London, Jan. 5.—The news received at Liverpool concerning the slaughter of British troops in the interior of Sierra Leone has been confirmed by the advices of the Foreign and Offices. The officers killed were: Capt. Lendy, Lieut. C. Wroughton, Lieut. Liston, and a sergeant. The 26 privates who were shot were all negroes. According to all accounts the French opened fire upon the British troops without provocation or warning. How they could have made such a mistake is very difficult to conceive, as the West India regiment wear bright searlet uniforms, and carry British arms, and observe all the regulation army discipline. The attack took place in the district whose possession is still a matter of dispute between France and England. The British captured a French officer at Warina.

WINKED IN CHURCH.

As a Result Taylor Has a $10 Fine Hanging Over Him.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Jan. 6 .- The question as to whether it is a misdemeanor to wink at a pretty girl in church will probably be decided in a few days by a local justice of the peace, who issued a warrant for the arrest of Frank Taylor, a young man 19 years old, charged with the offense mentioned on Sunday at the Baptist Church.

The young lady at whom the wink was directed, resented it, and as a result one of the elders entered complaint against Taylor, who was arrested and ordered to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail. He demanded a hearing and claimed that the wink was involuntary. The justice is holding the matter under advisement.

CHARGED WITH BLACKMAIL

A Wealthy Norfolk Farmer the Victim of the Attempt.

His Ex-Housekeeper, Phoebe Hall, Arrested-Benjamin Maybee Threat. ened by "White Caps"-How the Clue Was Worked Up.

A case with many interesting features has just been ferreted out by Village Constable Ward, of London West. It is one of alleged blackmailing, and the intended victim was Mr. Benjamin Maybee, a very wealthy farmer of Middleton township, in the county of Norfolk. Mr. Maybee is a day at Joliette, Que., and adjourned till bachelor, and for a number of years charged with, on Dec. 27, shooting at the had as a housekeeper, a woman named Phoebe Hall, of Tilsonburg. The two kill. In the jury cases is one brought for libel Montreal, has assigned. Preferences for had a dispute, and the woman decided to quit Mr. Maybee's employ. After considerable trouble a settlement was reached and Miss Hall is said to have been given $1,000 in cash, a house and lot in Tilsonburg and a horse and rig valued at $200, in return for which a guarantee against any further claim was given. Nothing more was heard of Phobe Hall, but as a result of a thorough investigation made by London West's officer, she is now in St. Thomas jail awaiting trial on the charge of blackmailing.

On Nov. 20, however, Mr. Maybee received a letter through the post, having a 1-cent stamp on it and on which 4 cents had to be collected. The receiver was rather surprised on reading the following: "Dear Sir, -This is to give you notice that you will have to, within seven days from date of receiving this notice, in some way, we do not care how, deliver over to your wife $100 to defray expenses you caused her. We will find out, in our own mysterious way, if you have done as commanded or not. If we find out you have refused, then will we go out and make you a visit and give you the first degree of our impartial order. Remember, we mean business. THE WHITECAPS."

By the "wife" was evidently meant Phœbe Hall, who had spent $100 in a criminal libel suit brought against her by neighbors. Maybee was alarmed and placed the letter in Detective Ward's hands. It had been posted Nov. 18, at Aylmer, whither Ward went. He found that Phœbe and a young man from Simcoe had been in the town that day, and that they had stopped at Mrs. Allan's, who is a relative or a friend of Phebe's over night. The detective called, and Mrs. Allan was shown the epistle. She immediately recognized the address as being in her own handwriting.

"Are you sure it is your writing?" was asked.

"Quite sure," was the reply. "It is the one which Miss Hall and Mr. handed to me."

To make certain Mr. Ward got Mrs. Allan to rewrite the name on another piece of paper which he has now in his possession. The writing on both was the same. Mrs. Allan said that Miss Hall and the young man had stayed there over night, and that they were supposed to have written the letter which she had addressed.

Constable Ward had a warrant sworn out for the arrest of Phoebe Hall, and since his visit to Aylmer (some ten days ago) the officers have been looking for the woman. They were unsuccessful, however, until Chief Constable Huffman, of Aylmer, that the woman had been landed in St. Thomas

The trial is to come up on next Monday in St. Thomas, when some interesting developments are expected.

Found Guilty.

There was a fair-sized crowd at the Court House this morning when Michael Moylan. the 17-year-old boy, was tried before Junior Judge Elliott on the charge of breaking into the office of F. G. Rumball, lumber dealer, York street. P. C. Ralph was the principal witness, he having caught Moylan in the office. He said that when he looked in the window the prisoner was in front of the safe with a lighted match in his hand. The constable also said that entrance had evidently been gained by a side window, one of the panes of glass had been removed. P. C. Thos. Howie, who assisted in the arrest, told a similar story. When P. C. Ralph had finished his evidence Moylan said that the evidence in regard to the burning of the match in front of the safe was untrue, as he had only burned two pieces of paper, and that in the rear office. In answer to the judge's $3,000. Fraser for plaintiff, Gibbons for question as to whether he wante evidence he replied in the negative, only asking that his honor show leniency in the sentence. Trouble Ahead for Somebody. A Windsor dispatch states that Fred Paquette, who was arrested in Saginaw. Mich., charged with complicity in the burning of Adolphe Martin's barns at Maidstone Cross, was on Friday committed by Magistrate Bartlet until next Wednesday. It was reported that the boy had confessed and implicated some one else, but the police refused to give any information. E. R. Cameron, of London, solicitor of the London Mutual Insurance Company, was more communicative. "We have been working on this case for some time," said he, by the time we are through with it some one will get a dose that will tend to stop so many fires from taking place where they are over-insured. Our company has been called upon to pay some peculiar claims lately, and have concluded to make an example. We were called upon to pay $1,695 for the fire at Martin's place, but refused to do so after an investigation. Mr. Martin then offered to take $805, but we refused to pay that, and put detectives on the case, with the result that Paquette was arrested. He made a full confession this morning, and before long somebody else will be keeping him company."

A COMMERCIAL FORM.

No. 1 Committee, B. of E., Discuss Its Practicability.

And Refer the Matter to a Special Committee-Teachers Who Want Positions.

No. 1 committee of the School Board met last night. After passing accounts amounting to $177 84, the members affirmed the clause in Inspector Carson's report recommending that Miss Jennie Overholt, Ailsa Craig, be assigned as student to the Hamilton road kindergarten, and that Miss Grace Johnston, Goderich, be given a similar position at the Rectory street kindergarten.

Tne report stated that if all the public school staff were re-engaged for 1894 there would be two more teachers than necessary. The committee decided that Miss Fleury and Miss McPherson be placed on the substitute staff, with a first lien on any vacancies that may occur.

Said Mr. Carson in his report: In order to establish a commercial form there appears to me two courses open; 1. A competent teacher could be engaged and a class conducted in the vacant room in Princess avenue school. 2. As Princess avenue school is the most central in the city, the high school entrance work in that school could be discontinued and the pupils of the district desiring such a course could attend Talbot street, Waterloo street, Colborne street and Rectory street schools. The pupils of the city wishing to take the commercial form work could take it in the Princess avenue principal's room.

Mr. Griffin objected to the fact of it being necessary for a student to have passed the entrance examination before he could enjoy the benefits of such a course. A boy could then get to work two or three years earlier.

Mr. Alexander held that if pupils who had failed to pass the entrance examination were allowed to attend such a course there would be no incentive for a boy to pass that examination, and the commercial form would then be a refuge for lazy and indifferent boys and girls, who would not take the interest in their entrance examination that they did formerly.

Mr. Craig agreed with the views expressed by Mr. Alexander.

Chairman McRobert objected to the principal of the Princess avenue school being obliged to teach commercial work with his entrance work also. It meant that one must necessarily be neglected.

Mr. Griffin asked if a commercial form could not be established in each of the public schools.

Mr. Carson said it could be carried out, but not successfully. If the class was established there would be rooms to let very soon in the institute, as the teacher that would have to teach the commercial class could not bestow the necessary work on the high school entrance class. Mr. Sanders took the same view as Mr.

Griffin. The matter was ultimately referred to a committee consisting of Messrs. Griffin, Craig, Alexander and Sutherland, who will formulate a scheme and bring it before the

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

MANTELL AS PARRHASIUS. To-night Mr. Robert Mantell, who is favorably known as a romantic and melodramatic actor, will make his initial effort at tragedy in London. Elsewhere Mr. Mantell has received unstinted praise for his portraiture of "Parrhasius," and there is little doubt that London will indorse the verdict. Of a recent performance in Sar Francisco the Examiner says: A leading critic thus speaks of the play and its production: "Robert Mantell took his initial step into heavy tragedy last night at the Marquem. The play was a brand new one, built upon the old theme of 'Parrhasius.' Its literary merit and dramatic force were above the average latter-day productions, and its acting and staging left little to be desired. Mr. Mantell spent a large sum of money in equipping it with proper accessories. In his dramatization the author did not digress much from the familiar Grecian story. The play is brimful of lofty lines. Mr. Mantell gave a superb portrayal of the 'thriftless ambition that squanders love and life away for fame.' As much can also be said of Miss Behrens. In ali her scenes with Mr. Mantell she justly shared his honors, and some very effective stage pictures they presented." SOL SMITH RUSSELL. All lovers of refined and wholesome comedy are assured of a rich treat in the forthcoming engagement of the famous comedian, Sol Smith Russell. This artist is so favorably known to local play-goers that the simple announcement of his coming will prove sufficient to crowd the theater. Mr. Russell and his suberb company will appear in his new play, "April Weather," at the Grand Opera House on Wednesdoy evening next, which will, with-cut a doubt, be filled with the elite of the city. Mr. Rassell brings here the same company that supported him in New York

SEAEROOKE COMIC OPERA COMPANY. Thomas. Q. Seabrooke and his opera company will present the effervescent comic opera, "The Isle of Champagne," at the Grand next Friday evening. The countless opera patrons will remember it as a piece containing more of a plot than do most of its kindred, that this plot was cleverly conceived and skillfully carried out, and that the music was tuneful and bright beyond the usual. The use of champagne bettles, corks and glasses as the basis for the designs of the scenery was a bright idea and one that resulted in the scenic investiture of the opera being unique and beautiful. The company has been strengthened and the costumes and scenery are entirely

THE CONVALESCENT HOME.

Encouraging Outlook for Meeting the Debt on the Buildings-Help Gratefully Acknowledged-Characteristic Comments by Mrs. Boomer.

The Convalescent Home monthly board meeting was held at the home on Thursday. Present: Mesdames Boomer (president), J. Labatt, Bremner, Strong, Lashbrook, W. J. Reid, and Misses Street and Hamilton. There have been six admissions during the month, and four of the inmates have left the home much benefitted. Two patients, now in the hospital, are to be admitted when the friends who applied for them notify that they are sufficiently Britain. convalescent. An expression was given to the hearty appreciation of the generosity of friends of the home in remembering it so all of which evils must continue to grow in liberally at Christmas and New Year. The gift of two small typewriters from Mr. W. Johnson, and an anonymous donation from R. W. D., sent through Mr. Sayer, secretary of the Y. M. C. After matters of detail were sarisfactorily arranged by the board Mrs. Boomer read a kind note from the Bishop of Huron expressing a deep interest in the Convalescent Home, and acknowledging the vote of thanks for his lecture on the "Holy Land," the proceeds of which had amounted to 35. Mrs. Boomer then stated that $2 is a taxpayer in the city. Referred to the more had been handed to her for the sale of tickets for the lecture given at Huron College by Rev. Principal Miller, making the total from that source, after the payment of all expenses, $41. There is not a doubt, said Mrs. Boomer, but for the fact that the night unfortunately chosen for the lecture having proved one of almost "tempest and deluge," there would have been so large an attendance that the above sum would nearly have been doubled, and from the joint proceeds of these two popular lectures the treasurer would have been enabled to pay one more installment on the purchase of the building. However, it is hoped that this will be, by the continued kindness of friends, shortly accomplished. Meanwhile the board desired to place on record their sense of a deep indebtedness to Rev. Principal Miller, and to this end is asked the insertion of a vote of thanks moved on the occasion of the leeture by Mrs. Boomer, who said:

"May I be permitted to say a few words in my capacity as president of the London Convalescent Home? At a meeting of the ladies of its board of management held on Thursday (yesterday), it was moved by Mrs. W. J. Reid and seconded by Miss Hamilton, that Mrs. Boomer be requested to offer on behalf of the board its grateful thanks to the Rev. Principal Miller, for his kind promise of giving a lecture upon the poems of Mrs. Elizabeth Barrett Browning, the proceeds of which lecture were to be devoted to the furtherance of the work of the home. Of this promise we have had the beautiful fulfillment this evening, and although I am but commissioned to speak on behalf of the ladies of the home, yet I feel sure that my words will find an echo in the hearts of all present, if I venture to couple their names with ours in thanking Mr. Miller for the rich intellectual feast which he has just afforded us. Dreading lest the inclemency of the weather, and the prevalence of grippe among the gentlemen of the advisory board (who nearly all seem to have taken it together), and being a plain practical body who likes to be prepared for all emergencies, to say nothing of being reassured by the fact that Mr. Miller had taken a woman (for in spite of her most exceptional claims she was and Chicago. Sale of seats begins Monday the subject of his lecture, I made up my mind to say a few words in my own faltering fashion, rather than that there should be no public expression of the hearty appreciation felt by all the friends of the Convalescent Home, men and women alike, of the preof of interest in our work which, apart from its intellectual value, the giving of this lecture betokens. To the Rev. Principal Miller and to the masters and students of Huron College, who have offered us their hearty welcome and have made such thoughtful provision for our comfort, we would tender our hearty

The members of the board feel much regret that those friends who, in eager anticipation of a great treat, purchased tickets for this lecture, should have had so great a disappointment, but as their money was expended in a good cause, and as Mr. Miller promises to repeat his lecture for the benefit of the admirable work carried on by Y. W. C. A., they feel that they wil not be wholly without compensation,

INTERESTING psychological experiments by the aid of mechanical apparatus are in progress at Yale. Heretofore all the experiments performed have been upon persons laboring under hallucinations, confined to the sense of temperature. As soon as apparatus can be provided persons subjected to hallucinations of hearing and sight will be experimented upon, and thus a new field for original investigation opened. Again, people under abnormal conditions will be treated, such as persons thoroughly hypnotized or asleep, or insane persons, the latter including those suffering from monomania and kindred mental states, which have ture and his corps of assistants will continue their investigations in this line throughout the year.

