A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

"Oh, how long it seems," said Maida, with an impatient sigh. "It must seem ages to Carrie, lying there in pain and counting the minutes, the hours. I do not think we have been separated so long before. My sister and I have been more than sisters, we have been all in all to each other—nearly always," she added, as she thought of Heroncourt who had indeed been all in all to her.

"We shall soon be there," said Robert, in a low voice; for as they entered the hut, approached the critical moment, when he should be forced to reveal himself to her in blackest colours as a common abductor, a trickster, and a fraud, his heart momentarily forsook him.

They came in sight of the hut and Maida, with excited exclamation, touched her horse with her heel. It bounded forward and Robert spurred beside her.

"Better dismount here," he said, as they came within a hundred yards of the hut. "I will go and prepare Carrie—it wouldn't do to give her a shock. Do you mind holding the horses?"

"No, no," said Maida; "but be quick, please, I am all in a fever to get to her."

He put the horses' bridles in her hand, stole a glance at her eager, rapt face, and strode to the hut. He found the Reverend Ronald Smythe asleep on a bundle of sheep-skins, and woke him roughly.

"Wake up!" he said. "Wake up and clear out. Get out through the window and go down into the valley. Come to me when I coo-ee. I shall want you to do the job for me that I engaged you for. Wake up, man!"

The Reverend Ronald Smythe rose to his feet, stretched himself elaborately, and yawned.

"Is it a baptism?" he asked.

"Baptism be hanged," replied Robert, roughly. "It's a marriage."

The tramp parson eyed Robert with sudden gravity.

"But that's something serious," he said.

"Marriage is always serious," retorted Robert, sententiously. "What's the matter with you? You don't object? Because, if so, your objections come too late. You'll do what I want, or I'll put a bullet through you. Do what I want, and I'll give you a ten-pound note. Do you understand? I'm Robert Broseley, a man of my word; a few words at that. A ten-pound note—I don't mind making it twenty; you clergy like to be highly paid."

Smythe considered for a moment, then he shrugged his shoulders.

"Where is the lady?" he asked, looking over Robert's shoulder.

"Not! Then why—why did you tell me so?"

"Where is Carrie?" she asked. "I do not see her. She cannot have left the hut, with a sprained ankle. Where is she? How dark it is?"

She went to the fire and raised the burning wood and looked round her; but the illuminating flame showed her no Carrie, and, with the stick with which she had stirred the fire still in her hand, she looked enquiringly at Robert Broseley. The fire-light played on her face and form, giving her a mystic charm which increased his passion. He drew himself up and extended a hand towards her, half in appeal, half in command.

"She is not here," he said.

"Not here?" echoed Maida, with surprise, but still with no fear or suspicion. "I thought you said that she was at the hut? She cannot have left it—with a sprained ankle."

Her eyes sought his with eager, anxious questioning. Her love for Carrie, for the sister whom she supposed to be in pain and perhaps in peril, absorbed her, to the exclusion of any other emotion.

"She is not here," said Robert; "she has not been here. We rode in another direction—she has not been near the hut—there is nothing the matter with her—she has not sprained her ankle."

"Not! Then why—why did you tell me so?"

"This is absurd, Mr. Robert," she said. "You cannot intend to keep me here, to prevent my going back to Milda Wolda. Please let me pass."

She took a step forward. He stood motionless with folded arms.

"Never you mind the lady," said Robert, with suppressed anger and impatience. "You be on the spot when I call to you; and until I call, keep out of sight, mind, or I'll put a bullet through you. Get out of the window, sharp!"

"My dear young friend—" began the Reverend Ronald Smythe; but Robert motioned to wards the window and significantly fingered a revolver which he had concealed under his jumper.

"Get!" he said; and Smythe promptly insinuated himself through the window of the hut and disappeared.

Robert looked round. It was a rough place for his bride. For cooking purposes, Mr. Smythe had made a fire; there was the heap of sheep-skins, a box containing tinned meats and condensed milk, with the usual supply of tea, without which your Australian considers life unfurnished.

But no matter. Maida would soon listen to reason when she found herself completely in his power. He went to her where she was holding the horses.

"She is all right," he said. "I have prepared her. She is in no particular pain; but, of course, she is glad enough that you are here. Give me the horses."

He fastened their bridles to the solitary tree which stood near the hut; and, as he did so, Maida hurried forward and entered the hut. In the gloom, lightened only by the fire, she could distinguish nothing, but she went towards the pile of sheep-skins, saying, gently and encouragingly:

"Carrie, I am come; I am here!"

There was no answer, she felt the sheep-skins with her hand, and, meeting nothing, no warm shape of Carrie, shrank back and looked round her with surprise, but, as yet, with no suspicion. She turned her head and saw Robert Broseley standing in the doorway; his tall, broad figure silhouetted against the waning light.

It was only for a moment that she saw him thus, for he closed the rough door, and, leaning his back against it, folded his arms and regarded her steadily. But, for all his outward calm, his heart was throbbing tumultuously. The man loved her to the best of his ability, with all the force of which he was capable; and not only loved her, but worshipped her with the reverence which his mad passion had overpassed, broken down, so to speak, but which was still there, a latent force.

"Where is Carrie?" she asked. "I do not see her. She cannot have left the hut, with a sprained ankle. Where is she? How dark it is?"

She went to the fire and raised the burning wood and looked round her; but the illuminating flame showed her no Carrie, and, with the stick with which she had stirred the fire still in her hand, she looked enquiringly at Robert Broseley. The fire-light played on her face and form, giving her a mystic charm which increased his passion. He drew himself up and extended a hand towards her, half in appeal, half in command.

Her eyes sought his with eager, anxious questioning. Her love for Carrie, for the sister whom she supposed to be in pain and perhaps in peril, absorbed her, to the exclusion of any other emotion.

I OWE MY HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Washington Park, Ill.—"I am the mother of four children and have suffered with female troubles, backache, nervous spells and the blues. My children's loud talking and romping would make me so nervous I could just tear everything to pieces and I would ache all over and feel so sick that I would not want anyone to talk to me at times. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills restored me to health and I want to thank you for the good they have done me. I have had quite a bit of trouble and worry but it does not affect my youthful looks. My friends say 'Why do you look so young and well?' I owe it all—Mrs. ROBT. STORZ, Moore Avenue, Washington Park, Illinois.

We wish every woman who suffers from female troubles, nervousness, backache or the blues could see the letters written by women made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have any symptom about which you would like to know write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free of charge.

me so? Why did you bring me here? Where is Carrie? You rode out with her this morning."

"Carrie is all right," he said. "I left her in the Western Valley. I gave her the slip. She will ride back to Milda Wolda. She is all right."

"But why—why did you tell me this falsehood? Why have you brought me here?" asked Maida, her eyes wide open in amazement, the colour mounting to her face.

He drew a long breath.

"Can't you guess?" he said, his voice thick and hoarse, his heart throbbing. "You that are so quick, so clever. I brought you here—it was a trick, I own it—I brought you here because I wanted you to myself, that you might listen to me, that you might understand what sort of man I am."

