New Calvin Banned Government

It is a matter of implicit belief amongst many Protestants that persecution for religion has been a distinctive practice of the Catholic Church before the rise of Protestantism. They must admit that at the present day they find absolutely nothing to warrant this belief, but they hold it at the same time. A carefully written article on Calvin as a ruler in the last Overland Monthly, not a Catholic publication by any means, threw a strange light on this issue. The writer has drawn his materials from the memoirs of the institute of Geneva, a bitterly anti-Catholic body, and accordingly they may be received with credit when they speak of the Protestant reformer.
Calvin first came to Geneva in 1536. Two years afterwards (in 1538) he was sent out of the city by the magistrate, practically for having (as was charged) tried to force the Calvinistic religion on the inhabitants of the city. He was, however, brought back by his friends in triumph in 1541, and from that time until his death, in 1564, he ruled the city of Geneva in all matters whatever, ecclesiastical and civil. His official appointment was as preacher and professor of theology, in a single position, however, which included the office of temporal ruler; and also of chief of a great Protestant sect, more or less numerous in Switzerland, Germany, Holland, France, England and Scotland. His general position and influence were on a scale corresponding to his power. It has sometimes been represented that he was a poor man, having scarcely enough to live. This is not so. He was splendidly maintained as a ruler, and his revenues were several times greater than those of any other city official. In all his income was, at the very least, equivalent to $5,000, being more than twelve times as much as that of any other city official. And in estimating it, it must be remembered that a dollar in those days represented several times as much value as it does now.

It is a general opinion that if Calvin erred in causing Michael Servetus to be burned alive over a heretical doctrine, it was on the side of expediency, for the sake of maintaining the peace and order of the city. It is a general opinion that if he erred in causing Michael Servetus to be burned alive over a heretical doctrine, it was on the side of expediency, for the sake of maintaining the peace and order of the city.

As to the number of persons executed under Calvin's rule, there is a list of names in the records of Geneva which shows that the number of persons executed was not a small one. It is a matter of fact that the number of persons executed was not a small one. It is a matter of fact that the number of persons executed was not a small one.

Good Reading for November.

There is a rare treat in store for the readers of that popular and progressive trotting horse journal, HARROCK'S STOCK FARM, published at Lexington, Ky. According to their catalogue, the volume will contain a special Christmas number. They are now turning their attention to its preparation and are finishing forth every effort to make the Christmas number for 1891: the most beautiful, interesting and readable of any number ever issued by them. Those of us who have seen their previous numbers, can readily appreciate how great an undertaking they have before them.
The illustrations will be none the less, a highly-colored and attractive feature. A highly-colored illustration will adorn and enliven the substantial matter of the book, which will consist of the best of the trotting and steeplechasing performances, together with biographies and successful experiences, reliable tables compiled by experts statisticians, pictures and descriptions of the most notable performers and foremost sires of the year, and a vast lot of general matter that will be of interest to every horseman.
Possibly the two most remarkable things about this special number are: that it will be mailed to any American address for ten cents a copy, (the price of each regular weekly edition), and that its rates for advertising space, remain the same as for any regular edition.
One should not be backward in ordering. Those who order first will be served first.

The First Bell Rang in America.

IT WAS IN THE CHURCH OF THE BELL IN ISABELLA, 1493, AND IS NOW IN WASHINGTON.
When Columbus laid the foundations of Isabella, San Domingo, the first settlement by Europeans (if we except La Navidad, a merely temporary stockade with a small garrison) in the New World, the first structure to receive serious attention was the church. It was erected and christened within a few months after the landing at Isabella in December, 1493. This was the location here of the gold mines of Cibao to the coast at this point, no longer answered when it was found that the interior country was richer, and afterward San Domingo city was founded, 1496. In 1494, a city was begun in the Royal Plain of Las Vega, and called La Vega, or the City of the Plains, which was soon abandoned to the solitude of the forest which surrounded it. A church was likewise built at La Vega, and it is thought that the same bell that hangs in the cathedral at Isabella occupied a similar position in the belfry tower at La Vega. In 1542 La Vega was destroyed by a terrible earthquake and the city of San Domingo was founded there as a successor.
More than three hundred years passed away. One day a man stepped a bell in the branches of a "fig" tree, a parasite tree that grows on the trunk of the tree, which had wrapped its trunk around a portion of the belfry tower of the raised church. This bell had been raised in the arms of the "fig" tree and of modern society must be worked out on the lines laid down by the Catholic Church, and little by little her methods are being adopted. The multiplied orders and congregations of priests, brothers and sisters engaged in educational training of Catholic youth have time and again been ridiculed and vilified by the Protestant religious press; and now comes the American Churchman, the organ of the Episcopalianism in this country, with a plea for "the establishment of teaching orders both of men and women, prepared to maintain the cause of Christian education by giving their own selves, their souls and bodies, 'a reasonable, holy and living sacrifice' to the training up of Christ's little ones for duty in this life and for glory in the life to come." While we doubt the permanence of all Protestant orders of brotherhoods—for they are and must be built on a foundation of sand—we welcome this outspoken protest against education without religion.—An Maria.

