The Romance of a Marriage.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"Well, I shall see," she said; then she jumped up. "I am so glad you have come in now, for I was just going for a drive, and was wishing you were here to go with me; it is slow with Weston. I'll order the victoria. Will you have some wine, Rick, dear, or wait for tea when we come back?"

"No, no wine," he said, hurriedly; "and I don't think I can go with you this afternoon, Flossie."

"Oh, but you must," she retorted, laughing softly. "Why, look what ages you have been away; and I have had to drive by myself with only Weston all the time. You must go. Don't be unkind, Rick."

"I don't want to be unkind, my child," he said, almost sadly, he pitied her so; "but I'm engaged—" he stopped short, the words were so fearfully appropriate. "I want to see about some harness—"

"Then we'll drive to the saddler's," she said, quietly. "I've made up my mind that you shall come, and you know how dreadfully disappointed I shall be if you don't. Do come, Rick!" and she went behind him and put her tiny hands upon his shoulders.

It was more than he could bear. He felt that he was acting like a brute rather than a man.

"Very well," he said, rising. "We will go to the saddler's."

After all it was not so bad as going to the park, where everyone would see them. Perhaps, too, while they were out, he could hit upon some way of breaking it to her.

Oh, good resolutions, where have you all flown to?

"I shan't be a minute or two," she said, fitting out of the room. "Look over the new songs; there are one or two goods ones there, and there's the prince's last portrait; he gave it to me the other night. I felt so lonely that I asked a few of them to supper."

Sir Herrick paced the room, his arms folded, a dark shadow on his face. These chains held him so tightly, and were not so easily knocked off.

He walked to the piano and looked at the songs absently, stared at the portrait, which stood on a cabinet beside one of himself, and amidst numerous ones of Flossie in ladies' ordinary attire; you would not find in any room of the house one of her in theatrical costume.

"When I'm at the theatre I'm an actress; when I'm at home I'm a lady like anyone else," she used to say.

What would Paula think and say if she could see this room, and its owner, with his portrait in that cabinet, with his books lying about the table, with evidence of his presence in every direction.

He covered his face with his hands, like something driven to bay. What should he do?

"Here I am," said Flossie, and she came in, beautifully dressed in her long sealskin—to guard her against the wind that did not exist—with her neat and lady-like hat; in fact as well and quietly dressed as any of the leaders of fashion could be.

There was no fault to be found; absolutely none, he thought.

"Here I am. Been looking at the songs? I'll sing them to you to-night after dinner. I've told Weston to tell them to have some red mullet and saute for you."

"I can't dine with you to-night," he said.

"Oh, nonsense!" she retorted, smiling. "You must. You want to go to that horrid club, I suppose? Well, so you shall—afterwards. But you must dine with me to-night. You don't want to break my heart, Rick," and she laid her face on his arm.

"Well, well," he said, biting his lip, "we'll see."

"Come along," she said, with the voice of a happy child, delighted at the return of a beloved one, and he followed her into the victoria.

The coachman drove straight for the park as usual; but Sir Herrick, lost in thought and mental trouble, did not notice it until they had entered the gates; then he looked-up with a start.

"You said you were going to the saddler's, Flossie?"

"So we are; but we can go round the drive first, can't we? There is plenty of time, isn't there?"

He was silent for a moment; then he leaned back with a sigh. Fate and Flossie were too many for him.

The victoria entered the line; it was the hour at which the park is most crowded, and every minute a carriage passed containing someone who knew him; the ladies carefully and markedly looked in another direction and avoided him—the gentlemen gave him a smiling nod of recognition. All along the path, the favoured promenade of our gilded youth, were familiar faces, and hats flew off to Flossie, and nods were sent to Sir Herrick.

THE WHOLESOME
BAKING POWDER

Not only makes your cakes and hot breads lighter, of finer texture and delicious flavor, but at a reasonable cost.

Presently they came to where Lord Fossie leant against the rail, his eyes-glass in his eye, his chin resting on his knobbed stick, and at a sign from Flossie the victoria drew up.

"How do you do, Powis?" said his lordship. "How are you, Miss Hamilton? Back again, eh, Powis? What on earth made you leave town in June?"

Sir Herrick made some suitable reply. The sight of Lord Fossie was hateful to him in his present mood.

"I pulled up," said Flossie, leaning forward, "to ask you and the rest not to come to-night. I shall be engaged. Come some other time; you don't mind?"

"Not at all," said Lord Fossie, who was not easily offended. "Coming down to dine at the club, Powis?"

"No, he is not," said Flossie; "he is going to dine with me. I hate that horrid club."

Lord Fossie laughed, and showed his teeth good-naturedly.

"Tell my man to drive on, will you?" said Flossie, and they drove on.

Like the prisoners whom the Romans dragged at their chariot wheels, Sir Herrick felt himself driven in hers. But what could he do? Inwardly chafing as he was, he could scarcely resent it. It was what he had done, and been content to do, a hundred times before now, and she was not to know that he disliked it.

With his handsome face graver and sterner, and more troubled and perplexed, he leant back. The handsome equipages, with their brilliantly dressed women, passed by him unnoticed. Through all the garish show, the sweet, girlish face of Paula rose before him meekly triumphant.

"Fool, fool!" he murmured, "to have relied on good resolutions. If Paula only knew of this! Oh, my darling; what a weak, broken reed is this lover of yours."

Though she saw the cloud darkening on his brow, Flossie's cheerfulness did not abate one jot; in fact, she never was in a better and more good-natured mood, and when the victoria, having made its journey to the saddler's, reached Raglan Street, she jumped out like a school-girl.

"And we will have a cup of tea and some dinner. You needn't go home to dress, Rick. I'll forgive you for once. You shall sit down in your morning-coat. Afterwards, when I am gone to that miserable Frivolity, you can dress, and if you want to be a really good boy, you can come down and see me play."

He went into the drawing-room, where the tea was already standing on one of the pretty gipsy tables, and began pacing the room again.

It should not go on, he resolved. He would tell her now, at once. Then he thought of the scene it would produce, and his heart failed him. It would be cruel to let her go down to her work heart-broken; he would wait until to-morrow. Then he would write to her. Yes, that was what he would do. And with a sigh he resigned himself to his fate. After all, he had another day. In three days he had promised to be back. Oh, Heaven, if Paula should ever learn how these three days had been spent!

Flossie came down in a few minutes. She was an adept at quick dressing, and she had managed in this exceedingly short time to change her morning-dress for an exquisite costume which she knew suited her, and which Sir Herrick himself had praised. She stood in the door-way a minute, a vision of miniature prettiness; the cheeks lit up by the hectic flush, her eyes flashing almost defiantly, her graceful figure clad in the Worth masterpiece, herself irresistible to all but him who stood like ice and snow, transformed by his newly born love.

But even he could not help admiring her.

"Why all this war-paint, Flossie?" he said, with a slight smile.

"Why?" she retorted, gliding to the tea-table, and seating herself, crushing the costly, embossed satin as if it were mere cotton. "Why, in honour of my prodigal's return. I would kill a fatted calf, only I haven't got it."

She poured him out a cup of tea; but he put it aside and began to walk the room.

Why not tell her now? He felt as if he could not carry out the deception any longer.

"Flossie," he said, gravely.

"Now you are going to read me a lecture!" she exclaimed, pointing. "The first day of your return, too. It is too bad! I will not listen! You shall not say anything disagreeable to-night. Wait till to-morrow. Tonight you are my guest and must make yourself agreeable. Do sit down! You give me the fidgets! Won't you have your tea? Never mind; dinner will be ready in a few minutes. I take a cup of tea because I'm used to it; it strings me up for the night's work. There, now I'm going to sing to you. You shall hear the new songs. Some of them are not bad, and they suit me," and she jumped up—jumped up easily and gracefully, which she had learnt to do under the ballet-master and the stage-manager—and going to the piano struck into a song.

