CHAPTER XXXVIII.

"I thought—" He looks round at the Frenchman and back at her. "Pardon me, but have you not come from the ball-room? It is a pity for you to lose all the dancing because your companion happens to have—deserted you for the fascinating rouge-et-noir. Allow me to conduct you back to your proper sphere," and he offers his arm; then he laughs. "I beg your pardon, I am not in proper trim," and he looks down at his morning-suit with a smile.

They are almost the same words he used when they met outside the Court so long, so long ago.

Paula tries to speak, but her lips are dry and wordless.

"At any rate," he says, with the same ghost of a smile, "I can conduct you to the door-way."

Paula rises and puts her fingers on his arm, and carefully keeping out of the circle of light, he takes her towards the door. Suddenly her hand closes on his arm; the faintness with which she has been wrestling threatens to master her. He looks down and notices, for the first time, the marble whiteness of the face below the mask, and stops.

"You are faint," he says in a gentler, more considerate tone. "Perhaps you had better rest for a few minutes," and he leads her, putting his hand protectively on hers, which rests on his arm, to one of the numerous recesses with which the room abounds.

"I will leave you for a moment only," he says in a low voice, and she sees him go quickly but quietly to a footman, and take a glass of wine from him. He brings it to her himself, and stands before her as if to shield her from any chance observer.

"Drink this," he says, and Paula recognises the old, masterful tone, and her heart responds obediently as of old. She takes the glass with a quivering hand and raises it to her lips.

"There is nothing like champagne for sudden faintness," he says in the same low tone, and evidently talking to cover any embarrassment she may feel. "It is better than water. Please drink it all."

Paula obeys, and he takes the glass and sits down beside her silently to give her time to recover.

"And now," he says, after a minute, during which he has been looking at the group around the table with absent, indifferent gaze, "are you better?"

"Yes," she says in a low voice, "much better; it was the heat. I have been dancing some time, and am not used to it."

She stops suddenly, for his eyes have darted round from the table to her with a strange, almost a startled look, and she sees the danger; he has almost recognised her voice, strained and altered though it is by her weakness.

"Have you been staying here long—here at Nouville?" he asks, his eyes fixed on hers with deep attention, with suppressed eagerness and intense watchfulness.

"No."

"Not long? Pardon me if I seem impertinent, but something in your voice reminded me of—of a friend I have not seen for a long, long time."

It is of no use to struggle longer. With a slow, trembling movement of her white hand, Paula slips off the mask and turns her pale, lovely face to him.

The champagne-glass falls to the velvet-pile carpet, and he springs to his feet, his eyes distended, his lips white and quivering.

"Paula!" he breathes, and so stands devouring her for a moment, motionless.

Then, as if with a gigantic effort, he masters himself, and seating himself by her side, covers his face with his hands.

She knows what is going on in his mind. She knows the agony and nature of the shock. Has she not endured them herself? And she sits with clasped hands, her eyes brimming with unshed tears, through which she looks at him as through a veil.

At last he raises his head, and just glancing at her, as if he could scarcely trust himself, says in a dry, hoarse whisper:

"What does this mean? How is it that you are here?"

Paula does not stop to ask herself what right he has to question her.

"I am staying here with Alice," she says, almost meekly, her hands clasped tightly over each other, her heart seeming to stand still. How white, and thin, and worn is the hand which he still holds over his eyes.

"With—with Alice?" he says in the dazed voice of a man who has not recovered from an overwhelming shock.

"With Alice? Your brother—"

"Bob is out of England," she replies.

"You two here alone?" with significant emphasis. Then his face flushes and grows white again. "Are—are you married?"

Paula could almost laugh with bitter mockery at the question; but suddenly she remembers Stancy de Palmer, and that, if not married yet, she is to be, and her head droops.

"No."

His hand drops to his side, and something like a breath of relief escapes his lips. Then he looks at her in silence for a moment, drinking in the new loveliness in her face, the sad light of her dark eyes, the whole beauty of which has become perfected since he left her, a bud of girlhood, now a glorious blossom of womanhood.

"Did—did you know me?" he asks, his voice scarcely above a whisper, as if he were communing with the spirit of his lost love rather than with her actual being.

"Yes," she says, with a deep sigh. "I knew you the moment I saw you," and there is almost a touch of reproach in her voice.

"And I," he says, with hidden bitterness, "I did not know you; did not expect to see what I see," and his eyes take in the magnificent dress, the jewels, the mask lying in her lap.

"It—it is the first time I have been to a ball since—for a long time," she says, almost apologetically.

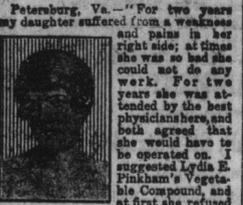

"I did not mean to express surprise," he says. "Why should I? What right have I? You—this dress is meant to represent Moonlight, is it not? It is you, then, of whom I have heard so much to-night, though I did not hear your name."

She colours faintly.

"Tell me about yourself," she says in a low voice.

HER DAUGHTER WAS SAVED FROM OPERATION

Mrs. Wells of Petersburg Tells How.

Petersburg, Va.—"For two years my daughter suffered from a weakness and pains in her right side; at times she was so bad she could not do any work. For two years she was attended by the best physicians here, and both agreed that she would have to be operated on. I suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and at first she refused to take it, but finally consented. From the very beginning it helped her, and now she is entirely well, and telling everybody how much good it has done her."—Mrs. W. D. Wells, 528 North Adams Street, Petersburg, Va.

If every girl who suffers as Miss Wells did, or from irregularities, painful periods, headache, sickness, dragging down pains, inflammation or ulceration would only give this famous rest and herb remedy a trial they would soon find relief from such suffering.

For special advice women are asked to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of forty years' experience is at your service.

"Myself?" vacantly, bitterly.

"Yes. Have you been here long?" He shakes his head.

"No. I came here this afternoon from"—he thinks—"from Italy."

His tone—the air of indifference—clearly proclaims the utter joylessness of his life. "I came here because—I do not know. I shall be gone to-morrow."

"So soon?" she says, unthinkingly.

"Why should I stay?" he says, wearily. "Two nights in a place like me. Since—since I saw you last I have been wandering nearly the whole time."

Paula sighs.

"Alone?" she says, almost inaudibly.

He stares at her.

"Alone. Yes."

A thrill of miserable satisfaction throbs through Paula's heart. At least he is not married, then.

"Of course, alone," he repeats. "I am not—with a little smile—"such good company that anyone would desire to cast in his lot with me as fellow-traveller. And you are here with Alice?"

"Yes," says Paula again, with down-cast eyes, for she feels him dwelling on her face with wistful scrutiny.

"At the hotel? No, or I should have seen you."

"No, at a little villa on the cliff. You—you will come and see—Alice?" she falters.

He is silent for a moment, then he says in a low, hoarse voice:

"No, I shall go to-morrow by the first train." Silence for a moment. Then, "You are looking pale. You are well?" anxiously.

"Quite well," she says. "I am never ill."

"And—pardon me, I am an old friend—with a curve of the lips—"and happy?"

Paula looks at him steadily.

"And happy," she says.

He inclines his head.

"At least I shall have something to carry with me from Nouville," he says, speaking at most to himself—"the memory of a glorious vision. Forgive me. Let me be presumptuous and impertinent for the short time we are together. I shall remember you, as you look to-night, the queen of the ball. You look every inch a queen!" he says, devouring her. "You have altered; if it were possible, you have grown—more beautiful."

Silence. She does not rise with offended wrath.

"More beautiful," he repeats, "and yet—and yet—do you remember the stream through the valley?"

"No, no," she says, hurriedly, her hands clasped tightly. "I remember—nothing!"

He looks at her.

"Well, it is best," he says. "Yes, it is best to forget—if you can," gravely, and his head droops low.

