SOUGHT FATHER'S SLAYER 9 YEARS.

Found Him After Search of Europe and Both Americas.
Pursuer Tries to Reach Him in Cell, but Is Dragged Away Gloating at Prospective Vengeance.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—After a search of nine years for his father's murderer, Antonio Caracciolo, a young civil engineer, believes his persistence is at last to be rewarded. In a cell on Blackwell's Island he has found the paid assassin who, he says, drove a knife into his father's heart in San Giorgio di Benvenuto, Italy, in August, 1895.

Never since that day has Antonio's determination weakened. On three continents he has sought his father's slayer, to find him, he believes, after almost all hopes of success have been abandoned. His mission now is to move the governments of the United States and Italy, so the moment the man he has identified is set free here he shall be sent back to San Giorgio, where he already stands convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment.

It was in the heat of a political campaign that Antonio's father, Giovanni Caracciolo, was murdered by an assassin, paid by enemies to put the elder Caracciolo out of the way. Giovanni Marchette was suspected of having committed the crime, and when he fled suspicion became certainty in the minds of the villagers. What added to their indignation was the fact that the murdered man had saved Marchette from long imprisonment for a crime which it happened he had not committed, though his reputation was such that suspicion had fallen upon him.

For almost a year after Marchette's flight nothing was heard of him. Meanwhile young Antonio was comforting his mother and training his younger brother to assume charge of the estate. When news came that Marchette had been seen in Buenos Ayres, South America, and promising his mother he would return with the murderer or with proofs of his death, he sailed for South America.

Word reached Marchette in advance of the arrival of Antonio, and, almost murdering an aged priest for money to escape, according to evidence since obtained, he fled to San Antonio, Texas. When Antonio reached San Antonio, he learned that his father had been seen in S. C., to Atlanta, to Montreal, where Antonio arrived only to find that, as before, his quarry fled.

That was the last Antonio was able to hear of Marchette until a few days ago, when Detective Sergeant Petrovich, of the Headquarters of the police, through records, found a man named Marchette was on Blackwell's Island, serving a sentence of eleven months and twenty-nine days, with a fine of $500, which must be paid or he will have to serve out the fine at the rate of one dollar a day.

For Antonio, the news was a revelation. He is released from the island. The detective took the young Italian to where Marchette lay groveling in a cell, minutes of feigning insanity. One glance satisfied Antonio he had found his father's murderer. With a cry he leaped at the iron bars, but Petrovich and a keeper dragged him back.

"Oh, that I had caught him myself!" he cried. "But revenge will come and my mother can live in peace."
Antonio called the news to his mother and brother, and urged that no time be lost in obtaining requisition papers, which will be ready for Marchette when he is set free. Then, satisfied he would have his revenge, Antonio returned to Allenstown.

BAD SPELLING EXPENSIVE

How an English Judge Tripped Up a Defendant in Breach of Promise Suit.

(Special cable to the Star.)
LONDON, Aug. 19.—Largely because of his bad spelling George F. Yapp, a wealthy retired draper, of Melvern Link was ordered this week to pay $1,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage to Mrs. Elizabeth Andrews. Mrs. Andrews was a widow and was employed as a housekeeper by a tenant of Mr. Yapp's. She declared that he had made violent love to her, and in 1902 asked her to be his wife. Several letters alleged to be from Yapp to Mrs. Andrews were put in evidence. They were signed "Uno" and Mrs. Andrews said that Yapp had told her that this meant, "You know that I love you." He suggested that she should sign her letters to him "Uno," which it was explained meant, "I know that you love me."

Yapp declared that the letters were forgeries.
"How do you spell 'bikes'?" Mr. Justice Darling suddenly asked.
"Byke," said Yapp.
"Never 'bikes' asked the judge. 'Certainly not,' was the reply.
"How do you spell 'awful'?" Justice Darling continued.
"Awful," was the reply.
"Well, so does the person who wrote these letters," said Judge Darling.

As a result of this bad spelling on the part of the defendant the jury brought in a verdict requiring him to pay $1,000.

ROMANCE OF THE COMPANY PROMOTER

A White Paper Issued by Parliament Gives Some Very Extraordinary Figures—Fifty Thousand Companies Have Disappeared.

(Special cable to the Star.)
LONDON, Aug. 19.—A white paper just issued by order of the house of commons might have been headed the "Romance of the Company Promoter," so extraordinary are the figures given. It is shown that during the last forty odd years 51,817 companies have been registered, with a total nominal share capital of over $20,000,000,000. Of these only 39,616 remain in existence today, with a paid up capital of about $10,000,000,000.

What has become of the 12,201 companies whose names have disappeared from the Somerset house register? The return does not show. One little note the return does give serves to throw some light on the subject, however. In 1889 a company was registered at nominal capital of $200,000,000, but its paid up capital appears to have never exceeded $1,000. The passing of golden dreams such as a company with a record like this represents is possibly responsible for some at least of the $20,000,000,000 worth of capital which appears to have disappeared from the official record.

Another point of interest shown in the return is that last year the total number of companies in the United Kingdom numbered only 3,831, with a nominal capital of less than $900,000,000. This is the lowest capitalization floated in one year since 1873. The reason for this is believed to lie in the general stagnation of trade which prevailed throughout last year.

THE NEXT ECLIPSE.

Great Interest Being Taken in the Event in England and European Countries

(Special cable to the Star.)
LONDON, Aug. 19.—On August 30 the sun and our earth and produces the comparatively rare phenomenon of a total eclipse of the sun.

For European observers the line of totality of the approaching eclipse is very conveniently placed, so that it can be read quite easily and at a small expense. The elliptical shadow of the moon on the earth's surface moves from Hudson's Bay to Arabia, and is traced out in a line of considerable length, but only about 120 miles broad.

To observe the corona, therefore, it is necessary to place oneself somewhere on this small strip of the earth's surface. After leaving the American continent near Philadelphia in Algeria, the shadow crosses the Mediterranean, sweeps across the Atlantic and strikes Europe near Cape Ortegal, in the northwest of Spain, passes over Spain, then crosses the Mediterranean, passing over Ovidio, Valencia, Burgos, Ateca, Calatayud and Castellon. The shadow then crosses the Mediterranean, passing over the islands of Majorca and Ibiza and cutting the African continent near Philippeville in Algeria. In its eastward course it falls on Sfax, in Tunis, and numerous coast stations in Tripoli, and towards the end of its career it passes over Egypt near Assuan and finally terminates in Arabia.

The facts that the eclipse occurs in the month of August, when many people can afford that time to visit Southern Europe; that the track is comparatively near home; that totality lasts for over three minutes; and finally that this is the last total eclipse that can easily be reached from the shores of England for some years to come, account for the great popular interest which is being taken in the event.

Among those who will observe the eclipse in Spain are John Evershed, Rev. A. L. Cortie, S. J., Professor Calderhead and Professor Fowler.
Sir Norman Lockyer, Dr. W. S. J. Lockyer, C. P. Butler and Mr. Crommelin are going to Majorca to take observations. At Bonn, in Algeria, the different observations of Great Britain will be represented by H. F. Newall. In Tunis Sir William Christie, Mr. Dyson and Mr. Davidson will take observations. Professor H. H. Turner and Mr. Bellamy are going to Egypt.

FAMOUS TAPESTRIES HAVE BEEN DESTROYED.

(Special Cable to the Star.)
PARIS, Aug. 19.—According to "Echo de Paris," the famous tapestries of the Palace of Fontainebleau have been cut and slashed until they are almost in shreds, the sculptures and carved wood mantel pieces have been chipped in a score of places. A well known architect charged by the government to make a report on the conditions of the palace states that an expenditure of $85,000 will barely cover the cost of the most urgent repairs.

FUNERALS TODAY.

The funeral will take place this afternoon of Gertrude M. Sealey. A service will be held at 94 Durham road, at which Rev. Mr. Long will officiate, the interment afterwards being at Cedar Hill cemetery.
The funeral of the late Wm. S. Girvin takes place this afternoon. The services will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Fullerton. The interment will be in Fernhill cemetery.

PEACE CONFERENCE PROBABLY FAILED.