Sir Herrick listened, and through the well-trained voice which charmed hundreds nightly and called forth thunders of applause, he heard the clear tones of Paula's voice; so distinctly that he stood confused and absent, his thoughts far away beside the rippling stream along the bank of which he had wandered yesterday, only yesterday, with the woman he loved with a love beyond telling.

In the middle of the song, the footman announced dinner, and Sir Herrick, with a start, gave Flossie his arm.

It was a beautiful dinner; if Lord Fossie and the prince had been dining there it could not have been better. Poor Flossie had killed the fatted calf.

The dinner is simply perfection, chosen with the taste of an artist, and cooked—well, there are few better cooks than Flossie's—and Sir Herrick is but a man, after all, and men, the strongest of them, are softened by a good dinner. And Flossie is at her best. Never has she exerted herself as she exerts herself to-night. She is full of story and anecdote, and in spite of himself Sir Herrick is amused.

At times the ripple of the brook sounds in his ears, at times Paula's face rises before him, but the vision is less clear than it was, the voice less distinct than it was.

Weston—the footman never waits when Sir Herrick is present—brings in the coffee, and the time approaches for Flossie to put on her sealskin and go to work, but she looks at the clock reluctantly.

"For two pins," she says, defiantly, "I would send word that I am ill. They've got someone who'll take my place."

"Don't do that," says Sir Herrick, rising and looking at his watch. "There is plenty of time."

"Will you go down to the theatre with me, then?" she says. "You haven't seen the new piece."

He hesitates a moment, and is lost.

"Very well," he says.

She gets up at once, and calling Weston, runs upstairs.

Then she seats herself at the writing-table in her tiny boudoir, and pens a short note.

"Dear Major—I've done what you told me. He has driven in the park and dined with us, and is going to the theatre with me. I leave it all to you; I don't let him marry that half-bred girl. FLOSSIE."

Further Slump in Exchange.

Seismic Disturbance Recorded at Washington--Esthonia and Russia Conclude Peace -- Poland Abandons Military Preparations.

ESTHONIANS AND RUSSIANS AT PEACE.

LONDON, Feb. 2. Peace was definitely concluded this morning between Esthonia and the Russian Soviet Government, it is announced in a wireless despatch from Moscow received this afternoon.

EXCHANGE TAKES ANOTHER DROP.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2. British, French and Italian exchange closed at new low records to-day after inching steadily from the opening. The pound sterling closed at $3.44, a drop of three and one-quarter cents for the day. Canadian exchange followed the trend of sterling throughout the day. This afternoon the discount rate on Canadian money advanced sharply, going in some cases as high as twelve and seven-eighths per cent. It closed at twelve and three-eighths per cent. This was a new record.

RUSSIA AND POLAND.

LONDON, Feb. 2. Bolshevik delegates at Dorpat declared that Poland has abandoned her military preparations against Russia, which were to be followed by attacks upon Moscow and Petrograd, according to a Central News despatch from Reval, Esthonia, to-day. Poland has taken this course, the delegates say, because Livonia, "in accordance with the peace treaty with the Soviet," has withdrawn her promise to place her army and the harbor of Reval at Poland's disposal.

GREY'S LETTER CREATES STIR.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2. The letter of Lord Grey to the London Times, dealing with the attitude of the United States in regard to the League of Nations has created a profound impression here. In this letter, which was printed by the New York Times yesterday, and is reprinted in many morning papers by permission of the Times, Lord Grey asserts that his observations regarding the United States attitude are merely his personal views, but there is a strong belief here that before publishing his letter he submitted it to the London Foreign Office and members of the British Cabinet. The point of vital interest in the letter as seen here is the statement of Lord Grey that he would be willing to accept the Treaty with the reservations proposed by Senator Lodge, which have been the bone of contention in the long and bitter partisan fight upon the treaty. Republican Senators declared this morning that the Grey letter merely confirms them in what had been known for some time, namely, that Great Britain and France would be willing to have the United States enter the League on its own terms. The Democrats generally are reticent, but were inclined to regard the letter as likely to become an important factor in the present effort to break the deadlock in the Senate. The portion of the letter which deals with the United States' objection to the basis of voting in the League Assembly, which provides votes for British overseas dominions. Lord Grey states definitely, "Great Britain can admit no qualification of that right." Whatever the self-governing dominions may be in theory and letter of constitution, they have in effect ceased to be colonies in the old sense of the word. They are free communities, independent as regards all their own affairs, and partners in those which concern the Empire at large. But while stating that Britain cannot give way regarding votes for the self-governing dominions, Lord Grey admits that it is impossible to ignore the real political difficulty upon that point in the United States. The United States, with several million more English speaking citizens than there are in the whole British Empire, has only one to six votes. He suggests that the difficulty might be met by increasing the United States vote.

GETTING AFTER THE SMUGGLERS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2. Secretary Glass to-day asked Congress for two million dollars for use in stopping the smuggling of "liquor into the United States."

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK RECORDED.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2. A very severe earthquake, lasting more than two hours and centered between 3300 and 3500 miles from Washington, was recorded early to-day on the Georgetown University seismographs.

HE FILLED MANY OF THEM.

AMORENGEN, Feb. 2. The former German Emperor expects to present to Amorengen a small hospital in remembrance of his stay here. The preliminary construction of the hospital is underway on the ground donated by Count Von Benck.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS.

PARIS, Feb. 2. Jules Guesdo, the veteran Socialist leader, backed by 85 members of the Chamber of Deputies, has introduced a bill in the Chamber which would give women civil, political and economic equality with men.

WILL MAKE IT MORE USEFUL.

LONDON, Feb. 2. A Berlin wireless message says that the Government has leased the former naval port of Kiel to the town authorities, who will make an initial expenditure of two million marks for the purpose of transforming it into a commercial harbour.

TOWNS TURNED OVER TO POLES.

LONDON, Feb. 2. The towns of Komitz and Behrent, included in West Prussia territory allotted to Poland by the Peace Treaty, were turned over to the Poles on Friday, according to a wireless message from Berlin.

WILL THE CHANGE EVER COME.

PARIS, Feb. 2. The Academy of Science evidently considers communication between the earth and the planets as among the possibilities, for it has undertaken to act as a judge for a prize of 100,000 francs to be given for the best means of making signs to Heavenly bodies and receipt of a reply.

FREDERICK WILLIAM HANKERS FOR HIS FAMILY.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 2. Former Crown Prince Frederick William hopes as soon as circumstances permit to go to his estate at Oels, near the Polish frontier, to live with his wife and family, according to a correspondent of the Telegraph who interviewed him at Wieringh.

NONE OF THEM FOVAE PROHIBITION.

LONDON, Feb. 2. The Scottish Temperance Party has received the following replies from the candidates for election at Paisley: Asquith is definitely not favorable to prohibition; Big, Laborite, is not favorable to total prohibition, but favors local veto; McLean, Unionist, is against nationalisation or municipalisation of the drink traffic.

Real Presence of Mind.

They had been telling stories of presence of mind shown at fires. At the conclusion of one story a man said: "I heard of a big fire, and I strolled out to see it. I found an old gentleman half out of the fourth-floor window, gesticulating and calling for help. Everyone seemed paralyzed. No ladder or escape could reach him; the crowd said he must be burnt to death. I rushed forward and said, 'He shall not! I called for a rope and threw him the end. He caught it. I told him to tie the end round his waist. He did so, and then I pulled him down. Gentlemen, it is true he broke his neck in the fall, but, after all, I saved him from being burnt to death.'