They subscribed a substantial sum, the interest of which was devoted to the benefit of the widow of that honored statesman. COUNSEL BY TWO STATESMEN. Two notable addresses were given in Canada on Thursday evening-one by Lord Aberdeen at the Toronto Board of Trade banquet; the other in the city of Quebec by Hon. Wilfrid Laurier at a banquet given in his honor. Both the speakers, as the exponents of truly national and British principles, pleaded for the discouragement of bigotry and intolerance in the Dominion. The Governor-General, for example, said:

"Reverting to the position of Ontario, more especially as brought before us in connection with the great display and success at Chicago, I had the privilege, like many here to-night, of being present to personally observe the fine show at the exhibition, and the excellently arranged show, especially of Ontario, including that mammoth cheese of which we have heard so much. But I must not delay even upon that. I will venture to say that we cannot but recognize the leading place which Ontario has taken not only on this occasion, but more and more for many past years, as, for, instance, in education and so forth. I do venture to express the hope that Ontario will take the lead also in other respects, the lead in discouraging anything that savors of bigotry or intolerance. (Loud applause.) The lead in promoting the broad, tolerant, sympathetic spirit, which is the true and necessary result and sequence of true civilization, enlightenment, rated as opposed to the reform. There is and especially of true Christianity. (Loud no saying where the logic of this sage organ applause.) I will venture once more to read from a speech of that distinguished may lead if it continues in the line of exman who has already furnished me with a text for some of my remarks. On a very important occasion—the last time he spoke in Canada—the Marquis of Dufferin used these earnest words: 'Divided as you are into various powerful religious communities, none of whom is entitled to claim either pre-eminence or ascendancy over the other, but each of which reckors amongst its adherents enormous masses of population, what hope can you have except in mutual forbearance and generous liberality of sentiment?" (Applause.) It is in the application of that principle of religious toleration to public affairs, as well as to private life, that we alone can look forward to that condition of happiness, equality and peace to which we all aspire. (Applause.) I shall earnestly hope that nothing ever in Ontario will be prominent which would imply a contrary spirit to that tolerance and that broad, comprehensive, sympathetic spirit which applause.) In his address at the Quebec banquet, Hon. Mr. Laurier combatted the view that a man's creed should deprive him of his rights as a citizen, as a few have contended, and proceeded:

is the best kind of patriotism. (Loud

"He had been attacked by a portion of the Conservative press of Quebec because he had expressed himself as favoring a scheme of commercial federation between the Anglo-Saxon countries of the world. -The twentieth century will not begin This press had accused him of treason to had meant what he said. We are a portion of an Anglo-Saxon nation, the most commercial people of the world, and he favored a commercial union of the whole race. He did not speak of a military union-that might or might not follow-but there certainly was nothing unfeasible in the former

These sentiments were loudly cheered by the large audience of representative men, as was the following peroration of Mr. Laurier's address:

"Let us bear in mind ever that love is better than hatred, and those differences of religion which now prove the bane of our land will cease to divide a united and mutually respecting people."

Lord Aberdeen is also a believer in the reunion of the Anglo-Saxon race, and as he holds the same views as Mr. Laurier with regard to the common duty of the Canadian people to inculcate mutual toleration of differences in race and creed, it is not difficult to see how much there is in common between the Liberalism of the old land and the Liberalism of the new. There is a pleasing similarity between the sentiments expressed by the two statesmen in these widely separated cities and under entirely different auspices. Circumstances may change, but principles are immutable.

GOT A GOOD START. Covernor Flower, of New York, in his speech at the opening of the Legislature, congratulated the State on having for the first time in 75 years got out of debt. He had also this to say when referring to the State's promotion of the diary interests: "In 1876 at the Centennial Exposition Canada won the awards of excellence for the dairy products, and ever since Canadian farmers have benefited by that advertisement and advantage at the expense of the New York farmers.'

The Mackenzie Government took good care that the Canadian dairymen should be well represented at the Philadelphia show, and the effect of their policy is thus recognized by the New York Governor. They provided, on the advice of Mr. Ballantyne. M.P.P., that cheese should be shown every month, and thereby Ontario dairymen carried off the best prizes, caring not, in the honorable competition, at whose expense the prestige was obtained. Enough for them that Canada came out ahead as her

SEWAGE DISPOSITION.

The Dominion Minister of Justice has decided that in future the sewage from Kingston Penitentiary will be prevented from entering the harbor. This is a following out of the example set by the Ontario authorities at the London Asylum for the Insane. There the sewage of the large population is administered to the land, and thus made to aid vegetation instead of being turned into the adjoining stream to corrupt it. It is high time that a similar disposition was made of the sewage from the Military School in East London. It should not be run into Carling's Creek, and conveyed in that open drain through the city to the river. The civic health authorities have been moving in the matter, but it takes a long time to arouse sleepv officialdom at Ottawa-unless an election contest apomotion of the science of which Mr. proaches. It is time for excuses to give

THE TABLES TURNED. The newspaper advecate of the liquor traffic positively declines to accept the result of the plebiscite as a mandate from the electors, for the reason that a majority of COMPANY. those named on the lists did not go to the polls. Our esteemed contemporary does not, like Mr. Wegg, very often drop into poetry, but it has lately taken to the quo-DIRECTORS: Joseph Jeffery, Esq., President; John Mc-Clary, Esq., Vice-President; William Bowman, Esq., William McDonough, Esq., W. R. tation of Scripture to prove the orthodoxy and excellency of the traffic in intoxicants. In its latest lubrication, it quoted the text, Those who are not for Me are against Me." Then it reasons, to its own satisfaction-and it seems to be easily satisfiedthat the Bible commands popular indorsation of its view that all who did not vote "Yes" on the plebiscite must of necessity favor the traffic in intoxicating drinks! Hundreds of the voters who did not go to the polls are in their graves. That is a small matter to the whisky advocate. Their names are on the lists; they did not return from the dead and vote; therefore, they are opposed to this progressive temperance measure. Hundreds more were on sick beds or too feeble to vote on election day. They, too, are cuses it has adopted. Suppose we apply the liquor organ's text, "Those who are not for Me are against Me," to the position of the antiprohibitionists. While those who went to the polls voted "Yes," if they favored prohibition, those who did not indorse prohibition had the privilege of voting "No."

According to the reasoning of the organ, it is a proper deduction to make that every elector who did not vote "No," whether he attended the polls or remained at home, was against those who voted "No." Thus, by our contemporary's own line of reasoning, we are able to prove that those who were not in favor of the "No," side embraced not only those who voted "Yes," but those who did not vote at all!

Is not the fairer course that which views the verdict in the same light as all other votes by the populace—as a declaration in favor of the view espoused by the majority going to the polls, coincided in, as a matter of course, by those who refrained from from mothers, of the prolonged school holidays. In Toronto and other cities one week is regarded as ample holidays at Christmas, and the schools resumed on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, much to the satisfaction of wearied mothers. The London school trustees, for reasons best known to themselves, have prolonged the Christmas and New Year holidays to a period of over two weeks. Considering the shortness of the time that the average boy and girl can spend at school, and the fact that there are long summer holidays, Easter holidays and holidays on the Queen's birthday, Thanksgiving Day, civic holiday, and so forth, it does seem a waste of good school time and an unnecessary tax on the patience of mothers -many of them wearied and over-worked with other duties-to prolong the school holidays at any season of the year. There is one day for play and another for rest in every day out of the seven.

A MINISTER'S "BREAK." It would be better for Mr. Daly, M.P., if he did not attend any public banquets at all. He seems to forget himself. At the dinner of the Parliamentary press gallery in Ottawa last year, he turned on an innocent interrupter of a funny remark, and insinuated that he was no gentleman. Mr. Daly attended the Board of Trade dinner at Toronto on Thursday night, and again got himself into trouble. This time he bored the audience with a long speech, containing many dry details relating to the Northwest, and there being symptoms of a "tired feeling" on the part of the guests, he reprimanded them. The chairman and the Governor-General, who was present and only spoke for twenty minutes, so good is his taste, had to plead that Mr. Daly be permitted to conclude his address. Mr. Daly did not mend matters by accusing the Toronto people of lack of interest in the Northwest. The president of the board informed him that the assumption was most unwarrantable, and Lord Aberdeen suggested that the best way to get over the trouple was for Mr. Daly to hand the remainder of his speech to the reporters.

Before Mr. Daly again attends a dinner party he should make a small study of etiquette. For long years the individual who stands up at a dinner and insists on inflicting a long address upon those present, robbing the dozen or more speakers that are to come after him of the time that is fairly theirs, has been voted in all polite society a "bore." No one guilty of such a display of bad taste can plead the importance of his topic, or be permitted, with patience, to rebuke those long-suffering auditors who finally bring him sharply up. Mr. Daly's downfall is a standing warning to the long-winded wheresoever found.

THE WILLIAMS MURDER.

Continuation of the Coroner's Inquest at Cooksville.

COOKSVILLE, Jan. 5 .- There was very little new in yesterday's evidence. Some sixteen or eighteen witnesses were examined, but they simply confirmed the statements which have already been published. The chief points were the further identification of the prisoner MacWherrell, and incidentally of Walker also, the trac-Ing of the horse and cutter from the Armory Hotel on that Friday night until it was sold to Lowry, the Parliament street butcher, and the absolute establishing of the fact that Butcher and Walker were well acquainted before the horse deal on the Saturday following the murder and not strangers, as claimed by the former prisoner. It was also shown by the witness, Brown, and his sons that MacWherrell had originally announced his intention of staying with them until after Christmas, but that after reading the descriptions of himself in the Globe he suddenly left them without explaining his change of plans.

TORONTO, Jan. 5.- A rumor reached the city this afternoon that MacWherrell, in custody at Brampton on suspicion of being connected with the Williams tragedy at Port Credit, had committed suicide in prison by shooting himself with a revolver. Subsequently a dispatch was received from Brampton as follows:

There is no truth in the rumor that MacWherrell committed suicide this morn-

NO KISSING. [Atlantic Monthly.]

Kisses and embraces are simply unknown in Japan as tokens of affection, if we accept the solitary fact that Japanese mothers, like mothers all over the world, lip and hug their little ones betimes.

After babyhood there is no more hugging or kissing. Such actions, except in the case of infants, are held to be highly immodest. Never do girls kiss one another; never do parents kiss or embrace their children who have become able to walk. And this holds good of all classes of society, from the highest nobility to the humblest peasantry.

Neither have we the least indication throughout Japanese literature of any time in the history of the race when affection was more demonstrative than it is to-day. Perhaps the western reader will find it hard even to imagine a literature in the whole course of which no mention is made of kissing, of embracing, even of pressing a loving hand; for hand-clasping is an action as totally foreign to the Japanese impulse as kissing.

You may see again and again fathers and sons, husbands and wives, mothers and daughters, meeting after years of absence, yet you will probably never see the least approach to a caress between them.

They will kneel down and salute each other, and smile, and perhaps cry a little for joy; but they will neither rush into each others arms nor utter extraordinary phrases of affection.

> TORONTO, Jan 5 .- Fashionable circles here are all astir over a secret west end marriage which, although it took place six weeks ago, only came to light to-day.
> The bride is Miss Helen Cook, the > pretty 16-year-old daughter of Mr. John L. Cook, vice-president of the Cook & Bros.' Lumber Company of Ontario. The groom is Walter Henry Cooper, a private at the new fort, a young man of 25, somewhat good looking. His father is an Anglican rector at Calgary, N. W. T. On the night before Thanksgiving Day Cooper and Miss Cook proceeded to St. Margaret's Church with one or two friends, and were lady went home and the young man to his routine duties at the new fort. The alliance was not looked upon favorably, as the groom's income is only 30 cents per day. It is stated that reconciliation has been effected, and that the family are resigned to the situation, as the young woman has not shown any indication of changing her resolution to stand by Cooper.

The present intention of the family is to take a trip to England in the spring, where young Cooper will be placed in an English university to study medicine.

Mr. Cook is a wealthy man. He has only two children (daughters), consequently the bride will get half his wealth, which will be nearly $500,000. Then the children of Mr. Cook and those of his brother, Mr. H. H. Cook, as well, the wealth of Geo. J. Cook. Altogether, it is said, the young bride is heiress to over $1,000,000. The bride is one of the most handsome blondes in the city. Cooper is well spoken of by everyone. His acquaintance with Miss Cook was formed accidentally. He passed the house almost daily to and from the fort and down town on errands.

Perhaps it would be well at the inauguration of this sale to quote a few prices. Sometimes customers like to have an idea of what they are going to spend before starting out. It is a good idea, but take our advice and never be led to any store by a few flashy prices. Although our prices are always right, we lay more stress upon the excellence of our goods, as quality will tell long after the price has been forgotten. But here are a few figures:

After last night's session of No. 1 committee of the Board of Education the members repaired at the invitation of Chairman McRobert to Bradford's oyster parlors, where they were treated to an oyster supper. Seated around the board were: Messrs. McRobert (in the chair), Trustee Dewar, Trustee Dr. Campbell, Treasurer Pope, Trustee Craig, Trustee Saunders, Trustee Alexander, Principal Merchant, Inspector Carson, Trustee Griffin, Secretary McElheran, C. B. Edwards, of the Institute staff, and representatives of the press. After the disposal of the viands Mr. Dewar introduced the toast list by proposing in a few appropriate words the health of Chairman McRobert. The latter made a modest and characteristic reply, in which, after reviewing the work of the year, he thanked Principal Merchant, the retiring chairman, Mr. Dewar, Treasurer Pope and Secretary Mc-Elheran, for their assistance in the discharge of his duties. Mr. Alexander then briefly proposed the health of the retiring chairman of the board, Mr. Dewar, and expressed great regret at his withdrawal. While speaking to the toast, he said that he looked forward with pleasure to the time when Mr. McRobert would be chairman of the board, and he felt that it was pretty well understood who the for 1894 would be, and Mr. McRobert would no doubt make as good a record for himself in that capacity as he had done in a similar connection on No. 1. Mr. Alexander spoke strongly of the needs of a university and a normal school for London. Mr. Dewar, in reply, echoed the sentiments expressed by Mr. Alexander re the want of a normal school and a university, and he also spoke well of Mr. McRobert, and expressed the hope that he would occupy the position of chairman of the board for 1894. He gave Mr. McRobert much good advice gained by his own experience. In response to the toast of No. 1 committee, with regard to Mr. McRobert, Mr. Griffin, among other things, said: "He's a hustler from the word go. Dr. Campbell: "He has made a good chairman." Mr. Craig: "We have never had as good a chairman." Mr. Saunders: "I fully indorse what has been said." Messrs. Merchant, Carson, McElheran, Pope and Edwards replied in a happy strain to the toast of "Our Officers. "The Press" was also honored and the gathering broke up at

The French Say They Took the British for Arabs

Because They Were So Tanned-Six British Killed and Nineteen Wounded.

