ARE GREAT SWEARERS

The Waterloo Bribery Brigade.

MORE ELECTORS TELL HOW THEY WERE OFFERED FIVE DOLLAR BILLS.

Berlin, Oct. 7.—The North Waterloo election protest trial was continued yesterday.

Mr. Rudell, poll clerk, No. 3, and Wm. Bham, scrutineer, said that when the ballots were opened Mr. Doerr, the Conservative scrutineer, suggested that as a matter of expediency assistance be given to count the ballots. Wildfong opened the ballot box. The ballots were placed in two or three piles. Both witnesses swore they never put marks on any of them. The ballots were thrown face upwards when unfolded, and then face downwards when counted. Rudell said he noticed probably three double-crossed ballots in the ones he opened. Sam Stewart, of London, assisted in counting the ballots for a short time.

Bitzer and Seelinger swore they did not notice Wildfong at the convention. The latter said that A. R. Shantz spoke to him about some money promised him by Lewis, and intimated that he would sue if such were not forthcoming. He told Shantz he would write Yague, and ask him to find out from Lewis respecting it; that the party had nothing to do with it.

WILDFOG DID THE WORK. C. H. Doerr, Conservative scrutineer, swore he unfolded none of the ballots. Wildfong unfolded them, after they were packed on the table. Mr. MacPherson here arose and said that an important witness would arrive on the next train who was the Conservative scrutineer at this poll. Their Lordships did not feel disposed to hold the case open.

J. H. Wildfong was then called, but did not answer to his name. Mr. MacPherson said he had offered to serve him with a subpoena, but that Wildfong would not accept it, claiming railway fare from Ottawa. The judges would not wait, and ordered argument to proceed. Mr. MacPherson thereupon rose and went over the facts in connection with the spoiling of ballots at poll No. 3, for the purpose of reducing the Conservative vote, and as a result of fraudulently electing.

CUMMINGS' COLD BLUFF.

The next charge, that of switching, or, as some call it, "swiping" ballots, was taken up. John F. Stumpf, scrutineer for the Conservative candidate, swore that Cummings, the deputy returning officer, called off the name of the candidate from the ballots, and would not allow any of the others to see them. He became quite indignant when his Stumpf noticed that some ballots were marked for Lackner; hence his protest. It was in this part that 21 ballots were counted for the Liberal instead of the Conservative candidate.

Schnoy, Conservative scrutineer, swore, said that the ballots were counted by Cummings, who would not allow the others to see the face of the ballots, claiming they were secret. David DeWitt and Harry Cummings were called, but did not appear. Livermen, produced true itemized accounts of the Reform Association for rights hired by Wildfong and Cummings when they were charged to the Reform Association.

Chas. Jones, delegate to the Reform convention at Waterloo, swore that he saw Wildfong and Cummings there. They closed the evidence regarding the switching of ballots at poll No. 2. Judgment was reserved.

OFFERED $5.

Philip Rhem, sworn, said he knew Geo. A. Bruce, a stranger called at his house on Sunday evening, and asked him how he would vote. He told him for Lackner. The man said he would give George Bruce $5 in an envelope for witness if he would vote for Breithaupt. Witness's wife, who was present, told him not to take it. The stranger tried to coax him, saying that Bruce was right outside, and offered to call him. He finally left and witness retired for the night. He was soon awakened by another knock, and when he got to the door he found Mr. Bruce there. Witness told him it was Sunday night and he would not accept money. Bruce promised to see him Monday. Witness tried to find out the name of the stranger. Bruce told him it was Cornack, but witness subsequently learned that it was Weiler. Next day on the street saw Bruce, and told him that he would not take such a sum for his vote. Mrs. Behm, one of the last witnesses, was called and corroborated the evidence of her husband. Both witnesses identified Weiler as the man who called at their house.

David Uttley, sworn, said that Mr. Bruce brought a man to the Commercial hotel, Waterloo, where he was on the Sunday evening before the election, and asked him how $5 would catch him to vote for Breithaupt. Witness told him he would not sell his vote for money. The man asked witness to keep mum about the matter, but he would not promise. The man left, saying witness was "the hardest nut he had yet met."

KILLED ON THE LAKE ERIE.

This morning Jonathan Reid, an old man who resided with Mrs. Thomas Biggart, Harwich, was killed near Richardson's crossing by freight train No. 23, Walkerville bound. The remains were taken to Fargo, Coroner Bray went out at one o'clock, to examine into the case. Dr. Rutherford, who is Mr. Reid's physician, states that Mr. Reid is subject to fainting spells. He had a bad attack of pneumonia last winter, but he has been suffering with heart trouble for some time. It is thought that Mr. Reid must have fallen on the track in a faint.

