Young Apostles of Catholic Truth.

Cardinal Vaughan, writing to the president of the conference of the Catholic Truth Society, which was recently held at Newport, England, said:—

I much regret that I am unable to attend the Newport Conference of the Catholic Truth Society. I should have enjoyed being present for many reasons of a personal and local kind, in addition to those of a more public and general nature. I have no doubt that Monmouthshire will do credit to the Catholic spirit and energy under Your Lordship's guidance, and the Newport Conference will not be among the least successful of those held by the Society year by year.

We older members of the Society are beginning to move (if the scene; some slowly and reluctantly, because the work is sweet and fruitful, and our interest in it as keen as ever; some gladly, because they feel that their acquittal day's task is nearly done, and they hear the loving Voice that is calling them home. But, whatever our feelings, we cannot help looking back to see who are following, and who are going to take our places, and fill up our ranks. For myself, I rejoice to see many zealous and intelligent members of the clergy pressing forward, especially among the younger clergy, and there is also a goodly and increasing number of men and women among the laity who thoroughly appreciate the work of the Catholic Truth Society, and are determined as far as they can, to help it on.

But far off, in the background, I see a great multitude of eager faces; I hear their voices like the sound of the waves of the sea. Who are they? They are the boys and girls in our public elementary schools—they are the strength, the hope, the population of the future; they form the young democracy that is going to rule the country, to make or mar Christianity in this land. These inspire me with the keenest interest. They are young and innocent; they are eager and full of life; their minds and hearts are plastic and ready to take any form, any direction you may impress upon them. If your influence is the first with them, if you have captivated their ambitions and have filled them with ardor to follow you, you will have secured the success of your enterprise in the future. I was set musing after this fashion last year at Newcastle, when the Catholic Truth Society struck out an entirely new line by holding a great and enthusiastic meeting of the children of all the Catholic public elementary schools, and enlisting them into the work of the Catholic Truth Society. It was a soul-stirring sight that I shall never forget. The idea that caught on, that animated all, that enforced and repeated itself again and again, was that all this young, intelligent, and Catholic life must be brought up in the ranks or at least in the spirit of the Catholic Truth Society. The managers of the schools approved and blessed the movement. The teachers, men and women, were alive to its importance and were ready to give it steady and persevering support. And how can the children of our schools take part in the Catholic Truth Society? They cannot write and publish, they cannot hold great public meetings, they cannot subscribe large sums of money. No. But they can become distributors—they can become sowers of the seed—they can become from an early age apostles of the work.

Were the children invited to give a few shillings every year, or even each child one penny a term—they might secure their own little depot of Catholic Truth papers for distribution. Priests and friends might help by enlarging their store so that they might have a constant supply of Wayside Tales and other interesting and instructive leaflets and pamphlets to read to their parents at home and to lend to their neighbors. In this way the good seed would soon be scattered far and wide and almost without observation. Children only need to be encouraged, to be wisely petted, and to be judiciously helped to become active little agents, nay, agents of the Lord, to go before His face, and to prepare His way. So easy is it to do God's work if we set about doing it in the right way.

The question of distribution is one of the most vital questions in trade and commerce, and so it is in the most vital questions in the work of the Catholic Truth Society. Take the grown-up members of the Society. They will write, they will buy they will pay, they will speak, they will applaud, they will come together and pass the very best resolutions; but they won't distribute, they won't scatter, the Truth papers like seed over the prepared ground. They are too shy; they never did do such a thing; they are too old to begin now; in a word—they won't. Let others do this, not they. I would like to ask the secretaries whether I am speaking in words of exaggeration. They will tell you that, with notable exceptions, this has been the constant experience of the Society from the beginning. I therefore venture to turn the attention of the Newport Conference, of the Society itself, to the importance of associating with us the generation of this insuperable shyness, none of the objection to handing round the Truth for people to read it or leave it as they will.

Lastly I look with enthusiastic feelings of confidence to our schools, because we can form from them the workers of the future. The Catholic Truth Society has had a great and growing success during the short period of its existence. But what will be its success at the end of the present century, if it shall have taken every care to enlist and train in its services the eager and intelligent children of its schools? We know not what may be before the Catholic Church to accomplish during the present century. But we do know that the future depends upon the present, as the man depends upon the child, and that it is impossible for us to render a great service to God and to religion than by training the young to become apostles of Catholic Truth.

