Fisheries Make a new Record

Canada's fisheries have made a new record with a total output of $29,628,129. For purposes of comparison it may be stated that the total potato crop of the Dominion for the past year has been valued at $33,446,000 and the total crop of turnips and other roots made an aggregate of $21,444,000. This shows the importance of the fisheries as a source of food. The aggregate product of the fisheries is in value $4,178,084 above the total for last year and $149,607 above the yield of 1905, the greatest previous total. Last year Nova Scotia led the Provinces with a total of 8,009,338. Lobsters led the record for the Province with a total value of $2,154,494, and codfish came next in importance with a total value of $1,953,000. The mackerel catch was valued at $1,930,000, and the herring catch at $600,000. British Columbia was second among the Provinces with a total catch of $6,456,038, and of this the salmon fisheries yielded $4,287,590. New Brunswick was third with a total yield of $4,754,298. The lobster fisheries were the most important, with a total catch of $902,575, herring being the next in aggregate with a total of $823,731. Ontario made a record of $2,100,078 with trout, whitefish and herring leading in aggregate amounts. Quebec had a total catch of $1,881,817, of which close on half was from the cod fisheries, while Prince Edward Island with a total of $1,378,624, derived close on a million from lobsters.

The aggregates for the whole Dominion last year showed the salmon fisheries the most important with a total yield of $4,814,250, the lobster fisheries next with a total of $4,200,279, the cod fisheries third, their yield being $3,361,409, and the herring fisheries fourth with a total of $2,471,963. The increase in the past year was chiefly in the catch of salmon, which made a total of $8,204,523, and it has brought British Columbia to the foremost place with a total yield of $10,314,755. Nova Scotia is second with a total of $8,081,111, a slight advance on the previous year. The report for the past year shows the benefits of the Government's policy of assisting the shipping of fish inland from the coasts. Canadian fresh fish have almost entirely supplanted American in the Canadian interior markets. The new record shows that the Government is fully alive to the needs and the importance of this food-producing industry.—Globe.

To Keep the Hair Light and Fluffy

(From Chicago Inter Ocean.)

The proper care of the hair does not require a woman to scour her scalp with soap and drench her hair with water until a shampoo, including drying the hair, takes the better part of the day. In fact, authorities say that the less soap and water used on the hair the better, as the alkali and moisture tend to make the hair coarse, dull and brittle.

If you want to keep the scalp clean and the hair light and fluffy, try dry shampooing. Put in a quart jar, or any other handy container, four ounces of powdered orris root and four ounces of terebinth. Stir and shake until thoroughly mixed. A beautiful cleansing powder with a delicate perfume will be the result.

Sprinkle a teaspoonful of this mixture on the head and then brush it well through the hair. This brings out the natural color of the hair, makes it soft and glossy, and if continued regularly, tends to make the hair long and abundant for it is a natural hair grower.

Cleaning Windows

In cleaning the windows, rub them with a cloth dipped in a thin mixture of whiting and ammonia, let them dry, and then polish with a soft dry cloth. Don't use soap, as it streaks them.

How to Preserve a Husband

Be careful in your selection of a husband. Do not choose too young, an immature man. Such varieties as have been reared in a good, moral atmosphere. When once decided upon and selected let the part remain forever set. Do not give your entire thought to preparation for domestic use. See to it on keeping them in pickle while others are constantly kept in them in hot water. Even poor varieties may be made sweet, tender and good by garnishing them with pickled well sweetened with smiles and warmed with kisses to taste; then also in a mantle of charity, keep warm with a steady fire of domestic devotion and serve with peaches and cream. When thus preserved they will keep for years.

What he Didn't Know

A well known United States Senator is credited with this regarding a notorious financier: "He got rather a set back in a talk he had last session with one of his auditors. Money? he said. 'Bah! There are thousands of ways of making money.' Yes, but only one honest way, our man remarked. 'What way's that?' 'I thought you wouldn't know it,' was the reply."—Christian Register.

According to Senor Lopez Leiva, who recently resigned the office of Home Secretary in the cabinet of President Gomez of Cuba to become the representative of the government in the new Land and Mortgage Bank, in Havana, the Cuban sugar crop will probably reach 1,300,000 tons and the planters expect to get an even higher price this year than they received last year. He added that the tobacco crop was not injured by the recent cyclone that swept over Cuba, as the crop had not yet been plaited. With elections out of the way and good crops coming, Cuba faces the future with confidence.

A forward step for the regulation of corporations has been taken at Washington, President Taft having signed rules drawn up by the Treasury department providing for the publicity of the affairs of these bodies. It is provided that the return of every corporation shall be open to the inspection of the officials of the Treasury department, with a proviso that under certain conditions officials in all other departments of the government shall have a similar privilege. The returns are also available to any bona fide stockholder of the corporation whose returns it is desired to inspect on written application to inspect the returns of all companies whose stock is listed on any recognized stock exchange and all corporations whose stock is advertised in the press, or offered to the public by the corporation itself for sale. The corporations are expected to strongly oppose these rules, but the only chance of setting them aside is through a decision of the Supreme Court declaring the Corporation Tax law unconstitutional in the test suits now pending.—Exchange.

Two young lovers in a good-night embrace in the entrance hall were surprised by the girl's elder sister coming in.

"We were seeing which is the taller," the young man explained in some confusion.

"You are about ten inches taller than Edith," said the sister, "and she is at least ten shades redder than you."—Everybody's.

Well, Silas, did you enjoy your trip to London? What did you find there?
"Why, something 'wuth seein'." The hall place is full o' cabs with cash registers on 'em, an' red flags to show folks it's dangerous to dispute the fare. They call 'em taxiderny cabs, 'cause if you don't mind the drivers' 'll just take the skin off ye."—Tit-Bits.

Old Oak Tree in England

(London Telegraph.)