It seems that Mr. Reid, the old resident of the Creek, who was killed this morning by the 9.15 train on the E. & H. division, had been in the habit of going to Fargo every morning for his mail, and was going as usual to-day. Deceased was one of the old pioneers of this section, where he made a comfortable fortune by farming. He retired from a active labor some 15 years ago, selling his farm to Andrew Neil, and has since made his home with Thomas Biggart.

CORMACK'S RECORD.

The Cormack's charges were next taken up. John G. Schmidt, said he was a shoe-maker. Cummings and Cormack came to his place on Thursday or Friday, during the noon hour. Cormack gave him $5 to vote for Breithaupt, which he accepted, and immediately informed on him, making a written declaration. The declaration was produced. It gave the day as Monday, instead of Thursday or Friday.

Louis Schmidt, son of the previous witness, sworn, said that $5 was offered to him also for his vote, which money was to be got at Bossard's after the election. Cummings was standing near by him when this offer was made. Witness did not get the money, as he never went for it.

Richard Hartman, sworn, said he was a wood and coal carter for Boehmer. He was approached by a stranger in the yard, who offered him $5 to vote for Breithaupt and $5 for each vote he could secure for Breithaupt, and the money to be paid by Bossard. He never went for it. About this time one McCormack was arrested for trying to bribe voters, as was supposed, and taken to the magistrate's office. The witness was taken there to see if he could identify McCormack as the man, but he could not swear positively that he was the man. This finished the Cormack charges.

OLD WORLD NEWS

What is Transpiring in Other Parts of the Globe.

Interesting Matters Briefly Described in the Cable Despatches.

London, October 7.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "I learn that Germany is about to hand over documents which will lead to the quashing of the Dreyfus verdict."

London, October 7.—According to the Montevideo correspondent of the Times the discovery has been made there that a syndicate exists which has been insuring the lives of poor people and murdering them in order to collect the insurance money. Three cases of the sort are known to have occurred from which the promoters of the scheme netted £10,000. The syndicate has other policies amounting to £80,000. The ringleaders have been arrested. The Equitable Life Assurance Company of New York is said to be affected.

THE QUEEN MAY ARBITRATE.

London, Oct. 7.—In connection with the rumors that Queen Victoria is liable to intervene to prevent war, a curious story is published by the Vienna Establat, which alleges that her Majesty intends to arbitrate in the event of an outbreak of hostilities, declaring that it has this information from an "excellent source." The statement unfavorably affected the Vienna Bourse. The British Foreign Office, when asked the Vienna story as to the intention of the Queen to arbitrate should war break out, declared it "supremely ridiculous" and "utterly baseless."

ODDS ON SHAMROCK.

11.52—Shamrock gaining on Columbia, but latter still leading by 1.05 min. Some small bets are now being made at 10 to 8 that Shamrock will win to-day.

12 noon—Boats now heading to ward west. Wind has shifted to north-west and is still dropping.

12.03—During the past few minutes Shamrock has been gaining on Columbia.

12.10—Shamrock has cleverly blanketed Columbia and is passing her on starboard side.

12.11—Shamrock almost abreast of Columbia. Yachts are sailing side by side and contest is exciting.

THE YACHT RACE.

Shamrock and Columbia Again Battling for Supremacy.

The Challenger Leads the way Around the Turning Buoy.

New York, Oct. 7.—The Shamrock and Columbia are again trying to sail the postponed race of Tuesday and Thursday, over a course laid out 15 miles before the wind and return.

9.25—Wind north to north-west 24 miles an hour. Course will be down Jersey coast towards Elberon, same as last race. Shamrock has gone to starting point under sail. Columbia preparing to do same.

9.35—Wind holds 20 knots an hour. The haze has left water very rough. Excursionists will have something else to think about besides the race.

Jackey-Bennet boat—The wind is blowing 18 knots an hour. Conditions are all that could be expected for a fine race.

10.30—The Shamrock has arrived off Sandy Hook.

Highlands, 10.20—Experts say that the race will be finished by 3 p. m.

10.53—Columbia just passed the Hook bowed for starting point. Her speed was terrific.

1.05—Wind is dying out, only 10 knots now against 21 early.

11.12—Boating is now 2 to 1 on the Columbia.

11.04—Preparatory signal fired at 11.04.

11.06—Both boats are jockeying.

11.14—Warning signal gun just fired.

11.20—Race off at 11.19.

11.22—Columbia ahead.

11.25—Columbia crossed the line first, Shamrock two seconds behind.