Nothing is likely to astonish any longer on the part of Mr. Combes' Cabinet in their dealings with the religious congregations, so that a new circular which has been issued to twenty-two Bishops requesting them to replace the Marists and Lazarists who are in charge of diocesan seminaries by secular priests must be taken as coming in the ordinary course of things. These congregations have been the right arm of the episcopate in forming candidates for the priesthood, and they are said to have educated and trained over eighty per cent. of the French clergy. The Lazarists are especially hard hit, as they were in charge of twenty out of the twenty-two seminaries aimed at, and it must not be forgotten that they have been especially authorized by a decree of Napoleon I., which dates from 1804, and that for almost one hundred years their position as teachers and preachers in France has never been questioned from the legal point of view. M. Combes, no doubt, does not forcibly expel them like he expelled the nuns. He leaves them free to live on French territory and to devote themselves to foreign mission work, but he shuts them out of the schools, and as their work was especially directed towards education in diocesan colleges, he deprives them of that work which was so dear to them and for which they were so admirably suited. For another reason also M. Combes' circular has been described as "a crime from the French national point of view," for the Lazarist order is the chief representative of French influence in the Levant and in the far East, and governments after governments have praised and supported them. They are in charge of some 500 French schools, colleges and hospitals in the countries where France still claims to be the official protector of Christians, and it is thanks to them that in some parts of the East the word "Frank" is still synonymous for European and Christian. On this account all the French people who have not delivered themselves over, bound hand and foot, to party passions most bitterly regret this French persecution, from which France is sure to reap no benefit.

With the decline of religion in France crime has been increasing. Richard Dreyfus, in an article which he has contributed to the "Fortnightly Review," points out that at no period has crimes of violence, murder, rapine, suicide and general dishonesty been so prevalent in France as at present. Out of a hundred boys and girls between the ages of twelve and sixteen convicted and condemned for various crimes and misdemeanors in Paris, eighty-nine received their education in schools from which religion has been banished, and only two in the clerical schools. The percentage in favor of clerical elementary education in the case of youthful offenders between sixteen and twenty-one was eighty-two. Brittany, the one province in which religion predominates, is the freest of all the provinces from crime; Picardy and Normandy, which are also feirly religious, come next to Brittany in point of general morality. Of the south-eastern provinces, the Basques, still intensely Catholic, is the freest from crime. If the enemies of religion succeeded in abolishing all religious practices they would produce a fearful crop of crime in France.

Press de-patches from Rome say that Mgr. Zaleski, Apostolic Delegate in India, but who for the past year has been living in Rome, will be appointed Apostolic Delegate in Canada, in succession to Most Rev. Diomedo Falconio, who will be Papal Delegate in the United States. It is further stated that Arch-bishop Sharretti, who was at one time appointed Apostolic Delegate in the Philippines and who was stopped in Washington while on the way to his post, will replace Mgr. Zaleski in India.

Mr. Lionel Johnson, who died other day in London, was a man of fine literary taste, and his pieces, both in prose and verse, bore the impress of talent. He published two volumes of verse and in prose a criticism of "The Art of Thomas Hardy."

The "Aberdeen Evening Gazette" of October 1 says: "As intimated some time ago, Rev. J. C. D. Fraser, Episcopal Church, Banochry, has decided to give up his present charge. Mr. Fraser has arranged to go over to the Roman Catholic Church, and the change will take place immediately."

The Protestant Alliance of England has once more discovered that the law is not favorable to its anti-Catholic bigotry. The answer given in the police court to its application for the expulsion of Father Marie Joseph, the Assumptionist, practically that its bigotry is quite out of date. The penal clause of the law which it was sought to put in operation had not, the Magistrate has been enforced since the act passed in 1829. The cause of the application was, he said, more on the part of the Protestant Alliance.

It is hard, says the "London Catholic Times," to write with calmness of the disturbances created in Liverpool by the outrageous attacks upon Catholics made by the so-called champions of Protestantism. Priests, nuns and the confessional, the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass are spoken of in such contemptuous language by these people that naturally the utmost indignation is excited amongst Catholics. And whilst these violent scoundrels are allowed to sling insults at Catholic—insults likely to make the blood boil—large bodies of police are sent to protect the agitators, the money by which these officers are paid coming out of the pockets of the rate-payers of Liverpool, many of them Catholics. The noise that has been made, chiefly for the purpose of self-advertisement, comes from a few men who are making a living by trading on the prejudices of the ignorance of the people, and of these few men the majority are not natives or residents of the city, but come from outside—either from London or the north of Ireland.