Dead Loch Continues, Neither Side Yielding.

Prompt and Heroic Action by Outside Influences Alone Can Save Conference—Delegates Blue Over Situation.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 18.—President Roosevelt, King Edward and the prominent financiers of several countries are now exerting their utmost influence to bring to a happy conclusion the peace conference which now appears to have been useless. The meeting today resulted in a deadlock, which even after a lengthy discussion remained unbroken. At the close of the afternoon session, Mr. Sato on returning to his hotel, gave out the following official statement:

"Not being able to arrive at an agreement on article 11, the conference passed to the discussion of the last article, which has been settled unanimously. The next sitting will take place on Tuesday, Aug. 22nd, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon."

The general inference from this, and which has been borne out by subsequent developments, is that both sides regard further discussion as useless. Japan will not yield from her first demands and Russia still emphatically refuses to consider either indemnity or cession of territory. Tuesday's session will, unless something can be done in the meantime, be for the purpose of closing the conference.

At midnight Assistant Secretary Polce was hurriedly called to the Hotel Wentworth, where a long message was awaiting him from the president. He immediately wrote a lengthy reply. Later he was called to the telegraph instrument, and for half an hour carried on a conversation by telegraph with the president, who was at the other end of the wire at Oyster Bay.

At 12:30 a. m. the telegraphic conversation with the president ceased and Mr. Polce left the hotel in his automobile. He said he was going home, but beyond that declined to make any statement. "I can tell you nothing," he said to all the anxious inquiries of the newspaper men.

The Associated Press has reason to believe that the purpose of the president's conversation with Mr. Polce was to arrange for one of the Russians to go to Oyster Bay. The president is understood to be already in communication with the Japanese through Prince Kaneko. Mr. Roosevelt is undoubtedly prepared to make a last effort to induce the warring countries to compromise.

TWO ACTRESSES IN TROUBLE

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 18.—Shortly after the arrival of the Quincy-Adams Sawyer Company, which performed in the Opera House tonight, two members, Misses Sabra DeShon and Gertrude Argyard, of New York, got themselves in trouble.

They were assigned room No. 24 at the Carlisle Hotel. Several articles were missing in the room, which fact was discovered by the chambermaid, who informed the proprietor, C. J. Tabor. That gentleman had an interview with the women, who proved very saucy in their denial. The manager of the show was sent for, the articles found in the women's grips, and restitution was demanded.

Mr. Tabor then invited them to the office, the board bill was paid and the two women ordered to leave the house. The remainder of the members of the troupe, upon whom no blame was attached, will remain in the house until the departure of the company tomorrow.

LESS DRINKING; MORE GAMBLING.

London Clergymen Scores the Bloodsucker Business Man.

Large Part of the Sin of Hazard Lies at the Door of the Business House—Separate Gambling From Sport.

(Special Cable to the Star.)
LONDON, Aug. 19.—Under the terms of the Diddin Brand Charity founded last year for the benefit of the poor of Holborn there is a provision for the preaching of an annual sermon against betting and gambling. The first discourse was delivered this year at the midday service at the City Temple by the Rev. R. J. Campbell, one of the best known clergymen in London. The preacher said it was a matter of gratification that in the last twelve months the drinking habits of the people had undergone some amendment. But with regard to gambling there was no sign of diminution. There was a section of society which set a bad example to the rest, and if one half the stories heard of excesses at the gaming table were true it was a reflection upon England.

"But how many commercial men who listen to me," asked the preacher, "ever pause to think what a large part of the sin of hazard lies at the door of business. The man who is clever at producing something which did not add to the wealth of the community, and instead of being regarded as the bloodsucker he was we gave him titles and honors. Men were striving to get rich quickly and in doing so to secure as large a portion for themselves as they could. If Jabez Balfour's speculations had only succeeded a little sooner, he would have been a greater man than ever, and would have been still more highly esteemed. Men who are guilty of the same sort of thing every day were rewarded with honors. As regards the working classes, their gambling is more particularly in connection with sport. Men live, not for the excitement of sport as sport, but for the excitement of winning or losing. People bet who could not afford it, and who had never seen a horse on a race course. Worst of all, women and children are indulging in betting."

"Our King is a greater force for good than any monarch in the world. He is beloved by his people, and wholly desirous of their good. He has been given the title of Peacemaker of the World and he deserves it. Would to God that King Edward could be induced to use his great influence to separate gambling and sport. They are not necessary to each other. The one in its essence is evil; the other in its essence is good."

THE FIRST TELEPHONE.

(Special Cable to the Star.)
LONDON, Aug. 19.—The comparatively modern date of the invention of the telephone is demonstrated by the announcement that what was probably the first telephone used for practical purposes in England has just been taken down. It was constructed by the late Alfred Cunningham and his brothers between the old Town Hall, Devon, and Southgate House, the residence of the Cunningham family, and was made from the descriptions and illustrative sketches which Edison contributed to the Scientific American.

GERMANY HOGGING POLYNESIA TRADE.

Islands Opened to Trade by Australian Enterprise.

But Now Controlled by Germany—A Prohibitory Tax Placed on British Vessels—Australia Very Indignant.

(Special Cable to the Star.)
MELBOURNE, Aug. 19.—The bitterest feeling exists throughout Australia against the Germans and the German government. Though Australia is not powerful and populous if the people of this country possessed the war-making power there is little doubt but that they would use it, and declare war against Germany if for no other reason than that of calling the attention of the world to what are known locally as "The Marshall and Caroline Islands' scandals."

The Marshall Islands, like most of the islands of Western Polynesia, were opened up to trade by Australian enterprise. In 1885 the Marshall Islands, by an exercise of that complaisance on the part of the English government—a policy which has more than once made various colonies furious—were "by" an arrangement with the government of Great Britain and Ireland placed under the protection of Germany. Germany engaged herself to give to Australian and British traders the equal trading rights which Germans enjoy in British territories. In 1888 the Marshall Islands were handed over to the German government under some kind of a contract or charter to a Hamburg company, called the Jaluit Company, which had power to impose rates and taxes. That company at once proceeded to secure for itself a monopoly of the trade of the islands. Even other German traders were squeezed out or absorbed, and Australian traders were excluded by exorbitant taxes and license fees amounting to a differential tax of $15 per ton upon the exports taken by Australian vessels. Having thus got rid of competition the Jaluit Company proceeded to squeeze the natives and reduced the price they received for their goods by 15 per cent. This has enabled them to invade other groups of islands under British protection, and to overbid British or Australian traders who have no reserve of artificially depressed goods to fall back upon. The Australians complain that the German reading of the open door is unfair in the extreme. The Germans do not close the door but charge the Australian and British traders $15 per ton for passing through it. Naturally Australian dealers have ceased to exist on the Marshall Islands. (Continued on Page Nine.)

ONTARIO FLOUR IS BECOMING CHEAPER.

Price Reduced Fifty Cents in the Past Two Weeks.

Ontario flour has gone down fifty cents per barrel in the past two weeks, and there is some hope that it may be still lower. The first cut was on Aug. 7th, and it was thirty cents. Another reduction of twenty cents per barrel was made on Thursday of this week and the wholesale price is now $5.05, the retail being $5.20.

The cause of this is the abundant crop of wheat in Ontario. Last year that province produced only between eight and nine million bushels, and as western wheat was very largely used in the production of Ontario flour, this kept the price up so that the Ontario and Manitoba flours were almost even. But now a crop of upwards of twenty-three million bushels is reported in Ontario, it has been on the market for some weeks, and the price is falling. Manitoba flour is now selling at $5.15 wholesale.

ST JOHN STAR SATURDAY, AUGUST 19, 1905.

An American's Thrilling Story of a Polite Brigand Chief.

A Heartbreaking March with His Captives Through Dense Forests and Noisome Swamps.

A Queer Use for Flour, and the Leader's Explanation of Why He Fought.

Adventures of the American When Released While on His Way Back to the Coast.

(By Thomas S. Alexander.)

