LONDON, TUESDAY, JULY 31.

"DOG DAYS" IN THE IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

Many hours of the time of the British Parliament are consumed every week in the asking and answering of questions, often on the most parochial of subjects, but which are no doubt deemed of great importance by the questioners. Does the Chief Secretary for Ireland know that on the Widow Clancy's farm in Tipperary there are now four royal Irish constables to protect her from lawlessness, and does he not think that two royal Irish constables would suffice? Is a type of the queries addressed nightly to the good-natured Mr. Bryce. Recently Mr. Bryce was asked by Mr. John Roche, M. P., whether a man who was fined two shillings by the Galway justices at the Woodford petty session for not having a dog license, really owned the dog. Twice this matter was discussed in the House of Commons. The second time Mr. Roche reminded Mr. Bryce that the policeman who had discovered the lack of the license had never seen a dog with the defendant, and had not even alleged that he knew defendant owned a dog. "Has the dog since been found," he inquired, "dead or alive?" Mr. Bryce, who vowed on the first occasion that he had never seen the dog himself, now practically admitted that there was something in the point. "I am willing to telegraph to Ireland," he announced, "and ask whether the dog has been seen." Not till this pledge was given was the House able to get down to business. These experiences are not new; they have been going on for years, and illustrate the great necessity there is for some reform that will relegate local questions to a purely local body. Whether it is called a legislature or not is of little importance. What is needed is the unloading of all purely local matters on domestic legislative and administrative bodies, leaving the Imperial Parliament to be in fact Imperial as well as in name. No doubt any proposition with this object in view, however much in the interests of the empire, will be opposed as the entering wedge of home rule. But why should there not be home rule in these matters as we have in Canada? Before Confederation there were public men in this country who preferred a legislative to a federal union of the provinces; but who would now propose to discard the present system? If such a thing were possible and the man who would suggest it today would be regarded as a lunatic—we should have in Canada, in some degree, a counterpart of the Imperial Parliament. The wonder is that the average Britisher has put up with the anomalous, wasteful state of affairs so long. Devolution must come, and perhaps sooner than many expect.

THE BRITISH PREFERENCE.

There is one Conservative M. P. who was candid enough, while in England, as a manufacturers' delegate to the Chambers of Commerce conference, to admit that the consumer generally pays the duty, and that the preferential tariff put in force by the present Canadian Government has been of real value. Mr. Cockshutt, M. P. for Brantford, is reported as saying that the Canadian people in their zeal for preferential trade had sacrificed $5,000,000 a year in duties that might have been collected on British goods. And this is fairly interpreted to mean that the Canadian people have been relieved by the action of the Laurier Government of $5,000,000 a year in taxation by the tariff brought into force in 1897, and maintained in force in spite of the opposition of the political associates of Mr. Cockshutt.

This is a noteworthy confession. In view of the declarations made from time to time by the Conservative spokesmen in Parliament. On their part, they have opposed the continuance of the British preference, alleging that it was of no value, and that what Canada needs is higher, rather than lower, taxes on British goods. But they pay tribute to the strength of the position taken by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his friends by refraining from putting themselves on record by a motion formally opposing the preference, and proposing its repeal.

The Canadian Opposition occupy the illogical position in professing to be anxious for preferential trade, and at the same time showing hostility to the only real advance ever made by Canada toward such a scheme.

Those Canadian manufacturers who have been so loudly proclaiming their readiness to support preferential trade if Great Britain would only consent to change the fiscal system under which her world-wide commerce has grown up, are very indefinite in their pronouncements. In Canada, as well as in Great Britain, their representatives have been making speeches, professing to be warmly in favor of preferential trade; but they have not condescended, at all events in Great Britain, to get anywhere near the details. Would they be willing to support a further decrease in the tax on British products sent to Canada as a means of inducing Great Britain to change her trade policy, and give us a preference in her markets? Judging by the declarations of some of these gentlemen before the Canadian tariff commission, the further reduction of the taxes on British goods entering Canada is the last thing to which they would consent.

While a candid declaration of what these manufacturers mean by their advocacy of preferential trade relations would clear up the situation considerably, there can be no doubt that what they desire is a still higher tax on British goods imported into Canada, and a correspondingly increased tax on the products of foreign countries.

The average Canadian would not "enthrone" very heartily over such a proposition, and the average Britisher would resent it. But this is the proposal which Mr. Cockshutt and his friends have in view when they talk preferential trade. Would it, had they been candid enough to enter into details, have received any popular support in Great Britain? What the British say is that even now we effectively curtail the sale of their products in Canada, while they admit our products without disabilities of any kind; and they assert that no preferential tariff that does not provide for a reduction of the tax on British products entering Canada will be considered. In order that there may be no false pretense about it, the advocates of this so-called preference, when found in either country, ought to be made come into the open and definitely declare themselves.

HOLLAND'S DOUBTFUL FATE.

Poor little Queen Wilhelmina, whose married life appears to have been a tragedy, has been again disappointed in her hopes of an heir. The disappointment is not hers alone, but will be shared by the people of Holland for very substantial reasons. If her marriage proves to be without issue, the throne will pass from the historic House of Orange, around which the affections and the racial and national pride and traditions of the Dutch are entwined. The question of the succession might create a perilous situation. The people of Holland would be confronted by German claimants. They might choose to make the monarchy elective, but would they be permitted to look outside of Germany, or pass over the choice of the German Emperor? One possible alternative would be the erection of a republic. The Norwegian people recently chose their own form of government, and decided upon a monarchy. In the belief that it would smooth their relations with the kingdoms by which they were surrounded. Holland as a monarchy undoubtedly has more prestige in Europe than Holland as a republic would have, but even if the Dutch should declare for a republic in the event of the present dynasty expiring, Germany might dictate otherwise.

The people of Holland fear German aggression, and attribute to the present Kaiser the ambition to extend the boundaries of his empire by the absorption of the Netherlands. A great portion of German commerce streams through the rivers and ports of Holland, and the incorporation of the little kingdom in the empire would immensely develop German maritime power, an object which is believed to be a passion with the Emperor.

Father Vaughan, of London, Eng., seems to be making the smartest smart in a manner it doesn't relish.

Cobalt is suffering from a water famine. As Cobalt is a no-license town, a Cobalt thirst is a serious proposition.

Mr. Verville, M. P., the Montreal Labor M. P., has been booed off the platform by an audience of fellow-tourists. Mr. Verville is finding that politics is harder work than his own trade.