How It Originated.

The phrase, "Robbing Peter to Pay Paul," had a curious origin. On December 17th, 1550, the Abbey Church of St. Peter, Westminster, was by letters patent, announced to have the dignity of a cathedral; but ten years later it was rejoined to the London Diocese, and the majority of its estates appropriated to the repairs of St. Paul's Cathedral.

A Profitable Sermon.

The nomination of the Rev. Thomas Nightingale as Secretary of the Free Church Council in succession to Dr. Meyer reminds me that the following story is attributed to him.

A certain Scottish minister preached a powerful sermon on thrift, and was congratulated by one of his congregation. "I am glad you were able to profit," said the minister.

"Profit!" said Sandy, "Why, mon, I would have pit ma saxeption into the plate w'out a thought if it had not been for your providential words. They saved me fourpence there and then."

The New Motor Car

The Greatest Improvement In Riding Comfort Since The Introduction of Pneumatic Tires

HERE is a brand new type of car. It solves the problem which has baffled automotive engineers—how to combine riding comfort with light weight and economy.

The new Three-Point Cantilever Springs make this possible.

These are the first springs of their kind and they are made of chrome vanadium steel. They are exclusive with Overland.

Because of these springs, the Overland 4 combines the riding qualities of large, heavy, expensive, long wheelbase cars, together with the advantages and economy of small light cars.

With 100-inch (2.54m) wheelbase, Overland 4 has the luxurious riding ease of 130-inch (3.3m) Springbase.

The exclusive, Three-Point Cantilever Springs cushion the car so that it rides well on all roads: they reduce choppy rebounds and side swaying, protect the car from road shocks and prolong its life, minimize twisting or racking of frame and body, enable the car to hold the road better.

The car and passengers ride smoothly as though floating, free from road shocks that the springs ward off.

But this new riding comfort, possible only with these Three-Point Cantilever Springs, is but one of the advantages of Overland 4.

Its light weight makes possible great economy of petrol and tires.

High quality materials insure durability. All vital parts of the front axle and steering gear and all highly stressed gears and shafts for driving the car are made of alloy steel.

The equipment list of Overland 4 is high grade, including Auto-Lite Starting and Lighting System—Electric Horn—Marshall Divan Upholstery Springs—Demountable Rims—Three Speed Transmission—Slanting Rain Vision Windscreen—Tillotson Carburetor—USL Battery and many other high quality conveniences.

In every respect Overland 4 is a quality car. The body is all steel, all enamel, the brightest, hardest, most lasting finish.

Overland 4 has been tested for two years and more than 250,000 miles (400,000 km.) over the Rocky Mountains and prairies of America, through deep mud and scorching deserts—through quick, sharp climatic changes. As a result of these tests it was possible to judge the car's performance under every condition and to perfect it before offering it to the public.

The farther you ride in it the more you will appreciate it. Let us demonstrate the Overland 4 to you at your earliest convenience.

THE WOMAN HATER.

"Oh, she's a woman-hater! That accounts for her thinking that."

So a friend of mine with a gift for felicitous phrases, described a mutual acquaintance.

The masculine woman-hater (by the way, I think that pipe times out of ten he is just a woman-fearer who covers his shyness by pretending to be a misogynist) is a familiar figure to us all. I think the feminine woman-hater is just as familiar, though we may never have classified her under that name.

You know the kind of woman I mean, don't you—the woman who always takes a man's side in everything?

If there is any question as to whether men or women are better at anything, she always runs down her own sex and tells how much better men are.

She Always Blames the Woman.

If some man and his wife are having hard sledding in the difficult business of being happy though married, she is always sure it is the woman's fault.

She is forever telling about husbands who wait on their wives by inches.

She is always pitying some man because he is married to a woman so much inferior, or because his wife doesn't appreciate him or pays too much attention to the children, or in some way fails to live up to her high destiny of being the wife of that most wonderful of God's handiworks, a male man.

She Flatters Men.

Incidentally, the woman-hater is always unmarried. In fact, I do not seem to recall any member of this species who is a married woman.

She sees men from afar and, therefore idealizes them. When she comes into contact with any individual of his wonderful species, she flatters him within an inch of his life—or, rather, of his wife's life—since it is he who has to live with a being who has been told that he is perfection.

Once in a while a man will be found clever enough to discount the woman-hater's flattery, but they are few and far between.

She Twists the Facts if Necessary

The way the woman-hater will twist facts to fit her hypothesis of masculine perfection and feminine faultiness, would be amusing if it wasn't exasperating. One member of the type told me of how inaccurate women were in business. And the only fact she had to support this was that she had received duplicates of certain communications from her bank recently, and she felt sure it was because they were employing more women clerks. She didn't even know, mind you, that a woman clerk had sent the communications!

I have been trying to think whether there is a masculine counterpart of the woman-hater among men—an unmarried man who develops into a man-hater. It doesn't seem to me there is. I cannot just make out why not. Perhaps some reader friend can help me.

GOOD RIDDANCE.

Of anarchists we're weary, of all the kindred freaks, of agitators beery who jar us with their shrieks; and so we've started shipping the lot across the sea, and they may do their yipping, in Russia, which is free. They didn't like our banner they voiced their discontent. They said that tyrants rule us, we're trampled by the strong, the plutes and robbers fool us, and everything is wrong. They pitted us for working, they shuddered at our fate, and thought some timely dinking and bombing would be great. And now they have departed for Russia's shining shore, where patriots true-hearted may shed each other's gore; where man takes recreation with weapons in his paws, and prompt assassination is sure of great applause. I hope they'll all be joyous on Russia's happy strand, and never more annoy us, or see this darkened land. They'll have the kind of freedom that's bound to hit the spot, for friends will shoot and bleed 'em, and burn them when they're shot. So let's keep on dispatching the reds to Russia's shore; they've itched us long and scratching has grown to be a bore.

A Dress on Fire.

When a lady, who is alone, discovers that her dress has caught fire, what is the best thing she can do? She should at once lie down on the floor, draw up her feet, and roll on the floor, or wrap herself in a rug if one happens to be handy. This is a most effective way of putting out the flames.

When a dress or an undershirt catches fire, the chief danger arises from the fact that the flames rise. If the patient sits upright the danger is partly averted, that part of the clothes nearest the floor being at once extinguished, for no dress in the world could burn when the wearer is sitting on it.

The flames at the side and in the front of the dress will rise straight up, and then it is comparatively easy to put the fire out by means of covering it or throwing water on it.

The one rule of safety is that a person whose clothes have caught fire should without delay sit or lie down on the floor or ground.

Running for help by rushing through doorways and passages has exactly the opposite of the desired effect, as the draught fans the flames, so increasing the danger.

Very Likely.

General Booth, who is just now touring France and Switzerland in connection with his work as the head of the Salvation Army, is a plain, blunt man, with a marked aversion to gush and sentimentality.

The story goes that, walking one day in Hadley Woods, a certain young lady who chanced to be in his company, ran up to an ancient tree trunk and, clasping her arms round it, cried ecstatically:

"Oh, you grand old oak, if you could only speak and tell me all you have seen during the centuries you have stood here, I wonder what you would say!"

"He would say, I think," said the General, glancing up at the tree in question: "I am not an oak, I'm a beech!"

