Forester's Entertainment.

Wednesday night of last week was Forester's night in St. George. The Independent Order of Foresters were entertaining and incidentally acquainting the public with the benefits to be derived from their order. The youth and beauty, old and young gathered and filled the hall seeking pleasure and information. The Committee in charge of the entertainment had decorated the hall for the event. The colors of the Foresters were everywhere evident, from the bright sashes of the members, the eye wandered to the gay colors of the bunting hanging in profusion round the hall and alighted with pleasure on the stage, with its forest background, and saw the circles of fir and spruce fresh from the woods, and green, hanging here and there from the ceiling and clinging to the walls. Over the center of the stage, surmounting the greeting "Thrice welcome to our Forest home," "Peace and Unity," a striking picture of the great Oronhyasok, ha 1889-1908, hung with the well beloved King and his beautiful consort—the Queen—on either side.

Music by the orchestra opened the entertainment. Then the following program was carried out: Trio, Miss Marsh, Miss O'Brien, Mr. Wetmore. Address, H. Sec. Judge Emmerson. Solo, Mr. Bridger. Trio, Miss Marsh, Miss O'Brien, Mr. Wetmore. Address, George, M. Byron. Address, High Councillor R. H. Davis. Solo, Mr. Dove. Address, H. C. Ranger H. W. Woods. Selection, Orchestra. Solo, Jos. Murray. Remarks by the Chairman, Mr. H. V. Dewar.

The addresses of the different gentlemen were well received by the audience. The speakers all seemed certain that we should be happy because allowed to live in beautiful St. George. Judge Emmerson briefly stated the history of Forestry and told of its marvellous growth of late years. H. C. Ranger Woods was in a humorous mood but did not fail to inject into his remarks, a number of telling points touching on the benefits of the order. High Councillor Davis a former citizen of our town, laid before the audience the proof, both of the growth and the stability of the order, in figures that were convincing. Mr. George Byron made the speech of the evening. Eloquent and convincing Mr. Byron was listened to with pleasure and applauded with frequency. The musical part of the program was carried out successfully, singers acquitted themselves with credit the singing of the trio being appreciated by the audience. The Chairman Mr. H. V. Dewar is a few brief remarks closed this part of the entertainment. Dancing followed and a tired but happy crowd wended their way homeward in the 'wee sma' hours' with kindly thoughts of Forestry in general and kindly thoughts of the members of court Mistletoe 4 & 5 in particular.

Choose Well

The line of conduct chosen by a young man during the five years from fifteen to twenty, will, in almost every instance, determine his character for life. As he is then careful or careless, prudent or imprudent, industrious or indolent, truthful or dissembling, intelligent or ignorant, temperate or dissolute, so will he be in after years, and it needs no prophet to cast his horoscope or calculate his chances in life.

"HEADACHE, WEAKNESS, HEART TROUBLE"

"I Suffered With for Years—Pe-ru-na Cured Me Entirely."

Miss Albina Chauvin, No. 50 Rue Agnes, St. Henri, Montreal, Can., writes: "I consider Peruna better than any other remedy, as it cured me when nothing else could. I suffered for years and years with heart trouble, headache and weakness. I never expected to find anything to cure me. I saw one day, in 'La Presse,' that Peruna was excellent and I tried it. One bottle produced a change in me and if the price had been $200 a bottle I would have paid it gladly. I have taken six bottles and am entirely cured. Please accept my thanks and best wishes for your Peruna."

"Please Accept My Thanks and Best Wishes For Your PE-RU-NA." ALBINA CHAUVIN

Many cases of heart trouble are caused by reflex disturbances. Disturbances of the stomach and liver produce symptoms of heart trouble. Catarrh of the stomach is a very frequent cause of sympathetic heart disease. Palpitation, shortness of breath and bleeding after meals are the most prominent symptoms.

Such a condition of the stomach is also liable to produce headaches of the most violent kind. Medicines that get into the symptoms will never lead to a cure. It is the effect which Peruna has upon the stomach, healing the mucous membrane and restoring the natural function of the stomach, that cures Peruna by healing each through which

St. Peter stood guard at the Golden Gate
With a solemn mien and an air sedate,
When up to the top of the Golden Stair
A man and a woman ascending there, Applied for admission. They came and stood Before St. Peter, so great and good,
In hopes the city of peace to win
And asked St. Peter to let them in.
The woman was tall and lank and thin,
With a scraggy beardlet upon her chin.
The man was short and thick and stout,
His stomach was built so it rounded out,
His face was pleasant and all the while
He wore a pleasant and genial smile.
The choir in the distance the echoes
swoke,
And the man kept still while the woman spoke.
"Oh, thou that guardest the gate,"
said she,
We two come hither beseeching thee
To let us enter the heavenly land,
And play our harps with the angel band.
Of me, St. Peter, there is no doubt There's nothing from Heaven to bar me out.
I've been to meeting three times a week,
And almost always I rise and speak.
I've told the sinners about the day
When they'd repent their evil way;
I've told my neighbors; I've told them all About Adam and Eve and their primal fall;
I've shown what they'd have to do
If they'd pass in with the chosen few;
I've marked their path of duty clear—aid out the plan of their whole career, For my lungs are good and my voice is strong,
So, good St. Peter, you'll clearly see
The gate of Heaven is open to me;
But my old man, I regret to say,
Hasn't walked in exactly the narrow way.
He smokes and he swears, and grave faults he's got,
And I don't know whether he'll pass or not.
He never would pray with an earnest
vim,
Or go to revival or join in a hymn;
So I had to leave him in sorrow there While I was the chosen, united in prayer.
He ate what the pantry chanced to afford
While I, in my purity, sang to the Lord;
And if cucumbers was all he got I's a chance if he merited them or not.
But, oh, St. Peter, I love him so—To the pleasures of Heaven please let him go;
I've done enough, a saint I've been.
Don't that atone? Can't you let him in?
By my grim gospel I know 'tis true
at the unrepentant must try below;
But ain't there some way you can see that he may enter, who's dear to me?
It's a narrow gospel by which I pray,
But the chosen expect to find some way
Of coaxing, or toling or bribing you,
So that their relatives can tumble through;
And say, St. Peter, it seems to me
This gate isn't kept as it ought to be.
You ought to stand by that opening there
And never sit down in that easy chair.
And say, St. Peter, my sight is dimmed,
But I don't like the way your whiskers are trimmed.
They're cut too wide and outward toss,
They'd look better narrower, cut straight across.
Well, we must be going, our crowns to win.
So open, St. Peter, and we'll pass in."
St. Peter sat quiet and stroked his staff;
But, spite of his office he had to laugh—
then said, with a fery gleam in his eye:
"Who's tending this gateway—you or I
And then he arose in his statue tall,
And pressed a button upon the wall,
And said to the servant who answered the bell:
"Escort this lady around to hell!"
The man stood still as a piece of stone—stood sadly, gloomily there alone.
A life-long settled idea he had
That his wife was good and he was bad;
He thought if the woman went down below
That he would certainly have to go;
That if she went to the region dim
There wasn't the ghost of a show for him.
Slowly he turned by habit bent
To follow wherever the woman went.
St. Peter standing on duty there Observed that the top of his head was bare,
He called the gentleman back and said,

