LORD WHARTON'S NIECE
—AND—
THE HEIR TO REGNA COURT.

CHAPTER VI.

He reddened, and his small eyes were cast down, and then raised to her face, with a slinking kind of inquiry. Had she witnessed the scene between him and Gerald Wayne? But her face was like that of the Sphinx, and as she rode off Mr. Mordaunt glared at his mustache and swore again.

"Curse her, she speaks to me as if I were a dog myself!" he said. "She hates me, worse than hates me, looks down at me as if I were the dirt under her feet! The gov-nor must have been mad last night when he talked as he did—stark, staring mad. Yet he said he could help me. What did he mean? Oh, he must have been mad! He ought to have seen her treatment of me this morning!"

And he walked on, gawping at his hip and cutting viciously at the wild flowers beside his path.

At the turn of the road from which another leads down to Regna, she paused for a moment or two to look at the exquisite view. Here the cleft in the rock in which the village lies opens out like a funnel, and a triangular piece of the sea is visible. It glowed like a sapphire this morning, the fishing boats dancing on an ocean of jewels.

"If I were an artist like Mr. Wayne, I should like to paint that," said Claire to herself.

As she was about to ride on, the slim figure of a girl came out from a meadow gateway, and stood with her hands shading her eyes looking up the road down which Claire had ridden, and up which Mr. Mordaunt had gone. It was Lucy Hawker, and Claire, who knew and liked the girl, called to her softly.

Lucy had not seen Claire, and as she heard her name, she started with a vivid blush, and seemed about to shrink back into the meadow again, then she stopped, with her hand pressed against her bosom, and her breath coming fast.

Claire rode up beside her.

"Good-morning, Lucy," she said. "How startled you look! Did I frighten you?"

"Oh, no, miss," said Lucy, dropping her head. "That is—yes; you did startle me a little. I thought it was somebody else."

Claire smiled and looked at her with friendly admiration. In her pretty, print frock and cotton sunbonnet, she looked so demure and good.

"You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can do for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good. Four 2½ ounce bottles of Pinax is a 10-cent bottle. It's filled up with plain grape jelly sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup. Instead of sugar syrup, if desired. When you make it once—a family supply—but using no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup."

Home made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Cures about $2.

And as a cough medicine, there is nothing better to be had at any price. It cures right to the spot and 'saves' your throat. It promptly breaks the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air-passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soothes your rough sore throat. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and sore-throat.

Pinax is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

real. It is like a beautiful picture. I haven't seen half of it yet."

"We will make a tour of inspection after lunch," said Claire.

Mrs. Lexton looked at her admiringly.

"And I have not quite persuaded myself that you are real, Claire," she said. "How well you look! Did you have a nice ride?"

"Yes," said Claire, rather absently. She was asking herself whether she should tell Mrs. Lexton about her meeting with Gerald Wayne; then, ashamed of her hesitation, she said, quickly:

"I have had quite an adventure this morning. I went up to the chapel on the hill and met Mr. Wayne, the gentleman who found my spray last night. He is an architect," she smiled, "and ever so many other things, and he is sketching the chapel."

"Oh," said Mrs. Lexton, with placid interest. "Is he a clever young man?"

"Yes, I think so," said Claire, with an indifference which she felt was assumed. "I only saw a part of a sketch which he had made. Shall we go for a drive this afternoon, or would you like to wander about the grounds, Mary?"

Mrs. Lexton said that she would rather see something more of the house.

"I feel that I want to know it as soon as possible," she said.

Claire laughed.

"Your enthusiasm is quite catching, Mary," she said, "although I have been here so many years, there are some parts of the house that I have not been into. A portion was always kept closed during Lord Wharton's life, and since his death," her voice dropped, "I have felt no desire to penetrate into it. The inhabited part is quite huge enough for one person, and I am glad you have come, Mary, to share it with me. Wait till I have changed my habit and we will start while your enthusiasm is still hot."

She exchanged her habit for a dress of plain, white merino, whose black sash made it a significant mourning, and they went into the grounds and toward the wing which Gerald Wayne had spoken of on the preceding night. Here the walls were closely covered by ivy, which had partly overgrown

What's happening in your mouth?

Nothing goes on in your mouth that your Pro-phy-lactic Tooth Brush doesn't know about. The inquisitive, saw-tooth-pointed bristle tufts dig into every nook and cranny. Even the hard-to-get-at backs of back teeth are scrubbed clean by the large end tuft.

The Pro-phy-lactic is curious about the germ that makes teeth decay. It hunts him up and chases him out. That is what prevents decay and gives your teeth that look of beauty that comes with white, strong, and healthy teeth.

soms of the windows. With its arched doorway and diamond panes, the wing looked very ancient, and somewhat weird.

"How exquisite!" exclaimed Mrs. Lexton. "And this part is unoccupied."

"Yes and has been for years. I think the rooms have been left undisturbed since the time of Lord Wharton's grandfather. The village folk say that it is haunted, and that figures of the usual vagueness and whiteness are seen to pass the windows. I believe that a murder was once committed in one of the rooms."

"How delightful!" said Mrs. Lexton, with a shudder. "We can get in, I suppose?"

"I have brought some old keys with me," said Claire, "and I am hoping that one will fit. Yes, this is the one. How stiff the lock is!"

The key turned after some pressure, and the door creaked back on its hinges. They entered a small passage, with an old worm-eaten stair at the further end. Dust lay thick everywhere, and to Mrs. Lexton's consternation, a mouse, as much startled as she was, scampered across the oak floor. They opened the doors leading to the ground-floor rooms, and found themselves in spacious apartments, furnished in old world style, and with the dust as thick as in the hall. Claire looked round her curiously, and Mrs. Lexton held her breath.

"I can quite understand the village people's belief," she said, "the place feels haunted. What magnificent furniture! Claire, it is a sin to leave it here, neglected and going to ruin."

"Let us go upstairs," said Claire.

They went to the upper floor. It was as fully furnished as the rooms below. One was a bedroom, with the hangings to the bed in rents, torn by the hand of time. A satin coverlet lay across a chair, as if it had been thrown there the night previous.

"The murder may have been committed in that bed!" said Mrs. Lexton, in an awe-stricken voice. "Let us come away!"

They went into the opposite room, and Mrs. Lexton uttered an exclamation of surprise.

"Why, this has been used lately!" she said.

Queen Fish!

SOME HAVE VOICES. OTHERS CAN GIVE ELECTRIC SHOCKS.

Fish have voices! Quite a number are capable of producing loud sounds. The catfish grows like a dog. A type of sunfish is able to emit sounds similar to those produced by the grinding of teeth, while other fish can produce bell-like sounds when swimming near the surface. Still other fish give a bellowing or purring, or whistling.

Mr. E. G. Boulenger, in his interesting book, "Queen Fish," says, too, that some fish, such as the electric ray, are capable of giving anyone who touches them a very severe electric shock.

The author tells the story of a fisherman who, having produced a comparatively small living specimen, placed it in a tub of water on the seafloor, and displayed a notice informing the public that it was the heaviest fish in the world.

In order to prove the truth of his assertion he invited anyone to try to lift it, a fee of sixpence being charged for each attempt, and half-a-crown returned to the successful competitor.

It was not until the fish was thoroughly exhausted, with giving shocks that the first half-crown was awarded.

Sea-Hedgehogs are quiet fish covered with spines. Normally these spines lie flat against the body, but if the fish is attacked it takes in quantities of air and water until it becomes quite spherical in shape. This makes all the spines stick straight out like those of a hedgehog.

Another of the strange inhabitants of the ocean is the lung-fish. While in the water it breathes through its gills like any other fish, but in addition it has an air-bladder which can be used as a lung if necessity arises.

Several types of lung-fish can remain out of water for months on end. They live in swamps, and as the water dries up in the dry season, bury themselves, leaving only an air hole.

One such fish was dug up in a block of the clay in which it was buried, and the whole sent to London.

At the Zoo near from its home, carefully liberated from its home, it commenced at once to swim about in the water, and make use of its gills, which had been inactive for several months.

THE REAL VALUE OF LOCARNO

The real value of Locarno is not to be found in the fact that in future years the Treaty may prevent an outbreak of war, though that is ostensibly its raison d'être," says Lloyd Bank Monthly.

"The real value is to be found in its effects on the minds of men and nations to-day.

"The world has been suffering from an absence of mutual faith and confidence, and it is precisely the faith and confidence that the Treaty has already inspired which have already contributed, and will continue to contribute, enormous help to the laborious task of reconstruction.

"There already seems to be a better tone in evidence throughout Europe, with perhaps one notable exception, which may possibly prove the foundation of complete recovery, and ultimately of prosperity.

"In other words it is in the spirit of Locarno rather than in the Treaty itself that the importance lies, and it should prove possible for such a spirit to be manifested in the realms of industry here at home, and brought to bear upon the problems now facing us that currently require solution, our difficulties would speedily vanish, there would be ushered in the dawn of the brighter day that our men of all parties, and indeed all men of goodwill, are earnestly endeavoring to secure.

"The real value is to be found in its effects on the minds of men and nations to-day.

"The world has been suffering from an absence of mutual faith and confidence, and it is precisely the faith and confidence that the Treaty has already inspired which have already contributed, and will continue to contribute, enormous help to the laborious task of reconstruction.

"There already seems to be a better tone in evidence throughout Europe, with perhaps one notable exception, which may possibly prove the foundation of complete recovery, and ultimately of prosperity.

"In other words it is in the spirit of Locarno rather than in the Treaty itself that the importance lies, and it should prove possible for such a spirit to be manifested in the realms of industry here at home, and brought to bear upon the problems now facing us that currently require solution, our difficulties would speedily vanish, there would be ushered in the dawn of the brighter day that our men of all parties, and indeed all men of goodwill, are earnestly endeavoring to secure.

Blame England for League's Decision.

Strike Troops in Cape Breton to Cost N.S. $134,084—Proposal Made by Industrialists to Relieve Financial Crisis in France -- U. S. Republican Leader Angered by Cost of Crude Rubber.

TURKISH HATE.
ANGORA, Turkey, Dec. 18.—Turkish press, without exception in condemning the action of the League of Nations Council in the Mosul case, has been unanimous in its blame of the League. They do not blame the League as much as England, which, it is declared, influenced the League. "It was not the work of the League but English Imperialism," it is declared, "which is the cause of the Mosul case."

SCOTLAND'S BILL FOR STRIKE TROOPS.
HALIFAX, Dec. 18.—The sum of $134,084.65 is being asked by the Government of Nova Scotia to pay to the Department of National Defence at Ottawa as a result of the sending of troops to Cape Breton during the disturbances last June.

UNSTABLE PERISISTENT.
BELFAST, Dec. 18.—At the headquarters of the striking constabulary it was declared that the men would stand pat until the ultimatum that all who have returned to duty by 10 a.m. Saturday will be dismissed without pay benefits.

ON A HEALTH CRUISE.
LONDON, Dec. 12.—The British cruiser Vindictive, has been ordered away on foreign service, in response to the Far East. The Vindictive is the first vessel on which Communistic activity is reported among the sailors. A member of the crew is reported to have described the Vindictive as one of the Bolshevik ships of the Navy.

PROPOSED SCHEME OF RELIEVING FINANCIAL SITUATION.
PARIS, Dec. 18.—A loan of ten billion francs, to be raised in France and abroad, the interest on amortization of which would be guaranteed by a ten per cent. levy on the turnover of all the great French industries, is proposed by the committee of Lillo, Roubaix and Arras as a solution of the financial situation.

GERMANY'S UNEMPLOYED.
BERLIN, Dec. 18.—Germany has 65,000 unemployed registered public relief.

LETHBRIDGE, Dec. 18.—Throughout Alberta farmers have started next year's ploughing under a brilliant sun, with the thermometer at above. Some late crops, caught by September's storms, have been harvested and threshed within the past week. One farmer ploughed ninety acres.

QUEEN MOTHER OF ITALY ILL.
BORDIGHERA, Italy, Dec. 18.—The Queen Mother, Margherita, who is suffering from pleuro-pneumonia, continued to improve to-day.

RUSSIA DENIES TURKS SEEKING HER AID.
MOSCOW, Dec. 18.—Denial was made to-day of the insinuation contained in recent reports from Ankara that the mission to Moscow of Sabri Bey, Turkish Minister of Agriculture, was to negotiate Russian support in the case of war developing over Mosul.

COMMISSION BACK AT HALIFAX.
HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 18.—The Royal Commission investigating the Nova Scotia coal industry will resume its public hearing here to-morrow morning.

CANADA'S TRADE BALANCE INCREASES.
OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—Canada's favorable balance of trade increased one hundred million within the last twelve months.

U.S. IRRITATED BY RUBBER CONTROL.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Charging manipulation of crude rubber prices by the British Colonial Government, Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican leader, today introduced a resolution asking for an investigation by the House Committee of the United States Congress.

Public Information.

We have been asked to mention that a large shipment of Pyrex Glassware has just been received by S. RICHARD STEELE, "The Shop with the Cup and Saucer Sign," opposite Court House. Each piece makes a useful gift and one that Mother or Sister is sure to appreciate.—417, 21, 25

Fads and Fashions.