During a recent residence of five years in the Republic of Colombia, covering what was perhaps the most disturbed period in that country's history, many strange and exciting things happened to me; but perhaps the most thrilling and unpleasant experience was being captured by a gang of the Liberal Revolutionists, who were carrying on a guerrilla campaign in the Department of Cauca, where I lived.

In June, 1901, I had occasion to take a railway journey from the town of Buenaventura to San Jose. In the freight car I had sixty bags of flour, which I was going to sell in the interior of the country, where provisions commanded famine prices because the revolution had played havoc with the means of supply and transportation.

Like all the other passengers and the train crew, I was decidedly nervous when we pulled out of the station. Several trains had been held up by the revolutionists, and the people in them plundered or killed. Nobody was taking railroad trips at that time unless they had to do so.

All went well until we were within ten miles of a place called Cordova, at three in the afternoon. Then the locomotive came to a dead stop, for the track was obstructed by a number of huge logs and tree trunks.

THE ATTACK ON THE TRAIN.

Suddenly there was a chorus of shrieks and fierce yells from the jungle along the side of the track, and the next moment rifles began to crack and bullets came whizzing through the car in which I was seated.

I promptly flung myself down on the floor and escaped injury, as did also a fellow passenger—a white Colombian. But three other men in the car were shot dead and a dead stop, for the track was obstructed by a number of huge logs and tree trunks.

The shots died away when the attackers found there was no return fire, and then fifty or sixty revolutionists swarmed out from the bush and boarded the train. They were much better than savages—Indians and mulattoes, hardened by a long course of blood-thirsty guerrilla warfare in which quarter was neither asked nor given.

They yelled fiercely as they poured into our car and waved their machettes as if they intended to cut us to pieces. "I am a foreigner!" I shouted, in Spanish.

Some of them replied that they did not care about foreigners, but a man who seemed to be an officer, though he looked as ragged and disreputable as the rest, interposed. "We must take him up to Castillo," he said, naming a famous guerrilla leader of the Liberals. They took away my revolver and made me prisoner. The Colombian in the car—the only other living passenger—protested that he was a foreigner, and I backed up his statement, as it was the only way to save his life. "Take him to Castillo also," said the officer. "I don't believe he's a foreigner; but Castillo shall decide."

Four men guarded us, while the rest of the band broke into the baggage car and loaded themselves up with my flour. It was packed in bags of twenty-five pounds—very convenient for them to carry through the jungle. The officer remarked to me, sarcastically, that I had been very thoughtful. Six men had been killed in the attack. Besides the three shot in our car, two were killed with machettes in another car, and the engineer had also been shot dead at the first volley. The freeman and conductor had escaped, running down the embankment on the opposite side to the attackers, and getting safely away in the jungle.

A TERRIBLE MARCH.

We suffered terribly in the march to the headquarters of the guerrillas, which occupied four days and nights. A large part of the journey was through trackless forest, with dense undergrowth that had to be cut away, step by step, with machettes. One night we had to sleep in a noisome swamp, in two or three inches of water—or, rather, we tried to sleep, for clouds of mosquitoes, gnats and other insects made rest impossible.

During the whole of the journey we had nothing to eat but cold boiled rice—and precious little of that! We had plenty of flour and there was an abundance of game in the jungle; but no fires were allowed to be lighted or smoke to be seen, for we were in an enemy's country, and the government troops might descend upon us at any moment.

At length, early on the morning of the fifth day, we reached Castillo's camp. The officer led us up to the great man and introduced us to him, saying that we were two prisoners who claimed to be foreigners.

Castillo was a general all right, and very famous one at that; but he was the most disreputable-looking tramp I ever saw. That was natural, however, for he and his band were constantly marching through jungles and swamps, seldom going near a town, and frequently on the point of starvation.

tion. General and private alike were dressed in rags that would have been despised by any "Weary Willie" in the United States.

But directly Castillo spoke you understood that he was a gentleman. I discovered afterward that he belonged to one of the oldest Spanish families in the country, and had been educated at a German university.

A POLITE AND POLISHED REVOLUTIONIST.

After greeting us politely the guerrilla chief asked me, in Spanish, whether I would interrupt us by exclaiming "Oul! oul!" He knew that was a foreign word; but he didn't know what language it belonged to, and he didn't think it mattered.

Castillo knew in a moment that my fellow captive was no foreigner. Turning to him suddenly he asked sharply: "What part of the country were you born in?" "Call," said the man, forgetting his role for the moment. "I am the son of the Prefect."

"You did well to pass yourself off as a foreigner," said Castillo. They would have killed you, and I do not want too many murders committed by my band. But we must hold you a prisoner until you are exchanged for one of our friends. I have been told that you are a very good fellow."

Then he started to converse with me in very bad English, asking many questions about the United States. He sent one of his officers to fetch some clear water, and he brought back a tray and brought along by our party.

"Where are the glasses?" he asked as he knelt the neck of the bottle off with his machette.

"The last glass was broken the other day, general," replied the officer. "I must apologize for our poor accommodations," said Castillo to me, pouring out the wine into two small glasses. "Here is to your health, sir! Of course, you understand that you are not a prisoner. My men did wrong to capture you; but I will take the first opportunity of sending you back with an escort—and my sincere apologies."

In the meantime the men had made some cakes and we had a very fair meal. "These cakes are excellent, general," I remarked. "How do you manage to get such good flour up here in the mountains?" he asked.

"I believe it was taken off the train," he replied.

"May I see the bag?"

It was brought, and I showed him my name on it.

He offered profuse apologies that his 'fool men' should have made such a mistake as to confiscate my property. "But it is scarcely worth while risking the lives of my soldiers to take the bags back to San Jose," he added. "Will you accept my receipt for it?" Seeing no chance of getting the flour to a place where I could sell it, I took a bit of paper and scribbled it.

"We will certainly pay you," said Castillo, earnestly. "As soon as we can."

the revolution you have only to present this voucher at Bogota and it will be paid at once—and you can put your own price on the flour."

I had to look pleased, but in my heart I knew that the revolutionists had no earthly chance of winning and that nearly every body in the country was in the habit of lighting his cigarettes with such receipts.

AN ODD USE FOR FLOUR.

I stayed in the camp for four days and a half, recuperating from the fatigue of the journey, and getting rid of a touch of fever which I had contracted while passing through the swamps.

Most of my flour was used to build entrenchments, as most of the bags had got wet on the journey and their contents had gone bad. Castillo expected an attack by the Government troops, and fortified his camp.

"I can't let you go just at present," he said. "The chances are that the Government troops would shoot you on sight. Besides, I can't spare men for an escort."

"But what if they attack us?" "Then, then you can just flee up into the mountains and wait there until you have a chance to slip away to San Jose."

I knew nothing of the country, this did not sound very hopeful; but there was nothing to do except make the best of it.

There were about fifteen hundred men in the camp. The officers had three tents, while the men lived in huts roughly constructed of cactus and branches. All were full of fever and fight, and all were used to suffering terrible hardships. Some of them had even marched all the way from Panama down into the Cauca—a distance of over fifteen hundred miles through country which has been officially declared impossible for troops to cross.

There was a train from the camp to a place called Piedra Grande, situated on the San Jose multi track. From that point a jungle path led in a continuous trail right up to Panama. It was along this trail, which is known to few people, that the guerrillas had made their tremendous march, living on "panoles" (cakes of rough chocolate) and what little game they could shoot. Some died of hunger, thirst and fever, and others fell a prey to snakes and wild beasts; but the majority got safely through, after performing a feat which has probably never been beaten by any soldiers in the world. They told me the story of this march at night, over our coffee and cigarettes.

Several women were in the camp—colored "vivandieres," who followed the troops on every raid or skirmish, tending the wounded, encouraging the fighting men by loud yells and shrieks, and fighting themselves on occasion.

Most of the men, as I discovered by talking with them, had lost all idea of the cause they were fighting for. It had been knocked out of them by two years of bloody guerrilla warfare, and they were no better than bandits.

A PATHETIC SIDE OF THE REVOLUTION.

It was not so, however, with their leader. When I asked him why he was a revolutionist, he replied: "Do you please me when the government does such things as it did at Florida—sends its soldiers to a village and shoots down everybody in the market place—men, women and children—without the faintest reason or excuse?"