Highlands, 11.23—Columbia is pulling away from Shamrock and now has wind free. Starting an unofficial time was, Columbia 11.20.49, Shamrock 11.20.51. Columbia broke out stay sail and balloon jib. Shamrock hoisted balloon jib topsail. Shamrock spinnaker boom to starboard.

11.47—Shamrock seems to have trouble with her spinnaker; men aloft fixing; Columbia gains each moment and is about 1.8 miles in lead.

11.51—Shamrock seems unable to catch the Columbia and the latter is gradually drawing away.

ODDS ON SHAMROCK.

11.52—Shamrock gaining on Columbia, but latter still leading by 1.05 min. Some small bets are now being made at 10 to 8 that Shamrock will win to-day.

12 noon—Boats now heading to ward west. Wind has shifted to north-west and is still dropping.

12.03—During the past few minutes Shamrock has been gaining on Columbia.

12.10—Shamrock has cleverly blanketed Columbia and is passing her on starboard side.

12.11—Shamrock almost abreast of Columbia. Yachts are sailing side by side and contest is exciting.

12.12—Shamrock has dropped her jib topsail.

12.13—Both boats now in even terms and fighting hard. It's a fine race. Shamrock now forging ahead.

12.14—Shamrock has just passed Columbia and is now leading for the first time to-day.

12.15—The boats have sailed about five miles of the course, during which time the Shamrock has overcome the Columbia's lead, which was at one time over a quarter of a mile. The Shamrock has passed the Columbia to starboard and is now the leader.

Galilee, 12.23—The Shamrock seems to be outfooting the Columbia.

Highlands, 12.32—The Shamrock is rapidly increasing her lead and it looks from this point as though she is much better manned. Official time of start has been halliched as, Columbia 11.21.2, and Shamrock 11.21.19.

Long Branch, 12.34—Taking time on a raised point from this station, Sham-

WON'T FORCE WAR

President Kruger Will Remain On the Defensive.

Hebrew Store-keepers Being Thundere-d by Natives for the Sake Of Plunder.

London, Oct. 7.—There is still almost a complete dearth of news from South Africa. The few despatches received recording military movements at various points, all tend to confirm the belief that President Kruger will restrain any forward movement by the Boers unless they are fired upon or war is actually declared. A Pretoria despatch says President Kruger has disavowed any intention of forcing a conflict. The Boers, he said, would not attack until forced to do so, but the continued hostile movements of the British troops might provoke war.

MURDERING JEWS.

A Johannesburg despatch says:—Thousands of people have desired to leave, and the Government has decided to escort them out of the country. Last night two natives entered a clothing store kept by a Jew and stabbed the proprietor in the neck, severing his windpipe. Two Jewish store-keepers in the East Rand have been killed by robbers, and the Kafirs are searching the place where they mission, acting under the Government's order, will issue an order to shop-keepers to remove the barricades erected, declaring that the Government's guarantee of protection ought to be sufficient.

LOCAL BRIEFS

Mahara Minstrels at the Grand tonight.

Thomas M. French will leave for Winnipeg next week with three carloads of apples.

The nearest fitting jackets are at Thibodeau & Jacques. A wide range, from $2.50 to $15.

Park St. Epworth League, Monday evening at eight o'clock. Subject, "Church Loyalty," by Dr. Thornton.

Wanted—First class millinery preparator. Apply to John Northway & Co.

The Mahara Minstrels are said to be real fun-makers. Those who go to the Grand tonight will be able to see the genuine humor of the South.

The new standard rules, which went into effect on the Grand Trunk railway system on Monday, October 2 have so far been found to work well.

Rev. R. McCosh will preach at the special services to be held at St. George's church, Charing Cross tomorrow, and in Raleigh and Irwin.

It is said that the weather will be remarkably plentiful in Ontario this fall, as the dry weather was favorable to the hatching and rearing of young birds.

The Young People's Church and S. S. Society of Chatham will meet in the S. S. hall on Monday evening at a quarter to eight. All members and adherents of the church wishing to join will please attend.

There will be an at home in Court McGregor, No. 6, I. O. O. F., on Thursday, the 12th, when they expect to have an enjoyable time. W. L. Wilkinson, High Court Organizer, will be there. All are welcome.

Thanksgiving meeting of the W. F. M. S. in connection with the First Presbyterian church has been postponed to Monday, Oct. 16th, at 3 p. m. Mrs. Harvey, of Toronto, will be present and give an address.

Victoria Ave. Methodist church services to-morrow at 11 and 7 o'clock, when the "Twentieth Century Thanksgiving Fund" shall be considered. The pastor, Hugh W. Locke, will preach in the morning. In the evening two ladies and two gentlemen will give addresses in the interests of the above mentioned fund.

