Lord Cecil's Dilemma

—OR—
The Picnic

Woodall Forest

CHAPTER XLV.

"Yes, for the story must come out. I see no other prospect. Lord Cecil is playing against his father now; he will have nothing to do with him, and the explosion is certain. I have sent advertisements to all the big dailies for the rightful Lord Cecil and news of the nurse who changed the children. By Jove!" he added, with a start and vigorously slapping his knee. "I never thought of that!"

"Thought of what?"

"A remark that Miss Craythorne made to me just as the train was departing. She has heard of the Stanhope complications—from her mother, possibly, though I had no idea that Lady Craythorne knew anything about the matter; and the nurse who has been looking after you, Charlie, is the woman I am in search of! Miss Craythorne knows it, too!"

He was almost tempted to open this letter; he was burning with anxiety, but he could not bring himself to do it. No, he would wait until after dinner; he would keep his promise to Ada. He understood now what she meant by matters concerning himself.

It seemed to him it was the longest afternoon he had ever known, though Sir Charles never tired of talking of the wonderful events of the past few weeks; never tired of asking questions about Lady Gladys, and fuming with impatience. His proper place was by her side, to hear her troubles; to help Lady Marcia and the earl.

The dinner appeared almost interminable to both young men. They dared not discuss that which was nearest to their hearts, before Lady Hastings and the parson, who had called to congratulate the young baronet upon his marvelous escape from death—and to dine.

At last it was over, and Sir Charles went to bed, feeling very much fatigued. The parson and Lady Hastings retired to the drawing-room to gossip, and in his room, alone, the young baronist broke the seal that held Miss

CHAPTER IV.

Such a wife as Lady Iris would make, would get all things right, she thought. She would have such influences over him that she would remedy the defects of his character as no one else could, and Lady Clyfards sighed as she wondered whether Lady Iris would ever love her son. The time had been when she would not have doubted it. Fulke was so handsome, he had a fine estate and a large income, he was a refined, well-educated gentleman. What could any girl want more? But since she had been Lady Iris her ideas had changed. There was one girl, at least, in the neighborhood, who was not to be won easily; there was one who would require as much wooing as any princess. Would her son, so flattered and admired, have patience to give that homage? That was the question which occupied her mind.

Lady Iris in the meantime thought quite as much of her old friends as they did of her. She had always liked Lady Clyfards better than any of the friends she had known. In her own mind she had felt some curiosity as to what Sir Fulke would be like. She had some vague recollections of having seen him when she was quite a child, and of not liking him very much. She was, on the whole, rather pleased with him. He was pleasant in his manner, good looking more than intelligent, and he had entered keenly and quickly into her ideas. It was true there had been in his manner once or twice something that had at first seemed like vanity or conceit, but she tried to convince herself now that she had been mistaken. A man could not be vain; vanity was assuredly a woman's weakness. She must have misunderstood him. For a vain woman she had the greatest possible contempt, but for a vain man she could have no toleration. She was thoughtful for some time after they had left her.

An old proverb came into her mind when she heard of the next arrival—"It never rains but it pours." A grand carriage with a pair of magnificent horses, the coachman and two footmen in gorgeous liveries suddenly appeared in the drive, and a few moments later a footman entered with a silver salver. Lord Caledon followed him into the room.

"Iris," he said, hurriedly, "you will have an affliction; the Bardon are here in full force—father, mother, daughter, and son. I am sure, my dear child, you will do anything to oblige me. I wish you most particularly to be civil to these people. Remember, although you are unwilling to allow it, money is a power."

"My dear papa," she said, smiling, "you need not give me a lecture on political economy; your wish is sufficient. If you desire that I should be both civil and kind to these good people, I will be so."

The result was that, when the Bardon, in a very flushed and agitated state, entered the room, Lady Iris received them with a smile such as she had seldom given to those whose friendship she desired.

CHAPTER V.

