged condition, so that frequently they have to be repacked before they can be forwarded to Holland for transmission to Germany. The British Post Office adds that in most cases the damage appears to be due to the fact that parcels were inadequately packed by the senders.

The public are warned, therefore, that parcels for prisoners of war, unless they are very strongly packed, will probably arrive in such a condition as to be of little or no use to the recipients.

Ordinary thin cardboard boxes, such as shoe-boxes and thin wooden boxes, should not be used; nor does a single sheet of ordinary brown paper afford sufficient protection. Even where proper materials are used it is important that the contents should be tightly packed so as not to shake about during transit. The following forms of packing are recommended—

- (1) Strong double cardboard or strawboard boxes. Those made of corrugated cardboard and having lids which completely enclose the sides of the box are the most suitable.
- (2) Tin boxes such as are used for packing biscuits.
- (3) Strong wooden boxes.
- (4) Several folds of stout packing paper.

White Ribbon News.

The British authorities advise that parcels for prisoners of war in Germany must not be wrapped in linen, calico, canvas, or any other textile material.

Parcels posted in Canada for prisoners of war in Germany which have not been adequately packed by the senders will not be forwarded but will be returned to the senders, as the British Post Office has notified the department that parcels which are inadequately packed must be returned to the sender.

How Breeding Tells.

A man had two cows, eight and five years old, which were mother and daughter, and put them in a test. The old cow is a mixture of Short-horn and Hereford, and the sire of the younger cow is a purebred dairy bull. The two cows received the same amount of food. For the month of May the older cow gave 702 1/2 pounds of milk testing 4.5 per cent, and the younger cow gave 597 1/2 pounds of milk testing 6.1 per cent. Valuing butter fat at 20 cents per pound and skim milk at 10 cents per pound, the daughter made $6.14 for the month more than the mother. If the two cows are milked ten months in the year the daughter would bring in an extra $61.40. Of course while it would be hardly possible for the father of the above cows to do as well for the whole ten months as they did for the one spring month it is perfectly reasonable to presume that the proportions would remain the same. The young cow from the dairy sire giving not only more milk but milk of a higher test at no more cost for feed and care than the animal bred by the beef bull!

Nothing Can Compare With It.

Mr. Fred Adams, New Ross, N. S., writes: "I have tried many medicines for coughs and colds but never found anything to compare to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Lucoed and Turpentine. We have had the greatest satisfaction with this medicine for it never fails to relieve a cough and loosen it up."

Breakfast was being partaken of at a seaside boarding house recently, and it was thought that the 'funny man' of the company had expended his anecdotal locquacity, but it was not so.

The irrepressible one raised the cup of tea to his lips, and after taking a little sip laid the cup on a chair beside him.

Wondering what was the matter one of the visitors asked the reason for doing so.

"This was his opportunity," Well, he replied confidentially, "the tea is so weak that I am giving it a rest."

ENGLISH OPIUM FIENDS

Fashionable West End Club Members Induced to Smoke

Opium! The very word conjures up visions of the East and of the extraordinary dreams that the disciples of the drug are said to enjoy. It is in the East (of London) and the West (End), too, that the vice of opium smoking is rampant, says Tit-Bits, and has become so serious a menace, especially to weak-minded, neurotic and hysterical women, that official steps are being taken to root out the evil. The widespread nature of the desire for this terrible narcotic is found in the fact that from the Antipodes comes the request of the Commonwealth Government of Australia to the police authorities in the home country to endeavor to prevent the smuggling of opium into their land. It is asserted that large quantities of the drug have reached Australian ports, bundles of it being hidden by coolies in the coal. The punishment to either import or possess (except for medicinal purposes) of opium is very severe there, and in Great Britain fine and imprisonment is the lot of the keeper of an opium den.

Members of well known West End clubs, and particularly those of a Bohemian character, have been the recipients of "tips" and would often communications from an evidently educated but in the neighborhood of Mayfair who has been offering, under the pledge of secrecy, to receive notes in his "elegantly furnished flat" and to supply them, "amidst luxurious surroundings," with "the fascination of the East in the form of opium smoking." His fees are heavy: $15 to £25 being calmly quoted, with reduction for a "series."