The annual church school hall on Thursday next, tea will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock and the ladies will prepare an excellent bill of fare. The musical program will be an attractive one and it will just cost you 25 cents to enjoy both.

BACK FROM THE WEST.

Edmund Tompkins, of Chatham Twp., who went out with the harvest excursion to the Northwest, has returned. He worked for a month near Carmen, about sixty miles west of Winnipeg. He reports that harvest bands in the west get from $30 to $40 a month and their board.

At the annual meeting of the W. C. T. U., Chatham, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. A. Hall; re-elected; Cor. Sec., Mrs. Cartier; Rec. Sec., Mrs. Pike; re-elected; Treas., Mrs. Perkins; re-elected. Mrs. Stone was appointed assistant secretary to Mrs. Pike. It was decided to allow the Order of Chosen Friends the use of their room for meeting purposes for $20 a year.

LARGE AUDIENCE THE YACHT RACE.

Greeted the Krause Concert Company at Glencoe.

The People Were Delighted—A Brilliant Program Presented.

The Krause Concert Company, of this city, played to a crowded house at Glencoe last evening. The company was a strong one, and their presentations were greeted with rounds of applause and every member of the troupe were encircled. This excellent company presents on their capital programs in the Grand Opera House, Chatham, on Tuesday, Oct. 10, and their splendid numbers deserve a crowded house. Miss Idle as a piano soloist, is unequalled, and her rendition of the beautiful solo, "Staccato Polka," last night, was a revelation to the people of Glencoe. Her numbers were greeted with the encircles they deserved.

Mrs. John Cooper, who has always been a general favorite with the public, won new laurels for herself by her sweet singing. Her rendition of the solo, "The Bird that came in Spring," was elastic and brilliant. The applause that followed gave significant indication of its delightful rendition.

The violin solos of Henry McCauley were exceedingly well executed and were received with warm applause which they deserved. The skill of the technique and tone exhibited in her delightful renditions was warmly appreciated.

Miss G. Copeland delighted everyone with her exquisite piano productions, rich and delicate in quality and perfect in execution.

Miss M. M. McCosh, in her eloquent and very beautiful piano productions, held the large audience delighted throughout.

J. W. Wilson, the talented flute soloist, gave two delightful numbers, which were heartily received.

The entertainment was one of exceptional merit and was presented under the musical direction of R. Victor Carter. It will presage a splendid success on the appearance of the accomplished concert company at the Grand on Tuesday, Oct. 10.

RIDGETOWN FAIR.

There Was Some Good Pacing At it on Friday.

The Attendance This Year Was Large And the Exhibits Above the Average.

Ridgetown fair drew large crowds both days. The attractions offered were of a superior order, and the exhibits were numerous and good. Particularly fine was the showing of fruit, many varieties being exhibited. Boots and grain were also there in abundance and the number of home manufactures was large. Machinery and farm implements of the latest improved patterns were there to interest the intelligent and up-to-date farmer, from the little garden seeder to the handsome seed garden seeder to the handsome seed garden seeder.

There was a very fine showing of buggies and carriages. Wm. Gray & Sons, Chatham, taking the lead in this exhibit as usual.

Deserving of particular mention were the works of art to be seen in the crystal palace. The crayon work and oil paintings exhibited were of a high class, many of them showing the mark of true genius.

Heat Rashes.

In the warm weather, many suffer from various forms of eruptions, known as "heat rashes," which often cause considerable discomfort on account of their intolerable burning and itching.

These skin diseases are simply an outward manifestation of the impure, perhaps over heated blood and can easily and permanently be cured by

Burdock Blood Bitters.

It keeps the bowels regular, the kidneys free, and stimulates the liver to healthy action. In this way, through the natural excretory channels of the body, it removes all poisons and impurities from the blood, and in consequence the skin becomes clear and smooth and free from spot or blemish.

THE YACHT RACE.

rock leads Columbia by about 2 minutes and 20 seconds.

Highlands, 12:45—Another range on the yachts taken from this point showed the Shamrock to be 3 minutes and 40 seconds ahead of Columbia. As the boats are running away and the Shamrock is considerably to starboard the actual distance is probably a little less.

Ashbury Park, 12:52—Shamrock seems to be getting more wind than Columbia and is now holding her lead.

12:53 1-2—The Shamrock has taken in her spinnaker.

12:56—Shamrock has just jibbed and changed her course towards the stake boat. She is more in shore than the Columbia.

1:05—The Shamrock appears to increase her lead.

1:07—Shamrock has thrown out top-sail and balloon jib. Shamrock appears to be catching the wind finely, while the Columbia's sails appear to be flapping considerably.