M. Ernest Daudet is one of many eminent French writers who believe that the violence of the anti-Catholics in France will be their own undoing. In an interesting contribution to a Parisian journal he expresses his conviction that the congregations will return to France, as they have always returned when in the past the edicts of their enemies have driven them into exile, and he surmises that their return is not so far distant as it may appear to the ordinary reader.

Before leaving for Rome on his return journey home Cardinal Moran, of Sydney, Australia, gave his impressions of Ireland to a representative of the "Westminster Gazette." His Eminence said there has been a remarkable development of industries. As to land, compulsory sale, so far as small holdings are concerned, would be the greatest possible boon to tenants and landlords. Home Rule would, he holds, produce content, and no sensible man would dream of separation.

Domestic Readings.

Adversity borrows its sharp sting from our impatience.

How shall a man find grace with God? How else except by lowliness of mind.

Good manners is the art of making those people easy with whom we converse. Whoever makes the fewest persons uneasy is the best bred in the company.

Once give your mind to suspicion and there is sure to be food enough for it. In the stillest night the air is filled with sounds that the wisest ear that is raised to listen.

None are so hard to please as those whom satiety of pleasure makes weary of themselves; nor any so readily provided as those who have been always courted with an emulation of civility.

Truth is always consistent with itself and needs nothing to help it.

It is always near at hand, sits upon our lips and is ready to drop out before we are aware; it is troublesome and sets a man's invention upon the rack, and one trick needs a great many more to make it good.

Never be afraid of giving up your best, and God will give you His better. If the question will intrude, "What shall I have if I give up this?" relegate that question to Faith, and answer, "I shall have God. In my giving, in my love, God gives Himself to me."

The older I grow—and I now stand upon the brink of eternity—the more comes back to me the sentence in the Catechism, which I learned when a child at my mother's knee, and the fuller and deeper its meaning becomes: "What is the end of man?" "To glorify God and to enjoy Him for ever."—Carlyle.

And all these passages to and fro of fruitful shower and grateful shade, and all these visions of silver palaces built about the horizon, and voices of moaning winds, and threatening thunders, and glories of colored robe and cloven ruy, are but to deepen in our hearts the acceptance and distinctness and distinctness of the simple words, Our Father, Who art in Heaven.

Death has nothing terrible in it but what life has made so.

When we have not what we love we must love what we have.

The love of Jesus has no horizon; neither time nor space can bound it. As much as we hope to obtain of God, so much as we are sure of receiving.

Self-love is at once the most delicate and the most vigorous of our defects; anything wounds it, but nothing kills it.

A word of kindness is seldom spoken in vain. It is a seed which even when dropped by chance springs up a flower.

Benefit your friends that they may love you more dearly still. Benefit your enemies that they may at last become your friends.

It is but reasonable to regard the force of gravitation as the direct or indirect result of a will or consciousness existing somewhere.

The lessons of life are lost if they do not impress us with the necessity of making ample allowance for the immature conclusions of others.

The universe, in its thousand-fold phenomena with the charms of all its myriad voices, becomes one sublime psalm to the praises of the Most High.

Souls naturally generous, but chilled by experience, resemble brooks covered with ice which are full beneath of beautiful movements and sweet murmurs.

Fear is a greater pain than pain itself. Oh, thou of little faith, what dost thou fear? God will not let you perish while you are steadfast in resolution. Let the world be turned upside down, let it be in utter darkness, in smoke, in tumult, so long as God is with us.

An Ancient Foe
To health and happiness is Scrofula— as ugly as ever since time immemorial. It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"Two of my children had scrofula sores which kept growing deeper and kept them from going to school for three months. Ointments and medicines did no good until I began giving them Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine caused the sores to heal, and the children have shown no signs of scrofula since." J. W. The Government's False Position.

The Patriot perseveres in its efforts to deceive the people with regard to the Dominion Packing Company by hedging round the real and only question at issue with an abundance of verbal frippery. Can it be possible that there is in this Province any number of level-headed people who will allow themselves to be imposed upon by these attempts to divert public attention from the crucial point in this matter?

When asked to plead, Ballard said he was not guilty. Most of the witnesses in the case are in the lumber woods, hence the postponement.

During the terrific gale, Tuesday night of last week, the schooner, Capt. McAdam, bound from P. E. Island, with a cargo of hay and oats for Sydney, went ashore at New Campbellton, C. B. The crew were saved and it is hoped that the vessel may be floated without serious damage.