I asked him if it was true, as I had heard, that his brother was fighting in the ranks of the government army. "Yes," he said sadly, "brother against brother, father against son—that is the fate of this unhappy country, just as it was the fate of your own forty years ago."

But though my brother is a government officer my mother is not safe from insult. She lived in a town held by the government, and the officials and the mob combined to make life unbearable for her. Their favorite trick was to assemble outside her house and read proclamations declaring that I had been captured and shot. They hounded her out of the town at last. But I made them pay dearly for their sport—yes, I made them pay dearly."

His eyes flashed at the memory, and I forbore to ask for details of the payment.

GOOD-BY TO CASTILLO.

On the fifth day Castillo bade me good-by and sent me through the jungle to San Jose, escorted by four men. The Government troops had not attacked him, though his men foraged the countryside with impunity, and few of the Government generals were eager to try conclusions with him.

On the journey back we were nearly swept away by a flooded river, and one of the men saved my life by cutting a snake in halves just as it was on the point of attacking me. But at last I reached my destination safely, poorer by the loss of my flour and richer by an interesting experience.

NEW CHINA COINAGE

THREATENS A CRISIS.

Berlin Banker Sees Danger in the Substitution of "Cent" for "Cash."

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—Carl Beckman, a Berlin banker and a recent arrival here, who has been travelling extensively in China, says that a grave monetary crisis is liable to occur in China before long.

"That country," he says, "seems to be manipulating its coinage in such a manner as to have a less valuable coin circulation side by side with one more valuable, and, according to a well known economic law, the less valuable medium is likely to drive out the more valuable one and cause a financial depression."

Heretofore the cash (a copper coin value equal to about one-twentieth of the American cent) has been the chief coin in circulation, but recently there has been an extensive mintage of a coin called the 'cent,' equal to about ten cash. Of the latter fully 1,700,000 were coined last year, while the mintage of the 'cash' has not been increased. Now, while the value of the 'cent' is nominally about ten times that of the 'cash,' its intrinsic value is not nearly so much larger, and I fear that the less valuable, intrinsically, of the two coins, will drive out the other."

Easy to Shake Down the Pandora

The slightest pressure of the hand is all you need to shake the Pandora range.

With common ranges the air is full of dust and the house is full of noise when you shake them down.

But the Pandora, with its triple-gear shaker, works so easily, silently and effectively that shaking is the merest effort, which a small child can easily exert.

And this is only one reason why the Pandora is the very best range you can get.

Canadian Yacht Lost the Deciding Race by Narrow Margin—Fowler's Horse Won First Money—Yesterday's Ball Game

BASEBALL.

The game between St. John's and the Trojans proved a victory for the home team by a score of 10 to 6. The game itself was peculiar in many ways: heavy hitting, costly errors, brilliant individual play were all interspersed with rocky exhibitions of the game. Cregan and Dan. Britt made the star catches of the day, but men like Embree, Harris, Mills and Melish all showed up well.

The St. John's made two runs in their first, and it was not until the fourth inning that the Trojans evened up. Then St. John added one to keep things lively. The Trojans again evened, and went ahead three in the first part of the sixth inning. St. John pulled up two in their end of the game, and afterwards added four in the seventh inning. This completed the scoring and the game ended 10 to 6.

Two double plays occurred, one by each team in the eighth inning. Arthur Finnamore of the Tartars was playing with the Moncton boys.

Tartars Want to Play the St. John's. Austin J. Sweeney, the energetic manager for the Fredericton Tartars, was in town yesterday, and witnessed the game between the locals and Moncton. "Pat" thinks he has a team up at the capital which can trim any nine in the province, and he wants to get on a series of games with the St. John's for $100 a side or some such figure. He thinks two games here, two games in Fredericton, and the fifth to be mutually agreed upon, in case the teams break even, would be a fair deal, and it is hoped the St. John's will meet the Tartars half-way, as the games will be of the crackjack order, and hundreds of fans are just itching to see these two teams come together.

The Tartar team is rather broken up at present, as Malloy, Dunphy, George Finnamore, Bruce Macfarlane and McMonahan are all in Glace Bay playing on the Sydney team, and endeavoring to bring that nine to the top of the Cape Breton League. However, should gather his chickens to him, and Fredericton will be represented by as strong a team as ever went out of the capital.

WATER WORKS EXTENSION DIFFICULTY.

Suggested That a Bonus of $10,000 be Given McVay & McArthur if They Finish on Time.

A short time ago a sub-committee of the water and sewerage board was appointed to consider the situation regarding the extension to Loch Lomond arising out of recent developments in the work. This committee met Thursday, and the session was continued yesterday afternoon. An arrangement has been agreed upon in committee and will be recommended to the water board at a meeting which will be called for Monday. The difficulty arose after Engineer Barbour had reported that the No. 2 section would not be finished on time. Then McArthur and McVay announced that they could not complete the contract. In the last meeting of the council the matter was discussed and this committee chosen to consider it more fully and report back.

There were three courses open. The city might take over the work and finish it, the bondsmen of the contractors might be called upon to see that the contract was complied with, or the contractors themselves might be persuaded to go ahead.

McArthur and McVay made two offers to the city. One was to finish up to Eldersley Brook, and the remainder on a small percentage over cost, the other that the city should finish the difficult part between the brook and Lake Lettmer allowing payment for work already done.

Mr. Barbour suggested that the entire section be taken over by the city to be done by the contractors at its actual cost and the contractors to be given a bonus of $10,000 if the work is done in contract time.

The committee have evolved a plan by which the entire work will be done within contract time. This will mean the paying to McArthur and McVay a substantial bonus, but not an excessive one, and this bonus will be entirely conditional on the work being completed within contract time. Should the work not be finished in the specified time then the city will not be called upon to spend any additional sum.

According to Mr. Barbour the city is getting more than the value of its money in the work now being done, and the contractors are losing heavily. While the city is not bound by the contract prepared for the work, difficulties have been met which were not expected, and it is considered only fair that the contractors should be in some way reimbursed for their extra outlay. Yet at the same time unless they go ahead and do their utmost they will have to bear the loss. They are thus given a chance to catch themselves, but they must hustle, and the committee believe that the inducement will be sufficient.

CABLE STEAMER MAY BE TOTAL LOSS.

The Colonia Grounded Hard While Laying Cable—Tug Near.

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 18.—A serious hitch occurred today in the laying of the new cable for the Commercial Cable Co. from Fox Bay to Waterville, when the str. Colonia, of the contracting company, grounded on the northern end of Fox Island and now lies in a dangerous position. Early this morning the shore end was successfully laid and about eleven o'clock the Colonia with the assistance of a tug, was headed out Chedabucto Bay. The strong tide running and the strain of the cable at her stern pressed her down too near the shoals and she grounded quite hard. It is all the more serious because the tide was about high when she struck. The str. MacKay-Bennett is by the disabled ship to render her any assistance possible, and it is hoped she will float at the next high water. In order to lighten the Colonia some of her enormous weight of cable is being transferred to the MacKay-Bennett.

FOUR DISCHARGED

From the Employ of the Intercolonial.

Railway circles are considerably stirred at present owing to the laying off of four out of a gang of seventeen men, who have been working with the I. C. R. for periods varying from two to twenty-five years. Their fellow workmen are especially indignant at the treatment accorded them, and last night one of the men, Sandy Wallace, left on the midnight train from Moncton, where he will confer with the minister in reference to the matter.

This crew of seventeen men is under the charge of Foreman D. Weston Daley, and they load up the cars which go in the early morning on the "outward" freight. Their work is supposed to end at 6 o'clock in the evening, but sometimes when a little remains undone, a few of the men will remain overtime to get the train in readiness. This is always paid for extra, and it is open to the men to stay or not as they please.

On the night of July 11th the work was not well advanced when 6 o'clock came round. The foreman ordered them all to stay. Some demurred, but others promised they would.

Notwithstanding this, all went off at 6 o'clock, and the next morning it took a crew of the same size from 7 to 8:30 to finish up the work.