Dauntless as was Richard Bardon, much as he believed in the infinite superiority of wealth, good as were his notions about "self-made men," he was not quite himself when he entered that proud dainty presence. He thought to himself that he could manage men—more or less; his money influenced them all; but women were different. This one, with her quiet, well-bred manner and her refined accent, overawed him. Her dress seemed part of herself; simple and artistic, and did not need much assistance. His eyes were full of expectancy, for he hoped to get a letter from Lady Gladys.

"I suppose that you have forgotten that it is Christmas Eve, Bert?" he exclaimed. "What glorious weather, and here I am cooped up, and all our grand holiday plans swamped! If there isn't a letter from Gladys this morning, I verily believe that I shall Crathorne's letter, and read that which at first frightened him. He tried not to believe it—that it was some terrible mistake. But no—the nurse's confession was before him—and Ada Craythorne pleaded for him to be merciful to the misguided old woman.

There was no sleep for him that night, and his thoughts continually wandered to the stately Lady Stanhope—his mother! A thrill of joy shot through his heart. His mother! He had to search no further for the elucidation of the mystery of his own birth—or for the real heir to the Stanhope title and estates—he was Lord Cecil Stanhope!

He was at the little telegraph office in the village before opening time next morning, and waited in the cold December air without noticing that the wind was keen as the teeth of an Arctic fox. There was a fierce exhilaration in his heart, leaping through his veins, animating every movement, every thought.

At last the office opened, and he hastily wrote two telegrams—one to Miss Ada Craythorne, and one to Lord Cecil Stanhope.

They ran as follows:

"I have read your letter. Do not let the nurse leave your sight. I depend upon you also not to utter a word of what you know to any living soul."

"I can trust her," he thought. "Ay, with my very life."

He then wrote the second telegram: "I have found the man we want. He is a fast friend of yours. I shall not bring him until I hear from you. I am staying with Sir Charles Hastings."

"Poor fellow!" he thought. "It is an awful blow for him, but I honestly believe that misfortune will make a man of him. Now to tell Charlie the latest phrase of the case."

He went back and turned the matter over in his mind. He felt jealous of any eye pursuing the letter that Ada had written to him; after all, there was nothing in it that a stranger might not see, much less Sir Charles, who had hitherto been an almost integral part of his being. Yes, he would give him the letter to read; it would explain everything far better than he could.

The young baronet was down early, and did not need much assistance. His eyes were full of expectancy, for he hoped to get a letter from Lady Gladys.

"I suppose that you have forgotten that it is Christmas Eve, Bert?" he exclaimed. "What glorious weather, and here I am cooped up, and all our grand holiday plans swamped! If there isn't a letter from Gladys this morning, I verily believe that I shall

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. A touch stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in a colorless clear liquid. One drop does it! and in extra thin plaster. The action is the same.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a cathartic or laxative—so cannot grip.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol in some cases. It acts like the natural lubricant and does not irritate the bowels.

Taxation and Expenditure.

(Farm and Ranch Review.)

A southern exchange has some sensible ideas on the subject of taxation, the chief grievance of the average citizen nowadays. It says:—

"What has been done cannot be undone, but we can watch our step in the future. Bond issues, notes, promises to pay, registered warrants, all must be met sooner or later, but we can pay as you go in a sound and safe rule for individual and private business, and it is equal so when applied to government. When our private expenses go too high our incomes are reduced, we readjust our affairs by doing without certain things and usually we find that we get along about as well as ever; just so our county, city, state and national affairs should allow for similar readjustment in times of depression. Separately and apart from the questions of equalization and proper distribution of taxes fundamentally the matter of reduced taxes rests upon our answer to the question, are we willing to do without? If our answer is yes and we so instruct our representatives, it would be but a short time before we would be breathing easier. If our answer is no, then we will have to go on paying and there will be no let up on the tax burden. Are we willing to allow it, money is a power."

"That precisely is the question: 'Are we willing to do without?' We stagger under a fantastic burden of public debt federally, provincially and municipally. But almost anyone can get a resolution passed at a meeting of citizens commanding the government to incur expense to provide some necessary service. We are cheerful voters! There can be no relief until we begin to 'find' ourselves and recognize our responsibility as citizens. Someone should set the fashion of voting down almost every resolution that involves new expenditure, no matter where presented.