Paula looks at him; at the downcast head with its close-cropped hair—are those streaks of grey in it? Impossible! He is too young, and yet—

"Best so," he says. "I envy you. I cannot forget. There is not a night that I do not go back, in my sleep, to those days. But—with a mirthless smile—"I have a good memory. And you are here with Alice? You see I can hardly realize it. To-morrow or the day after, when I am—say a hundred miles away, I shall not believe that I have seen you. I shall think it is one of my dreams." And he smiles up at her, his dark eyes full of a solemn sadness and self-mockery.

The tears brim over in Paula's eyes. Her whole being seems drawn towards him. Her heart cries aloud to him, her lips almost form the unspoken prayer, "Oh, my love! my love! do not leave me! Come back to me! Let the past bury the past, let everything go, but let you and me be happy as of old!"

But it cannot be. Between them there is not only the old barrier, but the new one which she has set up. There is Stancy de Palmer, her future husband.

With a trembling hand she puts up her mask.

He starts and sighs.

"That is to remind me that our conference is at an end," he says, calmly, but very sadly. "Thank you for staying so long. It was kind of you. This young fellow—" nodding his head towards her partner at the table.

Paula shakes her head.

"I know nothing of him. Do not disturb him."

"No," he says, contemptuously. "It would be a pity. I will take you to the door and watch you till you are safe with your friends. Good-bye," and he holds out his hand.

Paula puts hers into it—into the hand that she remembers so strong and brown, but which is now so thin and white.

"Good-bye," she says.

He holds her hand, looking straight into her eyes with fixed intensity, then his lips move, perhaps without his knowing it, and he murmurs:

"Oh, my darling! my beautiful, sweet darling!"

Low as is the exclamation, Paula hears it, and her eyes are blinded with tears.

"Good-bye," he says. "You see, I find it hard to part with—an old friend!"

And his fingers close over hers as if he could not let them go.

Slowly Paula takes her hand from him, and he offers her his arm.

"To the door-way," he murmurs; "let me see you to the last."

And, with trembling limbs, Paula walks by his side.

But before they have reached the door-way a loud voice on the other side says:

"Perhaps she has gone in here. That young Frenchman looked fool enough for anything; he may have taken her."

It is Stancy de Palmer's voice, louder than usual, and with that peculiar thickness which indicates champagne behind it.

Paula starts, and Sir Herrick, feeling her start, looks quickly at her, and then fixedly at the curtain, and stands waiting.

A big hand—Stancy's—pushes the curtain aside, and that gentleman himself swaggers through.

He stops short at the sight of Paula, and not recognising Sir Herrick in the dim light, exclaims:

"Hallo, Paula! Where have you been hiding? What are you doing here? Ah—"

He breaks off with a smothered oath and a flow of blood to his face as he recognises her companion.

Compulsory military training for youths between the ages of 18 and 21 years is approved by the United States Senate Military Committee and may be accepted by Congress. The training system will not be on the intensive European scale, and it is intended to reduce the regular army by 71,000 in five years' time, which would leave it very little larger than before the war.

John J. He said this class of

Thousand-Year-Old Toys.

Agos ago, infantile Egypt played with dolls, boats, balls, dishes, wagons, miniature horses and other animals, just as the twentieth-century children are doing. The little Greeks and Romans amused themselves with much the same playthings, except for the further possession of a rattle, which some wise Grecian gentleman very kindly invented for them.

We know this from the chance words of a few early writers, from the sculptures which have been saved of the different ancient nations which represent children in the act of playing—and also from the fact that many small toys, closely resembling many toys of to-day, have been found in the tombs of the children of by-gone ages—dolls, balls, boats, tops and tiny dishes, added to which there were small warlike implements for the boys, such as javelin, and bows and arrows.

In the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, there is a fascinating terra-cotta boat, complete to the smallest detail. It was found in the tomb of an Egyptian boy of 4,000 years ago.

Take the doll, one of the few of the very old toys. The prehistoric Peruvians had pieces of bone wrapped in cloth, a male doll being identified by the blanket over his shoulder, the female by a petticoat.

Horace makes mention of the stick horses of the Roman children. Tapestries of the Middle Ages picture little people still astride such makeshift steeds, and the ordinary riding horse of the ordinary child remained a stick with a horse-head until late in the seventeenth century.

Early in the nineteenth century rocking-horses came into fashion, after which, in 1847, horses were shown at the French Exposition covered with hair and very natural in form—the toy horse as we know it to-day.

Germany's Year of Peace.

Results of the first year of the revolution in Germany are summarized by the Socialist Monthly as comprising a decline in the value of the mark, increase in the cost of living, decreased production of coal and steadily mounting public debts. The paper casts a balance for the year in a bitter and sarcastic vein.

It points out that the mark has declined in value within the year from 72 Swiss francs to 20.25 francs. It gives a long list of articles of food showing increases ranging up to 100 per cent. for butter, and nearly 200 per cent. for eggs. The paper states that the cost of transportation has increased.

The production of coal is asserted to have declined from 190,000,000 tons a year before the war to 70,000,000 tons in the first year of the revolution. This is notwithstanding an increase in the number of persons employed in the mining industry exclusive of war prisoners who now have been sent back to France and Belgium.

Debts and taxes are declared to be steadily growing into an unbearable burden for the taxpayers. The paper asserts that Germany's debts will aggregate on April 1, 1920, 212,000,000,000 marks, exclusive of debt to the Entente. The deficit of the Prussian railroads for the year of the revolution is declared to total at least 3,965,000,000 marks.

In conclusion the paper warns the people of Germany that they must pay for those "achievements of the revolution."

GRADUALLY DECREASING.

To-day nine steamers have sailed, or are about to sail for the frozen pans, for the purpose of engaging in the annual quest of the harp and the hood. In point of numbers this is the smallest fleet to pass through the Narrows since 1870—fifty years ago—when but ten ships sailed from St. John's and two from Harbor Grace. Last year the fleet also numbered ten vessels. This year the absence of the Fogota reduces it to nine, the same vessels without any changes, excepting in the crew complement, being again commissioned. Last year's tonnage amounted to three thousand five hundred and ninety-nine, with one thousand seven hundred and nineteen men. With the Fogota off the list, this year's capacity is three thousand, three hundred and sixty-one tons, with a crew list of sixteen hundred and eleven all told.

There is a vast difference in the shrunken fleet of the present and that of the days when for weeks prior to sailing day, the waterfront was thronged with wielders of the gaff and rope: when with gay bunting streaming from the tall masts, whistles tooting merrily and crews cheering wildly in response to farewells from the shore, the stately ice hunters steamed out of port and toward where fortune beckoned their gallant companies. Those were the days when activity abounded, when the wooden walls doubled in numbers the present day squadron: when the ships from Dundee made St. John's their headquarters and berths were more numerous and more eagerly sought after than now. Then came the era of the ironclads, but their day was not a long one, neither was their success so phenomenal as expected. The old-timers outlasted them, though but for the great war, perhaps, and we had still seen them decked out in their sealing array, yielding nothing to the older types in point of speed, but not meeting with any greater luck in the striking of the main patch. The wooden ships have made history, and though none of the present fleet can show fifty years of service, yet they bear names familiar to the generation, names which will never be forgotten in Newfoundland tradition and story.

It will be interesting to recall the personnel of the fleet of 1870. Who to-day that was alive then, does not remember such names as Walrus, Lion, Nimrod, Panther, Osprey, Wolf, Hawk, Merlin, Bloodhound, Monticello (afterwards City of Halifax), Retriever and Mastiff, the latter two sailing from Harbor Grace. That fleet totalled a tonnage capacity of two thousand, nine hundred and thirteen, with crews numbering fifteen hundred men, and six of them were lucky enough to make second trips with good returns. These six were, Walrus, Nimrod, Panther, Hawk, Wolf, Merlin. And their captains, men daring and famous, wrestling victory from ice and storm and tempest, the stories of whose battles with the elemental forces of nature would make an epic such as poet never dreamed of. Their names, given in the same order as the ships of the '70 fleet, above, are those of real vikings: P. Muldowney, A. Graham, E. White, A. Bartlett, Wm. Knight, Wm. Jackman, Levi Diamond, Wm. Ryan, John Bartlett, Isaac Bartlett, Richard Pike, J. Murphy. None of these, we think, are alive to-day, the last of them Capt. Levi Diamond, having passed away not so very long ago at a ripe old age, but their memories will ever live. Heroic men in heroic ships.