THE ONLY SURVIVOR OF THE CASTER
The only survivor of the Caster massacre died at Fort Riley last week. His name was Comanche, and he was the horse ridden by General Caster. After the massacre he was found saddled and covered with wounds at some distance from the scene. His horse had been killed a life of ease in the special care of the Seventh Cavalry regiment, and was 25 years old when he died. At the time of his withdrawal from the service he was a veteran, for he was one of the original mount of the Seventh Cavalry when it was organized in 1866, and served in almost every battle with the Indians up to the time of the Little Big Horn fight.
DONAHUE'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE, for December, contains articles on The Methodist Ecumenical Conference; The Celtic Cross; Farnell; The Immaculate Conception; How Hot it is in Africa; Christmas Eve; The Origin and Development of the Roman Catacombs; The Centennial of St. Mary's Seminary; the conclusion of the interesting story of Kildooma; The Clan-na Loughlin, an Irish historical poem, in two cantos; Reminiscences of General Custer; Curing the Drink Habit; The Land of Braganza; Ramon de la Isabella; the Catholic; the Late Dr. Arny McGee. The Juvenile Department is as interesting as usual. Price, $2.00 a year; $1.00 for six months. Now is the time to subscribe, as a new volume commences in January.

THE OBJECTIONS DISMISSED.

ORDINARY adjourned the 18th inst., conveyed the intelligence that the Supreme Court of Canada had dismissed, with costs, the appeal in the Queen's and Prince County election cases. These cases are in consequence, referred back to our courts to be tried on their merits at Ottawa. Our readers will remember that the election of Messrs. Davis and Walsh in Prince County, and Yeo and Perry, in Queen County, were petitioned against on the ground of bribery and corruption. When notice of the petition was served on these gentlemen, they filed a large number of technical objections, and it is to these objections that we have to refer. In due course argument regarding these objections was heard before the Supreme Court here, Mr. Morson appearing for the petitioners and Attorney-General Poirer appearing for the respondents. After a long and able argument, the Chief Justice, after the hearing of argument decided the objections were not valid, and dismissed them.

The members petitioned against were not disposed to acquiesce in this decision and appealed their case to Ottawa. The result is that the highest judicial tribunal in the Dominion has confirmed the decision of our Supreme Court and dismissed the appeal with costs. The case will therefore have to come before our Supreme Court and be tried on their merits. It is hard telling what result may be reached before all is over, unless these members may deem it wise to allow their case to come to trial, and resign their seats to save expense.

DEATH OF REV. DANIEL J. A. McDONALD.

His own duty, to-day, to chronicle the death of Rev. Daniel John Alexander McDonald, which took place at the home of his parents, Johnston's River, about five o'clock on Monday morning last. Father McDonald was in the twenty-fifth year of his age at the time of his death, and was less than six months in the Sacred Ministry.

He was the son of James A. and Ellen McDonald, Johnston's River, and was educated at St. Dunstan's College in 1881. He entered St. Dunstan's College in 1881. He entered St. Dunstan's College in 1881. He entered St. Dunstan's College in 1881.

MR. LAURIER IN BOSTON.

On Tuesday the 17th inst., Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, Leader of the Opposition in the Dominion Parliament was accompanied in Boston, by a large number of his countrymen, French Canadian, living in the New England States. Mr. Laurier made a speech on the occasion, as did other gentlemen who accompanied him to Boston. We have not the slightest doubt that the speech was a good one, so far as choice of words and construction of his sentences were concerned. But on an occasion such as this, when a leading public man of a foreign country, is in most natural respect that he should speak as a citizen of his country rather than as the representative of any particular political party, and that he would carefully refrain from saying anything that might be construed by his hearers, to the disadvantage of his country.

Was this the case at the Boston banquet? The gathering purposed to be French Canadian irrespective of party, and the speakers took sides with the party connected with Mr. Laurier in Quebec, and led by Mr. Laurier at Ottawa. Among the speakers were the Lagalliers, one of whom, at least, has acquired unenviable notoriety by the revelations made before the Royal Commission, lately in session at Quebec.

According to the reports of Mr. Laurier's own speech, it was a bid for foreign support and sympathy for his party in its struggle for supremacy in Canada. During the election campaign, one of the Parliament of his country, a political leader may be expected to advocate his political views in such a way as to win popularity and strengthen his following; and addressing a meeting of foreigners, knowing to be, by no means, ever friendly to his country, he would be expected to act altogether differently.

Throughout his speech Mr. Laurier kept before his hearers the fact that in any negotiations for trade relations between the two countries, terms far more advantageous to the United States, might be expected from his party, should they only come into power. In fact, he left the impression that he and his party would be willing to grant them nearly any concessions they might ask.

Now, in the face of the fact that negotiations are at present pending between the Government of Canada and the United States, we submit that Mr. Laurier's speech was ill-timed and decidedly unwise. Hearing such expressions from the Leader of the Opposition in Canada, and not knowing his very slim chances for obtaining power, how should we be disposed toward this country, might be induced to change their opinions in the hope of reaping some decided advantage for themselves by a little delay. It is well known that many of the people of New England believe that a reciprocity treaty in natural products would be of advantage to the United States, but when they hear the leader of Canada's opposition talk them they would only have to wait a short while and they could have unrestricted reciprocity, they would no doubt be favorable to that which would be of the greatest advantage to their country.