London, Jan. 6.-Further developments have been received from Freetown, capital of Sierra Leone, of the killing of British troops by the French. The British were encamped in the Connohdistrict, near Warina. The camp was within the British sphere. At daylight on Dec. 23 they were attacked by the French forces, consisting of 30 Senegalese sharpshooters and 1,200 natives, who were headed by Lieut. Moritz. When they were fired upon the British at once responded, and the French shortly afterwards retired. Lieut. Moritz was wounded and captured by the British. He was questioned by his captors as to his reasons for attacking them, and explained that they thought the British troops, who were blacks, were members of Sofa's tribes and that their European officers, who were deeply tanned by the African sun, were Arabs. Lieut. Moritz died from the effects of his wounds.

The British loss was less than at first reported, only six of the privates being killed. The report of the killing of Capt. Lendg, Lieuts. Wroughton and Liston and sergeant was correct. Nineteen of the British troops were seriously wounded. The loss of the French force is not known. The British force remains at Warina.

Another report of the engagement says it took place by moonlight and that it was owing to this fact that Lieut. Moritz was not able to distinguish the uniforms of the British troops. The latter were taken by surprise. The confusion in the British camp was great and this was added to by careless firing on the part of the British. The latter were well within British terri-

"Let me warn you to be candid," she said, as he stood looking at her with a dark, suspicious frown. "If you do not tell me I shail set myself to find out the truth, and you know I have a happy knack of discovering little secrets. Come, you are going to be married, Mr. Moore. "Zenobia, I tell you this because I know you will carry out your threat—because I think that between us there should be a complete understanding. You are right; I am about to be-married." He drew a long breath, and his lips quivered. "Like yourself, I have chosen to forget those miserable half-hours which have been the curse of my life. I am going to marry a pure, innocent girl, whom—smile, like the mocking fiend that you are, and I will kill you as you sit there!"—and his teeth clinched—"whom I love! Love! You do not understand, you never could, you never will. To such creatures as you the name is a by-word and jest! Be silent, then! Her name—I tell it you that you may know and keep out of her sight—is Carrie Harrington." She did not start-did not utter a wordbut her eyes gleamed, Carrie Harrington! What revenge, what power could be more complete than this marriage of his would give her. Let Lord Cecil discover her crime, he would not dare to denounce and punish her! For would she not be able to check him with the knowledge of Carrie's position? She nodded, then turned her face up to him with a smile that showed her white "I congratulate you, Mr. Moore, May you be happy."

Then, as if unable to control herself, she broke into a low, melodious laugh of intense, irrepressible amusement. With white face he glared at her sternly, then suddenly stepped back into the shadow, as a man's figure crossed the lawn.

He came up to the seat without seeing her for a moment, then he started, and Gerald Moore watching saw that instea. of the lover's joyful surprise there was a shadow of sad weariness on his face.

"You here, Zenobia," he said—and the musical voice was grave and listless—"and "Yes, quite alone," she answered, "and tired of my own company. Let us go in, Cecil."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Gerald Moore had not been able to detect any love in Lord Cecil's voice when he spoke to Zenobia, and there was none.

If he could have had his choice he would have said farewell to England, and to all thoughts of marriage when he parted from Carrie at Ferndale. His heart had died within him that night, or rather she had taken it with her and still held it, though he had become the promised husband of Zenobia, or the Princess Florenza, as he

But Lord Cecil had inherited his father's strong sense of honor, and when Carrie had left him free he felt that his honor compelled him to offer himself to the woman whom he had mis judged and injured; yet even when he did so, he told her that he had little heart to give her, that his life was overclowded and saddened by the loss of the girl who had renounced him. But Zenobia professed herself satisfied.

"I am not afraid, Cecil," she said with a seraphic smile, as she hung upon his arm. 'I will win back the love you once bore me;

He tried to call back that love earnestly and honestly, but it would not rise from its ashes; it was dead and buried forever, overshadowed by his passionate devotion to Carrie. A great change came over him; he became silent and moody, taking no interest in anything, and avoiding social intercourse of every kind. For hours he would sit gloomily recalling those few weeks of per-fect happiness with the willful maid who had so proudly cast him off.

The earl and countess could not understand the position of affairs. His explana-tion, if explanation it could be called, was simply to the effect that his engagement with Carrie was broken off by mutual consent, and when his mother almost tearfully implored him to let her try and bring them together again, he sternly forbade her to in-

"It could do us no good, mother," he had said, sorrowfully. "I know her too well to believe that anything you or any one else could say or do would close the breach between us? I have lost her forever.

Then the news reached them that he was engaged again, and this time to the Princess Florenza. They were astonished, but somewhat comforted for they dreaded that he mandal that he would have remained single, which would have been a family calamity. Cecil did not take Zenobia to the Castle as he had done Carrie. He dared not, for he knew that his mother's keen eyes would have discovered that his heart was not in this new engagement, and that questions would have been asked which he could not have answered. Zenonia quite understood his feelings, and with great acuteness got Lady Ferndale to arrange the touring party. She thought that change of scene and excitement would efface the memory of Carrie from Lord Cecil's heart, but she was mistaken. As day succeeded day, he grew more silent and moody, more given to avoid-ing the rest of the party and spending hours in solitary musing. To her his manner was without reproach; he was always courteous, attentive, and considerate, but never a word of love passed his lips, and no smile lit up his face when she appeared. Another woman would have been piqued, indignant, broken-hearted, but Zenobia was playing a deep and heavy game; it was the title, the power, the wealth she was fighting for, not the man!

And now, since seeing Gerald Moore, she felt sure of winning! Fate had dealt all the trump cards to her and she could not fail to win the game. Once married to Lord Cecil, what danger could threaten her? Gerald Moore would be married to this girl, Carrie, and his mouth would be closed forever; even if by some ill chance Lord Cecil should discover the crime she had committed, she could set him at defiance by threatening to announce to the world that his old love was Gerald Carrie, the woman he still loved. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are specially subject.

NORTHWEST EXPERIENCES.

Troubles of the Settlers Affect the Missionaries.

Hard Times in the West Affect the Preachers Very Much-The Necessity for Eastern Sympathy-Good Prospects if the Field is Taken Care Of.

Rev. Dr. James Robertson, superintendent of Presbyterian home missions in the Northwest, has been speaking on Northwest prospects in Toronto. The crop of 1893, said the reverend doctor, tell below the average, the wheat yielding in Manitoba less than sixteen bushels per acre, and the price at some points being as low as 40 cents and even 38 cents per bushel for No. 1 hard. Deduct the cost of threshing, binding twine, marketing, etc., and the farmers' profit vanishes. The scheduling of Canadian cattle in Britain also hit the West hard. Unlike Ontario, with its eggs, butter, cheese, lumber, lambs, etc., the West has only wheat and cattle to export. The country is new, has no accumulated capital, but has accumulated debts, and, truth to tell, the people may not have been as careful as they should; but how few whose foresight is as good as their hindsight! People have debts to pay, and implement men, loan companies, banks, merchants and others are trying to collect, in many cases by the help of the sheriff. In such a case people, however willing-and after conferences and consultations with missions, managers and congregations, I can testify that they are anxious to do their best-are not able to meet their promises to their missionaries. Where pastors are single, or with few depending on them, they bear cheerfully the loss of Moore's wife only in name, and that if he, $150, $200, or even more, of their salaries, Lord Cecil, cast her off he would be ruining but it is different when a man has a large but it is different when a man has a large family and the present salary barely able to maintain him, and when the storekeeper is unable to give credit. Men of that kind have no money out if they resign, and in any case would think it cowardly to abandon an important post, and hence appeal to the H. M. C. for relief. The appeal will be in vain if the treasurer cannot meet present obligations when the committee meet in spring.

> able and deserving men since the beginning of this winter published they would evoke sympathy and help. Two or three shown privately have done so already, but feelings of delicacy prevent such letters being given to the public. Let me give a few extracts without names. people here were never so hard up. I can hope for little beside the grant of the com-mittee for my support. Were my wife and myself alone we would not think of it, but, as you know, we have seven little ones. Can anything be done to relieve the strait?" "The home mission convener has expected. My people are attached to me increased, I cannot remain here, as, owing to the poverty of the congregation, they can do little, and I am going into debt for the necessaries of life, and I do not see how I am to get out, and at any rate I must be honest." This man has five children. "My people are hard up this year," writes another, "owing to the drought of last season, but they do what they can for me, and pull through if the home mi year." "I am obliged to draw on you," writes another, "to pay pressing debts. Is it possible to get the amount coming from the fund for 1894 advanced now? My people are willing but poor." But enough. Over considerable areas the people can implement engagements and do something to help the needy, but relief must come to others, else suffering will be experienced. Ministers and laymen in comfortable circumstances will not let these pioneers

> WHO ARE THE MISSIONARIES ? Men of scholarship and mental ability, many of them, several of whom have been called to congregations in Ontario atsalaries much in advance of what they were receiving, but who refused to leave. It is some temptation to a young man engaged to be married, but with a salary below $600, to be offered $1,000 and a manse, but the temptation was resisted, and the marriage postponed for two years. But in several instances men had to yield to family needs, and the American church enjoys the services of efficient men who changed flags because of inadequate support. The committee is considerate and kind, but can only disburse what the church gives, and persistent pressure in reducing grants to make ends meet has led good men to step down and out, to the regret of the people and tho loss of the church. Are the people of the west leaning on the committee? No. Last year their givings averaged about $17 per communicant, while those of the church were only $1110. The communicants were not one-half those of the Synod of the Maritime Provinces, and yet the contributions were two-thirds of those of that synod. In 1881 the west gave 1-98 of the revenue of the church, and in 1893 1-9, of which nearly $21,000 was for schemes.

The difficulties in carrying on work are many. The field is 2,000 miles from east to west and nearly 400 from north to south. Settlement is scattered and the people polyglot. Settlers speaking English, Gaelic, Hungarian, German and Icelandic have appealed for missionaries; People are beginning life, have not had time to save, have a steady outgo, but an uncertain income. Distance from eastern centers depresses selling and enhances buying prices.

Work, however, is encouraging-stimulating. The country is wide, has large resources in process of development, and is destined to contain a large population.

The people are from choice of stocks, and, where neglect has not left its sears, moral, law-abiding, religious. Last year there were fewer criminals in Manitoba per 1,000 population than in any other Province in the Dominion. Missions are fast becoming congregations, which not only maintain ordinances among themselves, but help the schemes. If foundations are properly laid and wisely superstructures reared, our church will be strong in the west, and able to lend large help for foreign service. The work is in a healthy state, and its vitality is shown by its growth. The following figures need no comment: Augmented congregations ... Communicants. 1,153 15,001 Revenue. $15,100 $139,273

SOME STRIKING CASES. These are striking cases: One missionary on arrival at his field was informed that he was not wanted and would have neither audience nor support. In the second year he reported manse building, communicants 20, revenue, $500. A missionary reports a new field lacking in material to make a cause. He is removed and another sent, who reports, in one year, church built and people offering $800 to support ordinances. Missionary sent to another district retired after several months' service, preaching his farewell sermon to a congregation of one. Successor labored for six months, reporting average attendance over 150, familie

65, and revenue for six months over $500. This field has claims on the Presbyterian Church: Should parents care for their children? Then the church whose children constitute about one-fourth of the people in Manitoba and the territories must not neglect hers. In the seventeen largest cities and towns in the Synod of Manitoba and the Northwest, Presbyterians stand first numerically in ten, second in the other seven; although the church has never bent her back to enable her sons to climb into office, yet they are strong in the Ligislatures, as advisers of Lieutenant-Governors, on the bench, and in positions of trust, showing that they do not deteriorate by transplanting.

NO BETTER INVESTMENT POSSIBLE. If the church is doing mission work to save men, where can she get a better investment for her money than in ministering to her own children? The home missionary, requiring no time to learn the language, enters on his work at once. He outfits at his own expense; his allowance from the funds of the church is only one-sixth of that of the foreign missionary, and, before the latter has had time to master the language, the home missionary often has a self-sustaining congregation. And, the ground having been prepared by the training of many of his flock in Christian homes in other Provinces, conversions to God are reported from the outset. Of this statement the rapid increase in membership is the best proof. The future of the church demands that we continue an enlightened policy in missions in the west. In large sections in Eastern Canada the ranks of the church have been decimated by neglect, and we are to-day weak where we might be strong. Dr. Torrance reported at the last General Assembly the gains in communicants east of Lake Superior as 4.529, or less than 3 per cent. on the previous year; west, 4,152. The east is adult, with growth almost stationary; west, child, growth vigorous. Let there be no arrested development. A church that profited by our supineness in the east closed some of its Indian missions, sold the premises of another church, and put the money in home work. Church Were some of the letters received from growth must be sought where conditions make it possible. Neglect kills religion and suffers to come to life a numerous brood of vices which lower the spiritual tone generally. Environment helps to save or damn. In a new mission, occupied last spring, one professing Christian was found in a distance of several miles. In another district a number of young men used to meet in the house of one of them to drink, gamble and do worse. The lives of two were shortened through their orgies, and, when visiting the mission in the autumn, I found a sent me my check, and it is less than I number of conversions had taken place, and that these men met to study the Scriptures and I to them, but, if the grant cannot be and to pray where their saturnalias used to

The market was dull this morning, and, on account of the prevailing bad roads, not very largely attended. The receipt of grain was light. Oats advanced about 2 cents on the 109 pounds, and wheat was a little stiffer, $1 being occasionally paid for the white variety. The general price paid for wheat was 97 cents, oats 95 cents. Hay was higher at $8 to $9. Poultry was scarce and dearer, chickens selling at 50 to 75 cents and pair and ducks at 70 to 80 cents. Turkey was 10 cents a pound all round. Butter sold from 23 to 25 cents by the roll, 21 to 23 cents by the basket, and 20 and 21 cents in store lots. Fresh eggs sold as high as 22 and 24 cents, packed at 17 and 18 cents a dozen. Dressed hogs advanced a little in price, $5 50 to $7 being the range. Potatoes sold from 65 to 70 cents. The meat market was well supplied but prices were unchanged. Hospital Matters.