A correspondent having written to Mr. Harcourt, First Commissioner of Her Majesty's Office of Works, suggesting that for its proper protection a suitable fence should be placed around the famous old oak tree in Hampton Court Park, has received a reply, in which the right honorable gentleman says: This famous old oak tree, in which you are so anxious to take an interest, is especially under the care of the keepers and the staff of the park, who have strict instructions from Mr. Harcourt as to its preservation and protection.

Betrayed Themselves

A lady who had but small means, yet always assumed an air of great dignity and grandeur, once invited some distinguished guests to dine at her house. As she employed neither butler nor footman, she told the groom and gardener to wait at table in order that her friends might think she kept a large establishment.

In spite of his strict injunctions to correct behaviour, the groom unwittingly betrayed his identity in a very amusing manner.

A shape of blanc mange, which he was handling to a lady, happening to oscillate considerably, was the peculiar custom of such dishes—our unwary friend of the stables abruptly startled the company by a loud "whoa!"

The gardener fared no better. He was about to hand some potatoes to Lady X and evidently thought it was necessary to say something when doing so; for, not being acquainted with her ladyship, and having only heard his mistress call her by her Christian name, Sir—he blurted out, after some hesitation, "Gardens, Sarah?"

The utter dismay of the aspiring hostess was a sight never to be forgotten.

Would Bring new Settlers to New Brunswick

A colonization scheme, which, if carried out, will prove of value to the province, has been outlined in a letter to Premier Hazen by Messrs. William Thompson and Company, St. John. The government is asked to grant to a company that would be formed for the purpose a section of 1,000 acres of crown land in the vicinity of Ormoco. The company would divide it into farms of fifty acres each, erect farm buildings on each, clear the land and put in the first crop. To secure settlers they would send a lecturer to Great Britain with moving pictures and ample information regarding the agriculture of the province. Easy terms of payment would be arranged, the farm work would all be carried on under the supervision of the company's superintendent in order to secure the best results and the settlers would be given the opportunity to hire machinery, etc., at low rates. It is understood that Messrs. H. and A. Allan are also interested in the project.

Premier Hazen said yesterday that the proposition would be laid before the local government at its next meeting.

A Valuable Discovery

(The Academy, London.)

Time, which discloses much that was hidden, has recently brought to light a map which cannot fail to be of interest to all Englishmen and Americans. It also brings out into the light another secret of Catharine de' Medici, the great French Queen. The map was only discovered a few weeks ago, in the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris, and represents, under date of 1584, the New World, both North and South America, as French colonies. The happy discoverer is M. Charles de la Ronciere, who explains this forgotten, if ever known page of history as follows:—

"Two French Viceroys had been named to occupy and govern the Americas. Of these Troilus de Magonza, the favorite of the Queen was ordered to retake North America abandoned since the days of Cartier. In regard to South America, Queen Catharine certainly planned to seize Brazil in the confusion caused by the Portuguese troubles of the time. I think these plans of empire are plainly revealed by three documents which have recently come into our hands. The first is a map of Brazil belonging to our collection and dedicated to Strozz, Upon it is a mark with this significant explanation on the margin: Here is the best point from which to attract Rio de Janeiro in the rear. The second is a commission as Lieutenant General given by the Queen to Strozz for the conquest of country which neither the Queen nor the King wish to have named. The third is an autograph letter of Catharine to Strozz enjoining him to take Brazil after having restored the Azores to Dom Antonio of Portugal.

History relates that Strozz started upon his mission, the secret of which is only now revealed, with a fleet of seventy five sail, but was defeated and killed off the Azores. Meegomez was wrecked, and all traces of Queen Catharine's dream of a transatlantic empire would have disappeared but for the tell tale map and other documents, which can now be seen in the archives of the French national library.

Is Female Conscience Waking?

(Haverhill Gazette.)

Society women are reported to be taking up the latest Parisian fad of carrying dolls instead of dogs. Courageous optimists see in this fad the possibility of a return to the old-fashioned popularity of babies. They argue that, while a doll isn't a baby, it is that when the fad passes away and the women come to their senses the next step will naturally be to substitute a real child, their own or a borrowed one, to fill the gap in their lives. Why a wholesome minded woman should prefer a dog or a doll to a child passes understanding. It will be a blessed day for this old world when maternity shall again be as exalted as it was in the patriarchal times. Maybe the step from dogs to dolls is the indication of an awakening conscience.

St. Paul's cross, the famous preaching cross which stood beside St. Paul's Cathedral in London for 400 years, until it was torn down by order of the Long Parliament in 1643, is once more restored by private bequest. A graceful Doric column 23 feet high, surmounted by a bronze statue of the apostle bearing aloft a cross. There is also a raised platform which, as in bygone days, there may be outdoor preaching. The old cross was the centre of the stirring life of medieval London. Papal bulls and royal proclamations were read from it, noxious criminals received punishment there, Tyndale's translation of the Bible was burned in front of it, and all the famous preachers of the church up to the time of the civil war between king and Parliament pleaded or thundered from its pulpit.

Find Vast Forest of Rubber Trees

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 3.-After a search of eighteen months Professor John R. Allen, of the University of Michigan and two assistants have located in the interior of Mexico a forest of rubber trees, the product of which is of remarkable quality. The first intimation of the forest's existence came when a traveler reported that native Indian children gathered at a gum which, when squeezed into spherical shape, had the appearance and much of the resilience of a rubber ball.

After locating the trees and roughly defining the boundaries of the mysterious forest, the party obtained concessions from the Mexican government for 800,000 acres of land timbered with the trees and a promise of still more land, and today they have a gum which London experts have pronounced to be the nearest approach to the celebrated Para rubber that has so far been put on the market. London dealers have said to have offered to buy all the gum these prospectors can put on the market. Londoners pay seventy-five cents a pound. The product costs seventeen cents a pound to deliver in New York city. When the Hiramian lines are completed into Mexico they will run within sixty miles of this track of land and the cost of transporting the product to New York will be considerably less.