So many new evening dresses are absolutely straight. Color is smarter than white at the southern resorts. Some of the smartest gloves do not conceal the wrist. Very few shades of brown will blend with white hair. Many small felt hats have feather fancies on the right side. The winter wardrobe should contain a black velvet gown. Huge bows of velvet adorn the prettiest evening dresses. Little girls' evening dresses are made with frill upon frill.

Municipal Council

WEEKLY MEETING.
The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held Thursday afternoon. Mayor Cook Presided and Councillors Outerbridge, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present. The following matters received the attention of the Board.

A communication was received from Mr. J. W. Morris, Manager of the Newfoundland Light & Power Company, in which he stated the new Street Railway service is practically completed and asked that the Council give consideration to the passing of regulation whereby the speed of the cars may be increased, as provided under the Act passed during the present year, empowering the Council to make such regulations. The matter was ordered to stand over until the new Council assumes office.

Messrs. L. C. Outerbridge, Chairman of the Charities Organization Bureau, and W. A. Reid, Vice-President of the St. John's Rotary Club, wrote pointing out the present deplorable housing conditions in many parts of the city, where occupants of dwellings are subjected to great hardship, particularly during the winter season, because of the bad state of repair of the houses. It was ordered that the owners be immediately notified to put the houses in habitable condition, failing which legal proceedings will be taken.

Mrs. L. Wilcox, Hamilton Street, complained of a very unsightly and dilapidated building adjoining her dwelling at Junction of New General and Job Streets, which is at present being used as a forge. She stated she was subjected to great annoyance owing to soot and smoke, and also the animals being allowed to stand on the sidewalks, awaiting their turn to enter the forge. The Engineer will make enquiries and report on the matter for next meeting.

Mr. W. L. Ashley, on behalf of the residents of Merrymeeting Road, asked that a light be placed at junction of this road and Blatch Avenue. This matter will be taken up by the incoming Council.

A petition was read from the Deputy Returning Officer and Poll Clerks, whose services were engaged during the recent Municipal Election, pointing out that they were paid less than the amount given in the late General and Municipal Elections, the fees for such being $20.00 and $12.00 respectively and the Returning Officer in the present case having certified payment of $15.00 to Deputies and $10.00 to Poll Clerks. On this matter considerable discussion took place, and the Returning Officer, who was present, stated he thought the amounts mentioned quite sufficient. It was therefore decided that the matter stand over until further enquiry is made, and in the meantime the Returning Officer was asked to submit his statement of the expenses incurred, which will be given consideration at a special meeting.

Attention was called to the necessity of continuing the snow fences on Merrymeeting Road, corner of Field Street. The Engineer will see what can be done.

The Medical Officer of Health reported one case of Scarlet Fever and one of Diphtheria in the city during the past week.

With the reading of reports of the City Engineer, and the Sanitary Supervisor, the meeting adjourned.

A Newfoundlander Honored

PARISHIONERS OF ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH, HALIFAX, MARK THE SILVER JUBILEE OF THE RECTOR IN FITTING MANNER.

The Rev. H. W. Cunningham, a Burgeo boy, a son of the late Rev. John Cunningham, who has been Rector of St. George's, Halifax (the Round Church) these past 25 years, was presented by his parishioners with an illuminated address and purse of gold in honor of the event. The large parish Hall was filled with parishioners and friends. The Archbishop of Nova Scotia and many city and outside clergy were present and took part in giving eulogistic addresses. Among the clergy were two old Newfoundland workers, the Rev. John Lockward and Rev. N. LeMoine, both of whom had known Mr. Cunningham as a boy, the latter having been a school mate at the Academy (Bishop Fell's College), in Mr. Fhelon's time. The beautiful address in its decoration and lettering is the work of Rev. Goddard-Penwick, formerly of Fortune Bay, who was unable to be present. Mrs. Cunningham, who is a daughter of the late Rev. W. K. White of Harbor Breton, was presented with a handsome bouquet by the little granddaughter of the Senior Warden when Mr. Cunningham took charge.

ADDRESS.
Rev. Henry Ward Cunningham. Beloved Rector—St. George's, the Old Round Church of the North End of Halifax, had just completed a Century of Service, when, on the fourteenth day of November, 1900, you came to us as our Rector. Now, to-night, in November, 1925, a full twenty-five years after, those assembled here, are met to celebrate not only the Anniversary of your Birthday as Rector, but also your Silver Jubilee as our Pastor, Counselor and Friend.

St. George's Parishioners became divided by the Common and scattered in the suburbs. So, now in 1925, very few can hear from their open windows the toll of the bell calling to Matins and Evensong. Yet, to-day, when the weather is so cold, it is a comfort to know that those of your flock, whom Fatherly affection, weather nor falling health will prevent in their regular attendance at the Services of our dear old Church. Such loyalty is conducive also to keeping alive interest in the temporal affairs of the Parish and it can truly be said that, notwithstanding the "Exodus" and other adverse circumstances, St. George's has, during the years of your incumbency, surmounted all obstacles and to-day presents a balance sheet of which any Church Corporation may be proud. But it is not to "listen" to Parish History that we have asked you to meet us to-night. The reason is rather, on the personal side, and to speak of yourself and your wife, Mrs. Cunningham, is a matter entirely different from speaking about Parish Affairs. In very truth words fail us. We know that you yourself would be the last to assert that in you has been any degree of merit. You have often preached to us on the text, "I am among you as He who serveth." And it is as a servant of the Most High we like best to think of you, knowing that your heart beats in sympathy with the hearts of your Parishioners in the joys and sorrows of their daily lives. We ask you, therefore, to accept now, so that in the near future you may enjoy, this little gift, a purse of gold, and may it serve as the symbol of our feelings towards yourself and Mrs. Cunningham, for the expression of which we are unable to find words.

On behalf of the Parishioners of St. George's Church, Halifax,
E. W. MELVIN,
C. D. LANAUZE,
Wardens.
GEO. E. FERRIS,
Vestry Clerk.

Where a £ Weighs a Ton

SIR OLIVER LODGE AND A MASSIVE STAR—MILLIONS OF YEARS FOR THE WORLD YET

The beginning and end of the world and life on a star where a match would weigh half a hundredweight were subjects discussed by Sir Oliver Lodge in his Huxley lecture at the Charing Cross Hospital recently. He said:

The beginning of the world was the formation of nebulae 2000 million million years ago—and this date is no mere guess. The end will apparently be the disappearance of matter and the existence once more of an ether filled with perpetual remnants of radiation travelling out towards infinity with the speed of light at a date incomparably more remote than any I have mentioned. The star known as the Companion of Sirius was as massive as the sun, but no bigger than a planet. On this star the force of gravity would be 200,000 times greater than on the earth. A lucifer match would weigh half a hundredweight, and a sovereign would weigh a ton. The temperature of the interior of a star would be about 40 million degrees.

4,000,000 Tons a Second.
The sun, expending its substance in riotous radiation, was losing 4,000,000 tons a second, but its mass was so enormous that it could keep on doing so without appreciable change. To lose 1 per cent. of its bulk, even at this enormous rate of loss, would take 150,000,000,000 years.

Spiritual things advanced continually through higher and higher things towards perfection. And this, he considered, was the real meaning of evolution. This was why the physical universe existed. That was the real aim and purpose of the ultimate and infinite term "God."

As far as general business conditions are concerned, there appears to be nothing to cause any upset in the security market. Statements of persons occupying high positions are most encouraging. President Coolidge has told the new Congress that the nation is reaching into an area of great prosperity. President Dyer of The Investment Bankers Association of America remarks that more people to-day have more money and more opportunity to obtain the better things of life than ever before; that the productive power of the nation is practically unlimited and that there appears to be no reason why we should not have a long period of great prosperity and a constant improvement in the standard of living. Almost all the indices of general business activity provide cause for satisfaction. Reports from the steel industry are especially gratifying.

One thing which has been noticeable recently in that nervousness over the monetary situation has practically disappeared. As a matter of fact, the actual relation between money and the stock market in past years provides no reason for concern as to present conditions. Cheap money is indicative of rising stock prices only at the bottom of a business depression. Advancing money rates point to falling stock prices only when credit conditions are obviously unsound. As a general thing, money rates and stock prices are apt to go up together, because higher money rates usually denote large earnings and prosperity. The action of the stock market during the week, despite irregularity, has been conducive to confidence in the prospect for further gains.

American Workers and Their Shares

Professor Ripley dealt with the wide distribution of small stock holdings among employees and investors of moderate income, says the New Republic, and as American workers' shares are so often alluded to in this country its comments are worthy of note.

"This has been hailed by the propagandists of big business as a genuine democratization of industry—as if the individual ownership of a few shares of stock carried any real power of management! As a matter of fact the consequence is just the reverse. The more widely the majority of the stock is scattered, the more inevitable is control on the part of the few large holders.

"Separated individual stockholders, far removed from the back office, cannot as stockholders get together or exercise any informed power over corporate management. Far from removing the need for labour organization or public supervision, this development increases it. It is an ingenious and dangerous flim-flam which should not long deceive us."

The Scene in the Foreign Office

In order to enable our readers to obtain a bird's-eye view of the historic scene which took place in the Reception Room of the Foreign Office on December 1st, when the Locarno Pact was signed by the representatives of the various powers, we have republished to-day the graphic description given of that event by the Diplomatic Correspondent of The Daily Mail.

Not only is the article a masterpiece in the vividness of its portrayal of the simple yet impressive scene, but throughout, it breathes the very spirit which permeated the chamber and which inspired the participants to affix their seals and signatures to an agreement intended, as M. Briand declared, to make them "Europeans only."

When War Will End

Yesterday the public despatch told of the launching of H.M.S. Rodney, a warship, which when completed, will have cost the country about $35,000,000, and will be the most efficient fighting unit afloat. Within a few years of her having been commissioned, she will be considered obsolete, and it is not at all improbable that plans have already been considered for the construction of her successor on more elaborate lines and at even greater expense.

This is but one instance of the cost that the people of Great Britain must bear in the upkeep of her naval strength. The estimated naval expenditure for 1924-25 is about $279,000,000. In addition, there are a hundred and one establishments subsidiary to the naval service, and numerous bases in various parts of the world upon which the ships must rely for replenishing supplies as occasion demands. To this cost must be added the amount required to maintain the other fighting services, namely the Army and the Air Fleet, the former costing about $225,000,000 and the latter $72,000,000.

Well may it be asked how it is humanly possible for the population of a country yearly to subscribe such huge sums for the maintenance only of its fighting forces, but the question which has been occupying people's minds even more persistently of late is why it should be necessary to incur such a burden of expense upon establishments which not once in a long period of years are called upon to engage in hostile activities.

It is not only in Great Britain but in practically every country that this question is being asked, and it is one of the most hopeful signs that such matters are being openly discussed not only in the councils of the individual nations but between nations, and lends to the belief that relief from this oppressive burden is possible and even probable.

the world will think and act internationally when war and all the horrors of war, revealed in their true light, will be held in abhorrence, and when peace shall be established, not by intimidation, but by mutual consent.

Visit From Representative of Rhodes Trust

Dr. M. J. Rendall, M.A., LL.D., formerly Headmaster of Winchester College, London, will arrive in the city on Tuesday next on an official visit as representative of the Rhodes Trust, and will remain until December 27. A meeting of the Rhodes Selection Committee, Rhodes Scholars resident in Newfoundland, and others interested in the Rhodes Scholarship, will be held at Government House on Wednesday, the 23rd inst., at 11 a.m. in order to hear suggestions regarding the Scholarship and generally to exchange ideas.

Returned From Revenue Protection Service

Inspector J. Dee, who was on Revenue protection service on the South and West Coasts and as far as Labrador, returned by S.S. Daisy yesterday. Inspector Dee reports that conditions all along the coast except for a few isolated cases are better than they have been for some years. The season's catch of fish was all sold in the hands of dealers before the winter fishery from Rose Blanche Channel were never better. The fishermen are using frozen squid from Harveys' freezer. Herring have been fairly plentiful on the East side of Fortune Bay, but so far very small quantities have been taken.

Christmas Raffles

The Christmas Raffles, which began last night, were well patronized. The Belvedere Orphanage Booth, near the Bank of Nova Scotia, was crowded from the time of opening up until closing hour. The S.U.F. in Phillips' Store, the Mount Cashel, opposite Bowring's, and the G.W.V.A. opposite the City Club, were also centres of attraction.

Personal

Mrs. Byrne, wife of Head Constable Byrne, returned from a visit to Boston yesterday. She was accompanied home by her son, John, who will spend the Christmas season with his parents before returning to resume his occupation in Boston.

His many friends will regret to learn that Mr. E. W. Taylor, General Freight Agent of the Government Railway, is very seriously ill.

Mr. Ralph Hanham of the Royal Bank staff was a passenger by the Silvia en route to Halifax where he expects to take up his duties. Mr. Hanham on the eve of his departure was presented with a gold piece by the manager of the Bank, the well known and popular Mr. Palfrey who on behalf of the staff tendered the gift as a token of the cordial spirit of good fellowship which existed between Mr. Hanham and his associates in office. Mr. Palfrey added his own personal and very kindly wishes to the young man who was leaving his native island for the first time.