From a Woman's Point of View

Jellied chicken is an exquisite feature of an afternoon tea.
After dressing a young roasting chicken,
cut it in joints as for fricasseeing, put it in a deep saucepan over the fire and nearly cover the chicken with cold water; add a level teaspoonful of salt, a half dozen pepper corns, a blade of mace, two sprigs of parsley, two stalks of celery cut in slices; cover the saucepan closely and as soon as the scum rises to the surface remove it with a skimmer; then let the chicken cook gently till the bones may be easily removed. A quart of broth should be left when the chicken is done.
With a skimmer remove the chicken from the saucepan, then strain the broth and return it to the saucepan, adding two tablespoonfuls of gelatine dissolved in half a pint of water, and let it simmer for about ten minutes.
In the meantime remove the bones from the chicken, and cut it in small dices. Line a bowl or oval earthen dish with alternate slices of hard-boiled eggs and slices of lemon; stir the pieces of chicken through the broth, stand the saucepan in a cool place, and when the mixture begins to stiffen pour it carefully into the mould, distributing the bits of chicken evenly through the broth. Let the mould stand in a cool place for a day when the whole will be well jellied;
then turn it out on a platter and ornament it with sprigs of parsley. When already for use cut the jellied chicken in thin slices and serve on a plate with celery mayonnaise.
For a princess or empire gown the new ball watches hung about the neck on a short chain are singularly appropriate.
With an elaborate reception gown a plain jewel watch chain with the watch inside the belt looks too eminently practical, so when the one-piece princess gown came into favor these watches were evolved by some clever artist. This small time-piece, which is but little larger than a pecan nut, hangs from a chain set with jewels and engraved to coincide with the watch itself. If the watch is set with diamonds, so must the chain be, while if emeralds, rubies, or sapphires give color to the brilliant stones they must be made use of also in the chain.
Pearls also are seen in these little watches but unless combined with diamonds are not so fascinating as the more glittering gems.
A tickling cough, from any cause, is quickly stopped by Dr. Shoop's Cough Care. And it is so thoroughly harmless and safe, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers everywhere to give it without hesitation, even to very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lunghealing mountainous shrub, furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Care. It calms the cough, and heals the sore and sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress.
Simply a resinous plant extract, that helps to heal aching lungs. The Spaniards call this shrub which the Doctor uses, "The Sacred Herb". Always

WHITMAN.

On New Year's morning the quiet of our street was disturbed for the first time by the shrill whistle of the letter carrier.
This set your scribe to thinking. This little town has had quite a history. Originally Whitman was a part of Abington and called South Abington. Here the first leaden bullets were moulded in the old revolutionary days to drive the English out.
Several years ago the growth of this part of Abington seemed to warrant secessions, and so a section was struck off and owing to a present of a piece of land for a park being given by a man named Whitman the town took his name.
One Post Office was quite sufficed to do the business of the town until the Regal Shoe Co. established a factory here and started into a large mail business. Then a branch office was opened in the east end for the accommodation of the Regal and east enders. That office grew until it outgrew the main office. About one year ago free delivery was given to the branch while the main office was still on the old beaten path. My but we people were indignant. It was a case of tailwagging the dog. We aristocrats were compelled to go to the Post Office for our mail and the east enders sat in their houses and had theirs brought to them. A few weeks ago, Mr. Roosevelt appointed the east end postmaster head postman and our man assistant, made his office
the head office and our office Station A.
Hereafter all my friends must add Station A to my address. To quiet us a little, they gave us on Jan. 1, free delivery.
In speaking of our town we think we have a model Civic government. We have about eight thousand people to govern but we do it without either Mayor or alderman. We hold an annual town meeting for which a warrant is issued containing the items to be acted upon.
Then we elect three men called select men and they attend to the public affairs and make a full report at next annual meeting. It was thought a few years ago that owing to the difficulty of getting a suitable place for the rate payers to meet in that some other method would have to be adopted but so wedded are this people to this direct simple method of doing business that they went to work and builded a hall at a cost of one hundred thousand dollars and recently dedicated to all town functions. There are twelve hundred chairs in the main audience room, and a dining room for five hundred, public library, city offices and every equipment for the town affairs.
Boston would do well to take a leaf out of our note book. A Happy New Year to all Greetings readers.

"Friend how long have you been wed?"
"Thirty years," with a weary sigh,
And then he thoughtfully added, "Why?"
St. Peter was silent with head bowed down.
He raised his head and he scratched his crown;
Then seeming adifferent thought to take,
Slowly, half to himself he spoke:
"Thirty years with that woman here—
No wonder the man hasn't any hair.
Swearing is wicked, smoking not good;
He smoked and swore, I should think he would.
Thirty years with that tongue so sharp.
Ho! Angel Gabriel! Give him a harp—
A jveled harp with a golden string;
Good sir, pass in where the angels sing.
Gabriel, give him a seat alone—
One with a cushion up near the throne.
Call up some angels to play their best,
Let him enjoy the music and rest;
See that on finest Ambrosia he feeds;
He's had about all the hell that he needs.
It isn't just hardly the thing to do
To roast him on earth and the future too
Then give him a harp with a golden string
A glittering robe with a pair of wings,"
And he said as he entered the realms of day:
"Well, this beats cucumbers, anyway,"
And so the Scriptures had come to pass,
The last shall be first and the first shall be last.