The gum comes from a tree that had never been classified botanically nor exploited commercially. The tree belongs to the nettle family, having the appearance of the horse chestnut. The leaves and fruit cannot be handled with the bare hands, as the nettles burn the skin like a hot iron.

The tree may be tapped five days in succession and then must be allowed to rest for three months. When tapped the tree oozes a milky substance which coagulates when exposed to the air. All that is needed to prepare this gum ready for market is to wash it.

Samples of the new rubber were milled and the finished rubber vulcanized. The product shows excellent strength, although its resilience is not as great as that of Para rubber, due to an excess of resin. It has been found, however, that the product can be put through a desirous process at the cost of three cents a pound.

Kaiser and the Ladies

(London Standard.)

In the now famous speech of the German emperor at Konigsberg where he proclaimed himself king by Divine right and as "considering myself an instrument of the Lord, without heeding the views and opinions of the day," he also administered a slap to the suffragettes. Speaking of Queen Louise, the great spouse of the Russian king of Bonaparte's era, he said:

"What does the noble figure of Queen Louise teach? It teaches us that, just as she once filled her sons before all things with the one desire to restore the national honor and to defend the Fatherland, so we men must cultivate all the military virtues; just as in the time of the country's recovery young and old hastened to give the utmost of their possessions, just as women and girls spared not even their hair, so we, too, must be always ready, in order that we may before all things keep our armaments in a state of perfection, in view of the vast progress which neighboring powers have made. For upon our arnaments alone does our peace rest. And what shall our women learn from the Queen? They must learn that the principal task of the German woman does not lie in attending public meetings and belonging to societies, in the attainment of supposed rights in which women can emulate men, but in the quiet work of the home and in the family. They must educate the young generation before all things to obedience and to respect for age. They must impress upon their children's children that today the principal thing is not to live one's life at the expense of others, not to attain one's end at the cost of the Fatherland, but solely and alone to keep the Fatherland before one's eyes, solely and alone to stake all the powers of mind and body upon the good of the Fatherland."

Teaching Children Self-Control

It was a pleasure to witness, not long ago in a neighbor's child, the working out of the theory of rewarding goodness instead of punishing badness in children. Little Margaret, of ten, was a girl of unusual brightness, but her quick, sharp tongue brought her many troubles.

Whippings she accepted as her natural birthright, but they left her no nearer self-control. At last the mother was taken ill, and a nurse of wide experience came into the home. The case of Margaret was one of her duties, and as she watched her day by day she felt a pity for the child.

So the nurse studied Margaret, and she found a point of vantage. Margaret had a wonderful love of stories, and was never so happy as when listening to the recital of one. Here was her chance. A story was promised to Margaret every night at bedtime, provided she had not given way to her temper during the day, and the rule was strictly adhered to. At first, of course, there were many nights of no story telling. But with the help of the wise nurse little Margaret guarded her tongue more and more, until after a few months she seldom missed a story, and was herself proud of the victory.

Canadian Bacon

The Canadian Commissioner of Trade at Birmingham, Mr. P. B. McNamara, directs particular attention to the great falling off in the import of Canadian bacon into England. In the nine months ending June 30, 1908, the quantity was 518,770 hundred weights, of the value of £1,343,178 sterling. In the same period in the year 1910 the quantity was only

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proven strength, from the roots of native American medicinal forest plants. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

285,554 hundred weights, of the value of £1,007,477 sterling. Proportionately the falling off in quantity and value in the same periods was about the same from the United States. The fact of the matter appears to be that Denmark is able to hold her own in the production of bacon for the English market against all other countries, although both Dutch and Russian bacon are getting in to some extent. Denmark has an advantage in nearness to the consumers, and can keep her product in more easily and in better condition. The foreign competition has greatly stimulated the English producer to improve his product; and the English have been able to sell cheaper than the Canadians. In the nine months ending June 30, 1908, the United States sent to the United Kingdom 2,50,541 hundred weights of bacon, while in the same period of 1910 it sent only 1,306,283 hundred weights, so that the falling off is not only in the Canadian article. The whole import is steadily falling, which shows that the home producer has been supplanted by the foreign competition to make a better article and to sell it at reasonable prices.--St. J. Globe.

Knapsacks for Boy Scouts

Perhaps the most important article in the scout's outfit is his knapsack. This isn't a knapsack at all, strictly speaking, but a small edition of the pack sack in which the hardy scouts of the northern woods and western mountains carry their supplies.

A good cruiser—that's what a scout in the north woods is called—can carry 80 pounds in his pack sack and walk long distances every day. You may be sure that the pack which these men have learned from long experience is the best for their hard rough work, is the best devised for carrying things with the least labor.

The straps which hold it on are fastened to the pack sack at the middle of its top, and run slanting over the shoulders and down to the lower corners of the sack again. The straps do not close over the chest, but go directly down to the pack again.

You can make such a pack sack of just the right size for your purposes by taking one of the old haversacks on sale at every sporting goods store, ripping off the strap which is fastened to the upper corners to be worn over one shoulder—a very poor way to carry a heavy weight. Make the left hand loop solid and sew the buckle end of the strap at the lower right hand corner of the pack. Then, when it is full, you can slip your left shoulder into the loop and finish putting it on by pulling the right hand strap over your right shoulder, and buckling it to the lower right-hand corner of the sack.

If you can't find the haversack ready made you can make one for yourself, with a little help from your mother, out of brown canvas or even out of a heavy canvas grain sack.

The first qualification of scout is to be able to do things for himself and to make the things he needs instead of buying them ready made. So the scout with a home made pack sack is really a better scout than the one with a sack he bought. If you must buy a sack, buy it with money you earned yourself.

The Queen's Gift.