CONFEDERATION LIFE

Collided With Horse and Cart

Yesterday Mrs. Bridget Power of Outer Cove was knocked off a horse cart by a motor car and sustained a slight cut in her head. The accident occurred near William's lane and was due to the motor car skidding. The motor owned by Mr. B. Miller was proceeding west along Duckworth Street, and just as it was about to pass a horse and cart on which Mrs. Power and her son were driving, it sheared on an icy spot and collided with the cart. Fortunately Mrs. Power escaped serious injury when she fell.

Preliminary Enquiry

The magisterial enquiry into the death of Andrew Turner, was resumed yesterday afternoon before Judge Morris. Supt. O'Neill was the first witness called and examined by Mr. C. J. Fox. Detective Lee, who accompanied Inspector General Hutchings and Supt. O'Neill to the scene of the accident also gave evidence.

Mr. John Gladney, who was an occupant of the accused's car, was the third witness called and examined by Mr. Fox and cross-examined by Mr. Dunfield. The clothes worn by the deceased on the night of the accident were exhibited, marked and put in as well as two buttons which had been picked up by Detective Lee near the spot where the accident is alleged to have occurred.

Adjournment was then taken until 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Child Welfare

HEALTHY BABIES. "An Ounce of Prevention is Worth a Pound of Cure."

- (1) Every day give baby his bath. It is as important as sleep or food. (2) Use a soft soap, and not too highly scented. (3) Use Vaseline or Olive Oil in the creases of his skin, rather than powder. Powder only cakes and chafes. (4) Wash his head every day. So many get what is known as "Cradle-Cap" and generally this is because we are afraid of the fontanelle (the soft part) on the top of the head. There is no need for this fear; you will not hurt baby.

If baby has scurf (cradle-cap) on his head, rub in some Olive Oil or Vaseline at night, and comb the skin of his head gently in the morning with a fine comb.

A happy Xmas to all the Babies. Babies who are well are always happy, and what we want more than anything is "Well Babies." Use the Welfare Centres while baby is well, and you will be doing a great deal towards keeping him well.

Sliding on Signal Hill

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—Please allow me space in your esteemed paper to make known to the authorities that the practice of sliding on Signal Hill is altogether too dangerous to those who use the road, and I would like to see if it cannot be stopped before someone is hurt or killed. Only last evening there was a crippled woman knocked down by two big boys who after the accident pulled away their slide and scampered off, leaving the woman on the street. Now, Sir, this kind of thing is not good enough, and I would kindly ask the authorities to send an officer of the Constabulary staff down in this vicinity to see that the practice stops before some unfortunate person becomes a victim.

Gifts of Fashion at Baird's

This year more so than any previous season, ladies are selecting toilet preparations as gifts for their intimate friends, and when one sees the beautiful and artistic things that it is possible to secure in the line of cosmetics, it is easy to understand why this class of goods is being so extensively chosen as gifts. At James Baird's show room, there is a splendid showing of fancy toilettries, with the attractive Three Flowers line predominating. In this high-class assortment of cosmetics, are to be found fashion's latest creations. Compacts of exquisite designs, Perfume of unusual fragrance, Creams and Powders of the most fascinating odors, and many other appealing Christmas gift goods that ladies will be interested in.

Magistrate's Court

A seaman of S.S. Urtier was charged with being drunk and disorderly. He was discharged to go on board his ship.

A laborer named Patrick Gladney was summoned by the Board of Liquor Control, charged with a breach of Section 35, Sub Section 3 of the Alcoholic Liquors Act, on December 7th, inst.

Mr. C. J. Fox, who appeared for the accused, entered a plea of "not guilty." Mr. Parsons for the Board of Liquor Control, stated the accused was charged that under the above section for obtaining two bottles of liquor on the one day. One from the central and one from the East End store. He called as witness, Mr. Gerald Green, a clerk at the East End Controller's, who stated that he had seen the defendant at the store on several occasions, but he could not identify the defendant as having visited the shop on the date in question. Witness pointed out that when every purchase is made, it is recorded on an ordinary slip of paper by the clerk. The slip is then placed under the cash register and dated. A slip was then produced in witness's own handwriting, marked Patrick Gladney, I.R., dated December 7th, which purports to be a sale for rum. Witness could not swear if defendant was in the store on that date.

Mr. Fox held that there must be some identification of accused. Judge Morris then pointed out that the production of a slip of paper was not sufficient evidence, and that there must be some identification of accused, although, he said, there was prima facie evidence to put the defendant on trial. The case was dismissed.

A truckman convicted of a breach of the Street Traffic Regulations was ordered to pay costs. A truckman for not driving his horse as close as possible to the curb was fined $5.00 or in default 10 days' imprisonment.

A Water Street business man was charged with parking his motor car on Water Street for more than thirty minutes, contrary to the Street Traffic Regulations. Hon. M. P. Gibbs appeared on behalf of the defendant and entered a plea of "guilty." A fine of $5.00 was imposed.

In accordance with Section 158, 1921 Act made by the Municipal Council at their regular meeting on the 14th June, 1925, reads:—(1) No person shall hereafter park a motor vehicle at any place on Water Street for a period longer than thirty (30) minutes. Sub-section J. of Sec. 2, of the Highway Traffic Act of 1925, also reads:—"Parking" shall mean leaving a motor vehicle on a highway when not in motion or in charge of an operator. Cars are only allowed to remain parked in one place according to the Act. On conviction the maximum fine is $25.00.

A defendant in a case for assault was fined $1.00.

Topsail Station Destroyed by Fire

We are informed by the Management of the Railway that the station at Topsail was totally destroyed by fire last midnight with all its contents. The blaze was first discovered by a family named Snow who live in the vicinity, but by the time they had got in touch with operator Moores the fire had gained such headway that it was impossible to save it. An engine with several section men came down from Kelligrewa to the scene, but they were powerless to do anything. Operator Moores states that when he left the station at 11 o'clock last night everything was in order. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Express Due at 10 p.m. TWO TRAINS WILL OPERATE ON MONDAY.

The incoming express which is made up of two engines and ten cars is not due to reach the city until 10 o'clock to-night. The lateness of the train is due to a heavy list of express packages for points along the line, and to the big rush of passenger traffic, most of whom are people returning to their homes for the Christmas season. To relieve the congestion the Management of the Railway have decided to run two trains from Port aux Basques on Monday next. The train with the mails and passengers from the Caribou will leave first.

Harbor Grace Notes

Winter has spread its mantle of white over the land, giving an added touch to the Christmas season, which is now so far advanced. Our thoughts are centred around what the Christmas morn means, while the kiddies are eagerly looking forward to what Santa Claus has in store for them.

St. Paul's annual Missionary Meeting, was held at St. Paul's Church on Monday night. Rev. Seever, Curate of Bay Roberts, was the chief speaker for the evening, and delivered a thoughtful and inspiring sermon from Matthew, 28: 19-20.—Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Rev. Seever stressed the great need for whole-hearted workers at home and on the far flung line of the Mission Field. The Reverend gentleman had spent three years at Battle Harbor Mission, and in his discourse spoke on conditions as he saw them there, and the wonderful transformation to be achieved by the power of the Gospel. To many of the congregation present, it was the first time they had the pleasure of listening to Rev. Seever, and we welcome him back again. The next speaker was the Rector, Rev. Mr. Templeton, who gave a short address, which was very forceful. He pointed out that in order to be a genuine Christian, one must possess the missionary spirit, and if such does not exist, then we are greatly lacking, for as he intimated,—"How can we pass on to others that which we know so little of ourselves." There was a ring of enthusiasm in the Rev. Templeton's address, which all would do well to catch:—

"Oh Zion haste, thy mission high fulfilling,
To tell to all the world that God is light;
That he who made all nations is not willing
One soul should perish, lost in shades of night."

Mr. Charles Garland has been confined to his home for the past week or more, suffering from an attack of pneumonia. His condition was very serious, but he has been holding his own the last couple of days, and all are hoping that his recovery will be speedy.

Mr. John Trappell, J.P., L.S.M., who has been in falling health for some time past, is at present very ill at his home, Harvey Street. Mr. Trappell's many friends are trusting that there will be an improvement in his condition ere long.

The many friends of Miss Maude Butt, Principal of the Grenfell School, St. Anthony, will regret to learn that she has recently suffered a nervous breakdown, which made it necessary for her to return home by the "Melgite" to recuperate. We trust that she will soon be restored to good health again.

S. B. "Earl of Devon," Capt. Carter, arrived in port on Wednesday with a part load of fish, oil, etc., to E. Simons, from his business at Hooping Harbor, White Bay. Mr. C. Pike, who is managing the business there, will likely be returning home by the next boat. Capt. Carter experienced excellent weather during the trip, and made a good run. She leaves for St. John's early Friday morning, where she will discharge the remainder of her cargo.

Schooner "Olive Moore," arrived in port on Monday to go on Dock. She has since been taken up and received the necessary attention, and will be sailing on Friday. Capt. A. Snelgrove, of Messrs. A. E. Hickman Co's., was in town in connection with this vessel. He is a Harbor Gracean, and his friends are glad to see him in town for a while.

The car owned by Mr. F. C. Archibald which was damaged by fire some time ago, was sold by public auction by Mr. C. C. Butt, in the interest of the Insurance Company, on Wednesday of last week. The number of bidders was small, and the car was purchased by Mr. A. L. Rogers.

The work visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Graham Ash, on November 22nd, and left a son. We tender our congratulations.

Refuge Fund for Homeless Family

We are glad to learn that the family referred to in yesterday's Telegram is being without a home has been invited for going to the good offices of certain citizens who interested themselves in the case. Work has been provided for the woman, and as the arrangements made include the care of the children during her absence, she will be able to provide for the needs of herself and them.

Keep the Pot Boiling
See the kettle on the corner, not with cold disdain. It was placed there by an Army has never fought in vain. 'Tis the emblem of an order, marshalled all its power. To defend the wretched where the poor and homeless, Gaunt starvation fields, desolation swings its sword. Savage leaders they, whose form a headdress, ruthless, weakened by the blast of war, wasted figures reel and drop. 'Till the faithful army rises, and Captain thunder, stop.

See the kettle on the corner, the City's shadows fall, 'Tis a hungry little kettle, let us it one and all. Let us swing the jangling tangle, stomach loosely piled. Every mouthful that we give it, a mouthful for a child. I have witnessed painted, adding to that kettle's store. Bringing smiles to baby's face, we can a saint do more. Parsons, bankers, gamblers, ers, men of low and high degree. Strive to keep that kettle boiling, us help them, you and me.

See the kettle on the corner, church where music grand. Thunders forth appeals for help, dwelling in some little inn. And the humble little kettle, abashed and seems to say, I'm just here to serve a baby, that came on Christmas Day. Churches reap the yellow harvest, kettles glean the copper pennies. And the Harvester is watching. 'Tis golden eminence, not ashamed or awed. For a count is kept in Heaven, the auditor is God.

NOTES.
St. Thomas's—To-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock the annual "Queen's King" service will be held at St. Thomas's Church, when the people of the parish will give their Christmas offerings for the distribution among the sick and needy. This service has continued for several years past, each succeeding year seeming to give the last in pleasure and interest as well as abundance of various useful articles. While this is especially a young people's service, very cordial invitation is extended to any who would like to make the young folk like to make the offering, but will also welcome others from the growing ranks of the central idea of this service is the pleasure of contributing to the happiness of others.
Gower Street Sunday School.—The annual White Gift Service, in all departments of the school will join, will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Church. Rev. S. J. Matheson will be speaker. An invitation is extended to all members of the congregation to be present.
Cochrane Street Sunday School.—Its Christmas White Gift Service, the Church on Sunday afternoon, short, bright programme has been prepared. Rev. E. C. French will give the address. A hearty invitation is extended to parents and friends.
George Street Sunday School.—The annual Christmas Gift Service, day afternoon, commencing at 2.30. The children from the primary department will be associated with the main school, also the Adult Classes. Visitors and friends of the congregation are welcome and participate in the gift service. The usual donation of cakes and other gifts to supplement the gift of the scholars from their parents be sent to the church during the day to Wednesday morning, 10 o'clock. Entrance.
Wesley.—The annual Sunday Anniversary and White Gift Service will be held at 2.45 on Sunday afternoon. A good programme has been prepared, the speaker, Rev. R. J. Pike. Parents and friends will receive a cordial welcome.

Head and Chest Colds Relieved in a New Way

A Salve which Releases Medicated Vapors when Applied Over Throat and Chest.

Inhaled as a vapor and, at the same time absorbed through the skin like a liniment, Vicks VapoRub reaches immediately into the congested air passages. This is the modern direct treatment for all cold troubles that is proving so popular in Canada and the States where over 17 million jars are now used yearly. Splendid for sore throat, tonsillitis, bronchitis, croup, head and chest colds, catarrh, asthma or hay fever. Just rub Vicks over throat and chest and inhale the medicated vapors. It quickly loosens up a cold.