Combined with heavy linen embroidered in the open English design, filet lace is particularly effective, and many soft cushions and bedspreads are of this combination. For a cover for the dressing table, for a tea tray or for a centerpiece for the luncheon table, a finer quality of filet is employed, and it is combined with sheer batiste delicately embroidered instead of the coarser linen. Laid on a foundation of pale colored silk, the pattern of the lace shows up most attractively, but if placed directly upon delicate china, silver or rich mahogany, its natural beauty is also seen to excellent advantage.

For a lampshade for a handsome period room filet lace seems appropriate whatever, while for candle shades for the luncheon or dinner table this lace is suitable with either silver or gold table service and looks well with any manner of table decoration. For a large pillow cover for a broadcover sofa filet lace is more effective.

Handkerchief Baby Cap.
Choose an embroidered or lace-edged handkerchief, fold and cut it into halves. Take one piece and fold the edge back about an inch and a half, and feather-stitch it into place, and run fine gathers into the other edge of it. From the other half cut a circular piece about three and one-half inches in diameter and edge this with a fine small lawn-cover card. Take the gathered front and sew on to this corded piece and connect the two ends at the back. Feather-stitch all around within the circumference of the round back piece to match the front. Cut and hemstitch the strings from the remaining part of the handkerchief and place two pretty pink or blue rosettes of ribbon where the strings join on to the cap. A silk handkerchief, with a fine flannel lining, makes a warm winter cap.

Harmless Dry Shampoo.
Make your hair fluffy for Christmas evening by a dry shampoo. Put orris powder or common cornmeal in a tiny cheesecloth bag and go all over the hair with it. Part the hair in strands, dash on the meal or powder distributing it thoroughly. Take the hair in the hands and rub between the palms. Allow it to remain several minutes and then shake out each strand. This shampoo is especially nice for light hair, as the results are more apparent. After a dry shampoo the hair must be carefully straightened, with as little strain on the roots as possible. A great deal of unnecessary hair is lost by pulling the hair literally out by the roots when disentangling knots. A dry shampoo never wholly takes the place of a good washing so don't let the head go too long on the strength of it.

What is Worn.
A flat strip of fine handkerchief linen with scallops embroidered on the edge, and dots or flowers at intervals in the middle is seen on the front of the flannel shirt waist. The stock matches.

The shawl collar is seen on many of the most attractive coats in preference to the mannish notched and lapel shape. A good many coats are collarless and show an inner collar in another material or tone.

In all gowns of the moment the shoulder seam is hidden by trimmings of one kind or another. Mandarin armhole semblances and kimono sleeves continue to be most seen. The shoulder line is drooping.

A small fur turban, with two tails hanging over the left ear, is the latest in millinery.

The published summary of the agricultural census for 1907 shows a gratifying and, doubtless to some pessimistic persons, a surprising increase in farming operations in the Maritime Provinces. Since 1901 the area of tillaged land has been increased by some 182,000 acres. But far more significant did the record of increase in orchard land, in the acreage devoted to the cultivation of potatoes, in the growth in the dairying interests and in the large increase in the number of swine and poultry. The indications are that present development is due to an intelligent effort to meet the special conditions which exist in the east. It is a qualitative rather than in quantitative result. As such it gives hopeful promise for the future. The east cannot hope to compete with the west by the use of the same methods, but there is every reason to believe that a farmer in the east can obtain by intelligent adaptation to existing conditions of soil, climate and market, quite as good results as farmers in the west.

Wonder Ball.
A pumpkin wonder ball is a novelty which affords much amusement at a child's party. It consists of a big ball of yellow yarn to look like a pumpkin, in which are concealed little gifts. Brownie dolls, stickpins, etc. The end of the yarn is fastened to a green stem, on which it is wound as fast as it is unreeled to prevent a tangle. Let the smallest test have the first chance to unwind until the first gift falls out, and so on until each has a gift.

The Family Doctor says: Coffee is a very excellent remedy for asthma. Those who do not know how to cut short their attacks and have not tried coffee should do so by all means. It often succeeds admirably when almost everything else has failed. There are one or two little points to be attended to in taking coffee for asthma.

In the first place, it should be very strong—in fact, perfectly black. Weak coffee does more harm than good. If made very strong much of it need not be taken; a large quantity is a positive disadvantage, for it is less rapidly absorbed and only distends the stomach. Then it should be given without sugar or milk pure "cafe noir." It should be given on an empty stomach, for when taken on a full stomach it often does harm by putting a stop to the process of digestion.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidney nerves get weak, then these organs always fail. Don't drug the stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is simply a makeshift. Get a prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. The Restorative is prepared expressly for these weak inside nerves. Strengthen these nerves, build them up with Dr. Shoop's Restorative—tablets or liquid—and see how quickly help will come. Free sample sent on request card. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. SYNOPSIS OF Canadian North-West Homestead Regulations.

Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person or by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-agency for the district in which the land is situated. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at an Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

The homesteader is required to perform the homestead duties under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of a homesteader has permanent residence on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of the homestead, or upon a homestead entered for by him in the vicinity, such homesteader may perform his own residence duties by living with the father (or mother).

(4) The term "vicinity" in the two preceding paragraphs is defined as meaning not more than nine miles in a direct line, exclusive of the width of road allowances crossed in the measurement.

(5) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with parents or on farming land owned by him, must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Six months' notice in writing must be given to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of intention to apply for patent.

DISAPPOINTED.

Oh! we are disappointed! Sorry for the Liberal-Conservative party, sorry for Mr. Borden, sorry for Mr. Stanfield the Conservative M. P. for Colchester. As intimated in our last issue, this election was declared to be run on parity lines. Mr. Borden stood for it, Mr. Stanfield declared for it. Mr. Stanfield's name was introduced into the House as the candidate of parity. His election is protested by Mr. A. B. Fletcher, the prominent temperance worker of Truro. We ourselves have taken the stand that Mr. Stanfield's conduct is most reprehensible in inquiry as to methods employed and indeed would himself assist in bringing the case to trial. But what shall we now say? As a prophet we are a failure. Our optimistic stand is not sustained by the facts.

Mr. Fielding was unseated as member for Queens and Shelburne, and deserved to be, but he made no such claims as does Mr. Stanfield. We believed him. Here is how he is willing to assist. His lawyers have already filed preliminary objections to the petition of a highly technical character, affecting the form of the petition. The result will be delayed until the session is over, and the investigation then be declared off. This may be playing the game of "politics" but it does not seem to square with the "parity" profession,--we stand ready to condemn such a position wherever found, irrespective of party.