Many pretty stories have already been told of Queen Mary's kindness of heart, and the latest to hand is a very charming one. A young married woman, who recently arrived at Bridlington with her baby, found herself in very distressing circumstances, and, in her want and perplexity, she wrote a letter to Her Majesty, telling her of her sad and needy position. The Queen promptly had the matter investigated, and it was proved to be genuine case, deserving assistance. Then the Queen sent some money to a trustworthy person to be expended in relieving the woman's distress, and thus rescued her from her sorrowful plight by wise and timely aid. Those who know how royal ladies are inundated with application for pecuniary help will appreciate the mingled good sense and generosity with which the case was dealt.

The Nurses' Reward!

It is Lady Roberts who tells this story: She was once visiting the hospitals at the base of operations in India, and was so pleased with the nurses' work and their devotion to the sick, that she exclaimed: "Really, I think the sisters deserve a medal for this campaign as much as any one and I hope they will get one." "I don't know about a medal," said a gallant colonel, who was in attendance, "but they are sure, at all events, to get plenty of claps."

Wife of a Pullman Porter Says So, and Gets Allimony.

(New York Tribune)

From the affidavit of Mrs. Rebecca E. Wilkinson in her motion for allimony in a suit for separation from her husband, George D. Wilkinson, it appears that about the best paying business for a negro who can't be a pugilist is a pullman car porter's job. Wilkinson has such a job with the New York Central and his wife says that besides his wages of $40 a month he makes $300 a month more in tips.

Wilkinson works on the buffet car of one of the trains running between this city and Montreal. He makes fifteen trips each month, and Mrs. Wilkinson figures out that on each trip he receives $20 in tips.

The wife charged her husband with cruelty. The husband says that when he married his wife she already was the wife of Charles Gibbs, which Mrs. Wilkinson explains by declaring her first husband had married one Eliza Cook, and that she supposed it was all right to go ahead and marry Wilkinson.

Wilkinson is denying the story about the large tips and that he did not make more than $25 a month that was. Justice S-burny allowed the wife $8 a week allimony.

The French column was attacked by 5,000 natives on Nov. 9, and the fighting lasted for an hour and a half, when the enemy was routed leaving 600 dead and many wounded on the field.

The French lost six officers and twenty-eight tirailleurs killed and one officer and three subalterns and sixty-nine tirailleurs wounded. The Sultan of Massalit and Dondmourah and a former Sultan of Ouaisi were killed.—Exchange.

Lame Back

Just the Sort of Case That Proves to the World That the Best Liniment Ever Made is NERVILINE.

When it comes to determining the real merit of a medicine, no weight of evidence is more convincing than the straightforward statement of some reliable and well known person that has been cured. For this reason we print the verbatim statement of Juan E. Powell, written from his home in Carleton. "I am a strong, powerful man, six feet tall and weigh nearly two hundred. I have been accustomed all my life to lift great weight, but one day I overdid it, and wrenched my back badly. Every tendon and muscle was sore. To stoop or bend was agony. I had a whole bottle of Nervi-line rubbed on in one day, and by one night I was well again. I know of no liniment possessing one-half the penetration of Nervi-line. I urge its use strongly as an invaluable liniment and household cure for all minor ailments such as strains, sprains, swellings, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago and muscular pain."

No better medicine for ever curing pain was ever put in a bottle than Nervi-line, over one million bottles used every year, better try it yourself. At all dealers or the Catarhazone Company, Kingston, Ont.

The civil war in the United States was brought to an end in 1865, yet last year there were added to the pension roll of the country over nine thousand widows of soldiers who took part in the suppression of the rebellion. The total number of widows on the lists is over two hundred and twenty thousand. The soldiers and sailors who draw pensions because they fought in the war which ended forty-five years ago number over six hundred thousand. From the standpoint of longevity that alone is remarkable. Small as was the army required in the Spanish-American war, the United States is now paying yearly over thirty million dollars to the veterans and dependents. There is no doubt of the generosity of the great republic.

The "Red"

One of the most curious and fast known social institutions in London has just, after a somewhat troubled career extending over ten years, ceased to exist. The institution known as the "Red," was a club for aristocrats fallen on evil days, and it contained among its members an earl, a viscount, several baronets, a gentleman who had once been attached to Queen Victoria's household, and many service men, among the latter being a guardsman, who, in his youth, was one of the best known men about town, and who got through two large fortunes. The "Red" moved its quarters on several occasions, its last resting-place being one room in a quiet street in Chelsea.

The subscription was originally £115 a year, but this had been reduced to five shillings before the club closed its portals, the cause of its failure was simply the inability of some, and the reluctance of other, members to pay their subscriptions.

The rules and regulations of the most flourishing west-end clubs prevailed at the "Red," but that visitors.

Members had to settle their cards' accounts within twenty-four hours, just as they have at the turf and Marlborough, and this rule was, curiously enough, punctiliously observed at the "Red," even by those who either could not or would not, pay their subscriptions.

THE BARRIER

By Rex Beach

Copyright, 1906, by Harper & Brothers

The sound of shouting crashed into his ears as he turned to see a ragged range of hills topped with evening white. Beyond were other ranges thrust skyward in a magnificent confusion, while still to the farther side lay the purple valley of the Snytnik, a valley that called insistently to restless men, welcoming them in the spring and sending them back in the late summer tired and baggard with the hunger of the north.

"When will Polson get back, do you suppose?" "Most any day now, unless the Dawson stage has been too much for him. I won't take him long to sell our skins if what I hear is true." "What is that?" "About these Cheechakos. They say there are thousands of tenderfoot up there and more coming in every day." Gale turned his eyes downstream to the "baracks" and noted that the long line of tents had at last been erected. Even as he looked he saw a bundle of furs being carried toward the tents and then he heard the stars and stripes flutter out in the air, while the men below cheered and shouted. It was some time before he answered.

"Polson Dave is like the rest of us men up here in the north. We have taken care of ourselves so far, and I guess we're able to keep it up without the help of a smooth faced Yankee kid or guardian."

"Lieutenant Burrell isn't a Yankee," said Necla. "He is a Blue Grass man. He comes from Kentucky."