Women, too, are approached in other ways, and it is asserted that a well known actress was only rescued, just in time, from the hold which this vile drug has upon the weak-minded. Private rooms in West End hotels have, it is said, been rented for no other purpose than an opium den, and rumor says that all crevices and openings are plugged and a Chinaman from Limehouse "smuggled" in to prepare the pipes.

Collecting Waste Paper.

Cooperation Very Necessary For Successful Results

Waste paper is a commodity of very low value, and collecting and bringing charges reduce very materially the final return from same. To reduce the expense of gathering to the minimum, the paper should be collected through cooperation of those interested or by local philanthropic or charitable organizations. A head quarters should be established, or collection boxes distributed, where the paper may be left. For shipping, the paper should be put into bales, for which a baling press is necessary. There are many types of press on the market, several of which are portable to secure minimum shipping charges. It is essential that shipments be made in car lots, as the less than car lot rate is much higher. Usually the paper must be shipped to considerable distances to the mill or dealer and adding multi-freights might, if necessary, operate in making up car lots. Apart from the monetary return for saving this wasted material, there is the further incentive of assisting to reduce the demand upon the forests of Canada to supply new material for the ever-increasing requirements of the paper-making industry.

Many Faiths Mingled

Curiously Mixed Marriages in Earl of Mexborough Family

The news of the death of the Earl of Mexborough at Florence revived interest in a remarkable personality and family long noted for its curiously mixed marriages. The Earl, who was in his 72d year, was many years ago converted to Buddhism, a step which caused no little surprise, following as it did the conversion of his father, the faith of Lord Headley. The Earl, whose step-mother was a Jewess, who became a Roman Catholic, his third wife was a Protestant, and his successor, the Hon. John Henry Bavin, his half-brother, is a Roman Catholic, who married the Hon. Margaret Knatchbull-Hugessen, a Protestant.

Spirits' Advice to a Lover

A Birmingham lady, Jessie Evelyn Charlton, was awarded damages for breach of promise against Albert Thomas Taylor, of Edgworth. She said that at Christmas, 1913, Taylor began the study of spiritualism, palmistry, and phenology, and she noticed a change in his conduct. The spirits, she said, had told him he must not marry her.

A girl never has to coax a young man not to spend so much money on her after they are married.

The homelier a man the more his wife trusts him.

APRON FOR BICYCLIST

A lady who does an enormous amount of riding has recently improvised a mackintosh apron which she says serves her excellently when the rain is driving hard in her face. It is just an ordinary waxed apron of single texture, a little deeper than skirt length, and full enough to go three-quarters round the body. She does not use it folds into a very small space, and is carried with the cape, she says. It is light, not cumbersome as one would think because it has plenty of air space at the back, and serves her admirably as a quick fitting garment to keep out heavy rain.

COST OF BAD ROADS

Much Greater Than Cost of Good to Farmers

Farmers have begun to figure the matter of roads a little differently than in former years. When the good roads movement was in its infancy they used to ask themselves, "How much will good roads cost me?" Thanks to the intelligent propaganda of the daily and farm papers, as well as other agencies, farmers are now asking themselves, "How much are bad roads costing me?" According to government experts, the cost of hauling a ton of farm produce a mile varies from seven cents, in localities where fairly hard gravel roads exist, to thirty-five cents per ton in parts of the country where the roads are in bad condition.

On the other hand, in those European countries where hard roads prevail, the cost is as low as nine cents per ton. The United States Department of Agriculture estimated that the total haulage expense to American farmers for a year is approximately $2,000,000. And every dollar comes from the farmer's pocket, for he is the one great producer of agricultural products. And every dollar comes from the farmer's pocket, for he is the one great producer of agricultural products. And every dollar comes from the farmer's pocket, for he is the one great producer of agricultural products.