The regular meeting of the Hospital Trust was held in the City Hall yesterday afternoon. Present: R. Lewis, chairman; Mayor Essery, C. F. Complin, Jas. Gilmour, T. H. Purdom and Medical Superintendent J. D. Balfour. A communication from Geo. C. Robb, boiler inspector, was read, showing a satisfactory condition of the boilers. The following Christmas offerings were received and thankfully acknowledged: Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Blair, 65 Christmas letters; Bible Flower Mission, a present for each patient with a Christmas card for each: two friends, a bouquet with a card for each patient; a box of oranges, a Christmas cake and a quantity of holly; Mrs. Robinson, a large turkey; Mrs Boomer, children's toys and scrap-books; Mr. T. McCormick, 90 boxes of candy and 90 packages of fancy biscuits for the patients and inmates of the hospital. The superintendent's reports were received and filed. There are 64 patients in the hospital. Mr. Gilmour moved for a return showing the receipts and expenses of the hospital for the last ten years, in order to refute certain statements made during the last election campaign regarding the expenditure of the trust. Collections for the month of December, 1893, were $25. Accounts to the amount of $1,552 60 were passed and ordered to be paid, after which the meeting closed.

SUPPLEMENT TO DAILY ADVERTISER --- SATURDAY, JANUARY 6, 1894.

to the effect that the political parties in Iowa were bound to repeal the to be seen. Governor Boies was opposed to it, but he was beaten at last election. The new governor is in its favor. The House of Representatives is largely Republican and it is said that of the 76 Republican members 53 at least are pledged prohibitionists.

It did not require magic lantern views or regalia displays, with any amount of gold lace and dyed feathers, and all that, to arouse public interest to the great question during the late campaign. The movement has been given an impetus the good results of which will, we believe, he felt for years to come. The action of the Ontario Government in thus bringing the great issue so practically before the people deserves great praise.

Now that the plebiscite campaign is over its advantages as an educator of public opinion must be freely admitted by all. During the past three months there has been more effective temperance agitation throughout Ontario than ever in twice that length of time before. More temperance literature was circulated, more public meetings were held, more practical facts presented to the people, more discussion through the ordinary newspapers, more sermons preached and more practical educative work. The good results of this work will be felt for years to

The grand old Rev. Dr. Guthrie was one of the ablest and clearest-headed fact puzzled him. He said: "How ministers of the Gospel, how Christian mystery. I can not understand it. I do not condemn them. By their own deeds they shall stand or fall; but before them I charge drink with breaking more hearts, with destroying the ties of more families, with ruining more bodies, with sending more souls to perdition, than almost all the other vices more and more in earnest to wash its hands of all connection with the legalized drink traffic. At Cape May, New Jersey, a Baptist deacon not long ago applicant. The next Sunday Rev. A. F. Greening, the pastor, called up the deacon and publicly reprimanded him. The deacon apologized and promised not to repeat the offense. The church declaring "When any member of this church hereafter signs a license application he thereby elected himself out of the fold."

Hon. Senator Scott, of Ottawa, the father of the Scott Act and an old and level-headed politician, has given an interviewer his impression of the situation, now that the plebiscite verdict has been given. He says it is now the duty of the Provincial Legislature to carry into effect the verdict of the people, so far as in its power. "It controls the saloon and shop licenses, and should, next session, enact a law prohibitory to the further issue of licenses and attach severe penalties for selling by retail. With the Dominion Parliament rests the responsibility of prohibiting the manufacture and importa-

> We hope that there will be no cessation of temperance education and organization work throughout the country, now that the plebiscite result has been obtained. The most important work is to come yet. Every local, county and provincial organization that found practical work to do during the past few months should be made permanent till prohibition is obtained. Both the Provincial Legislature and the Dominion Parliament will meet within a few weeks, and in both the Houses the question will come up in some practical shape. A Provincial election will take place within the next six months, and practical work will be needed then. Every organization should consider itself "enlisted for the whole war." Victory will come all the sooner because of earnest and persistent action now.

Another illustration of the danger there is to the whole community of allowing a single man to get drunk was furnished at Attica, near Chicago, on Monday of last week. A young man of about 18 years, named Bert Ferguson, got drunk and threw a heavy oak plank on the railway track. A heavy passenger train came thundering along and providentially the locomotive wheels so crushed the plank that the cars were not derailed. Had the train been thrown off probably a hundred persons would have been killed or maimed. The young man was Christian workers of his day. But this arrested and can give no reason for his terrible deed except that he was drunk and wanted to see some exciteelders, in the face of this vice, can go ment. The safety of the whole comon with their indulgences is to me a munity is in jeopardy because of the existence of the legalized drink traffic. Public safety demands its prohibition.

It is greately to be hoped that the temperance people throughout the country will not now subside into indifference and inaction after the splendid results of the late splendid plebiscite. It has been a serious misfortune that temperance work has been carried Every year the churches are getting on in too fitful a manner. After the Dunkin Act and Scott Act campaigns, both of which resulted in great good, there was, each time, a very unfortunate lull in temperance work all over signed a petition for a liquor license the country and there was a reaction in consequence. No reaction should be allowed just now. The plebiscite vote is but an important preliminary step to important legislative action that should follow. As matters now stand cite. clenched this by adopting a resolution the next big push must be for legislation to follow as a natural result of the recent sweeping verdict of the electorate. Unless that is vigorously pressed the country will not reap the great advantages of the late splendid cam-

-Hon. Finance Minister Foster has been giving his views of the late plebis cite vote to a newspaper interviewer this week. He seems somewhat surprised that the verdict in favor of prohibition, the cities included, should be so large and uniform. As to the revenue, he says it makes no difference to the Government whether it be raised on tea, coffee, or by a direct tax, or from liquors. This is the people's matter, and it is for them to decide. He concluded by saying: "Personally, I have no doubt, and never had any, that if the waste, expense and ruin entailed by drink were done away Dr. Lavell, warden of the Kingston with, the country could well afford to pay three times the taxes in some different way." In our opinion some well-meaning temperance people have made a great mistake in driving Mr. Foster off the prohibition platform. minion. Something like two-thirds of He has been one of its ablest advocates in past days and, we believe, he is in fu'll sympathy with it yet. Of course, he saw, when in office, difficulties in the way that he did not realize when in opposition.

Past experience has taught us cut off the supplies and the selling can be effectively prohibited. Any thing short of that will not succeed. The temperance people of Canada for the last quarter of a century have asked every Parliament we have had for laws prohibiting the manufacture and importation as well as the sale. Had such laws been enacted they would have been successful and satisfactory. The trouble has been that nearly all our previous legislation has been merely pottering with the selling. We do not need now merely some amendments to the license act; we need an effective blow at every department of the business.

The Plebiscite Verdict.

The Most Sweeping Verdict Ever Given by the Electorate of Ontario.

New Year's Day, 1894, will long be emembered in connection with the prohibition movement in Canada. The movement in the premier Province of Ontario passed the most important milestone that day that has ever yet been passed on the high road to victory. The temperance people all along claimed that a majority of the people desire thorough and effective prohibition as soon as it can be obtained, while many had honest doubts. But even the great body of temperance wind.

There has been quite a loud outcry nected with the unfortunate men satisfy the public demand. The mere and delay the reform which temper the licensed drink traffic continues as it Prince Edward Island's Vote, ties for prohibition are very large, and required for the same purpose. Like will probably not fall far short of causes will go on producing like 100,000 in the aggregate. The whole effects. Province, with the exception of a very that. We need effective legislation to few districts, seems to be of one mind upon the subject. Whenever the question of public sentiment is discussed, the prohibitionists can lay their hands upon an authentic and convincing piece of testimony. In no way could their cause have been so far laws and liquor sellers have little pity advanced in a short time as by this for them. Is there any wonder that demonstration of the strength of the sentiment for the abolition of the liquor traffic."

> The Empire of the same day says: 'Prohibition having carried throughout the Province, it is now in order for the Ontario Government to throw on the Dominion Government the onus of legislation and enforcement."

The Mail says: "A full vote on prohibition was not polled; but as far as the piebiscite went it was a declaration in favor of the destruction of the licensing system and the discontinuance of of the manufacture, importation, and sale of liquors. When the vote was decided upon it was pointed out in these columns that although conceded to the prohibitionists as an answer to their appeals for legislation, it was practically a challenge to them to prove that they had a raison d'etre in this Province. Had the decision been adverse, it would have been a serious blow to the principle in that it would have given the legislators a new argument against it. The verdict saves the friends of prohibition and holds their policy in the arena.

An attempt at compromise between right and wrong is sure to land a man in difficulties. It never does, in matters wher principle is involved, to sail too close to the Even then the tax-payers have the lightest part of the great burden. Something like one-third of all the thousands of prisoners thus incarcerated and disgraced are married men. God pity the wives and children thus disgraced! Our liquor many wives and daughters give way to discouragement under such circumstances and many brothers and sons lose heart and resort to crime?

What a disgrace to Christian Canada that its law-makers enact such laws and that even some of its "Christian ministers" have the face to defend them.

When thou art at the greatest pinch, strength shall come. When the last handful of meal was being dressed, then was the Prophet sent to keep the widow's house.

Drink, Danger and Death, The town of Chatham had a pretty good illustration one evening last week of the fact that a prohibition liquor law is necessary for the safety and protection of those who do not drink. George Monk, a quiet young man of 25 years, the son of a wealthy farmer, was crossing a bridge on one of the leading streets, where he was met by John Rowan, a somewhat dissipated railway brakeman, who was quite delirious at the time, the result of a drinking spree. The inebriated man demanded of Monk who he was coughing at, and young Monk quietly replied that he was not coughing at anybody. "You lie!" was the ruffian's response as he inoffensive passer-by, both of which produced serious and dangerous wounds. The wounded man managed to make his escape, and is now lying in a serious and critical condition, sufferng great pain. If he recovers he may probably be maimed for life.

The drunken fellow threw his rethe chief of the police he had shot a hibition measure. man, apparently rather glorying in the act. He told a reporter shortly after that "he was out gunning and meant to get big game."

Of course, it was evident that he was drink-crazed at the time. There was no other reason why he should thus make a deadly assault fon a quiet man whom he had never seen before. Such wanton acts are too common. Every year men and women who never drank and who protest against the existence of the legalized drink traffic are thus killed outright by someone who simply happens to be "on a tear" or is having a "glorious good time," or the like of

Of course, John Rowan is now lying in jail, cared for and fed at the taxpayers' expense, while his victim is lying in a critical state in the hospital enduring great suffering, and his triends are being racked with anxiety. They all will feel thankful, however, if, after weeks of such terrible pain, such intense anxiety and great care, tireless watching and much expense, even his life can be saved.

This is not the first time that the same drinking fellow has been charged with serious offenses against the persons of quiet and sober citizens. Scores on the street, apparently too drunk to of men, quiet and well behaved enough know what he was doing. He was when sober, are constantly committing crazed with drink. The devilish work will go right on just as long as our laws authorize and sanction liquor-selling. Men and women are every day endangered in the streets so long as drinking and drunkenness continue. go about prating for the continued successful issue." Just as though the personal liberty of the John Rowans does not, in such cases, in-Monks and thousands of others!

How can society ever properly protect itself while the terrible business goes on?

Every man who goes into the liquor business, either as a maker or seller, well enough knows the dangers that innocent people are all the time in sympathy with the movement and peril of because of the every day results. And yet some of them talk about "compensation" without a blush on their when you will find your wishes accomthat the electorate of the entire Province of Prince Edward Island gave a largemajority in favor of prohibition at the late Provincial election. The exact figures are in now, and they show that the electors, as a whole, stand about three to one in its favor. That is very much as the majority stood in Manitoba nearly two years ago, and very much as the majority in Ontario stands now.

The following are the figures of Prince Edward Island: Against prohibition..... 3,390

Majority..... 7,226 These figures are the more significant from the fact that the whole Province has tried the Scott Act for some years, and the counties are now all under the act. This would indicate that the people, as a whole, are by no means convinced that any such attempts at prohibition are failures. In the city of Charlottetown, the only city on the island, the prohibition majority was over 600. There is a good deal of significance in these figures. Charlottetown first adopted the Scott Act in 1879 by a majority of 584, and it went into force soon after. In 1884 there was another vote, and it was sustained by the slim majority of 40. In 1887 there was another vote and the majority was reduced to 20. In 1891 there was still another vote and the act was defeated by a majority of 14. The cause of the revolution of feeling was largely because the people made the too common mistake of electing a council, the majority of whom were not in sympathy with the enforcement of the law. For the last two years the fired two shots of his revolver at the liquor selling has been open and above board, as of old, but the recent vote plainly indicates that the majority of the people, after a fair trial of both systems, are anxious for an efficient prohibition law. It is now intimated that the Scott Act will probably be reenacted in that city unless the Dominion Government takes some immedivolver in the river and went and told ate steps to provide a general pro-

Local Option in England. The temperance people of England have long been struggling to obtain a local option law, similar to what we have had in Ontario for some time and it seems at last that their prospects of success are good. Thirteen years ago placed in jeopardy, or wounded, or the House of Commons adopted a resolution in favor of such a law, just as the Commons of Canada adopted resolutions in favor of prohibition 'whenever the country is ripe." Last year, however, the Gladstone Government brought down a local option bill, giving the electors of each parish the right to decide for no license, if a twothirds majority so votes, and it was shelved in consequence of the long and angry struggle on the Home Rule Bill. A few days ago a large and important deputation, headed by such well-know workers as Sir Wilfred Lawson, M.P., Lady Henry Somerset and Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, waited on the Government to urge that the bill should be pressed as early as practicable. They

Pessimism a Disease.

For some cause or other pessimism appears to be in an especial degree characteristic of our own time, and our own stage of development. The causes are varied and complex. Some of us have too little to do, and find the lap of luxury monotonous and tiresome, which it undoubtedly is. Some of us have too much work and are devoured with bitterness and envy of softer Many are troubled with physical or spiritual liver complaint all their days, and never suspect An invincible note of sadness runs through modern life. Matthew saucer of milk will not be warmed for Arnold accurately says of this poet: our next meal.

