The Divine Sisterheed.

The Hospital of St. John the Divine in Major-street is doing a Christ-like work in ministering to sick and aged women and caring for children. Its dormitories are all filled, the dispensary has been opened, the out-patients are numerous, and in the mission hall young girls are taught needlework as well as Christian truth.

The Sisters of St. John the Divine are assiduous in their attention to the sick, destitute and afflicted, and since the erection of the hospital their services have been very efficient. Formerly they minstered in a small building in Euclid-avenue.

In furtherance of their work there was a gathering of ladies, principally of the Anglican Church, in the Hospital yesterday. The chief subject discussed was the holding of a sale of work in Easter week in aid of the institution. Gratification was expressed at the good work being carried on, particulars of which were given by the lady superior.