Maida stood perfectly still, one hand holding the fire-stick, the other pressed against her bosom. Even now she did not understand, did not realize the peril in which she stood.

"I don't know what you mean," she said. "Why did we come here? Why did you play this trick upon me? You could have said what you wanted to say to me there—at Milda Wolda."

"And in vain," he said. "You would not have listened to me there, you would have put me off; perhaps, very likely, you would have gone away. I brought you here because here you must listen to me, because we are alone and you cannot give me the slip, cannot ignore me. You have treated me as if I were a boy, as if I were of no account, as if what I said to you, what I told you of my love, was mere child's play. But it wasn't! It was the love of a man, and, like a man, I brought you here, where you are in my power, where you must listen to me and where you must yield to me."

Maida's heart beat fast, the blood seemed to surge to her brain in a burning flood. Not yet could she realize the full significance of her situation. Strangely enough, at that moment her thoughts flew, swallow-like, back to Marston Towers. She saw herself betrothed to Heroncourt, his bride-elect, the wedding-day close at hand, her happiness not only within sight but almost within touch. The intervening past seemed to fade away as an unreal and intangible dream; she was to be married in the coming morn to Heroncourt.

Then the reality of the present swept over her. She had lost Heroncourt forever: she was in this Australian, desolate wild, in this fire-lit hut, at the mercy of this lawless man whose passion for her would know no scruples. She put her hand up to her brow and swept back the soft, dark hair with a gesture of despair. And yet, not of despair, for with her peril her spirit rose to meet it.

"This is absurd, Mr. Robert," she said. "You cannot intend to keep me here, to prevent my going back to Milda Wolda. Please let me pass."

She took a step forward. He stood motionless with folded arms.

"You cannot go, you cannot pass," he said. "Don't you understand? You are in my power. Did you think that my love was so small a thing that it would die out because you said 'no'? You don't know me. I have never loved any woman before, I have never seen any woman worth caring for until I met you. I swear that to you. But when I saw you I knew what women meant, I knew what love was. You've taken up all my life, all my thoughts. I can't live without you. You thought that I had forgotten, that I had given up all thought of you because I was so quiet, because I seemed to take no notice of you. But I've been thinking of you all the time, I've been longing for you."

He took a step towards her and actually went down upon his knees, his big hands extended imploringly.

"Maida, listen to me. I love you, I want you to be my wife, I'll do all I can, all any man can, to make you happy. I can't live without you. Just say that you'll be my wife, that you'll try to love me, and I swear that you shall be happy; you shall have everything that a woman can desire—I am rich, I shall be richer; that house in England—you shall go there, you shall do what you please; I'll be your slave, just a dog to follow you, to obey your wish."

His voice broke and died away in a hoarse, inarticulate murmur.

Maida shrank from him until her back touched the log wall.

"You are mad," she said. "I am sorry—sorry! Remember—remember your mother— Oh, let me go! I will not say a word, I will tell no one. Let me go back to Milda Wolda. I will leave there in the morning, you shall never see me again. You will forget me—you will be sorry that you ever gave a thought— Oh, let me go!"

He rose to his feet and folded his arms again.

"It is you who are mad," he said. "Mad in your pride and coldness. You don't know what love is."

"Oh, do I not?" broke from her quivering lips as she thought of Heroncourt.

"You don't," he said, thickly. "You don't know what sort of a man I am. I have always had my way; I mean to have it now. Come, be sensible. What more do you want? I tell you I am rich. I can give you all you English women want. You shall do what you like, go where you please, when you are my wife. Be sensible. If Carrie were here she'd give you the same advice, say what I say."

"No, no! Oh, Carrie, Carrie!" exclaimed Maida, piteously.

Then she drew herself up and looked at him with sad reproach, with the dignity which womanhood can attain to so easily.

"I cannot give you what you ask," she said. "My heart is not mine. I have never told you—but my great sorrow—there is someone else—someone I can never forget."

The blood surged to his face which had been white up to this moment.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, To-day. An official communication issued by the British headquarters last night reads: Artillery activity on both sides continued in the neighborhood of Ypres; there was no infantry action. Successful raids took place early in the morning in the neighborhood of Lens; we secured a few prisoners and killed many Germans. Our troops entered enemy positions at all the points attacked and after destroying the dugouts and wrecking his defences returned with slight casualties. Hostile artillery has been more active than usual in the Neuport sector. Air work continued yesterday, although bad weather interfered. In the air fighting two German airplanes were brought down and another driven down out of control; none of ours is missing.

LONDON, To-day. Capt. Arthur Stanley Wilson, Conservative Member of Parliament, who was taken off the Greek steamer in the Mediterranean by an Austrian submarine in December, 1915, has been released by the Austrians and is on his way home. Capt. Wilson was accompanied by Colonel H. D. Napier, former British Military Attache at Sofia, when the Greek steamer encountered an Austrian submarine in the Mediterranean. Both men were made prisoners. It was stated at the time that Capt. Wilson was carrying despatches and that they had been seized by the Austrians. A later letter written by Captain Wilson to his sister in London, said that he was able to destroy the despatches before he was captured.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

BERLIN, To-day. The text of the German official statement issued to-day reads: The army of Crown Prince Rupprecht. Unfavorable fighting conditions hindered the development of lively firing activity until the afternoon. It was only during the evening that the artillery duel in Flanders again increased. It remained violent during the night and in some sectors attained the greatest intensity, especially on the coast and from Bixchoote to Follebeke; the infantry did not attack. The English reconnoitering detachment advancing near Hooge was repulsed. In Artois the fire increased on both sides of Lens. Here also the enemy made reconnaissances without results. With other armies the fighting activity was slight. During the evening it rose in several places to the usual intensity. The army of Archduke Joseph: There were successful fighting operations in the wooded Carpathians and in the frontier and mountains of Western Moldavia. We advanced our lines in some sectors and repulsed strong enemy counter attacks. The army of Field Marshal Von Mackensen: The situation is developing favorably. The Russians and Rumanians in the execution of mass attacks sent forward forces into fire with the object of wresting from our troops the large territorial gains won by them yesterday north of Fokshani; all the attacks were repulsed. The enemy suffered heavy and sanguinary losses. The numbers of prisoners increased to fifty officers, 3,300 men, and the booty to 17 guns and more than fifty machine guns and mine throwers.

RUSSIAN REPORT.

PETROGRAD, To-day. The Russian war office statement issued to-day reads: There were fusillades of greater intensity in the direction of Brody and on the Rumanian front south of Aseruth as far as the village of Solka. The enemy conducted a series of attacks of considerable intensity; all were repulsed.

Wonderful Future for Our Fisheries.

Canada Has Hundreds of "Dogger Banks" That Have Not Yet Been Visited by a Steam Trawler.