It is probable that the philosophical attitudes which we call optimism and pessimism, are generally less the result of mental conviction than of individual temperament. There is in life an enormous amount of pain-an enormous amount of pleasure. But the pronounced pessimist huddles himself in his gray cloak and shuts his eyes to the crimson and purple and golden glories of earth. It is characteristic of the spiritually color blind that, not content with seeing nothing but drab and mud color, they sorrowfully contend that there are no other hues to be seen. It may be that they cannot help themselves. It is just possible that each soul comes into the world with its own individual color, and, in the principle that like attracts like, it draws to itself only the tint of which it was formed. Thus the golden soul would revel in sunshine; the dark spirit "builds its nest with the birds of night;" the rose colored being discovers that life is a triumph; the gray one that it is a pilgrimage; the magenta soul is grieved to see that no one takes a fancy to him. He

It is said that the faces which Gains. borough painted differ notably in character and expression from those which fill the walls of a modern picture gallery. The new type is as beautiful, more deeply intellectual, certainly more sad. There is a growing sense of the significance of pain. The spread of unorthodoxy may be responsible for some of it, but much more may be attributed to the decay of what George Eliot called "other-worldiness"-that facile optimism which held this world as a vale of tears to be compensated for by an eternity of pleasures in the next. the world to feed his morbid passion the American plan. on. If he is self centered there is no safety valve of philanthropy; he leads a life of brooding wretchedness. The expression of such a life, full of storedup bitterness, is given in the following poem by Amy Levry:

This dominant sense of a besetting personal pain raises the inevitable question, What help is there? By what philosophy, what direction of will, is a soul smitten with this modern disease of pessimism to shake off the paralysis, and get back into touch with the normal and saner aspect of things? It is easy to say that pessi-

But how do these undoubted truths meet the case of those who have not the gift of sympathy? The ways by which the individual mixes with the universal are love, friendship, religion, the passion of art, the passion of humanity. If these avenues are irretrievably closed, what then? Has any amount of the self-centered?

If they contain alcohol and are taken in large enough quantities to produce any stimulating and exhilarating effects at all, they are sure to irritate the coatings of the stomach, injure the gastric juice and derange the digestive organs.

In Wyoming the last election demonstrated the following important facts, as a result of woman's suffrage:

Hon. Mr. Warren, United States senator, says:

"Our women consider much more carefully than our men the character of candidates, and both political parties have found themselves obliged to nominate their best men in order to obtain the support of the women,"

Hon. H. L. Andrews, Speaker of the Wyoming House of Representatives, has said:

"I came to this territory in 1871, with the strongest possible prejudice against woman suffrage. The more I have seen of it, the less my objections have been realized. The women use the ballot with more independence and discrimination in regard to the qualifications of candidates than men do. If the ballot in the hand of woman compels political parties to place their best men in nomination, this, in and of itself, is a sufficient reason for sustaining woman suffrage."

Honest, old-fashioned butter has melted and run out of the world, and instead thereof we have trichinosis in all styles served up morning, noon and night. It is amazing that there is any good health left after the systemized and almost universal poisoning process. Let us agitate the subject in pulpit and printing press and by legal vigilance, by so much as we care for our own health and the health of the people. But what is worse, adulteration has got into religion and the bread of life has been evilly tinctured, and the milk of the word watered. Free grace is the divine provision for the human family. In our time we mix it all up. A little grace will do with a decoction of humanitarism and a few grains of spiritualism, and a liberal sprinkling of worldly philosophy, and a decided coloring of art, making it vermillion or ultra-marine, and then we take the tongs of the altar and stir it up and stir it down, and mix it in and mix it out, until much of the religion of this day is deception and death, instead of life.

Spiritual adulteration is the curse of the church of Jesus Christ in our day. There will never be any improvement on the old gospel. Everything added weakens its original power. What the world wants is Bible pathology and Bible therapeutics and Bible pharmacy in order to cure its disorders, and not the world's quackery. What it wants to feed its spiritual hunger is not the cake of human confection, which may please the taste, while it gives no brawn to spiritual character, but the strong meat of the Word and the bread of which, if a man eat, he shall never hunger. Away with the adulteration of food and medicine from your groceries and drug stores, and away with spiritual adulteration from the churches should all go back to primitive Christi- vated is equally beyond doubt. anity, the progress of the gospel, which is rapid now, would be a hundredfold modern admixtures, less of the gospel Darwinian, and more of the gospel Pauline. - [Rev. Cure for Diphtheria.

Diphtheria has become one of the most dreaded of scourges to the household, and is especially dangerous to the children. It has been too common a thing to read of whole families of children being swept off in a few days of this dreadful disease. Any remedy will be hailed with gladness, not only lowing is given for what it is worth:

Apply coal oil with a camel's hair brush or a throat swab to the white spots that appear in the throat with the disease. The oil seems to destroy the bacterial growth at once. The article Wyoming, in her mountain home, reads as follows: "The membrane of diphtheria consists of a most rapidly growing plant, and among the other elements in petroleum is a large amout of sulphur, which is very inimical to diphtheria membrane. At once the membrane seems to become thinner, that is, ceases to grow, and that which has attained its growth breaks down under the softening of the oil, and eventually disappears. The person applying the oil should be careful to stand a little to one side, so that should the hood, to help the world, because there patient cough no particle of the expectorated material can get into the eye of the operator, as the human eye is of all culture mediums for diphtheria bacilli about the most favorable. The Children's Room. How peaceful at night The sleeping children lie Each gentle breath so light Escaping like a sigh! How tranquil seems the room, how fair The one who softly enters there!

Whose hands are those, unseen, That smoothe each little bed? Whose locks are those that lean Over each pillow'd head? Whose lips caress the boys and girls? Whose fingers stroke the golden curis?

Whose are the yearning eyes, And whose the trembling tear Whose heart is this that cries, Beseeching God to hear? Whose but the mother's, in whose face Love shows its sweetest dwelling place?

Her hopes in beauty bloom, And heaven sends down its light Which lingers in the room Where mother says "Good night." Her very presence seems a prayer!

Some Cold Weather Rules. [From the Samaratan.] Never lean with the back upon any thing that is cold. Never begin a journey until breakfast has been eaten. Never take warm drinks and then immediately go out into the cold. Keep the back, especially between the shoulder blades, well covered; also the chest well protected. In sleeping in a cold room, establish a habit of breathing through the nose, and never with the mouth open. Never go to bed with cold or damp feet. Never omit regular bathing, for, unless the skin is in active condition, the cold will close the pores and favor congestion and other diseases. After exercise of any kind never ride in on open carriage or near the window, of a car for a moment; it is dangerous, to health or even life. When hoarse speak as little as pos sible until the hoarseness sis recovered from, else the voice may be permanently lost or difficulties of the throat be produced. Merely warm the back by the fire and never continue keeping the back exposed to the heat after it has become comfortably warm. To do otherwise is debilitating. When going from a warm atmosphere into a cooler one keep the mouth closed, so that the air may be warmed in its passage through the nose before it reaches the lungs. Never stand still in cold weather, especially after having taken a slight degree of exercise, and always avoid standing on ice or snow, or where the person is exposed to cold wind. Able to do exceeding abundantly above all ever took was behind a ten-foot shark. In pulling my boat over a shallow lagoon one day in the Gulf of Mexico, I came upon a school of twenty or more sharks, lying on the bottom. In a moment I had my grains—a small spear-fastened into one, and away went the fish like a shot. The line was soon exhausted, and as the board to which it was attached went over the side, I grasped it, and, losing my balance, went overboard, and found myself dashing along behind the shark. The lagoon was not over three or four feet deep, so I determined to hold on while shoal water lasted. The lagoon was halt a mile square, and I was towed for some distance, my companion rowing the boat after us, and, finally, intercepting my steed and taking me aboard, when we succeeded in bringing the shark to a neighboring island."

FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

About Dreams.

Every reader of these pages, however young, has been in "Dreamland" at some time, and may have some amusing remembrances of what was seen there. Dr. Friederich Scholy, who has written a book on "Sleep and said to him, 'You are not in Paris, but Dreams," has this bit of interesting information, which may be well worth reading and considering:

"Dreams seem to demonstrate that nothing which we have once mentally possessed can be entirely lost. For memories which, when awake, we are unable to recall, try as we may, will come vividly to us in dreams. There is a well authenticated instance of a girl who, during an attack of febrile delirium, spoke in a language that no one about her could understand, and it was finally discovered to be Welsh. illness knew not a single word of the language. No one could explain the matter until finally it was found that she had been born in Wales, and as a afterwards entirely forgot it.

"Persons and things which we have long forgotten appear to us in dreams. A gentleman after an absence from his home of 25 years, determined to revisit it, and seek out the old friends of his father. On the night previous to his journey he dreamed of a particular spot near his old home which he never remembered to have seen, and of an unknown man who introduced himself as a friend of his father. On arriving at the place, west was his astonishment to find the very place and the very man of which he had dreamed, only the features of the latter were more aged. Here appeared again old pictures of memory which were buried so deep, and had little connection with the thoughts and scenes that had intervened, that were no longer recognized |

"We have heard that one dreams nothing that he has not experienced. One also dreams nothing that he has not thought. In some form or other whatever the dream must at some time have been in the possession of our waking consciousness, or must in its origin have already slumbered there. Glass Bricks.

Glass and paper are all the time coming into more general use and for dozens of purposes not even guessed at The patient both before and after her a few years ago. The bricks serve as double windows, giving protection against both cold and heat; they are good insulators of humidity and noise; and they lend themselves readily to the decoration of buildings either by their form or their color. Many applications are foreseen. The bricks are neater than marble in meat markets, and are especially adapted for bath halls, hot-houses, hospitals, refrigerating establishments, and buildings in which absence of windows would be an advantage. A hot-house of glass bricks is of about ordinary cost, saves fuel and resists hail,

The British Museum.

Nearly every scrap of paper in regard to the great British Museum in darkness. If we adopt Bougeault's London is of interest and value to all young people of Canada. Nearly every country in the world has been ransacked for curious and interesting things for that great depository of information and curiosities. Some day Canada may have something akin to it. "The Million," an English journal, has the following:

The British Museum has often been called the finest study in the worldand it well deserves the name. There is no place where the student can so easily and comfortably avail himself of the world's best literature. He sits down at a well-furnished writing desk, and, without saying a word, summons tomes and treasures from the vast stores of books with which the institution is filled.

The temple of the intellect is a large circular room, lined from floor to roof with books. The central space is filled with desks for the accommodation of readers, and shelves, on which the catalogues of the museum are placed. On entering this room the student is entitled to take possession of any vacant seat he may find except the two rows of seats allotted to ladies. The seats radiate from the center of the room in double rows. A comfortable, stuff-bottomed chair, a hat rack, and foot-bars are provided for each reader, together with two pens, an ink bottle and wiper. On the thick, patent-leather covered desk is a blotting book, and close at hand a paper

On his right hand a shelf falls down for the purpose of holding his surplus volumes, and on his left an ingenious bookholder opens up at an angle most convenient to his posture in the chair. The floor of the room is carpeted with noiseless material, and as conversation is not allowed, it would be difficult to study under more favorable conditions. And what a vast store of books are at his disposal! People often ask how many books there are in the British Museum, but nobody seems to know. In fact, there are so many that it is impossible to count them. Some years ago it was estimated that there were 2,000,000 books there. Since that estimate was made the number has considerably increased.

Under the Copyright Act publishers are bound to send to the museum every book, pamphlet, periodical or newspaper that is offered for sale in the British Isles. Every week an enormous shoal of literature is poured into the vaults of the museum, and, strange to say, it never comes out again. Books good and bad, newspapers worthy and worthless, pamphlets poor and paltry, all hurry along in a ceaseless stream to the museum, to be most religiously preserved in its cavernous

The Old Religion.

[By Rev. T. D. Talmage, D. D.] Our modern religion has not enough backbone to stand alone. It must lean against the gate of the university or it flops right over. The old religion can stand alone and defiant of all assailment. It made no apologies and it offered no compromise to sin. We need, in order to get back to the old religion, which cannot be improved by human adulteration, to cultivate faith in the supernatural, not the supernaturalism which tries to look through the seance of the spiritualistic trickster into the next world, but the supernatural of Bible times, when iron swam and the foot walked water and the dead

wakened at the Christly call. A man who does not believe in the "How did you enjoy the football supernatural is not a Christian and has not learned the first element of the Christian life. How well I remember the scene when in special services a gentleman of large culture, scholastic "Yes; two men lost their ears, one and critical to the last degree, came to had his nose broken, and I got into a the front seats, and when I asked him soul, he said, "By no means, I simply come up here as a matter of domestic courtesy; I wish you would talk with my wife, she is anxious to find the way of salvation." I talked with her on the subject of her soul's welfare, and after awhile the husband beckoned to me and said, "Why there is something supernatural about this." I said, "Of course, it is all supernatural or it is nothing at all." "Why," he said, "my wife was not a Christian an hour ago, now she is a Christian." Sure enough she had by the power of the Holy Ghost, been introduced into the light of the Gospel. I said to him, "Do you not feel some of this supernatural power in your own heart?" "No sir," Some ten or fifteen minutes more of the religious service, passed by, and I saw his head bowed. I knew that the supernatural influence had seized upon his soul. After awhile I came to him. He looked up in my face and said, "I have found it too; I have given my heart to the Lord; I cannot tell you what a change there has been in my feelings in regard to Christ and the Christian religion. I am a Christian. I have but one great desire in this matter, and that is to profess faith before the world, if you will receive me." The one great distinctive quality of the Christian religion is that it is supernatural, and all this modern attempt to take the supernatural out of the miracles and the supernatural, out of the life of Christ as a stab straight at the heart of God. Unadulterated Christianity is going to save the world and save it sooner than some of you have any idea.

Bare Feet and Health.

As to the healthfulness of going with out shoes and stockings, there can, says the London Hospital, be no question. Some of the healthiest children of the world are to be found in the Scottish Highlands, where shoes are seldom worn at an earlier age than twelve or thirteen. The negro and coolie laborers, who work barefooted, are usually in robust health. Brown, in the "History of Man," tells of an African monarch who suffered from what appeared to have been a cold in his head, besides other ailments, while his people were always as well as possible. Can it be that the reason was that, by the laws of his kingdom, he alone was permitted to clothe his feet, and that he gratified his vanity by always wearing gorgeous sandals? It is probably generalizing too much to "I thought you said you sat down to state, as a medical fact, that the barefooted races are the healthiest. But it is certain that bare feet are healthier than badly-shod feet. In our English under this law through contrast. This ingenious labor saving device is so simple in its construction as to admit of its adoption wherever required. It consists merely of a stout door of strong, hard wood, so attached to the wall that it will fit down snugly over the steps when wanted for use.