STRENGTH AND WEAKNESS.

In surveying the political events of the past year, it seems quite remarkable that while there have been many bye-elections the result leaves the two parties in Parliament practically what and where they were when the year began.

Viewing this from an independent standpoint, such a state of affairs should be quite encouraging to the Liberal party in power, with its large majority, and, to say the least, not most hopeful to the Conservative party in opposition. Under such conditions an opposition making no headway must rather be regarded as a failure.

With its strong following, there can be but little prospect of defeating the present Government in any of its advances, with the present weak opposition.

The day of Mr. Borden is not the day of Sir John A. Macdonald. As a personal force of party leader, the present leader of the opposition is not in the same class with the strong man of the eighties. As with leaders so with followers. His Majesty's loyal opposition never had so many weak men and so few strong.

A strong, healthy government depends on a strong, healthy opposition, and if the present Government is strong and healthy, it is in spite of this lack.

In the first few days of the present session the opposition showed some aggressive spirit but was soon put on the defensive again by the superior strength of the men to the Speaker's right. Even Mr. Foster, once recognized as one of the keenest debaters on the floors of the House, was as Samson shorn of his locks.

Only a change for the worse can be looked for at the close of the session. Let us hope that in the new Parliament the opposition will be able to introduce to the House some men of strength sufficient at least to make it interesting for the governing party, and healthful to the country.

THREE EVENTS.

The three most prominent events in the public affairs of the Dominion during the past year, are, Canada's representation at the Imperial Conference, the negotiation of the commercial treaty with France, and the negotiations with Japan in regard to the question of Japanese immigration.

In each of these our representatives of the Dominion Government have shown themselves equal to the occasion.

The year's record is one upon which every Canadian citizen can look back with satisfaction. Canada's welfare and prosperity have advanced at home, and her standing in the world has also been advanced.

If when the record of 1908 comes to be summed up, there will be as satisfactory a showing to look back over, there will be no cause of complaint.

BY THE WAY

He who owes nothing fears nothing.

The date is being written with a very flat top on the 8.

Open and genial winter with dandelion accompaniment.

Some of the candidates understand the great game of bluff.

How long the acts and resolves of 1908 will last remains to be seen.

The old year has lost its grip which is more than humanity can say.

The snow flake is still just about as fleeting and transitory as the dew-drop.

There are occasions when it is better for the party to give it a thrashing than assist it to win.

The lower bridge continues to do business no matter who induced the Government to build it.

Swearing off is good, but the absence of any necessity for the exercise of that annual function is better.

"Health and happiness for 365 days" is one reasonable greeting. As it is leap year 366 days would have been nearer right.

What a chance for a real detective to make a reputation by finding the man who is responsible for the building of the lower bridge.

It's a good idea for candidates to have a little modesty and sense in giving out their election chances. Too much of one song becomes tiresome.

Judge, severely, as he glances over the dock, and recognizes an old timer among the prisoners. "You here again?"

"Yes, yer anner!"

"What brought you here?"

"Two cops!"

"Drunk, I suppose?"

"Yes, yer anner, the both av them!"

The Maxims are constructing for Japan a new type of ship for the transportation of small submarines which may be discharged from the hold, unperceived by the enemy, by means of locks. The boat built to strike like an assassin in the dark adds another terror to naval warfare and fresh importance to the submarine.

Underwater fighting gains steadily in the estimation of experts in the science of war.

The personality of a candidate very often turns the scale in an election. A liking, on the part of the voters, for the individual, obscures the issues at stake and the quality or utility of the achievements of the candidate are forgotten. The good men do, may be offset by their faults but the electors overlook this fact. The people prefer men who do things. At the same time taking credit for things done is not doing them and the people on election day often call this bluff.

The following "gem" received by a lady in town, speaks for itself. This Vigilance Committee, OF ONB, has evidently been in the poisoning business before, as the work so far, has been well done and is evidently not the work of an amateur:

"Be warned in time. The dose that Allen's dog got was intended for you dog. There is five dogs that are a public nuisance and we are determined to rid the town of them, chasing teams and killing every little cur that comes to town. As you are alone yours may be spared but I advise you to keep him up, Yours,

VIGILANCE COMMITTEE.

Town Council

The regular session of the Town Council was held Monday evening Jan. 13th with Mayor Lawrence presiding. One of the chief features of the meeting after a lot of cross-firing was the passage of a motion to pay contractors of town building the balance due them on the building. The reports of the town officers were presented and ordered placed on file. A motion that the Orangemen be invited to have their celebration here on July 12th, was carried.

Ald. Bogue moved that Wm. Garnett be relieved of his taxes, which was carried after some discussion.

Ald. Johnson brought up the matter of the expense in running the Alms house as shown by the Sec'y's report. As the situation was at present, it was costing six hundred dollars per year to care for three paupers, which in his opinion was altogether too much. Several of the aldermen spoke briefly on the course the Council should follow in dealing with the matter, and some suggestions were offered. Some of the board favored leasing the property and arranging with outside parties to care for the poor at a weekly rate. It was finally decided that Ald. Johnson, representative to the Municipal Council, take the matter up at the annual meeting of the Council and see if some satisfactory solution of the matter could be suggested.

An Alder was present who had $19.00 he paid Leo McGrattan, amount of insurance premium on the town building, one thousand dollars having been placed on building and contents.

The building committee was instructed to get rooms in new hall ready for next meeting of the council. A number of bills were presented, referred to the different committees and ordered paid. Adjourned.

As the full reports of the town officers will be published and distributed, we will not go into any details in this issue, but it will be pleasing to the rate-payers to know that, after paying all bills, the town has a surplus of $689.40.

Plug Hat Pioneers.

It was in the year 1870, when Rev. John A. Anderson was pastor and I was a leading pillar of a church in Junction City. A storekeeper said that a number of the boys wanted plug hats. He could not afford to send for them unless he had orders for eighteen. I insisted I would not wear such a thing, but he badgered until he got an order from me and from Rev. Mr. Anderson. The hats came and were delivered Saturday afternoon. A beautiful Sabbath day followed, and Mr. Anderson and myself ventured to church wearing plug hats. Then we found the other sixteen belonged to gamblers, and they marched into the church, single file down the west side, carrying those hats most gracefully, and filled all the available front seats. They knocked Mr. Anderson silly for that service, and it was not long before the plug hat in Junction.--Kansas City Star.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

County Council meets Tuesday the 21st.