Her father grunted contemptuously. "I might have known it. A regular 'savy' man with any grincer in him would 'savy' his coat and go to work instead of wearing his clothes buttoned up all day. It don't take much 'savy' to run a handful of thirteen dollar a month soldiers." Necla stirred a bit restlessly, and the trader continued: "It ain't man's work; it's—hauling. If he tries to boss us he'll get quite a surprise."

"He won't try to boss you. He has been sent here to build a military post and to protect the miners in their own self government. He won't take any part in their affairs as long as they are conducted peacefully."

The old man grunted again, with added contempt, while his daughter continued: "I reckon Polson will bring you something pretty from Dawson, eh?" "He has never failed to bring me presents, no matter where he came from. Dear old Polson!" She smiled tenderly. "Do you remember that first day when he drifted, singing, into sight around the bend up yonder? He had paddled his birch bark from the Chandelar without a thing to eat. Hunger and hardship only made him the happier, and the closer he drew his belt the louder he sang."

"He was bound for his 'new country,'" "Yes, he didn't know where it lay, but the fro' for travel was on him, and so he drifted and sang, as he had drifted and sung from the foot of Lake Le Barge."

"That was four years ago," mused Gale, "and he never found his 'new country,' did he?" "No, we tied him down and choked it out of him," Necla laughed. "Dear, 'unny old Polson! He loves me like a brother."

"I dare say I am," he admitted. "I've never had time to find out. Why?" "Are you going to boss our people around?" she continued, bent on her investigation.

"No, not as long as they behave. In fact, I hardly know what I am to do."

"Lieutenant Burrell. Maybe you can tell me." His smile was peculiarly frank and winning. "You see, it's my first command, and my instructions, although comprehensive, are rather vague. I am supposed to see that mining rights are observed, to take any criminals who kindly offer themselves up to be arrested and to sort of handle things that are too tough for the miners themselves."

"I don't believe you will be very popular with our people," Necla announced meditatively. "Now that I think it over," he continued, "I'd rather have you like me than have the men do so."

"Of course," she nodded. "They do anything I want them to—all but father, and—"

"It isn't that," he interrupted quickly. "It is because you are the only woman of the place, because you are such a surprise. To think that in the heart of this desolation I should find a girl like—like you, like the girls I know at home."

"Am I like other girls?" she inquired eagerly. "I have often wondered." "You are, and you are not. You are surprisingly conventional for these surroundings and yet unconventionally surprising for any place. Who are you? Where did you come from? How did you get here?"

"I am just what you see. I came from the States, and I was carried. That is all I can remember."

"Then you haven't lived here always?" "Oh, dear, no! We came here while I was very little, but of late I have been away at school."

"Some seminary, eh?" At this she laughed aloud. "Hardly that, either. I've been at the mission. Father Barram has been teaching me for five years. I came up river a day ahead of you."

She asked no questions of him in return, for she had already learned all there was to know the day before.

"Mother needs me now. Goodby," from a grizzled corporal in whom was the hunger to talk. She had learned of a family of Burrells whose name was known throughout the south and that Meade Burrell came from the Frankfort branch, the branch that had raised the soldiers. His father had fought with Lee, and an uncle was now in the service at Washington. On the mother's side the strain was equally militant, but the Meades had sought the sea. The old soldier had told her much more, of which she understood little—told her of the young man's sister, who had come all the way from

WHO WANTS TO BE A BALL-HEAD?

Thousands of men are daily growing bald and don't know it.

Those persistent germs of dandruff often called the destructive agents of the devil, are in full possession of the future hair of thousands of Canadians.

They have wonderful endurance, these game little demons, they never stop work, they dig and dig and gnaw and gnaw night and day, day and night, with seemingly only one purpose in view, and that purpose to destroy the vitality of the hair and make us a race of baldheads.

What are you doing to protect yourself from the ravishing inroads of these almost unconquerable fiends.

There is only one way, kill the dandruff germ, or the dandruff germ will kill your hair. The quicker you start the quicker you will win the battle.

The only weapon you need is a bottle of Parisian Sage, the only hair preparation that spells death to the devilish dandruff germ.

Get a bottle today, J. Sutton Clark sells it and guarantees it for 50 cents to cure dandruff to cure in two weeks or money back. Direct charges prepaid for 50 cents, from Gironx Mfg. Co. Fort Erie, Ont.

Electric Hot-Water

Supply System

The utilization of household electric heating devices has greatly increased in the past few years, thanks to the convenience and safety of these apparatus and the interesting novelty of their employment. The one great drawback has been the cost of electricity to run them, and this limitation has directed electric heating into the channel of utilization in a great variety of current-consuming devices—small cooking utensils and heaters for special purposes—and has prevented its utilization in appliances developing large amounts of heat. A new appliance which promises much in popularizing the consumption of electricity for supplying hot water in considerable quantities utilizes the heat-storage capacity of a mass of metal to hold hot water of any desired temperature at any time when it is needed, whether or not the electric current is turned on at the time.

This electric heat-storage system marks an important step in the distribution of heat by the medium of the ordinary electricity supply mains. And in this respect it repeats the history of gas light and electric light distribution. It was when every household made its own candles, when came oil lamps, burning oils of animal and vegetable origin, and later, kerosene lamps requiring a chimney. The introduction of gas was the first step in the distribution of light and heat for the whole community from a central generating station; and with the development of the internal-combustion engine, gas also became available for power purposes. But hitherto electricity the great rival of gas as an agent for the distribution of light and of power, has been at a disadvantage for use in the local production of heat, for two reasons, viz., transformation losses between central-station coal pile and heat generator in the consumer's translating device and poor central-station load factor due to the natural irregularity in demand for current for lighting.

To discuss the first-mentioned reason it is true that the efficiency of conversion of electricity into heat is one hundred per cent; but this energy transformation made on the consumer's premises, is only the last one of a series of transformations. The aggregate of the heavy losses back of the delivery of the electric current to the consumer—that is, in the chain of transformations from the heat energy represented by the coal pile into electrical energy at the central station switchboard—has made electrically generated heat prohibitively expensive when large amounts of heat were required, in the household and under all customary industrial conditions.