HELPING OUT.

To-day I helped a pair of gent's whose sorrows made me sigh; to one I handed twenty cents, and for the other pie. When they departed from my home they smiled at me and said, "May blessings rest upon your dome until your days are sped." The blessings of a pair of bums may have no market price, and yet, when tranquil evening comes, they cut some little ice. For then I view the day that's spent, with retrospective eyes, and having helped a busted gent—the knowledge is a prize! When evening's priceless shadows fall it makes one's bosom bleed, if he, reflecting, can't recall one kind and friendly deed. One day I give a bo a cup of sparkling Adam's ale; the next I soothe a walling pup that has a wounded tail. To those oppressed by deadly fears my cheer-up rede I preach; anon I dry a widow's tears, if haply she's a peach. One cannot turn upon his heel, to view the day's parade, but he will see a chance to deal some little slice of aid. And when the gloaming starts to gloom, it rids your soul of care, to place your hands upon your dome—and paw the blessings there.

Cause and Effect.

The amateur dramatic society was preparing for a performance of "As you like it."

The dress rehearsal took place in a garden, that was overlooked by a building in course of erection. As the amateurs postured and chanted the bard's beautiful lines, bricklayers above them laid bricks, carpenters planed boards, and masons chipped stones.

Towards the end of the play, during a silent pause in the rehearsal, a voice from the building operation was heard to say gravelly:—

"I prither, malapert, pass me yonder trowel."

Household Notes.

Melons grapes and tangerines make a delicious salad. Garnish with balls of cream cheese and finely chopped nuts. Serve with French dressing.

Buttons on children's undergarments may be made more durable by stitching around each one about a dozen times on the machine before garment is worn.

Instead of nuts, use canned pineapple fat into small pieces in fudge. Drain pineapple and add to fudge as soon as it begins to boil. Allow to boil longer than usual.

To remove yellow stains from ivory toilet articles, make a paste of whitening mixed with ammonia. This is not always successful, and should be applied carefully.

White marks caused by dampness may be removed from wood by sprinkling a few drops of ammonia on a cloth, rubbing spots with this, and then polishing with oil.

Cut left-over cake into small pieces and place in a mold with chopped cherries, raisins and currants. Pour over them a custard, bake, and serve with currant sauce.

How the "Yankee" Gripped Los Angeles.

MOST BRILLIANT COMEDY.
 Grace Kingsley, the Los Angeles Times reviewer, wrote:
 "Hurrah for Mark Twain and for 'A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court'! Then throw in a couple of hurrahs for Emmett Flynn, director, and Harry Myers, star. For hark ye, the most brilliant comedy drama in the history of picturdom is here, and 'A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court' it is."
 "The picture's on view at Miller's, and the big audiences are fairly pulling the house down."

"Make 'em laugh, make 'em cry, make 'em thrill," D. W. Griffith said once, and the Yankee does all three superlatively. Its comedy has Charlie Chaplin's brilliant aliveness and great common human touch; it has lightning flashes of William DeMille's fine whimsy; it has moments as great as some of Griffith's own; it has touches of "Miracle Man," spiritual vision; and yet it is much more, for it is all Mark Twain.
 "In this film Twain again lives, and, though he has gone before, has triumphed as the greatest picture story writer the world has seen. The adaptor's hand seems fairly inspired. Never even at a premiere of a Charlie Chaplin picture have I seen a house more rocked with laughter than at 'The Yankee.'"
 "In this film Twain again lives, he has been chosen with inspiration. Harry Meyers is the slinky, capable, resourceful, yet chivalrous Yankee to perfection. No more appealing and soul-satisfying Sandy could have been found than Pauline Starke. William V. Mong does a superlative bit of character work as Merlin. George Siegmann is even more cleverly villainous than usual as Sagramore. Charles Gordon is picture perfect, and ideal as Clarence the page. Charles Clary is impressive as King Arthur. Rosemary Theby is the hard-hearted but alluring queen to the life and the minor parts are equally well done."
 The above is a description of the wonderful picture showing at the Majestic to-night.