The latest issue of the London Canadian Gazette contains the following statement from Major Hughie Green: "I predict a wonderful future for the Canadian fisheries," said Major Hughie Green, officer in charge of the fish supplies for the Overseas Canadian army, and the imperial board of trade. Major Green has now arrived in this country with a cargo of fish. All the fish sent over is headed and dressed and packed in 200-lb. cases all ready for the army cook to de-frost and prepare, just as if they were fresh out of the water," said the major. "Three quarters of what is being supplied to the army to-day was never considered worth while before. In the maritime provinces the fishermen have hitherto only brought in such fish as cod, haddock, etc., to sell on shore. All their catches of skate, cusk, pullock and catfish have been thrown back into the water. Now they are bringing in everything they can get, and are receiving almost as large prices for these formerly despised varieties as they do for cod and haddock from the army. There is no doubt but that fishermen will reap great benefits as time goes on from this overseas business that has opened up for him. "Do I think that this trade with Great Britain will be permanent? Let me tell you that if the war were to end to-morrow the British fish industry would not be reorganized for at least five years. So many fishing smacks and trawlers have been lost, and so many fishermen have joined the army and have been killed or wounded, that the trade is at a standstill. Then it will probably be found after the war is over that the British grounds are greatly depleted, and that where formerly there were enormous shoals of fish there are none to-day. "As far as the Canadian frozen fish trade is concerned, it is very probable that it will be as successful as the New Zealand frozen meat business. England is bound to look to Canada for foodstuffs for years to come. What is needed is new and modern methods of production, the same as they have in the old country. The British admiralty was able to take some 6,000 trawlers and boats from the fisheries for naval uses. Contrast this with the four modern steam trawlers in use in Canada. And yet the fishing area in Canada in comparison with the British Isles is like Lake Superior to a duck pond. In 1914 the government statistics show that the money value of the Dogger Bank yearly amounted to $25,000,000, which is only one of many British fishing grounds. "In Canada we have hundreds of Dogger Banks that have never had a steam trawler near them. For the past 20 years Canada has practically stood still as regards her fisheries. What we need are steam trawlers and cold storage houses along the coast to take care of the fish as soon as it leaves the boats. The Canadian fisheries should produce $100,000,000 annually instead of the $34,000,000 being produced to-day."

Truck Horse Backs Down Dry Dock.

At 10 a.m. to-day a fine truck horse owned by Mr. William Field, of the Torbay Road, took fright at a shunting engine at the dry dock this morning and before the animal could be checked it backed over the edge of the dock and slid down to the bottom. The animal was attached to a long cart on which were three casks of salt that were to be put on board the S. S. Thetis. Another truckman also named William Field, cousin of the owner of the horse, attempted to save the beast and in doing so got caught in the reins, but managed to clear himself as the horse and cart plunged backward down the steep incline. As the horse shot downward the heavy casks of salt broke loose and were smashed to pieces. Strange to say the horse, with the exception of a slight cut on the nose and back, was apparently otherwise uninjured, though it is possible that its body might have been slightly strained. This afternoon the poor beast was hoisted up by the aid of a hoisting engine.

The Constitutional Position.

We stated yesterday that we would answer the ex cathedra pronouncement of the Premier upon the constitutional question involved in the action of the Legislative Council in throwing out the Profits Tax Bill. In the interval before the House meets again, with the Council brought up to strength (there has been no attempt, incidentally, to fill the vacant seats in the Assembly, the most glaring breach of constitutional law that can be imagined) by the addition of three or four Government puppets, bribed by the glitter and tinsel of the ridiculous honour to give their vote according to instructions, we shall say no more upon the details of the rejected Bill. It would be to no purpose in any case, since it is more than likely to be re-introduced in a form still more outrageous. Meantime we note that the dishonourable lead given by the Premier has been followed where we should have expected it. We did not, however, expect it from the Star, whose attitude on the question hitherto had appeared to us eminently reasonable and moderate, and whose sudden change of front and descent to the rich-versus-poor catch-cries do not strike us as very consistent. We are glad to note that the objectionable attitude is not shared by the Herald, whose observations we have pleasure in answering, both because they are pertinent to our subject and because the editor of that paper, in his position of President of the Council, strongly advocated the compromise which the opponents of the measure asked and which the Government dictators positively refused to consider.

Before we attempt to defend the majority of the Council in the constitutional issue, without reference at all to the merits of the Bill, we would like to draw the attention of the public to the actions of the Lower House in the whole matter. The annual Budget was passed by it without a single word of criticism. What is there in the annals of any House of Commons, including our own, to equal that? The first Profits Tax went through in the same way. The defence of the House will be, we presume, that it was a perfect Act, flawless and open to no criticism—there is no other defence to offer. Why, then, was it withdrawn and amended so completely? Let the House answer. The second Bill was marked by the same absence, not of criticism merely, but even of discussion. What better proof do the electors require that every member has been bought and sold, body and soul, bag and baggage, pledged not only to support but to raise no single objection, which the demagogues that control them present for their approval, we mean for their votes? We wish the people to understand what sort of Government they are blessed with.

But a tremendous pow-wow is being raised and will be raised over the "unconstitutional" action of the Council in rejecting the Bill, as if they had done an unheard-of thing, a thing they had no shadow of right to do. Let us examine this question. The Herald's observations upon the successful struggle for responsible government are correct enough, but they do not seem to us pertinent here. The instances it mentions concerned the relations of the Colonies with Great Britain; the present dispute concerns the relations of our two Houses and is purely domestic. The Premier stated that the powers of the Council under the Constitution are exactly defined. The question that has arisen is one which shows the falsity of the statement: even the powers of the House of Lords in respect of money bills cannot be exactly defined to-day, after several historic conflicts with the Commons. Reference to those occasions and to the best opinion will show that the Council were justified in acting as they did. They would have been justified under any circumstances, but are completely absolved from blame under those that existed in this case—the mock chamber below, shorn of all independence, the flagrant impropriety of the Bill and its obvious and intended "class" nature. We shall briefly quote from the best English opinion in order to remove any erroneous impression which the Government may have created that the Council have no power whatever to interfere with money bills.

There are only three points to consider. First, the Commons have the undoubted monopoly of the initiation of all money legislation. That is not in question here, since the Bill was very plainly introduced in the House. Second, the Lords (to use the English parlance) have no right to amend such legislation. That is also important, since the Council merely suggested amendments and did not attempt to effect. Third, have the Lords the right to reject it in toto? We reply, not merely have they several times exercised it, but all constitutional writers agree that circumstances may arise, much less extreme than in this case, when it is highly desirable that they should have and exercise it. We quote Todd's "Parliamentary Government" (a recognised authority) 2nd edition, Vol. 1, p. 809: "It is true that the peculiar privileges of the Commons in regard to supply and taxation should ordinarily restrain the Lords from intermeddling with the details of financial schemes propounded by the government and agreed to by the popular branch, BUT CIRCUMSTANCES MAY OCCUR WHEN THE EXERCISE BY THE HOUSE OF LORDS OF THEIR RIGHT TO ACCEPT OR REJECT ANY MEASURE AFFECTING THE FINANCES OF THE NATION MAY BE MOST BENEFICIAL TO THE INTERESTS OF THE COMMUNITY, AND IT WOULD BE UNWARRANTABLE TO DENY THEM THE POSSESSION OF THIS RIGHT BECAUSE IT MIGHT BE

RESORTED TO UPON EXTRAORDINARY OCCASIONS."