Cable Boat, 1:08—Both boats are now evidently running for the mark. With the wind at its present rate and the direction it appears from here that the boats cannot finish within the time limit. Wind three knot from north-north-east.

1:30—Wind "getting round" toward east, which would help yachts to beat home.

1:36—Shamrock turned stake boat, Columbia follows five seconds later.

THE CUP IN DANGER.

2:05—Columbia still has advantage, but Shamrock is sailing beautifully. Looks as if cup were in danger.

2:10—Shamrock gaining rapidly.

2:16—Shamrock has again passed Columbia and now looks to have a decided advantage.

2:20—Neither yacht seems to have any very great advantage. Reports are very conflicting as to who is ahead.

2:25—Shows closeness of yachts.

2:28—Columbia has passed Shamrock and is going fast.

2:30—Columbia has easily a lead of three minutes.

2:30—Columbia leading by half a mile.

2:35—Columbia is holding off with split tacks evidently afraid of Shamrock.

2:38—Yachts about 8 miles from finish, still tacking.

3:11—Columbia apparently still in the lead. Chances against finishing the race unless stronger winds spring up.

Long Branch, 3:23—A despatch boat of the Associated Press has just signalled that the Columbia is now ahead.

Galilee, 3:27—The Shamrock catches the breeze and is now coming up all the way up, while Columbia is trying to find a breeze further out.

4:01—Both boats continue to tack frequently and it is really impossible to tell which has the advantage. If there is any the Shamrock has it. The opinion of experts is that the race cannot be finished in time, but if it is the foreigners will get it.

THE RACE IS OFF AGAIN.

3:51—Many of the New York Yacht Club boats are returning, and the race is apparently off. Time limit expires at 4:52, and the yachts cannot possibly make it before now seven and a half miles from finish and beating against the wind.

4:05—The Associated Press despatch boat Nichols signalled that Shamrock ahead and she left the course, and still gaining. All the boats are now waiting for the judges to declare the race off. It will be sailed over again on Tuesday.

ALL'S ROSY AGAIN

Between the City and the Lake Erie Railway.

The Colborne Street Obstructions Will be Removed as Soon as Possible.

Supt. Wm. Woollett, Owen McKay, engineer, and L. E. Tilson, travelling agent, of the L. E. & D. R. R., met the special committee of the city council, comprising Chairman E. W. Seane, Ald. Martin, Ald. Cowan, and City Engineer Shackleton, this morning.

The matter of the obstructions on Colborne St. was talked over. There seemed to have on the part of the city a misapprehension of the agreement entered into originally between the E. & H. and the city. Supt. Woollett said the railroad had right to run on Colborne street and the right to load and unload cars on the street.

With this the city representatives disagreed, and claimed that the railroad merely had the right to run cars on one track along Colborne street.

In answer to a query as to whether he had seen the agreement, Mr. Woollett said he had been unable to do so although he had tried to find it. He also said that on finding the agreement if his ideas were not correct he would at once see that the agreement was adhered to by the railroad.

The L. E. & D. R. R. desired to be on friendly terms with the city, and the railroad was willing to keep to the terms of the agreement. The city would have no cause for complaint as to the unloading of the cars as soon as it was possible to clear up the title of the land on the north side of the creek, which the railroad was trying to purchase in an amicable way. As soon as the deal is closed the street will be put in proper condition and there will then be no encroachment. There will also then be no cause for complaint in the matter of unloading cars on Head St.

Mr. Woollett was very reasonable and appeared to be willing to do everything possible to satisfy the city representatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Stanton were tendered a reception on their return from their marriage at Denfield, at the residence of Mr. George Somerville, Murray street. Relatives and friends to the number of 40 wished the young couple all happiness. The evening was spent in social games, music etc. Mr. and Mrs. Stanton will take up housekeeping shortly.

ADJOURNED AUCTION SALE

Valuable Property, Suitable for Duck Shooting Preserve or for Pasturage.

Under and by virtue of the powers of sale contained in a certain mortgage which will be produced at the time of sale, there will be sold on Tuesday, October 17th, 1899, at 12 o'clock, noon, at the Garner House, in the town of Chatham, the following valuable property:

Lots Nos. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13, in the First or Front Concession of the Township of Dover West in the County of Kent, and Lots Nos. 7 and 8 in the Second Concession of said Township of Dover West.

The property is what is known as marsh, prairie land, and is in every way desirable for those wishing to engage in the lucrative business of pasturage and cattle raising, while, owing to its position between Lake St. Clair and the River Thames, excellent shooting is obtained. Much of the land, also is well adapted for agricultural purposes.