Mr. Laurier was so far as to say that the reciprocity treaty was one-sided, and he would be quite willing to be a party to a treaty that would discriminate against Great Britain and in favor of the United States. Greater Liberals than he considered the M.T. a fair one for both countries, and scolded the idea of favoring one side or the other.

Mr. Laurier's speech here, a strong resemblance to that made in Boston by Sir Richard Cartwright, just previous to the last Dominion election, when the United States paper said the Liberal Party were looking to the country for a sign by which to conquer.

It was stated in Quebec on Monday that a committee composed of Montreal and Quebec gentlemen, not in political life, have taken France in hand and in a few days will take a cruise to the front of the city, to find out what is being done by the Quebec brigade. The first of the misappropriation, and the second to recover $100,000 stolen from the province.

The capture in the Gulf of the St. Lawrence of the schooner Marie Rose, said to be from St. Pierre, with $20,000 worth of whiskey, brandy, etc., is a feather in the cap of the Customs preventive service, and will more than repay the expense of keeping up a revenue cutter. These Gulf keepers have grown to be a serious nuisance in the past, and a few heavy punishments are needed to make them stop their traffic.

The total exports from the Dominion during October are valued at $12,855,312 and for the four months of the financial year $45,822,212 against $17,288,989 during the first four months last year. The imports for October reached $9,538,408 on which $1,668,272 duty was collected. For the four months of the current fiscal year the imports were $30,474,421 and the duty collected $57,710.

This steamship Empire of Japan, called from Vancouver, B. C. for Japan and China on the 19th inst., with 53 first-class saloon and 350 Chinese passengers, who carried nearly 10,000 tons of cargo and 51 tons of mail. Among the passengers were Mr. William Robson and family, the most prominent of Hong Kong; Chief Justice W. G. Adams, South Australia; and Mr. T. G. Ranganatha, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific railway, who is taking a trip to Japan. A large number of ships, as we have already mentioned, are being sent to Japan.

ARNOLD'S ARREST.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Globe, had the following to say, on the 18th inst., regarding the arrest of Arnold. Mr. J. R. Arnold's beautiful wife was arrested at the Police Court on Monday morning, simply because the owner will be compelled to take them there. As the English law is, we know, Mr. Arnold was, until a few days ago, chief mechanical engineer of the Public Works Department, and was also a member of the Executive Council.

DAVID LANE'S WILL.

For the second time uninvited feet had touched the Bishop's island, and David Lane was sorely perplexed to find that all his precautions could be set at naught by a line, a grappling iron, a resolute will, steady eye, and strong arms...

curious, although on the island, and—supposing he knew all from his son—within easy reach of certifying the communications of the boy. Yet, instead of making search or displaying curiosity, he had crossed from the mainland, been on the island twice, and still made no attempt to corroborate such a communication...

He had never been able to learn that Cabill had an interview with his son before that morning, years ago, when he discovered Cabill on the ledge. He had no means of knowing that Cabill had ever been on the table of the island. If he had, he would have made it a matter to discover anything, and nothing had since come of that visit.

This additional reasoning was also the result of months; and then, one morning in early spring, one suddenly roused into the dull, obscure mind of this solitary, fallen outcast, that perhaps, after all, no such obligation did lie on his son; and that only he had flung the boy from him, he might now have the young man at his side.

He reverted to the past. He saw the young child in his mother's arms, in imagination he took it from her, and fondled, and pressed it to his breast, and kissed it, and let it wind its little arms round him, and then smiled to find it recoil from his breast. Later, the boy was able to go about the island—his wife being gone away forever, across the dim gulch between the island and mainland, into the dimmer one of the sea.

So this poor, dark soul, blinding about in a bereaved body, ate the flesh of his bones, and as the months went by he grew into feeble health. Tom, his old friend, was now once more with him, and grieved to see the change in the once sturdy, man. Lane lost all caring for food, often went whole days without breaking his fast. He had grown quite heedless about everything, and wandered aimlessly, often neglecting to bathe.

Very good! If he, Lane, should die of this hurt the Foot was so communicate the following to John Lane, and no other living being, when John Lane returned.

Why did the thought, "A ship!" fill him with such torture and agony? Why was he not able to burst down the walls of his furnace and fling the fierce core into the sea? Why was he powerless there, deprived of all possibility of motion? How was it that the fire seemed to gain intensity and volume, although no fresh fuel was added?

CHAPTER XVII. A DRIVE TO CLONMORR. After the burial of David Lane matters went on at Killard in their ordinary course.

Tom was one of those half-witted beings who—though possessing a mind weak in all its manifestations—labored under but one delusion. He firmly believed that the spirit of his dead grandmother took a deliberate and an insupportable delight in directing the elements to afflict him.

Epps's Cocoa.

By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has prepared his breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease.