Discussing the famous case of the paper duties, in which the question was crystallised, the same author says: "... it properly belongs to the Lords to judge, not merely of the general expediency of the proposed scheme, when regarded as a whole, and of its probable results upon the country at large, but also to consider the various questions of commercial legislation and public policy that may be involved in its details. The House of Lords has an onerous duty to perform in respect of every Bill, financial or otherwise, that may be sent to it from the other chamber, in submitting the same to careful revision, for the purpose of restraining hasty or improvident legislation, and sanctioning by its wisdom, influence and authority whatever may be necessary to promote the public good." Finally, further on, "Toulmin Smith, in his Parliamentary Reminiscences for 1861, although he had sided against the Lords in the beginning of the controversy, condemned the present proceeding of the Commons, as betokening a lack of 'ordinary courtesy and self-respect,' really amounting to a declaration that the House of Lords shall be overridden, without scruple, whenever the Commons want to pass a Bill that cannot be safely trusted on the stage of fair discussion." Could any words be chosen expressing better than these last the whole position that has arisen here? We could quote at much greater length if we wished, but the statements we have cited should settle conclusively the question whether the Council has the right or not to reject financial measures sent up from the House of Assembly.

The Infantile Paralysis Outbreak.

Not Connected with Kristianafjord.
The inference of a contemporary that the outbreak of infantile paralysis now in our midst may be traceable to the shipwrecked crew and passengers, of the wrecked liner Kristianafjord, is based on the fact that these foreigners were housed in this city for several days and that they came from New York where this scourge wrought such havoc two years ago, is repudiated by Dr. Campbell, Quarantine Port Officer here, who asserts that he thoroughly examined all the people who came from the wrecked ship by train and steamer and with the exception of one case of measles, against the spreading of which precautionary measures were immediately and effectually taken, no other infectious disease or symptoms thereof was noticeable.

Incorrigible Lad Sent to Prison.

And Ordered to be Lashed Because he is a Manace to Other Youths.

Detective Whelan arrested last evening for larceny an incorrigible boy named Daniels, aged 12, who has a mania for stealing and who has a fondness for enticing youths of very tender years to help him in his operations. On this occasion he had two small boys each aged 7 years with him. On Sunday last they forced access to the stores of the Royal Stores-Martin Hardware Company and took three revolvers and a pair of wheels; the following day Daniels purloined a watch from the store of S. E. Garland. When captured Daniels was taken to the lockup, though his accomplices were handed over to their parents to appear in court to-day. Daniels had been before the court several times before for theft and last year spent three months in jail. A few weeks ago he was caught stealing cigarettes from Job's Stores and was sentenced to be lashed, but this process was not carried into effect. Judge Morris thought that Daniels was a menace to other small children in the community and sentenced him to one month's imprisonment; also that he was to get three lashes going in and three at the expiration of his term. The small boys were let go.

In Memoriam.

ALICK DOUGLAS JOYCE.

The remains of Alick Douglas Joyce, one of Carbonear's promising young men were laid to rest yesterday afternoon. The officiating ministers were Revs. F. R. Matthews, F. G. Willey, T. B. Darby and G. Pickering. Douglas was gifted with a talent for vocal music; the development of which was his constant study. The instruction he received at Mount Allison Ladies' College was followed by two years' training with Mr. John Lane, of Boston, who for years studied with the teachers of Geraldine Farrar in Europe. In May, 1916, he sang tenor in the Oratorio, "Elijah," the greatest musical production ever put off in Boston, in which the leading parts were taken by Schumann-Heink, Walter Damrosch, Marie Sundelius, and other world-famous singers. His talent was again recognized, when this year he was invited by the musical director to take part in the "Caliban" which was given by the trained talent of Boston, in the stadium of Harvard University, and in aid of the American Red Cross Fund. While in Boston he was also entrusted with a responsible position in the office of the American Rubber Co., the largest manufacturers of waterproof clothing in the world. On his summer vacation spent with a member of the household of Governor Keyes of New Hampshire, septemia developed from a fly bite on the lip. All medical means available were used to counteract the infusion of poison—but in vain. After a few days' illness he died in the hospital. His brother, Rev. J. G. Joyce, who was studying in Boston University, was with him in his sickness and accompanied the remains to Carbonear. With many other friends we most deeply sympathize with the family so suddenly bereaved and in so unexpected a manner, as they had received a letter from him not many days ago and all was well. But few little thoughts that he would be sleeping to-day the sleep of death. At the funeral service Mrs. John Duff sweetly sang his favorite solo, "Jesus is all the world to me." May he awake by and bye fresh as God and beautiful as the morning. Carbonear, Aug. 9, '17.

McMurdo's Store News

FRIDAY, Aug. 10, 1917.
We know of cases where Walk Easy Tablets have cured swollen, sweaty, and tired feet where other like things have totally failed. And they will do as well as any other in any case. So you run no risk of disappointment in using them. One or two in a foot bath of warm water will soothe the worst case of "bad feet" and used regularly will entirely prevent the return of acute symptoms. If your feet give trouble, why not try a box? Page and Shaw's chocolates are likely to capture the market to a very great extent. The excellence of their quality is what takes.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

LAST NIGHT'S GAME.

Fine weather and a whirlwind finish to the series are giving the fans faster and classier baseball these nights than has ever been shown before since the introduction of the League here. Where a win or a loss is "all-and-all" there must be excitement, and with all the clubs running neck-and-neck in the finish of the pennant race, this is the position the teams find themselves in to-day.

A large attendance witnessed the Cubs come back in great style last night when they put it all over the Wanderers by a score of 9 to 3. This is a sad season for the Champions, and they are now the lowly lizards of the League for the first time in their history. It would look now as if only a miracle can save them from repeating in the cellar till Empire Stadium calls "Play Ball" next June.

The Cubs went to bat first. Simms and Hall both singled, and when Tommy Duggan came up he lit Punky for three bags, scoring both. St. John got him home safely and was permitted to complete the circuit himself on a passed ball and Glouster's hot liner. Brown found their measure in the second, however, but in the third Channing, who was walked, crossed the plate in safety before succeeding batters were retired. Murphy scored again for them in the fourth. In the fifth some excitement was caused by Duggan who, with his bat held high on his shoulder, attempted to dodge one of Punky's fast high ones. The ball accidentally hit the bat as Duggan was stooping and rolled in front of the plate. Chief Chesman called it a ball but Manager Hartnett thought (and thinks yet) it is a legally batted ball, and Brown who fielded it threw it as first as precautionary measure. Hartnett claimed Duggan was out but was overruled by Umpire Chesman, and the game continued though we understand Mr. Chesman's ruling on this point is going to be contested by the Wanderers. The "demon" retaliated by hitting out a two bagger, followed by St. John who did likewise scoring Duggan. Murphy and Simms both got home in the fifth, but the Cubs' seventh was fruitless.