The property is situated about 13 miles from the Town of Chatham, one of the best markets in Western Ontario.

Terms:—One-tenth of the purchase money to be paid down at time of sale. For further particulars apply to Gibson & Deffries, Vendors' Solicitors, or to O. F. W. Atkinson, Esq., Barrister, Chatham.

The Whole Family

You are interested in a good photograph. It isn't always the family will be together. Time is relentless and the health of the world may separate the members of the family group before next year has arrived. Embrace the opportunity while you have it. You do not know where you will be to-morrow. We will take an excellent photo which you will highly prize later in life, and cure is the only gallery in the city with the large and proper background to make good family groupings.

A Bit of Blue Enamel

Or Traced By a Valentine

His crippled foot had been all a pretence—made with what motive she could not guess, but doubtless for the furtherance of some nefarious scheme.

He was walking very quickly, running almost, as though in desperate haste to reach the shelter of the house.

Marjorie left the window, and sank into the easy chair beside the bed.

A deathly faintness was stealing over her. She was ashy pale, and trembling from head to foot.

A new and more horrible suspicion had come into her mind, and she felt sick and dizzy beneath the overwhelming shock of it.

If these were indeed a gang of thieves, might it not be one of them who had murdered her father?

They were in possession of the lock-etc. What more likely than that Madeline's account of how she had obtained it was false, and that one of the men beneath that roof was guilty of her father's blood?

The question was—what? She asked it of herself with shuddering dread.

Surely—oh, merciful heaven! surely not Charles—not the man she had loved so dearly to whom her young heart had clung with such warm, trusting faith.

She remembered how vehemently Madeline had sought to prejudice her mind against him. Could it be that she had done it to keep her from falling in love with her father's murderer?

There was agony in the thought—black, bitter agony.

She buried her head among the bed-clothes and shook with grief and fear. Presently she roused herself to think and plan.

The clock struck one. She remembered then that it was St. Valentine's Day—the anniversary of her father's death.

How strange if on that very day she should be fated to discover his murderer.

Half mechanically she went to the chest of drawers, and, unlocking the various receptacles, looked for the bit of blue enamel.

It was gone! The ivory box was empty!

It could scarcely be said she was surprised at this. It only confirmed her terrible suspicions, and they needed little confirmation.

Of course, those desperate criminals would do away with the evidences of their guilt if they could.

She, a poor unsuspecting girl, had been easily duped by them.

But there was a sharp sting of agony in the thought that it was Charles who had asked her where she kept the bit of enamel.

She could not doubt that his was the hand which had stolen it.

As she sat at the edge of her bed in an agony of grief, her hands clasped, her pale lips moving in a convulsive appeal to heaven for strength, she heard sounds below—voices raised in fierce anger, and mingled with a woman's sobs.

Flinging a dark dressing-gown round her trembling form, she opened her chamber door very softly and listened.

The voices came from the hall below.

She advanced a step or two, slowly, until she reached the top of the staircase, from where she could get a view of the whole group.

In the centre stood the elder Hyde. Marjorie now saw his face for the first time without the mask of good humor which had served so well to disguise his villainy.

It was almost demonic with rage, and he was storming and cursing in the most horrible fashion.

It was Charles, at whom his wrath seemed chiefly directed, and who stood stiffly with folded arms and down-bent head, without answering a word.

At the foot of the staircase stood Edgar, his face livid, his dark eyes flaming, and beside him, clad only in her night-dress, was Madeline, her long black hair streaming down to her waist, her whole frame trembling with convulsive sobs as she wound her arms round Edgar's neck, and seemed, by her gestures, to be imploring something which he roughly and sternly refused.

In a little group at the other end of the hall, where the servants, whose countenances showed plainly enough they were the accomplices of their pretended masters.

Marjorie was alone in that house with a gang of thieves as cunning and desperate as any in all England.

Suddenly Hyde said something in a tone of stern command, which caused a general movement to be made towards the stairs.

Marjorie, her heart beating as though it would leap out of her bosom with fright, stole back to her chamber, and closed and locked the door.

Scarce had she done this, however, before a frenzied shriek from Madeline made her venture forth again.

She heard strange voices—she heard one, loud, stern, authoritative voice exclaim—

"Consider yourselves under arrest, everyone of you. Attempt to move and I fire!"

A horrible fascination drew her to the top of the stairs again; and now she saw that a crowd of constables—ten or a dozen at least—thronged the hall.

A cry from Madeline made her look at Edgar Hyde.

He was in the act of flinging away a small phial, which he had just raised to his lips and drained to the dregs.

The next moment he sank, with a heavy thud, upon the tiled floor of the hall.