R. R. Gagey is supposed to know something of New Ontario, and says the Gillies limit will yield the Province millions in silver. One-third of a mile in this limit is included in the concession given privately by the Temiskaming Railway commission to an Ottawa company.

Count Witte is pained over Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's "Vive La Duma!" and says it does not express the feelings of the English people. If Count Witte wants to know the truth, the British Premier made a distinct hit with his fellow-countrymen. They will forgive many "breaks" of that kind.

The wife of W. E. Corey, the president of the world's greatest corporation, the United States Steel Trust, has secured a divorce and the custody of her child. Corey simply left his wife for another woman. A poorer man might have been haled to a police court and fined, but plutocratic wife-deserters are immune from any such vulgar interference.

A DREAM OF ICE.

(Adapted Constitution.)

It's mighty cool in Greenland, and there we'd rather land Than roam by Africa's fountains-by India's coral strand.
It's mighty cool in Greenland, and fine indeed 'twould be To play leaping o'er icebergs and churn the Polar Sea!

It's mighty cool in Greenland and how'd you like to go An' live for fifteen minutes in a summer storm of snow?

You bet, 'twould be refreshin' and mighty fine 'twould be To have a drippin' polar bear, and swim the Polar Sea!

NOT PRESCRIBED FOR.

(Punch.)

Doctor (to Mrs. Perkins, whose husband is ill)—Has he had any lucid intervals?

Mrs. Perkins (with dignity)—Es 'ad nothing except what you ordered, doctor.

AN OLD COMPLAINT.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

"Yes, doctor, one of Willie's eyes seems ever so much stronger than the other. How do you account for it?"

"Knothole in the baseball park fence, most likely, madam."

VIVE LA DUMA.

(Toronto Star.)

That cry of the heart wrung from Campbell-Bannerman—La Duma est morte, vive la Duma—may be the signal to the world that politicians after this are going to place right above expediency.

HIS BARGAIN.

(Kinsey Mercury.)

"My dear," says the thoughtful husband, entering the house with a huge package in his arms, "you remember last week when you secured such a wonderful bargain in shirts at 48 cents and neckties at three for a quarter for me?"

"Yes, love," says the fond wife. "Well, don't think I didn't appreciate your thoughtfulness. See, I have bought something for you. I noticed some beautiful green and yellow plaid goods in a show window on my way home, and bought you eighty yards of it at 4 cents a yard. The clerk said it was a great bargain, and it will make enough dresses to last you two years. Why, she has fainted!"

TO ENGLAND.

(Arthur Noyes.)

Mother and sweetheart, England; from whose breast With all the world before them, they went forth.

They seamen, o'er the wide uncharted waste, Wider than that Ulysses roamed of old. Even as the wine-dark Mediterranean Is wider than some life-reliquished pool.

Among its rocks, yet none the less explored To greater ends than all the pride of Greece And pomp of Rome achieved; if my poor song Now spread too wide a sail, forgive thy son.

And lover, for thy love was ever wont To lift men up in pride above themselves To do great deeds which of themselves alone They could not; thou hast led the unfaltering feet.

Of even thy meaneast heroes down to death. Lifted poor knights to many a great enterprise. Taught them high thoughts, and though they kept their souls, they kept their bodies.

Lowly as little children, blind as the blind, Eyes unappalled by all the myriad stars That wheel around the great white throne of God.

A MATTER OF APPEARANCE.

(Ladies' Field.)

Life for a woman must always be more or less a question of appearance—unless, of course, she is a suffragette, when it becomes a matter of biceps—and none are so good, or so beautiful, or so intellectual that they can afford to be dowdy.

GIRLS AND GODS.

(Pioneer, Allahabad.)

Leading members of the Bombay society have memorialized the Government complaining of the prevalence of the custom of marrying young girls to Hindu gods. The temple authorities, in permitting the ceremony, are accessories to crime and punishable as such.

WAR OFFICE WISDOM.

(Punch.)

The removal of the War Office Department from Pall Mall to Whitehall will begin shortly. The suggestion that the authorities should sell the furniture in use at the old building and re-purchase it at enhanced price for the new one has been declined.

THE USUAL EFFECT.

(Bobcaygeon Independent.)

This is the glorious season when people take a "two weeks' holiday," and spend a month at home resting.

DOG DAYS AND RABIES.

(Springfield Union.)

There is not the remotest connection between dog days and rabies; indeed, the records show that the fewest cases of rabies occur in July and August. There are more cases in April, November and December than in any other months.

THE OBSERVING TOURIST.

(Yonkers Statesman.)

She—What was the thing which made the greatest impression on you in Venice?

He—The absence of watering-carts on the streets.

AT THE WRONG COUNTER.

(From the Boston Herald.)

The lady who went to the book department of a big men's store and inquired for "Crabbe's Tales" was told that fish and provisions were on the ground floor.

DEPTH OF MEANNESS.

(Told by Ida M. Tarbell.)

A park policeman, politely accosting a modest gentleman in an alpaca coat, said: "Beg pardon, sir; but could you lend me a lead pencil?"

"Why, certainly," smiled the gentleman, producing one at once.

"And now your address, please?" the policeman went on. "I saw you picking flowers a moment ago."

Why Bonds and Consols Are Falling

[From the Montreal Witness.]

British consols are selling today at about 87 and 88, whereas in May, 1899, before the South African war, they were selling as high as 113 3-16, and as high as 106 1/2 in July, when war was known to be nearly certain. So lately as last year the lowest price was 87 1/2, and the highest 91 1-16. Various contributory causes are discussed in the non-technical press—for instance, that there are today large issues of higher interest-bearing securities, of which the British Government itself has issued several; that there are large demands for money today for industrial purposes; that today colonial bonds may be used as trust investments; and that the British Government has been unable of recent years to maintain the sinking fund purchases. These reasons are all interesting and more or less pertinent, but the underlying reason for investors selling their bonds is not discussed. The final undoubtedly is the reducing value of gold through overproduction. Securities which represent gold must come down in value, while the consequent normal rise in the value of all property and products makes enterprise profitable, and an unusual demand for investment therein.

Not only have British consols declined very considerably during the past seven years, but all bonds everywhere have declined. The city of New York, for instance, only this week sold its 4 per cent bonds for less than 108, much to its chagrin, while United States Government bonds have declined some 10 per cent since 1901, and French 3 per cent rentes have fallen below par with interest in recent years. Not only has the increased cost of living had the effect of inducing investors to get rid of their low interest-bearing bonds, which yield a very small income, and to invest in issues that return from 3 1/2 to 4 1/2 per cent, but there has been the added reason for it in the experience since the Boer war that Government funds are just as liable to violent fluctuations as any other securities. The business man today, therefore, seeks out securities that may legitimately increase in value under the steady increase in the country's prosperity, such as street railway and steam railway stocks, and he sells his bonds to reinvest his money in such securities. Bonds, as we have pointed out before, are evidences of debt, bearing fixed rates of income, while the prices of everything substantial are advancing from year to year.