The publisher of the best Farmer's paper in the Maritime Provinces, in writing to us states:

"I would say that I do not know of a medicine that has stood the test of time like MINARD'S LINIMENT. It has been an unfailing remedy in our household ever since I can remember, and has outlived dozens of would-be competitors and imitators."

FRIENDS.
The world is peopled thick with men Of every kind and style, And some possess the world's success

And some may ride in chariots fine, And some are much worth while, Some rule the state, and some are great.

And some wear ermine gowns; But each of us, from all this throng, Selects a chosen few, And names them best above the rest, For they're his comrades true.

Who cares what robes a friend may wear, Or what his sum of gold? Who'd turn aside a comrade tried, To be by Kings extolled? Who'd change his friends from what they are

To what another seems? What strange great could make us hate The comrade of our dreams? Oh, men by millions fill the world, And great the deeds they do, But better far than others are Remains a comrade true.

He may be but a humble man, But if his love you hold, By such a love he stands above The neighbor rich with gold; He may not own the touch of fame, Nor walk with stately grace, But if he knows and shares your woes

No king can take his place. Let men grow great and men grow rich Until life's struggle ends, Above the throng, though weak or strong, Man still shall hold his friends.

Wise Men Say—

"That Life is a duty, dare it; a burden, bear it."

"That if you want to make light of trouble, keep it dark."

"That the man who does what he pleases is seldom pleased with what he does."

"That the man wins who forgets to criticize others but sometimes to criticize himself."

"That all easy ways are downhill. You don't notice it till you try to climb back."

"That experience is what a wise man gets at the expense of others, and a fool at his own."

"That excuses are the patches with which we try to hide the holes in our business suits."

"That the darkest shadows of life are those which a man makes himself when he stands in his own light."

The Cure of Fish.

This is a subject which has occupied a first place in the attention of the big purchasing exporters for years and years, and many have been the methods suggested to improve the quality of the product of our staple industry, without, however, very many pains being taken to bring this desideratum about. True there have been some who have been at great care to turn out a superior cure and make, but the majority have gone on in the old rut of the quickest way, which is usually the worst way, because the haste in which a day's catch of fish is split, washed, bulked and salted, is generally a guarantee that, where made, it will be inferior and not up to the standard of No. 1 merchantable, though for various obvious reasons it has to be accepted by the supplying merchant as such, and exactly the same price paid for it as the man who takes pains and turns out the No. 1 receives.

The question has often been asked, is this fair and just? The answer to it is invariably "No,—but what can we do?" Particularly does this apply to fish shipped from the Labrador, where haste in loading a cargo is a necessity and competition is keen. One vessel requires a hundred so quintals to finish, speed in sailing being urged by the owner, and so long as the offerings from the dealers to complete this quantity come any way near the standard, they are accepted, stowed down and the hatches battened. Result— if the "topping off" is not properly cured, the greater part of the cargo is affected and on arrival across is condemned as unfit for food consumption. This has happened, not once or twice, but in numerous cases, but notwithstanding the expensive lessons learned, the practice goes on unchecked. Then Labrador shore cure is another source of trouble and worry to shippers. Oversalted in some cases, undersalted in others, knocked about in its bulk state from vessel to beach and from beach to vessel, is it any wonder that when made it presents a rough and unwholesome looking appearance, which repels rather than attracts the foreign purchaser, who is demanding that his fish be clean, white and toothsome looking.

Next, carelessness in splitting might be taken as one of the causes for turning out unwholesome and repulsive looking fish. Turning the knife aside some four to six inches ere it reaches the junction of the tail and body, is a common practice with some splitters, who claim that if it does not improve the appearance of the fish, it has, at least, the advantage of making it weigh more, which is a matter for debate, and will not be borne out by facts, as has been proven. The mightily looking gash thus made in the partly laid open fish does not improve its appearance, and the solid part remaining, from the turn-aside to the finish of the body, cannot be properly cured, the skin preventing the salt from getting through into this portion, which if it does not actually spoil the whole fish, yet causes a certain amount of deterioration, because in no case can it have received the full compliment of salt necessary to its preservation. A writer in Saturday's Trade Review, covering this subject, suggests that the entire bone be removed from the fish, his theory being that such a process would eliminate the blood clot made where the knife cuts into the base of the sound bone. To put that into practice would make but a sorry looking object indeed, and fish thus treated would become backboneless articles of no commercial value or reputation. The blood clot can always be removed by water, and there is no lack of such supply where fish are being split. It should, however, be insisted upon that to make No. 1 merchantable, either Shore or Labrador, that all fish should be split open right down to the tail itself. In that way only will it take the salt, and in that way only will it look when properly cleaned, salted, washed out, waterhosed and thoroughly made, a picture fit for comparison with the best that either France, Norway or Iceland or our cisatlantic competitors can produce.

Extending Factory.

Finding the present quarters too cramped, the White Clothing Co. has purchased the Smallwood Building, adjoining, and this will be incorporated with the present factory. The new building contains 5 stores, including two basements, measures 30x90 feet, and will give an additional floor space of 9,000 square feet. The White Co. is to be congratulated on the progressiveness which this new extension to their premises evidences.

Interesting Legal Case.

An interesting legal case will shortly occupy the attention of the court. The local agent of the Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. Ltd., of Toronto, Mr. P. E. Outerbridge, in an advertisement published last autumn, stated that Pure Gold Extracts had been sold here for years to the legitimate grocery trade, that since prohibition they were sold only in small quantities and that in no instance had they been sold to concerns that might use them for beverage purposes. In the same advertisement he intimated that Shrim's Extract of Vanilla manufactured by the Imperial Extract Co. of Toronto was a "dope," that it was never sold here before prohibition, that the company had no local agent to look after the proper distribution of their extracts and that Shrim's Vanilla was sold mainly to soft drink stores for beverage purposes. The Imperial Extract Company, through Messrs. Higgins and Hunt, have threatened libel action unless the Pure Gold Company's agent will make public retraction and apology, which he positively refuses to do, announcing his intention of fighting the case. Messrs. Higgins & Hunt have been retained for The Imperial Extract Company, and Mr. F. R. Emerson for Mr. Outerbridge.

Influenza Precautions.

Influenza infection, it is pointed out by the British Ministry of Health, is conveyed by coughing, sneezing—even loud talking. Personal protection therefore includes good ventilation, good food, gargles for throat and nose (one part permanganate of potash in 5,000 of water). Face masks are not advised for the general public, but should be used by all those attending the sick. Butter muslin is a good material. As regards vaccines, it is laid down that "since we are uncertain of the primary cause of influenza, no form of inoculation can be guaranteed to lessen materially the incidence of the disease." Vaccines, however, may lessen the danger of complications and such vaccines have been prepared and may be obtained by medical officers for the use of any doctors who require them. These vaccines have been prepared after consultation with the Medical Research Committee.

Drugs are of little avail. When attacked, a patient should take to bed and no one should be penalized for staying away from work in these circumstances. Infected handkerchiefs should be placed in disinfectant or burned.

What Are the "Women of the Orient" to Me?

Nearly every woman wears something made of silk. "A silken tie binds their homes to Ours"—Japan supplies 60 per cent. of all silk used on the North American continent. Most of the latter involved, 90 per cent. of it, is given by Japanese Women largely in their homes.

Flour Situation.

White flour, No. 1 quality, is selling in the city for from $16.00 to $16.75 and is expected to take another jump shortly. It is not known definitely what our Canadian cousins intend doing but it is believed they are trying to enforce the payment of the $2.00 tax on white quality, despite the fact that Newfoundland is supposed to be exempt. Latest reports seem to indicate that we will have to go back to the standard grade as is used in Canada. The West Indies and Newfoundland have been privileged in having a special milling process for flour, but it seems now that we are going to be put on the same stand as the neighboring provinces, unless we can get flour from the U. S. A. or conform to the Canadian regulations.