"Admirals all, they had their say (The echoes are ringing still), Admirals all, they went their way To the haven under the hill." And the heritage they left was that which their prowess gained, a heritage which none can take from us. "The bounds of the circling sea" are still ours, and the successors of these men and their no less daring crews sail forth on the voyage to the frozen sea, filled with the same high hope, animated by the same spirit to load the ships that characterized those who led the way so many years ago. May they each and all have their desire fulfilled and may every ship that sailed to-day return from the killing with all flags flying and seals on deck as well as below—in other words loaded to the 'wales.

Seven Steamers Sailed.

Seven steamers of the nine comprising the 1920 sealing fleet, got away in the following order this forenoon: Neptune, Theta, Eagle, Sable, Ranger, Terra Nova and Seal. The Diana is sitting at Baird's after her trip from Louisburg, and will likely get away to-morrow evening.

Viking Will Sail To-Morrow.

Bowring's Viking is due in port to-day and will get away to the icefields to-morrow afternoon. She has sufficient coal aboard and the only preparation needed is to put aboard food supplies. She was frozen in the mouth of Louisburg Harbor for two days and had to steam through 80 miles of slob ice on her way down. Yesterday she met a S.S.W. gale with heavy seas and had to put into St. Lawrence for shelter. She left the latter port last midnight. Her crew was signed on to-day and the men are being housed at the Seamen's Institute.

Last Night's Sealers' Meeting.

Last night's sealers' meeting, held under the auspices of the F.P.U. in the C.C.C. Hall, was not so well attended as could have been expected. Hon. W. W. Halfyard presided and the speakers of the evening were Hon. R. A. Squires, Hon. Dr. Campbell, Hon. E. J. Brownrigg, and Messrs. W. H. Cave and R. Hibbs. Each speaker dealt with matters pertaining to his own department, but the announcement of most interest to the men was that of the Premier, who stated that, in conference with ship owners at five o'clock in the afternoon, a price of $9 for young seals, $7.50 for bedlamers and $7.00 for old had been offered sealers if they sailed under closed articles. These offers, of course, could be rejected and the men could sail under open articles and wait until their return to see what could be done. Mr. R. Hibbs considered that $10 would be only a fair price. At last night's meeting nothing was decided and whether the men would accept the closed-article prices or sail and wait till their return was not made known. However, it is probable that they will do the latter.

Boy Scout Film.

Those who attended the presentation of the film "Boy Scouts to the Rescue" in the Methodist College Hall last evening were well pleased with the entertainment. The picture was splendidly put on, and the whole work of the Scouts was well presented. A matinee will be held this afternoon at 4, when the price for all seats will be 20c. The Governor and party will attend this evening at 8 o'clock, and the Methodist Guards Band will again discourse sweet music.

Sagona at Port-aux-Basques.

The S.S. Sagona arrived at Port aux Basques from Louisburg at 4.30 p.m. yesterday, having had to steam through a large body of heavy ice on the way over from Scatarie. She brought the following passengers:—V. W. Merchant, F. Fitzgibbon, C. A. White, Mrs. White, Mrs. E. Tilley, Mrs. P. Seeley, L. Poland, Rev. Fr. Pineault, G. Power, J. B. Slaney, R. Hunt, A. Walsh, J. Whiffin, A. Edwards, Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. S. Slaney, G. Slaney, Mrs. P. Fitzgibbon.

Kyle Due To-Night.

S.S. Kyle left Louisburg at 6 a.m. yesterday and at noon was 40 miles E. by S. of Scatarie, making fair progress. She will likely arrive this afternoon. Should the ship be here at that time an express will be leaving this afternoon at 5.30 o'clock, going as far as Millertown Junction, but in any case will await the Kyle's passengers, who are going to points along the line. The ship will leave again direct for Louisburg at noon to-morrow.

Forgotten by the Reform Party.

A correspondent writing from Lawn (Burin District) under date February 18th, has this to say of conditions at that place: "We are in a dreadful condition here this winter, with only one steamer calling. The Argyle comes about once a month, and people who ordered goods last fall have not yet received them, consignments being somewhere en route. We have some fish in store since last fall and cannot get means to ship it, even if there were any person to buy from us. It appears that the Government or some one else have us in a 'double corner.' We were promised wonderful things by Messrs. Foots and Chessman, before the election, but now that they are in power we are worse off than ever."

N. B. SOCIETY MEETING.—The N.B. Society held a meeting in their club rooms last night. President Dowden occupied the chair, and some matters of private importance were dealt with; several applicants were admitted to membership.

Body of Prelate

Accompanied by Rev. Fr. Pineault and Mr. Gerald Power, brother of the deceased ecclesiastic the remains of the late Bishop Power arrived at Port aux Basques at 4.30 p.m. yesterday. A special train, preceded by a snow-plow, was immediately despatched to S. George's. On arrival there the body will be taken to the Cathedral, where it will remain in state until the obsequies. Only the priests of nearby places will be able to take part in the burial services, on account of conditions of travel.

Astonishing Figures.

At last evening's sealers' meeting Hon. Dr. Campbell, Minister of Agriculture and Mines, read out some astonishing figures on agricultural and horticultural matters. There were in this country, at the end of 1918, horses valued at $2,401,550; horned cattle, $2,398,620; hay, $2,431,191; potatoes, $3,131,490; turnips, $239,977—or a total of $10,742,842, not including sheep, pigs, poultry, eggs, milk, butter, oats, fodder and other farm produce. Thus agriculture is second only to the fishery and exceeds the forests and mines of the country. Canker in potatoes has been a great drawback and an order to England for 400 barrels of canker-proof potatoes has been sent. Another unfortunate circumstance prevailing in the scrub condition of horned cattle. The average yield of milk per day in Newfoundland is a gallon and a half per cow. The yield should be at least 5 or 6 gallons a day and such thoroughbred cows will eat no more than the scrub-animals now infesting the country. The new Government has finalized plans, said the Minister, whereby, in five or six years, all horned cattle will be of a vastly improved stock and scrub animals will have entirely disappeared.

Police Court.

An agent for the Slinger Machine Co. was fined $1.00 for obstructing traffic on Water Street. The case of the Customs vs. a sailor of the Rosalind for smuggling was resumed this morning.

Gulf Report.

Heath Point—Heavy, west wind; heavy close packed ice distant. Grindstone—Ice conditions unchanged. Money Point—Cloudy, southwest wind; close packed ice inshore. Cape Ray—Cloudy, southwest wind; heavy close packed ice everywhere, stationary. Flat Point—Clear; strong west wind; no ice. Point Amour—Blinding snow storm, strong west wind; heavy ice everywhere.

Shipping Notes.

Schooner Ruby W. salt laden to Balne Johnston & Co., reached port yesterday from Cadiz via Trepassay. Schooner Miriam E., Capt. Doyle, sails on Saturday for Pernambuco with a cargo of fish from the Monroe Export Co. Schooner Max Horton has arrived at Grand Bank from Oporto with a cargo of salt to Patten & Forcay. S. S. Rosalind is due at Halifax this morning.

Laid to Rest.

The funeral of the late John Holden took place yesterday afternoon and was attended by a large concourse of mourners, including Mayor Gosling and the members and officials of the City Council. At the Cathedral the Prayers for the Dead were recited by Rev. Dr. Greene and interment was at Belvidere Cemetery.