A writer in Moody's Magazine says: "That many big men in the business world understand and are acting upon them, is clear from the fact that the output of bonds was never greater than last year. That is, the long-headed financiers, who are the real capitalists of most of our great industries, are selling and disposing of their holdings of debt as fast as possible, even at the lowest prices for many years. Both they and the corporations they control are becoming debtors as fast as possible. They are flooding the markets of the world with bonds and notes. They are exchanging dollars, which are declining in value, for other property, which is rising in value. They want the other fellow to do the losing; they will attend to the gains. They know that while the creditor class had a piece during the many years when prices were falling, the easy money now goes to the debtor class. It is like finding money to promise to pay a certain number of dollars ten or twenty years hence, when dollars will be worth only half their present value. Or, as another financial authority puts it: 'Higher interest rates and lower prices for bonds are the logical results of a rapidly increasing output and supply of gold.'"

A BRANTFORD MYSTERY?

Foul Play Suspected in Death of Unknown Near Brantford.

Brantford, July 30.—Brant County officials have decided to investigate the death of an unknown man who was found dead on the Grand Trunk tracks near Middleport, fifteen miles east of Brantford, on Sunday. At first it was thought that the victim, whose body was mangled almost beyond recognition, had been accidentally killed by a train, but an inquiry made today into the facts of the case reveals the possibility of foul play. The victim was about 5 feet 6 inches and very broadly built. He was neatly dressed in a suit of blue serge, but wore old boots, the soles of which were burnt. On the inside of the collar, a faintly-inked name, which looks like F. L. Sheehan. There were no papers nor money in the pockets, but a lady's wedding ring and a railway ticket were found. Inquiry shows that a man tallying to the description of the victim, in company with another man, probably an Indian, got off the Buffalo train at Middleport, crossing at 7:30 o'clock Saturday night. Conductor Ausbrook, of the train, thought the action strange, and asked the men whether they knew the country. They replied that they did. Middleport is a small village a mile or so from the tracks. The conductor said the two men had traveled together. One had paid the fare of the Indian, and seemed to have plenty of money. So far as can be learned no train passed the point where the two got off until 3 o'clock on Sunday morning. That train must have killed the victim. The Indian companion is nowhere to be found. A deep wound was found on the victim's head, and everything by which he might be identified was gone.

HENNIKER HEATON'S OFFER.

London, July 30.—Lord Henniker Heaton, Conservative member of Parliament for Cambridge and father of the "Imperial penny postage" idea, has addressed a letter to Chancellor of the Exchequer Asquith and Postmaster-General Buxton, offering to provide an acceptable bank guarantee to cover the loss in revenue for the first three years, which might follow the adoption of penny postage by Great Britain and America if the Government will appoint a committee to investigate and report on such probable loss. Postmaster-General Buxton replied that the Government could not see its way to accepting a private donation for such a purpose.

HOW YOUNG POET GAINED FAME

Insistence Won Friend in Sarah Bernhardt.

IS A SECOND VICTOR HUGO

Persistence Gives Rene Fraudet a Chance to Win Lasting Reputation.

Paris, July 30.—In the poet's firmament a new star has appeared. Mme. Sarah Bernhardt had scarce set foot again on the beloved soil of her native France after her meteoric progress, with its memorable triumphs and hairbreadth escapes, through America; she had hardly had time to unpack her trunks and receive a score or two of her intimate friends, when a tall young man with auburn hair, pale complexion, and dark, luminous eyes rang the bell of the luxurious apartment in the Boulevard Pereire and asked to see the great tragedienne.

"Madame is engaged," was the impatient footman's reply.

"Well, give her this card and letter, and say I will wait until madame can receive me."

M. Rene Fraudet's heart beat ere divine Sarah appeared.

She said, "I have not the right to refuse to listen to a poet who is perchance a genius. But I am overwhelmed with business details and visitors. Come back this evening at 11:30. You shall then read your play to me."

LOCKED HIS BRIDE IN

Feared Former Lovers Might Carry Off the Little Lady.

New York, July 30.—Fearful that some of her former suitors might steal her away, perhaps as a joke, as a girl, she had locked in two rooms at No. 416 West Thirty-ninth street, for days, with his 5-year-old niece, Rosie, as her companion. He was arrested as her companion. He was arrested yesterday by Agents Egan and Butts, of the Children's Society, and held in jail by Magistrate Steiner for examination.

Mascara's story is strange, yet his proceeding does not seem strange to those who know him. He won Dora, a belle, from young men of wealth and attainments. The couple, happy as larks, went to live on the third floor, rear of the Thirty-ninth street house.

As the days passed Carlo was haunted by a dread that his wife might pine for the days when all the young men tumbled over one another to take her to balls, parties and the seashore. So he put two big padlocks on the door and one on the shutters. He locked them when he went to work, and all day long Dora and the niece were prisoners.

Two young men, the neighbors say, tried to get the candy to the end of a string Rosie would drop from a window—one which needed no padlocks, because there was no fire escape.

Yesterday the society agents to whom someone had told the situation, arrested Mascara as he unlocked the door.

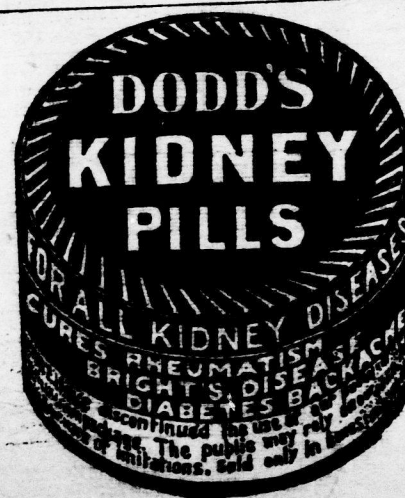

After he had been taken away, the neighbors say, the young man who supplied the prisoners with candy visited the house and released them. Nobody knew last night where Dora and the child were, nor has the identity of the men been revealed.

NAVAL REDUCTION

Tweedmouth Points Out That Powers Are Reducing Programme.

