CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE LORDS.

If Mr. Gladstone has his health for a year or two, and remains at the head of the British government, it will be a bad thing for the house of lords. The liberal party and the radicals are after the upper chamber with hot shot. The rejection of the home rule bill started the agitation, and the lords have added other indignities against the popular branch by mangling the parish council and the employers' liability bills, two of Mr. Gladstone's pet measures, which were aimed to cultivate favor with the masses of the people. Some of the utterances against the lords which we publish elsewhere to-day, show the fierceness of the attack to which they are to be subjected, and if the G. O. M. takes his coat off and throws the entire weight of his influence and his voice against the peers, they may as well pack their grips and abdicate. Gladstone has almost immeasurable power with the people, or he could never have persuaded the British people to elect a Home Rule bill. In 1880 he was able to beat Beaconsfield out, by arousing the feelings of the people on the Bulgarian atrocities with which they had nothing to do, and with already a strong feeling in the country against the peers, it would seem that their abolition will not be a difficult matter to accomplish. In other days such an agitation as the liberals propose raising would have led to a revolution and bloodshed, but the world moves, and the British public are beginning to realize the utter uselessness of their hereditary legislators.

A GREAT INJUSTICE.

James T. Sharkey has succeeded in ousting Capt. Whittier from the position of United States consular agent in Fredericton, and in securing the office for himself, but the triumph does him no credit. On the other hand, the public generally condemn Mr. Sharkey for depriving an office of the emoluments of which constituted his main support. Mr. Sharkey is young, educated and vigorous, has a profession which ought to yield a living, is popularly supposed to be independent, and the spirit that would urge him to supersede a gentleman of Capt. Whittier's age and misfortunes, is not one that ought to be commended.

THE HERALD does not make a business of meddling in matters which might be considered of a private and personal nature, but this is an instance in which the public feeling should be unmistakably expressed, and we have no hesitation in saying, that Mr. Sharkey's selfish course is condemned by every citizen who has a spark of humanity in his breast. Honors and emoluments secured under such circumstances, will not do the bearer much good, and it is not too late, Mr. Sharkey should decline a position, the acceptance of which, while benefiting him in only a small degree, is a cruel blow at a deserving and worthy citizen.

ONTARIO POLITICS.

The last session of the present legislature of Ontario opened Wednesday, and at its close it is expected the general election will be called on. The situation is very much mixed, and while it is highly probable that the astute old premier Sir Oliver Mowat and his party will pull through all right, the new party organizations are giving the politicians much concern. Outside of the two old parties, the most powerful factor is apparently the Patrons of Industry, a farmers' organization with a platform which almost anyone almost could stand on, and which in the North Bruce and East Lambton by-elections in December showed remarkable strength. Next and newest is the Protestant Protective Association, with a membership, it is claimed, of 30,000 voters, and rapidly spreading. Its platform is based on jealousy of the influence of Roman Catholics and the Roman Catholic church, and its purpose, as stated, is to crowd, if not to exclude Roman Catholics from places of public trust. The plebeian and Sir Oliver Mowat's pledge to introduce a prohibitory law, if the courts decide that such is within the power of the provinces to enforce, will tend to solidify the forces of the teetotal element in favor of the government, and turn against it, to the same extent, the influence of the liquor traffic.

THE END APPROACHING.