JEREMIAH DRAKE
FELL FROM A CAR
And Was Rather Badly Hurt Last Evening

Jeremiah Drake, the man in charge of the signal service in the custom house, met with quite a serious accident last evening. He was returning from Seaside park on a car with his wife and daughter, having spent the afternoon there. When the car drew near the custom house, where Mr. Drake resides, he stepped out on the car steps with a heavy picnic basket in his hand. Whether he suddenly became dizzy, or whether he was projected forward by a jerk of the car is not known, but he was pitched off on his head just before the car stopped, and received some bad cuts about the face.

Mr. Drake is a man pretty well along in years, and a considerable shock was sustained to him by the fall. He was carried to his home up stairs and Dr. Inches was called in to attend him. When last heard from last evening Mr. Drake was resting quite easily, but had not fully recovered consciousness. His face was cut and he was rather badly bruised.

THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE.
It is certain that Mr. Fitzpatrick will soon disappear from the department of Justice. Mr. Fitzpatrick is not yet in a position to take the $3,000 retiring allowance, for though he has been in office five years, it is not that long since he became one of the cabinet. Service outside the cabinet as solicitor general of Canada does not appear to count in this calculation. Mr. Fitzpatrick will need to serve as minister of justice until February 11, 1907 to qualify for the retiring allowance.

But the minister of justice will not on that account need to remain in office. Nor will his early retirement from politics leave him without some share in the financial rearrangements made last session. He goes to the bench and then will get the benefit of the $2,000 now added to judicial salaries. In the position said to be available for the minister of justice the salary will be $5,000. Moreover the position carries with it a pension of either $5,333 or $5,000 a year, according to the length of service before retirement. The legislation of this year adds to the pension $1,833 a year. Another statute carried through by Mr. Fitzpatrick a few years ago increases by $2,566 the pension accruing to him if he serves out the full term. This a man of his age may fairly hope to do.

Mr. Fitzpatrick is an able lawyer. He has in his handling of the school question in the west shown that he is also a resourceful politician. Mr. Fitzpatrick has been altogether too much for Mr. Fielding, Mr. Sifton, and the other objectors in the ministry, and has been able to carry out almost entirely the ideas of Monsignor Sharrett and the body which he represented.

It will be remembered that Mr. Fitzpatrick was the representative of the government who went first to Rome in connection with the Manitoba school question. The documents read in the house the year after indicate that large promises were then made that the Roman Catholics in the west would in the end obtain valuable concessions from Ottawa. It is fair to Mr. Fitzpatrick to say that he has never forgotten these undertakings. At his request the first papal delegate was appointed to Canada. The minister of justice has, during the time he has held the office, preserved close official relations with these representatives of the Vatican.

THE INTERCOLONIAL SUBURBAN SERVICE.
Mr. Emmerson says that the Intercolonial is giving too good a service and is losing money by it. He notes particularly the number of trains which a Hampton man may use to and from the city, and suggests that the suburban service may be cut down.

There is no reason to complain of the suburban service on the Intercolonial. The local trains are prompt, regular and sufficiently numerous, and fares are not unreasonably high.

But Mr. Emmerson must not suppose that all the suburban people on the line of the Intercolonial near St. John enjoy the same privileges as the residents of Hampton. He should reflect that the trains which the latter can use in order to get to their meals at home are largely through trains stopping at Hampton and Rothesay. But hundreds of season tickets are bought and held by people who cannot use these trains. Most patrons of the road live at stations which the through trains pass at full speed. Some three trains each way every day pass local stations without stopping. The average suburbanite depends almost wholly on the trains known as the Sussex and the Suburban. It would not be easy to reduce this service without causing great inconvenience unless the fast trains should be made to stop at all the stations.

The suburban business of the Intercolonial at St. John has increased more than of any other part of the traffic. We believe that it has given good returns for all the extra outlay. It is capable of still greater development, if the conditions are not made worse.

If Mr. Emmerson will give the subject close study he will find that his deficit is in no part due to the suburban service. It is safe betting that Mr. Emmerson's Ocean Limited does not return one half as much net earnings for each dollar of cost as Mr. Emmerson gets out of the St. John district suburban service.

HARVESTERS' EXCURSION.
This afternoon is likely to be a busy one around the depot as half a dozen trains from different parts of the province are leaving, taking 2,500 or more young men to the Northwest. The first train to arrive here came in early this morning from eastern Nova Scotia and left at 7.30 with about 600 passengers, of whom 350 came from Sydney.

The other trains will follow in the afternoon and evening. The train leaving about six p. m. will pick up excursionists at Miramichi and Fredericton Junctions. The number leaving from this vicinity will probably be 250. All the excursionists will be taken out of the city as soon as possible after arrival, but the C. P. R. have quite a proposition on their hands as they will need at least sixty cars to handle the traffic.

HE WAS VERY ATTENTIVE.
A Love Suit Which Consisted Chiefly of Assault and Battery and Months of Imprisonment.

(Special cable to the Star.)
ROME, Aug. 19.—A love suit which consisted chiefly of assault and battery, followed by the repeated imprisonment of the too-insistent suitor, had a wedding for its sequel this week. Salvatore Vinciano had for two years unsuccessfully paid attentions to Pauline de Ponta, a young lady of great personal attractions, also possessed of a yearly income of $1,500. Vinciano, despairing of his suit, adopting a curiously drastic way of winning Signorita de Ponta's affections. He lay in wait for her and attacked her with a razor, laying open her left cheek.

The result of this peculiar form of love-making was eighteen months' imprisonment, and, as may be imagined, an indignant refusal of his suit.

Having completed his term of imprisonment Vinciano made another attempt to take the heart of his fiancée by storm. This time he employed dynamite, with which he blew up the lower portion of his sweetheart's house, killing two horses and a mule belonging to her father. Another eighteen months in jail followed this second attempt.

Released from his imprisonment the irrepressible lothario stabbed the signorita with a dagger, injuring her severely in the arm. Once more a prison cell was all he obtained in return for his latest proof of devotion.

After three months of incarceration Vinciano made a fourth heroic effort to obtain his heart's desire, and shot at the fair Pauline with a rifle, depriving her of the use of two of her fingers.

Such self-sacrificing and constant love and devotion at last conquered the heart of the girl, who, after Salvatore's fourth attempt, pleaded tearfully with the magistrate for her determined sweetheart's liberty, and finally married him at the church of San Cuspepe.

SATURDAY SERMONETTE.
THE POINT OF VIEW.
My friend the policeman tells me whenever I meet him on his beat and stop for a moment's chat that "the world is a very bad one and it is getting worse all the time." As his "beat" is on "Beer Street" and "Brother Avenue" is not far off, he thinks the world is "a very bad one."

My other friend, the policeman, tells me "the world is a very good one and is growing better all the time." As his beat is on Children's Street and Church Avenue I don't wonder that he thinks the world is getting better. "The point of view" makes all the difference.

My friend whose income is five hundred a year is a very wealthy man to his neighbors, but they live on "Forty-Every Road."

My friend "Robin Ruff" with his "ten thousand a year" is a very poor man to his wife. It is a very hard life they have their hundred thousand a year.

I don't wonder that my friend Cynic says that marriage is a failure for his wife is a tumbler and his friend Cynic is no angel.

Mr. and Mrs. Honeymoon tell me that marriage is all right more than their fancy pointed it. It is a poem, a dream of bliss, etc., etc. I don't wonder that Mr. Honeymoon thinks that marriage is Heaven and that Mr. Cynic thinks it is hell.

I don't wonder that my friend Tory likes Mr. Liberal a plunderer, a pirate, a scoundrel, and more than that. Liberal thinks that Mr. Tory is a buccaner, a brigand, a Rock-feller, etc., etc. It is the point of view of a man who is "out" and that of the man who wants to stay "in."

My friend thinks Mr. Blank a genial, kind, and generous man, who by these means, aided by a gesture now and then, appears to exercise over them an almost absolute control.—London Daily News.

PROF. CROCKER'S TRAINED HORSES.
"The spectators found no reason to question the claim of Prof. Crocker to be the possessor of the most wonderful troupe of educated horses that the world has yet beheld. The wonderfully intelligent creatures go through a regular series of performances with little apparent stimulus but the voice of their master, who by these means, aided by a gesture now and then, appears to exercise over them an almost absolute control."—London Daily News.