Hold Up the Furniture.

On this day, 1834, the Sergeant at Arms in the House of Assembly, reported that Mrs. Mary Travers refused to give up the furniture of the Assembly, which she had attached to her rent for the Assembly Rooms was paid. The lady who thus defied the Commons was ordered to the Bar of the House and threatened with dire penalties, but to no purpose. Her defiance was maintained. A resolution was then passed, asking the Governor, Captain Prescott, to get the furniture. It appears that the Government, by some oversight, neglected to pass the Rent Bill in Supply—hence the trouble. Later Governments, however, were not so scrupulous, and the practice of spending money on Executive responsibility, only, became the vogue, which is still existent. Mrs. Travers eventually received the amount due her and released the furniture. Fancy any twentieth century person having the temerity to do such a thing!

At the Majestic.

The Majestic Theatre has announced an increase in its admission price, and beginning last night admission to the main floor will be 15 cents and the balcony 20 cents. This decision was made on account of the installation of its new picture service, the Fox Productions, which are far superior to and therefore more costly than all others. To see such world-famous stars as William Farnum, Theda Bara, Tom Mix, Pearl White, Alice Brookwell, Peggy Hyland, Ray and Pat, William Russell, Madeline Travers and others, and to see such comedies as the Mutt and Jeff cartoons and the Sunshine Comedies, were without doubt worthy of the increase in admission price. In addition to the Fox Pictures, the sole right of showing in this country the Select Productions has been secured and the show is the very best.

The German Menace.

"Ex-Squadron Commander" in a vivid letter to The Times visualizing some of the certainties and probabilities of aerial development gives the following warning concerning foreign competition. He says:—"It seems that we alone are blind to the future possibilities of civil aviation. France and Italy have given considerable aid to their aircraft enterprises. American Assistant Paymaster-General has stated that he will save one and a half million dollars in the coming year by the use of aeroplanes—instead of the usual means of transport. We could do likewise by flying the Queenstown, Dublin, and Belfast mails direct to London.

"It is in Germany, however, that the most marked progress has been made. Large twin or multi-engined machines now carry mails from Berlin to Munich, Vienna, Dresden, Leipzig, Weimar, Hamburg, Hanover, Dortmund, Gelsenkirchen, and Duisburg, and a considerable number of passenger services are in operation or in course of preparation. Every other nation has been far outdistanced. Above all, an aerial league, similar to the German Navy League, has been formed. For what purpose?

"Let us leave no point in our armour through which we may receive a fatal blow. Let us encourage the formation of a mercantile air fleet. Here are our ploughshares and pruning-hooks. Yet with them we may to a very great extent render ourselves too dangerous to attack and thereby avoid an enormous armament expenditure. Let us put on our whole armour, so that should war again be contemplated by any nation her better elements can gain the upper hand by pointing to the unity of the English-speaking nations and saying they are awake. The only victories we can gain are in commerce. And gradually universal peace will spread over the face of the earth as the waters cover the sea."

Crime in Ireland.

It has for some time been manifest that there is in Ireland an organization of desperadoes who will hesitate at no crime and are not easily deterred by risks to themselves. Their deeds are abhorrent to the Roman Catholic Church, which has condemned them strongly through the mouth of its highest ecclesiastics; they are also, we believe, abhorrent to the great body of public opinion in Ireland, even though that opinion is bitterly incensed against the Government. The Irish Executive may be justly blamed for persistence in methods of administration which have alienated from the support of order many of those who should be naturally its friends, and for ill-considered measures which have aroused an unnecessary animus against this country on the part of the Irish people. But the Irish Executive are not to blame for the inauguration of what might develop into a reign of terror in Ireland. Sinn Fein has played with edged tools, and the continued hesitation of the Sinn Fein leaders publicly to discountenance deeds of violence bids fair to bring upon them and upon Ireland a bitter reckoning.

No civilized State, were it even a fully constituted Irish Republic, can afford to acquiesce in anarchy. The type of anarchy which finds vent in assassination is more disruptive than revolution and more perilous than rebellion. A dangerous element among the Irish people is apparently beyond the control of the Hierarchy of the once all-powerful Roman Catholic Church; it may well be beyond the control of Sinn Fein itself. Some Sinn Feiners may hesitate to lend support to the machine of government at a time when they believe that to do so would be to compromise their political case. They do not see that by tacit acquiescence in defiance of a law which is not merely British, but a fundamental law of human society, they are injuring their own country far more gravely than the hand of the Irish murderer can injure Great Britain. There is only one sure remedy. It is that the saner elements in Ireland should realize this fact, and understand that the responsibility for the peace of Ireland may very shortly be transferred from Dublic Castle to the shoulders of the Irish people themselves. Meanwhile the duty of the Irish Executive is clear. They hold the machine of Irish government in trust for the Irish people until such time as that people can enter upon their succession. In the fulfillment of that trust they must take all effective measures to exorcise the cancer which bids fair to corrupt the whole of Irish life; but it is well that they should remember that the governing principle in Irish polity should now be to make straight the path for the inauguration of self-government under the conditions most favorable to its success.—The Times, Jan. 2.

Bombarding the Earth.

MONSTER METEORITES THAT COME FROM THE SKY.

Meteorites frequently, though incorrectly, termed "fireballs," are rarely large enough to do any damage. In fact they are usually entirely consumed in their passage through our atmosphere, and are visible to us merely as so-called "shooting stars."

Occasionally, however, one of these stray visitors from outer space is sufficiently large to survive the terrific heat evolved by its friction with the upper air; and reaches us in the form of a mass of incandescent metal. Of this kind, apparently, was the one which fell in Lake Michigan the other day, shaking several towns and causing a flare that was seen for fifty miles.

Judging by the description of it, this particular meteorite must have been a monster indeed, only surpassed by the one that fell in Arizona several years back, and which left a "crater" where it entered the earth that measured over half a mile in diameter, and which continued smoking for several weeks.

In 1896, again, an immense meteorite burst high in the air over Madrid, the concussion causing serious damage, while near Disco, in Greenland, is one weighing twenty tons, which fell at some unknown period.

Small meteorites frequently fall in England, and many have been retrieved and preserved in museums and elsewhere, but the biggest of them so far recovered does not greatly exceed an orange in point of size.

Prohibition Encourages Drug Habit.

The only prohibitionist nation in Europe is the degenerate, unspeakable Turk. What we have seen as the fruit of State prohibition in America are evasions of the law, illicit distillation, the drug habit, the unpleasant frequency of divorce, and the derangement of State finance.

It is too soon yet to suggest the physiological effects of prohibition in America, but there seems to be no ground for confidence that the evil consequences that followed State prohibition will disappear when the measure becomes national. The first month's result of "war" prohibition which came into effect on July 1st is not encouraging. The New Year Sun of August 7th says that all records were broken at Atlanta on July 30th, when thirty-eight cases of drunkenness were reported, and that in many cities a decrease of lesser offences had been attended by an increase in the more serious ones. Conditions in Georgia are reported to be much worse than before prohibition.

I very much doubt if prohibition will give greater efficiency to workers. We know that during the beer shortage employers were pressing for an increased supply to fortify their men, and "Pussyfoot" experiments such as administering port wine to sepper typists and registering their heart-beats are altogether unconvincing. It is a significant fact that prohibitionists grasp such slender proofs. —O. W. Falbot in Pearson's Weekly.

Runaway Horse.