When not needed, it can be easily and quickly turned up against the cellar wall and held in place by means of a

A Poultry Problem.

Peter Collier, director of the New York experiment station, reported in a bulletin issued results gained in endeavors to settle the question whether hens will lay as well when kept away from males. He reports a pen of eight pullets kept without a male produced eggs at about 30 per cent less cost than an exactly similar pen with which a cockerel was kept. Another pen without a male gave during the first three months about the same proportionate excess of product over an exactly similar pen with which a cockerel was kept. Then the feather eating habit developed, and the egg product diminished, but during eight months the total egg yields for each pen was very nearly alike. In each of the two pens without male birds some pullets had begun to lay from one to two months earlier than any in the corresponding pens where male birds were

The feather, eating usually appears after feeding for any length of time an unvaried ration deficient in some constituents, more especially nitrogenous matter, but the habit has developed from idleness among fowls having a ration which gave satisfactory results with other similar pens of fowls fed at the same time. The vice should be stamped out by the removal of the first offender. The somewhat close confinement necessary in any trial where a careful account of the food is kept will always make the conditions more or less unfavorable to the largest egg production. In these experiments no attempt was made to force the laying, and the broody fowls were allowed to sit at will, there being many nest boxes in each pen. About the same number became broody in pens having male birds as in those without. The trials show that where the eggs are not used for hatching it is neither necessary nor economical to keep a male bird with laying hens for egg

Winter Gardening In the North.

So far only the smaller vegeables are grown under these glass roofed gardens, such as radishes, lettuce, tomaoes and cucumbers. REPAIRING MACHINERY.

Freatment of Rusty Bolts-Putting a Head on a Bolt.

One of the greatest sources of annoyance in agricultural machinery are bolts. Who has not wrestled with a rusty bolt? The nut refuses to go on, or, if on, will not come off, or perhaps when the nut is tightened the bolt comes apart or the head comes off. In the first instance, if the nut won't come off, jar it on each side with a hammer, holding a sledge or a heavy piece of iron on the opposite side of the nut. This will usually start it so as to allow the rut to be unscrewed. If after the above treatment it still holds fast, pour a little benzine or coaloil on it and let it stand a few hours before trying the nut with

If the time cannot be spared, then if possible heat it to a red heat and let it cool to a black, then put in your vise and try the wrench. If the above methods are of no avail your only resource is to cut the nut off the bolt. To do this, hold a sledge or heavy piece of iron on one side of the nut and nick the other with a cold chisel as deep as possible without cutting the threads on the bolt. After nicking one side place sledge on the other side and nick that side of the nut, and you will find that you can easily knock the nut off the bolt. Now run your die down over the threads on the bolt and tap out another nut to fit, and the job is done.

Now suppose, in getting the nut off the bolt, you have stripped the threads off, as is often the case, and you have no other bolt to take its place; then the thing to do is to make a new one or fix up the old one. If the bolt is not too small and short, you can fix the old one. One way is to heat the bolt on the threaded end to a yellow heat. It is then split up a little farther than the threads through the center of the bolt. To do this, hold the head of the bolt in the tongs, the end resting on the face of your anvil. Take your blacksmith chisel in right hand, and holding it central with the bolt split the end to the required length, your assistant striking the chisel with the sledge. Having split the bolt, draw out a wedge of wrought iron the width of the diameter of the bolt and | the standpipe. The sketch shows onedrive it into the split. Close the ends | half of the cover removed, and also the down over the wedge and heat to a welding heat. Hammer the end down round and smooth to the diameter of the bolt, true up the end and cut a new thread, and the bolt is as good as new.

Here is a cheap way to put a head on bolt: Suppose the bolt wanted to be onehalf inch in diameter. Take a piece of half inch iron and draw the end down tapering. Now take an old half inch nut and drive the tapered end into it. Rivet the end over as at A. Take a welding heat on the end and hammer each side and the end. Finish the inside of the head by running the bolt through a piece of flat iron having a half inch hole in it and drive the head down on the plate. This squares up the inside of the Ohio Farmer, the authority quoted, advises keeping an assortment of sizes of old and new nuts on hand.

About Early Radishes.

The radish is one of those vegetables that grow freely when the thermometer is but a very little above the freezing point, and it is therefore one of the easiest of vegetables for an amateur to bring forward early. Any little glass frame placed over the natural earth in which the radish seed is sown will bring them forward very rapidly. In case they freeze a little, they will not be materially injured. The soil for radishes should be very rich—indeed it cannot be too rich if a mild and tender root is desirable. The poorer the ground the more likely the roots are to be biting and bitter, says Meehan's Monthly. As a rule, the turnip rooted radishes are fit to use before the longer ones, and they are the best where great earliness is desired.

A BROODER FOR CHICKS.

It Is Heated by a House Lamn-No Boiler Is Required. This lamp brooder was originally described in the columns of The Farm and high on the other side. The box for the lamp is 12 by 16 inches inside. The brooder box has an open bottom, but the cover fits tight, the top having two or three inches air space over the tank should the top be level. The water tank (Fig. 2) is made of galvanized iron an inch deep and 12 by 54 inches. The stand pipe is 8 inches long, made large enough to insert the neck of a quart bottle in Any house lamp can be used, the top of the chimney being half an inch from the under side of the tank. The tank is covered with cloth or bagging, sewed on close and tight. The mother is a frame made of pine, covered with paper or tarred felt, with woolen cut in strips tacked on the edge, and when in position lies on top of the tank. The mother is a little smaller than the inside of the brooder-say, five or six inches. Use a sliding platform for the chicks and set it at first three inches lower than the under side of the tank and lower the platform half an inch every 10 days.

The illustration shows a double brooder, with tight partitions in the middle, and with openings for the chicks on opposite sides. The chicks in each brooder have separate runs. To set the brooder, have the end over the lamp (three-quarters of an inch the lowest from the top of the lamp, but half an inch is better) and the water will freely circulate. Fill the tank to the top of the standpipe; then fill a bottle with water and place the neck of the bottle in the opening of the standpipe, which gives pressure to the water, and the circulation will be complete. When chicks are very young, keep the inclined plane raised up. This brooder is an improvement over many others, as it heats with but little oil, and one need not go to the expense of a boiler. Chicks raised in it had no leg weakness and grew splendidly.

In Fig. 1, AAA show the tank, B the lamp, C the movable platform, E the inclined plane (or run) and S the standpipe (which is also used for filling the tank). In Fig. 2 the tank is shown, A being the end that goes over the lamp, and S shows side left open to have a view of the in-

Roots In Tile Drains.

Some striking instances are given in the New England Farmer of the choking of water courses and tile drains by the roots of trees. In these cases the roots entered at the joints between the pieces of tile. To prevent this clogging, it is regarded as important to make the ditches straight, so that the tiles will come in close contact at the ends. There is no doubt that it may be well to lay the joints in water lime cement for some time before the ditch is filled, when trouble is expected. The importance of packing the earth well around the tile to prevent it from becoming displaced in filling should be well understood. The roots of willows are found to be specially troublesome, and have spoiled the value of wells in this way, with a mass of roots that seriously obstructed the flow of

Most of the tile that is manufactured is sufficiently porous to admit the entrance of water through the sides when the joints are closed with cement. If the nature of the ground prevents making the drains perfectly straight, very long curves should be resorted to, which will allow the ends of the tile to be brought into close contact. The writer of the article which we have referred to, who appears to have examined many cases, says that however formidable the roots of willows have proved, he has known of no instances where roots from fruit trees have proved seriously troublesome, and he urges a special reason why drains should be straight beside that given, in that a crooked tile drain is sure to cause sediment to settle at the crooks and eventually to choke the drain entirely.

Storing Ice At Small Expense.

Every farmer needs ice during the heated term, and a great many defer storing it, thinking the expense of building an icehouse too great. Now, every one can have plenty of ice if he owns an outbuilding of any kind, according to the Ohio Farmer, which says: The building should stand on dry ground. If not, it should be provided with good drainage. This is very essential on account of keeping the ice solid in the bot-

The building can be made of old boards if the sides are made tight enough to hold the packing firmly in place. The packing must be on all four sides, and may consist of fine sawdust, chaff, charcoal or any such material that you can pack in hard and tight, about 18 inches thick. When the cold day arrives, fill it if possible all at once, after putting a thick layer of packing in the bottom before the first layer of ice goes in. Then fill in as fast as possible, cover thick with packing and put a tight roof over. Leave both gable ends open, and you will have ice all summer with very little cost.

Mr. Edward Botting, for ten years a councilor of the united townships of Bedford, Olden and Palmerston, in Frontenac county, is one who nearly fell a victim to this scourge. To a Whig correspondent Mr. Botting said t About two rears ago I had a bad attack of la grippe, and the after effects of that malignant trouble brought me so low that my friends despaired of my recovery. I was troubled with severe and constant pains in the back, sensations of extreme dizziness, weakness, and was in fact in a generally used up condition. I had read frequently of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and felt they must have some special virtues else they could not obtain such strong indorsations in all parts of the country. I determined to try them and I bless the day that I came to that conclusion. Before the first box was fin-ished I felt benefited, and I continued their use until I was as strong as ever. THE HACKNEY.

He Combines Action, Weight, Strength, Size, Spirit and Docility.

The trotter of today has been called with some justice a "mere racing machine." For those who want a general purpose horse in the way of riding, driving and light hauling, the present day racing trotter is no good. Thousands of people believe they have found the gen-

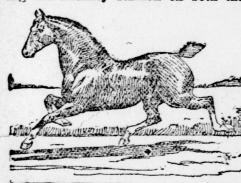

MATCHLESS OF LONDESBORO. eral purpose horse that is needed in the hackney, and the hackney boom is therefore on. The hackney in appearance has two distinguishing characteristics by which even a child that has seen him once may know him again. These are his high, arching neck and his long body, causing a wide distance between his fore legs and hind legs when he stands stretched out at full length. Like the fashionable person, the hackney has an "air" about him that is unmistakable.

The hackney that took the premium at the New York horse show as being the finest type of stallion of that breed in America was Dr. W. Seward Webb's Matchless of Londesboro, 9 years old, imported. The hind legs, standing far back, are very noticeable in the illustra-

Matchless possesses in a superlative degree that "action" for which this breed is noted. Action is indeed its strong point.

The second picture shows Matchless in action. The minute a hackney begins to go there is something in his splendid style and gait that draws every eye. Then as he goes faster and faster, dashing around the ring and making his long hind legs jump, the whole crowd at a horse show breaks into cheers. He is the showiest horse in existence.

The hackney has endurance unsurpassed. He will of course never take the place of our American trotters, but he will make a place of his own. He is a very high stepper in harness. Magnificent results have been obtained by crossing the hackney stallion on both the thoroughbred and the trotting mare. A famous show horse, Lord Loudon of Virginia, is the product of a hackney stallion and a trotting bred mare. Some of the best selling carriage teams in the New York markets are Canadians, crosses between hackney stallion and thoroughbred mare. The sire has great prepotency and stamps the hackney shape and action on the progeny every time.

I have a mare that I bought a year ago that has had three bad attacks. The symptoms are a cough at different times, with hard breathing even when standing idle, but sometimes worse after being well fed. When she is breathing hard, her flanks jerk in and out violently like those of a horse that is very tired. Two attacks each followed a hard day's work and a big feed at night.

The mare is suffering from a severe attack of the heaves, aggravated by overfeeding. Such cases are incurable when the disease is once well established. By careful attention to the diet a horse can usually be benefited so as to relieve the distressing symptoms. But the symptoms will reappear if the animal is allowed to overload his stomach, is put to hard work on a full stomach or immediately after a hearty drink, or is fed dusty or coarse, balky food of poor

The diet should be restricted and conhist only of a moderate ration of food of the best quality. Do not allow a "big feed at night," or in fact at any other time, with a broken winded horse. Very many such cases would keep in better condition and be able to do more work on much less feed than they consume. Many horses are actually kept poor and out of condition by overfeeding. If necessary to increase the feed to keep up the condition of a horse with the heaves, increase the grain ration, but not the hay or other coarse fodder. The best of all rations for a horse with the heaves is the "chop," being less bulky and free from dust. If any long hay is fed, it should be at night, and even then in moderate allowance.

In watering allow not more than one bucketful at once, which should be given before and not immediately after eating. Active exercise should not be given the horse immediately after a full meal. Remedial treatment is of but little if any benefit, and at best only affords partial relief. The correction and maintenance of a suitable diet is the best remedy. Arsenic is still sometimes prescribed, and the mare might be benefited by a long course, giving a tablespoonful of Fowler's solution in the feed once daily for several weeks .- F. L. FATTENING COWS FOR BEEF.

netimes It Pays; Sometimes It Is Cheap er to Kill the Cow.

Farmers in this part of the country do not fatten much beef-not much more than enough for their own use. In every dairy there are usually one or more cows that for various causes it is necessary to dispose of in some way. Besides those that are getting too old to keep longer, now and then one will fail for some reason to be profitable enough to continue longer in the dairy and must be got rid of in some way. Much of the stock is pretty hard to dispose of at any reasonable price, and so some is fed on the farm, and the beef either made use of at home or otherwise

As most farmers raise pumpkins they are usually fed to the cows that it is desirable to fatten as long as they will last or until it becomes cold weather. These make a good feed for the purpose and give the animals a fair start in the process of fattening. But it would undoubtedly be better to feed some grain along with the pumpkins. If corn is not the best for this purpose, then some other grain should be substituted, and what shall it be?

If too much starch is undesirable, then it is probable that gluten meal, with perhaps a little bran, would be about right. This would help to make good, tender meat, with little fat and more lean. But there should be fat enough intermingled with the lean to give a taste of richness, and aside from that used for steak to "cook itself." When tender and well cooked, this makes meat worth eating.

It is usual also to feed the small potatoes to fattening animals. These do very well, but do not produce as high colored beef as pumpkins. These contain a large amount of starch and should not be fed in too large quantities at least. It would hardly be economical to feed the potatoes and corn together, but the gluten might be substituted. Oats and barley also would be good, and a combination of these three should answer an excellent purpose.

A cow that has been a good milker will usually feed well for beef if not too old. There are some cows that it would be best to kill at once when not wanted longer for milk, rather than undertake to fatten them, as this would cost more than the beef would be worth. Most full blood or grade Jerseys will feed well and make excellent beef.