Desert Flying.

The Royal Air Force has recently completed a chain of air-stations across the Syrian Desert, to enable an air route between Cairo and Bagdad to be inaugurated.
 The first Air Force party to be sent out across the desert was a car convoy. These were charged with the duty of selecting suitable landing grounds, and, more important still, of building a definite track across.
 The track was essential, because it must be remembered that should an airplane make a forced landing it may be most difficult to locate it. Even if the missing machine was fitted with wireless, it would be difficult for the stranded aviator to describe their position in the middle of a featureless desert. So all airplanes will follow the ground track.
 The usual height at which Service machines travel to-day may be given as two or three thousand feet, and at this height the Cairo-Bagdad planes will fly in order that they may keep the track in view.
 Their chief dangers will be from the dust storms that rage from time to time in a desert. These sand storms are known to send sand to the height of ten thousand feet or more, and the aeroplanes used, therefore, will have to be able to rise rapidly to avoid a sand storm, for to fly in a dust cloud would be an unpleasant if not a fatal experience.
 At present only Air Service machines are using the new air way, but undoubtedly in the future commercial machines will follow the red-white-and-blue circle of the Air Force, and will considerably shorten the time required to convey passengers and mails to the East.

Keep a Word Book.

In papers and magazines, as well as in the course of conversation, we often come across words of whose meanings we are not quite sure, or which we don't know at all.
 Do you look such words up in a dictionary? Or do you bother no further, simply making what sense you can from the rest of the sentence? It's always worth while learning something fresh, however trivial it may seem at the time. And a good notion is to keep a word-book—an ordinary penny note-book will do quite well.
 First of all, rule a margin down one side of the page, leaving it about an inch wide. When you come across an unfamiliar word, write it down in the margin; then, as soon as possible, look up the meaning in a dictionary or encyclopaedia, and write it opposite the word in your book. The mere fact of writing it down will help you to remember it.
 There is nothing to be ashamed of in keeping a book of this kind; many famous men do it, and it will help you wonderfully in writing or conversation. No one can expect to know everything, but it is a pity to let an opportunity pass of learning something fresh.

In a Haunted Valley.

Bones of mastodons that once roamed Northern Canada have been found by Mr. Frank Perry, a mining engineer, of Vancouver, Mr. Perry's discovery was made in a valley in the far north of British Columbia, close to the Yukon border, which, it is believed, was never before visited by a white man. Indians will not travel through the valley. They believe it to be haunted by the giant animals whose bones they have seen. The bones—hip bones and sections of the spine—which are of great size, are not fossilized, but are in a state of excellent preservation. Mr. Perry believes that by excavation specimens of much historic value could be unearthed. Footprints in the sandstone and shale of some other pre-historic monolith were also found by Mr. Perry. These are clearly defined marks, showing that the maker of the tracks was a three-toed animal.

MONDAY, September 11, 1922.

What of the Humber.

Much as our esteemed contemporary would have its readers believe otherwise, we are firmly convinced of the necessity for the opening up of new industries, and for this reason are anxious to know how far the negotiations with the Humber Proposition have been carried.

More and more it is dawning upon us that the fishery can not support the number of people who during past years have been accustomed to drawing their living from it.

What then of the Humber, which, according to reports, will give work to many thousands of men? It is unfair to the country that it should be left in ignorance of the details of a scheme which may mean either its ultimate prosperity or ruin.

A Question of Tariff.

Realizing as we all must that at the next general election the party which is to be successful will have to adopt as its dominant policies, economy and low tariff, it is difficult to understand the motive which impelled the Prime Minister to give to the Tariff Commission which was appointed a few months ago the instructions that he is reported to have done.

They were, if rumour speaks truly, that the tariff had to be so arranged that the revenue for the next fiscal year would exceed that of the past two years. This naturally necessitates a higher rate of customs duties than those already existing, and they are in themselves an almost intolerable burden upon the entire public.