"Good God! he's poisoned himself!" exclaimed one of the policemen, while Madeline's shrieks rang all through the house.

Someone stooped over him and raised him, but the other policemen coolly secured their prisoners.

The handcuffs were put on Charles Hyde almost at once.

Marjorie saw this with a bursting heart, and then a merciful insensibility overwhelmed her—she fell fainting to the floor.

CHAPTER XI.

Madeline's Story.

When she recovered consciousness she was lying on her bed, and Madeline was bending over her with a face so white, so haggard, so drawn with misery, that, for a moment, Marjorie scarce recognized it.

"Madeline!" she murmured, faintly, reaching out her hand. "What is the matter? What has happened?"

And then a recollection of that fearful scene in the hall swept over her numbed brain.

She moaned, and buried her face in the bed clothes.

Madeline sat silent and rigid in the chair beside the bed.

She seemed to have no word to say—either of comfort or of explanation.

Presently Marjorie raised herself, and looked at her.

"Madeline, why don't you speak to me? I am miserable as well as you. Tell me—oh, tell me all the truth! Those people—are they all thieves?"

"Yes," the monosyllabic fell from Madeline's pale lips slowly, and as though it hurt her.

"And you—?" Marjorie began, then stopped suddenly, not knowing how to frame the question.

"What am I? you would say," exclaimed Madeline, passionately. "Oh, don't scruple to ask what questions you choose, Marjorie. I will answer them all now. I am the daughter of one thief and the wife of another. I am not a thief myself—I have not fallen quite so low as that. But I am one of the gang—I have known their guilty plans—I have been accessory to them all. The police have exempted me from arrest—simply because, as a wife, I was not bound to denounce my husband's crimes!"

"A wife!" exclaimed Marjorie, in amazement, as soon as Madeline paused for breath.

"Yes, I am Edgar's wife—or was. God help me! I am his widow now!"

"Then he is dead?" cried Marjorie, in horror.

"Yes, he is dead," said Madeline, resuming her stony calm. "He took poison before the police could touch him. He died, and I, who loved him so—oh, heaven! how I loved him!—I, even I, am thankful for it."

Her head sank upon her bosom, and a dry, tearless sob convulsed her frame.

Marjorie put forth her hand, and touched her gently.

"Poor Madeline!" she said. "I am so sorry for you."

At that kind word the unhappy creature fell into a storm of agony terrible to witness.

Her tears came in a flood, and her frame was racked with sobs.

Marjorie was frightened—never in her life had she witnessed such emotion as this.

But it did good. It was more natural than that stony calm, and outraged nature was appeased by it.

Beneath Marjorie's sympathy and tenderness the wretched Madeline grew calm at last.

And then, in a broken voice, she began to try to tell her her whole sad story.

I was sixteen, and my father fetched me to live with him. He told me he wanted me in his business and, little by little, I began to see what that business was.

"He was no common thief, Marjorie. There was a diabolical cunning and cleverness in all he did. I had been well educated—indeed, he himself was—and he wanted me to help him to get the entire into the great houses he meant to rob. This I would never do, and he was fearfully angry with me, for he had a frightful temper when roused, for all his bland, pleasant looks. He said he wanted a woman in the business, and when I kept resisting he planned a cruel trick to bring me to his will."

"What was it?" questioned Marjorie.

"He threw me into the company of Edgar Monson—for Edgar's name was not Hyde. I must tell you; he was not my father's nephew, no relation at all, neither is Charles, Edgar's brother. They were both simply members of the gang."

Again she paused, then went on in a broken voice, and with many tears: "I know now that Edgar was deliberately set to employ every artifice to make me love him. He was represented in the best light to me. He won my sympathy, and, at last, my heart. How I loved him I could never tell you!"

"I think that never in this world has man been loved by woman as he was loved by me. Well, I married him—not quite a year ago. He swore he would break with the gang, reform, go abroad with me, and live an honest life. I believed him—and a week after the marriage he laughed and boasted of the ruse he had adopted to bind me to him! I remember his very words—they burnt themselves into my heart."

"No! No! my pretty one," he said. "It is you I am going to reform. I am going to so train you that you shall be the queen and head of the cleverest and richest gang of thieves in England."

"He did not do that, Marjorie. Try as he might, he could not bend me to his will. I hated and dreaded their vile pursuits too much for that. But I went on loving him—I couldn't help myself. I loved him even though I soon saw he had ceased to care for me. Oh, what I have suffered—oh, Marjorie! Marjorie!"

Again she was convulsed with sobs, and again Marjorie soothed her with all the tender sympathy a woman's heart can show a sister in distress.

After a few minutes had this passed, she resumed her narrative.