Hall held the Wanderers' hitless for three innings, not a man reaching the initial sack. Dobbins got a two bagger in the fourth, and Hartnett singled getting him across the plate in safety. Britt completed the circle in the fifth, Dobbins supplying the motive power.

NEXT GAME.
All interest is now centred in Tuesday night's game when the Red Lions will face the B. I. S. and endeavour to wrest them from the top rung of the ladder to which the Irishmen are sticking like grim death. A win for the latter would probably ensure them the silverware, while should the Lions be victorious then it would make them, the Cubs, and B. I. S. all equal, with one game each to play.

Price of Newspapers Goes Up.

Impossible to Continue Old Subscription Rate in Face of Enormously Increased Expenditure.
Toronto, August 2nd.—The increase in price of Toronto newspapers went into effect yesterday. The following is a copy of the notice sent out by one of the Toronto publishers: "It has become absolutely impossible for us to continue the old subscription rate in the face of enormously increased expenditure which must govern the price at which we shall sell our newspaper without loss. "The new revised rates are positively as low as we can pare them to be consistent with sound business. As the public realize the situation of higher cost for everything, it is expected they will conform to the advance in the price of their daily newspapers without any appreciable loss of business."

OLD-TIME CRICKET.—The cricket match between the Shamrocks and an old time city team, which is to be played shortly for patriotic purposes, promises to be interesting. The former team are now getting down to business and lovers of the grand old game are assured of a good match.

In Milady's Boudoir.

YAWNING.
According to the rules of modern etiquette, it is very improper to yawn, but from a standpoint of health is one of the best things Milady can do for her beauty. For one thing, a yawn ventilates the lungs, when you take an ordinary breath the lungs are not completely filled, nor are they thoroughly emptied by an ordinary respiration. There is a certain quantity of air left in the lungs always—what physiologists call "residual air." This air in time becomes foul and affects the blood, and through the blood the nerves center. Then at certain times certain nerves get tickled as it were, and the result is a long-drawn out yawn, which has the power of stretching the lungs to their fullest extent, driving out all the foul air and drawing in a supply of fresh pure air. Yawning, too, is beneficial to your hearing. When you give an extra big yawn you hear a crackling sound inside your head. That is due to the stretching and opening of certain tubes which connect the ear and the back of the throat. If they are congested, as happens when you have a bad cold in the head, you complain of deafness. If you do not feel inclined to yawn, by all means do so, regardless of what your book on etiquette may say. It's Nature's way of cleaning out your lungs and the air passages in your head.

The Football League was to meet last night to discuss the playing of a third round, also a dispute over the Star-C.E.I. unplayed game. The meeting did not take place, owing to the inability to attend of the President, Mr. M. Chaplin, who was out of town. However, because of the object of the games, the C.E.I. have decided to forego their claim to the two points they were entitled to and will play the Star this evening on St. George's Field. A spirited contest is in store for spectators.

Do They Hate to Do It?

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

We were admiring a cunning little house that a friend of ours has recently moved into. Another woman who also has a small bungalow was present. "I do love small houses," she cooed, "the work is so much easier. When we built ours my husband said he wouldn't have an extra square foot of floor space for me to take care of. So we studied out ways to make it as compact as possible."

They felt they couldn't afford it. The owner of the new house is a frank little woman. "Yes," she said, "they certainly are easier to take care of. But the real reason we built so small was that we felt we couldn't afford a larger one. You know a young professor in a small college can't have everything he wants. And some day we hope to build a winter house, too."

The frankness affected me like a nice cool sea breeze on a hot day, or a healthy, sun tanned, normal woman coming into a room full of high-heeled, powdered noses, dressed-up-to-the-minute fashionables.

"That La-De-Da Way of Talking"

There are few things that set my teeth on edge more than what the Cynic calls "that la-de-da way of talking." I always feel like thrusting a blunt forthright "I can't afford it!" through it.

But when we were telling the Authorman about it afterwards he gave me a brand new point of view.

"Shilly? Yes, in a way," he said, "and yet I don't know that I blame her. Her husband is in business. She doesn't want to brand him as a failure. That would be both hard on him and bad for his business. It pays in business to seem successful even if you aren't. Isn't she doing the right thing to put up the best appearance she can. Everyone knows about what the professor makes any way so that doesn't matter so much."

Perhaps They Do It From A Sense Of Duty.

Now I've often fumed against this sort of woman before. Perhaps I've done her an injustice. I wonder. I can see that there may be both worldly wisdom and kindness in such a pretense. Perhaps some women deserve credit because they really don't like to make such pretences, and make them against their will. I know I should loathe it.

But there's one weak point in the argument. I didn't think of it in time to put it up to the Authorman (one seldom does) but I'm going to bring it up next time we meet. Do such pretences really justify themselves by deceiving anyone? Again I wonder.

THERE'S NO ESCAPE.

WILT MASON

There is no earthy spot, no cavern in the snow, no desert blazing hot, where agents do not go. I've tried to hide myself from men who'd sell me books, high on a mountain's shelf, in lonely forest nooks; in vain, for everywhere the agents find their way; they track me to my lair, with works by Bertha Clay. I've hid in hermits' cells that little comfort gave; in far sequestered dell I've lived, in grove and cave. I've quit the haunts of men to find some lonesome place, where I might never again behold an agent's face. On bleak and barren moor I have concealed my frame; and when I felt secure the agents always came. Now on a mountain top, above the fleecy clouds, in cabin home I stop, remote from maddening crowds. At last, serene and calm, I scanned the plains below, and said, "At last I am where agents never go." But even as I spoke I saw a dame approach, with alpenstock of oak and large gun-metal brooch. She looked me in the eye, and cried, her voice a scream, "Say, don't you want to buy the works of Charlotte Braeme?" Then down the mountain side I slid, in my despair, and ruined all my hide, and tore out lots of hair.

Your Boys and Girls.

To amuse a child who is slightly ill or kept indoors by storm get out the encyclopedia and turn to the pages of flags printed in various colors, show the child the pages and suggest that you both try to make some flags in the colors shown.

When I tried it with great success I found I had some scraps of saten and cambric left over from fancy work which served the purpose admirably. Of course any other material would do and even colored paper pasted on the background of the flag would do all right. The most used colors are red, white and blue, which will not only make our own flag but are used also in the merchant flag of Germany, the ensign of France and in several others. Yellow and green are the colors next most commonly used.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive. Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. ### Mayor Gosling Reviews Flour Situation.