London, July 30.—In the House of Lords tonight Baron Tweedmouth, first lord of the admiralty, defending the Government's reduction of the naval programme, instanced especially France, the United States, Germany and Russia as greatly delaying or partially abandoning the construction of new warships. He said that when the original proposals were framed, France was intending to build two, Germany two and Russia one large battleship. None of these had yet been started and the French programme, instead of as formerly intended, including two battleships yearling, had now been reduced to the rate of one yearly.

CHAPTER XI.

I Receive a Caller.

Going to bed at three o'clock on a winter morning in a house whose ways are disquieting, after a duel in which you escaped only by sheer good luck, does not fit one for sleep. When finally drew the covers over me it was to lie and speculate upon the events of the night in connection with the history of the few weeks I had spent at Glenarm. Later had suggested in New York that Pickering's statement that my grandfather's large fortune had proved to be a myth. If Pickering had not stolen or dissipated it, where was it concealed? Morgan was undoubtedly looking for something of value or he would not risk his life in the business; and it was quite possible that he was employed by Pickering to search for hidden property. This idea took strong hold of me, the more readily, I fear, since I had always been anxious to see evil in Pickering. There was, to be sure, the unknown alternative heir, but neither she nor Sister Theresa was, I imagined, a person capable of hiring an assassin to kill me.

On reflection I dismissed the idea of appealing to the county authorities, and I never regretted that resolution. The seat of Wabana County was twenty miles away, the processes of law were unfamiliar, and I wished to avoid publicity. Morgan might, of course, have been easily disposed of by an appeal to the Amundson constable, but now that I suspected Pickering of treachery, the caretaker's importance dwindled. I had waited all my life for a chance at Arthur Pickering, and in this affair I hoped to draw him into the open and settle with him.

I slept presently, but woke at my usual hour, and after a tub felt ready for another day. Bates served me, as

A Plain Nightdress for a Miss (4075)

After the much-frilled and elaborated gowns which are so profuse in the up-to-date wardrobe, the plain style is a relief and many prefer it. A model for such a dress is shown, and the girl may make it herself without difficulty and with small cost. The only smart details are the small arms and on the shoulders, while the plain yoke is simply the facing of the gown itself to yoke depth. The sleeves may be in full or shorter length, and the material sizes, 6 to 16 years.

He folded his arms easily and looked at me with cheerful directness, as though politely interested in what manner of man I might be.

"It was a fine storm; I got a great day of it," I said. "An Indiana snow-storm is something I have never experienced before."

"This is my second winter. I came out here because I wished to do some reading, and thought I'd rather do it alone than in a university."

"Stodious habits are rather forced on one out here, I should say. In my own case my course of reading is all cut out for me."

He ran his eyes over the room. "The Glenarm collection is famous—the best in the country, easily. Mr. Glenarm, your grandfather, was certainly an enthusiast. I met him several times. He was a trifle hard to meet—and the clergyman smiled."

I felt rather uncomfortable, assuming that he probably knew I was under the discipline, and why my grandfather had ordained it. The Reverend Paul Stoddard was so simple, unaffected and manly a fellow that I shrank from the thought that I must appear to him an ungrateful black-guard who on my grandfather's had marked with obsequy.

"My grandfather had his whims; but he was a fine generous-hearted old gentleman," I said.

"Yes, in my interviews with him he surprised me by the range of his knowledge. He was quite able to instruct me in very curious branches of church history that appealed to him."

"You were here when he built the house, I suppose?"

"My visitor laughed cheerfully. 'I was on one side of the barricade for a part of the time. You know there was a great deal of mystery about the building of this house. The country-folk hereabouts can't quite get over it. They have a superstition that there's treasure buried somewhere on the place. You see, Mr. Glenarm wouldn't employ any local labor. The work was done by men he brought from afar—none of them, the villagers say, could speak English. They were all Greeks or Italians.'"

"I have heard something of the kind," I remarked, feeling that there was a man who, with a little cultivation, might help me to solve some of my riddles.

"You haven't been on our side of the wall yet? Well, I promise not to molest your hidden treasure if you'll be neighborly."

"I fear there's a big joke involved in the hidden treasure," I replied. "I'm so busy staying at home to guard it that I have no time for social recreation."

He looked at me quickly to see whether I was joking. His eyes were earnest and steady. The Reverend Paul Stoddard impressed me more and more agreeably. There was a suggestion of a quiet strength about him that drew me to him.

"I suppose everyone around here thinks of nothing but that I'm at Glenarm to earn my inheritance. My residence here must look pretty sordid from the outside."

"Mr. Glenarm's will is a matter of record in the county, of course. But you are too hard on yourself. It's no body's business if your grandfather wished to visit his whims on you. I should say, in my own case, that I do not consider it any of my business what you are here for. I did not come over to annoy you or to pry into your affairs. I get lonely now and then, and thought I'd like to establish neighborly relations."

"Thank you; I appreciate your coming very much—and my heart warmed under the manifest kindness of the man."

"And I hope," he spoke for the first time with restraint. "I hope nothing may prevent your knowing Sister Theresa and Miss Deveraux. They are interesting and charming—the only women about here of your own social status."

My liking for him abated slightly. He might be a detective, representing the alternative heir, for all I knew, and possibly Sister Theresa was a party to the conspiracy.

"In time, no doubt, in time, I shall know them," I answered evasively. "Oh, quite as you like!"—and he changed the subject. We talked of many things—of outdoors, of sports, of universities, of travel and adventure. He was a Columbia man, and had spent two years at Oxford.

"Well," he exclaimed, "this has been very pleasant, but I must run. I have just been over to see Morgan, the caretaker at the resort village. The poor fellow accidentally shot himself yesterday, cleaning his gun, or so he says. He is a man of some parts, and he has an ugly hole in his arm that will sit him in for a month or worse. He gave me an errand to do for him. He's a conscientious fellow and wished me to wire for him to Mr. Pickering, that he'd been hurt, but was attending to his duties. Pickering owns a cottage over there, and Morgan has charge of it. You know Pickering, of course?"

I looked at my clerical neighbor straight in the eye, a trifle coldly, perhaps. I was wondering why Morgan, a man whom I had enjoyed a duel in my own cellar only a few hours before, should be reporting his injury to Arthur Pickering.

"I think I have seen Morgan about here," I said.

"Oh, yes! He's a woodsman and a hunter—our Nimrod of the lake."

"A good sort, very likely."

"I dare say. He has sometimes brought me ducks during the season."

"To be sure! The shoot ducks at night—these Hoosier hunters—so I hear!"

He laughed as he shook himself into his greatcoat.

"That's possible, though unsportsmanlike. But we don't have to look at it. We laughed together. I found that it was easy to laugh with him."