As a result of the scrutineers at Stafford, Ont., last week the North Perth ballot showed a tie between Mr. Monteith (Conservative) formerly declared elected by one vote, and Mr. Brown (Liberal.) The judges accordingly declared the constituency open and ordered a new election.

The worst railway accident that has occurred on the Cape Breton section of the Intercolonial Railway in recent years happened one day last week at Hawkesbury siding, when a special train and shunter collided head on, full speed. The result is one engine completely demolished, and W. Keith, driver, not expected to recover.

The schooner Carmena from St. Pierre, was seized by Capt. J. W. Gordon of the revenue cruiser Gladiator at Port Hawkesbury a few days ago for having on board a quantity of cigars and liquors not reported. The vessel was released on the payment of $400. The contraband goods seem to have been the property of the cook.

A FATAL accident happened Mr. Isaac Baker of Lot 16 on Tuesday evening of last week. Mr. Baker was at work repairing a house for Col. McKinnon, the roof of which was standing up against the house, and whilst Mr. Baker was working beneath the roof fell on him. With difficulty he was extracted and taken to his home, where he died a few hours later. The deceased was a widower of 73 years of age. One daughter is left to mourn.

An Ottawa despatch says: In view of the large increase in immigration the Minister of the Interior has arranged for the appointment of a medical officer attached to the immigration branch of the Department of the Interior, whose special duties shall be to examine into the health and circumstances of immigrants from the British Isles and European countries arriving at the various seaports; including the examination of any immigrants who may be rejected by the American commissioners in Canadian seaport towns.

The second game of football between the teams of St. Dunstan's College and the Abegweit on Thursday afternoon last ended in the same way as the previous game—neither side scoring. The play on both sides was very aggressive. Towards the end of the first half the Collegians worked the ball over their opponents line and the Abegweits were compelled to make a "safety." At the end of the game the result of the next game (Saturday) is being looked forward to with great expectancy by football enthusiasts.

Two classes will also be granted one South African 1801 to all who served between Jan. 1st, 1901 and one South African 1902 to all who served between Jan. 1st, 1902, and May 31st, 1902.

A committee consisting of C. W. Way, St. Peter's; Robert Jenkins, Mount Allison; and George Brown, New Glasgow, was appointed to arrange for meetings to be held at the beginning of next year to further consider the propositions of Davies & Fraser, at which meetings the firm will be represented. The meeting adjourned to meet again at the call of the board.

KNOW HIM TOO WELL.

"Now, madam," said the counsel for the defendant to a little wiry, black-eyed, sly-looking woman in a case: "you will please give your evidence in as few words as possible. You know the defendant?"

"I know who?"

"The defendant—Joshua Baggs?"

"Josh Baggs? I know him, and I knowed his father before him, and I don't know nothing to the credit of either of 'em, and I don't think—"

"We don't want to know what you think, madam. Please say "yes" or "no" to my questions."

"What questions?"

"Do you know Joshua Baggs?"

"Don't I know 'em, though? You ask Josh Baggs if he knows me. Ask him if he knows anything 'bout tryin' to cheat a pore widdler like me out of five pounds. Ask—"

"Madam, I—"

"Ask him whose orchard he robbed last, and why he did it in the night. Ask his wife, Betsy Baggs, if she knows anything about slippin' into a neighbor's field and milking three cows on the sly. Ask—"

"Looked here, madam—"

"Ask Josh Baggs about that uncle Istlin's pore old mother die in the workhouse. Ask Betsy about putting a big brick into a lot of butter she sold last spring—"

"Madam, I tell you—"

"See if Josh Baggs knows anything 'bout feedin' ten head of cattle on all the salt they could eat, and then lettin' them sell down all the water they could hold, just 'fore he driv' them into town and sold 'em. See what he's got to say to that!"

"That has nothing to do with the case. I want you to—"

"Then there was old Asrael Baggs, own uncle to Josh, got kicked out of his native town, and Betsy Baggs own brother got hatched in a neighbor's hen-house at midnight. Ask Josh—"

"Madam, what do you know about this case?"

"I don't know a livin' thing 'bout it but I'm sure Josh Baggs is guilty, whatever it is. The fact is, I've owed them Baggses a grudge for the last fifteen year, and I got myself called up on purpose to set even with 'em, and I feel I've done it."—London Tit-Bits.

FACTORY-MADE CLOTHS!

Blanketing, Drugget, Shirting and Factory- Made Yarns.