In the uproar at the recent West Simcoe, Ont., conservative convention the Montreal Witness sees the progress of the work of disintegration which is going on in that party. At a meeting of one hundred and twenty-six representatives from all parts of the riding, the friends of Sir John Thompson were compelled to withdraw a resolution congratulating him on the honor conferred on him by the Queen. Only fifty-two of the one hundred and twenty-six delegates stood by Sir John, twenty-six refraining from voting at all. This singular expression of disloyalty gave rise to a great uproar in the convention, which would have broken up in the greatest disorder had Sir John's friends not withdrawn their friendly motion. These indications abound, but they are especially apparent in two directions. The assembling at Ottawa of the legion of representatives of the combines organized under the protective tariff is evidence of a determination on their part to force the government for the last time to bend to their wishes, by maintaining their present outrageous rates of duty on every article that enters into the necessities of life; and that they propose to do regardless of the consequences to the government. They know the government is in their hands, and they intend to use it up to the last hour of its existence for their purposes. In the face of the tidal wave of popular indignation that rolls from the Pacific to the Atlantic against tariff iniquities, these proprietors of a moribund administration intend to give Canada one more exhibition of a political depravity which almost exceeds belief. It will be an example which no subsequent administration will ever seek to follow. Quite as conclusive of the opinion held within the party in regard to the doom of the government is the indecent haste and determination of members of parliament to secure their reward for their bad votes before the death-rattle is heard in the government's throat. One or two British Columbia members are billeted for good offices. Mr. Davis, of Alberta, is to have an extra office and an extra salary conferred on him, with a clerk to do all the business. Mr. Madill, of North Ontario, has already had a post-office appropriated to his family. Mr. Henderson, of Halifax, has had the same. Mr. Ingram, of West Elgin, got an office for his brother, and wants another for himself. Mr. White, of Cardwell, has been booked for the Montreal custom house for at least a year. Mr. Bain, of Soulanges, has been after a post-office inspectorship, but is open to accept something else. Mr. McIntosh, of Ottawa, got his governorship and disappeared. Mr. Adams, of Northumberland, failing to receive a governorship, is after something less lucrative. Mr. Temple, of York, wants a senatorship. Mr. McLeod, of St. John, is after a judgeship, and Mr. McDougald, of Picton, is booked for the office of deputy minister of marine. There are several senatorships to be vacated within the next six months, and there are members of parliament for the whole of them. The haste the rats are making to desert the sinking ship, is quite as good evidence of the collapse, as is the gathering of the combines at Ottawa to give one more—the very last—turn to the protection screw.

AN EMINENT PREACHER.

Rev. Dr. Douglas, who died at Montreal on Sunday, was one of the fathers in the Methodist church in Canada, and as a preacher, was more widely known than any other member of its ministry. He was a native of Scotland, but came to Montreal when seven years old with his parents who were Presbyterians. Upon leaving school he was for a time employed as an assistant in a book store in Montreal, and afterwards was apprenticed to a blacksmith. At the age of seventeen he entered into partnership with his brother, who was a carpenter and builder. Meanwhile he had become an insatiable reader, and even at this early age he was noted for the vigor of his utterances. He made up his mind to study medicine and matriculated in one of the Montreal colleges. His biographer says: "While his medical studies were still in progress a crisis took place in his history. He began to attend the Methodist church, which he soon joined and afterwards became to take a conspicuous part as a class leader. In course of time he became a local preacher, and his sermons were from the first marked by a high degree of spiritual fervor. At the age of twenty-three years he was received as a probationer for the ministry. The following year, 1849, he was recommended by the Lower Canada district to attend the Wesleyan Theological institute at Richmond, in England. He had hardly reached that place when he was appointed to missionary work in the Bermudas. After eighteen months' residence in the Bermudas, he began to suffer from an affection of the nerves which necessitated his return to Montreal and always afterwards he resided in Canada. Of his ministerial life, thirty-two years were spent in Montreal, eleven in pastoral work and the balance as head of the Wesleyan Theological college, except when ill-health required his temporary retirement. In 1889 McGill college conferred upon him the degree of LL. D. He was often deputed to represent his church in great ecclesiastical gatherings, among these being the Young Men's Christian association's international conventions, the Evangelical alliance in New York, and the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in the Southern states. He also filled with ability the offices of co-delegate of the old Canada conference, president of the Methodist conference, vice-president and president of the general conference of the Methodist church of Canada. His participation in the Equal Rights agitation is remembered by everybody. His last public appearance was before the Christian Endeavor convention, when he lectured on "Social Evil."

HE DIED AND YET HE LIVED.

Most Remarkable Case Occurs in a New York Hospital.

New York, Feb. 12.—Manhattan hospital had a case yesterday which breaks all medical records of a similar sort. It is that of a boy who apparently died at half-past one o'clock in the afternoon, but whose heart was still beating strongly at ten o'clock last night. At that hour it was eight and one-half hours after he had drawn his last breath. This is several hours beyond any record in such cases. In one case in medical annals life was prolonged for a few hours after respiration had ceased, but that case stands almost alone. The patient who has puzzled all the resident and consulting physicians of the Manhattan hospital is William Holland, a newborn, sixteen years old, who lived with his widowed mother, Mrs. Virginia Holland, at No. 516 West 139th street. He was not selling papers on Friday night as usual, and got thoroughly wet, but that was nothing unusual, and he went home, had his supper and went to bed feeling as well as usual. He woke Saturday morning about two o'clock and complained to his mother of having severe pains in his neck and in the back of his head. She procured some simple remedies and did what she could for him, but he tossed restlessly the rest of the night and in the morning was very feverish. As he did not get better during the day his mother sent for a physician, who prescribed for him. His condition still remained about the same till yesterday morning, when he became suddenly worse, and a call was sent to the Manhattan hospital for an ambulance.