It is reported that the position of general superintendent of the F. C. R. rendered vacant by the death of J. E. Price, will be given to W. A. Dube, superintendent of the delivery from Montreal to St. Flavia. Mr. Dube is said to have the support of Senator Chiquette and also Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

W. T. McCoun, horticulturist at the central experimental farm, has returned from a visit to Great Britain. It is understood that he will tender his resignation, to take effect on Oct. 1st, in order to become professor of horticulture and manager of the fruit farm at the new college of agriculture which Sir Wm. McDonald is erecting at St. Anne's.

The committee in charge of the complimentary dinner to be given Mr. Coates on his return from the Sydney and Halifax regatta have arranged to hold it in the Neptune Rowing Club rooms on Monday, the 21st, at 9 p. m. The dinner will be open to the public generally, and intending subscribers will kindly notify Heber Vroom or A. E. Everett.

An after dinner smoke will afford a good opportunity to discuss the possible amalgamation of the Yacht and Rowing Clubs, and possibly others, with headquarters at Millidgeville, should the Street Railway decide on extending their line out there.

The last race in the contest for the Canada cup yesterday resulted in a win for the American boat Iroquois, and as each boat had two races to their credit the cup consequently is held by the Iroquois.

At 11.02 the judges posted a red flag indicating that boats were to be sent to port. The preparatory gun was fired at 11.15, as the Iroquois crossed the starting line, the Temeraire at 11.15.25 on a unofficial time.

The yachts were not able to carry their spinnakers longer than a couple of minutes owing to their lacking the shore breeze from the southeast. With hallooers drawing well both yachts went along handily, the Iroquois appearing to have held her lead all the way.

At 12.08 half both set their spinnakers again and the challenger at once seemed to pick up on the defender. At 12.14 the gain of the Temeraire was marked. She appeared to have picked up much of the distance that separated them at the turn.

The Iroquois turned the second mark at 12.33.30, Temeraire at 12.32.15. At the turn the boats went on a starboard tack, which held until 12.40.40, when they came to port. The breeze freshened and made a pretty race.

At 12.15 the challenger appeared to be still gaining, and was very close to the Iroquois, the Temeraire's lighter spinnaker giving her more driving power. At 12.21.15 she slipped to windward of Iroquois blanketing her. She got a shift of wind and Mabett with a quicker boat shook his rival off and came up to the second stake on a broad reach. At 12.51 the judges' boat was coming toward the finish line to get the time of the finish of the first half. The races, close-hauled, were coming fast for the line with main sails to starboard and were well heeled over the crews stretched along the weather rail. At 1.01.30 Iroquois turned home stake, completing the first half. Temeraire turned at 1.02.37. Iroquois turned the first buoy on the second round at 1.21.10; Temeraire at 1.23.30.

At 1.24.23 something apparently went wrong on the Temeraire. Her head sails were taken down and she was brought into the wind. A minute later her sails were up again and she resumed her course. It was a spinnaker run with spinnaker boom to starboard. Official finishing time:
Iroquois 2.12.03
Temeraire 2.19.19

ST. JOHN STAR, SATURDAY, AUGUST 19, 1905

SIR HENRY MORGAN, BUCCANEER

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY,
Author of "The Southerners," "For Love of Country," "The Grip of Honor," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1905, BY C. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY

Sir Henry Morgan, a notorious buccaneer, who has been made vice-governor of Jamaica, was deposed by King James and ordered with arrest. Morgan, however, with the help of Benjamin Hornigold, is once more able to hoist the black flag. Hornigold aids them with the hope of getting Morgan in his power and exacting revenge for his brother whom the old buccaneer had hanged. On the Mary Rose, Morgan sails south and attacks two Spanish frigates conveying a heavily loaded galleon. The convoys were destroyed and also the Mary Rose. Morgan, however, sails south in the galleon where he is wrecked off the coast of Caracas.

Captain Dominique Alvarado, commandant of the port of La Guayra, loves the daughter of the Governor of the Spanish colony of Venezuela, and his love is secretly returned. The governor, however, chooses De Tebe as Donna Mercedes' future husband. The governor has sent Alvarado to La Guayra and they set out. On the way Donna Mercedes poured out her love story to Alvarado. He holds to duty and she attempts to jump her horse over a cliff. He saves her from the saddle as the horse goes down and acknowledges her love has conquered.

This time, utterly indifferent to the Seneca Agapide, Mercedes, mounted on one of the led horses, rode openly by Alvarado's side. Sustained by his presence, constantly in touch with him, she made the way down the difficult and dangerous rocky mountain trail. They watched the sun set in all its glory over the tropic sea. The evening breeze blew softly about them, riding side by side. Then the night fell upon them. Over them blazed the glorious canopy of the tropic stars, chief among them the fiery Southern Cross, emblem of the faith they cherished, the most marvelous diadem in the heavens. There below them twinkled the lights of La Guayra. The road grew broader and smoother now. It was almost at the level of the beach. They would have to pass through the town presently and thence up a steep rocky road which wound around the mountain until they surmounted the cliff back of the city and arrived at the palace of the governor upon the hillside, where Mercedes was to lodge. An hour would bring them to their destination. There was nothing to apprehend. The brigands in the fastnesses of the mountains or the savages, who sometimes strayed along the road, never ventured so near the town.

Padrique, by Alvarado's orders, had fallen back nearer the main body, so as to be within call.

"We shall be there in a little while. See yonder the lights of the town," said the captain.

"While thou art with me," said the girl, "it matters little where we are. There are but two places in the world now."

"And those are?"

"Where thou art and where thou art not. If I may only be with thee, if we may be together, I want nothing else." She had scarcely spoken before the sound of a cry, followed by a shot, broke on the night.

CHAPTER XIV.
THE terrific impact of the huge ship on the sand among the breakers, which thundered and beat upon her sides with overwhelming force, came just in the nick of time for Morgan. Had the disaster been delayed a second longer the furious buccaneers would have cut him down where he stood, and the officers were angered beyond measure at him for their present situation, which threatened the loss of the vast treasure already gained in the ship, although they had consented to Alvarado's proposition to attack La Guayra and Caracas, and the captain was in no way responsible for the storm and the wreck which jeopardized their future. Therefore it is probable that none of them, unless it were Teach, would have interfered to save Morgan, and he would have been swept from his feet by the savage men and instantly killed in spite of all that he or Carib or any one else could have done. But the violence of the shock when the ship took ground and the officers' bloody purpose of vengeance in the inevitableness of their approaching danger. They were checked their mad anger for a few seconds and given a moment for reflection. That moment convinced them that they could not yet dispense with the services of their captain. With black rage and white fear striving for mastery in their hearts, they rose to their feet and confronted him with menacing faces and threatening gestures.

"What's to be done now?" questioned one bolder than the rest.

"Now's the time," roared the undaunted Morgan, striving to make himself heard by all above the thundering seas, "to show your courage, lads!"

He had quickly observed that the force with which she had been driven on the shoals had shoved the galleon's nose firmly in the sand. She had been caught just before she took ground by a tremendous roller and had been lifted up and hurled far over to starboard. Although almost on her beam ends, her decks inclining landward, the strongly built ship held steady in spite of the tremendous onslaughts of the seas along her blize.

"These heart, men!" he cried. "Observe. She lies still and secure. 'Tis a stout hulk and will take a tremendous battering before she breaks. We may yet save ourselves."

"And the treasure?" roared one.

"Aye, and the treasure."

"I think the stern has about blown itself out," interposed old Hornigold, shouting out at this instant. "Look you, mates!" he cried, pointing to westward. "It clears! The sun'll set fair tonight."

"The boy's right," cried Morgan. "But first of all we must take no chances with our lives. Even though we lose the ship we can seize another. The world is full of treasure, and we can find it. Now I want some one to carry a line ashore through the breakers. Who will volunteer?"

"I," said Carib instantly.