"By the way, I forgot to get Pickering's address from Morgan. If you happen to see him—"

"With pleasure," I said. "Alexis Building, Broadway, New York."

"Good! That's easy to remember," he said, smiling and turning up his coat collar. "Don't forget me; I'm quarantined in a hermit's cell back of the matters of interest to talk about."

"I'm confident of it," I said, glad of the sympathy and cheer that seemed to emanate from his stalwart figure.

I threw on my overcoat and walked to the gate with him, and saw him hurry toward the village with long strides.

PROBING OCEAN
SIX MILES DEEP

Marvelous Discoveries Made Far Below Surface of the Pacific.

Washington, D. C., July 30. — Until about 35 years ago the impression was general, some men of scientific attainments even holding it, that there were places in the ocean's abysses that were fathomless. Navigators solemnly assured credulous landlubbers that they knew the location of certain holes that were bottomless. This implied that the immeasurable depth continued through the earth to another immeasurable depth on the other side, a proposition that was manifestly not reasonable, to say the least.

Now the oceanographer knows the floor of the sea almost as thoroughly as the geographer knows the configuration of the land. There are tremendous depths, only 66 feet less than six statute miles. The peak of the highest mountain on earth is not so tall.

The work of the Nero probably never has been equaled by any other vessel surveying for a cable route. Incidental ship collected much material relating to the character of the bottom, something to the great stock of knowledge already acquired. The Nero made soundings every ten miles over a zig-zag exploration of 21,519.65 nautical miles. The exploration practically covered a sea territory fourteen miles wide and 6,000 miles long, and for thoroughness has never been excelled.

The form of the sea floor is very much like that of the visible world and plains, their ridges and valleys, lofty mountain peaks, and their precipices that put to shame those above the sea, and some of the tallest summits, which project from the waves in the form of little islands, would be accessible if they rose to the same height from the sea as they do from the bottom of the ocean.

The great difference between the under-ocean territory and that smaller part of the planet on which we have light and access. At a few hundred fathoms the ocean is gloomy as twilight and beyond that the uttermost depths there is no light except that given out by phosphorescent creatures and matter. The sunlight does not penetrate below this few hundred fathoms. At about 600 fathoms the temperature of the water drops to 35 degrees. Thereafter it drops to a depth of five or six miles there is an exceptional drop of only about one degree.

This coolness, only three degrees above the freezing point, is attributed partly to the absence of the sun's influence, and partly to the existence of polar and sub-polar currents that have sunk to the bottom and spread slowly over the valleys, carrying with them sufficient to sustain life even at the depth of three or four miles. These currents are sluggish, and it is conjectured that the denizens of the abyss—small plants and gnomes have an environment of absolute calm.

The pressure at six miles below the surface is about five tons to the square inch, which the tissues of the deep-sea animals are formed to resist. Some of them are so soft that they disintegrate when they are hauled into the air. All come up dead. The sudden and enormous decrease of the pressure as they ascend and the immersion in a temperature of 80 degrees from a temperature of 35 degrees is enough to kill any sort of animal life.

The first accurate knowledge of deep sea conditions and life was obtained by the experts of the Challenger expedition around the world, beginning in 1872 and lasting about four years. But even the Challenger, which sounded great depths and brought up many new animals and specimens from the ocean floor, used the old-fashioned and unreliable rope-sounding apparatus. Sir William Thompson, who devised the machine for sounding with piano-forte the explorers made them stick to the wire, had one put aboard the Challenger, and the British conservatism of the explorers made them stick to the rope which had served them well, rather than experiment with new-fangled things. So Sir William's device was consigned to the storeroom.

The United States navy and coast survey, however, it was only a few months after the Challenger expedition had started that Capt. George E. Belknap, of the navy, in the steamer Tuscarora, fitted up for sounding for a submarine cable from California to Japan, took one of the wire-sounding machines along. He utilized it by fixing the wire to his own improved apparatus, and is Capt. Belknap's sounding machine, perfected the then Lieutenant Commander C. D. Sigsbee, that is now in use on the most famous and complete of all searching vessels, the Albatross.

This machine has a sinker or shot, which is detached by the impact of the rod running through it against the bottom, or by the slacking of the sounding wire. The weight of the shot and all the attachments to the rod, including the thermometer, is about 70 pounds.

When the projecting bottom of the rod is forced by the weight of the shot into the sea floor it lifts a valve and fills the cylinder with specimen soil. The shot is detached automatically. When the rod begins to descend, the valves are closed, and the contents of the rod are protected from wash.

Jermingham's Collection of Old Prints Is Accepted for Nation.

London, July 30.—King Edward has just paid a graceful compliment to a distinguished English writer, Edward Jermingham, author of brilliant, worthy articles in Truth, styled "Let-ters from the Librarian." Jermingham recently offered to the nation a rare collection of old prints of St. James' Park, which he had collected at much pains and expense. The King gratefully accepted the gift and set apart a special room in Kensington Palace in which they were hung. Last Thursday his majesty visited the palace to inspect the prints, commanding the donor to be present and spent an hour looking at them, questioning Jermingham about their peculiar features and showing a considerable knowledge of the manners and customs they depict.

Washington, July 31.—There will be no opportunity for clever people to turn an honest penny without any risk on their own part in connection with the forthcoming issue of Philippine certificates, proposals for the sale of which are to be opened Aug. 23.

Captain McIntyre, the acting chief of the insular bureau of the war department, who is conducting the refunding of the outstanding Philippine certificates, has decided to require all bidders to inclose with their bids certified checks to the amount of 1 per cent of their bids as an earnest of their willingness to take the certificates allotted to them.

So there can be no repetition in this case of the successful capture and resale at a profit of bonds or certificates by persons without sufficient means to buy them outright if their bid is accepted.

New York, July 30.—Larry Lajoie is beginning to distance his rivals for the leadership in the number of base hits. He has a lead of two on Hal Chase, the plucky first baseman of the Yankees, and three hits over George Stone.

For several weeks the race between the three players for the honors has been an exciting one. For a time Charley Hemphill, of the Browns, was also in the running, but he has taken his usual midseason slump and is several hits in the rear. One week ago Lajoie, Chase and Stone were tied for honors with 115 each, but now that the Cleveland manager has passed them, due to his quartet of hits on Thursday, there is little likelihood of him being passed at any stage of the present campaign. Still it is just possible that the fight between these three players for the honors will continue all season. Such a race between three great batsmen would create a little side issue to the pennant race.