As to the second reason: Even with the existing transformation losses, electric current for all purposes would cost the consumer much less than it does at present were it not that although the electric light is the main load in every central station, the output from the station for lighting is very irregular through the twenty-four hours of each day. The demand for light reaches a maximum, or "peak," at a certain hour every day—later or earlier according to the advance of the season—and a large amount of central-station machinery, capable of delivering the electricity for this peak load, must be installed, although this load only lasts a short time. During the remainder of the twenty-four hours the greater part of the machinery is idle, though continuing to draw interest on the heavy investment of capital which it represents.

To summarize: The private consumer pays at a high rate for his kilowatt-hours of electricity, on account of inefficient generation of power, and uneconomical utilization of the central-station plant necessitated by the irregular demand for light; and this existing high rate has delayed the general introduction of electrical appliances.

The transformation losses mentioned cannot be reduced materially in the present methods of generating electricity, in seeking to cheapen electricity supply by improving the load factor, at mpt. have been made to store electricity at the central station, as gas is stored at the gas works. But the electric storage battery, possible to use for this purpose but not practicable on any large scale, is available only for the direct current; for the alternating current, which is generated in by far the largest number of stations nowadays, there is no means of storage.

The new electric system of hot water heating is designed to solve the load factor problem of taking current at time convenient to the generating station to deliver the heat, while delivering to the consumer electrically heated water at any time convenient to him to utilize the hot water. It proposes to accomplish this by storing, not electricity at the central station, but heat on the consumer's premises; taking from the mains the current for generating the heat only during the daylight hours, when the lighting load is small, and thus by arranging with the electricity supply company securing a special low rate for current since the full amount of machinery for the maximum demand for light must be installed anyway, and the consumer is naturally desirous of operating its machinery at its full capacity all the time.

The apparatus consists of a heating element taking a comparatively small current and placed in the center of a heavy block of cast iron. The heat is cast around a coil of iron pipe, one end of which is connected to the house water piping, the other end of the coil being brought out at a special faucet. Surrounding the iron block is a thick wall of heat-insulating substance to hold the heat from escaping; any heat that does get through this lagging being taken up by a wall of water surrounding the same. The whole of all is another wall of lagging to hold almost literally none of the electrically generated heat is lost.

In operation, an automatic time switch turns on the current only during the load period each day, when the demand for current for lighting is small. By the long continued heating effect of the current the temperature of the iron block is raised to about 500 deg. F., so that water entering the coil immediately becomes steam. A pass pipe leads to the faucet, directly from the house piping and by turning the handle of the faucet to various angles the cold water that flows through the apparatus is mixed with steam in varying proportions; the mixing faucet thus delivering water of any desired temperature from tepid to boiling. An apparatus 1300 kilowatts capacity, cylindrical in shape and two feet in diameter and in height, a size adapted to ordinary household use, will deliver 30 gallons of water at 110 degrees temperature, as for a hot bath, ten hours after the current has been turned off.

The same principle is applied to cooking, employing a composite vessel of easily fitting receptacles for individual articles of food, the whole inclosed in a single removable, heat-insulating cover. St. Amen.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Mount Allison Sale.

The annual sale under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association of the Mount Allison Ladies' College was held Friday evening. This sale is always anticipated with eagerness by the students of the college and the people of the town in general, and Friday night's fair was exceptionally successful.

Beethoven Hall, in which the sale was held, presented a most attractive group with its various stalls. The candy booth represented the most work and thought, and called forth many exclamations of delight. It was tastefully decorated with spruce, and green and white bunting, the colors of the senior class. In the centre stood "That Glorious Football Cap," tied with the choicest of sweets. The banner booth represented a student's room and was decked with pennants and cushions in many various designs to suit the tastes of the members of all classes and departments to the college. The decorations at the fancy table were also very effective. Purple violets being used to carry out the scheme. Other tables dimly decorated and well patronized were the poetry, apron and ice cream tables. The net proceeds of the sale amounted to $152.

JUST PUBLISHED

"Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary," (G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.) surpasses the old International as much as that book exceeded its predecessor. On the old foundation a new superstructure has been built. The reconstruction has been carried on through many years by a large force of trained workers, under the supervision of Dr. W. T. Harris, former United States Commissioner of Education, and reinforced by many eminent specialists. The definitions have been rearranged and simplified. The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received superior scholarly labor. The language of English literature for over seven centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness. In view of vocabulary, its richness of general information, and in convenience of consultation, the book sets a new mark in lexicography.

"Emperor of the British"

The proposal, recently made, to change the King's title to that of Emperor of the British evokes the following bit of characteristic comment from G. K. Chesterton.

We few poor radicals who alone reverence the past, or seem to have any relic of the royal chronicles of England, have lately been confronted with a proposal calculated to make us take to our beds, to laugh at leisure, or die in peace. For indeed the thing passes all language and is fit only for death and laughter.

It has actually been proposed in an English paper that the King of England should consent to be called Emperor of the British. The primary answer is obvious. Why not sultan of the British? Why not Kaiser of the British, or Pope of the British? Why not Tsar? Why not Shah? Why not Grand Lama of Great Britain? Why not Doge of the British Empire? Why not Stadholder of the United States of Britain? Why not Mogul of the Three Kingdoms? Why not Mikado of the Isles? Why should there be a Dey of Tripoli, and no Dey of Turnham Green? Why should Tartary have had a Cham, while Londonbridge had no trace of a Cham? Why should we hear (with helpless envy) of that there being once been an Akond of Swat, when it is vain to hope or any Akond of Surlinton? I know not how to comfort my fellow-countrymen for the loss of all these sumptuous and soaring titles, except by reminding them (however sad it may seem) that they are a great people, with a history of their own. We do not call our ruler an Emperor for the same reason that we do not call him a Brother of the Sun and Moon; because it is our national tradition to call him something else, Brother of the Sun and Moon is a much grander and grander title than either Emperor or King; and if you want something grander still, I am sure I could invent it. Uncle of the Universe would be good, or Cousin of the Cosmos. There are greater titles than King of himself an Emperor. But even to call yourself King of England was a great business; still more to be one. To be a King like Edward I., or even like Edward III., is to look down as from a pinnacle upon all the chance brigades and compromising courtiers who have managed to "wear the purple" in the anarchies of East and West. To call a British King, wearing the crown of Arthur and Alfred, by the foolish foreign name suggested, is to me almost maddeningly laughable; I would as soon call England by the improved name of Helligoland.