This morning a horse owned by Aden & Co. bolted and coming down Beck's Cove ran into a snow bank, where the shaft of the attached harness slide broke. The animal cleared itself from its harness and continued to the breastwork in Bowling's lane, where it was caught by workmen.

Cheerful Prospect.

Following the dictates of the Law the Water St. merchants and shop-owners are busily engaged in clearing the snow from the portion of the sidewalk fronting their premises. The snow must be cleared to the bottom and a steep wall of snow at the outer edge of the sidewalk is the inevitable result. Consequently, when the snow begins to melt in earnest, and the snow and ice on roofs begin to melt, the sidewalks will become the drains, as the drains proper are not cleared. The cheerful prospect of having the sidewalk on both sides of Water St. covered by about a foot or so of water faces those who must be on the streets, and it might not be far-fetched to prophesy "hot times."

Mainly About People.

Colonel Charles Young, the only negro officer to attain that rank in the American army's history, has just been appointed military attache to Liberia. Colonel Young spent his war period training recruits.

It is reported that the women members of Russia's Bolsheviks and the wives of leaders try to outshine the former aristocracy in sumptuous living. The unchallenged leader is Madame Andreyeff whom Maxim Gorky introduced to New York in 1906 as his lawful wife but who was not accepted as such. She is said to be even more clever than in those days but fat beyond words.

Former Sergeant William Sandlin of Hyden, Ky., who has been appointed special escort for the return of American soldiers dead from overseas ranks next to Sergeant York in his war exploits. He killed 24 Germans and wounded and captured as many more. In one day he alone put out of action three machine gun-nests. He has been decorated by France, Belgium and the United States.

Phantom Music.

(Pearson's Weekly.)
Nearly every country has its stories and traditions of mysterious music that has been associated with the supernatural.

We have tales of elves, satyrs and gnomes that dance in forest glades to the accompaniment of bright and fantastic tunes on reed pipes; and also accounts, many of them only too well corroborated, of music of quite another kind, either intensely sad music or music of a very strange and startling sort.

This is attributed to ghosts and spirits of a wild and evil type, and is heard from time to time on mountains, river banks, the sea coast, forests and in lonely places.

In certain parts of Cornwall and Brittany very plaintive music and often voices, are heard coming from the sea, and invariably before a great storm.

The voices are said to belong to the spirits of the sailors drowned at sea, and are thought to be raised as a welcome to others who will shortly join them; the music is regarded more in the light of a warning.

The Mysterious Harp.

There is a story well known in Brittany of a fleet of French crabbing boats lying becalmed one night off the Cornish coast, and the sound of a harp suddenly being heard to proceed from one of the smacks. The crew were interrogated, but declared it was none of them; nor would they, indeed, hear anything, and were inclined to regard it as a joke.

The following day the wind unexpectedly changed, a storm came on, and the boat from which the harping was thought to proceed was wrecked, every one of its crew being drowned.

Bells at sea are a very common form of haunting. One of the best known instances of this kind to-day are what are known as the bells of Botreaux.

Many years ago the Church of Forrabury, in Cornwall, needed bells, and accordingly bells were ordered, cast and shipped.

But when these bells were close to the shore, the captain of the ship in which they were being carried used such terrible language, that the ship was suddenly caught in a swell and wrecked, the bells sinking to the bottom.

And now, whenever a storm is at hand, their peals can be distinctly heard, welling up from the bowels of the sea, as a warning to whatever ship may happen to be passing by.

Buried Bells That Ring.

At Fishery Brow, in Cumberland, bells are also heard, but on land. Many years ago a church stood near Fishery Brow in a kind of hollow, and one fine summer morning the church, parson and congregation were all swallowed up in a kind of landslide.

To-day, if anyone puts his ear to the ground where the catastrophe happened, he can at times distinctly catch the sound of muffled bells—the ghostly bells of old Fishery Brow Church.

The most famous of all cases of ghostly music, however, is that of Samuel Foote. When staying a night at his father's house, in Truro, he was awakened by the sweetest music he had ever heard. He got up, roused the household, and they all listened to it, but no one could tell who was responsible for it, or whence it originated.

Shortly afterwards, Foote learned that, at the very hour he had listened to the mysterious music, his maternal uncle, Sir John Goodere, had been kidnapped, taken on board the ship of his brother, Captain Goodere, and deliberately strangled.

Where is the Whiskisoda?

The boy who said that the Mediterranean and the Red Sea were joined together by the Sewage Canal, may have been the same who declared that the chief industries of Belgium were breeding Ostend rabbits and growing Brussels sprouts.

And it must have been his brother who stated that the Equator was a menagerie lion running round the centre of the earth.

Another young geographical genius said: "Canton contains so many streets that you may wander about them for days and never see daylight again." He was thinking of the Catacombs. The same boy said: "Typhoons are well watered plains in the North of China, and a question about the customs of Ireland produced this gem:—

"If we care to wonder into the wild parts of Ireland, we find that pigs there are treated as members of the family. They sit before the fire, walk in and out of the house like parsons, and occupy the few chairs that are there."

But geographical howlers are not confined to the schoolboy.

A colonial newspaper once told its readers of the French had occupied the important town of "Point d'Appui," whilst an English provincial paper announced the glad fact that a certain distinguished general had taken Umbrage.

A good story is told of the campaign in Central Africa, with which the name of General Smuts is immortally connected. It seems that the natives never took kindly to the German language. There was a certain budding town which the Germans christened Wilhelmshöhe, and the governor made a moving speech on the angust significance of the imperial name. When the British arrived they found the natives called the place "Whiskisoda."

Largest of Their Kind.

The three tallest trees in the world are believed to be a sequoia near Stockton, California, which is 325 feet high, and two eucalypti in Victoria, Australia, estimated to be 435 and 450 feet respectively.

The lake which has the highest elevation of any in the world is Green Lake, Colorado. Its surface is 10,252 feet above the level of the sea. In some places it is over 300 feet deep. The greatest depth of the ocean is 37,530 feet.

The largest sheet or pane of glass in the world is set in the front of a building on Vine Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. It was made in Marseilles, France, and measures 185 by 104 inches.

At Allegheny City, Pennsylvania, there was recently rolled a steel spring six inches wide, one-quarter of an inch thick, and 310 feet long. It is the largest coiled spring ever rolled. The order was tendered to all the large European ironworks, but none of them would undertake the task.

Sounding the Sky.

A French astronomer has proposed using some of the biggest guns captured from the Germans as a means of sounding the higher strata of the earth's atmosphere. He would take "Big Bertha," mount it vertically, and shoot from it projectiles carrying apparatus for recording the air pressure and other conditions at great altitudes.

"Big Bertha" fired a shell weighing 484lb., with an initial velocity of over 5,000 feet a second. Such a shell, fired vertically, would travel 258,000 feet into the air, or nearly fifty miles, says "Everyday Science." As our atmosphere is believed to be only forty-five miles in depth, some highly interesting facts might be recorded by the apparatus, provided that the gun could be fired vertically and that the apparatus survives the shock of the shell's return to earth, when it would be falling at the rate of 1,666 feet a second.

The shell would return to earth, although it did penetrate, beyond the limits of the earth's atmosphere. But, given a "Bigger Bertha," with a muzzle velocity of 28,000 feet a second, or five times as great, a shell fired from such a gun would never return. It would become a satellite of the earth, revolving round it like the moon.

Your Best Colour.

The influence of colours on their wearers is sometimes very powerful. In olden days colours were used as symbols and held different mystical meanings, and this idea is recurring to a large extent at the present time, chiefly among women.

"Green, especially at night, gives me an elusive feeling, and, contrary to the usual superstition, generally brings me luck," said a lady the other day.