ST. JOHN AGAIN.

Sir Hibbert Tupper is goading the St. M. P.'s to new madness. He wants to enforce an old regulation against drifting salmon in the bay, and the fishermen are up in arms against it. At Piarineo, St. John county, they declare that if the regulations are enforced they will have to leave the place, as there will be nothing left for them to do. The country is not a good farming district and the people have always relied upon the fisheries for a living. About three hundred men, mostly with families, are affected. Mr. Hazen, M. P., visited them the other night, got their views, and will remonstrate with Mr. Tupper, but probably in vain. The youthful knight has evidently made up his mind to rub it into the St. John people.

The deadliest disease in the province of Quebec is one of which least is heard in the discussion of sanitary matters, says the Montreal Gazette. Consumption last year carried off over 9 per cent. of those whose deaths the Provincial Board of Health has recorded. In all 1,483 persons, out of 18,550 who died, perished from some form of pulmonary wasting. It is only of late years that consumption has been the subject of close scientific study, but it is beginning to be understood that it is, to a large extent, a contagious as well as a preventable disease.

JOHN LIVINGSOTON, who died quite suddenly at Montreal, Sunday, was for many years one of the best known newspapermen in New Brunswick. He founded the Telegraph, was connected with the Moncton Times at its inception as a daily, and was the first editor of the Sun. He edited the Moncton Herald and the Toronto Empire in later years, but lately had enjoyed poor health and had to retire largely from active work. He was a powerful writer, especially on political subjects, and in the newspaper fraternity was very highly respected.

The Gazette says that one Montreal wholesale house reports, that as a result of the enlargement of the dairy industry, there has been a marked improvement in the dry goods business in many sections of the province. In one group of four parishes an average of $85,000 a piece was distributed through the creameries and cheese factories. Most of it came back to the city in payments for greater quantities of goods bought. The same effect is being felt in this province from the growth of the dairy industry.

In New York it has been found that fully one-fourth of the men who apply at a branch bureau of one society refuse to work after being told of 1,500 men who in Chicago were offered food and lodging for three hours' work, only one in four accepted; and in New Haven, out of one hundred men directed to a wood-yard in response for their quest for aid, less than twenty visited the place, and of these all but two were frightened away by the prospect of work.

Hon. J. S. CARVELL, governor of P. E. Island, died at Government House, Charlottetown, Wednesday morning after quite a long illness. Deceased was a native of Newcastle, Miramichi, served as mayor of Charlottetown, sat in the senate of Canada for ten years, and was appointed to the governorship in 1880. He was 68 years old, and his wife, who survives him, was a Miss Hanford of St. John.

Or St. John's three great editors of former times, Elder, Livingston and Anglin, only the last named is living.

AROUND THE WORLD.

The News of the World in Brief—The Cream of Our Exchanges.

Yellow fever is raging at Rio de Janeiro, sixty deaths occurring there Thursday. H. Paxton Baird's house and barn at Woodstock, were burned early Monday morning.

Rev. Dr. Douglas, principal of the Wesleyan Theological college, Montreal, a distinguished Methodist divine, died Sunday.

George Calhoun, forty-eight years register of deeds in Albert county, died at Hopewell Cape, Wednesday night, aged 80 years.

McGreavy and Connolly have been refused a new trial, and will now probably peach on their distinguished associates in hoodlum.

Senator Botsford lies at the point of death at his residence at Sackville. He is in his ninetieth year and his recovery is not expected.

A despatch from Baluwayo confirms the report that Lobengula, king of the Matabels, had died in the bush while fleeing from the British forces.

The committee on labor in the house of representatives at Washington, have reported in favor of setting apart the first Monday in September as a national holiday, to be known as labor day.

Since the recent disastrous fire in Bath, Maine, insurance rates in that city have advanced 50 per cent., because of alleged defective water works, insufficient water supply, and unsatisfactory fire apparatus.

An order in council has been passed re-establishing Prince Edward Island as a separate military district. For the past few years it was connected with New Brunswick, and under Col. Mansuelli, D. A. G.

British Columbia newspapers are jubilant over the passing of the Wilson bill, and the consequent free introduction of coal into the United States. Two more rich coal beds have been struck in the province.