It is possible that the Government fails to realize that an increase in customs duties will be immediately followed by decreased importations and trade stagnation? Their mad, reckless squandering has already embarrassed the commerce of the country and has so augmented the national debt that the interest on it now exceeds half the revenue collected from the customs.

Headless as the present administration has been of warnings, they would indeed be well advised to think of the consequences which will assuredly ensue if they increase the tariff. They would do well to remember that it was the last straw which broke the camel's back.

West Coast Service.

The Government have at last realized how shortsighted and harmful was their policy of taking the Portia off the Western coastal route, and the return of the ship to the service will be hailed with delight by the merchants of St. John's and the West Coast.

"Cartwright" Gordon.

The Rev. Henry Gordon preached Sunday morning at the Church of St. Thomas, and his short address was a striking example of how easily a gifted and sympathetic speaker may in a few moments present to a congregation a sermon replete with interest as well as fervour.

Church Colleges.

This morning the Church of England College directors met at Bishop Field College at 9.15 to officially be present at the opening of the College for the next year's work and afterwards attended the opening of Bishop Spencer College. The staff of Bishop Spencer College will be as follows:—Principal, Miss Violet Cherrington, who comes from Canada's finest Ladies' College—Haverhill, at Toronto.

Bronze Statue for Park.

UNVEILING CEREMONY ON WEDNESDAY.

On Wednesday next at 3.15 p.m. the "Bomber," a piece of bronze statuary executed by the eminent sculptor, Capt. Basil Gatto, to the order of Sir Edgar Bowring, is being unveiled by his Excellency the Administrator, Sir W. H. Horwood, Kt. Sir Edgar Bowring then presents the monument to the city of St. John's, the acceptance of same being made by Hon. Tasker Cook, Mayor. Representatives from the G.W.V.A. and Regiment as well as other citizens will deliver short addresses. The G.L.B. Band will be present and will render the Hymn, "Oh! God, our help in ages past." An invitation has been extended to all ex-service men to be present at this function.

Motor Cars Collide.

Yesterday afternoon two motor cars were badly damaged in a collision at the junction of Spruce Street and Merrymeeting Road, and a young lady occupant of one of the machines received injuries to her head which necessitated medical attendance. The cars, a Studebaker, owned by Mr. Cyril Carter, driven by Mr. W. McElvray, and a Chandler, owned by Mr. Joseph Sellars and driven by his son, Robert Sellars, crashed, as the latter turned out from Spruce Street. It was impossible to avoid a collision, and the Chandler struck the Studebaker, a crashing blow in the centre of the bonnet, inflicting considerable damage to the chassis and engine, and breaking the right head light. The Chandler was also damaged to a considerable extent. Miss Jean Sellars, daughter of the owner, was badly cut about the head and had to be taken to Parson's drug store where her injuries were attended to by Doctors Burden and Grievie.

New Rink for St. Bon's.

An up-to-date rink for the use of the pupils and ex-pupils of St. Bonaventure's College is now in course of construction on the Campus. The rink, which will be 145 feet long and 80 feet wide will be built on specially prepared plans, and will be of great benefit to the pupils. It will be ready in about a couple of months and is hoped to have it formally opened as soon as the frost makes its appearance. The Brothers are to be congratulated on this latest move which will add new interest to our winter sports, and will go a long way in encouraging winter athletes among the younger generation.

A Scandal.

A day or two ago this paper stated that the Montreal Police Authorities were in possession of information that led them to believe some Newfoundlanders were connected with a certain set who were carrying on an opium traffic, and according to developments which have taken place during the last few days in St. John's, it can be readily seen that many people are interested in the dear little flower, which has been so much sought after and appreciated by an increasing number each day, as since Wednesday last the number of people seen going about the streets with such a contented look, have caused a great deal of suspicion that these people had purchased some flowers not Opium Poppies, but Beautiful Asters from the Valley Nurseries, Telephone 1513, thus clearly showing the cause of their delight.