Oats are selling for 35cts. a bushel in Carleton Co.

Taylor, Meating & Co. have received a first class hay which they are selling at $16 a ton.

The poisoner is around again. Look out for your dog. Howard Allen lost a valuable hound on Sunday.

The display of shoes at Frauley Bros. is well worth examination. No such prices were ever offered in St. George.

A number of new boxes have been placed in the post office by the Postmaster and may be rented by the public for one dollar a year.

The violent storms last week did considerable damage around the shore. Weir stakes were torn from their anchorage and many weirs were damaged.

The Anglo-American Fire Insurance Co. of Toronto, through their agent, R. A. Cross, presented their friends and patrons with a fire calendar for 1908.

Calais is to have a sixty thousand dollar Post Office and public building. A petition praying that Red Beach stone be used in the construction of the building, is being circulated in Calais.

Arthur McKenzie the popular representative of Canong Bros. Ltd. will visit in the interest of that concern, all the territory west of the St. John river, formerly looked after by the lamented Fred Hutchinson.

Lewis McGrattan was injured Friday. He was on the delivery wagon and the horse was striking quite a clip when a little child ran in front of the team. To save the youngster, Lew jumped from the wagon and landed on the hard ground with force enough to turn his ankle. The child turned in time to avoid the collision and Lew is now nursing a very sore ankle.

George M. Byron of Whitepool, was a speaker at the G. P. entertainment on Wednesday last. George is a fluent speaker; a staunch Forester and an enthusiastic politician. He claims that politics is the one game in life worth playing. Mr. Byron possesses a genial disposition, is affable and pleasing in conversation and has the happy faculty of making friends.

Mr. James P. Brine of Boston, Mass., owner of the Club property at Lake Eutopia, had a surveyor running lines there last week. Carpenters are at work building a new ice house and making general repairs on the buildings. Mr. Brine's family and friends will spend the coming summer at Eutopia and from present indications the summer of 1908 will see many visitors enjoying the delights of this charming resort.

The very prettiest calendar that has reached our office came with the compliments of Connors Bros., the well known packers of sea foods at Black's Harbor. The picture is a charming home scene entitled, "Home Sweet Home." It reproduces an old fashioned, time worn cottage, at East Hampton, L. I., half covered with vines and half hidden in shrubbery; resting in the comfortable shade of big old trees, famous because it once inspired the immortal song "Home Sweet Home."

An old bachelor gives the following ten reasons why he is not married: I am one of fourteen children that were born to a man who worked for a living. I swear constantly. I eat with my knife. I tuck my napkin under my collar. I chew tobacco. I change my cuffs once in two weeks. I like green onions. I never let a woman have my seat in a car. I'm saving money. I hate to choose one because so many others would feel bad.

The following gentlemen were elected officers of St. George Lodge No 12 F. & A. M. for the year 1908 at a meeting held on Tuesday evening Jan. 7th.

C. C. Alexander, M. D., W. M.

The attention of fishermen is called to the new regulations issued by the Department of Marine and Fisheries and found in this issue.

John Brown, who was injured last week by being thrown from his wagon, is in the hands of Dr. Taylor. It is feared his spine is slightly injured.

Special services are being held in the Baptist church every evening this week. Revs. Williams and Titus are assisting the pastor Rev. E. V. Buchanan.

A business meeting of the members of the Church of England was held last week and a communication from the County Orange organization, asking if the celebration of July 12th were held in St. George, if the congregation would cater to the visitors and be prepared to look out for the wants of the inner man, was considered. It was decided to give the Lodge an affirmative answer. A meeting of the Orangemen will be held the last of the month. It will then be definitely decided where the celebration will be held.

Chief Justice Tuck, finding that his health would not permit him to properly perform the duties of his position, has sent his resignation to the government. The Chief Justice has not been in robust health for some time. Born on Feb. 27, 1831, he is now completing his seventy-sixth year. For over twenty-two years he has occupied a seat on the Bench, and for over eleven years he has been Chief Justice, succeeding the late Sir John C. Allen. Chief Justice Tuck completed his studies at Mt. Allison University, and was admitted to the bar in 1855. Previous to ascending the Bench he was clerk of the crown and afterwards Recorder of the city of St. John. While at the bar he took part in many important criminal cases.

Dan was one of a family of four, a youngster full of life, whose only worry was his school books. Now Dan had a chum and one day the two boys breathing mystery and showing concern arrived at Dan's home and it did not take his mother long to find out the trouble. It seemed the chum had a white rat and was willing to allow Dan to own the pet, provided mother was willing. Well, like the majority of women, the mother did not care for rats and anxious to soften the disappointment of her boy she offered, as an excuse for not keeping the animal the fact that its tail was so long, that it would be getting into everything. Next day the boys came to the house again, bright and happy looking, and proudly displayed to the astonished parent the same old rat, with its tail cut off. What could mother say. Dan kept the rat.

The Church of the Immaculate Conception in Calais, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at 5.30 o'clock Tuesday morning, in which the principals were William A. Drinon of Calais, and Miss Jennie Reardon of St. George, N. B. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. J. Moran in the presence of a large number of friends of the bride and groom. The bride looked very dainty and charming in a traveling costume of blue broadcloth with hat to match, and was attended by her sister, Miss Rose Reardon of St. George, who was gowned in green broadcloth with hat to match. Francis S. Drinon, brother of the groom was best man. Following the ceremony the wedding party drove to the Windsor hotel where a sumptuous wedding breakfast had been prepared. After partaking of which Mr. and Mrs. Drinon left by C. P. R. for a short wedding trip, their destination not being given out. The young couple, who have a host of friends throughout the border towns, were the recipients of many beautiful and costly wedding gifts. A host of friends extend congratulations.

The white whale that has been sporting round the Bay for the past year made a flying trip up the Magaguadavic on Monday last and took in the scenery round his basin. The bulk of pulp must have frightened the sportive monarch of the deep, for he did not stay long. Quite a number of the citizens saw the monster.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—J. D. Roland, president of the Manufacturers' Association, was here on Saturday seeing Sir Wilfrid Laurier with a view of getting the government to take some further steps towards forest preservation. What the manufacturers really want is either the prohibition or an export duty on pulp wood. There is some probability that the government will get a commission to look into this matter at an early date. Telegraph.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

The Turned-up Nose.

