LONG AGO.

I once knew all the birds that came

And nested in our orchard trees.

For every flower I had a name—

My friends were woodchucks, toads and bees.

I knew where thrived in yonder glen

What plants would soothe a stonebruised toe.

Oh, I was very learned then,

But that was very long ago.

I knew the spot upon the hill

Where checkerberries could be found.

I knew the rushes near the mill

Where pleasure lay that weighed a pound!

I knew the wood—the very tree

Where lived the pecking saucy crow.

And all the woods and groves knew me—

But that was very long ago.

And pining for the joys of youth,

I tread the old familiar spot.

Only to learn this solemn truth:

I have forgotten—can't you?

Yet here's this youngster at my knee

Knows all the things I used to know.

To think I once was wise as he!

But that was very long ago.

I know it's folly to complain

Of whatso'er the fates decree.

Yet, were not wishes all in vain,

I tell you what my wish should be:

I'd wish to be a boy again.

Back with the friends I used to know.

For I was, oh, so happy then!

But that was very long ago!

—Eugene Field.

A METROPOLITAN MYSTERY.

[By Amy Randolph]

Miss Melinda Parkinson had come down to New York to buy her summer pat'ens and to indulge herself with a glimpse at the great world, of which hitherto she had only become acquainted through the columns of the weekly newspaper.

"It must be a mortal strange place," said the amiable spinster, "where I shall walk up and down Broadway in their Sunday clothes, and milk sells for ten cents a quart. And where there hail'n't no garrets to their houses, and they go out to parties just when we Centurians are tying on our night caps to go to bed. Well, well, it takes all sorts of people to make a world!"

So Miss Melinda retraced her leghorn hat with sage-green ribbons, sponged over her ancient black silk gown, indulged in the extravagance of new gloves, and set forth for the great American metropolis to visit cousin Lemuel Larkins, whose family had frequently spent halcyon summers at the farm, and to partake of their hospitality she had had a standing invitation for some time.

Cousin Lemuel and his eldest daughter Persimmon met her at the depot with faces of friendly welcome.

Cousin Lemuel was a photographer on the Bowery and Miss Persimmon a superintendant at the Spangle

Theatre and had the promise of going on whenever there should be a vacancy in the regular dramatic troupe.

"Come along, Cousin Melley," said

Mr. Larkins. "Where's the check for your baggage? Here expressman! And look sharp, d'ye hear!"

"But I shied Miss Melinda, 'that check is all I've got to show for my trunk."

"It's all right," said Larkins, it's all right."

"But the man is a perfect stranger!"

"Aint he an express agent?" said

Larkins.

"Yes, but how do you know he'll bring me my trunk?"

Miss Parkinson. "I once read in the Sentinel how—"

"Come along," said Mr. Larkins, good humoredly. "You'll find it'll be as tight as a trivet!"

"Aint I going in a carriage?"

"No, no, no," said Cousin Larkins.

"We're agin' 'em on the short cars."

"But why are you going on the short cars?" said Miss Melinda in great bewilderment. "I thought you said you lived a mile and a half from the depot?"

"Oh, I said Mr. Larkins, 'short' man the cars not the distance! Come, let me help you aboard, there's a good girl."

No sooner was Miss Parkinson safely bestowed between a stout gentleman holding his paper and a black velvet cloaked lady, than she began to be uneasy in her mind.

"Lemuel," said she in a stage whisper, "I don't like these cars. I'd rather walk."

"But why?" said Mr. Larkins, who was hanging from a strap like a first-class trapeze performer. "If I man next you a pick-pocket! But my dear women, it can't possibly be! He's shaking up the paper with both his hands! How can he be picking your pocket?"

"Aint I nodded Miss Parkinson, 'they can't do me no harm. One of 'em's stare! I've read all about it! And he may be a taking my watch and my twenty-five dollars out of my under coat with the real hand, his very minute, for all I know!"

"Madam," said the strange gentleman, jumping up and turning very red, as he started for the door. "I've not yet arrived at my destination, but I much prefer walking a few blocks, to find myself the subject of asperations, as is these! Conduct or, you will have the goodness to stop."

"There," cried Miss Parkinson, starting to her feet, it's just as the Sentinel says! He's escaping! Driver,

I insist that he shall be searched! Conductor call the police!"

"P'raps," suggested Cousin Lemuel, you'd better see if your watch and money ain't safe, Melinda!"

"Because nam," added the conductor with the corners of his mouth twisting, "that the gent is Judge

De Griffiths, of the court of common p'ec'ticks, as ever I heard on."

"And Miss Parkinson, discovering that her valuables were all safe, subsided once more into her place and merely remarked that she was liable to mistakes."

She was then surprised to discover that the Larkins family instead of occupying one of the palatial mansions contiguous to Central Park, lived on fourth fl or of a rusty brick house on the Bowery, whose front windows were blinded by the elevated rails, and whose rear outlook consisted chiefly of caps and chimney tops.

There was a Summergreen next door, where a band of crows d sweet music issued from the millinery and a shouting alley, on the other side, and the ground floor of their own