Shipments by Steamer.

It is expected that the procedure of sending fish to market by steamer, which has been so much sought after and appreciated by an increasing number each day, as since Wednesday last the number of people seen going about the streets with such a contented look, have caused a great deal of suspicion that these people had purchased some flowers not Opium Poppies, but Beautiful Asters from the Valley Nurseries, Telephone 1513, thus clearly showing the cause of their delight.

Though your chair to-day is vacant In the home you loved so well; And our hearts, how they are aching Only those who fret can tell. But our dear and loving Saviour Who for us did suffer pain, He will help us bear our sorrow Till we meet in heaven again.—Inserted by his daughter Sarah.

Off Long Pond.

The citizens of St. John's who frequent Long Pond are reminded that the vandals at their congenial work of spoiling the beauty of this pond, are necessary to keep constantly from them away like a herd of wild animals, and to prevent them from destroying property, it is necessary to understand why they are trying to ruin this particular place. First an unsightly concrete dam was built across the pond. Next a concrete dam was erected there without "leave or license" and without the necessary approval of the Department of Agriculture. This however was fortunately removed by an accident. The second dam, which has since been removed, was an accumulation of stones and rubble on the south side of the pond, which was carted there during the past two seasons by the Department of Agriculture. The person who deposited this rubbish was not aware that two caution signs were erected there in recent months by the Department of Agriculture and their action was a brazen defiance of the law. During the present summer season visitors have frequented Long Pond in large numbers. The amount of rubbish which has accumulated there since the arrangements for the picnic have been made, while bathing has been widely advertised upon the road, is a disgrace. And it is for the sake of the people that I make this appeal to the authorities to take steps to remove the law by ordering the removal of this rubbish and by also taking the caution boards as a warning to possible future offenders. This material could be used for the road which is being repaired near Smithville. It would also have a deterrent effect on others who are ignorant of the fact that the public are the owners of Long Pond and that the law around it will not tolerate such a violation. The cutting of ice in winter are reminded that the trees which are destroyed are the property of the public and should not be cut down.

Yours truly,
W. H. WATCHMAN,
St. John's, Sept. 6th, 1922.

The Davis Cup.

AMERICA RETAINS TROPHY. Effort to take the Davis International Tennis Cup to Australia failed on the turf of the West Side Club. L. Patterson, ace of the American challengers, met and lost a three-set match to Wm. M. Johnston of San Francisco 6-2, 6-3, and the cup was America's for the year at least. The result of the doubles match in which Pat O'Hara Wood, and Gerald Thomson defeated Wm. T. Tilden, 2, 6-3, 6-0, 6-0, 6-3. The hopes of the Australians were dashed when the ground.

Major Cotton Here.

PLANE SLIGHTLY DAMAGED. Major F. Sidney Cotton arrived in town by to-day's express from Botwood and will remain here for a few days. Major Cotton flew from Hawke Bay to Lomond Saturday morning, the distance of over 100 miles being covered in ninety minutes. The "plane" saw some wonderfully picturesque waterfalls, the beauty of which were considerably enhanced when seen from above. At Lomond, a quantity of pit props was bought. These pit props will be used to make up the full complement of the next load to be sent to England on S.S. Penare as the recent strike prevented sufficient timber from being cut at Hawke Bay. There are now 75 men cutting at that place and more will arrive shortly. Lomond was left at 11:30 a.m. Saturday. Major Hemming piloting the machine. In landing at Botwood, the plane met with a slight accident and will be laid up for about a month. Three new machines are now at Botwood. One is a Martinside, fitted with wireless telephone and all machines have the latest post-war instruments, including electrical apparatus for use in flying through fog and clouds.

Afraid of Wife.

FEMALE WARRIOR FIGHTS HUSBAND. Weeping bitterly, a woman advanced to the Bar of the Police Court this morning to answer a charge of being drunk and disorderly and using obscene language. Constable Churchill said he found accused in a West End soup shop in which there were ten other people under the influence of liquor. He sent the woman home but found her later near the West End Fire Hall with a black eye. She had torn off her hat and coat and was preparing to fight her husband, who was apparently frightened and wished to get away from her. Accused pleaded for another chance and was discharged with a warning to keep the peace in future or she would be sent down without the option of a fine.