Weather and Ice Conditions.

Greenspond—Wind S.W., fair breeze fine; no ice in sight. Twillingate—Moderate S.W. winds; bay covered with slob. Griquet—Prevailing winds westerly since March 1st; heavy storm from S.W. on Sunday; S.W. wind with snow yesterday. LaSalle—Strong S.W. wind, fair and cold. Flower's Cove—Moderate winds, snowing; much milder than yesterday; Straits still blocked with heavy ice. Fogo—S.W. wind, clear and cold; no ice. Tilt Cove—Westerly wind, moderate, dull, milder. Nipper's Hr.—Moderate S.W. wind, weather fine; bay clear of ice.

MERGLE AT ARGENTIA.—S.S. Mergle, which was storm bound at Burin, crossed Placentia Bay yesterday but had to shelter at Argentia, the sea being too rough to make Placentia. The steamer has a number of passengers who were to land at Placentia and come by rail to here; they are staying on the ship as there is no means of conveying them from Argentia to Placentia; a special train awaits them at the latter place.

Our Staple Industries!

AND WHAT OUR RETURNED MEN ARE DOING WITH REGARD TO THEM.

(By CAPT. LEO MURPHY.) Like moths around a flame, men are rushing to St. John's from the out-harbor settlements in quest of work. These are members of the Royal Naval Reserve and Royal Newfoundland Regiment, who having served overseas, and who know the excitement and life in other cities, find it hard to settle down in their old environment, and who naturally desire work in new surroundings, where their career may be more varied, and where they will probably receive higher wages for their work.

In the meantime, the fisheries and the farm have to be considered. It is a fact that numbers of men are seeking employment in fishstores and retail departments, who in pre-war days devoted their time to the farm and the fish-fake. One is anxious that they should obtain a higher class of work; but what can be done. The riches of the seas are still there in their glamour, their uncertainty, and if the voyage is a successful one, their profits. The staple industry of Newfoundland is no secondary consideration. The sealing industry to-day is a matter of great moment. The crews embark to-day on their voyage. Even if they sailed over uncharted seas, they have a Supreme Captain on Deck, who directs their destinies, and on whose Great Judgment the Revenue of the Oldest Colony is at stake.

Efforts are being made—sincerely, industriously and intelligently—to secure work for every returned veteran who has served in any branch of His Majesty's Service; but we cannot resist the call of the sea or the lure of the land—these charms which heretofore have made a living avocation, and the desertion of which means a great loss to our Island Home as well as to the men who desert the appeal. If the fisheries are to be, we must stand by them; if the agricultural inducements are offered, we must support them. Just as loyally as we rallied to the call of the old Grey Mother—just so loyally must we rally to the call of this fair land of Ours which appeals to her Sons to see that her staple industries are not neglected.

NOTE OF THANKS.—Mr. and Mrs. A. Martin wish to thank the friends of this city for their kind words and sympathy to them in the time of trouble and sorrow on the death of their son, James, who has passed peacefully away, to be with Jesus, which is far better. From the third year of his life he was taught to pray by his parents, and day after day he would enter his room and raise his voice to God in prayer, and his future life was to become a servant of God, to publish glad tidings to a sinful world; but at the 6th year of his life Jesus took him home to live with him for ever more, where all is joy and peace. Our family circle is not broken; we will see him again; it brings joy to us to think how we trained him. I want to say to fathers and mothers: train your children for God and it will lighten your burden when death comes. Train a child when it is young and it shall never depart from it. Wherefore should I make my moan Now the darling child is dead; He to early rest is gone He to Paradise is fled. I shall go to him, but he never shall return to me.—adv.

The city of Tiflis was shaken and many buildings severely damaged. Thousands of refugees are pouring into Tiflis.

Notes From Brigus.

While playing hockey on Beaver Pond about a week ago, Mr. Dawe of the Bank of Nova Scotia, received a severe hurt to his knee, which incapacitated him for some days. He left on a visit to his home by Friday's train. Mr. Burt Wells of Bay Roberts, has replaced him as teller.

We note another venture into the shop-keeping arena. Mr. Robert Fowler is busily engaged these days in transforming part of his house into a business stand. We wish him much success in his venture.

For some time past and up to Saturday's mild, lovers of skating and of hockey have been enjoying themselves to the fullest extent on Beaver Pond.

The pleasures of Saturday evening shopping were reduced to the minimum on the 6th inst. In consequence of the weather, the streets were wet, slippery and muddy. To be caught in the centre of a spot of glassy ice, encumbered with parcels, in an endeavour to stem a wind blowing at high speed was no joke.

Mrs. P. J. Kent and her sister, Miss Nellie Brien, were here from town last week on a visit to their parents.

Mrs. Terrie went out to town by Friday morning's train on a business trip.

According to report "the Government wishes the people to co-operate with them in preventing the spread of infectious diseases and submit to free vaccination." It is a long while since we've read "the world is getting better every day," this is a poor sign of such happening. First the man who wished to procure a berth to the hospital should be vaccinated, next

Capt. William Bartlett and crew went out by this morning's train to join the "Viking," in which ship they intend to prosecute the seal-fishery. We wish them a bumper trip and safe return.

During the past two weeks our boys have been busy practising for a hockey match. ### An Appeal.

The Nation's Fund for Nurses.

Dear Sir,—The Nation's Fund for Nurses aims at endowing the College of Nursing, at which over 16,000 Nurses are registered, and creating a benevolent fund for the relief of Nurses in old age, sickness or unavoidable pecuniary trouble.

There are, I feel sure, numbers of officers and men, who during the War at some time or other had occasion to be grateful to one of the many thousands of voluntary Nurses who came forward to succour the sick and wounded.

Many of these Nurses have as a result of their service, lost their health, and means of livelihood, they received practically no pay, pension or gratuity, and are in very distressed circumstances.

Also there are doubtless many parents and relatives who will welcome an opportunity of showing their gratitude to those who cared for, and nursed their sons and brothers.

The part that the Nurses have played in the Great War is worthy of the deepest appreciation. They have done splendidly, and are worthy of a Nation's heartfelt gratitude, and I appeal to the citizens of St. John's to show their gratitude in a practical form.

I would add that the Fund has the cordial support and approval of Field Marshal Earl Haig, Lord Burnham, General Smuts, and numerous other distinguished Sailors, Soldiers and Statesmen.

Subscriptions should be forwarded to Lieut. Commander C. D. FENN, H.M.S. "Briton," where they will be gratefully received and acknowledged.

Yours faithfully,
C. D. FENN,
Lieut. Commander, R.N.,
Senior Naval Officer.

March 9th, 1920.

C. L. B. Hockey.

A very interesting and lively game of indoor hockey was pulled off at the C.L.B. Armoury last night, the players being drawn up from each of the six C.L.B. League teams. The line-up was as follows:

TEAM A.	Goal.	TEAM B.
F. Martin . . . . .	A. Curnew	Defence.
G. Cook . . . . .	A. Goodridge	Defence.
R. White . . . . .	B. Colton	Centre.
E. Ewing . . . . .	H. Rendell	Right.
H. Bishop . . . . .	J. House	Left.
L. Hayward . . . . .	E. Keats

The game was fast and most interesting, but no penalties were enforced. The result was 2 goals to 1 in favor of No. 2 team. Lieut. W. Mott acted as referee with entire satisfaction.

Newspaper "Wake."

"LAST POST" SOUNDED OVER NEW YORK "HERALD."

On Sunday, Feb. 1, appeared the first issue of the Sun and New York Herald, the result of the purchase of the old New York Herald by Mr. Frank A. Munsey, proprietor of the New York Sun.

The "death" of the Herald on the previous Friday night was made the occasion for a midnight ceremony after the last edition of the newspaper had gone to press. The entire editorial staff, many members of which had more than 20 years service, assembled, and solemn eulogies were pronounced over the "grave" of the deceased publication.