SWEET CLOVER AS MULCH.

Means Great Gain to Orchardist, Says Experienced Farmer

Writing of sweet clover as a mulch, Wm. Linton, of Aurora, Ont., says: "My experience with sweet clover as an orchard mulch is in complete agreement with the statement made by you that there is a large field for sweet clover to fill, as every farmer who has a field of sweet clover should be a restorative, for the soil is fast becoming depleted of its nitrogen and humus by the other parts of the crop and requires rebuilding. We plowed down an acre when it was three feet high, and another two acres were mowed when it was the same height, leaving the crop on the ground, and allowing it to grow for the second cutting. The results so far are most satisfactory, and we expect these results to continue. The growth of the young trees was exceptionally good. Branches grew from three to four feet. After cutting we were surprised to find how soon it rotted, both root and branch, and became a complete mulch. It covered the ground completely and gave a large percentage of nitrogen, and with the other clover, the deepening of the soil. From our experience with it we think it a great boon to the orchardist, as well as to the agricultural generally."

Sweet clover was first introduced into the United States in the early part of the 19th century by the settlers from Europe. Little did they think that this home plant, as they called it, would be the savior of the twentieth century, so far as an aid to the wealth of the agricultural industry is concerned. It has been used in a greater area and by a more varied adverse conditions than any other crop known to man. It will grow in the sub-tropics and up to the Arctic Circle, and it matters little whether the soil is heavy or light, sandy clay, or how poor the land is, as long as the land contains a reasonable amount of lime it will thrive, and for either hay or pasture it is excellent.

PREVENTION: BEST CURE

If you want to protect your oat crop from the ravages of rust before you sow it, you must protect your potato crop from the ravages of mealy bug before you plant it. This is the only way to prevent the expenditure of a little money now for such-and-such a medicine later and inconvenience. That it is certainly worth while to get into this expense and trouble when you consider what it means to you in the way of increased income from your crop. If you do not believe it, try it. Sow a part of a field of oats with properly treated seed. The rust will not appear in this part of the field, and figures up what percentage of the crop has been damaged by rust. Do the same thing in the untreated part of the field and figure up the percentage of damage. You will find that the treated part will show a loss of 10 to 15 per cent of the crop, and the untreated part a loss of 25 to 30 per cent.

THE CONNAUGHT TUNNEL

ONE of the greatest of the achievements of the Canadian Pacific Railway is the Connaught Tunnel. This great work—through the lofty Mount Macdonald—among the Selkirk Mountains, is nearly six miles long and double tracked. The excavation has been made at a cost of over $12,000,000 by the great transportation company. But the C.P.R., which has spent from $25,000,000 to $35,000,000 per annum on the development of the West previous to the war, does not even in times of a conflict affecting the greater part of the world, spare expense where the public convenience makes an urgent demand. The opening of the tunnel will greatly facilitate traffic, will open a new route, and will do away with many miles of snow sheds.

The Connaught Tunnel will give the Canadian Pacific the lowest grade of any transcontinental railway tunneling through the Selkirk Mountains. It was bored in less than three years under the supervision of Mr. J. G. Sullivan, Chief Engineer of Western Lines, and it is claimed that no undertaking of similar dimensions was ever completed in such a short time. In the excavation of the tunnel many engineering difficulties had to be overcome. But mighty rocks were blown away by a gigantic mountain crumpled before the advance of human skill. At various points along the pass there is an eighteen inch concrete wall lining.

When His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and party took a trip through the tunnel on July 17th, the Duke expressed in eloquent words the gratification it gave him to be associated with the pioneer work of the Canadian Pacific, and he complimented the company on the splendid strides which it was making in the development of the country. Then His Royal Highness, baptizing the new work, christened it the Selkirk Tunnel. Some weeks later, at the request of Lord Shaughnessy, His Royal Highness consented to have the tunnel called after him. Henceforth it will be named the "Connaught Tunnel," a fitting compliment to the excellent services which the Duke of Connaught gave to the Dominion during his term as Governor-General.