Obituary.

MRS. J. MAHON. With sincere regret we record to-day the death of Mrs. James Mahon, which took place yesterday at her home, Adelaide Road. Mrs. Mahon, who was formerly Miss Lillian Walsh, daughter of Mrs. J. Walsh of Barnes Road, and the late Mr. J. Walsh, was just 22 years of age and her passing is indeed a sad one, especially to her husband, Mr. James Mahon, foreman tinmith at J. Clouston's, Duckworth St., and her two little children, Kitty, aged 2 years and Allan aged 9 months, and also her mother and sisters, Mary and Kitty. Though suffering from a lingering illness, Lily, as she was favorably called, bore her suffering with the greatest of resignation to God's will and was never heard to murmur. Having entered the new home a few months ago, Mrs. Mahon's friends were looking forward to the day when she would be enjoying her neat little cottage, but as God willed otherwise, we look up to Him and say, Thy will be done. We offer our sincere sympathy to the grief stricken family.—P.J.S.

A Soldier's Battle.

The battle of Malplaquet, fought on September 11, 1709, was a contest of desperate attack and stubborn defence, for the French fought with great courage as well as with an obstinacy that at one time must have seemed almost indomitable. Once the actual battle had been joined, there was little room for tactical skill or for sudden inspirations of military genius. It was "a soldiers' battle" hand-to-hand fighting on the great scale. Certainly the commanders on both sides did not spare themselves. Marshal Villars, the French leader, was wounded severely in the opening stage, but refused to be carried from the field and had a chair brought him, so that he might continue to direct the movements of his men. But he was not able to carry out his purpose. He fainted from loss of blood and was borne insensible from the field. On the side of the Allies, Prince Eugene met with a mishap somewhat similar. A bullet wounded him in the head, just behind the ear, but he put aside the urgent pleas of his officers that he should retire if but for a few minutes, and have his injuries looked to, declaring resolutely that there would be time to think of all that if he survived until the end of the battle, and that if the wound were mortal it would be useless to waste time over it. Marlborough himself was in very poor health on the day, and a report even became current among the Allies and the enemy that the great commander had found his death on the field. But, although his time was not yet, the battle of Malplaquet, which cost the Allies 20,000 men, or twice the loss of the strongly-posted French, was destined to be the great Duke's last great victory.

Pays Taxes on the Dot.

J. Hooper Martin, tax collector for the town of Marblehead, undoubtedly holds the Massachusetts record for efficiency. In the eight years in which he had held that office, every cent of the taxes due the town has been collected. Every cent of poll tax is collected each year, and never has it been necessary to employ the services of a constable or a sheriff. Each year, when the books are closed and the receipts all in, the town treasurer gives to Mr. Martin his annual receipt for all tax moneys collected. That receipt always totals with the amount of the warrant, say for the specified abatement, nothing thereat. Moreover, in the eight years, Collector Martin has found it necessary to sell only five parcels of property. Moreover—again—and this fact proves that Diogenes overlooked Marblehead completely in his search for an honest man—men in Marblehead actually pay their poll taxes even before the tax bills are sent out. Tax bills in that town are not sent until early in September, yet Mr. Martin is already in receipt of money from some of these fore-handled people of old American stock, who live in the town. Had Diogenes found that town long ago, he could have abandoned his lantern and his search and started selling oil stock or automobiles, or anything else where the lantern would not be necessary.

Mr. Martin, modest as a true New Englander, gives all the credit to Marblehead. It is the people themselves, not the efforts of the tax collector, that are responsible for the record of the town. It is because they are inherently honest, because they want to pay their bills, because they believe that it is just and right that they should, that they keep the pages of the town blotter so clean, year after year.

STAFFORD'S LINIMENT DISTRICT.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

WHAT'S A PARTY FOR?

