TWELVE YEARS FOR THOS. NOAH PLEAD GUILTY TO MANSLAUGHTER!

Plea Entered After Crown MAYOR STEVELY Had Conctuded Its Case.

JUDGE AGREED TO ALLOW IT

His Lordship Says There Is No Room for the Knife and the Revolver in Canada.

Thomas Noah, the accused Muncey Indian murderer, this morning pleaded guilty to manslaughter, and was sentenced to twelve years in the Kingston Penitentiary.

The prisoner took his sentence with a smile, and he was still smiling when he left the courtroom.

The case was taken from the jury at 9:30 this morning, upon the defense announcing that a plea of manslaughter would be entered.

When asked if he had anything to say, Noah replied in a firm voice, that he had nothing to offer.

Judge's Address. In passing sentence, his lordship emphasized the fact that the sentencing held in London this year. of a prisoner was not so much to punish him as to warn others. It was a shame, he said, to see a serious of all crimes, murder.

His lordship concurred with the crown attorneys, Mr. Smith and Mr. McKillop, in accepting a plea of manslaughter, as he was convinced that there was no previous malice exhibited In Noah's actions.

THREE DIVISIONS IN LEGISLATURE

Opposition Places the House On Record On Several Important Motions.

Toronto, April 10.-Three divisions were taken during the night sitting of the Legislature, the vote in every case being 59 to 23. The Opposition amendments, which were voted down were, Mr. MacKay's criticism of the handling of the university finances; a motion by Mr. Pense condemning the Government for its expenditures on commission and a motion by Mr. Preston, of Brant, dis-WILLIAM G. The Premier did not carry out his threat to sit till daylight, and the House rose at 11:30.

Many ladies were present in the gallery in the afternoon, when Mr. Smith (Peel), presented his measure to amend the franchise act by granting legislative votes to widows and spinsters. Mr. Smith would like to see all women have the right to vote. He pointed out that women who held property were unrepresented in its provincial control. Mr. Smith said he remembered the little say in the conduct of public affairs as women had today, and the Fred McMann, of Walkerville, was men were not very patient under it. DR. ECCLES WILL BE ABSENT FROM the speaker, "but I hope to live to see the city until May 1.

There is an apparently well-grounded impression in the country that the privilege of getting and holding railway charters is often abused, that it has become a habit for provisional ers of such charters to rest upon their creditable. The acceptance of a peeroars as soon as they are secured Whether the evil of exploiting chartwould seem to be th part of wisdom for Parliament, before renewing them to inquire and satisfy itself as to whether the charters are held solely for speculative purposes.

The subject was recently brought to the notice of the Senate by Hon. G. W. Ross, who, while admitting his Inability to say that charter-mongering has become a profession and has led to graft, believes that something should be done to stop these repeated applications for renewals. In 1996 there were thirty-seven renewals of charters granted; in 1907, eighteen, servatives are more Conservative than and thus far this session there have been between twenty and thirty applications for renewals. Mr. Ross' contention is that some good reason should be given before a renewal is granted. Sometimes a charter is held principle of majority rule in the local by a board of directors for the pur- option act. Mr. Ross believes this has been done with regard to both federal and provincial charters. Moreover, such holding of a charter may sometimes block the way of persons prepared to do something, and thus really prove an obstacle in the way of progress in transportation. Charters have even been held for political purposes, men having been known to hold them for the object of, as they hoped, strengthening their political influence in a constituency.

The practice in Ontario twenty-five years ago was to refuse a charter to all corporations who could not show that they had a financial basis on which they could proceed with reasonable certainty. For instance, it was required that a certain amount of stock should be subscribed and paid

Olive had been quite confident. Olive had been quite confident that Casement, who knew her so had been mislead by the disguise, Mrs. Merridew, who had seen so little of her, was not likely to pierce it. Her confidence was justified.

"What is your name?" Mrs. Merridew asked her, sharply.

Mrs. Cooper ook her into her room and carefully shut the door. "You heard what I said about your work and character. I know it wasn't strictly true; and you know it, too. But you needn't tell anyone else, and I sha'n't. The mistress is a rare tartar; so be on your guard when you meet her. But she won't see much of you. She did not enter the library, however, but crossed the hall and unlocked a heavy door into the corridor which led to a disused wing of the house.

Trusting to the concealment of her cloak and the noiseless tread of her felt shoes, Olive stole after her. It was the first real test of her ability as a spy; and the importance of ascertaining the hiding-place of the papers was so critical that she could not hesitate. She was striving now for Jack as well as for herself. His safety as much as her own depended upon her skill and nerve.

Without a thought that eager eyes were watching her every movement, Mrs. Merridew went right along the corridor, and entered the room at the end. She stood a few seconds at the threshold, holding the lamp she was carrying high above her head. She was looking for a hiding-place for the petition was sufficiently signed, and the bylaw prepared. The committee could do nothing further and the bylaw must be passed. However, if there were any names on the petition that had no right to be there, the petition would be thrown out, if sufficient proof were adduced. The only thing left for those opposed to the sewer was to prove that names were illegally on the petition. If that was not done the bylaw must pass.

The members of the deputation opposed to the sewer said that they could prove their point, but unless that is done before the next meeting injuries received by falling on a slipof the council, the bylaw will go through Graydon declared that he was utterly opposed to building a breakwater to needed. The Wellington street bridge Adopted. was perfectly safe without it.

Citizens' Side of It.

Mr. A. J. Wall, of Front street, spoke on behalf of the residents of that street. He declared that they were entitled to protection. The residents of any other portion of the city, in similar difficulties as they were, would apply for relief also. He declared that the water had done him $100 damage this year, and had also damaged his neighbors' property There would be no difficulty if the water would keep its proper channel. but it would not unless there was a breakwater constructed. In a couple of years, if something is not done, the river will cross the property on Front street, and not follow its regular course. When the residents of this street were in the county, a breakwater was built, and the city promised to keep it up when they joined the city. This had not been done. There was need of only 100 feet of breakwater, and ample protection would be afforded.

Mr. H. L. Smith represented residents of the west end of the street, and declared that a strip of breakwater just east of the bridge would protect them all right. On motion of Ald. Stewart, the mat-

City Engineer Graydon advised that the street sweepings be dumped into the two large holes in the street, and that would fill them up in short order. In this way the street to Waterloo street would be opened up. whereby he could be kept. A New Lease.

Mr. White then moved that the Pere Marquette be asked to submit a proposition for a new lease. Mayor Stevely pointed out that the lease was more valuable to the Pere Marquette than to anyone else, although he did not think the presence of the traction company added any value to the lease. Ald. Beattie thought that the city should not ask that the lease be continued, or made over to a new company at this time.