Don't turn up your nose at your neighbor. You have enough dirt on your own doorstep without getting out your magnifying-glass to count the specks you can see on his entrance from your lofty position. The man who thanks God he is not as other men are, and throws his thumb over his shoulder at his neighbor, is a rascal, even if he is a mason and a deacon in the church. Look out for the fellow who has a great deal to say of his neighbor's failings. He is throwing dust in the air to hide his own villainy. "He that despiseth his neighbor sinneth." At the bottom of his spite is hatred, and hatred is the mother of murder. The chances are you hate your neighbor because you know at heart he is a better man than you are. This habit of taking a fling at the man over the way does not always take the form of saying nasty things about him. It may keep you from being neighborly and decent to him; it may make you stick your tongue in your cheek when his name is mentioned. For your sake, and for the sake of all whom you want to think anything of you, get away from that mean, dirty, unmanly habit of esteeming lightly those around you. Get to Paul's plane of "thinking every man upon the things of others."

Catching Wild Animals.

The greatest animal dealer in the world is Carl Hagenbeck, who lives at Stellingen, a suburb of Hamburg. Here can be purchased almost any wild animal in existence. Asked recently how he managed to keep up his stock, Mr. Hagenbeck replied: "From my depots. I have depots everywhere—six in Asia, three in Africa, several in Europe, two in America, as well as depots in Siberia. I have over sixty travellers working for me all the time, whose sole business is to collect animals and ship them to me here. They employ thousands of natives to help them. Then I buy up everything that comes into Hamburg, and I may say that if anybody wishes to dispose of his animals he invariably writes to me."

The next step is to telegraph to an agent in the neighborhood who inspects the stock with a view to purchase. "For instance," continued Mr. Hagenbeck, "the other day I received a letter from a resident in Rhodesia, saying he had got a large collection of African deer and birds, and wished to get rid of them. Within three weeks I had secured the whole collection, and they are now on the way to Hamburg. I have at present several travellers on the way home, some of them with very large consignments of animals. Next week I expect one of my men from Siberia. He is bringing me deer, sheep and other animals."

Two animals, it seems, are exceedingly scarce just now. These are the hippopotamus and the rhinoceros. "They are taken from their mothers when quite young—no easy feat as you can imagine—and then brought up on milk. The feeding of them, when you have finally secured them, is no light undertaking. A baby hippopotamus will drink thirty pints of milk a day and bellow for more. To arrange for such a supply in the desert means that a large number of lame goats have to be taken along with the hunting party. Thirty years ago I supplied the London Zoological Gardens with an African rhinoceros. It was the first rhinoceros brought to Europe since the days of the Roman amphitheatre."

Another very scarce animal is the giraffe, and between 1880 and 1900 only three giraffes were imported into Europe. Among his innumerable adventures with animals Mr. Hagenbeck had one with a giraffe. "In Suez, some years ago, a full grown giraffe ran away with me. The rope I held him by got entangled around my arm, and I could not get free. I was dragged along the streets and fearfully banged about. When I at length got loose I was so exhausted that I was obliged to lie down for a quarter of an hour without moving." The king of animal dealers considers that his narrowest escape took place while superintending the lowering into a pit of a huge alligator. "Suddenly with a sweep of its tail it knocked me right into the middle of a dozen large alligators. I jumped out in an instant, or I must assuredly have been torn to pieces." Montreal—Standard.

NOT GOOD PATIENTS.

Doctors Are Hard to Manage, Says a Trained Nurse.

"I suppose it is treason to my superior officer to say so, but doctors are certainly not easy patients to manage," remarked the trained nurse. "At least, this has always been my experience, and most nurses, you will find, agree with me in the matter. I have recently been nursing a physician through typhoid, and my experience with him was typical of the average of the profession in general. "Doctors know altogether too much for their own peace of mind, you see. Each new symptom is recognized, and if it is an unfavorable one, why, the patient's weakened condition usually leads him to lay great stress upon it. Then, since he has always been in a position to issue orders to the nurse, he cannot easily bring himself to take orders from her, and he is disposed to criticize and take exception to treatment which the ordinary patient receives as a matter of course.

"But perhaps the most troublesome thing of all is the mania which the doctor has for taking his temperature. If he has a moderately high fever and is allowed to use the thermometer as often as he wishes he can fret and worry over the result enough to send his temperature up materially. More than once rather than exasperate a physician patient by a refusal to let him have the thermometer and rather at the same time than let him know just how high his fever was I have dropped the instrument just as I was in the act of handing it to him. Of course I apologize for my carelessness at such times, and the regret really does not have to be all assumed, for I am at the expense of buying myself a new thermometer.

"At one time I had an inaccurate instrument, which never registered high enough, and I used to call it my doctor's thermometer. By a little dexterity I could substitute this for the one I actually used myself, and the encouragingly low temperature it would show would greatly please the patient."

SHOWING OFF A GUEST.

The Innkeeper Was Determined Fessenden Should Appear.

One night while ex-Secretary of the Treasury Fessenden was on a political mission to the northern part of Maine he stopped at a small hotel.

In the center of the house was a big stove that warmed two rooms. In one of the apartments Judge Fessenden established himself and prepared to take proper comfort during the evening. Just as he had got well located with a book the landlord, a six-foot French Canadian, came in.

"Excuse me, 'seir," said he, "but Mr. Ed Wiggonne of Maysville, she be in de older room--she wan' 'de see Mr. Fessenden."

"Tell Mr. Wiggonne I'll be in a little later," said Judge Fessenden, turning another leaf in his book.

The landlord went out. He returned in a moment. "Mr. Wiggonne she send his compliments, an' she say dat she wan' Mr. Fessenden right away."

The interruption just at that moment rather nettled the judge, who was in no way accustomed to dictation. He sent back such a sharp reply that it was easily seen that the landlord was out by his asperity. In just thirty seconds the landlord was back. Judge Fessenden raised his eyes to find the man staring at him with a look of desperate resolve. With suppressed excitement in his tones the tall landlord spoke.

"Mr. Wiggonne say she wan' see Mr. Fessenden quick, an' she gues' 'de house, an' I say she gon' to see him."