Tryon tweeds are the best on the Island, and they are made from P. E. I. wool—no shoddy, but pure, genuine wool. We have purchased a big stock of All-wool Tweeds, every yard guaranteed. Reid's double and twisted tweed weighs heavier, is better made and better scoured and better finished than any tweed imported into P. E. I. That is why we buy it and sell it. There is no better blanketing, Drugget, Flannel or Yarn for the farmer made. In factory flannels we carry a stock of browns, greys and greens at 35 cents per yard. Wool is bringing a small price this year, and so we are asking a small price for our goods. This quality of flannel generally brings 42 cents elsewhere. Our All-wool Druggets and flannels for men's underwear are selling at 35 cents. Some people ask 45 cents for imported stuff that will not wear as well. Remember to encourage home industry every time when the price is lower and the goods better.

Tryon Tweed made for the farmers of P. E. Island.

By a P. E. Islander for a gentleman to wear. The patterns are copies of the famous Bannockburn designs. Every thread, warp and weft is double and twisted. You won't find amongst any of our double and twisted every alternate thread plain. We guarantee every thread to be twisted. We have even twisted the price down from $1.00 to 80 cents per yard. Farmers, don't pay $1 a yard for imported Double and twist, when you can buy the same goods at 80 cents. We guarantee you a saving of 20 cents a yard, (single width) and 40 cents double width on imported goods.—You must have them, we will give you the famous Tryon make for 75 cents.

THE WONDERFUL FLOWER OF WOXINDON.

An Historical Romance of the Times of Queen Elizabeth.

While we were conversing, the fagon had frequently been passed round, and doubtless the good Spanish wine had something to do with our high spirits...

CHAPTER XXV.

My good husband says it is time that I should resume the part of narrator, since I have already been silent for a longer period than is consistent with the love of talking...

As soon as they had ridden off, I went up to the top of the watch-tower, whence I could follow them in thought, when they had passed out of sight...

The bolts were speedily drawn back, the heavy chains unhooked, and the door was thrown open wide. I then saw a young lady of distinguished appearance and modest, pleasing demeanor standing behind Frith.

The young lady stood by, smiling at the whim, but somewhat inopportune demonstrations of affection showered on me. Her countenance was pale, but pleasing, and the expression of her large dark eyes was very grave.

"I have fled from the Queen's wrath," Lord Burghley's daughter responded, as I conducted her upstairs to my own chamber, where she could take off her wet things.

"I have fled from the Queen's wrath," Lord Burghley's daughter responded, as I conducted her upstairs to my own chamber, where she could take off her wet things.

Just when the storm was at its height, and a perfect deluge of rain and hailstones was dashing against the closed shutters, we heard a knocking at the house door.

Meanwhile old John had bestirred himself to bring something to eat, for he knew right well that the priests, hunted down mercilessly as they were by the pursuivants, often went for whole days without food.

For nearly thirty years he has been traveling around the world, and is still traveling, bringing health and comfort wherever he goes.

To the consumptive he brings the strength and flesh he so much needs. To all weak and sickly children he gives rich and strengthening food.

started to our feet, doubting not that the pursuivants were again on the track of the fugitive priest. Thrusting into his pockets, bread, meat and a bottle of wine, we hurried him away to the hiding place beneath the back staircase...

Our repeat ended, Miss Cecil, not without incessant interruption on Frith's part, told us the story of how she had long doubted the truth of the new doctrine, but had been unable to come to any decision...

Here Frith broke in. "As for that," he said, "you cannot think how stupid the pages were. Just fancy, grandmother, what rubbish one of them talked to me."

"The boy only repeated what the learned Dean of St. Paul's said from the pulpit of the Grand Royal on the preceding Sunday," interposed Miss Cecil.

"Well, what answer did you make to this cunningly devised argument?" asked Father Weston, who was listening attentively to the conversation.

"The answer was easy enough," replied Frith. "I said our Lord gave His priests power to change bread, but not poison, into His Body."

"Bravo! my fine fellow, you shall have the best picture I can find for that answer," rejoined the priest.

"What did the others say to that?" "Oh, nothing worth listening to. They talked loud, and said all sort of blasphemous things, and they cuffed me, and boxed my ears, and I came off badly, for they were twenty to my one."

Miss Cecil then went on to say that after this occurrence she frequently talked to Frith about her religious difficulties, and that he almost invariably gave her a satisfactory answer.

"Grandmother, I only repeated what you or my sister had taught me at catechism," the boy interposed.

In this manner Lord Burghley's daughter gradually became more and more convinced that the truth pure and undefiled was only to be found in the Catholic Church, and she resolved, with God's grace, to return to the true fold.