On the stroke of midnight a bugler appeared from a concealed cupboard and sounded "taps," or, as the British Army would say, the Last Post. The Owl Club (the trade mark of the Herald was an owl), held a "wake" over the "corpse," represented by a bundle of the last editions of the deceased paper.

In Memoriam.

There passed away at the Presentation Convent, St. Patrick's, on Wednesday last, at 4.45 a.m., the venerable Mother Aloysius Caulfield, a well-known and highly esteemed member of the Presentation Order. The deceased who was born in the City of Limerick, entered the Presentation Convent, Cathedral Square, in 1851. She made her profession there in 1854. A few years afterwards she was sent to the recently established foundation at Riverhead where she zealously laboured for the spiritual and temporal welfare of the many souls committed to her care, during her long religious life of eighty-nine years. In 1876 she, with Rev. Dean Ryan and Mother Patrick Kelly was instrumental in establishing the Sodality of the children of Mary at St. Patrick's (the first Sodality of E. D. M. in the Island.) in 1884, with Rev. Father Palmer (then stationed at St. Patrick's) she established the Confraternity of St. Anne of which she was directress till her demise.

Death again visited St. Patrick's Convent on Monday, March 8th, at 12.45 p.m., when Sr. M. Patrick Wadden passed away after a short illness of one week. Deceased who was born at New Ross, County Wexford, entered the Presentation Convent, Riverhead in 1833—received the holy habit of religion July 15th, 1833, and was professed on July 16th, 1835. Though her illness was of a short duration, she had been invalid for some years and her beautiful spirit of patience and resignation in her sufferings, together with her natural amiability and sweetness of disposition, edified and attracted all who approached her. May she rest in peace.

"We have loved them in life, let us not be unmindful of them in death."

CAPT. JOHN WALSH, J.P.

There passed peacefully away, at Marystown, on the 15th inst., after a short illness, at the age of 61 years and eight months, Capt. John Walsh, J.P. The deceased gentleman was well and favorably known not only at Marystown but at Grand Bank and all around Placentia and St. Mary's Bay's, where he fished for a number of years. He was for twenty-one years Chairman of the Road Board and twenty-one years Relieving Officer. His willing hand never refused the widow or the orphan. His wife predeceased him three years and eleven months ago, and four months ago his second youngest daughter, Mrs. Albert Brennan, died at her home, Paradise, P.B. Two daughters and one son are left to mourn the sad loss of a kind and loving father, beside one sister and three brothers and a large circle of relatives and friends. The funeral took place on the 17th, and was the largest ever seen at Marystown, as young and old followed the corpse to the graveside. The remains were laid to rest in the family plot in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, there to await the resurrection. May his soul rest in peace.

A FRIEND.

Bloodhounds Track Murderers.

On Sunday, March 10, 1895, some criminals were discovered by dogs in Colorado, one of the largest of the United States of America. A deputy sheriff had been murdered at Waldenburg, a village near the southern border of that State, and four Italians were thus caught and confessed this crime. On their way to prison they were shot dead by the mob, and two others, who were imprisoned on suspicion of having shared in this crime, were lynched in their cells, a term which originated with Charles Lynch, a justice of the peace of Virginia, who lived from 1733 till 1796 and in 1780, towards the end of the War of Independence, greatly exceeded his lawful authority by punishing those who supported the British Government. The dogs used were bloodhounds, so named because their peculiar power of smell enables them

MY FUNERAL.

Now I, to comfort him, bid him (he) should not think of God; I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with a n y s u c h thoughts yet."
 —The Landlady of King Henry V. I suppose that nine-tenths of my readers will turn away, thinking like the landlady, that there is no need to be troubled with any such thoughts yet.
 In which they are quite right and I am with them heartily. But on my way back from a conventional funeral the other day I could not help registering in my mind some vows about that ceremonial which, in the course of human events, is reasonably likely to be held for me sometime within the next hundred years. (Though I am perfectly willing to play with this thought in the abstract, yet like Wordsworth's "simple child that lightly draws its breath and feels its life in every limb" I have no real feeling that I shall ever die. In which, I fancy, I am not very unlike the rest of humanity.)
 And this is what I have written out and am going to file with my will: I should prefer to be cremated.
 It Will Matter More to them Than to Me.

But if I die while any of the older generation is living and this is offensive to them, I am quite willing to give up that point, since it will certainly matter more to them than to me.
 When the notice of my passing on is put into the paper, I wish it also noted that before sending any flowers friends will please communicate with my family. Then I wish that would have been spent for flowers be sent to some definite charity in which I am interested. I know that some people will regard this as an opportunity to save money, but I am convinced that my real friends the ones from whom flowers would mean something, will take pleasure in honoring me that way.
 Not in These Awful Lugubrious Tones.
 I am not willing under any circumstances that a minister should deliver any eulogy upon me.
 I should prefer no funeral service whatever, but only a simple formal commencement service read by some one, minister or otherwise, who can read it in a cheerful voice that shall suggest the beautiful rather than the mournful side of death.

 I do not want anyone to make an undue effort to come to my funeral, unless by so doing they think they can help those who are left.
 I would feel very indignant (provided I still felt over there as I do now) if anyone were mourning or altered the manner of his living. I think there is no more poignant verse in the Bible than the simple, "If ye loved me ye would rejoice because I said I go unto the Father."
 My Idea of a Beautiful Service.

There was a great hue and cry some time ago when a husband at his wife's death made a pine box, put her in it himself, and buried her. I thought that was beautiful. I would a hundred times prefer it to being undertaken.

I wish I could know how many readers are horrified at these ideas of mine, and how many say "Amen."

The Real Cause.

The gentleman who declared, "We have now a state of affairs in which the rich wish to spend more and save less, and the poor wish to spend more and work less," was putting his finger on a "cause" of the present unrest in a way that but few have the courage to dare. It is one and the same thing, really, whether it is the rich who refuse to save adequately or the poor who insist that it is their privilege to work less, because it means that neither class has grasped the rationale of present-day existence. When will it be appreciated that work is a man's privilege and not his burden, and that happiness consists, not in flagrant extravagance, but in the enjoyment of legitimate activities generally?—Christian Science Monitor.

Value of Study.

"No lesson you learn in the classroom is of much use unless you apply it in every day life," said a school superintendent addressing an incoming High School class. Don't just learn the two and two make four for recitation purposes, but apply that knowledge whenever the occasion requires. Like the lad who was studying industrial economy—"Isn't it romantic sitting out here by the mellow light of the moon?" murmured the girl. "Yes," he answered, "and besides your father can't kick about his electric light bill!"

THE MEN WHO SAY "YES."

It's easy enough to say "no," when you're asked to carry a little bit more.
 "No" is an easy response to the man who begs for a dime at your door.
 "No" is the first word that springs to your lips when your shoulders are heavy with care.
 And somebody needs you to help in a cause which means extra burdens to bear.
 But this is a time when there's need for us all, when sacrifice calls more or less.
 And the man that's worth while is the man of affairs who isn't afraid to say "yes."

Excuses are easy to find in this world, but this is life's curious plan. That man never knows just how much he can do, or when he has done all he can.

The busiest toiler may do something more and often we find that he will.

He manages somehow the minutes of life with some useful service to all.

For not by the deeds that you've already done will men know the courage of you.

The tasks of to-morrow are asking you now, how much are you willing to do?

Can you say that you've given enough to the cause if still you have something to give?

Can you answer them "no," when you're asked to do more that honor and freedom shall live?

It is hard to say "yes," when you're weary and faint with the burdens your shoulders must bear.

And "no" is the easier answer to make, when you think you are doing your share.

But give more and do more and take on the tasks that are born of a world in distress.

When you're asked to assist do not smugly say "no," be one of the men to say "yes."

Essex Motors.