At Sussex on Monday, Stipendiary Wallace, will announce his decision as to whether or not rev. E. J. Grant shall be sent up for trial for criminally libelling Justice Morrison. The examination was concluded on Thursday.

Colonel Gregorieff was hanged at Odessa, Tuesday, as a spy. For two years he had been a Russian military secret to Austria, although he was commanding a regiment of Russian cavalry. He received 25,000 francs annually from Austria for his services.

The negotiations for an increase of wages having fallen through, the silk ribbon weavers in all the factories of New York, eight hundred and fifty in number, went out on strike to-day. The number of girls laid off by the strike is estimated at nearly thirty thousand.

Pugilist Austin Gibbons, well known in Fredericton, has been convicted of assault and battery on Frank Craig, as charged in the indictment found against him and his brother, Richard Gibbons. Richard was acquitted. Austin was to receive his sentence at New York to-day.

The local by-election for the legislature in South Lanark, Ontario, yesterday, resulted in the return of Clark, liberal, by a majority. The conservative and one patron of industry candidate also ran. The riding has always hitherto been represented by a conservative.

At a meeting of the Father Point, Quebec, Parish Council, Monday, J. McWilliams was elected mayor for the fifth time. This is an eloquent reply from the French Canadians to the P. P. A., as McWilliams is the only Protestant, in the whole parish.

Frederick Cholman, of Brooklyn, aged 30, superintendent of the Prudential Life Insurance company, left home Wednesday morning to go to his office. He promised his wife to be home for dinner, and she would take her sleigh riding. Since then nothing was seen of him until this morning, when his wife found his body in a stable on Piling street. He had cut his wrist and bled to death.

Prince Andre Poniatowski, a descendant of Polish kings, an Italian by birth, and a resident of Paris, arrived at New York, Monday. He came to America to marry Miss Matilde Bourke, ward of G. H. Carpenter, of Oakland, Cal., who is reported to be worth $6,000,000, made in land speculation. Prince Poniatowski is an uncommonly fine looking young man. He is the grandson of Augustus Stanislaus, the last king of Poland.

About 500 sober, able-bodied, unemployed men, marched in procession to the Toronto city hall, yesterday, and requested Mayor Kennedy to provide them immediate work. They declared their families were starving and they wanted to go to work today and be paid for it the same night, so they could buy a dinner for Sunday. The board of works met subsequently, and authorized a special expenditure of $5,000, to provide immediate work for the unemployed.

Prendergast, the assassin of Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, created a stir in court yesterday, during the hearing of arguments for a new trial. The prisoner had taken his seat quietly, but when Attorney Trade, who conducted the prosecution, entered the court room, Prendergast apparently grew wild with rage. Springing from his chair, he yelled at Mr. Trade and attempted to rush to where the attorney stood. Several bailiffs surrounded the excited prisoner and forcibly took him to his seat, where he sat glaring at Mr. Trade, but creating no further disturbance as the hearing proceeded.

An Indiana farmer killed his wife and eldest son Thursday morning. It seems the family was at breakfast when the atrocious crime was committed. Hartman in the presence of his five children stamped his wife to death. While this was going on the oldest boy, aged twelve years, tried to defend his mother and he suffered the same fate at the hands of his enraged father. After Hartman committed the horrible crime, he went into the summer kitchen and laid himself on the floor, and in this position he was found by neighbors, who had great difficulty in getting control of him. All indications point to a religious excitement as having caused the family trouble.

An anarchist named Boison, one of the many arrested in Paris during the recent police raid on anarchist haunts, was placed on trial Thursday, and convicted of having explosives in his possession. The judge sentenced him to four months' imprisonment. Boison stood in a defiant attitude while sentence was being pronounced upon him. As the judge concluded, the prisoner, who had a large piece of bread in his hand, drew back his arm and threw the bread at the judge. The missile struck the judge on the nose. As Boison threw the bread he shouted, addressing his remarks to the court and attendants: "You are a crowd of pigs. We will blow you all up. Long live anarchy!"

Customer—Why is it you charge as much for a six-pound pig as you do for a sixteen-pound pig? Dutcher—The smaller the pig, morn, the worse it hurts us to kill it. Got to charge something for our feelin's, morn.

POETRY.

'ABIDE IN ME AND IN YOU.'

BY THE LATE W. H. HOWLAND, TORONTO.

Saviour, watch me as I go—

Stumbling, weak—I need Thee so;

Take me in Thy Life Divine,

Bring Thy Life to be in mine.

Thou hast said I abide

Thou wilt keep me in Thy side.