Why We Explore the Poles

ONE REASON IS THAT BOTH NORTH AND SOUTH POSSESS GREAT WEALTH.

The widespread interest taken in the recent aerial expedition to the Arctic brings up afresh the question of the practical value of Polar research. The common idea that such research has a purely sentimental value is very far from the truth, for from the earliest days Polar exploration has always had its value.

The first Arctic expeditions were made for the purpose of finding a short cut to India, and although they failed in this, they resulted in the discovery of the whole coast of North America.

The voyages of Barents, Hudson, and their successors, opened up the northern whale and cod fisheries, and were the making of the great ports of Holland, and of such important British towns as Hull, Whitby, Dundee and Peterhead.

Polar research of the present day has a two-fold object, one scientific, the other industrial.

Weather experts are becoming more and more convinced that climatic changes in the Polar regions are largely responsible for those in lower latitudes. If we are ever to be able accurately to forecast weather we must first have a complete knowledge of the conditions around the Poles. The past history of our earth is an important study, and research in the far Northern and Southern regions has already added greatly to our stock of knowledge in this direction.

For instance, we have learnt from the fossils and coal deposits of these regions that they once enjoyed a temperate, even a semi-tropical climate. Speaking of coal, the coal resources of Spitzbergen are already being tapped, but these are small compared with the eight hundred miles of thick coal seams discovered in Antarctica. Seams of copper ore and gold were also found in the South Polar continent.

The Antarctic seas swarm with life, fish being so plentiful that they can be caught on an unbailed hook. The whaling industry grows at both "ends" of the globe, and so does seal-hunting and the making of oil from penguins. On McQuarrie Island, in the Antarctic Ocean, there are estimated to be eight millions of penguins.

There is much profit to be had by the Arctic explorer. A ship that returned from the far North brought 22,500 worth of furs, 3,000 pounds weight of fossil ivory, 250 pounds of whalebone, and a hundred white and blue fox-skins, to say nothing of a very valuable collection of photographs and cinematograph films.

Having put it to the test, shouts Wilson's Certified is best. dec2,1916

What Executives Should Know

A successful organization must be composed of executives who know several things:

1. Detailed knowledge of their own specific department and the principles governing the functioning of every other department.
2. The principles underlying all business procedure. Business is no longer a game of chance but is governed by laws.
3. The ability to think in terms of the business as a whole instead of in terms of their own department.
4. The ability to train their under-studies to handle their jobs.
5. The necessary training and judgment to step in as pinch hitters in any other department should circumstances require it.

In order to carry out such a plan the active head of the industry must believe that, if he will devote the time to it, he will have executive who will measure up to his job should it become necessary to use them.—Robert Julius Anderson, in Forbes Magazine.

Settling the West

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 10.—Totalling 672,960 acres, 3,144 homesteads and 437 soldier grants were taken up in Western Canada from January 1, to October 30, of the present year, according to figures just released.

In the corresponding period last year 3,153 homesteads and 488 soldier grants, totalling 582,120 acres were taken up.

By provinces the figures are for soldier grants and homesteads: Manitoba, 413; Saskatchewan, 1,749; Alberta, 1,383, and British Columbia, 139. The greater part of the entries during the past ten months were made at Edmonton, Alta. and Prince Albert, Sask.

During October, 528 free grant homesteads were recorded, 46 in Manitoba, 359 in Saskatchewan, 111 in Alberta and 12 in British Columbia. This is an increase of 164 compared with the same period of 1924. Homesteads and soldier grants total 97,440 acres, against 58,240 for October last year.

The Moose Jaw division recorded 333 homesteads and 43 soldier grants in October. Officials point out that this activity is probably due to the reopening for entry by actual residents of certain areas withdrawn from homesteading two years ago.

CONFEDERATION LIFE.

Britain Can Consume All Canada's Foodstuffs

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 10.—There is at all times a market in Great Britain for all the foodstuffs Canada can produce, providing they are of good grade. This is the opinion of A. W. Cliffe, merchant of London, England, who is making his forty-fifth visit to the Dominion. Grading, Mr. Cliffe declared, is now playing an important part in the Old Country markets.

The visitor made an earnest plea for greater inter-Empire trade. "I believe," he said, "if such a policy were thoroughly pursued, it would solve the immigration problems of the dominions. With the exception of cotton, the Empire could become self-supporting. Such a scheme would materially stimulate an influx of settlers, for additional population would be required to produce the necessary agricultural demand."

Funeral of the Late Mrs. Pynn Held

NORTH SYDNEY, Dec. 13.—The funeral of the late Mrs. Grace Pynn, a native of Fortune, Nfld., and mother of His Worship Mayor Pynn, was held this afternoon. It was largely attended, as the old lady was well and favorably known by a large number of friends. Funeral services were held at the home of the Mayor, where the funeral was held by Rev. K. M. Munro, after which the remains were laid to rest in their last resting place in Lakeside cemetery.

Fads and Fashions

Shoes for daytime wear are plain. There are so many pleated sports shoes.

In evidence. The felt hat with a crossed crown is the latest. Waist lines must go up if the skirts are full. All evening fabrics are of superior quality.

Green silk lines a black velvet cape effectively. Bracelets are worn in great numbers and variety. We see the reversible coat in fashionable places.

The Old Track and Self-Effacement

With a month's issue of "Globe" upon my mind and a few notes of impressions amusing and disgusting before me, I have to express my astonishment over the "Globe's" apparent density in failing to discover it is now running the same race which brought ruin to its predecessor, the "Advocate." What the hopes and aspirations of the "Globe" are, or what its eventual attainment is, is beyond human power to reason out. Is it that it hopes to get us once again into the mire of stagnation and misery from which we are slowly but surely emerging? Does it hope to have history repeat itself and have fishing vessels tied to the wharves and once more have us travel the road to relief by government purchases of fish, salt and hauling and roasting of pit-props? Would it lead us once again into the quagmire of chaos that brought such disgrace upon many of the public departments with colossal losses all around and staggering deficits on estimates of public expenditure as the years come round? Does it plan for another 3 1/2 years of squandering and national misery with resultant pickings and loot from another 30 million added to the public debt? One thing is sure it has taken up the onus of doing the dirty work of the same old gang and while I am glad to know it can boast of a large circulation, my gladness is I think based on the fact that the larger the circulation the easier and quicker will be its exposure of its own fruitless policy. Newfoundland has had its day listening to and suffering the fruits of villification, and I am happy to know there is a growing tendency to weaken down on backing up such journals. The well-merited respect given The Evening Telegram comes from the pursuance of a policy studiously avoided by unscrupulous publications in their mad appeals directed to and heeded by the ignorant alone. If ignorance were but thickening, instead of coming, as it is to the final processes of dissolution, we would still have in hand our guarantee of a passage through an era of red that may well be likened to the hey-days of Bolshevik Russia.

Though we are still in the struggle for and have ahead many grievous difficulties to adjust, the leaders of the world are taking courage from the happy thought that whirlwind harangues to inflame labor to rebellion against capital and sane politics tend to bring contempt to forward demagogues, rather than sympathy. Repeated successes in this direction have ever meant in the final stages repeated disappointment and augmented misery, and at last we have settled back again to a more reasonable attitude. Our expectations build themselves more and more upon what may result from the justice of our cause rather than a blind, loud-mouthed denunciation of things that are; having as its sole aim a practical outburst to gain for our ourselves an illegal and immoral privilege to share in things to be.

I repeat because of the obvious structure of deceit the days of whirlwind harangues have passed. For the sake of existence, merely, the world has to get back and supplant such by cool judgement, the outcome of sane thought, because there is not there cannot be any other substitute. In the beginning nature fixed her laws for everything, physical laws, mental laws, laws moral and economic. Her punishments for disregard of them are both essential and easily understood, so easy in fact that no one can be too illiterate or ignorant to learn them, and knowing (as the Globe must know) that we have just passed our term of punishment brought about by the very men it now supports, its loud mouthings against those who have changed deficit into surplus and established the fisheries once again on a profitable basis are not madness of the ordinary kind, it is worse than that, it is unnameable.

It is indeed gratifying to know that you are following the only absolutely wise policy of treating such publications, generally with silent contempt. The public has learnt its lesson of squander, misery and resultant enquiring well, and to-day, as witness, the last elections, abuse brings punishments not plaintiffs, for it now realises that sponetic abuse is a sure form of political suicide having a peculiar way of providing all for the funeral except the mourners.

VIOLA DANA IN "THE BEAUTY PRIZE" AS "MISS AMERICA." Patrons of the Nickel Theatre will have an opportunity to see how a nation-wide beauty contest is conducted when Viola Dana, in "The Beauty Prize," her latest Metro-Goldwyn production, comes on Monday. "The Prize" is a picturization of the Saturday Evening Post story of that name by Nina Wilcox Putnam, and is said to provide rousing good entertainment by virtue of its splendid comedy, really dramatic plot, and the details of the contest.

As if that were not enough, a very special cast supports Miss Dana. Pat O'Malley, who has lately scored a number of big hits, plays opposite the star, as a small-town radio enthusiast. Edward Connelly appears as her crochety old father. Eddie Phillips is a wise-cracking Broadway journalist and others include Joan Standing, Edith York, Utae Vin Moore, and Fred Truesdale.

More than fifty of the most beautiful and shapely girls in Los Angeles, and according to all reports that is saying a great deal, were used in the scenes showing the country-wide contest, insuring an exciting evening for those in the front seats. The story is a combination of comedy and drama that is sure to please everybody.

On Monday we will tell you something of interest in connection with "Reville," the monster Patriotic subject which will be shown commencing Christmas eve. The picture which is an all-British production comes to us with the personal endorsement of H. R. H. The Prince of Wales. A wonderful cast was assembled to enact the story headed by the daintiest of screen stars, Betty Balfour. Watch this paper on Monday for further announcement.

Our Dumb Animals

REPORT FROM CHIEF AGENT FOR WEEK ENDING DEC. 18.

Attended to the landing of some cattle and horses from S.S. "Centa." All the animals were in fairly good condition considering the weather at this time of the year. Also attended to the shipping of two horses by S.S. "Kyle." This steamer is unfit for carrying horses on deck at this season of the year. Though they were carried in boxes the Act calls for wind and water-tight, and when the horses get wet from heavy seas and the floors get wet, it is impossible for the horses to stand. I wish to thank the officers of the ship for doing their best for their comfort, also Messrs. O'Toole and Holden for their great care in having the horses put aboard safely. Another horse was shipped to a schooner for Mr. Roberts. Humanely put to death a horse at Campbell's fox farm. The horse had its hips out of place, also put to death a horse for Mr. Lester which had picked up a nail in its hind hoof. Everything possible was done for the animal, but rather than see it suffer, Mr. Lester had it put to death. Also put to death a horse for Mr. Kenny, Cove Road. The animal was in good condition but old, and Mr. Kenny had it destroyed. Received word about a pony being in a bad stable and poorly fed (at the head of Mundy Pond Road). I have ordered it off the street for one month, and told the owner to have a doctor for it. It has since been put in another stable where it will be properly cared for. I wish to thank Mr. Rice, Long's Hill, for getting up at a very early hour in the morning and putting to death a dog which had been run over on Harvey Road and left to perish. Attended to a sale at the Abattoir Co. The cattle were taken away as soon as they were sold. Put to death two dogs. It has been a very hard week for horses on the streets. Some horses have been sharpened twice and three times during the week, and has cost the truckman from $1.40 to $1.80 each time. I think it is an act of cruelty to have horses clipped and allowed to stand for hours in the cold, and the quicker we get a law preventing this the better for the dumb animals. It is a shame to take off the coat which Nature has ordained, especially in our climate. I would like to call the Council's attention to the condition of the street near the Monument on the Beach leading off Water Street. There is a marked improvement in teamsters walking instead of driving heavy loads. I hope housekeepers will do their Christmas shopping in time for horses and drivers to get home at an early hour. All complaints have been attended to during the past week.

Assimilation

Assimilation, the process of fusion applied to races, is a very interesting topic to discuss just now; we see it acting in America, and we note it in the post-war international changes on the map of Europe. We are inclined to forget that assimilation is no new experiment in Europe. It seems on the face of things, impossible to blend in harmony, races of different temperaments and interests, and it is true that this has never been accomplished, without the sacrifice of one side or the other up to the present time.

What America has done in the past as regards the assimilation of races, has cost her very little blood. So far it has been a case of Anglo-Saxon vs. Anglo-Saxon, in the War of Independence and the Civil War. What has yet to be faced before the States becomes a perfectly blended nation, from out the mixture which has accumulated within her broad expanses, is left for the future to solve.

What is to-day apparent in America has also happened in Europe, but the final settlement cost the Continent rivers of blood and untold gold to achieve.

The peace and prosperity which the conquests of Julius Caesar, Pompey and the Scipios left behind them to a succession of Emperors, was on the face of things, a long enduring edifice, but the roots were being poisoned slowly by the indolence of the proper Romans, who were content to allow mercenaries and slaves fulfill the military and domestic duties, which their more hardy forbears had won by their own might.