Last year it was found necessary to fatten one-a young cow, half each of Jersey and Ayrshire. She was milked all of the time, but she made excellent beef, the best the neighborhood butcher said he dressed that year. In our own experience we have fattened but one grade Jersey that proved a poor feeder and poorer beef .- St. Albans (Vt.) Mes-

Twig Paste For Cattle. A writer in Hoard's Dairyman tells about the German experiments in utilizing tree twigs for cattle food: "First, twigs not exceeding half an inch in thickness were crushed, not ground; then water heated to about 100 degrees and malt were added, and the whole mess was left for several days. Dr. Jarcow, reporting on this process, says: 'After three to four days the mash will have risen to about 150 to 160 degrees, by which the ferment in the malt converts the starch of the mash into sugar and affects the woody fiber so as to make it become fully digestible, while the valuable albumen in the mash is fully retained unchanged. In this way a twig paste is prepared, which is eaten with avidity by cattle, horses and sheep, and digested so completely that no undigested particles can be detected in the excre-

"It has been found by other German experiment stations that the best results are obtained by mixing the preparation with potatoes, turnips, beets, cut hay, etc. The stock, it is said, gained much more than when the best straw was the basis of the mixture. For the experiment twigs from the beech, linden, birch and maple were preferred, but the Germans claim that there is no reason why other trees, as fruit trees, pine and spruce, should not be used with equal success."

It is better to raise no horses at all than poor mean ones. The market is getting very finicky in these days of electric street cars, rich carriage people and high stepping horses. 'Tis well. THE CREAMERY SECRETARY.

He Is the Pivot Around Which a Butter

Factory Revolves. The reasons multiply for the selection of a conservative and thoroughly practical man for the care of any public institution or association. I believe that the successful creamery secretaries of Iowa are those who hold responsible positions year after year, and have developed business talent in other occupations and the creameries get the benefit of it. The systems of management of creameries are almost as numerous as the creameries themselves. With the interlacings of authority common in such cases there is no dearth of management, whatever may be said of the quality. Boards at the very best are unwieldy, and except in the capacity of auditors of accounts are likely to require too much time for action, especially in emergencies.

As a rule singleness of management is better than plurality. Granted a reasonable efficient secretary, the business is safer in his hands than when absolutely dependent upon a board for its management. The keeping of the books, the necessary payment for milk or cream and the care of the shipping accounts are his part in any case, and if there is added the consignment of goods and the purchase of supplies the strong probability is that the creamery will be the gainer thereby.

The experiment is usually tried at the outset of keeping too meager a set of books. I have gone on from a limited outfit at the beginning to a complete set of double entry, showing every transaction of the creamery, and the balance of every account of patrons and commission firms at every entry, and I would not stop short of this on any consideration likely to be held out. The possibility of mistakes makes such a plan of bookkeeping thoroughly desirable. This is especially true of co-operative creameries. In these every stockholder is a partner. Each one is entitled to an exact and detailed account of the business. The only hope of continued satisfaction on his part lies in making everything plain to him. Generally speaking, the greater the amount of knowledge concerning the creamery management, the more certain it is that he will be satisfied and assist in Upon examination it will be found that most of the hurtful things said about a creamery contain simply enough of truth upon which to hang that which is untrue and damaging in character. It is a case where "a little knowledge is

It should contain the date to which payment is made, the gross amount of milk, the average test for the period of payment, the pounds of butter fat, the price per pound of the butter and the amount deducted from the whole sum to the sinking fund. The amount remaining to be paid should follow as a matter of course. But the best plan is to have all the foregoing information extended upon a stub to be retained by the patron, the check proper containing simply the features of a common check directing the payment due the Misanderstandings arise from patrons of rival creameries comparing checks under the present various methods. The checks do not show all the facts and are therefore incapable of fair comparison. Concealment of facts from those to whom it is due never contributes to good will or success of any business. It is doubtful if any class of men on earth are more at the mercy of those with whom they deal than those who are stockholders of our co-operative creameries. What with the almost absolute ignorance of the commercial standing of the city firms and the guileless grace of that energetic army of good fellows who by rail and road cart and bicycle scour the country, it is no wonder the unsophisticated creameryman can do nothing but deliver the Dairy and Creamery.

Pasteurizing apparatus for dairies and creameries is now made in Germany and shipped to this country. But it need not be. Let some of the dairy chemists at our agricultural stations take the matter in hand and invent a pasteurizing apparatus of their own. It was an agricultural experiment station professor that gave the world the Babcock milk and cream test. That is what these stations are for-to find new and better ways of doing things for the farmer, live stock breeder and dairyman.

Two hundred men cannot run a creamery successfully when they all want to be boss and not one of them knows anything about the creamery business.

LESSON I, FIRST QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 7.

ext of the Lesson, Gen. i, 26-31; ii, 1-3. Memory Verses, 26-28-Golden Text, Gen. i, 27-Commentary by the Rev. D.

26. "And God said, Let Us make man in ar image, after Our likeness, and let them ave dominion." At some time in the past, nown only to God, called in the first verse the beginning," God created the heaven ad the earth—that is, He spake them into xistence—as is proved by Ps. xxxiii, 6; leb. xi, 3. He must have everything good, r He always does. That He did not create e earth without form and void is stated Isa. xlv, 18. Compare the R. V. What appened between verses 1 and 2 to bring bout this chaos we shall know some day. bout 6,000 years ago God brought order and beauty and fruitfulness out of the aos and confusion into the space of six ys as is here described. See also Ex. xx, 11. nd now on the sixth day He makes man have dominion over all. How He made 32 and woman is more fully stated in apter 11, 7, 21-25, and that he called their me Adam is stated in chapter v, 2. The ords "Let Us" imply the Trinity, which et is also clear to a simple minded Herew scholar in the word for God.

27. "So God created man in His own imge; in the image of God created He him; nale and female created He them." Then this man and woman must have been the finest pair that ever walked the earth. Whatever else is implied in this image of God, it is evident from Eph. iv, 24, that righteousness and holiness of truth are included. How much more we shall know when in that bright morning of the resurrection we shall have been made like Him who is the brightness of the Father's glory and the express image of His person (I John iii, 2; Heb. i, 3).

28. "And God blessed them, and God said unto to them, Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth and subdue it, and have dominion." The blessing of the Lord it maketh rich, and toil addeth nothing thereto (Prov. x, 22, R. V.). When in the sixth year God commanded His blessing on Israel, there was as much produced in one year as ordinarily in three years (Lev. xxv, 21). When sesus blessed the lad's loaves and fishes, they fed many thousands. He says, "Herein is My Father glorified that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be My disciples" (John xv, 8). The time is coming when the last Adam will subdue all things unto Himself, for He is able. But now He is gathering out and training the subduers, who shall in that day have dominion with Him. I find it helpful to pray, "Lord, inasmuch as Thou art able to subdue all things unto Thyself (Phil. iii, 21), subdue me wholly to Thyself now."

29. "And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed which is upon the face of all the earth and every tree in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat." God would have His children at perfect rest concerning food and raiment. As to clothing such as we wear, they had none (ii, 25), but inasmuch as all other creatures had a clothing which was a part of themselves, doubtless Adam and Eve, made in the image of God, were, like God, clothed with light (Ps. civ, 1, 2). And now here is full provision for their bodies as to food. We have no record of flesh being eaten till after the deluge (chapter ix, 3), though we do not say that it was not eaten. But He who fed sinful Israel for 40 years in the wilderness will always provide for His own.

30. "And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to everything that creepeth upon the earth wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat-and it was so." Not only man, but beast, is provided for. These wait all upon Thee that Thou mayst give them their meat in due season (Ps. civ, 27). Behold the fowls of the air, your Heavenly Father feedeth them. Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God (Math. vi, 26; Luke xii, 6)? Observe the phrase "I have given," and think of Rom. viii, 32. He who spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? 31. "And God saw everything that He had made, and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day." This is the seventh time that it is written, "God saw that it was good." God is love, and He cannot do or make that which is not in His sight good. He is good, and His mercy endureth forever (Ps. | The Injuries to the British War Ship exxxvi, 1). He is round about us as a wall of fire and will not possibly permit aught that is not good to come to us, so we can surely bless the Lord at all times (Zech. ii, 5; Ps. xxxiv, 1). In all the days it is first evening, followed by night and then morning. So now it is the world's night, but the night is far spent, and the day is at hand. The morning cometh (Rom. xiii, 12; Isa. xxi, 12). 1. "Thus the heavens and the earth were finished and all the host of them." "Thus." How? Why, by the word of His mouth (Ps. xxxiii, 6). In chapter i it is written 10 times, "And God said." Now, since He thus created all things, what is there He cannot do? "Ah, Lord God, behold, Thou hast created the heavens and the earth by Thy great power and stretched out arm, and there is nothing too hard for Thee" (Jer. xxxii, 17). If Christians, how thankful we should be that God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ (II Cor. iv, 6). On "the host of them" see Deut. iv, 19; Ex. xii, 41; Ps. ciii, 21; I Sam. i, 3.

2. "And on the seventh day God ended His work which He had made, and He rested on the seventh day from all His work which he had made." The words "finished" and "ended" are suggestive of some other works in due time finished or to be finished. as the tabernacle, the temple, the work of atonement and the redemption of the world (Ex. xl, 33; II Chron. vii, 11; John xx, 30; Rev. xxi, 5, 6). God "rested" cannot imply weariness, for He fainteth not, neither is weary (Isa. xl, 28). But He ceased as the manna ceased or a work might cease (Joshua v, 12; Neh. vi, 3). And if we would enter into His rest we must cease from our own works as God did from His (Heb. iv, 10). "And God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it, because that in it He had rested from all His work which God created and made." If we would know His rest, we must reverence His Sabbaths. Disobedience here gave Israel 70 years captivity (II Chron. xxxvi, 21). Obedience in this particular will bring the richest blessings (Isa. Iviii, 13, 14; Ivi, 4-7). We have come through nearly 6,000 years since God created Adam. It would not be strange if the seventh thousand should prove to be earth's Sabbath day, the thousand years of Rev. xx-the millenium. Let us cease from all our own works both as to salvation and service, and resting in His work let Him work in us (Phil. ii. 13). Coptain Sweeney, U. S. A., San Diego, Cal., says: "Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy is the first medicine I have ever found that would do me any good." Price 50 cents. Sold by C. McCallum.

HAWAII'S ROTHSCHILD. Banker Bishop Gives Over Half a Million

to Island Charities. Mr. Charles Reed Bishop, the banker at Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, has given between half a million and a million to various island charities. This is more in proportion to population than any man has ever given. Remember these islands have altogether only 90,000 inhabitants.

CHARLES REED BISHOP. Last week Mr. Bishop gave his ranch of 85,000 acres, stocked with cattle, on the island of Maui, to the Kamehameha Training School of this city. The gift was worth about $200,000, but it did not attract much attention. It was merely Mr. Bishop's way. Honolulu has grown accustomed to it. He does not make much fuss about these things. He would conceal them altogether if he could.

When he gave this ranch to the Kamehameha Training School, which is for boys, Mr. Bishop also gave $20,000 in cash to the Kamehameha Girls' Training School. The latter is not yet ready for work, and this gift will help it greatly.

Mr. Bishop was born at Glens Falls, N.Y., about 70 years ago, and married a princess, the last of a famous family, of the country he adopted.

In the early days of the gold discoveries on the Pacific coast, Mr. Bishop left New York and went around Cape Horn to Oregon. He intended to settle there, but his attention was attracted to the Sandwich islands, which to all except the whalers and American missionaries then seemed about as far away as the moon. But Mr. Bishop was adventurous enough to make the voyage to Hawaii, and remained He became a banker here and acquired a great fortune. He married the Princess Bernice Pauah, who was the last of the direct line of the Kamehamehas, the reigning house of Hawaii.

One must go there to understand the prestige enjoyed by the Kamehameha family in Hawaii. Kamehameha I., who before that time was merely a chief, subdued all the islands and brought them under his sovereignty, being the first king to rule over the whole of Hawaii. There have been since other kings of the name equally as great. In fact, the Kamehamehas have been the Hapsburgs or Hohenzollerns of Hawaii. So Mrs. Bishop was a very great woman in these islands.

Mrs. Bishop was as charitable as her usband is. They had no children, and when she died she left her large estates, derived from the Kamehameha royal family, to found two training schools in Honolulu, one for boys and the other for girls. Mr. Bishop fully indorsed her plans, and it is to these institutions that he made his gifts last week in addition to others at previous times.

The main hall of the Kamehameha Training School for Boys is the finest building in Honolulu, and is quite as imposing as the best that Harvard and Yale can show. The entire institution occupies numerous buildings in extensive grounds, and is wholly due to the munificence of Mr. Bishop and his wife.

But Mr. Bishop does not give to these schools only. When Oahu College celebrated its jubilee anniversary recently he presented $50,000 to that institution, and there are many large gifts that he has managed to conceal from the public.

Mr. Bishop is tall, has a firm, rather stern face, and is reserved in manner. He looks somewhat like a minister. Though he still conducts his banking business, he lives most of his time at the Occidental Hotel, in San Francisco. He owns much property in California as well as in Hawaii.

THE RESOLUTION.

More Serious Than First Supposed, When the war ship Resolution, which a few days ago was so damaged by a storm in the Bay of Biscay as to compel her to return to Queenstown, heeled over to an angle of forty degrees, it was feared by those on board that she would "turn turtle," as in the case of the recently lost war ship Victoria, and sink, and everybody was ordered to save himself.

The injury to the British war ship Resolution recalls the Victoria disaster of last year and other disasters to armorelads, and revives the question, Does it pay a government to build ships of this kind? The Resolution is of 14,150 tons displacement, and under force draught her engines are of 13,000 horse power. She was built in 1892 at Jarrow-on-Tyne. She is a twin-screw, first-class battle ship. Notwithstanding the reticence of the naval authorities and their attempt to suppress information about the conduct of the Resolution in the gale, it now leaks out that the vessel had been in a critical condition and that she is more seriously

H. M. S. RESOLUTION. damaged than was at first given out. The Resolution, which left Plymouth on December 18 for Gibraltar to join the British Mediterranean squadron, was forced to put back to Queenstown on the 23rd. She encountered a severe storm in the Bay of Biscay and made very heavy weather of it. Huge seas boarded her and swept her decks. Life lines were rigged, but despite this precaution one of her erew was washed overboard by a comber that came over the bow and was drowned. Several other members of the crew were injured and the ship was considerably damaged. In view of the condition of the ship it was decided to run to Queenstown, where repairs could be affected. One of her lifeboats was washed out of the davits. When she was ordered from Queenstown to Plymonth she leaked all the way and her

THE LATE DR. JELLINER

HE WAS A TRUE AND ABLE DEFENDER OF MODERN ISRAEL

A Famous Jewish Scholar and a Brief Sketch of His Life-The Most Eloquent Pulpit Orator-A Brother of the Noted

Through the death of Rev. Dr. Adolph Jellinek, chief rabbi of Vienna, Austria, modern Israel has lost one of its truest advocates and ablest defenders. Dr. Jellinek's demise will be deeply deplored by the Jews of every land, because he was almost the last living member of that magnificent band of scholarly preachers which included such men as G. Eiger, Zunz, Holdheim and Manheimer, his predecessor. Jellinek was famed as the father and the best exponent of modern Jewish homiletics. For many years he has been considered the most eloquent and gifted pulpit orator in Vienna.