"I need you more," answered Morgan, who did not purpose to be deprived of that bodyguard upon whose watchfulness his life had so often depended.

"I'll go," exclaimed young Teach, breaking through the crowd.

"That's a brave heart!" said Morgan. "A line here!"

Instantly a light line was forthcoming. Teach tore off his jacket, laid aside his weapons, kicked off his shoes, took a turn of the line around his waist, made it fast, wrung Morgan's hand, watched his chance, leaped overboard, was caught by an onrushing wave and carried far toward the shore. The ebb of the roller carried him back seaward some distance, but he swam forward nimbly, and the next wave brought him a little nearer the beach. He was driven backward and forward, but each time managed to get a little nearer the shore line.

The whole ship's company started after him, spontaneously cheering and yelling cries of encouragement in spite of the fact that he could not hear a single sound in the roaring, raging seas. Morgan himself tended the line, skillfully paying it out when necessary. In a few moments, although the time seemed hours to the watchers, the feet of Teach touched the shore, and, although the terrific undertow of the wave that had dropped him there almost bore him back again, yet by a superhuman exertion he managed to stagger forward, and the next moment they saw him fall prostrate on the sand.

Had he fainted or given way? They looked at him with bated breath, but after a little space they saw him rise slowly to his feet and stagger inland toward a low point where a lofty palm tree was writhing and twisting in the fierce wind. He was too good a seaman not instantly to see what was required of him, for, waiting his hand toward the ship, he at once began to haul in the line. Ready hands had bent a larger rope to it, which was succeeded by a third, strong enough to bear a man's weight. The buccaneers hauled this last in with great difficulty, for the distance was far and the wet rope was heavy. He climbed up and made it fast to the tree and then, as soon as he had done so, there was a rush on the ship for the line, which had been made fast inboard temporarily. Morgan, however, interposed between the crew and the coveted way to safety.

"Back!" he shouted. "One at a time and the order as I appoint! You, L'Olonis, and you, and you," he cried, naming certain men upon whom he could depend. "Go in succession, then haul a heavier rope seaward. We'll put a traveler with a boy's chair on it and send the abess and these priests first of all."

There was something about that man that enticed obedience, whether they would or no. His orders were promptly obeyed and intelligently carried out by L'Olonis and his men, who first went ashore. A heavy hawser was dragged through the surf and made fast high up on the sturdy palm tree. On it they rigged a traveler and the chair, and then the priests were brought forward from the cabin. They were stricken with fear, but renewed their courage at the sight of the calmness of the abess.

"Hornigold," said Morgan, "are you still faithful to me in this crisis?"

"I shall obey you in all things—now," answered the boatswain.

"Swear it!"

"By the old buccaneer faith," said the one-eyed, again adding the significant adverb, "now."

For a wonder, the captain paid no attention to the emphasis on the word "now."

"Can you keep your pistols dry?"

"I can wrap them in oilskin and thrust them in my jacket."

"Go to the shore, then," said Morgan, "and receive this woman and these priests. March them away from the beach to yonder clump of palms and guard them as you would your life. If any man approach you or them for any purpose shoot him dead without a word. I'll see that the others have no weapons. I've understood?"

"Aye, and shall obey."

"Go!"

The boatswain swung himself into the chair, and the men on the other end of the traveler pulled him to the shore, none the worse for his wetting. He opened his jacket, found the weapons dry, and waved his hand as a sign to Morgan that he was all right.

"Now, which of you will go first?" asked Morgan.

He turned instinctively to the tall abess. She indicated first one and then another among the poor captives, and as they refused she turned to Morgan and, with a grave dignity, said in Spanish, of which he was a master, that she would go first to show the way and then the others would be in better heart to follow. The set down on the boatswain's chair, which was simply a bit of wood held like the seat of a swing in a triangle of rope, made the sign of the cross and waved her hand. She was hauled ashore in an instant, with nothing worse to complain of than a drenching by the waves. By Hornigold's direction she walked past him toward the clump of palms which Morgan had indicated.

Then the Spanish priests took their turn, and after these reached the sand the rest of the crew went ashore. Morgan had been careful to indicate each one's turn, so that he preserved a balance between the more reputable and the more degraded members of the crew both on ship and ashore. Among the last to go were the maroon and De Lussan. They had both received instructions, one to station himself at the palm tree, the other to cover the hawser where it ran along the shore before it entered the water. These precautionary orders which he had given were necessary, for when the last man had been hauled ashore and Morgan stepped into the chair for his turn one of the infuriated buccaneers, watching his chance, seized his jackknife, the only weapon that he had, for Morgan had been careful to make the men leave their arms on the ship, and made a rush for the rope to cut it and leave the captain to his fate. But De Lussan shot him dead and before the crew could make a move Morgan stepped safely on the sand.

"That was well done," he cried, turning to the Frenchman.

"Ah, mon capitaine," answered the other, "it was not from affection, but because you are necessary to us."

"Whatever it may be," returned the old man, "I owe much to you, and, sent me, I'll not forget it."

The Frenchman, indifferent to Morgan's expressions of gratitude, shrugged his shoulders, turned away and made no reply.

The transportation of so many people across the slender line had taken a long time. The sun, just beginning to break through the river clouds, was near its setting; night would soon be upon them. They must hurry with what was yet to be done. Morgan sent Teach and the Brazilian back to the ship with instructions to gather up enough weapons to arm the crew and send them ashore. This was promptly done. Indeed, communication was not difficult now that the force of the undertow was abating. The ship had been badly battered, but still held together and would hold unless the storm came up again. As the arms came ashore Morgan served them out to those men whom he considered most reliable, and, after throwing out a strong guard around the huge driftwood fire which had been kindled by the use of shot and steel. There was hardly a possibility they would be observed in that deserted land, but still it was wise to take precautions.

The buccaneers were hungry and thirsty, but they were forced to do without everything until morning, when they could get all they wanted from the ship. So they tightened their belts and disposed themselves about the fires as best they could to get what rest they might.

Morgan and the officers drew apart and consulted long and earnestly over the situation. They could never make the ship seaworthy again. To build a smaller one out of her timbers would be a work of months, and when it was finished it could not possibly carry the whole crew. To march westward toward the isthmus meant to encounter terrific hardships for days; their presence would speedily become known, and they would be constantly menaced or attacked by troops from the heavily garrisoned places like Porto Bello and Cartagena. Back of them a short distance away lay La Guayra. It could be taken by surprise, Morgan urged, and burying the treasure.

They started to march westward the Indians would apprise the Spaniards of their presence and they would have to fight their way to the Pacific. If they took La Guayra, then the victory, with the treasure of his place and the opulent city of Caracas, would be at their mercy. They could ravage the two towns, seize the first ship that came to the roadside and make their way to the isthmus safely and speedily. As to the treasure on the galleon, the buccaneer captain proposed to unload it and bury it in the sand and after they had captured La Guayra it would be easy to get it back again.

Morgan's counsel prevailed, and his was the resolution to which they came. The council of war broke up thereafter, and those not told off to watch with the guards went to sleep near the fires. Morgan, under the guardianship of the faithful Black Dog, threw himself upon the ground to catch a few hours' rest.

The men marauding the wind had died away and the sea was fairly calm. The men swam out to the galleon, found her still intact, though badly strained, and by means of boats and rafts, working with persistent energy, succeeded in landing and burying the treasure under the very palm tree which held the rope that had given them salvation.

ARRANGEMENTS TO RECEIVE PRINCE.

Montreal Will Give Grand Entertainments.

MONTREAL, Aug. 18.—Arrangements have been made for the reception and entertainment of His Serene Highness Prince Louis of Battenberg, who will spend next Tuesday and Wednesday in this city. The main features of the entertainment will consist of a grand naval tournament at the arena Tuesday evening, and a garden party given by the city. The tournament will be for the benefit of all the hospitals in the city, under the patronage of his serene highness. The garden party will be held in the garden of Mount Royal Park at 5 p. m. on Wednesday. There was a meeting of officers of the Builders' Exchange at Grand Seminary today to discuss with Archbishop Brochu his plan for a permanent arbitration tribunal to settle the disagreement between labor and capital, and do away with the evil of strikes. The plan of permanent arbitration tribunal was then proposed to the officers of the Builders' Exchange, and seemed to find favor with them as with the representatives of the unions. The plan was very thoroughly gone over and it was resolved by the officers of the exchange to hold a meeting to come to the decision as to accepting the proposition. They thanked the archbishop very heartily for the interest he took in the settlement of their disagreement with the unions.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 18.—The International Typographical Union this morning by unanimous vote and amid great enthusiasm pronounced for the eight-hour day.