Sixty-five Millions in Germany

Census may Show That Figure, a Gain of 4,500,000 in Five Years.

Berlin, Dec. 3.—Germany is in the throes of its quinquennial census, which was officially taken throughout the empire on Thursday, but will not actually end for many weeks.

When it is over the fatherland expects to wake up and find itself the possessor of 65,000,000 millions souls, or a gain of 4,500,000 since 1905.

German population experts are deeply impressed by this week's announcement that the United States has over 93,000,000, increase being 1,700,000 a year in the last ten years, or exactly double the rate at which Germany is growing.

The census of Germany is not taken by official question-askers, as in the United States, but by means of a series of intricate blanks with every household in the country is obliged to fill out. Millions of other rise intelligent Germans have spent the week in wrestling with the mysterious census forms.

Three Women Sway Germany

Germany's three most influential men Emperor William, Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and Herr Ballin the Atlantic shipping king—have powerful rivals in a trio of women.

Frau Krupp and Frau Stumm hold sway over a larger army of workers than any other two magnates in the empire. The former is the head of the famous Essen firm of gunmakers. The second, though less known, has a still mightier force of employees at her beck and call in the Saar mining district.

But the most influential woman in the empire is Frau Simon, who inherited two great newspapers—the Frankfurter Zeitung and the Koenigsberger Allgemeine Zeitung—from her father, Leopold Sonnemann, who during his life was known as "the German press king." Frau Simon is a democrat and on that account bestows most of her attention on the Frankfurt publication, which shows socialistic tendencies. Nominally the destiny of the paper, which follows the Cologne Gazette in joint of importance, is presided over by Frau Simon's two sons, but the lady herself sees that nothing exceptional is published without her knowledge.

Reduce the Cost of Living

LET us look into this problem of high cost of living. Let us see if we can whittle it down a bit and extract some of its fangs.

We agree that the cost of living has gone up. Eggs have gone up, butter has gone up, meat and poultry and vegetables have gone up. Everything we put on our tables has advanced in price from 50 to 50%. Except one item—Flour. Most of us have known this in a way somewhat but have we ever for a moment realized that 10 cents spent in good Bread buys more real value than fifteen times that amount spent in Eggs, Beef or Mutton. Just glance at the tables above showing the comparison made by the U. S. Government bulletin. From a food

The Telephone in Europe.

(Zion's Herald)

How vast the telephone business has become may be inferred from the statement that in thirty years the Western Electric Company has sold $67,000,000 worth of telephonic apparatus to foreign countries, and yet Europe, with twenty nations has but one third as many telephones as are in use in the United States, while in proportion to her population Europe has only one-thirteenth as many. The United States with 6 per cent. of the earth and 5 per cent. of the human race, has 70 per cent. of the telephones.

Germany has only as many telephones as has the State of New York, and Great Britain as many as Ohio, while Chicago has more than London, and Boston twice as many as Paris. Only six nations in Europe make a fair showing, the Germans, British, Swedes, Danes, Norwegians and Swiss, the others having less than one telephone per hundred. Denmark has more telephones than has Austria, while little Finland has a service superior to that of France.

The Duke of Connaught Ends Notable Tour.

Durban, Dec. 3.—The reception here today of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and their party, marking the conclusion of their tour of the new South African Union, was a magnificent success. The Duke and Duchess were welcomed by the Governor of Natal, the members of the Provincial Government, a committee of prominent residents representing the municipality of Durban, and a large number of naval and military officers. The populace turned out en masse and cheered the royal visitors enthusiastically.

A popular reception was held in the City Park and addresses of welcome were presented at the Town Hall. The Duke of Connaught who wore a Field Marshal's uniform, inspected the Volunteers, and another feature of the day's programme was the laying of the foundation stone for the new Technical Institute. A municipal luncheon was served at the Town Hall, and shortly afterward the Duke and Duchess and their attendants boarded the steamship Balmoral Castel for the return to England.

Some interesting results of scientific forestry have been collected by D. E. Hutchins in a report on a plan to reforest Cyprus. The German forests covering about 35,000,000 acres yield $110,000,000 a year, and the rapid increase of area and productiveness justifies the hope that the present importation of $80,000,000 of timber into Germany will soon be unnecessary. The spruce forest of the Erzgebirge mountains supplying 2,128 cubic feet per acre from growing stock, seems to lead in average yield. This land is worth not more than $1.00 an acre, from the judicious thinning out of the timber it gives a net annual profit of $9.00. In France the coniferous forest of Besancon gives a net income of about $16.00 an acre. A young forest of 1930 acres on Mount Ventoux in Provence, planted between 1863 and 1878, is not only already profitable, yielding a return of about $14,000 a year, but has quite transformed the neighboring country. Springs have reappeared, with restored fertility, and a remarkable increase in the value of the lowlands.

Mrs. Eddy.