"Brown," she continued, "I abhor, except in the form of leather coats, brogues and gauntlets, which inspire me with the courage of a sportsman, fit for a fifty-mile fight, or any excitements of the motor-cycle variety. Navy blue suggests a trim, business-like deportment, but it is rather impersonal. Pale blues, pinks, and mauves, I avoid as insipid. In pale yellow and copper, the artistic side of me comes uppermost, while in red I am frankly a flirt."

"And what of black?" I asked eagerly, as she prepared to alight from our chariot, "that colour that is not a colour, the hue which holds such fascination in youth, such refuge in age?" "Black," she replied, "is the token of tragedy, power, and mystery."

LET "DANDERINE" BEAUTIFY HAIR

Girls! Have a mass of long, thick, gleamy hair

Let "Danderine" save your hair and double its beauty. You can have lots of long, thick, strong, lustrous hair. Don't let it stay lifeless, thin, scraggly or fading. Bring back its color, vigor and vitality.

Get a 35-cent bottle of delightful "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter to freshen your scalp; check dandruff and falling hair. Your hair needs this stimulating tonic, then its life, color, brightness and abundance will return—Hurry!

That's Luck.

It has been explained that we need to be prepared for bad luck, but that good fortune does not require to be guarded against.

All the same, it would certainly add to the cheerfulness of life in general if lucky omens were more widely known. How much brighter things look to us if we have reason to hope that something good is coming to us!

Everybody, of course, knows that it is lucky to pick up a bit of iron or coal. So it is to pick up a pin if its head is towards you; if not, let it lie. It is a sign of good fortune to put on some garment inside out, but only if it is done by accident, and the garment is allowed to remain reversed during the day. William the Conqueror put on his mail-shirt back to front on the morning of the Battle of Hastings, and we all know what luck he had on that occasion!

If you find your keys or other steel articles rusting, do not be annoyed about it; it only shows that somebody is putting money by for you.

It is lucky to be followed home by a strange dog. Still better is it if a strange cat comes to stay at the house. Speaking of cats, pessimists, of course, assert that when they tear the furniture with their claws it is a sign of rain; but others hold that she is "scratching luck" to her masters.

Thrilling Sport.

The tobogganing enthusiast will tell you that no man can know what sport really is who has not felt the maddening exhilaration of rushing down the Cresta Course.

The Cresta Course at St. Moritz is, as every tobogganer knows, the longest, finest, and speediest in the world. It is 1,000 yards long, drops 200 feet, is built in the snow, and has iced surface as smooth and polished as a mirror. But what makes it dear to the heart of the tobogganer is that it has nine sharp corners, three of which are nearly right-angled turns, which none but a man of consummate skill and iron nerve can negotiate without risk to life and limb.

Down this steep, zig-zag course, lying flat and face down on thin boards, with steel runners, the cleverest racers from all parts of Europe compete for the championship of the world; flashing down the mountain-side with the speed of an express-train, and skimming round the corners, at every one of which death lies in ambush, with the graceful swerve of a swallow.

Faster and yet faster they fly; near the "Church Leap" the pace reaches fifty miles an hour; swifter and swifter still, down the long, straight run known as the "Shuttlecock" the speed is seventy, eighty, nearly ninety miles an hour, and with a final rush the toboggan runs sheer up a hill-side, and, with its breathless, but jubilant passenger, finally comes to a standstill in the village of Cresta.

Paying on the Nail.

An expression with which everyone is familiar, "paying on the nail," comes from the old method of settling accounts.

In the early days of trade and commerce, merchants on Change paid their debts by counting out their gold on to a copper "nail" or table, in the market-place.

Written receipts are now almost universal, and these nails are no longer used; but two splendid specimens still remain among the most interesting treasures of the ancient port of Bristol.

They are each about four feet high, shaped like a gigantic gun glass. There they stand in the busy street, a lasting monument to the integrity of the old trading and merchant class, who paid on the nail and scorned a receipt.

Then There Was Trouble

That prince of story-tellers, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., being in a reminiscent mood the other day, regaled us with this anecdote of his early reportorial days:

The paper (he said) was shortly going to press, and we were all of us writing away for dear life, when a boy came in and informed the junior reporter that the printers were waiting for his report of a lecture he had attended.

"Go it ready?" asked the news editor, looking up from his desk. "I've finished it all but a short sentence in the middle," was the reply; "and I can't for the life of me make out from my notes what that is."

"Never mind," said the news editor, "just shove in 'great applause,' and let it go at that."

The junior reporter—he was very junior—did so, and the doctored part of the lecture appeared in print as follows:

"Friends, I will detain you but a few moments longer. (Great applause.)"

A Budding Sherlock.

Little Tommy had repeatedly been warned by his nurse as to the awful results of biting his nails, but all to no avail, so, as a last resource, she decided on harsher measures to cure him of the pernicious habit.

"If you persist in biting your nails," she remarked, "you will swell out like an air balloon."

Little Tommy believed, took heed, and didn't bite his nails for two whole days. On the third day Tommy's mother was giving a party—quite a swell affair—and Tommy, on his promise of good behaviour, was allowed to partake of tea with his mother's guests.

As soon as tea was over Tommy edged close up to a very corpulent lady of the party, gazed at her in silence, and said in an awe struck voice:

"I see you bite your nails."

The $50,000 Prize Pilot.

In the R.A.F., Captain Ross Smith, who has "blazed" the air trail to Australia, is often referred to as the world's star pilot.

He enlisted as a private in 1914, and performed some amazing feats in the East during the war.

One occasion he descended behind the Turkish lines and successfully picked up a brother airman who had been compelled to make a forced landing. To him belongs the credit of opening the great battle which resulted in Allenby smashing up the Turkish army.

Starting out at 1.30 in the morning, he destroyed the enemy's signal service at headquarters, and was back in the aerodrome before dawn.

"Hear, Hear!"

The temperance orator was getting excited.

"Friends," he yelled, "I would that all the alcohol in this drink-sodden tale could be swept into the boundless ocean."

This brilliant remark extracted a solitary "Hear, hear" from the gallery. "Ah!" said the lecturer, "I see we have one true thinker in our midst. You are a staunch teetotaler, sir?" The answer he received considerably startled the worthy man. "Garn! Teetotaler be 'anged, I'm a diver."

The Chinese Way.

The inhabitants of the Flower Land it seems, are not immune, any more than the natives of less-favoured countries, from the attentions of certain very active insects; but they are much more ingenious in dealing with them. They have invented a kind of little trap, which they place in their beds and elsewhere!

The main principle of this trap is that it contains a sticky surface, which effectually trammels the feet of the strongest and most active insect that ventures upon it. There are Saints Defeat St. Bon's.

PLAY OFF NECESSARY.
Resulting in a win for the former by 9 goals to 6, the St. Andrew's and the St. Bon's teams clashed at the Prince's Rink last night, when more than a thousand spectators witnessed the game. The game was scrappy all through and the scoring very close, and when the gong sounded the score was 6-6. In the play-off the St. Andrew's team had things to itself, and noticed up three goals and won by that number. The play right through was fast and the contest was thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. J. Tobin was referee, G. Herder and Rob Stick time keepers, and Carl Trapnell penalty time-keeper. During the last period Forsyth, of St. Andrew's became ill and had to retire, being replaced by R. Volsey. The lineup was:

Annual Meeting.

St. George's Coal Fields Limited -- Executive Board Re-elected -- Directors Report Very Encouraging.