Under the Emperors, conquest succeeded conquest, but the old ideas which had imbued the loyal legions of Rome to conquer for the people was lost in the vanity of the Emperors seeking individual glory despite the cost to the republic.

Out of the wilds of Scythia, from the Sarmatia plains, and the Mongolian Highlands, swarmed the savage Huns, Goths and vandals, and the peaceful Roman provinces which lay in their path were inundated by these ruthless human tidal waves.

Years of security under the "Roman Peace" had bred a Roman citizen who knew nothing of war, and Rome was finding herself incapable of defending that which she had held so secur; province after province fell, spoil to the Hun, Ilyria, Dacia, Gaul, Spain and Africa, etc., and the once potent God Terminus, was forced to content himself with a rapidly contracting frontier.

In time, so desperate became the situation that the Emperors finally evacuated Rome for Constantinople, and the Empire which was left, was protected more by fear of the Roman name than the actual power of the empire.

Left alone Italy fell to a Gothic conqueror, who with his heirs were comparatively driven out by the last great Romans worthy of Germanicus, namely Belisarius and Narses; but this last spark which might have caused a Roman revival died, owing to the feebleness of the Emperors and the depravity of the troops, and Rome was left to the Lombards until Pepin the Frank freed the city, and was crowned there by Pope Adrian I.

A brilliant star in the East suddenly attracted the attention of the world; Mohammed, who uniting in religion the Arabs, Turks, and Saracens, proceeded to conquer the Roman provinces of Asia Minor, Syria and Palestine. To the Caliphs, the successors of the mighty Prophet, fell Persia, Northern Africa and Egypt. In the twelfth century, Mohammed II. took Constantinople herself by assault.

The Emperors homeless and without Empire existed from that time solely in the legendary kingdom of Trebizond. Like so many wolves, the barbarian nations had surrounded the dying Roman Eagle, and from its death agonies was born the Europe of to-day.

Race after race descended upon the fertile regions of Europe, conquered and were conquered and conquered again. Britain left to the Saxons was finally subdued by the Normans.

France with Italy and Germany became united under Charlemagne, only to separate into different states by his death. Spain could not defend herself from the Moors, who overran the Peninsula, and might have conquered Europe but for the victory of the Franks under Charles Martel.

Greece was the "Fax Romana," the Hellenic culture, the sculpture and architecture of Greece and Rome, Long centuries, the "Dark Ages" finally ended with the Renaissance and the discovery of America by Columbus, and a new lease of civilization dawned upon a superstitious world.

Where are the pure blooded races contemporary with Rome? Few exist. The Persians, Armenians and the Jews alone would be recognized by an ancient Roman if he could spring from the grave and see our world to-day.

GIFTS FOR THOSE WE LOVE BEST.

Here's a funny thing about Christmas—the people we give gifts to are those we love best.

Of course, we give to our immediate families, and that probably means the people we love the very best. But how about the rest of our list? Is that made up of people outside our families that we love best, or is it a strange conglomeration that has accumulated through the years?

But is it?

Who is on those long lists? Pick out, if you can, the half dozen people outside your family who really mean the most to you to-day and see if they are the people you are buying gifts for.

Like as not, half the people who mean the most to you in your adult life you have never gotten into the habit of exchanging Christmas gifts with.

Who then is on that long list which you can so anxiously in the weeks before Christmas?

Well probably there are some old school chums whom you have not seen for years and would, perhaps, have nothing in common with, if life were to throw you together again.

Then there are some cousins and uncles, aunts, etc., with whom the family used to exchange gifts when you were small children.

In-Laws Of Course.

And of course there are in-laws, some of whom you have never seen and others, perhaps, whom you wish you had never seen. Every year one of my neighbors sings a Christmas song of hate to me. "Well I've just got to buy Grace's Christmas present. I just hate that job. I don't know what to give her. She has everything and she's so critical. And I could use the money in so many ways and it won't mean anything to her. Oh, dear, I just hate that job."

Perhaps, also, you are one of those people who think Christmas a good time to settle kindness debts incurred during the year. Kindly feeling and a pleasant sense of obligation squared may go with such gifts, but it's no case of those we love best, surely.

We Love Our Chains.

Look over your own Christmas list sometime and see if it doesn't strike you when you stop to think of it as an odd conglomeration of habit and convention gifts rather than real love gifts.

I wonder if the first impetus to the sending of Christmas cards did not come from our wish to break through and send a word of loving greeting to those really dear to us. But, alas, how soon we had our formal card lists, too! It really seems sometimes as if we liked to hang chains on ourselves!

British Coal Industry

The output of coal from British mines for the current year is estimated at 244,623,000 tons of 5.07 tons per head of population, as against 267,051,000 or 5.58 tons per head of population in 1924. In 1925 the figures are partly estimated. Exports of coal for the current year are expected to amount to 50,000,000 tons, as against 61,651,000 tons in 1924.

The coal export trade of Great Britain has been affected during the last three months by the strike of the anthracite coal miners in our own country. According to advices received by the Bankers Trust Company of New York, from its British Information Service, substantial quantities of Welsh, Scotch, and German anthracite as well as a good many parcels of English and German coke have been shipped to the United States as a result of the strike here, and British and German exporters are looking forward to continuing these exports, at any rate during the month of January.

This is stated to be reassuring to the British anthracite coal industry which on this account is enjoying a welcome spell of activity, and it is stated that ordinary steam and bituminous coal in the last few weeks also has felt the stimulus of the American strike, especially in the South American, Western Islands and Mediterranean markets. At the present time there are 1,093,000 people employed in and about the British coal mines, or about 200,000 less than at this time last year. It should be borne in mind that in Great Britain there is a potential strike of operatives which has been held in check by the intervention of the government. Such intervention has been fair to cost the government many millions of pounds, possibly from £15 million to £25 million. Evidence is now being given before a coal commission which is considering the status of the industry and the relative claims of the owners and the men in the hope that some plan may be arrived at to bring back to the coal industry the prosperity which it once enjoyed, and at the same time to enable the men to obtain a living wage.

For the first six months of 1925 there was a loss in the operation of the mines of £2,340,000. It is estimated that since 1913 there has been an increase in the wages cost per ton produced of 85%, and that there has been a steady decline in the amount of coal produced. In 1883 the output per person was 332 tons. In 1903, with better appliances, the output had fallen to 275 tons. In 1913, with still better appliances, the output had fallen to 260 tons, while in 1924, with still more improved appliances, the output was only 220 tons per man. The operators in their testimony claim that if the men would work efficiently, without any loss of income to the miners, the output could be increased with a lower cost per ton, which would change the loss now being suffered by the industry to a profit, and thus improved business would mean better wages.

In 1913 the cost of production per ton of coal commercially salable was 18s. 6½d, while the coal sold for 11s. per ton, giving a profit of 1s. 6½d. In the quarter from May to July of this year, the cost per ton was 18s. 0.22, while the proceeds amounted to 17s. 1.21d, or a loss of 9.88d. per ton. In other words, wages increased 85.31% and all costs 90.50%, while the proceeds increased only 55.10%.

The operators in their testimony state that while wages have risen rather less sharply than total cost, the burdens imposed by the state in the shape of health insurance and workmen's compensation, which are directly beneficial to the miners, have increased to a disproportionate extent, so that taking into consideration these items, the proportion of the proceeds secured by the miner, either directly in wages or indirectly in other ways, has been so great as to leave no profit whatever for the operators. The operators also point out that the per cent of output per man in Great Britain is substantially lower than either in Germany or the United States, although slightly higher than in Belgium and Silesia. The operators claim that with the outbreak of the war they handed over to the government healthy and profitable industry which had increased its output in the preceding forty years by 115%, its exports by 425%, and its labor force by 120%; that when they took back the industry in 1921, the annual output had fallen, the cost of production had risen, and that profits per tons had been transformed into loss per ton.

This is the status which the trade strike in Great Britain has brought to the front, and which the coal commission is endeavoring to remedy in a way which will be fair to both the labor and the capital interests in the end.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

PRAYER FOR A LITTLE GIRL.
Dear Lord, our little baby bless And fill her life with happiness. Protect her through the coming years And keep her lovely eyes from tears; Keep her from pain and let her stay As perfect as she is to-day.

Dear Lord, watch over her, lest she Shall catch some ugly fault from me; Guard her from selfishness and pride, From anger at some whim denied, And as the swift years come and go, Grant that still lovelier she may grow.

Dear Lord, we ask, keep pure her mind, Grant that no nasty thought may find Lodgment therein, but from above Send her the wisdom of Thy love, May there be nothing base or vile The joy of knowledge to defile.

Dear Lord, this for our babe we ask, The strength and courage for her task, Keep her from sin, and let her be Always as radiant to see, As beautiful and blithe and gay, As perfect as she is to-day.

The Futurs of Broadcasting?

"I'm frank to say that I don't know what broadcasting is coming to," replied S. E. Baldwin, in charge of broadcasting at the Willard Storage Battery Company when this question was recently put to him. The Willard Company operates the big Cleveland broadcasting station, WTAM. "There are hundreds better qualified than I to answer that question and I think their answers would be practically the same thing—I don't know."

"We can make some guesses based on conditions at the present time. For instance, there is little doubt that within a comparatively short time the really big broadcasters will be using 50 kilowatts or more and the 5 kilowatt station which is at present our so called super-power transmitter will be classed as a small station."

"There will also be necessarily but a comparatively small number of broadcasters. Necessarily, because the cost of installing and maintaining a 50 or 100 kilowatt transmitter will be prohibitive to all but a very few."

"At the recent radio conference a number of things were brought out which might indicate where broadcasting is going. It was practically agreed that increased power was a necessary step in the progress of broadcasting."

"It is my opinion that sooner or later, all the larger stations will be forced to become commercial broadcasters, many will be forced into chain broadcasting and that larger firms contemplating the erecting of broadcasting stations will instead buy time on one already established."

The End of a Coyote Farm

GRASSY LAKE, Alta., Dec. 10.—The coyote farm operated in this district for several years is no more. Tired of their domestic confinement, the animals recently bolted for freedom and took up their abode in the wilds of the neighborhood. The peace of the farmers in the surrounding territory has been greatly disturbed by the continual howling of the hungry coyotes and much small stock is reported to have fallen prey to the beasts. Parties have been organized with a view to the capture or extermination of the animals.

Economizing Lives and Limbs

The remarkable results of an intensive safety campaign conducted by the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania are recorded in an interesting article in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.).

The number of accidents per 100 employees was reduced from a high point above 88 in 1914, to below 9 in 1923, and rose only to 11.75 in 1924, although over 3,000 new men were added to the force in two years. The number of accidents resulting in lost time shrank from 406 to 44, from 1914 to 1924, or more than 89 per cent. Accidents with lost time per 100 employees shrank from about 10 per cent to one-half of one per cent. Other figures show the same impressive proof of results.

Accidents were found to be caused generally by one of three causes: (1) the chance-taking spirit; (2) lack of familiarity with the job; (3) known hazards, many of which could be eliminated. More than 20,000 such hazards have since been eliminated throughout the "plant"—which covers all of Delaware and Pennsylvania and part of New Jersey.

Under the head of "take a chance," it was found that in addition to carelessness, which calls for disciplinary measures, there are several natural human failings responsible. And it was soon learned that in order to avoid creating a feeling of unfairness and to procure employee co-operation, these two elements must be distinguished. While carelessness needs discipline, youth needs education—and youth was found to be responsible for the majority of accidents. By tabulating ages, it was found to be responsible for more than half of all accidents, was about equally divided between those up to twenty-five years, and those between twenty-five and thirty years of age.—Eugene M. Pharo, in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.).

Britain's "Foreign" Buildings

INVADEES WHO HAVE INTRODUCED THEIR OWN STYLES.

Each style of architecture has its own distinctive features, from which you can tell at a glance whether it belongs to the Elizabethan period, the Saxon, the Norman, and so on.

The first period, apart from the Roman occupation of Britain, of which there are many remains in this country is the Saxon, but there are very few examples left.

The first great period of architecture in this country was the Norman. The Normans, as conquerors, were great castle builders and the distinctive features of a Norman building are solidity, strength, and simplicity.

What little style they had was copied from Roman remains, and on the Continent it was called "Romanesque." Their arches were generally semi-circular, their piers and pillars massive.

They had little decoration, for their chief carving tool was the axe. Hence their ornamentation was mostly in rectangular lines. A flat pyramid, called "dog's tooth," was their chief element of decoration.

Following the Norman period came the Gothic—called in derision by those who did not like the style. They compared it to the Gothic, who were barbarians. The first main difference here was that the arches were pointed. This is not only beautiful but useful in construction, for varying distances can be covered with pointed arches and yet the top level of them all remain just the same.

The Gothic period is distinguished by lightness, beauty, and daring of construction. The solid Norman keep developed into the tall tower, later topped with the long, tapering spire.

The decorations of mouldings and so on were worked with the chisel, and became finer, richer, deeper and more elaborate. Sculpture was largely employed and by the 14th century the hitherto "Early English" Gothic became the "Decorated" style.

Soon afterwards the love of the old Greek and Roman art revived, and this revival led to what is known as the "Renaissance" period. Architects strove to copy the old forms, and apply them to England.