Take me in Thy Life Divine,

Bring Thy Life to be in mine.

Lord, I am so weak, so vain;

Cleanse me now from every stain.

Take me in Thy Life Divine,

Bring Thy Life to be in mine.

Come and wrest from Satan's hold

Every thought without the fold.

Take me in Thy Life Divine,

Bring Thy Life to be in mine.

Master! Victory! Here, my will Shrine in it Thy Holy Dove.

Shrine in it Thy Life Divine,

Bring Thy Life to be in mine.

Let me enter where the spear

Drew the blood and water clear.

Take me in Thy Life Divine,

Bring Thy Life to be in mine.

Jesus! Jesus! Oh, how sweet

Heart to heart in Thee to meet!

Take me in Thy Life Divine,

Bring Thy Life to be in mine.

Never more shall foolish doubt

Come with care to cast Thee out.

Take me in Thy Life Divine,

Bring Thy Life to be in mine.

Thou hast brought me through the fire;

Holy love fills all desire.

Set me in Thy Life Divine,

Bring Thy Life to be in mine.

SELECT STORY.

A FATAL MISTAKE.

CHAPTER X.

CONTINUED.

"Don't you remember how you used to say your prayers to me sometimes, when you were a very little lad, my boy?"

He whispered one, "would it be a comfort to me as all, if I said them together now.

Your aunt will help us. I'm rather lucky this morning, you see."

Jack repeated the simple prayer after her, and then he lay still, so still that she thought he was, until he said—

"I heard a carriage in the lane—it is a good way off yet, though. You will be kind to get—uncle—uncle," looking from one to the other, with dim imploring eyes. "I used her even worse than I used you, and half the time she was just my dupe, poor soul! Remember what we said just now about forgiving transgresses."

"Don't be afraid, Jack," said his uncle in a loud impressive voice. "Your wife will be made welcome and taken care of,

and the child—"

"Shall I fill my place?"

He looked at his uncle eagerly, with dim pain drawn eyes.

"Yes, my boy, if the worst happens, but you will get better, Jack, you will live to lead a better life—"

"Not here, uncle," the dying man answered. "Don't regret this. It is for the best, and you'll have the little one to care for now. Make a good man of him and, as you tried to do me," added

Jack, turning to Mrs. Ormsby. "I disappointed you sorely, but he may not, and

—"

His voice died away in his throat, only his eyes seemed to be living still, as they stared out of his white face at the door.

He heeded his wife's forgiveness, too, and then he could die. Mrs. Ormsby raised his head on her arm and poured some strong brandy down his throat. A flush passed over his gray face, he lifted himself to listen, just as the wheels of the coming carriage scrunched against the steps, and then stopped.

"Forgive me, Mary," was all Jack had time to say, but her arms were around him as he spoke, and though she never answered him, he felt her tears and kisses on his face.

And so he died, smiling with his head on her breast.

CHAPTER XI.

Mrs. Ormsby was only human, after all; and though Jack, lying dead, still pleaded for his young widow—who, as he had truly said, had seen his days rather than his accipiters—was the child who served her best.

As he lay on his mother's lap, kicking and crowing, Mrs. Ormsby bent down, almost shyly, and watched him with a will's housekeeper, and, of course, that was very young; but I was playing for a high stake—baby's inheritance—and Jack told me Mr. Ormsby would cut him off with a shilling if he had found he had married me. He thought that if I won your affection first, you would not be hard on Jack when he told you the truth."

"How could he say that we should disapprove of you?" exclaimed Mrs.

Ormsby, indignantly. "If you bore an honest name, we had no right to object."

"And I did, Mrs. Ormsby. My boy has no need to blush for his mother in that way, although he might be sorry if he knew that I allowed myself to be persuaded into doing what was not right—even for his sake. But about the stolen money: I know nothing. I did go down one night and let Jack in. It was of consequence he should see some paper, he said, and I never dreamt he would make a bad use of his opportunity. I ought to have trusted him, perhaps, but he was my husband, a gentleman by birth, and he owed me much to Mr. Ormsby. I could not suppose he would rob him. It was a terrible shock to me; it filled me with horror and fear—fear lest he should be discovered and imprisoned—and I resolved to get him out of the country as soon as I could. I had gambled away the last farthing he had borrowed on the stolen deeds, and also anticipated his last quarter's allowance; and we could not move without money, could we?"

"Why didn't you tell us the whole truth, Mary? You knew that you were in a most invidious position at that time."