Forthwith the big landlord swooped down on the astonished gentleman, seized him, tucked him under his arm and strode across into the room of the sequestered gentleman from Maysville.

"Mr. Wiggonne," calmly said the landlord, as matter of fact as though he had just delivered a pitcher of ice water, "here be Mr. Fessenden." He set the indignant "caller" down on a chair and retired smilingly.

Power of Imagination.

Illustrating the strange power of the imagination, E. F. Benson, author of "Dodo," tells this incident: A doctor he knew had found it necessary to give a patient for many evenings an injection of morphin to enable him to get some sleep. After awhile the doctor thought it advisable to stop the morphin, and for two nights his patient was unable to sleep, owing to great pain. On the third night the doctor, being still unwilling to administer morphin, injected plain water instead. The man slept perfectly and awoke in the morning with what is known as a morphine mouth.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure relief for Prevention. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the very first—before the break of heat of these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics is like Candy Cold Cure. No cutting, no drastic, nothing sickening. Also for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child. If there is feverishness, night or day, there is probably his Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 2¢ boxes for the pocket, also in 25¢ boxes of 48 Preventics. "ALL DEALERS"

The Woman's Voice.

Manrievie had a presentiment that he would not survive the operation. Men get these queer forebodings sometimes, and in 90 p. c. of the cases they prove sound conclusions. On what the presentiments are based none can say, but somewhere, far down in the consciousness of the patient, there lingers a queer little fear, half-formed, perhaps, but very much alive nevertheless. It was thus with Manrievie as they wheeled him from the ward to the cool, white-washed theatre, where the operation was to take place.

He felt little fear of the chloroform and the knife; only he wished that his conscience had been easier—that his brain had been bare of a certain memory which stabbed him with strange persistence. Every episode in connection with her whom he had called Babs was gleaming in his vision, and he told himself that he had behaved very, very, very cruelly. The first lapse of passion had been excusable, but what followed had been all evil. He could find no excuse for his behavior.

A smell of something sweet and overpowering stung his nostrils. They were administering the anaesthetics now, and, under its influence, he felt himself drifting into a strange region. Then darkness. . . then a sudden dawning of light, and lo! he seemed to rise from the operating table, and, with a lock of pitying disgust at the senseless body that lay there, he strode forth free from the burden of the flesh.

Suddenly he found himself in a small room in a London suburb. He remembered the room, distinctly. It was here that he deserted Barbara on that shameful morning, when he had stolen away like a thief, leaving her to bear her burden alone. Remorse caught him in a cruel grip. He was terrified to discover that, although all physical sensations had vanished now, the sensations of the soul were a thousand times more acute.

If only he could find Barbara and beg for her forgiveness. Surely that pardon would soothe his pain! It would come to him with wondrous balm, and perchance the agony of remorse would be lightened. "Babs, Babs," he moaned. He looked up and saw that Barbara was in the room.

She did not move. A sudden horror gripped him. What if he could not make her understand, feel and hear? So strong was his sense of life that it had not occurred to him that he now bore no earthly shape—that, indeed, he was not visible to those whose eyes were eyes of flesh.

"Babs," he said, "Babs, my own darling, listen!" Still, she gave no sign of consciousness of his presence. His fear grew more acute.

And now that he was beside her—now that he was "longing to pour out the words of repentance"—she did not turn toward him nor harken.

He spoke again. He tried to comfort her—tried to tell her how he repented the past—how he would have "made amends had his life continued." With an outpouring of passionate words, such as had never come to his mortal lips, he pleaded for pardon, and essayed to soothe her sorrow.

"Darling, darling, put me out of your mind and begin life afresh. You're so young you mustn't despair. The world is still yours, and you can still be happy. Forget me and love some other man who will treat you better than I treated you." "No answer." No answer. So he had come too late, then! The words of comfort which his living lips should have spoken, bore no meanings now that those lips were dead.

Remorse! Ha, he knew the meaning of that word now.

Then in that supreme moment of illumination, he realized that this was hell. Not the hell of the theologians with its fires and its physical torments, but the more subtle hell wherein the dull, half-formed remorse of the living world was magnified into the flaming torment which assailed the dumb and impotent spirit. To touch the living creature and receive no answering look to speak to the living creature and hear no responsive word, to behold anguish and to be powerless to comfort, that was the real hell, and he—was in its depths.

The operation was ended. They took back the inert body, with its head swathed in hideous bandages, to the ward, and the surgeon who had performed the work whispered to his assistant that they might have spared themselves the trouble. "Still one has to make the experiment," he said, with a shrug of his broad shoulders.

Slowly, consciousness came back to Manrievie. He realized that what he had experienced had been the fabric of a vision, and for a moment the pain that lingered in his head was as naught to the joy of this discovery.

He dozed a little and awoke half an hour later, in that dreamy, semi-delirious condition which frequently precedes the end of life. His brain was still filled with—thoughts of Barbara, and he babbled feebly—"Let me hold your hand, darling," he murmured. "I—I shan't be afraid if you'll let me hold your hand."

The surgeon bent over the bed. "Poor chap, he's thinking of some woman," he muttered. His wife, perhaps, he cast a pitying look at the bandage hidden face. Naught but the chin was visible, but the surgeon, who was something of a physiognomist, perceived the weakness of it, and wondered whether there had been tragedy in the man's life, and whether that weak chin had helped to bring it about.

As he stood beside the bed, Manrievie rose wildly and stretched out his hand, gropingly. "Babs, Babs," he moaned. The surgeon looked around the ward. All the nurses save one were busy, but at the far end of the room that one was bending over some needlework. He approached her and whispered—

"You might go and sit beside that man in No. 27," he said. "He's nearly gone, poor chap, and his mind seems upset about some woman." The nurse nodded, and rose instantly. She did not belong to the ward, and was rarely there. She was comparatively new to her work, and was inclined to be more sympathetic than the average nurse. In a moment she was beside the bed of Manrievie, and was holding his hand.

The grip upon her hand tightened. Then the patient's lips moved, and he spoke tremulously. "I can feel your hand though I can't see you. But it's you, isn't it?" "Yes," she replied gently. "Yes."

"Dear, sweet saint. How soft and cool your hand is, just as it used to be and I remember how, when I was ill and wretched, it's touch on my forehead would make me well again."