But before we got purely classic buildings, such as St. Paul's Cathedral, the two styles were mingled, and the union gave us the "Elizabethan" and the "Tudor" styles, in which most of our old country and manor houses were built.

The "classic" revival is still with us. Churches have been modelled on Greek temples, as is St. Pancras Church, London. Another example of the "classic" style is the British Museum.

To-day the architect uses and adapts any feature of any style. There has been no new architectural style created since the Gothic, and apart from Durham, the older parts of Peterborough, and a few others, all our great cathedral churches are Gothic.

When you come across a building that interests you, discover its period by looking for these features. Usually all old buildings with domes, with imitation Greek or Roman columns and other "pagan" features are "Renaissance," while all country mansions with twisted chimneys are "Tudor."

4 New Cardinals Created by Pope

THREE ITALIAN AND ONE IRISH PRELATES ELEVATED.

Rome, Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press)—Four new cardinals were created at a secret consistory to-day. They are—

Monsignor Bonaventura Corretti, apostolic nuncio in France; Monsignor Enrico Gasparri, apostolic nuncio in Brazil; Monsignor Patrick O'Donnell, archbishop of Armagh; Monsignor Alessandro Volpe, secretary of the congregation of Rites.

Cardinal Corretti was auditor to the apostolic delegation at Washington for several years and the apostolic delegate to Australia from 1914 to 1917. He expects to visit the United States again in about six months in order to attend the Eucharistic congress at Chicago.

Cardinal Gasparri is a nephew of the Papal secretary of state and has been in the papal diplomatic body for more than twenty-five years.

Cardinal O'Donnell succeeded the late Cardinal Logue, primate of Ireland, and is one of the leading figures in the Irish episcopacy.

Cardinal Volpe is one of the most learned ecclesiastics in the Roman congregations and is known particularly in connection with the beatification and canonization of Joan of Arc.

To-day's ceremony assumed a special importance because it precedes by less than a month the still more gorgeous ceremony with which the Pope will close the Holy Year. It was held in the hall which takes its name from the consistory, and was attended by all the cardinals residing in Rome.

The Pope, dressed entirely in white, wearing a gold pectoral cross and carrying his velvet hat, entered the hall on foot, preceded by the Swiss guard accompanied by the Noble guard and followed by his military and ecclesiastical courts, while the Sistine choir sang.

After the Pope had seated himself on the throne, the master of ceremonies ordered the "extra omnes", and all except the Pope and cardinals left the hall. The Pontiff then offered a simple prayer and delivered a short allocution.

Mysterious Beam of Light Baffles Investigation

BEECHY, Sask., Dec. 10.—For many years the residents of the Buffalo Basin district have been mystified by a phantom play of lights, which have sent terror and superstition into the hearts of those who have solved its origin.

Resembling the sweeping beam of a searchlight or the glare of the headlights of an automobile, the strange illumination for the past fourteen years has baffled the neighborhood and defied explanation.

Like previous attempts to discover the source of the phenomenon, the latest expedition has been one of complete failure. A party, determined to get at the root of the mystery recently launched into the affected area. Observers were stationed at different points and each person kept a close look-out.

Descending apparently from the southern sky, the light was seen faint at first, but gradually increasing in volume. For several minutes the beam held its brilliance, then it faded into a dull glow only to repeat its vagaries much akin to the throbbing of a lighthouse signal. The party was obliged to abandon its mission none the wiser.

Many theories have been advanced for the existence of this mysterious light, but all have been rejected as unsound. There is no house within a mile of the place which is located in a wild, uncultivated stretch of slough and hills. Visitors have suggested that the phenomenon might be caused by the reflection from burning straw stacks, but this finds no support among the residents of Buffalo Basin, who point out that the light has been observed in winter and summer alike.

New Methods of Cultivation

RESULTS IN INCREASED YIELDS.

REGINA, Sask., Dec. 10.—Yields of wheat have been increased about fifteen bushels an acre on experimental plots in Regina and Kananaskis by the adoption of a straw mulch method discovered by J. C. Secord, Regina barrister.

Llewellyn Bratt, who farms two and a half sections of land south of Regina, and Clarence Westhaugher, both of whom tested the new method of cultivation, reported that there was an apparent increase of about fifteen bushels to the acre. The new system was tested out on an acre plot of land similar to the land on which the ordinary methods were employed.

Both agree that the new method is not so effective on summer fallow land but on the stubble there is a material difference in the yield.

Believing that immense quantities of straw were not meant to be destroyed, Mr. Secord experimented for a few years to find some methods to use the straw profitably. He found that if grain were planted shallow instead of deep in the spring, that the roots would penetrate farther into the ground and secure more nourishment than if planted deep. In some cases the roots formed into a mat on meeting the harder ground.

By covering the seeded ground with straw to a depth of two inches, Mr. Secord discovered that it did not prevent the seed from germinating, but rather prevented weeds from coming through readily. As the season advances, the straw forms a mulch to conserve the moisture during the hot summer months, when it is most needed. The result is a healthier and stronger growth of wheat with an increased yield. After the harvest, the straw is sufficiently rooted to act as a fertilizer, Mr. Secord points out.

Prof. Manley Champlin of the field husbandry department University of Saskatchewan, to whom Mr. Secord submitted his plan regards the new method as a very good one. He indicated that the field husbandry department would continue the experiments, adding that straw as fertilizer and also as a mulch for winter wheat.

New Fuel Predicted
 HEATING PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—Elimination of the fuel problem of modern life by development of a fuel, the power of which would be many thousand times that of anything at present known to science, was predicted by Professor J. C. McLennan, head of the Department of Physics of the University of Toronto, and eminent authority on helium and the atomic theory, in a statement here.

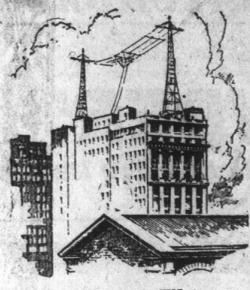

Working from the fact that it was now possible to manufacture helium from hydrogen and at the same time produce enormous amounts of energy, researches now being carried on ultimately enable the scientists to produce the super-fuel which would be the panacea for all transportation and fuel problems. He pointed out that it should be theoretically possible to begin with hydrogen and, instead of destroying only part of the matter and producing helium, to destroy the whole and so produce only mechanical power. Professor McLennan stated that by so doing "heat sufficient to bring four cubic miles to the boiling point could be generated from a small quantity of hydrogen, the cubic size of which would be no longer than that of the human body."

AMERICAN FINANCIER ANSWERS GEORGE HARVEY.

New York, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press)—An answer to the "Blue Ruff" picture of Great Britain, recently presented in an article by George Harvey, former United States Ambassador to Great Britain, has been cabled from London to the Wall Street Journal by a noted United States financier, C. W. Barron, President of the Dow, Jones and Company.

Mr. Barron lauds the former United States Ambassador for his aid in adjusting the international debt between Great Britain and the United States, but says that "evidently the arguments which Mr. Harvey combated in overruling the opposition of the British Cabinet to the settlement have had a strong after effect upon his mental vision."

He contends that Mr. Harvey should have delved further into the British finances before he adjudges the Old Country in such desperate straits.

"You cannot safely take the Englishman at his own depreciated valuation," Mr. Barron says. "While France shrugs her shoulders and endeavors to patch or hide her unpleasant problems, John Bull digs his up and puts them in the front yard. The main contention of Mr. Harvey would be laughable if the discussion of it were not in danger of taking on a serious international aspect. How can a man go broke by writing his own notes, payable only to himself?"

Mr. Barron declares that the $4,000,000,000 Great Britain borrowed from the United States is the only debt that can really bother her, "for it is her only external debt."

He says there is nobody in the Old Country who can agree with Mr. Harvey that the payment of this debt is a menace to the future of Britain, "and besides," the financier warns, "an advertisement declaring for financial weakness is free help for foreign trade."

Mr. Barron calls attention to the fact that Great Britain still leads in foreign trade throughout the world, and says "England talks about her trade problems as she searches for ways of improvement, but she has little trouble from them."

As a matter of fact, she is more troubled over the prospects of trade in Germany, Russia and other countries with whom she does business, than over her own trade position.

She is troubled now that the United States does not engage more in foreign trade, but persists in a loathsome and high prices and wages within her own borders. She sees the United States within two years losing a part of her gold as her balance of trade vanishes. England believes that as prices rise in the United States so must they eventually fall."

The Wall Street magnate says England is still English, with the Russian agitators being deported, and find that the country's worst problems are behind her. He contends that those who opposed the coal settlement now admit that the Government subsidy was the cheaper way. In setting the Irish boundary problem, Mr. Barron says the British Government "did the impossible," and she is now doing the secondary impossibility, "taking a lesson from the United States and protecting some of her trade from foreign competition by a 33 per cent. duty."

"No, Mr. Harvey," the article says, "the trouble is not in England nor in her budget, nor in her interest payments, nor in her threatened trade decadence. The trouble is still on the continent of Europe."

Anti-Pest Campaign

EDMONTON, Alta., Dec. 10.—The anti-pest campaign waged under the direction of the Alberta department of agriculture has proved disastrous to approximately 300,000 crows, gophers and magpies, according to figures just released.

Nearly 1,300 contestants have taken part in the competition and about $3,000 have been distributed to successful hunters. The campaign has taken a toll of 195,525 gophers, 70,000 magpies and crows eggs, while 38,275 destructive birds have been killed.

School children, farmers and members of the Game Protection Association, participated in the contest.

Priests Brave Death to Aid Trapped Men

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Walking literally into the "Valley of the Shadow," dauntless in the face of duty, five Roman Catholic priests braved imminent death with firemen and doctors last night to administer the last Sacrament and give aid to eight workmen buried in the collapse of a brown stone residence under repair in 47th Street just off Fifth Avenue.

Once they were called on to close the eyes of a dead man and for hours they stood by the side of two other, alive, but hysterical, and with their heads above the mass of fallen timbers, plaster and bricks.

Though five of the eight men were rescued almost immediately—all of them with the aid of a priest who was first to enter the wreckage—three others were pinned, one dead and two alive, within the building for more than six hours. Two more men were believed to be entombed in the cellar.

After seven hours of frenzied labor, one living workman, and the dead man, still had not been rescued. The third imprisoned with them, Joseph Bianco, was taken out six hours after the crash and rushed to a hospital, critically injured. A priest, described only as "Father Caldwell," rushed to the building a few moments after it collapsed and firemen found him picking away bits of debris as he prayed by one of the workmen. Within a few moments he had been joined by Father Joseph McKenna, of St. Malachy's Church, the actors' chapel, and the Rev. Bernard McQuade, of St. Patrick's. They aided in the rescue of the first eye, 75-night two others, the Rev. Edward Dargan, of St. Patrick's, and Father James Carey, who chanced to be a guest at his home, donned firemen's helmets and went into the wreckage.

They were in imminent danger. Firemen were afraid to remove the debris until the remaining walls of the building were tottered as each beam was lifted, had been braced. For hours they scooped away bits of brick and mortar, with their hands, unable in any other way to free the men imprisoned.

Sailing Ship on Fire; Boys Fight Flames

TRAINING VESSEL FOR DANISH LADS ABLAZE IN ENGLISH CHANNEL.

LONDON—How boys of from 14 to 18 years of age, who compose the crew of the Kobenhaven, the world's biggest sailing ship, put out a fire at sea, and brought the vessel safely to port, was described at Plymouth to Admiral Sir Richard Phillimore, Commander-in-Chief, Plymouth, when he paid a private visit to the ship.

When the Kobenhaven, which is manned by 48 boys, training for officers' positions with a Danish company, was entering the Channel from the North Sea, on her way to Melbourne with a cargo of timber, petrol exploded in the officers' mess. The officers' quarters and the cabin at the stern were soon blazing, only an iron bulkhead separating the flames from the ship's oil tanks.

"Much of our $0,000 square feet of canvas was spread," said Captain H. Christensen, "and half of the boys were detailed to take in the canvas, while the others crawled with a hose to the heart of the fire.

"In an hour the danger of the fire spreading had gone, and we rehoisted sail and raced for Plymouth."

In further conversation the captain expressed his regret that British boys entering the Merchant Marine are no longer trained in "windjammers."

(The Kobenhaven is a five-masted vessel, built by a Leith firm in 1921, and has auxiliary motor power. One of her masts towers 152 feet above her deck.)

A Big Lot of Brandy Smuggled to London

5,000 CASES BROUGHT IN AND DISTRIBUTED, BUT ALL ARE TRACED AND SEIZED.

London.—The city police and Scotland Yard detectives are investigating the mystery of a consignment of more than 5,000 cases of brandy brought into the country and unloaded at one of the London docks on a recent Friday and cleared by the consignees on Monday afternoon.

The brandy was skillfully packed to represent cases of boots and shoes. These passed the customs officers without the real nature of the contents being detected.

The consignment was brought in by a cargo steamer, and the greater part was distributed before a hint reached the customs of what was happening.

Most of the cases had been taken in lorries to a depot on the outskirts of London.

When the Excise officials heard what was happening, inquiries were made and detectives traced the greater part of the cargo to some store rooms under railway arches near Hammermith.