The ESSEX is so designed that it carries no useless weight. This contributes to the exceptional performance of the ESSEX, and assures long tire life.

The sturdiness with which the chassis is constructed makes depreciation small. The ESSEX is an inexpensive car to operate. It will continue to operate smoothly and quietly with an acceleration and flexibility that will inspire the pride of ownership. It is in keeping with one's ideas of economy and good taste.

Will the Human Race Die Out?

From the recorded facts extending over nearly three centuries, it is found that in 1610 the average height of a man in Europe was 1.75 metres, or, say, five feet nine inches, while in 1790 it was only five feet six inches, says Spare Moments. In 1820 it was five feet five inches and a fraction. It is easy to deduce from these figures a rate of regular decline in human stature, and to apply this, working backwards and forwards, to the past and to the future.

By this calculation it is determined that the stature of the first man attained the surprising average of six feet nine inches. Truly, there were giants on the earth in those days. The race had already deteriorated in the days of Og, and Goliath was quite a degenerate offspring of the giants. Coming down to later times, we find that, at the beginning of our era, the average height of man was nine feet; and, in the time of Charlemagne, it was eight feet eight inches.

But the most astonishing result of this scientific study comes from the application of the same inexorable law of diminution to the future. The calculation shows that by the year 4000 A.D. the stature of the average man will be reduced to fifteen inches. At that epoch there will be only Lilliputians on the earth.

Had to Keep Him Going.

The wife of a military man advertised for a girl to do general household work. The notice was responded to by a particularly neat and competent young colored woman. The details were soon settled—number in the family, hours for meals, days out, no laundry, how often the drawing-room had to be dusted, when the silver had to be cleaned, etc. "What wages do you expect?" asked the housewife. "Ah couldn't work for less an' $50 a month," replied the candidate. "But, Mandy, that's impossible. My husband is only a first lieutenant, and we can't afford to pay such wages." "That's too bad," replied the maid. "But, ye see, mah husband he's a lieutenant, too, and Ah mus' have that much to keep him going."

Airman Got a "Sub."

The minute passed, two minutes, three minutes. We had roared over miles of sea, and still I could see the little fountain ahead. Then I saw the submarine. She was a mile away—a big grey Fritz of the U-class, long flush deck rising toward the bows, conning tower between bow and stern, two guns, one above and one aft of the conning tower, and a straight stem. She was starting through the water at top speed, about thirteen knots, and there her bow was the little fountain. It was caused by a thread of water striking up her straight stem and being blown into the air about five feet. It glittered in the sun. Two men were on the conning tower, but they did not see or hear us coming. We were attacking up wind and down sun. We read part of her number, U-47, but the second numeral was blurred. Forty seconds after seeing the "Fritz" Dickey pulled the release lever and dropped one bomb. He threw up his arm. I banked over and shot down. The bomb had detonated on the starboard side half way between the conning-tower and the stern. The submarine heeled slowly over to port. She stopped in her own length and began to sink. Cuckney close behind me passed over. I saw a bomb burst on the starboard side right in front of the conning-tower. Her decks were now awash. An explosion occurred in her bow and several smaller explosions between the stem and the conning-tower. By this time I was again in position and Dickey dropped a second bomb. The bomb detonated about thirty feet away from her. Only the very top of her conning-tower was showing. And then she vanished. The little fountain had been fatal. —From Squadron Commander T. D. Hallam's new book, "The Spider Web," and account of his own share in fighting submarines in the North Sea. Commander Hallam is a native of Toronto. A great many of the new wool materials are in plaids and checks.

(Collated from the Exchanges.) A great market for world buyers is to be set up in Paris. The six-story building which will cost $20,000,000, will contain 5,000 shops.

The total value of forest production in British Columbia for the year 1919 will not be less than $62,000,000, against $54,000,000 in 1918, according to a preliminary survey given. Water borne shipments of lumber show an advance over the preceding year of 17,000,000 feet, while the value of pulp and paper sold increased from $10,517,250 in 1918 to $15,554,257 last year.

A gourmand has no redress against a profiteer, according to a decision handed down at Vienna. Rolf Zimmermann, a Government official, charged with profiteering against a restaurant, but hearing that he ordered soup, roast beef, roast veal, a pork chop, half a pheasant, a quarter of a fowl, two sausages with sauerkraut, three apple tarts and a fig pudding, the judge dismissed the case.

Esau Field, of Cardiff, G.B., who was found dead in his house, and was stated at the inquest to have lived alone and subsisted on dry bread, herbs and water, died on Nov. 14 last, leaving property of the value of 13,897 pounds, 11s., with net personalty 13,182 pounds, 10s. A remarkable demonstration of lifting power of a new 250-ton electric crane was staged recently in the railroad shops at Cheyenne, Wyo., when this crane lifted a complete locomotive of the Mallet type, weighing 250 tons, and shunted it back and forth over the floor of the shop as though it were only a toy, writes Eugene Ammon in the Scientific American. The crane held the huge locomotive suspended for over two hours, and finally set it back upon the tracks again.

Mayor Foley, of Thorold, Ontario, is making a heroic effort to prevent swearing in that town. In the interest of the Forward Movement he has had the town placarded with the following: "Attention! Cursing, swearing, blasphemy and obscene language are against the laws of God. It is also a violation of the laws of your country. It is the language of vulgarity. Do not forget yourself, but do all you can to prevent the use of profane talk."

War has been declared on the "glad neck" by the Irish women, and a League of St. Bridget has been established, with the warm approval of the Catholic Church, to combat immodest fashions. #### His Request.

Mr. and Mrs. Newbride had at last obtained a villa in the suburbs, and Mr. Newbride was hanging the pictures. There was a certain photograph of his wife which he decided must be hung up, but which was too small to suspend from the rail by a cord. He thereupon got a substantial nail and hammered it into the wall. There came a knock at the door. "It's Mr. Nexdor," said his wife, running to the window. "Your hammering has disturbed him." Mr. Newbride hastened to apologize. "Oh, I don't mind the noise," replied Mr. Nexdor, cheerily. "I only came to ask if I might hang a picture on the other end of the nail."

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Ready and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare and really there is nothing better for coughs. Into a 16-oz. bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth); then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, this mixture saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it. You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. And don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Can.

Bought His Home Town.

Remarkable Career of a Poor Yorkshire Boy.

Thirty-seven years ago he left Huddersfield with less than $1 in his pocket; to-day he virtually has completed a transaction making him, at a cost of $5,000,000, owner of the greater part of that Yorkshire town. That is the remarkable achievement of Sam Copley, a banker of London. He is a short and sturdily built man of sixty years, yet, despite the strenuous life he has lived, he looks many years younger. Although he has been away from Yorkshire so many years, there is no mistaking his accent, and Copley is as proud of it as anything he has achieved in his life. He remembers with relish that when a lad living with his father, a barber in Berry Brow, outside Huddersfield, he was known as the "Young Terrier," always in mischief. Copley made his fortune in Australia. He says: "When I was a boy everyone in Huddersfield was cursing landlording. Ever since I have always thought that if I were rich enough I would buy Huddersfield and free it, and now I think the opportunity has come. It was at the suggestion of my friend, Wilfred Dawson, a well-known stock broker of Huddersfield, that I gave the corporation an offer of the property I bought. If the corporation does not accept the offer I shall give every man in Huddersfield the opportunity of becoming the owner of his own freehold property. "This buying of the Ramsden estate is just one of those changes in social conditions in England to which we are now getting accustomed. "There was a period of slavery, then a period of serfdom and then a period of landlord and tenant. To-day is the period when people are going to own their own their own freeholds, which is one of the greatest ties to keep men at home, and satisfied men will always fight for home."

Didn't Work Both Ways.

