

ANNABEL
OR THE TEMPTATION.

CHAPTER IX.
THE MYSTERY UNVEILED.
"Hush, Philip, hush; I understand you now, but another word of this kind I will not listen to. Rather listen to me, I swear that if any such consequence as our separation is threatened by my accession to my uncle's property, I will renounce every farthing of it, and return to Liverpool to work for my bread as I have done hitherto. You may forsake me then if you will; I can only work on and die, but never shall we be parted because I have inherited wealth—never—never!"

"Forsake you, Annabel!" exclaimed Philip, "you cannot dream that I am capable of that."
"No, Philip, no," she burst out, as with a cry she flung herself on his bosom. "I am as sure of your love proving unchangeable as I am of my own; therefore God do so to me and more also if aught but death part thee and me."
With a rapturous thrill he folded her close to his heart, and possessed now by feelings which exalted him far above that worldly region by which he had for a moment allowed his noble nature to be entangled, he responded to her earnest request to have their vows of betrothal renewed, and there, under the spreading branches of a beech tree, they pledged their troth anew, and swore to be true and constant amid every change that earth could bring.

So the brief but dark cloud passed from the soul of Philip Weston, and they returned to the house together, with a deep, deep happiness flowing in their hearts.

A FREAK.—The Hamilton Spectator says:—Some four days ago a sporting gentleman residing less than a thousand miles from this city, lent a ten-year-old son his last horse to take a drive. The morning drove the animal to a place where trotting is carried on nearly every afternoon. He entered the horse for an impromptu match and won $15, with which he started for a neighbouring village. His father was almost crazed, when a friend told him that he had gone on a "shoot." He informed the police of the fact, and wished them to keep a sharp look-out for the boy, and arrest him if possible. Next evening the father saw the prodigal driving leisurely past, and gave chase immediately, but the horse being a lively stepper the youth was soon out of sight. The next morning the horse, vehicle and boy were seen again, and chased several blocks, but the prodigal managed to get away by a vigorous application of the whip to the spirited animal. Upon several occasions the boy was seen driving at a reckless rate in different directions, but as soon as he saw a policeman he disappeared like Horn the hunter. For three days that horse and vehicle were as unapproachable as the Flying Dutchman to the party sent out to capture the dissipated youth. At last a chum of his was bribed by promises of certain emolument sufficient to purchase definite quantities of tops and marbles, to lend his services to catch the prodigal son. What force could not accomplish was secured by strategy, and the erring youth was decoyed into a place where the enemy lay in ambush to capture him. He was surprised, surrounded, and led to the parental prison in triumph. He's saddest when he sits, now, but he has taken a solemn vow to "put a head" on his betrayer, the first place he meets him.

WEeping Scenes.—Mr. Darwin is credited with the statement that infants do not know how to weep until they are several days old. This is opposed to the authority of Sir William Jones's epigram which says that new-born children weep "while all around them smile." But Sir William probably refers to screeches rather than to tears. Perhaps the point of Darwin's view is that children begin to cry the moment they have time to find out what a world they have come into.

DEATH OF MR. DOWELL ROBERTSON.—This well known railway contractor died at the Russell House, Ottawa, on Friday. He had been some days seriously ill of inflammation of the lungs. His remains will be taken to his late home. He lived at Queenston, and was highly respected by all who enjoyed his acquaintance.

PETRIE'S
NEW DRUG STORE
Nearly opposite the Old Stand,
NOW OPEN.

Mr. PETRIE takes this opportunity to thank the Public for their large and liberal support during the seven years he has been in business in Guelph.

The New Store is the one formerly occupied by Mr. H. Berry, and lately by Mr. J. R. Porte, as a Confectionery Store. The store has been enlarged and refitted, making it a much more desirable place of business than the old stand.

Having secured the new store for a term of Ten Years, I hope, with the assistance of the Public, to present in the future as I have done during the past seven years, any monopoly in the Drug Trade of Guelph.

The old store will remain open for business until the first of May.

By conducting my business in the future in the same upright principle as in the past, I trust to receive a continuance of your generous support.

A. B. PETRIE.