Several people were questioned and, in consequence, other cases were recovered from beneath a shed on allotments near the railway arches.

The whole of the cargo is now in the possession of the customs and excise authorities, and warrants have been issued against two men for whom search is now being made.

It is believed that part, if not all, of the cargo was intended for re-shipment to America.

Grave of a Canary

While carrying out repairs to a wall of a Brighton (England) house workmen came across the grave of a canary. A brick had been removed and a coffin with glass panels inserted. The canary was reclining on a bed of cotton wool, the inscription on the coffin being: "Died January 4, 1839."

From a "Foreign" Part

The following story was told at a recent dinner by a certain Member of Parliament who shall be nameless.

An M.P. was one day addressed in this manner at the House:

"My dear friend, I have come all the way from Naples to support you."

The speaker was an M.P. who had, but a few weeks before, been on the opposition side.

"My dear sir," the first M.P., answered, "you have come much farther than that—you have come from the other side of the House."

FOR SHATTERED NERVES

You can't cure weak, impoverished nerves by dosing yourself with drugs. What the nerves require is new life—that's electricity.

You know that the nerves convey the very force that runs the human body. This nerve force, as it is called, is another name for electricity. Now when your nerve force is overtaxed by hard work, worry or dissipation, there is sure to be trouble. Not only the nerves are affected, but the heart, stomach, kidneys, liver, and other organs of the body suffer as well.

Complicated diseases often result, and can only be cured by building up the nerve power. The "Ajax" Battery applied while you rest will do the work.

The "Ajax" Dry Cell Body Battery is the best and most successful device for infusing electricity into the body. It generates a steady unbroken stream of electric life with which it saturates the nerves and vitals without the least shock or unpleasant sensation. The "Ajax" Battery cures all such troubles as lumbago, nervousness, insomnia, rheumatism, weakness of any kind, and stomach, kidney and liver and bowel disorders.

FREE TO YOU

Our 32-page illustrated book tells all about the battery, how it cures, and its cost. It does not cost you a penny, so write at once without delay. Special booklets for Ladies and Gentlemen; please specify which is required when writing.

In order to save time correspondents should, when writing for the Free Booklet, state their age, sex, and full details of their case, for the precise advice can be sent by return mail. All letters are treated in the strictest confidence.

The Opportunities between 30 and 45

There are more opportunities for investment, for establishing a business, between 30 and 45, than at any other time. Yet thousands of men must let these opportunities go because they lack capital—capital which maturing insurance policies would provide.

While you are young is the time to look ahead for your opportunities. Now is the time to start creating capital for opportunities later in life. When 45 comes it may be too late. Send the coupon for information.

Queer Things Done by Volcanoes

There is always a sense of mystery about volcanoes. For years they will remain quiet, then suddenly they will erupt, causing untold damage.

Volcanoes are far more plentiful in the islands of the Pacific than elsewhere. In the New Hebrides is one that always emits a dense column of smoke. At night when illuminated by the great glare from below, the smoke seems like a huge pillar of fire.

One of the worst disturbances of this volcano occurred thirteen years ago. It was thought to be extinct and a town had sprung up round it. Then, without warning, the volcano burst into life, with dense smoke, and falling stones.

Within a few hours new craters appeared, and an island was formed three miles out to sea. But the town itself disappeared beneath the waves. Where the houses once stood, there is now a deep bay into which ships can enter as though it were a natural harbor.

On the other hand, says Mr. W. L.

Puxley, in "Green Islands in Glittering Seas," the island of Tauna used to have a harbor where vessels could anchor, but owing to numerous eruptions of the volcano there, the water is now so shallow that only small boats can enter.

This volcano is called "the light-house of the South Seas," for its glare guides ships for miles.

The North Island of New Zealand contains a vast volcanic area. A few years ago a terrific explosion was heard in a river-bed, and a blowhole suddenly opened, sending up a jet of steam to a height of a hundred feet.

and giving out a sound similar to that of a ship's siren.

The jet gave out this noise for three minutes, ceased for three, then resumed for four again. And so it continued in this fashion for two years. It ceased as suddenly as it had begun.

Japanese Unlucky Numbers

The Japanese are very superstitious in regard to lucky and unlucky numbers. Certain numbers are deemed so unlucky that no telephone subscriber would accept them, so they are usually taken by government officers, schools, police stations and other public institutions.

the Pact Was Signed

Diplomatic Correspondent of the Daily Mail.

Every one knows how great a ceremony will turn out. They are planning to do some surprise, and then, so often, something earlier or later which excels the main event.

So it was yesterday at the signing of the Locarno Treaties at the Peace Office, when the most strikingly symbolic and moving incident of the day came at the very start.

The great chamber was filled. Half a dozen literally there as spectators on the data were long lines of dependents, well-known men in uniform, from half the countries of the world. In the upper part of the room chairs close to the walls were reserved for the Ambassadors.

Commissioners of the Dominions, other privileged persons, faced the room, including Lady Austen Chamberlain, and one most interesting, rather lonely but very young, Joseph Chamberlain, the minor in the room, the representative of the Youth of Europe, Britain, France and Germany.

He sits that had been invited for the signing of the proceedings with force and purity—there were as mellow as they were bright on the expectant scene, on the banquet table covered with sheets of manuscript paper, and the delegates, and scarlet book-bags down its centre, through the lofty windows the sun shone, as if, too, was an outlook. All was ready for the scene, and we did not quite know how it would begin. Would the states of the countries be announced as they entered, or what?

And then, all at once, there was a faint near the open door and an announcement or signal, in which Sir Austen Chamberlain, with behind on one side of him and Dr. Stresemann on the other, the three, thus grouped together, Foreign Secretary like a bride between two best men, made their first appearance.

Everyone rose. It was the whole of Locarno made real, an emblem of the Treaty they were signing, which was made by the door, a group which the long ago would have seemed impossible.

men or Germans or British. If one had searched the earth for more typically British and German and French features could have been found than those of Sir Austen Chamberlain and the German delegates and M. Briand, who as he sat waiting for the proceedings to open looked a Gaul to the last drop of his moustache.

Welcome in French. Signor Scialoja looked very nervous. M. Benes was a garden of characteristic smiles as, placing a paper in front of him, Sir Austen Chamberlain began in fluent French: Messieurs, le Roi, mon auguste maître, me charge...

With his head held high, for he had his text by memory and scarcely looked down at it, Sir Austen looked forward to the world, a real champion of the cause of peace, as he gave out the King's message and added one of like tenor from the Government.

Silence held the room as he spoke. Only the faint whirr of the cinema cameras at the back of the chamber was audible besides, as they recorded the scene for distant and near lands. And then he smiled, and, becoming the courteous diplomat again, turned with a smile and a bow to Dr. Luther.

"Sonsieur le Chancelier," he said, and the German Chancellor, in vigorously articulated German, first condole with the Royal Family and the Empire in the loss of Queen Alexandra, and then turned to his eulogy of Locarno and the hopes it engendered.

One after the other each delegate spoke, and each had some special phrase to enshrine the uniform thought of all.

Happy Phrases. "The plough to which we have put our hands must turn a free soil into fresh harvests," said Dr. Luther. "Peace which matches the deepest wishes and highest hopes of the world," was a phrase by M. Briand. "Only gives a distorted guarantee with the one object of bringing to pass an era of brotherliness amid nations," said Signor Scialoja. "Let the nations by the disarmament of hearts prepare the disarmament of arms," said M. Vandervelde with marked feeling.

M. Benes referred to "the peace tranquillity, and happiness of Europe." Count Skrzynski said: "May that great guardian spirit, which presided over the birth of these agreements" watch upon their growth in the future. Sir Austen Chamberlain thanked them for their generous words, and gave place to Sir Cecil Hurst, an austere legal figure. He rose and made a technical announcement about verifications and alterations in the text of the treaty.

And then, with no other ceremony, text and treaty came to life. In Sir Cecil Hurst's hands. Hitherto it had been but a name and then, suddenly, somehow, almost casually, he had the treaty itself in his grasp, the white momentous document.

He held it bent open and one saw the long line of red seals that ran down the page and the band of blue silk ribbon which ran through them and looped in a curve across the page, rather loosely, so that it hung in festoon over the first signature when Dr. Luther wrote it. I caught no words that passed at that supreme moment.

Sir Austen leaned a little back in the chair and invited the German signature with a friendly smile and gesture, more significant, perhaps, than any formula etiquette might have devised for the occasion.

It was all done as if the members of some family had been signing a deed together. Sir Cecil Hurst's judicial features brightened as he bent over Dr. Luther and he must have been affected by this thought. So fittingly ended the signing of the treaty which may instil kindness in Europe.

Telling Locarno. Then Sir Austen Chamberlain ended the great hour with a pleasant little kindly act which was just the note on which to conclude. "Now that we've completed our great work," was the sense of his words, "what about a little wire—a petit mot—to the Syndic de Locarno to tell him and thank him for its hospitality to us?"

The hotel-keeper who had had all the statesmen in his keeping at Locarno was a privileged guest in the room, and one, is sure he must have been affected by this thought. So fittingly ended the signing of the treaty which may instil kindness in Europe.

4 Dips in the Ink. Dr. Luther, with an air of "I must do this well and thoroughly," took up one of the ordinary orange-coloured wooden penholders which write most of the letters of England, and, after careful dips to get his ink neatly and sufficiently in the pen—he dipped four times before he was satisfied—wrote his name in the Gothic German hand.

Sir Cecil Hurst then passed to Dr. Stresemann, who signed in ordinary handwriting, and so from one to another of the delegates, the treaty went round.

M. Cambon of the French Embassy, too, brought up the Franco-Polish and other treaties, and another Foreign Office brought more, and for the space of five minutes everybody at the table seemed to be signing at the same time. There was no weightiness about it; there were no stern and solemn looks; it seemed as if a number of friends were formally, but not too formally, ratifying their friendship.

Those who were not signing for the moment were laughing and having little exchanges of "talk" across the table, and M. Briand shook a finger in mock reproach of Dr. Stresemann. Signor Scialoja used a quill, and so did M. Vandervelde. Dr. Benes produced a gold fountain-pen. But the velvet-leather with which Sir Austen Chamberlain signed was the one brilliant item. It flashed and shone across the room as he wrote.

Mr. Baldwin, who had been looking delighted and a little awkward at once in the truest fashion, read the text a moment before he put one of the firmest "Stanley Baldwins" of his career on the sheet.

His signature was sealed with his coat-of-arms; that of Sir Austen Chamberlain with his crest. The Continental signatories of the main treaty used initial seals.

M. Briand's Fine Speech. And that, when all was over, came that speech of M. Briand for which everyone had been waiting. A fine speech, in that voice he modulates as no organist ever modulated an organ. One phrase of it touched everyone. "This is the most important and the most moving act of my life... but nothing about it has involved me more than the few words written me by an unknown woman, a woman lost amid the masses of the people, who has written saying that at last she will be able to look on her children without fear and love them with some security."

Dr. Stresemann, who followed, spoke in German. He said again and again: "Zusammen Arbeit! Zusammen Arbeit!" ("Work together! Work together!") "He made a powerful plea for Europe as a whole, (intended in its premier position by the war losses of all its countries. He spoke of "our Continent," a phrase that falls with the newness of Locarno itself on the ear.

He and M. Briand put the idea of a unified Europe forward in their speeches, both of which deserve the closest study. Dr. Stresemann's hand trembled as he spoke. "Uniform inspiration, indeed, seemed to run through the speeches which followed from all delegates, and towards the end of the ceremony crept into it a note of solemnity. Mr. Baldwin spoke in English, a short speech in the spirit of a covenant, and, as he finished, he stayed a few moments with his head bowed in recollection over his clasped hands.

The super Bacon—Wilson's certified.—dec19,25

Fine Feature at the Majestic. At the Majestic Theatre, last night, a series of features were thoroughly enjoyed by the large number present. "Let Not Man Put Asunder" is a splendid entertainment and leaves in its wake many points for serious minded people to think about. The production is lavishly staged and in its direction shows an attention to detail and continuity which probably cause it to be ranked as the best production J. Stuart Blackton has yet given to the screen.

Strong drawing power is added to the picture by the two principals, Pauline Frederick and Lou Tellegen, and both are cast in parts which allow full play of their exceptional talents.

The supporting cast is excellent. Leslie Austen, as Harry Vassal, the rich young Bostonian husband about whose marital troubles a large portion of the plot revolves, deserves special mention.

Hope and Minton also added to the programme with a number of popular musical hits.

The second chapter of the Pathé serial "Ten Scars Make a Man," was also shown.

The New Hotel

(H. F. SHORTIS)

One of the principal attractions for all hotels is the special pictures and scenes painted on the walls. In the Old Country it is generally some celebrated oil painting by some well-known artist. Sometimes it is a hunting scene or special attraction of the neighborhood. Sometimes it is some famous old tapestry handed down for generations from some monastery, depicting scenes from the Bible, or some historic legend of bygone days. When you visit the principal hotels of New York you will find the walls of the main entrance or reception rooms decorated with some historic scenes of George Washington, such as the crossing of the Delaware on a stormy day in mid-winter and stealing a march on their English rivals. Possibly it is a scene of Bunker Hill or the famous "Tea Party of Boston," all masked to disguise their identity, but one of the great events which started the American Rebellion.