There were two new additions to the century list during the week, Keeler and Harry Davis being the latest arrivals. Not only did Keeler enter the select list, but made a decided advance in his batting average, jumping eleven points, and instead of being below the .300 class, he is now the proud possessor of an average of .306, being tied with Elmer Flick, the Bedford farmer, hit of the coveted century mark, while there are a few ready to graduate during the next few days, as Turner and Chick Stahl have 95 hits each, Isbell 94, Anderson and Seybold 93. By another week they may have been making the century list. Stahl is expected to have rounded the first century and making headway for the 200 mark, but it begins to look as though the race for the honors belongs to the three players now in the lead. An accident to any one of the trio may give them a setback, but the way they have been clouting the ball all season proves their right to the hitting honors.

While Elberfeld still leads, Lajoie gained four points on George Stone during the week, the St. Louis player dropping two, while Lajoie jumped from .333 to .353. If he can keep up the clip set the Cleveland manager is sure to pass the St. Louis batter inside of the next two weeks.

SIEVER HOLDS THE PALM

DETROIT, July 27.—American League

fans are being treated to some fine pitching feats this season. Of the local men, Siever holds the palm as a winner, ranking fourth among the league twirlers. Donahue and Killian are pressing each other for second honors on the Tiger staff.

Following are the leaders in the box: Plank, Athletics; White, Chicago; Rhoades, Cleveland; Siever, Detroit; Waddell, Athletics; Joss, Cleveland; Orth, New York; Donahue, Detroit; Killian, Detroit; Bender, Athletics; Patten, Washington; Howell, St. Louis. Plank leads by a safe margin, although White is coming strong. Plank has won 15 out of 18, five of which were shutouts.

Siever's official position is sixth in the standing, a couple of twirlers who have played only a game or two being placed ahead of him. Siever's record is 9 games won out of 13. He has been on the losing side of a shutout twice, games and won all of them. He leads the league in this respect.

Harris brings up the rear of the pitching records. He has lost 12 out of 13 games and tied one. In half the games he lost he has been shut out.

LONDON LACROSSE TEAM PLAYED A FAST GAME AT ST. THOMAS

Good Work of Goalkeeper Alone Saved the Saints from a Defeat.

St. Thomas, July 30.—The London Independent lacrosse team gave St. Thomas the hardest game of the season before a large crowd of enthusiasts at Athletic Park this evening, the final score being a tie, each having 4 goals to their string.

St. Thomas did not have their regular team on, but, nevertheless, it was a strong team that Manager Ramer presented against the Forest City youngsters.

The visitors proved somewhat of a surprise, and played the game for all it was worth from start to finish. They might have had a victory to their credit but for the strong work of the local goalkeeper.

St. Thomas held the lead up to the half, the score being 2 to 1 at the quarter, and 2 to 2 at the half. London annexed one in the next period, and St. Thomas was blanked. Both scored one in the last quarter.

The work of Ramer, at third defense, for the locals, was conspicuous. Drinkwater, Amos and Carrothers were the pick of the visiting twelve.

A return game will be played in London shortly.

The teams lined up as follows: St. Thomas—Goal, McDaniel; point, Cotrell; coverpoint, Crayton; first defense, Whittaker; second defense, Smith; third defense, Brown; center, Sharpe; first home, Swackhammer; second home, Ridley; third home, Youngs; outside home, Drummond; inside home, Ramer.

London—Goal, Purdy; point, Amos; coverpoint, Carrothers; first defense, Munro, second defense, Seale; third defense, McKnight; center, Drinkwater; first home, Munro; second home, Oliver; third home, Stevens; outside home, Kilgour; inside home, Pearson.

Referee—R. Brennan.

JEFFRIES MAY COME FORTH AGAIN

Berger and Hackenschmidt Are Now After Scalp of Champion Pug.

New York, July 30.—While the fighting game is just now like the man around the corner, still with us, but out of sight, things are likely to live up to a bit in this very humid line of activity pretty soon. Especially is this true in the heavyweight division. Jeffries retired because there was no one left for him to fight who could draw a satisfactory house. There is little doubt that he will come forth again when a live opponent shows up. There are two near-live ones in view, our roly-poly friend from the coast, Mr. Berger, and Hackenschmidt, the wrestler of abnormal strength. Both are after Jeffries, but they should go slowly. Let the champion rusticate on a farm a year or two more and he will be easier to defeat. Farmers agree rapidly and are past their prime when a Broadway sport or a Wall street broker still acts young and kittenish.

These aspirants for money and glory are too impatient to wait until Jeffries shows up a bit more. They will be after him hard in a few months and one of them will get something. Berger, with more experience, will give the champion a good fight. Berger has nerve and will not be dazed when he faces Jeffries. But I am inclined to think that Jeffries will be the one with fear in his heart if Hackenschmidt is his opponent in the ring. The Russian Lion could pick Jeffries up like a baby and throw him over the ropes. With his enormous strength he should be able to develop a blow that would end Jeffries' career in the ring if planted right.

No wrestler has ever become a great fighter. But Hackenschmidt is different. He has not the characteristics of a wrestler. He is lighter on his feet than Jeffries and faster. His muscles are as supple as those of a young runner. There is little doubt that he has more endurance than the champion. His nerve is still a matter of doubt. It does not require much to be a wrestler, especially when you are the strongest man in the world. But the fact that Hackenschmidt has announced his candidacy for fighting honors would seem to indicate that he is as brave as the average good athlete.

Those who saw Hackenschmidt make a mark of Tom Jenkins in Madison Square Garden will think seriously of him as a fighter. After throwing Tom around for several minutes, Hack took down and took a rest on the floor while Tom struggled valiantly to turn him over. When Hack had got his wind, with big Jenkins simply arose, like a fly. Then he took Tom by the arms and spun around on his heel. Jenkins flew around three times, with his body straight out in the air. Hack then slammed the American champion on his back. He was really frightened, and proved an easy victim. This is what the Russian Lion did to a man quite as strong and quite as heavy as the champion fighter. It would be worth a trip across the continent to see them meet in the ring.

BAT NELSON WILL NOT MEET GANS

Dane Issues Signed Statement Saying He Will Not Meet the Colored Man.

Once more the proposed battle for the lightweight championship between Bat Nelson and Joe Gans has fallen through when it was practically assured on all sides that the battle was really on.

Jimmy Coffroth, the "Frisco" promoter who was thought to have practically brought this pair of great fighters together, was given the throw-down by Nelson.

Nelson wired a denial of the story of a match between Gans and himself at Columbia, as follows:

"Gogien, July 28.—New York story in reference to Gans is absolutely false. Coffroth can never be connected with any fight in which I am principal until he settles money he is trying to swindle with. Will keep my word with money for September, provided inducements are satisfactory."