After the regular business of the Municipal Council had been disposed of yesterday, Mayor Gosling submitted the following report in relation to the flour situation which is worthy of consideration by all: On last Saturday, the anniversary of the Declaration of War, I was called upon to take the chair at a public meeting at the Colonial Building. In the short address I made at the opening of the meeting, I called to the attention of the citizens of St. John's the necessity for economy in the use of flour. This is an important war measure. So far as I have been able to ascertain the facts, by no possible means can the requirements of the Allies be fully supplied. If the war continues until next March the shortage will be severe. In order to provide as much flour as possible it is absolutely necessary for the people of the North American Continent to economize in the strictest possible manner, and to substitute other foods for flour whenever they can do so. The members of the N. Y. Produce Exchange suggested a means by which enormous saving can be made, and pledge themselves to carry it out in their own homes. It is, that at one meal each day no bread shall be eaten. I believe it to be a perfectly practicable suggestion, and one that can be carried out in every home in St. John's and in the Colony of Nfld., and if acted upon throughout North America, such a saving of wheat will be effected that there will be enough for all. I therefore strongly recommend that this simple but all-important act of self-denial should be adopted at once. I would ask the clergymen to lay the matter before their congregations, and I suggest to the Board of Trade and all Societies that they should circulate a pledge among their members undertaking to deny themselves of bread at one meal each day, and by so doing they will help to win the war. I am fully aware that the Municipal Act does not constitute me a Food Dictator, but I am so convinced of the importance of the suggestion that I do not hesitate to assume the right at least to make this appeal.

The Salvation Army Congress.

A great reception was afforded Commissioner Richards and party from Canada, upon their arrival at St. John's by the express this afternoon, by a large and representative contingent of local soldiers, together with many officers and teachers from the various outposts, now in for the Annual Congress gatherings. After a few brief remarks, which he expressed his appreciation of the welcome afforded, and his gratitude to Almighty God for the privilege of a return visit to Newfoundland, and his hopes of a season of great blessing to all concerned, the party drove away to the home of Lieut. Colonel and Mrs. Otway, with whom they are staying while in the city. One of the very pleasing incidents of the journey was enacted at Port aux Basques, upon the arrival of the s.s. Kyle, when a double line of streamers was flown in honour of the esteemed passengers and their safe arrival on Newfoundland's hospitable shores. Preceding the great evening demonstration of welcome at the Citadel, a lengthy procession was formed of officers, soldiers, teachers, and friends, the principal streets of the city were paraded headed by the bands from the Citadel, led by bandmaster Avery, of No. 2 Corps, and band led by bandmaster Horwood, joining the procession at Bowring's Cove with an inspiring march. The Citadel was crowded with an intelligent, thoughtful and interested body of people who listened to the able introductory remarks of Colonel Otway, the Provincial Commander, with great attention. Colonel McMillan from Toronto, was the first to speak, and soon got well into the hearts of the people with his homely reminiscences of his esteemed father's career in the colony. Brigadier Betteridge, also from Toronto, and the Army's representative for Young People's Work, briefly detailed the ideals the Salvation Army had for the spiritual edification and definite conversion of the young, concluding with a beautifully pathetic story illustrating his points. Now it is the Commissioner, whose words of wisdom were eagerly anticipated, and who, after expressing his great pleasure at the renewing of old acquaintances, gave a most inspiring address, under three headings—"I know in whom I have believed," "We know that all things work together for good to them, etc.," and "We have a building not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens."

Civic Board Meets.

The weekly session of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon, the Mayor presiding. The Royal Stores, Ltd., and F. B. Wood Co., Ltd., wrote about installation of water sprinkling as protection against fire. Referred to Engineer. J. Robins, Lower Battery, asked to put another flat on his one storey house to make room for his large family. Refused. Another complaint about a gully in front of his residence was made by B. Evans, Barter's Hill. Council can do nothing in the matter. Permission was given John Fitzpatrick to repair houses on Gower Street; to T. A. Macnab to build garage, Hamilton Avenue; to W. F. Parsons to repair dwelling, LeMarchant Road and to F. Collins to repair house, Gower Street. Plumbing tenders under the Small Homes Act were accepted from Mills & Co. After reports were received and adopted from the Medical Health Officer, City Engineer and Inspectors, the meeting adjourned.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place on Monday, 6th inst., at St. Patrick's. Rev. Fr. Renouf officiating, the contracting parties being Miss Mary Gathrell, of 104 New Gower Street, this city, and Mr. Augustine Hallern, of St. Vincent, St. Mary's. The bride looked charming in a suit of silk voile with hat to match and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid was Miss May Hallern, sister of the groom, who was also tastefully attired in white, while Mr. Albert Lundrigg supported the groom. After the ceremony a very nice drive was enjoyed around Bowring Park as the day being an ideal one for the occasion and on return to New Gower Street a very sumptuous repast was partaken of by over fifty couple. Then a most enjoyable evening began the guests rendering songs and toasts until the wee small hours of the morning. Their future residence will be at 104 New Gower Street. All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Hallern every happiness down the stream of life.

Well-Known Engineer Passed Away.

There passed peacefully away at 11 o'clock yesterday, after four days' illness, a well known and highly respected citizen in the person of Mr. Ambrose Churchill. The deceased, who had reached his 71st birthday, was one of the oldest active engineers in the country and up to the time of his death was in the employ of the Reid Mfd. Co., where for many years he was a trusted and well-liked official. Mr. Churchill was one of the old school of machinists, kind and generous to all, and his sudden passing will be received with deep regret by many of his old associates. Left to mourn are a widow and one son, Mr. Samuel Churchill, Asst. Supt. of Public Works, and two daughters, Mrs. Valentine of the city and another a nurse in the United States. Mr. William Churchill, Supt. of the Public Works, is a brother. Mrs. (Magistrate) Charles Way of Fortune and Miss Churchill of this city are sisters. To the bereaved widow and relatives the Telegram offers deep sympathy. The funeral will take place at 3 p.m. to-morrow from his late residence, 212 Theatre Hill.

Are the Poisonous Fangs of Socialism To Cripple the Legitimate Business of the Colony.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—The editorial in yesterday's News is proof ample that the fool killer is again at large in the community, and that the people of this colony are again to be "educated" in a campaign of bluff and bluster.

Referring to the defeat of the so-called Profits Tax Bill by the Legislative Council on Tuesday last, the 'News' editor says:

"When, however, the constitutional rights of the people are flagrantly invaded, and the legislation of their responsible representatives set at naught, the Prime Minister has not hesitated to do his part promptly for the vindication of those rights, and the buttressing of those plain principles which underly and support the fundamental structures of true democracy, which stands for a government of the people, and for the people, and by the people. Such an attitude was in evidence yesterday, and is fresh proof of the Prime Minister's fidelity to principles that have marked his long and successful political career."