The workman has something to say to the complaint that he drops his tools whenever the whistle blows. A short time ago a young fellow began work in a big engineering shop and, being of a conscientious disposition, he used to work fifteen to twenty minutes overtime in order to finish what he was doing. Imagine his surprise on pay day, when he found that a quarter of a day's pay had been deducted owing to his being one minute late one morning. He protested that he had worked nearly a quarter of an hour overtime that day, but his protest was in vain. He now understands why the other workers used to smile at his gratuitous efforts.—Christian Science Monitor.

A Recantation.

It will be remembered that during the first months of the war 93 famous German Professors, literary men, artists and musical composers addressed to the learned professions of other countries a pamphlet containing sweeping denials of the stories of atrocities charged against German soldiers and officers in France and Belgium. Quite recently a famous German Pacifist, Dr. Hans Wehberg, communicated with all those who had signed the document in order to learn what their opinions are now at the end of the war. The main denials were, that Germany caused the war; that she had criminally violated Belgium's neutrality; that any Belgian's life or property had been touched save in self defence; that the German soldiers had behaved brutally at Louvain; that the German conduct of the war had infringed the law of nations, and that a fight against German militarism was not also a fight against German "kultur."

This famous manifesto was prepared by a small group of men in Berlin. In his enquiries Dr. Wehberg found that fifteen of the signers have since died. Some others were ill and could not reply, and some others preferred to keep silence. Thus out of the original 93 only 55 answers were received. Of the 55 only 16 defended their signature, among them being a son of the great Wagner. Thirty-nine others admitted they would by no means stand by everything they had signed. One of them declared he was willing to withdraw altogether. Another said that "in view of my deviation at that time from personal trustworthiness, for the rest of my life I take warning against the rash hereditarian instinct which has made fools of men for thousands of years." It begins to look as though a few Germans at any rate have had the experience of a change of heart.—Acadian Recorder.

WILLARD GOT HIS AT TOLEDO.

New York, Feb. 26.—Like O'Neill, who helped to train Jess Willard for his defeat by Jack Dempsey and who expects to watch over the physical well being of Georges Carpentier, when the champion of Europe arrives in this country, is never tired of talking about that little affair in Toledo last July 4.

"Do I believe that Willard will attempt a comeback?" spoke O'Neill in answer to a query, yesterday.

"Never. Jess got his fill at Toledo. Peculiar fellow, Jess. He was a slave to the idea that every one in the country was against him and trying to short change him.

"I knew him and trained him first in Buffalo, my home. He fought 'One Round' Davis there and the house was estimated at about $5,000.

"After leaving the building he overheard folks talking about the gate, and he got an earful of several bad bad guesses—guesses that of course, ran from ten to fifteen thousand. He became like a mad man, and nothing would do him but that he must tear back and denounce the promoters for hoodwinking him on the count. All this, mind you, despite the fact that Tom Jones was watching the count and Willard's interests.

"In Toledo he was odd about money matters. Why, before he got out of his steaming suit, following a training bout, he would plant himself down and begin to count the bills and silver that constituted the day's take at the training; he always swore that the count was smaller than his weather-eye took in from the platform.

"He was badly in need of a gym suit, and I spent a whole day down town in Toledo getting a proper one for him. It was a suit that would last him five years and with the shoes that went with it, the bill came to $50. And to my dying day I never expect to hear a man howl louder than he did over that bill.

"A funny cuss. But he was game. Ah, you'll have to say that. I was sponging him off after the second round and he kept murmuring, 'Hey, hey, what's coming off here?' I tell you, Willard didn't know he was in the ring after he got that first fearful left hook to the side of the jaw. That punch, I think the hardest ever delivered in a ring, caved in Willard's face. It broke his nose, his cheek bone and several of his teeth. I say the man was dead game to go as far as he did.

"He hit Dempsey a right hand body blow that almost turned the tide, when it landed and Dempsey fell into a clinch. I thought Willard's time had come. It wasn't to be though, for we had all under-estimated Dempsey—Willard above all of us.

"Why you know now I went around the lobby of the Hotel Secor and bet my own money after weeks of hard painstaking work. I came home with $40. When Willard got up, stretched him big arms out at full length in the corner with the remark: 'Ike, I'll break this poor boy in two,' I turned around and bet every dollar of the money he had paid me that morning.

"Do you remember that crowd of Lawrence, Kansas, boosters who gave away the new dollar bills in honor of Willard? Well the leader of that generous bunch was a big Lawrence banker. He asked to see Jess one day, and though I pleaded with the big fellow to receive the man, do you think he'd do it? Not by a long shot. He wouldn't see anybody, in fact, right here he indicated that the fight had really got on his nerves.

"There have been many stories printed about the end of that fight. Walter Monahan is the man generally spoken of as the one who tossed in the towel ending Willard's championship career. I asked Willard how he felt about the fourth round and he said, 'Ike, I've gone as far as a man can go. You'd better throw in the towel.' Ray Archer, looking like a ghost, asked me what I intended to do about it, and I said, 'this,' throwing in the towel with the word.

"It remained on the floor of the ring unnoticed until Monahan's token of surrender went flying through

THE ONLY WAY OUT.

LONDON, Mar. 9. The Supreme Council has issued a memorandum on the world's economic conditions. Firstly it is of paramount importance that peace conditions should be fully and completely restored at the earliest possible moment throughout the world. To achieve this object it is desirable (first) that peace and normal economic relations should be established at earliest moment possible throughout Eastern Europe (Second) that armies everywhere should be reduced to a peace footing and that armaments should be limited to the lowest possible figure compatible with national security, and that the League of Nations should be invited to consider, as soon as possible, proposals to this end, and all peoples and governments are urged to economies.

HOSTILE DEMONSTRATION.

PARIS, Mar. 9. Japanese, Italian and French officers, members of the Naval Commission were surrounded by a hostile crowd on the piers at Bremen yesterday, according to a despatch received here, but the police protected them from mob.

SHOT BRITISH OFFICERS.

LONDON, Mar. 9. Winston Churchill, in the House of Commons to-night, replying to questions on Russia said that twelve officers and six other ranks of the British Mission had fallen into Bolshevik hands, and that four officers had been shot. One thousand British officers were in the army of the Black Sea, but it was not known how many were in Constantinople. It was stated that the Soviet Governments had made peace offers to Japan, Rumania and the United States, but the British had not been consulted on this matter.

VOTED DOWN.

OTTAWA, Mar. 9. The debate on the address concluded in the house at three this morning. Mackenzie King's amendment, calling for a general election, was defeated by a majority of thirty-four, and Government supporters cheered wildly on the announcement of the vote. It was a straight vote without "switches" on either side of the house.

They've said that we deserted Willard after the fight. I didn't. I don't know what became of Archer or Monahan, but Jess and I fought our way to his car through as bitterly hostile a crowd as I've ever seen. They hissed, cat-called and screamed that they were glad he got licked, because of the way he acted during the war. My heart ached for the poor devil as a shower of cushions beat down about his bruised head.

"Fight again? Say, Willard will never forget his experience of that moment, and I don't think you could drag him into another bout."

WILDE SHOWS CLASS IN NEW YORK BOUT.

Jersey City, Feb. 24.—Jimmy Wilde, of England, world's flyweight boxing champion, last night, scored a knock-out over Mickey Russell, a local bantam-weight, when the latter's manager acknowledged his fighter's defeat by throwing the towel into the ring in the seventh round. The match was for eight rounds.

The seventh round had gone two minutes and 25 seconds. The terms of the match called for 116 pounds, ringside, and neither boxer tipped the beam, although the champion was still in street attire. The exact weights were not announced. It was said Russell weighed 115 and Wilde 106 1-2.

Russell was battered from one side of the ring to the other in the 7th, but it appeared as though he would be able to last the full eight rounds when his manager threw in the towel. In the previous rounds he received considerable punishment but was not knocked down once. In the fifth he went to the floor when the English title-holder shoved him away from a clinch.