"BATTILING NELSON."

Manager Coffroth takes a gloomy view of the boxing season on the coast. "I do not see any match between the top-notchers in sight," he said. "I have been trying to get O'Brien and Berger, but the latter has other things in view."

SPRINGWOOD SHOOT

The Springwood Gun Club holds the first of the series of monthly shoots, open to members of the Springwood Gun Club only, for seven prizes, donated by the club, tomorrow afternoon, at the club grounds, Richmond street north.

These events will be held on the first Wednesday and third Saturday of each month from August to January. The contestants will be handicapped in six classes, 50, 75, 90, 95, and 99 per cent. The score made at each shoot will determine the handicap for the next. All will shoot at 18 yards, 10-bore guns, 2 yards extra.

The club will also hold a shoot on Civic Holiday, Aug. 6, at 9 a.m. Three events of 20 targets each will comprise the programme. No one can win more than one prize, and prize-winners must shoot in all three events.

LONDONER DID IT

Laid Packers' Side of Case Before the House Committee at Washington.

The National Provisioner of a recent date contains a very complimentary reference to Mr. Thomas E. Wilson, general manager of Morris & Co., of Chicago. Under the heading, "Captains in the Meat Industry," the Provisioner says:

Mr. Wilson is typical of the younger generation of packing house men who have brought the industry to the front so rapidly and extended its scope so marvelously. He was born in London, Ont., July 22, 1868. His early days were passed in and around the little Canadian town, and most of his schooling was obtained there. When he was about 10 years old his father moved to Detroit, where the family spent one year before going to Chicago.

Mr. Wilson has a high school education only, and at the age of 18 he was employed as a car accountant in the office of the Burlington Railroad. Someone recommended him to Mr. Morris and he was offered a position as car accountant with Nelson Morris & Co. This he accepted, joining the army of workers in the stock yards about 18 years ago. He remained in the railroad department for a couple of years, and was then promoted to the position of head purchasing agent. In 1891 he was put in charge of the real estate work of the firm, selecting sites and supervising the erection of buildings for use as wholesale markets, etc., throughout the country. In all these minor positions Mr. Wilson made good, and in 1905 Mr. Morris selected him for special training in all the intricate details of his packing business.

Though for seven years general manager of Morris & Co., it is only within the last two or three years that the outside world has begun to know Mr. Wilson. He has represented his firm at public and private conferences and played an increasingly important part since 1904, when it is said he astonished his colleagues by the resourcefulness he displayed no less than by the quiet, convincing, unassuming manner in which his suggestions were made. That which his suggestions were made in the forefront with the brainy men who led the packing firms.

After the recent packing house exposures Mr. Wilson went to Washington to lay the case of the packers before the House committee. Having a personal knowledge and experience of the different processes of handling packing house products, and by plain talk and evident expert knowledge, he did more than anything else to impress the members of Congress with the packers' case of the controversy.

Mr. Wilson is a son of Mr. Moses Wilson, who was one of the earliest residents in this city. He is a nephew of Mr. David Wilson, of the local inland revenue department.

"THE FACTORY GIRL"

Large Crowd Witnessed Performance at Springbank Last Night.

Keen interest is being manifested in the show at Springbank this week, and a large crowd was present at the opening performance of "The Factory Girl" last night. The fact that the management are offering a gold watch as a special attraction, is also awakening great interest. Every patron of the theatre is given a numbered ticket. On Saturday night, as is the custom, the duplicate tickets will be mixed together, and some disinterested person from the Saturday night audience will pick out a number, and the person holding the number corresponding to this one will receive the gold watch.

Now a word about the stock company. Their work last night was highly pleasing. The company seemed perfectly familiar with the piece, and did their very best work upon it. Walter Downing took the character of Stephen Plum. Lois B. Hammond, as Martha Gibbs, the factory girl, gave a splendid impersonation of the character. The specialties were also good.

LIKES THE NEW MOVE

Former Londoner Pleased at Formation of Canadian Club Here.

Mr. John Cousins, a former Londoner, now of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes to The Advertiser expressing his extreme pleasure at the organization of a Canadian Club in this city. He also calls attention to the fact that on July 1, last year, a movement was consummated, whereby the various Canadian clubs, associations or societies may be united socially, and for the general benefit of Canadians wherever they are. At Niagara Falls, Ont., on the day mentioned, the general council was regularly organized, and already has a nice membership, delegates having been appointed for the next meeting, at the same place, on Labor Day, Sept. 3, from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo.

At that meeting, the delegates will be invited to consider ways and means whereby the memory of the late Alexander Muir, author of "The Maple Leaf Forever," may be perpetuated. Canadians, wherever resident, will doubtless gladly further such an object.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

I heard a street preacher on a recent Sunday evening characterize the faith of certain ministers who taught that the old idea of physical suffering in regard to the future condition of the wicked is untenable, as "damnable doctrine," with a strong emphasis upon the first word. Now, while I am not altogether in sympathy with the more modern view of future punishment, yet I wish to enter a protest against the use of such language in the name of religion. It is so different from the spirit of meekness, forbearance and love that should characterize those whose mission in the world is professedly the bringing of souls to Christ, that one can only ascribe the language to a fit of reticence on the part of the speaker. A phrase of this kind is none the less profane when used by a street preacher in the name of religion, and the use of such invective by a speaker is a confession either that his assumption is unwarranted or that he lacks ability to present his arguments. Again, who gave the speaker the right to sit in judgment upon his fellow man and declare in effect that if he teaches that the old idea of physical torture is untenable he is therefore under God's curse?

Personally I believe in a hell, where the souls of God's wrath are poured out upon the finally impenitent, but in what form I think it is unwise and vain to speculate, much less to dogmatize. Not so very many years ago the old idea generally prevailed, but it has of late years been so persistently preached down that the idea of future punishment does not inspire the feeling of awe and terror that it once did, and in fact very many boldly assert that there is no hell at all, and act accordingly. Thus the Christian pulpit, unwittingly it may be, and whether wisely or unwisely, has preached away a definite, tangible idea that appealed to men and women, and substituted a mere abstraction which in the very nature of things can never appeal to the average man. And what appears to be the result? A lowering of the moral standard and the opening of the flood gates of profanity. The average man now regards the old idea of hell as a gigantic imposition, and he celebrates his emancipation by making the very term hell a byword and a fruitful source of all kinds of foolish comparisons and ridicule.

D. STEWART.

HANDED OUT BY JOHN D.