That any large section of the electorate will be foolish enough to swallow this party claptrap would be positive proof that Mr. Morine was indeed correct when he said Newfoundlanders were too green to burn. "The constitutional rights of the people are flagrantly invaded." This sounds nice and would lead some people to think that Mr. Currie is awake at nights worrying over the "pee-pul" of this graft-ridden colony. Who, I ask, has invaded the constitutional rights of the people of the country more than this same political trickster, E. P. Morris? Has he not for thirty years been fooling the people of this island? Has he not betrayed the interests of the people on every occasion that has come his way to boost himself in position and power? He betrayed his leader Sir Robert Bond not once but twice. Morris made possible the passing of the 1898 Reid bill which handed all our resources over to the Reid Bros. for a million dollars. Without his support the measure could not have passed the Legislature of the day. Previous to this he was closely connected with the late Sir William Whiteaway, and, after his twenty years connection with that Government he was not in a position to know exactly the true financial condition of this Colony, he was either a rogue or a fool in supporting the claim of Mr. Morine that we had to take Reid's price or surrender our independence. The Hon. P. T. told us some years back that Morris was a willing tool of the Reids and "that the latter moved their men like pawns upon a chessboard." A former editor of the 'News' told us also that Morris was always the friend of Capital and Labor at one and the same time. We need no one to tell us how he ran with the Prohibs, and the Antis. Still John S. Currie tells us that "an outstanding characteristic of his (Sir Edward's) more than thirty years' unbroken service in the Assembly, however, has been his unwavering fidelity to the sovereign people." Evidently the 'News' editor thinks that he "can fool all the people all the time."

The constitutional rights of the people are flagrantly invaded; Ye gods! Isn't this rich when we look back over the past nine years and see where this same big bluff and political actor has played football with the very same constitution that Mr. Currie would now shed his blood to save from destruction. What about the constitutional rights when he railroaded Messrs Squires and Blandford, two defeated candidates at the late election, into seats in the Executive Council by running them into what the Wordy President styled the dumping chamber and that through the back door?

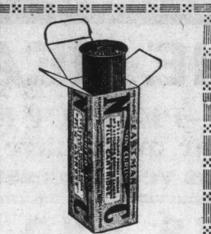

Sir Edward Morris is the betrayer of our Colony's best interests. He has ever shown the desire to play the part of the ward political boss rather than that of the Statesman. He has wormed himself into the confidence of the people by trickery, deceit and bluff. He stops at nothing to further his own selfish ends. The welfare of the people is his last consideration; in fact his present day champion, guide and literary henchman tells us that Morris's motto was: "The public be damned." "Let Morris finish his work" was the cry in 1913 and unless the electorate wake up and end it all the final chapter in Newfoundland's political history will be written sooner than most people imagine.

Now that an election seems probable the "able" editors of the Government organs are shrieking out the battle cry of "Death to the merchants." The commercial interests of the colony are again to be used by Morris in a desperate attempt to again fool the electorate in order that Morris can finish his work. War on the Merchants is the slogan. War on the very class of men who have risked their all in the trade of the colony. War on the men who have for the past quarter of a century fed night half the fishermen in this country. War on the very same merchants who have been driven to the brink of insolvency through supplying for the fishery and taking desperate chances of ever getting a quarter of their invested money returned.

Sir E. P. is awfully distressed over the action of the men who voted against this Profits Tax Bill. He (Morris) and his pap fed editors would have the country believe that these men refused to pay a legitimate war tax. He would divide the country on class lines and drive the masses against the classes. He would worry little if the real state of affairs was not known to the country in general and paint the mercantile firms on Water Street as the greatest rascals the country ever produced, but he should add, excepting myself.

Who, I ask, have given the most to the war funds of this colony the Bowring's, the Jobs, the Winters, the Ryans, or Morris, Coaker and Lloyd?

Sir Edgar Bowring when he went over to France to see our boys paid his own expenses. Did Sir Edward Morris? No he didn't for we find from the public accounts tabled in the House that he drew from the Treasury short in the House and Piacentia, which always had an Executive seal, is sacrificed because Devereaux, Morris and Walsh were purchased with fat Government jobs made specially to order. Mr. Coaker who for years, day after day, abused R. A. Squires is now a member of an Executive which has the same R. A. Squires as leader in the Upper House. Whom does he represent. Will Mr. Coaker answer? What do the fishermen think of this? They have been travelling for nine years on the road to the New Jerusalem and when they reached the foot of the hill outside the City they are handed over to their enemies.

Time so far has amply vindicated Sir Robert Bond in the stand he took after the late election and the future will, if present conditions continue, still further show the people they turned down the only honest and sincere statesman we have had in this Colony within our own times and generation.

Coalition spells Confederation and it is now up to the people.
Yours truly,

Explanation From Star Captain.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—In your issue of Tuesday evening last I notice a news item the purport of which was evidently to place the Star Football team in an unfavourable light before the general public, and as the facts as stated by the writer are absolutely incorrect I must ask you to publish this letter which will, as far as the Star Team is concerned, clear them of any attempt to fool the public or do the Patriotic Fund out of any financial assistance.

Your reporter (I presume it was he who wrote the item) should have first of all tried to get the facts of the case and not rely for his information from those who are only too anxious to see the Star team down and out. The whole trouble over Monday night's game was caused by a misunderstanding on the part of the Star team re-postponed matches. Our Delegate who was present at the annual meeting of the League left that meeting under the impression that all postponed matches would be played before the following regular schedule game. This information was conveyed to me on Saturday, and I told several of our team that there would be no match on Monday night, and as a result several of our team left town Monday morning. In the meanwhile the Secretary of the League advertised the C. E. I. Star game for Monday night and when I saw the advertisement in the News I tried to locate Mr. St. John but was unsuccessful. I then got in communication with Mr. Chaplin, the President of the League, telling him of the mistake being made and explaining to him that the Star could not put an eleven on the field owing to the reasons given above. Mr. Chaplin advised me to see Mr. St. John and get the postponed game run off. On locating the Secretary I learned from him that postponed games were to be played after the regular game in each round had been run off and for that reason he could not alter the schedule and that the game as advertised must go ahead.

I then told him that as far as the Star was concerned we could not put an eleven on the field and that we did not feel like going up and playing a game with a scrap team in view of the fact that a similar case occurred a few weeks ago which resulted in forcing the Star team to withdraw from the League.

The next thing I knew was on taking up the Herald to see that the League had postponed the game for Monday night and in view of this action by the League I feel sure the general public will hardly hold the Star team accountable for fooling the public or depriving the Patriotic Fund out of sixty dollars as your paper stated on Tuesday night.

Trusting you will give this letter of explanation the same publicity as the article in your issue to which I take objections to.

Yours very truly,
W. B. HART,
Capt. Star Team.
St. John's, Aug. 8th, 1917.

The action of the Upper House in defeating this unjust so-called Profits Tax Bill was right and proper and the fishermen, mechanic and laborer will yet see that their action was the right one, for all extra taxation levied by Government upon the business community must come out of the pockets of the consumer, and the latter, God knows, are bearing a heavy burden the most of it caused by the action of this same "patriotic" Morris in scattering money (borrowed money at that) to the four winds of Heaven. He has enriched himself and his hidebound followers and impoverished the people he has so basely deceived.