Wilde gave a splendid exhibition of fast boxing coupled with accurate hitting. Russell appeared unable to defend himself and displayed aggressiveness only when at close quarters. Wilde slipped to the floor twice in the first round on the slippery canvas. Russell's nose was bleeding after the third. In the fourth and fifth Wilde seemed arm-weary.

The Part Played by Sea Power in the History of the World.

(From an Exchange.)

The part played by sea power in the world's history has received little recognition at the hands of most historians of the past. Pomp and pageantry of land wars has filled their eyes with a blaze of glory in which the Army has been the hero. The Navy, working on the fringes of the world, with little of the public eye, has again and again been overlooked, its real influence in history but scantily recognized.

In the struggle in early European history between the Greeks and the Persians, the famous battle of Marathon, though the Greeks won a splendid victory, was not, as often represented, decisive. The Persian Navy defeated, and strong to invade the Greek shores again. The sea fight at Salamis, on the other hand, was decisive, securing not only the independence of the Greeks from the powerful enemy, and supremacy of the sea for Athens, but deciding the fate of European civilization. The historic contests between West and East. In the inter-war period, Themistocles, had command of the sea was a determining factor in any struggle for world power, and that Greece stood or fell on the sea. Salamis confirmed his conviction, especially following as it did close upon the splendid but futile stand of the Greeks in the Pass of Thermopylae, a stand which Xerxes and his army marched on to storm, burn, and sack Athens itself. Everywhere his armies had triumphed, yet the defeat at Salamis spread panic in land as in sea forces, and both were soon beating a hasty and inglorious retreat to the Hellespont. A remnant of the Persian Army, that Asiatic force which for long had been the scourge of the then known world, was, it is true, left in occupation of part of the Greek territories, but it was defeated at Plataea in 479 B.C. by a smaller force, and the Persian hordes finally expelled from Europe. The lesson of Salamis has been illustrated over and over again in later history, the role of the Athenic Navy being played by that of Britain, and now to the names of Philip II., Louis XIV., and Napoleon must be added that of William of Hohenzollern.

The Overthrow of Spain.

It was in 1588 that, by deposing Spain from her proud position of Mistress of the Seas, England saved Europe from despotism while laying the foundations of the future British Empire. Spain at that time was the mightiest of European Powers. Columbus had given her the New World, and its vast treasures were being poured into her lap, gold, silver and jewels untold. Portugal, with its great navy, and its colonies in Indian and Pacific Seas, the best parts of Italy, the flourishing Low Countries, Flanders and its great manufacturers, with Antwerp the central mart of world commerce, all these came under the sovereignty of Philip II. of Spain. But his ambitions ranged further yet, over Europe, and far eastward, to England. Drake and the other great seamen of the time urged Elizabeth not to wait for his coming, but, taking to heart the lessons of history, to go out to meet and check him, to "seek God's enemies and your Majesty's where they may be found." But the seadogs of England were held in leash, though Drake himself carried out daring victorious raids in the West Indies and along the coasts of Spain and Portugal—"singeing the Spanish King's beard," he humorously called it. So the great, "Invincible" Armada of Spain, sailed out in all its pride, and with something of scorn, to punish and destroy the English fleet, the smaller, lighter vessels of which Spanish commanders called contemptuously the "Beggars of the Sea." But Philip discovered that man-power and high moral and fine seamanship may make up for relative weakness in the details of a navy, and that Drake and Hawkins, Howard and Froisher, and the rest of them had not challenged his supremacy without knowing what they were doing. So the Grand Fleet of Spain that set out to conquer England as another step towards world-conquest came instead to disaster and humiliation.

The Great Louis.

A century later Louis XIV. of France, had taken the place of Philip of Spain, and anticipated Napoleon, as a possible dictator of Europe, if not of the world. France had become the dominant and the richest power. But Louis came up against British sea-power, supplemented in this case by that of Holland, and went down before it in the battle of La Hogue, 1692. This engagement, while having no claim to rank as a great naval feat, destroyed the possibility of that sea-supremacy without which the ambitious plans of Louis could not be carried out. Not long before his feet had threatened invasion, defeating a smaller British and Dutch force off Beachy Head, and had landed an army in Ireland to fight for James II. against William III. But his command of the sea was short-lived. La Hogue not only saved these shores from invasion and established Britain finally as mistress of the seas, but broke the spell of French triumphs and marked the first step in the downfall of Louis XIV.

After a lapse of a century, Napoleon, emerging triumphantly after surmounting many difficulties and dangers, as First Consul of France, climbed to the throne as Emperor. The sea supremacy of Britain was a great block in his onward way, waiting, watching, battling incessantly against him; never sleeping, isolating him from countries overseas, checking his moves, exercising tireless pressure upon him through all the years of his great and victorious campaigns. Strengthen his own fleet as he might by alliance with those of Spain or Holland, still Britain remained mistress of the seas. Whether in the famous fight of the first of June in 1794 or those of Cape St. Vincent and Camperdown in 1797, or other lesser engagements, victory lay with her. When he tried to establish his power in Egypt, as a base for the conquest of India, and destruction of British authority and standing in the East, Nelson won his great victory of the Nile, cutting off Napoleon's great army from communication with Europe, and destroying his chance of conquest in the Orient. When applying the lesson of history, he determined to attack British Power at its base, using the whole French Navy, together with a fleet of flat-bottomed boats for the transport of his army, for a great invasion of England, our Navy was ready. "Let us be masters of the Channel for six hours," he said, "and we are masters of the world," and Nelson replied by the glorious victory of Trafalgar in 1805. History has repeated itself again in our own time, for after another interval of a hundred years the British Navy has once more interposed between Europe and a tyrant, and set a bound to his ambitious schemes.

The Fourth Challenge.

Amid the clash of mighty land-battles, the ex-Kaiser, joining hands with his allies, and dreaming his dream of a Germanized Europe spreading into Asia and reaching finally to the uttermost parts of the earth, under all the curbing, strangling pressure of British sea-power. Holding up his High Seas Fleet in home waters, chasing and defeating the submarines that were going to defeat the world, conveying vast armies and stores across seas and oceans, feeding Britons at home and on far-flung battle-fronts, carrying and "convoys" necessities of life to allies and neutrals and refugees from lands devastated by German hordes, the British fleet, including gallant merchantmen and brave little trawlers, made possible all other operations contributing to the triumph of right and justice, the downfall of military despotism. Then came the final pageant in the Firth of Forth, when for the first time a great and notable fleet came out from its home waters at a word, and surrendered without firing a single shot. That was the supreme, unforgettable moment in the triumph of British sea-power, a triumph unparalleled in history.

WHY MRS. MILES WOOD RECOMMENDS DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

She had kidney troubles and her feet swelled but she states she found the relief she looked for in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Arden, Ont., Mar. 8th.—(Special).—"Dodd's Kidney Pills made me feel like a new person." That is the statement of Mrs. Miles Wood, a well known and highly respected resident of this place.

"I was troubled with my kidneys," Mrs. Wood continues, "and my feet swelled. I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills with the result that the swelling is nearly all gone and I feel better in every way."

"To any person who is bothered with kidney trouble or with their feet and legs swelling I would say 'use Dodd's Kidney Pills.'"

The women of Canada have come to look on Dodd's Kidney Pills as a standard remedy for their kidney ills. They act directly on the kidneys. They are purely and simply a kidney remedy. But putting the kidneys in good condition to strain all the impurities, all the seeds of disease, out of the blood they carry good health to every part of the body. Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills do not help all kidney ills.

Mme. Paul Deschanel, the wife of the President of the French Republic, has achieved her ambition to rule over the Elysee palace as the First Lady of France. She was married on February 13, 1901, because the couple attached the happiest import to the 13th. The President was born on February 13, 1856, and his wife on April 13, several years later. January 13, 1901, was their engagement day. The surname and Christian names of both are formed of thirteen letters.