You will find others where William Penn is making a treaty with the Indians, which led to the founding of Pennsylvania.

I mention these scenes which are well known to all of our travellers, and it certainly is a delightful way for visitors to spend an hour in the evening, and a store of information of the early history of the country. I have said it many a time and it is only too true, that a country which is not proud of its history can never engender patriotism in its inhabitants. If we want Newfoundland to progress we must teach our children the past history of our country in a very much better method than we are doing to-day.

I have started this article with reference to interior decorations of English and American hotels, and I make a suggestion here that we must put our best foot forward with regard to the interior decorations of Fort William Hotel. I do not altogether agree with the beautiful picture of John Cabot's voyage the "Matthew" entering St. John's, June 24th, 1497. The artist makes use of that beautiful view of the Narrows, but for my part I hold to the old tradition that Cape Bonavista was the Landfall.

A splendid picture could be made of Sir Humphrey Gilbert nailing the piece of lead with the inscription of the British Coat of Arms to the pillar on the hill opposite King's Beach. The tent that he erected is near by, and the spade is ready to lift the turf, establishing possession of the country. What a magnificent view it would make of Sir Humphrey's four ships, with Royal flags, and the 36 ships of British and other nationalities anchored in the harbor on that 5th of August, 1583! One of the spectators would be Sir Richard Whitbourne, the Father of Newfoundland Literature, who tells us he was present on that memorable occasion. That was the very start and foundation of the British Empire Beyond the Seas, and would be an inspiration for all our visitors. It would show them in a realistic manner what an important place our City of St. John's is. The proclamation of Sir Humphrey is the charter of the very oldest city in America. It ante dates the founding of Jamestown in Virginia by about twenty years, and shows how the boys of his day followed in his footsteps.

Another picture I would like to see is the personal attack of D'Iberville, with his nine boats, on Carbonar Island. D'Iberville is called by many the "Greatest Canadian," and he certainly was a most remarkable man, and brought disaster to many an English fort and battleship in Hudson's Bay; but he met his Waterloo with our fishermen, Pynn and Davis, and their noble 200-ton "Conception Bay."

What a stirring picture it would be to see these boats attempting to land at the Rock Beach, and Nicholas Poddie's ancestor, with that heavy Welsh sword, that I now have for safe keeping in the Museum, beating down the only man who managed to land on Carbonar Island.

There are many pictures that can be drawn to illustrate our early history, but here is another that we must have to show our cousins and visitors from Australia and New Zealand, as they are so proud of that great sailor, Captain James Cook, who founded and took possession of these great lands in the antipodes, and which are the foundations of British rule and progress in the Pacific.

A picture of Captain Cook must be shown taking an observation of the sun on Eclipse Island, off Burgeo harbor. Captain Cook was following Governor Phillips's instructions in charting our Newfoundland coast, but he also knew that the British Government had sent an expedition under the auspices of the British Geographical Society to take important observations of a total eclipse of the sun that would occur on that date in distant lands.

Captain Cook was utterly unknown at that time, except to a few, as a skilful pilot, but he induced an English paper to publish these observations that he took of Burgeo, and they were so exact and successful that they attracted the attention of the principal scientific authorities, and when another scientific expedition was arranged a couple of years later, he was selected as the best man for that important work. How he carried it out and immortalized his name is well known, and we should be proud to show our Pacific Ocean cousins what they have to thank Newfoundland for before their wonderful countries were ever thought of.

Now is the time to make preparations for historic decorations of our New Hotel, and with an engraving outside of Fort William, such as I suggested in a recent letter to the Telegram, and the historic views that we are proud of decorating the walls of the reception rooms, we will have something that we can show our tourist friends that cannot be equalled in any other country, and will teach them Newfoundland History that led to most important events in the history of our Empire.

An Ape-Hunter's Thrills

Catching Them With His Hands! When apes meet an enemy, they proceed to rush him—it's the only possible word to use! The ape settles his head down between the legs, to have the face safe from unexpected onslaught. He dashes forward, and with never an error, strikes at that enemy between the legs—brings him to earth—and on that instant, clasps those legs in his powerful grip and the foe is powerless to escape.

Except for the coil of the boa-constrictor, I know of nothing that is able to hold down so large an enemy or that can be brought into action quite so fast (writes C. S. Charles, a famous big-game hunter, in "Success"). Our party of natives, spurred on by promises of petty rewards for finding "starting"—the big game, eagerly set out on the trail. Striking a trace, the blacks track this down until absolutely certain that their game is there.

They call to their mates—these surround the place. The ape is driven "down" from his refuge into the open, and then held at bay.

The Great Moment.

You've come ten thousand miles and more to find just what the besters call is coming!

Now it's there—a big black gorilla! On the two months it has taken from the coast to where the gorilla is found, you agreed who should take this first one—who the next. This is done to prevent any misunderstanding in tactics at this time; where one wishes to take animals alive, and unharmed, there isn't a moment to lose.

Four hundred pounds of ape—stupidly strong and incredibly shrewd—is being pitted against me. I must match my mind—my brain strength—my only defence, here—against his brute strength.

I keep a pair of strong, supple gloves for this purpose, and with word of the game they're on my hand in a trice.

Saved by Gloves.

The ape at bay—so to speak—settles as an arrow I make at him. I seize the big creature's arms. Captive—that instant the ape seeks to bite me—bite me where he can, rest assured; and the arms seem to him the likeliest place. He has never before experienced such things as tooth-proof gloves of any sort. They bamme him—they puzzle him—they add to his confusion at this strange type of attack.

I must make him realize that I am master. So, while I hold him by those arms, I give each arm a twist. I never hurt an animal more than it is necessary.

The gorilla screams wildly—it does what it can to get free. By that time my associates, the besters, have come up.

Over and over, of evenings, round the camp-fire, we have drilled every-one concerned as to what to do just then. Not a single minute movement towards taking the prey captive—alive, unharmed—has been omitted in the rehearsals we staged.

Skill That Defeats Force.

Here—there; here—there—a rope is deftly clipped and fastened. Here a pull—there a pull; here, again—a quick looping and a drawing. Except as absolutely necessary to bring the animal to move some part so that the ropes may be made taut, I do not continue my combat with the captive any more. Human skill has captured the gorilla—human skill will overcome his brute force and hold him captive to the end.

Even the largest, most intelligent specimen of the big apes becomes as a child before the play of skill of just the average intelligence of human kind.

Our gorilla is captive now—by and by, realizing how futile further attempts to escape must be, he becomes at least partly submissive.

We use this opportunity to release certain ropes; remove, or adjust, and again, to tie certain others. Binding the animal's arms properly, binding the legs properly, one prevents his

SPECIAL NOTICE TO MR. O'TOOLE

Now Mr. O'Toole if you will meet me in a strength contest, with a five hundred dollar side bet, one thousand dollars and eighty per cent. of the gate receipts, will be the winner's purse, the loser will not receive anything; twenty per cent. for promoting. I will then meet you for a wrestling bout, with a five hundred dollar side bet, or more money, then will meet you again for a twelve three minute round professional boxing bout with a side bet of five hundred dollars. Although I have not done any wrestling, at all in the ring, and don't profess that I can wrestle; but after you meet me in a strength contest, I will be pleased to meet you on the mat. Now when you called to see me at my office, about a month ago and asked me to wrestle you at the Star Theatre, I told you I took no part in wrestling and had been working long hours in my office and had no time for training; your answer was that you did not mind the people; it was the money you were after. Now if you want money I am offering you a good chance to make a few thousand dollars. Come along with your five hundred dollars and we will start the ball rolling. I have no time to fool with small things; money talks. My profession here at my office is now bringing me an income of about three hundred dollars per week; I have over three hundred pupils, so you see I have a few hundred dollars to put up for this sport, and of course I will not lose it. Are you ready? Lose no time. I will not look for you if you will not come across with the money. I have it right with me.

Special notice to all who wish to enroll for my course: Before calling at my office to enroll, to save you from waiting, you can make an appointment by Phone 2148, or by mail. PROFESSOR W. SEELEY. Office: Renouf Building, dec15, 11 P. O. Box 1302.

German Trade Gloom

1,164 BANKRUPTS IN A MONTH.

The first act of Dr. Luther, the German Chancellor, when he returns from London to Berlin to-morrow will be to hand to the President the resignation of the whole Cabinet.

Meanwhile the industrial outlook is exceedingly gloomy. "In the last 24 days," says the "Tag," "the industrial crisis has developed to such an extent that there are grounds for the worst fears," and declares that the dismissal of hundreds of thousands of workmen, a great increase of bankruptcies, and general stoppage of work show that Germany is face to face with a catastrophe.

In point of fact, 3,500 firms, including 147 in Berlin alone, had to close down in the third quarter of this year.

In October the number of bankruptcies was 1,164, including 62 in Berlin, and, in addition, 633 firms were placed under the control of their creditors.

The gloom on the Stock Exchange was increased by the news from London of an increase in the British Bank rate from 4 to 5 per cent.

OTTAWA—An invitation is to be extended to Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Amery, and Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister to be the guests of the newly established Dominion Board of Trade at public functions at the end of January and to deliver addresses at different places in Canada with a view to developing a plan for the encouragement of inter-imperial trade.

Mr. Mackenzie King, the Canadian Premier, promised to endorse the invitation, though he felt there were difficulties in the way of an official Governmental suggestion in this respect.—Reuter.

Mr. Gotes on Trade Route Protection

Discussing the recently signed Locarno Treaties, Mr. Gotes, the Prime Minister of New Zealand, said that the reason for armaments might eventually disappear, but, until that ideal was reached, it was the duty of New Zealanders to see that at least their trade routes were protected.

People, he added, should not be misled by any false sense of security. Trade routes must be protected until every nation had agreed upon peace and had concurred in the Pact just signed.

Identity was established by policeman John J. Meahan, a friend of Siki's, who found the body.

An examination of Siki's body showed that he had been shot twice from the rear. One of the bullets had penetrated the pugilist's left lung and another had lodged in the kidneys.

Siki's wife was notified and she went to the police station where she identified the body as that of her husband.

Battling Siki, who came into the limelight when he won the world's light-heavyweight championship from Georges Carpentier in 1922, in Paris, has had many escapades which frequently resulted in brawls.

Since his arrival in the United States, he has been injured several times in street fights and spent some time recently in the French Hospital as the result of a knife wound.

Before his defeat by McTigue, his record showed two defeats in 44 bouts, one setback at the hands of Jean Andouy, in 1914, and the other by Tom Berry, in 1920.

Siki started professional boxing in 1913, but engaged in but a few contests before the outbreak of the World War, in which he served with French colonial forces.

He was engaged in a number of bouts, in several of which the decision went against him. He was born in Senegal in 1897.

The Mad Craze of Fashion. WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. (Women's Page)—Modern fashions are following the line of least resistance, while the fear of social ostracism compels many women to adopt foolish customs or wear clothing often immodest and vulgar, declared Rev. G. A. Wells, warden of St. John's College, Winnipeg in the course of a lecture.

"A new way of dressing your hair and not 'dressing' yourself usually started by some actress with a daring reputation and no particular character, is often the origin of fashion," Mr. Wells said.

Since his arrival in the United States, in 1923, after losing his title at the hands of Mike McTigue, in Dublin, he has engaged in many bouts but without notable success.

Hudson's Bay Co. Resent Author's Suggestions. LEGAL PROCEEDINGS TAKEN AGAINST ERRING WRITERS.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 10—Aroused by what they regard as an unjustifiable slur upon the name of the historic company and its pioneer employees, the governor and committee of the Hudson's Bay Company have issued a warning to writers of Northland fiction that liberties with the name of the company will not be tolerated in the future.

In a letter sent to Prof. W. T. Allison, president of the Canadian Authors' Association, J. Chadwick Brooks, secretary of the company in Winnipeg, states that he has been placed on H. B. Co. villians and that offending authors will be sued for libel.

The official reconstruction of the executive officers, as expressed in the communication, is as follows: "The attention of the governor and committee of Hudson's Bay Company has been drawn to numerous publications of popular fiction in which references are made to alleged methods employed by the company in its fur trading business.

In many cases also it is implied that reprehensible actions on the part of the company's employees are instigated or condoned by the company.

These statements are misrepresentative, and are distinctly derogatory of the company.

While it was felt that an isolated instance might be ignored, the statements have become so common that it was evident that the company's name and reputation might be injured.

The governor and committee therefore decided that in all cases where statements are published which by implication or otherwise libel the company, legal action should be taken against the authors and publishers.

In several instances action has been taken as a result of which apologies have been tendered and the books withdrawn from further sale.

It is probable that in some instances authors write fiction without fully appreciating the import of some of the statements and references made therein, and they thus unwittingly become liable to suffer loss if the publication has to be discontinued on account of libellous passages.

In these circumstances we have thought it advisable to announce that the governor and committee feel obliged to protect the company's name and reputation in the manner mentioned."