The people themselves are not without blame. Our outport folk are too prone to listen to every soap box orator or spellbound demagogue who comes their way and they are cleverly baited and trapped before they can realize where they stand.

United action on the part of the people is what is wanted just now. There should be mass meetings all over this Island to protest against this Coalition Government for the existence of the latter robs the electorate of any voice in Parliament and leaves them simply like a flock of sheep without a shepherd.

The words of Sir Robert Bond are coming true as each day comes and unless the people arouse themselves from their slumbers and assert their authority they will have good reason to curse the day Morris was given charge of the affairs of this Colony. "Eternal vigilance is the price of Liberty." We owe a duty to ourselves and to future generations which if we are the honest people we like to call ourselves must be performed even though the heavens fall.

Responsible Government in this Colony to-day is bordering on a farce. Men who are supposed to represent the people represent no one but themselves. They are in it for what they can get out of it. The House of Assembly is short of its proper representation. Several Districts are without representation and under this slyster coalition Government not one Western District has a representative in the Executive, while Twillingate, Bay-de-Verde and St. John's West have two each. Premier Kerensky, in an appeal to the people for support for a reconstituted Government, declared that only a rule of iron at the present plight resulting from the military situation, together with an ardent and self-sacrificing support by the people can make for a powerful creative Government with the authority to free the land of the enemy and enlist in its work of reconstruction all the living forces of the nation.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Aug. 9. The text of the British official communication issued last night, follows: A heavy rain is falling. Our Allies gained further ground during the day northwest of Binaschoote. Hostile raiding parties were repulsed last night and this morning north of Ronex and in the neighborhood of Opyy. The enemy's artillery continued to show great activity east of Ypres. Yesterday, in spite of continuous wind, our aeroplanes bombarded the enemy railway tracks, sidings and trains forty miles behind the German lines, causing much damage and derailing one train and blowing up another. Bombs were also dropped the previous night on an enemy ammunition depot. One of our machines is missing.

NEW GERMAN RUSE.

PARIS, Aug. 9. The French War Office announces that the Germans have invented a new ruse to fool their opponents into the belief that their artillery batteries are still in position for action, when actually they have been withdrawn and by it to prevent untimely advances. The device consists of mechanism fitted with half a dozen globular capsuls, filled with an explosive which is placed on the site of the battery to be or is being withdrawn. They explode every 25 or 40 seconds, and the sound is exactly like that of a field gun. They are said to easily fool the listener into thinking it is artillery guns.

THE GERMAN WAY.

PARIS, Aug. 9. The French authorities learn that during the night of July when the French airplanes bombarded Treves and Essen, the Germans forced the French and English prisoners, both officers and men, interned at Karlsruhe, to leave their quarters and remain in the open, whence they most probably would be hit in case Karlsruhe was raided. The men were compelled to remain in these places until all danger had passed.

THE IRISH CONVENTION.

LONDON, Aug. 9. An official report of to-day's meeting of the Irish Convention says Sir Horace Plunkett, chairman, addressed the gathering on the task before it on various schemes for governing Ireland already in existence. He then suggested procedure by which these might be thoroughly sifted and examined, and subsequently brought before the Convention for discussion. This suggestion was considered at some length, and finally it was proposed by the Chairman and seconded by the Bishop of Raphoe, and unanimously resolved that a standing committee not exceeding twenty persons, five to form a quorum, be appointed to consult with the chairman on general procedure and the exercise of other powers delegated to the Convention. It was further resolved to reappoint the committee.

Health Officer

ON INFANTILE PARALYSIS.
At last evening's meeting of the City Council the subjoined communication, received from the Medical Health Officer and dealing with the outbreak of infantile paralysis that now exists in the city, was read:

August 9th, 1917.
Sir, I beg to submit, for the information of the Council, the following brief statement in reference to the cases of acute poliomyelitis or infantile paralysis which have been reported in the city during the past week.
The first two cases—at 14 Gover Street and 169 LeMarchant Road—were reported on Friday, August 3rd. I visited both houses and made full enquiry into the circumstances surrounding these cases. The illness in each case began on July 29th, but there is apparently no connection between the two, nor has it been possible to discover any source of infection from outside. This is only what might be expected, as in this disease it is seldom possible to trace definitely the source of infection in each case. Full instructions were given as to the precautions necessary to prevent the further spread of the disease. Both families are well situated; for this purpose, and I am confident that my instructions will be properly carried out, and that there will be no further danger from these cases. The third case—at 34 Gilbert Street—was reported on August 7th. This house is a very small one, and the circumstances being such that proper isolation or management were impossible, the patient was removed to hospital. I may say that the cases reported are of a comparatively mild nature, and there is reason to hope that the patients may eventually recover with little or no permanent disability.

The measures which have been taken to prevent the spread of the disease are those which have been recommended by the American Public Health Association, and by Dr. Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute, New York, who is probably the foremost living authority on the subject. They are as follows:
1.—Medical practitioners have been required under the provisions of the Public Health Act to report promptly to the Health Officer all cases or suspected cases of infantile paralysis.
2.—Isolation of patients in separate rooms for six weeks from the beginning of illness, with careful disinfection of all body discharges, disinfection of clothing and other articles used by the patients, etc., and general management as in other infectious diseases.
3.—Prevention of all unnecessary contact of other inmates of the houses with the general public.
4.—Observation of all known "contacts" outside the infected house for two weeks after the last exposure.

While this disease is known to be infectious, it is also well established that the degree of infectivity is comparatively low, and that the general susceptibility to infection, even among infants and young children, is far less than in the case of such diseases as measles, diphtheria or scarlet fever. Few individuals, even among those in close contact with the sick, are attacked. There is therefore no probability of the disease becoming as widespread or prevalent in any of the ordinary infectious diseases. In the most severe outbreaks recorded the total number of reported cases has seldom, if ever, exceeded one per thousand of the population.

The effective control of infantile paralysis outbreaks is rendered difficult by the lack of knowledge which still exists as to its exact mode of causation and conveyance—also by the known facts that the infection may be carried in the nasal passages or throats of apparently healthy persons who are not known to have been in contact with the disease, and that in every considerable outbreak there are many slight unrecognized cases of an "abortive" type, which do not proceed to the stage of paralysis, but recover after a short period of illness which appears to be merely a "feverish cold" or digestive disturbance. It has now been pretty well established that the disease is spread mainly by personal contact, and that other agencies, such as milk and other foods, insects, domestic animals, clothing, etc., do not play an important part. In these circumstances all that can be done is to endeavour to secure the early detection and isolation of all cases, with the necessary control of the households in which they occur, and to carry out the general hygienic and preventive measures which are applicable to all infectious diseases. While these measures are undoubtedly of value in limiting an outbreak, they cannot be entirely effective until the nature of the disease is more fully understood.

Since the above has been written a fourth case has been reported, but has not yet been fully investigated. I have the honour to be, Sir, Your obedient servant,
R. A. BREHM,
Medical Health Officer.
John L. Slattery, Esq.,
Secretary, Municipal Council.