The annual meeting of the St. George's Coal Fields, Ltd. was held at the C. C. C. Hall last night, the president, Mr. J. J. St. John in the chair and some three hundred shareholders present. The election of directors for the ensuing term was conducted by Mr. W. A. O'D. Kelly, as chairman, with Mr. E. Berrigan as secretary and resulted in the return of last year's board viz: J. J. St. John, T. J. Freeman, Capt. E. English, sr., J. A. Hiscock and W. Campbell. Before the meeting closed over $1000 of stock was taken up among those present. It was also announced that negotiations as to concessions from the Government had been concluded. The annual report was as follows:—

Report of The St. George's Coal Fields for Year ending December 31st, 1919.

At our annual meeting held on Feb. 3rd last, the report then submitted, contained the following:

"Of the first issue of $25,000.00 then on the market $15,924.00 had been subscribed, leaving a balance of $9,076.00 to be taken up, while prospecting work up to that period had completed 150 feet of tunnelling on the Jukes Seam, which at its outcrop gave 4 feet 9 inches of good clean coal, while with the 150 feet of tunnelling completed, a thickness of 5 feet 4 inches of coal had been reached, and the seam showed a tendency to thicken. The estimated body of coal in sight from the above work was conservatively placed at 4725 tons. It was also estimated that when 250 feet of tunnelling has been completed a body of at least 10,000 tons of coal would be in sight."

The foregoing is given so that you will be better able to make comparisons, and draw your own conclusions from the following account of operations during the year just closed.

Operations.

From January to April, 1919 work was confined on the Jukes Seam, and two tunnels were completed for a distance in all of 320 feet with the following result.

"The north tunnel was completed for a distance of 165 feet, giving at this distance a solid face of coal measuring 5 feet 9 inches in thickness. The south tunnel was driven for a distance of 155 feet giving at this length a solid face of coal measuring 6 feet in thickness. 1000 feet further south on its line of strike, and on the bank of the Barachois River the seam was again cut exposing another 6 foot face of solid coal; thus proving the seam was not only maintaining its thickness but exceeding the anticipations of our report of the previous year.

The Jukes Seam has now been exposed for a distance of 1400 feet along its line of strike, at a depth of 135 feet below its outcrop, giving an available body of coal in sight of 35,980 long tons, while we might add that it is geologically estimated to run right through the property. In fact this seam alone may now be considered a mine in itself.

The Cleary Seam.

Located 1200 feet east of the Jukes has been uncovered for a distance of 150 feet along the line of strike, showing at its outcrop 2 feet 2 inches of good clean coal, while after being sunk upon for a depth of 12 feet the thickness increased to 2 feet 5 inches, with a tendency to thicken. The coal is of the very finest quality.

The Howley Seam.

On the Robinson River, 2 1/2 miles east of the Jukes, has been exposed at its outcrop for a distance of 150 feet, giving a thickness varying from 4 to 11 feet of good clean coal. A tunnel is now being driven upon the lode, some 50 feet of which has been completed, and the intention is to complete it for at least 300 feet, when it is hoped to get a fair estimate as to its average thickness and continuity. So far the coal taken out is proving to be of excellent quality.

The Murray Seam.

On the Barachois River, 2 miles from the outcrop of the Jukes, has been uncovered for a distance of 200 feet along its line of strike showing an average thickness of 5 feet 4 inches of coal. A tunnel has also been started on this seam and some 25 feet completed, showing a considerable improvement in quality. It is also anticipated to complete 300 feet of tunnelling on this Seam if necessary as the Seam is estimated to contain 6 to 7 feet of coal.

The Diamond Seam.

One mile from the Jukes, and 3 miles from the Murray on the Barachois River has also been cut and a tunnel driven for some 40 feet. Mr. Turnbull, M.E., in a geological report made 1910 mentions this Seam as containing one foot of coal at its outcrop, while from the 40 feet of tunnelling completed to date the thickness has increased to 2 feet 6 inches of good coal, and as the walls of this Seam are 6 feet apart it is hoped on completion of the work in this section to prove it a valuable Seam.

New Finds.

Three other seams containing coal have been located as follows:—

(1) About 200 feet north of the Murray Seam an outcrop was located in the bed of the River but owing to the approach of adverse weather which caused the river to rise, prospecting work had to be discontinued.

(2) Midway between the Jukes and Diamond Seams, an outcrop was uncovered on the bank of Barachois River, showing about 5 feet of mixed coal. The more important work in hand on the Murray, Howley and Diamond Seams made further work on this seam out of the question until the coming spring. It is however, felt that this seam should carry a valuable body of coal, as the ground is regular giving no appearance of ever being disturbed.

(3) About 150 feet west of the Jukes Seam another outcrop has been located but when opened up for some 15 to 20 feet was found to contain only 8 to 10 inches of coal. This however, may yet prove to be a valuable seam as the walls obtaining the coal and shale are some four feet apart. Work here has only been temporarily abandoned to follow up the more important seams referred to.

Capitalization.

At the outset of this undertaking you are already aware that only $25,000.00 was asked for and some have expressed the opinion that the amount was insufficient. But we had to remember the history of coal development in this country in the past, which was attended with considerable prejudice and indifference; and in order to beat this down the procedure had to be slow, and special inducement had to be offered in order to awaken an interest sufficient to carry the work through its initial stages.

Happily to-night we are able to inform our many shareholders that they now have a property of considerable commercial value, the full extent of which cannot as yet be fully estimated.

During the year the subscription of the first $25,000.00 issue was completed and a second issue to meet anticipated expenditure was launched to the amount of $50,000.00. Some $5,000.00 of this second issue has already been subscribed by the public, and nobody need now have any antipathy towards subscribing as the commercial value of the property at present is considerably in excess of capitalization.

Extension.

During the year the adjoining property, measuring some six square miles and owned by Messrs. S. J. Foote and W. J. Ellis, came under our notice, and negotiations were entered into with the object of acquiring it, with the result that it was procured for the sum of $10,000.00.

The Howley Seam is already known to extend into this property, having been cut some 1400 feet from our original boundary line and it is known to contain other seams, as well as the extension of seams outcropping on our original holdings. We have no doubt that exceptionally good value has been obtained for the amount expended in its purchase.

The newly acquired territory like the original holdings is covered with a thick growth of virgin forest, all of which the Government has reserved for the operation of the mines.

Estimated Contents of Forest Area.

The total area of the property is now 10 square miles, or 6400 acres, and is estimated to run about 3000 feet to the acre of timber above the 8 inch measure; or in all, 19,200,000 feet board measure, and 95,000 cords of small timber suitable for scantling and pit props.

Surveys.

During the month of October Mr. W. F. Canning was employed to reconnoitre from the property at La-Polle Bay, with a view to obtaining an idea of the country in that section, should a railroad be found necessary to link up with a deep water terminus. He reports the country traversed to present no engineering difficulties, and Little Harbor in La-Polle Bay was selected as the one most suitable for a shipping port, it being open all year round, and containing water deep enough for the largest ships afloat close to its shores. A water power was also located flowing into La-Polle Bay about one mile from Little Harbor, capable of developing four to five thousand horsepower.

This water power has been applied for by the Company.

Government Encouragement.
Negotiations are at present in progress with the Government in the hope of procuring suitable protection and encouragement by way of a bounty on coal for the first 10 years.

Outside Improvement.

During October month on request from the people of Robinson's and vicinity $5000.00 was obtained from the Government and a road some 14 feet wide was cut through from Robinson's Station, under the supervision of the Company. Due to the lateness of the season however when the money came forward, completion of this road could not be made and we now await the advent of spring, when it is hoped one of the finest pieces of road in Newfoundland will be available for traffic.