Did you ever go to a party at which the cats were perfect, and the house in a c u late, and the guests ready to have a good time, and the whole thing a complete frost because the hostess had worked herself to death and was so nervous and tired that she couldn't possibly make the party go? I have.

And I have always come home promising myself I never would do it (not that I never have).

To Show Off.

What's a party for? To show what a good housekeeper you are and to prove that you have embroidered towels and an expensive table cloth and nice silver and know how to set a table with assorted flatware, or, in it to get congenial people together and give them a good time?

I hold it has the second purpose and that the hostess who keeps that kind of mind will make her home the ideal of place of which the crowd say: "Oh, we always have a good time when we go to Jane's."

When the hostess' chief ideal is to impress people with her possessions and her capabilities, she never succeeds in giving a really successful party.

Of course we want good eats and we appreciate them when they are better than good.

The Wet Blanket Hostess.

And, of course, we expect the house to wear its best dress just as we expect the hostess to wear her own dress up frock instead of her morning gown. And when we get there we enjoy festive touches like flowers in the rooms and table decorations, because that makes it a glad occasion and stimulates us like lights and music. But nobody except the hostess really cares if she didn't get time to wash the dining room windows or do up the living room curtains. Whereas everybody cares if she insisted on making time and tired herself all out and is a wet blanket on her own party.

For the cats and the dressed up house are just the raw ingredients of the party. A hostess must know how to mix these with congenial people and hospitality and a dash of the Good Time spirit before she can make her parties a new success.

Our Wild Fruits.

The subject of the value of our wild berries naturally comes up for consideration at this season of the year. The wild berries have been plentiful this year, especially whortia and partridge berries, but the fact that sugar costs twelve cents a pound wholesale is a big obstacle to any extensive preparation of home made jams. If the price of sugar were even eight cents a pound, as it was a few years ago, the local manufacture of jams for the use of our households would be carried on to such an extent that berry picking would become a considerable industry. As it is to-day, the ordinary housekeeper decides that sugar is too dear to use to put up jams for the winter. So most of the berries are left to rot on the bushes.

The local jam factory will not buy partridge berries for jams, because these jams are not so saleable as imported fruit pulps; strawberries and raspberries are not bought by the company to any extent because those who sell the fruits look for too high a price. Gooseberries are scarce and are grown only in a few places. Plums and damsons are the chief local fruit that the jam factory here handles, and it is found impossible to get very much, though the factory agents search the whole country. This leaves us to fall back on what is our principal jamming berry—whortia.

If sugar was reduced in price for the jamming season only, a great impetus would be given to this industry, and it would not be necessary to import any foreign jams as whortia are found plentiful all over the country and make both excellent jam and Jelly. What householders now want is cheap sugar.—Trade Review.

Gold Ribbed Lad.

SPECIALLY PROTECTED BY POLICE.

A remarkable story of a young man with a metal plate in his skull and with artificial ribs and other bones is told in a message from Breslau published in Berlin. It appears that the young man, who was a locksmith's apprentice, fell from the roof of a house. He was taken to hospital, where the doctors found that his skull was fractured and that all his ribs but one were broken.

The youth was in hospital for 4 1/2 years, and finally the surgeons undertook to repair or replace his shattered ribs. A metal plate was inserted in his skull and the fractured bones were replaced by ribs of gold and platinum. Two and a half years later the young man was able to leave hospital. In view of the present value of gold and platinum, it is evident that he is carrying about considerable wealth, and it is stated that he is given special protection against criminals.—Daily Mail, July 29.

Full of Holes.

It was first shown by Thomson that matter is neither continuous nor homogeneous. He showed by an experiment that hydrogen can be passed into a vacuum bulb through an incandescent platinum window. In a similar way sodium passes through glass, and this is a useful bit of knowledge in the manufacture of vacuum tubes, because sodium can be passed into the tube to absorb the residual oxygen. Bellini, the Italian physicist, has shown that hydrogen can pass through cold iron. Matter may therefore be generally regarded as full of holes.