A gasp followed. The left hand traced a curious pattern on the sheet and the nurse knew what the action meant. The time-limit of him who lay in bed No. 27 was at hand.

"Darling I should be quite easy in my mind if you would tell me that you are happy—and that you forgive me that all I did."

It was surprising, she thought, that he could speak so coherently in his half-delirious state. Perhaps, however, the delirium was not so pronounced after all. "I am quite happy and content," she said, softly. "And I forgive you everything."

She wondered dimly who and what was the woman to whom his wandering words were addressed. Again the voice of the patient fell upon her ears. "And you'll put aside all thoughts of me and you won't let your life be affected by what's happened and you'll be quite, quite happy, won't you?" "Yes, yes. Have no fear. All will be well." He did not speak again. The hand that lay in her grew rigid.

It was never given to the nurse to know that she to whom she had accorded forgiveness and supreme solace was indeed the woman from whom the forgiveness was craved. Yet so it was, and coincidence had once again stretched out its arm to bring this strange thing to pass. But had she known, most surely she would have spoken the same words.

A Little Bit Mixed

Three tired citizens—a lawyer, a doctor, and a newspaper man—sat in a back room recently in the cold gray light of the early dawn. On the table were many empty bottles and a couple of packs of cards. As they sat in silence a rat scurried across the hearth into the darkness beyond. The three men shifted their feet and looked at each other uneasily. After a long pause the lawyer spoke. "I know what you fellows are thinking," he said; "you think I saw a rat, but I didn't."

The Cough of Consumption

Your doctor will tell you that fresh air and good food are the best cures for consumption. But often the cough is very hard. Hence, we suggest that you ask your doctor about your taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It controls the tickling, quiets the cough.

The Druce Case Regarded as Lost

London, Jan. 6.—The perjury charge brought against Herbert Druce, by his nephew, George Hollamby Druce, has collapsed, but civil action for the recovery of the estate of the Duke of Portland will be continued. This became known this afternoon when Mr. Atherly Jones, counsel for Geo. Hollamby Druce, announced that in view of the discoveries made when the coffin of Charles Druce was opened and examined on Dec. 30, it will be impossible to proceed with the prosecution. The statement was made after the presentation of evidence by Prof. Augustus Pepper of the University of London, and others who were present at the examination.

Herbert Druce was charged with committing perjury by swearing that his father, Thos. C. Druce, was charged with committing perjury by swearing that his father, Thos. Charles Druce of the Baker Street Resident, died December 28, 1864, and that he saw the dead body placed in a coffin and buried in Highgate cemetery. George Hollamby Druce declared that this must be untrue, because

W. C. Druce was in fact the fifth Duke of Portland who lived until 1879. This being so George Hollamby Druce claimed that he himself, being the senior descendant in the male line, was the rightful heir of the Portland dukedom and to certain rich estates, the income from which he placed at $1,500,000 per year, held by Lord Howard DeWalden.

The grave of T. C. Druce upon being opened was found to contain human remains which were declared to be those of T. C. Druce. Robert C. Caldwell of New York, attorney for the Duke of Portland, during the hearing of this case by swearing that the Duke of Portland who had lived as T. C. Druce and the Duke of Portland, third of this dual existence put his own self to death and arranged a mock funeral on which a quantity of lead was buried in Highgate cemetery in place of a body.

The resumption of the case to-day before a crowded court house testified to the revival of interest brought about by the recent examination and the hints given out by the attorneys for George Hollamby Druce that the body found in the coffin was not that of T. C. Druce.

The first witnesses called testified to the condition of the vault and the coffin, they said there was absolutely no lead in the vault and declared that they were satisfied that neither the vault nor the coffin had been tampered with since the latter had been deposited. Then Prof. Pepper took the stand and gave a detailed description of the coffin and its opening. Within the coffin, he said, was the body of a male, aged between 65 and 75 years. It was extremely well preserved, the skin being broken in only one place. The face was covered with a handkerchief bearing the initials T. C. D. The removal of this handkerchief revealed the features of a bearded man quite easily recognized by any one who had known him in life. He had reddish brown moustache and whiskers and a beard of reddish brown and white.

On this evidence Mr. Atherly Jones announced the withdrawal of the perjury case, saying that it would be contrary to the best traditions of the legal profession if he persisted therein.

Magistrate Snowden, in discharging Herbert Druce, whose truthfulness he remarked had been absolutely and conclusively vindicated, thanked him for having consented to the opening of the grave in the interests of justice. George Hollamby Druce declared to-day that the civil action would be continued, the public interest in the affair vanishing with the collapse of the case against Herbert Druce.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Canada to Supply Timber to the World.

The general increase in the price of wood for the past few years has had the effect of turning public attention to the timber supply in general. To many, the increase in price is sufficiently explained by saying that there is a combine among lumber producers and manufacturers. But, independent of the possible existence of any combine, a deeper cause underlies the increase in price, and the cause lies in this, that timber is becoming harder and harder for the manufacturer to get. Greater and greater economy and use of material formerly considered as waste is being introduced into the manufacture of wood, but in spite of it all the price of logs is going up, owing to higher wages that have to be paid, greater distances the logs have to be brought and many other reasons.

Not in America alone is the scarcity of timber being felt; it has become a world wide question. Only seven countries in the world are now in a position to export timber. In Europe there are five, namely, Austro-Hungary, Norway, Sweden, Finland and Russia; in America there are two, namely, Canada and the United States. But Russia, Austro-Hungary, and the United States are increasing their population and developing their industries so fast that they cannot long continue to be exporting countries. The timber of Norway is threatened with excessive cutting. Germany, where the practice of forestry has been brought to the greatest perfection, has never been able to supply home demands, and is a heavy importer.

Canada, Sweden and Finland are left, and their supply is hopelessly deficient for the world. If Canada were to supply the United States alone, its entire timber area would be cut off and denuded in the course of a very few years—probably less than a decade.

Various estimates of Canada's forest land have been given. Eight hundred million acres was a few years ago accepted as pretty near the truth; but, considering the damage caused by fire and other destructive agencies, it is doubtful if the existing forests cover half that area. To keep this area in its most productive state, thus enabling it to meet the demand as far as possible and to produce the largest revenue, is the problem set those in control of these areas, and the protection of the forests against fire and other dangers and their proper management under forestry methods is the only way in which this can be effected.