"I could not accuse Jack and ruin him.

Now that you know so much, I may tell you the rest, but if you could have been kept ignorant—"

"I see; but how did you get the money after all?"

Mary blushed scarlet up to the very roots of her hair.

"I—I borrowed it of Sir Charles Man-by."

"Why not of us?" inquired the other, in a cold shocked voice. "You needn't have told us what you wanted to do."

"I was afraid you would guess, and I meant to pay him back, even if I worked myself to death."

"Of course; but the poor man was in love with you, and when you borrow of your lover you can only pay him back in love."

"I know, but what could I do? Mr.

Banbury recognized me at once—I could not tell by the marked way in which he informed me that he had never seen me before. He was watching me day and night, and hanging about my house and neighborhood, and committing such terrible imprudences. If only Mr. Banbury's suspensions had not fastened on me, he must have found out the truth, he was so often on the brink of it. But, fortunately, he never wavered from his first theory, and I naturally did my best to encourage it."

"Then I suppose it was you and Jack who made the money that day in the avenue, when I spoke to Jane?"

"Yes; he would come. Oh! the misery of all that time—the degradation!" she said, with a burst of irrepressible feeling. "If it had not been baby's father—"

She cried passionately for a few minutes

Mrs. Ormsby soothing and comforting her, and then she dashed the tears determinedly out of her eyes and went on—

"If Sir Charles had given me money instead of a cheque, all would have been well, but we had to wait to change that and by the time the bank opened it was too late for the morning mail. But it did not matter, Jack said; it was safer to cross at night, and he could lie low all day. I kept close at his side—I watched him as a cat watches a mouse, until dark, and then—I don't know how it happened but I was so worn out—I fell asleep with baby in my arms. When I awoke, Jack was gone, and I saw him again here as he was dying."

"I can only imagine that, knowing Mr.

impunity, he came to get more money."

"Tell me, Mary, was it you who dragged

Mr. Banbury's wife away to the little child next questioned. "He declared you did, and God has made us all of one blood, and as there is but one bread and one cup, it needs no seer or prophet's son to predict what will happen in which these race distinctions must cease in the church of God."

Fifteen thousand petitioners have recently appealed to publishers of daily papers in the state of California, imploring the proprietors of such papers to exclude from their columns events of a sensational character—those that appeal to the lowest passions of human nature. The problem is a difficult one to solve. The public will have the news, and newspapers are expected to reflect the actions as well as the thoughts of the age. But at the same time, religion and morality, representing the highest interests of the individual and of society, demand that the daily papers of this country, with a power for good or evil possibly greater than any other agency, shall, at least, not cater to that which degrades and debases.

IN GREAT AFFLICTION.

Severe afflictions have befallen Harry

Crawley, brother of the Rev. F. D. Crawley, formerly of Fredericton. The unfortunate man is married with three children, and lives across the harbor from Sydney, C. B. Besides financial difficulties he has been ill, and is deaf. The eldest child, a boy about five years old, has suffered everything for a year from spinal trouble, caused by a fall, has had to wear a plaster jacket and is in a precarious condition. Wednesday morning before daylight, about five o'clock, Mr. Crawley's home caught fire and was burned to the ground. The father, mother, and three little children barely escaped with their lives. The thermometer was below zero, with the ground covered deep with snow, and the trouble-stricken family (no neighbors living near) had to make their way to an occupied house some distance off, without furniture, clothes, fuel or food, where they remained till morning. However, kind friends the next day went to their assistance, and relieved the urgent necessities of their case. In addition to their other troubles, Mrs. Crawley's mother is lying in a paralysed condition at Grand

Mira, C. B.

THE WRONG FACE.

A good story is told of a farmer living near Elmira, Ont., though the accident accompanying it is to be regretted. The farmer has an amiable daughter, to whom a certain young man has been paying his affections, in the face of the most vigilant and unyielding parental opposition. In order to overcome the difficulties which thus prevented the two young hearts beating as one in the ordinary way, they were obliged to hold clandestine meetings, and the plucky young lady always assisted her lover into the house through an upstairs window by means of a rope. When the father discovered this he got at the end of the rope himself one evening, and was ascending very satisfactorily until his face was nearly up to the window.

Just then his daughter let go of the rope, and he fell to the ground and broke his leg.

AFTER GRIP, "KARA."

A New and Terribly Fatal Scourge Will

Reavage Europe Within Two Years.

Dr. Paul Dobell, one of the most eminent physicians in