Although an old woman, Mrs. Eddy's years are often equalled or exceeded. Whether or not she has been in sound mind these later years may ever be a matter of uncertainty. She has had practically an association with the outer world for a long period, and although a few years ago she showed herself to some representatives of the press the interview did not furnish much evidence as to her mental condition. The notable fact in connection with her career is that she and her immediate co-workers have formed a great religious association which has given comfort spiritually and physically to many who needed it; have built churches, and have organized societies, in which many persons of intellect and of culture have found satisfaction. To a great many persons the doctrines of her church are, to speak moderately, erroneous; the ideas upon which it is founded chimerical; and the results fruitless. On the other hand, almost all of the adherents of the system are earnest, believers in the doctrines of Christian Science, and they claim for it in many personal cases the greatest moral results. The outsider and the doubter sees in Mrs. Eddy's work the success of a work done by a commonplace person, and is perhaps appalled at the strength of human weakness, or he may find refuge in the thought that God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform.—St. J. Globe.

Is Here Again With Its Joys and Responsibilities.
One of the joys of the Season is Gift Giving.
One of the responsibilities is Gift Purchasing.
By reason of certainty as to quality and moderation in prices this store is the place at which the responsibility is reduced to a minimum.

At present our store is overflowing with Christmas lines, rich in variety and distinctiveness, and all at prices so moderate as to meet with the approval of all.

We invite you to come in and see our Display of Holiday Goods. The very article that will fit your case—and your pocket book, will certainly disclose itself.

BACK BAY

The Turn Road Club held their first meeting last Friday evening in their new hall and although the weather was stormy, it did not hinder a large crowd from coming to show how they appreciated the work the club has been doing since it has been organized. Mr. Oscar Kinney was Chairman and spoke a few minutes to the parents, but said he did not have the gift of gab that our friend Mr. Phinney had so said he would let him speak for both of them. Mr. Phinney then arose and in his genial way wished all present a Merry Xmas and Happy New Year and said it encouraged him to see so many present and he knew they must be interested in the work they were doing. His talk was mostly to the young folks and said he hoped by the next meeting a lot of them would join and help in the good work. He spoke about the Admission money and said that went to defray the Secretary's expenses, Mr. McGee, as he was going away a few days for the interest of the Club. The Chairman then arose and asked if some one in the audience would not say a few words and Mr. Wm. Harris arose and said that he was proud to know that the young fellows of Back Bay had confidence enough in themselves to get up a club and hoped they would continue in their good work. Messrs. Michael Cook and James Leslie sang a duet "Meet Me Tonight in Dreamland," which was greatly appreciated by all. After which refreshments were served, the crowd broke up and went to their homes feeling firstrate and wishing the club every success.

The Situation in Mexico.

Mexico is face to face with a situation more serious than surface indications may show. News despatches are few and not always reliable, but it is certain that not only in Mexico City but also in the chief centres of the northern districts and along the Rio Grande frontier the revolutionists are organizing and active. Under such conditions the stability of the Diaz regime but the security of foreign investments in Mexican industries are involved.

The initial outbreak of a fortnight ago at the capital, when the mob attacked the offices of the Mexican Herald, the chief English newspaper in the Republic and insulted the American flag on San Francisco avenue, the chief street of the city, was caused by the reports of the burning at the stake in Texas of a Mexican accused of the murder of an American woman. That was an anti-American demonstration. It was an indication of the deep-seated and growing antipathy to American influence in Mexico on the part of the crowd. There can be no doubt as to the suspicion and fear with which the United States is regarded by many Mexicans. This attitude is often blind to the real facts, and being ignorant is often needlessly fearful. It is so obvious, however, that Americans residing in the Republic are quite conscious of its existence. The Mexican fear is that were opportunity to offer the United States would not hesitate to intervene and intervening to secure a "centre of influence." The fear of American aggression is not shared by the Government or by the more intelligent of the Mexican people. It is, however, the instrument in the hand of the demagogues, and with it the ignorant peons are aroused to acts of insurrection and violence.

But there is a deeper significance in the Mexican situation today. It is a bottom anti Diaz as much as it is anti-American. Indeed, the cry of the mob, "Nothing with the Yankee, or for the Yankee!" is as much a criticism of the Mexican Government for its friendly relations with the United States as it is a protest against American people for their activities in Mexican trade. The movement calls itself "Nationalist" and holds to the doctrine of "Mexico for the Mexicans." They have not yet learned that no nation can live to itself or stand by itself. This narrow feeling of Mexican nationalism is being played upon by the anti Diaz revolutionists. It is true, as yesterday's despatches announced, that Madero, the political opponent of Diaz, has returned from his enforced stay in Europe, the situation from the point of view of the Mexican Government is the more serious. President Diaz deserves credit for the truly wonderful progress Mexico has made in the last quarter century, but his autocratic rule, even though it has been honest in its purpose and beneficial in its effect, has won the antagonism which autocracy, even at its best, inevitably awakens. Canals have too much interest in the progress of Mexican civilization to be unimpaired of the happenings in the Republic these days. -Tor. Globe.

HANDICAPPED.

This is the case with many St. George People.

Too many St. George citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden, and stooping or sitting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest, and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief, but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Mrs. E. Griffith of Main street, Hertsford, Ont. says:

"A heavy bearing down pain had settled across my back and sides. There was a soreness in the kidney region and I was often unable to stoop or straighten myself up. Many times each night I would have to leave my bed with the irregular and frequent secretion of the kidneys and had often been just as done out in the morning as on retiring. A languid feeling would come over me and I would have to let the housework stand. Nothing I had tried would benefit me. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and concluded I would try them, which I did and soon found the long sought relief. The kidney secretions were soon regulated, my back strengthened and I began to feel better and stronger. I am able to enjoy my sleep without being disturbed and feel grateful to Booth's Kidney Pills for what they did for me."

Monument to Itō.

A very fine statue of the late Prince Itō, the first of his kind to be erected in Japan to a great public man, has just been completed at the well-known Japanese port of Kobe. The actual monument, which is of bronze and is eight feet in height, is mounted on a carved pedestal of stone. The statue was raised by the citizens by means of a public subscription. The port of Kobe was opened by the late Prince in 1858, was created Marquis in 1902, and was four times Premier.