Be Persistent and Optimistic and You'll Enjoy Life.

New York, July 21.—Today's World says: John D. Rockefeller never was in better humor than when he left Tarrytown for Cleveland at 6:19 o'clock, last evening, after having given one of the longest interviews he is known to have uttered.

"Sometimes things said of me are cruel and they hurt, but I am never bitter," he said to a reporter, who visited his Pocomtoco estate. "I believe in men and the brotherhood of man, and am confident that everything will come out for the good of all in the end. You are just a young man, but you can take my word. I am older than you and have seen the world; you can always believe in real men."

"As for Europe—well, it is nice; but I love my own country the best. Yes, all the hard things that one's countrymen say of me can never be cruel enough to offset love of home and country."

After a moment, he added: "Now, remember, young man, I bear no ill-will to any man. I am confident that there is more good than bad in the world, and I am full of the joy of living. I believe in men. Do that and the world is bound to seem a good world to you. Be as persistent in all things as you have been in getting to me, and you will always win."

JOY FOR THE TRIPSTERS

Young Astor to Open Clivedan Estate to the English Public.

London, July 31.—There is joy among the tens of thousands of English trippers over the intention that Waldorf Astor will open his father's exclusive policy and reopen the famous woods of Clivedan to the public.

Clivedan is one of the loveliest places on the Thames, with meadows and forests lining the river, and as long as it was the property of the Duke of Westminster, the place was open to the public. The Duke was allowing to bank in the place and shelter in the other. When Mr. Astor bought the property, however, he adopted a stricter policy. First of all, he limited the free days, and then he closed the grounds altogether.

There was a great outcry of course, but Mr. Astor took the unassailable but antagonistic attitude that the property was his, and he intended to do what he liked with it. As one proof of his determination he likes with his own, and has allowed the uncontradicted intimation to go abroad that the Clivedan woods will again be open to the public.

It is quite possible that Mr. Astor will be very pleased to hear of his son's decision, for the Duke of Clivedan has by no means added to the popularity of the expatriated American.

The same policy of exclusion that Mr. Astor applied to Clivedan he practiced also at Hever, the ancient castle which was once Anne Boleyn's father's. No one is allowed to enter the grounds, and even local residents, people whose families have been at Hever (the village) for generations, are excluded. This policy has been the source of great annoyance, especially as a former owner regularly set apart two days each week when the castle was opened to the public.

Some people pray as if they thought the Lord needed their advice. Any man who imitates others admits that he isn't an original success. Of making books there is no end—otherwise there would be fewer race tracks.

FANCY RIDING OF BELGIANS

Perfect Horsemanship Displayed at Govt. Academy.

PERFORM SOME CLEVER TRICKS

Cadets Do Horseback Circus Stunts and Imitate Tactics of Cossacks.

Ypres, Belgium, July 30.—Of all their native institutions, the one which the Belgians point out to the foreigner with the greatest pride is the Ecole d'Equitation, as the national military riding school of Ypres is called. The patriotic side of the Belgians is certainly justified. Never in wandering over three continents has the writer seen more perfect horsemanship.

The Ecole d'Equitation is a Government academy established exclusively for the purpose of teaching horsemanship to Belgian officers. Every officer on being graduated from the Brussels Military School, the Belgian West Point—is obliged to undergo a year's course of horsemanship before joining the regiment.

Your correspondent was received by the commandant and was first shown a class of cadets riding the "French saddle" as it is called.

The long line of men turned, circled, wheeled and advanced in twos and fours and platoons. Then they put up the obstacles, the old-fashioned obstacles seen at military tournaments, but solid walls and hedges, that had to be jumped clear or the rider come to grief.

The cadets first went over these hurdles singly, in pairs and fours; then they began to turn somersaults on the horses as they went over the foot hurdles in a gymnasium. The commandant then led the way to see a more advanced class of riders. The men in this second menage rode pigskin hunting saddles and could have given points in horsemanship to Cossack veterans.

They threw themselves on and off their horses as if made of rubber. They stood up in their saddles in true Cossack style, and hacked viciously at heads and posts. They rode backward and they changed horses while going over the jumps. Then they lined up in squadron formation at the further end of the hall, and came racing toward us, every man rising in his stirrups and yelling like a wild Indian, until at the word of command they pulled their horses back on their haunches, the noses of the leading line within reach of the commandant's hand.

Clever Work on Steeplechase.
After the exhibition the commandant took the correspondent to the steeplechase course. The course is built around the barracks and contains every imaginable kind of jump, a bullfinch, an in-and-out jump, a Liverpool, a ditch so broad and deep that it is called the river, two banks and a rail fence. The banks are seven feet high, and have at the further end, just about where a horse would land in the ordinary course of events, a single rail raised four feet from the ground, and placed in the most awkward position possible.

Next the correspondent was shown a division of senior class students performing "the high school." These youths were certainly the most finished "high school" riders the writer has ever seen. They drove their thoroughbreds in a way that circus riders might have envied. Particularly worthy of note was the movement known as the "cabriole" (the prance), in which the horse rears and goes down the line on his hind legs. If a man has heavy hands during the prance his horse will almost invariably go over backward.

Leap Over Steep Slope.
On the drill plain was shown the crowning event of the day. A long ascent covered with turf arose and then broke suddenly into a precipice about 150 feet high, with a grade of about 70 degrees. The exercise consisted in officers galloping up the turf incline at full speed and then sliding down the precipice to the plain below—a feat which certainly required more than an ordinary amount of nerve.

It was a strange spectacle in the twilight to see the gaily uniformed officers dropping out of sight as completely as if they had been swallowed by an earthquake.

MAJOR FISCHER'S GRAFT

Kaiser Orders an Investigation Into the Alleged Army Bribery.

Berlin, July 31.—Emperor William has ordered a searching investigation into the case of Major Fischer, who was attached to the headquarters staff in German Southwest Africa, and who has been arrested on the charge of receiving bribes from firms selling war supplies.

It appears that the major had been receiving money for years from the firm, which has the monopoly of supplying the colonial forces in German Southwest Africa. This money was given nominally as loans, and accordingly to the press reports, the total of the sums paid finally reaching $35,000.

Major Fischer's salary was $2,900 a year. There was no prospect whatever of his returning the loans.

TRAGEDY IN THE STREET.

New York, July 31.—Two Italian peddlers quarreled in South street, near Fulton market, this morning. One shot the other down with a revolver, then turned and ran.

A brother of the wounded man followed the shooter down South street, and caught up with him in Peek's slip, and buried a stiletto between his shoulders, killing him almost instantly.