Dr. Jellinek was born in Ungarisch-Brod, Australia, June 26, 1821. His boyhood years were spent in receiving a thorough Biblical and rabbinical training under the guidance of several famous scholars. In 1845 he was called to the position of preacher in Leipzig. where he remained during 11 years. While rabbi of Leipzig he began his career as author, and early in his literary life he began the study of Cabala, of which he soon became the first and greatest scholar.

In 1856 he was invited to fill the foremost pulpit of Europe, for the Jewish population of Vienna was larger than that of any other city. Ever since that time he had faithfully endeavored to elevate the Jews of his city and every other city. He was most voluminous writer on most varied subjects. An important and valuable work of his is the "Beth Hamidrash," a ed from the ancient Jewish literature. His contributions to the bibliographical science of the Talmud are considerable. In 1891 Dr. Jellinek attained his 70th year. and his birthday anniversary was made the occasion for an imposing celebration by the Jews of Europe and his brethren in

Dr. Jellinek was a brother of the noted revolutionist Hermann Jellinek, who was shot at Vienna in February, 1849, for his participation in the movement of the previous October. He published in 1844 a translation of Adolph Franck's "Cabala; or, Religious Philosophy of the Hebrews;" wrote "Historical Researches on the Kabbala" (two volumes, 1851-52), "Moses ben-Shemtob ben-Leon and his Relations with the Zohar" (1851), "A Selection of Writings of Kabbalistic Mysticism" (two volumes, 1852-53) and "Saint Thomas Aquinand Jewish Literature" (1853), and edited the "Midrash of Eskera" (1858), "Documents Illustrative of the History of the Crusades, from Hebrew Manuscripts" (1854), the "Religious Poems of Salomon ibn-Gabriol" (1853), and many other treatises of Hebrew antiquity. He published some of his "sermons," wrote for the Israelite Universe, and was for two years (1845-46) editor of the Sabbath Journal at Leipzig.

PNEUMATIC SKATES.

The New Device Has Taken Birmingham, Ala., by Storm.

In line with the air heel is the pneuma tic skate which we here illustrate as a matter of curiosity and information. It has lately been seen in the streets of Birmingham, Ala., and, judging from the admiration it excites, is not unlikely to find its way soon into all parts of the coun-Whereas the ordinary roller skate try. has four wheels, the pneumatic skate has only two, placed in line at either extremity of the skate. The wheels are rather larger than those of the roller skate, and instead of solid rubber are covered with pneumatic tires. The patentees claim for them that one can skate over ordinary turnpike roads the same as on ice and even at greater speed, while at the same time they will easily escend and descend hills. Six or seven miles an hour, however, is the maximum speed attempted in the streets of Birmingham, and that only on smooth roads. An obvious advantage of the pneumatic skate over the pneumatic cycle is that punctared tires may be readily replaced, as the skater may carry surplus tires, or even reserve wheels ready fitted in his overcoat pocket. The skates are arranged to clamp or strap on the soles of the shoes like ordinary skates, but the rollers are fitted with pneumatic tires and ball bearings, and run noiseless-ly; the rollers being 3 1-8 inches in diameter, the tires 2 inches, and the average weight of each skate is 2 3-4 pounds. And so the development and application of the pneumatic goes on.

A Gigantic Irragation Scheme. The people of Arizona are enthusiastic over a gigantic irrigation scheme, which is hoped to enhance the attractiveness of that state. The plan is to build a big steel dam in the Grand Canon of the Colorado River of sufficent strength to resist any of the summer floods, part of the water thus confined to be used to operate turbine wheels to drive pumping machinery for elevating the remainder to the plain above. The supply of water in the Colorado is unfailing, and many of the most extensive valleys in the territory could be irrigated by such a system. The scheme is generally said to be feasible.

STEVENSON IN SAMOA.

AN "AT HOME" WITH THE DELIGHT-FUL ROMANCER

In the Mansion He Has Built for Himself Among the Savages and Wherein He Lives Like a Baron-A Gay Tea in

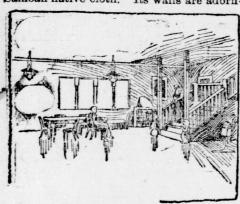

The pretty general idea prevailing among the admirers of Robert Louis Stevenson, that he is leading a half-savage sort of life among the wild woods of Samoa and pickup what sustenance he can from bread-fruit and queer and yams and the milk of cocoanuts, is disabused entirely by one of the latest visitors to the genial Scot exile. According to that gentleman the romancer is about as conveniently domiciled as any man could wish for, and far more delightfully than most. Why, he has a drawingroom! Yes, and a dining-room and a library and a writing room, and more servants to wait on him than an English Earl. As your eye is wandering over this paragraph it is glancing askance at the salon where Mr. Stevenson receives his guests in a wilderness-of flowers.

For a description of the beautiful bay in which Apia lies his lovers have only to turn to the early chapter of "A Foot-note to History." It is like a bit of the waters in Paradise. After leaving the road leading from the harbor a delightfully shaded bridle path (and one is thankful for the shade) winds up the hill to the gateway opening on the lawn in front of the spacious verandaed mansion named Vailimathe five waters-where Stevenson has pitched his tent.

You meet your host in the reception room, the walls and floors of which are of polished timber, and a wide staircase leads from it to the upper rooms. Sir George Reid's portrait of the novelist's father hangs on the wall, the grim firm face recalling the poem in which the son refers to the engineering labors of his sires, and "the towers we founded and the lamps we

The writer to the Pall Mall Budget, who has furnished three interesting details, says that Stevenson's study where he does his writing now is one of the smaller rooms "on the upper floor in the left wing." This almost suggests the spaciousness of one of Ouida's palaces. "It is severely simple in its furnishings," he goes on to say, "and its window looks out over the cleared lawn in front, to the tropical forest with the blue waters of the Pacific stretching away in the distance. The library is quite separate from the study, and is a fine room at the other end of the upper floor. It is filled with books which cover the floor as well as line the shelves. An outer stair leads down to the western end of the lower veranda. The kitchen and the rooms where his 'boys' live are built in Samoan fashion and are at the back of the house.

"There is a pleasant sitting-room at the corner of the lower floor papered with Samoan native cloth. Its walls are adorn-

There was a South Sea pirate of that name, and this was his pistol, although at the time 'Treasure Island' was written the author was not aware that such a person had ever existed. Here hangs also the partrait of Stevenson, by John S. Sargent, which was painted at Bournemouth in 1885. It is a striking portrait, and is additionally valuable for the likeness of that peculiarly interesting lady the novelist's wife, which the artist has inserted in the painting. At the time of my visit his stepdaughter and stepson, Mrs. Strong and Mr. Lloyd Osborne, were living with him. Such a household made interesting company. The eerie sound of the conch shell, which is the war note in Samoa, was the signal for lunch, and the bowl of kava was handed round with the cigarettes and coffee.

A charming account of a chance visit to Vailima is also given by the correspond-

"It was a lovely September afternoon.

We found the house festooned with tropical ferns and the verandas crowded with British tars and Samoan men and maidens. They were having a right merry time of it. In the midst of all there moved about the master of the house, exerting himself to increase the enjoyment of his guests. His efforts were far beyond what his physical strength seemed to warrant. Mrs. Stevenson, her daughter, Mrs. Strong, and Mr. Lloyd Osborne, were doing their utmost to make the bluejackets and the natives enjoy themselves. Some of the natives were insane with delight at the hornpipe dance of the jolly tars. The sailors would sing one be sung in return; one of these being sung to the tune of 'Sweet Bell Mahone.' couple of the sailors gave some acrobatic performances on the lawn in front. Never did performers have more enthusiastic spectators. Some of the natives not only velled with delight, but danced in wild frenzy. There followed the native dance, called Siva, which is performed while seated on the ground. All is done in per-feet time, and is very strange." After this followed a cricket dance (for the Samoan is crazed about cricket), and the visit ended. Who wouldn't like to be on Robert Louis Stevenson's visiting list?

FACTS ABOUT MONEY.

A String of Paragraphs That Are Especially Pat Just Now. Absolutely pure gold is said to be 24

The first colonial coinage was minted in Massachusetts in 1552. Julies Cæsar was the first man to put his

In the fifth century before Christ copper was deemed as precious as gold. Brass money was coined in Rome by Servius Tullius as early as 573 B.C.

Before the days of coined money the Greeks used copper nails as currency. Herodotus says that Croesus was the first sovereign to make coins of gold. The United States Mint was established in 1792, and at once began operations. The first English laws against counterfeiting were issued in 1108 by Henry I. The most ancient coins are of electrum, four parts of gold to one of silver.

been paid off in produce. In 1620 the first large copper coins were minted in England, putting an end to private leaden tokens.

Arabic coins have a sentence from the Koran, and, generally, the Caliph's name, but never an image.

In the worlds' mints from 1850 to 1890 there were coined 9,194 tons of gold, 81,-235 tons of silver. From 1862 to 1690 the accounts of the

A POET POLITICIAN.

A French Canadian Who Has Done Some Very Brilliant Work,

The Hon. Felix Gabriel Marchand. M.P.P. for St. Johns, Quebec, enjoys the somewhat rare distinction of being a poet and a politician. He was born in Johns, January 9, 1832, and educated at Bt. Hyacinthe College. He subsequently studied law and was admitted to practice as a notary. During the Joly administration he was appointed Provincial Secretary and afterward Minister of Crown Lands. He was first elected a member of the Quebee Legislative Assembly for the county of St. Johns, in Sept., 1867, and has been reelected from that time to the present day. His literary career has been no less successful than his political one. He has contributed to French Canadian literature several well-known poetical and dramatic

HON. FELIX GABRIEL MARCHAND, M.P.P. works, such as "Un Bonheur en Attire un Autre" and "Les Faux Brillants," two comedies in verse; also "Le Lauriat de l'Universite," a comic opera. These works have been received very favorably not only in Canada, but also in France. Mr. Marchand is a member of the Royal Society of Canada, and has also been decorated by the French Government. His poetry is characterized by pure spirituality, a keen sense of beauty and very marked culture. In 1854 Mr. Marchand married Marie Herzelie Turgeon, and as a result of this union has reared a family of eleven children. He has been in every sense a successful man, and has the additional satisfaction of enjoying the respect and esteem of his compatriots throughout the Prov-

A Polyglot Army.

The polyglot character of the Austrian army was abundantly shown the other day when the ancient custom of solemnly swearing in the recruits in the presence of the troops was revived, after having been discontinued since 1868. In Vienna alone the formula of oath to the colors had to be administered and read out in nine languages, to wit: German, Hungarian, Croation, Bohemian, Polish, Ru-thenian, Roumanian, Servian and Turkish, while the religious part of the ceremony was conducted by a Roman Catholic, Greek Catholic and Greek orthodox priests, Protestant pastors, Jewis Rabbis and Mohometan ulema.

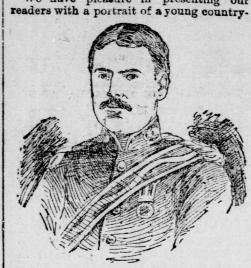

The Sealing Wax Code. In France sealing wax has by no means gone out of use as a consequence of the introduction of gummed envelopes. There is even a sort of code or language of sealing wax among fashionable people. White sealing wax is chosen for communications relating to weddings, black for obituaries, violet for expressions of sympathy, chocolate for invitations to dinner, red for business, ruby for engaged lovers' letters, green for letters from lovers who live in hopes, and brown for refusals of offers of marriage, while blue denotes constancy, yellow jealousy, pale green reproaches, and pink is used by young girls and gray between

The Slope of Rivers. Generally speaking, the slope of rivers flowing into the Mississippi from the east is, on the average, about three inches per mile. Those entering it from the west have an average descent of about six inches per mile. The average descent per mile of the Missouri after it leaves the mountains is reckoned about a foot; the Des Moines, from its source to its conjunction with the Mississippi, about 7.3 inches. man who has been distinguishing himself abroad. Lieut. P. du Perron-Casgrain, of the Royal Engineers, at present stationed at Chatham, England, has just been officially notified by the Imperial Government that he has passed the examination in the Russian language, and is the recipient of the prize of £10 awarded by the Government to the successful candidate. Lieut. Casgrain's linguistic attainments appear to be of high order. During his five years' service in India he passed the final examination in Hindustani, and was fortunate enough to secure the prize awarded for a thorough knowledge of that language, which he writes and speaks as fluently as English or French. Lieut. Casgrain is the third son of P. B. Casgrain, for many years M.P. for L'Islet, and a brother of J. P. B. Casgrain, President of the Liberal Club of Montreal. The Casgrain family has already produced many distinguished members, and it must be gratifying to these to find the younger scions of the race keeping up their claims to the respect and esteem of their country.

A Man Made Happy .- GENTLEMEN, -For five years I have been a great sufferer with Dyspepsia; the pain in the pit of my stomach was almost unbearable and life only seemed a drag to me. When I would go to sleep I would have horrible dreams, and my life became very miserable, as there was no rest either day or night. But with the use of only two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY this unhappy state has all been changed and I am a well man. I can assure you, my case was a bad one, and I send you this that it may be the means of convincing others of the wonderful curative qualities possessed by this medicine, that are specially adapted for the cure of Dyspepsia. A lady customer of mine had the Dyspepsia very bad, she could scarcely eat anything, and was troubled with pains similar to those I suffered with; and she cured herself with two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's VEGE-TABLE DISCOVERY. I wish you success with your medicine, as I am fully convinced that it will do all you claim for it.