GOING TO THE WOODS.

Preparing For Next Season's Lumber
Cut—Another Heavy Frost.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Aug. 18.—The lumbermen continue to send crews of men to the lumber woods, and evidently they are preparing for a large season's cut. W. J. Noble is remaining here and every few days he ships a few men up to the scene of the lumbering concern's operations. Yesterday a crew were sent to Baker Lake, at the head of the St. John river, to work on the dam being constructed across the lower end of the lake. Robert Atkinson will send another crew of men to the woods on Monday.

At the Acadian congress at Caraquet a resolution was passed pressing the holding of meetings for farmers in the French districts of the province and employing French speakers for such meetings. For the first time in the history of New Brunswick a series of such meetings is now being held under the farmers' institute system, through Restigouche, Gloucester, Northumberland, Kent, Westmorland, Victoria and Madawaska counties, at places where there are French people living. The speaker is A. T. Charbon, of the central experimental farm staff at Ottawa, and he held the first meeting of the series at Balmoral, in Restigouche Co., last night.

There was another heavy frost last night and much damage is reported to have been done to the crops. Buckle wheat is reported to have suffered especially. Coun. Byron McNally reports that along the river near his home "Buckle" by frost has not been so great, as back a few miles buckwheat is pretty well killed off. From Fredericton Junction come reports that many fields of buckwheat have been entirely destroyed by the frost. The dry weather is reported to have affected the turnip and potato crops very much.

SAYS GERMANY AND ENGLAND VERGE ON BREAK.

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—According to several high officials of the government, Prince von Buelow, the Imperial chancellor, who yesterday left Norderny, where he was spending his vacation, for Berlin, went today to the castle of Wilhelmshoehe to see Emperor William. Dr. von Muehlberg, under secretary of the foreign office, who left Berlin for a vacation of several weeks, was suddenly recalled to join the chancellor at Wilhelmshoehe. The reason for these movements is so far only the subject of conjecture, but it is known that the relations between Great Britain and Germany have recently been on the point of breaking to an extent beyond the knowledge of the public. Precisely what happened has not been learned, but a serious situation existed—indeed, it is understood, it has not yet been dissipated. The British government appears to hold the conviction that the German emperor is seeking to form a European combination against Great Britain.

ONE MORE HALF HOLIDAY.

Will the Scheme Carry Again Next Summer?

—Business Men Want A Thorough Understanding First.

For the majority of the city clerks there will be but one more Saturday half holiday after today. The agreement entered into by most of the principal firms included only July and August, though a few of the trades will enjoy the weekly off-time for another month.

So far Nature has been particularly good to the hard-working employees, for there has been but one really disagreeable half holiday. The sun has outdone itself shining during the breathing spells and all weather conditions have been favorable. Thousands of dollars, that would have been spent in town, and out of the city, have changed hands as a result of the half-day freedom. Generally speaking people have been exceptionally lavish with their funds.

Merchants are backward about telling how the half holiday has affected business, but the general feeling seems to be that, while the public is gradually becoming educated to the new order of shopping, the idea is yet far from ideal. As long as merchants fail to agree in toto on the scheme, just so long will the movement be in danger of collapse. All busy houses in the principal business sections must close in order to have a fair-and-square holiday.

A number of prominent business men, men who stand to lose heavily should the scheme miscarry, sincerely believe the half holiday to be a practical and good institution if in the course of time all merchants of importance are led to see eye to eye in the matter. Small dealers are not seriously considered. Along these lines a few of the principal houses this summer crumpled with the question in a forced manner, and decided to give the scheme a thorough test, even at a grave risk. Their verdicts are awaited with interest.

During the half holiday season—short as it was—one of the leading lines of business was forced to abandon the weekly respite in self-protection, it was claimed, but other houses held to their signed or spoken agreement. It is thought that next season, if the movement carries, a thoroughly business-like understanding will be reached before the matter is fully decided upon.

HORRIBLE DEATH IN COAL BUNKER.

Halifax Man Sealed to Death on the Steamship Halifax — Boiler Stay Broke.

HALIFAX, Aug. 18.—A fatal accident under very distressing circumstances occurred this afternoon on board the steamer Halifax at Charlottetown, the victim being Jos. Monteith, a coal trimmer and a native of Halifax. As the steamer was pulling out of the dock, one of the stays of the boiler broke, causing it to tip over. An escape of hot water and steam followed, and the steamer, with quite a lot on board, was thrown amid considerable excitement among the passengers. At first it was thought that no one was seriously injured, but when the men were mustered Monteith was missing, and search revealed his body in the coal bunker, death having been caused from the effects of the rush of steam and scalding water, from which the unfortunate man could not escape. When the bolt that held the boiler stay snapped and the lower parts of the ship were filled with escaping steam and coal which was blown from the bunkers by the pressure, the other firemen were in the stoke hold. Monteith was alone in the bunker at the time, and even if he had time to shout his cries would have been unheard above the roar of escaping steam. The body was found with the face embedded in the coal and a piece of waste in his back.

It looked as if he sought to burrow his head in coal and escape the suffocating effects of the steam. The flesh on his arms and the lower parts of the body were removed from the bunker and taken to the freight shed on the wharf, where Coroner Johnson at once held an inquest.

A verdict in accordance with the above facts was brought in. Monteith was about 30 years old and unmarried. His mother is now in Charlottetown on a visit. The Halifax now lies at the wharf undergoing repairs, her list condition being due to the fact that one boiler is empty. It is expected that she will be ready to sail at midnight.

INJUNCTION MAY BE ASKED

By Prominent Citizen to Prevent the City Altering the Contract With McArthur & McVay.

Hamilton, Reed & Hamilton, acting on behalf of a prominent citizen, applied yesterday at City hall, asking for access to the city's agreement with the contractors on the Lock-Lomond extension work, and it is intimated that the firm had received instructions from their client to apply for an injunction to restrain the council from paying the contractors additional sums of money over and above the contract price on morning 2. This morning Mr. Hamilton received a reply from Mayor White, in which he said that he had instructed the city clerk to allow the firm access to the agreement, which had been made. His worship also called Mr. Hamilton's attention to the position of the city and the necessity which existed that the work should be finished before fall.

Members of the council do not seem to attach much importance to the injunction. One alderman said the recorder had given his opinion that the city had no authority to effect a compromise with the contractors, but the contract must be carried out or dropped entirely.

The effect of the opening of the sluice gate at Lake Lomond is said to have stopped operations in the dry lake. George McArthur said that previous to the water being turned on the pumps were sufficient to keep the works dry, but that lately the works had been flooded.

POLICE COURT.

The proceedings at the police court this morning were very brief, three prisoners facing Magistrate Ritchie.

Two were ordinary drunks, one being fined $5 or two months, the other $5 or thirty days. William Yates, an Englishman, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Officer Yates for lurking round Rankin's bakery, and also for lurking on Union street. Deputy Jenkins said Mr. Rankin complained to Officer Ward of Yates' suspicious conduct, and that officer ordered the prisoner away. Later on he was discovered acting suspiciously on Union street and was arrested.

Yates, who said he had been working for McArthur and McVay on the water extension for seven or eight weeks, came into the town on Thursday with the intention of going out on the harvest excursion. He had taken a few drinks and was simply sitting down for a quiet smoke.

His honor fined him $5 or two months, but allowed the penalty to stand on condition that Yates left the town. Yates was quite overcome with the unexpected leniency shown him and left the court to go out west, saying, "my word that was a narrow shave for me."

The Rousesay Tennis Club will hold their weekly tea this afternoon, which will be in charge of Mrs. Harry Puddington. The finals for the Turnbull cup will also be played.