"We came here—to this house—about six weeks ago. Their object was to rob Sir Edward Mortimer. All the plate and jewels are kept on the premises there, and they expected a more than ordinarily rich booty."

"To achieve this, no expense was spared. This house was taken furnished; the servants were all members of the gang. We had been here only a short time, when—my father—met with you. He had always said that a woman, young, and beautiful, and well-educated, would be invaluable to them; and it was his purpose to try to win you over. He showed you an advertisement which he pretended was his, and you believed him and came."

"Ah!" exclaimed Marjorie, in horror. "Who could have suspected that a man who looked and spoke as he did, could have been so vile!"

"His pleasant countenance has been his capital always," said Madeline, bitterly, "and he has traded on it to the uttermost. With a view to impressing you favorably, he has assumed the appearance of great wealth and power, and this would have continued till he felt you were in his power."

"You were so young, and so completely friendly that he made sure of winning you over in the end. You were to be tricked, as I was, through your affections. Charles had orders to do everything in his power to make you fall in love with him."

Again an involuntary exclamation burst from Marjorie's lips.

She saw the whole vile plot now from beginning to end, and then again turned pale.

"I did all I could, Marjorie, to save you from the snare," said Madeline, gazing on her very mournfully. "I dared not betray them. I dared not tell you the truth, but you remember how, whenever I could, I warned you against Charles. I hinted to you over and over again that he was unworthy of your love."

"Yes, I remember," acknowledged Marjorie; "and I thank you. It was not your fault that I wouldn't take your warning. Oh, Madeline, if I had! if I only had!"

And then, unable to bear her misery with calmness, she gave way utterly, and broke into tears.

"Dear Marjorie, don't grieve for him. He isn't worth one thought from your pure heart. Forgive me, darling, that I didn't tell you all the truth in time."

"I have only myself to blame," sobbed Marjorie. "You warned me, enough, I ought to have believed you."

After a time she calmed herself, and turned to Madeline with gentle resolution.

"Go on, Madeline, tell me all."

"There is not much more to tell—not much that you can't guess at, or that you don't already know. Last week they made an attempt on Mortimer's House. It failed, and they resolved to try again, so bold and desperate they were. They made the effort again; they thought they had got clear away, and were followed here. In my heart I had felt sure that would be the end of it. Something within me seemed to prophesy it would come to this."

"Madeline, you were imploring something from—from Edgar in the drawing-room before you came to bed. I heard you by accident. What was it you were asking him, dear?"

how anxious we are to be of service, if you will allow us."

He paused, then added: "I think you perhaps may know who I am; my name is Mortimer."

"Sir Edward Mortimer—yes, I know. Indeed, I can't find words to thank you. You are only too kind. I wish I could make you understand how much I feel your kindness shown at such a time."

THE WORK OF THE EAR

NATURE'S EXQUISITE PROVISIONS FOR THE SENSE OF HEARING.

Wonderful Organs of Marvellous Delicacy Which Have Been Provided for Different Animals—Sometimes They Are of Such Fine Structure as to Serve in Place of Eyes.

Darwin has been at great pains to show the uselessness of the external shell of the human ear, and makes much of the little blunt point which is common to man and ape, and which affords evidence that "once upon a time" the ancestor had pointed ears.

Those who are curious in the matter may refer to "The Descent of Man." There we can leave this question, but as to the superiority of the external ear of the ass to our own, just notice how a horse, a mule or an ass moves its ears.

As asses are not very common in this country, take your stand by the side of a horse. You will notice that the opening is turned to the front, the side and the rear, with a rapid nervous motion.

Moreover, the ears do not move in unison, but each has an independent action.

In fact, it is not impossible to see one pointed toward the rear while the other is turned toward the rear, especially if the horse has been startled.

It may well be questioned whether any other group of animals has so mobile an ear as the various species of "equus" have.

If you have the good fortune to catch a long-eared bat, you may see one of the most curious ears in the animal kingdom, as far as the external ear is concerned.

Within the large outer membrane you see a leaf-like one, technically called the tragus; which is not only of service in collecting the waves of sound, but is also a sensitive organ of touch. It is probably this organ which enables the bat to perceive the current of air proceeding from an open window, even in a darkened room.

Cats have, perhaps, as sensitive ears as any animal in the world. The domestic pet may be apparently asleep on the hearth rug; but you will see the ears at work with a restless "twitch," and presently the animal opens its eyes and looks intently to a corner of the room from which you cannot possibly hear a sound.

The cat, however, hears a mouse behind the wainscot and is on the alert. Notice how full of hairs the ear is. Each hair is a sensitive organ in itself.

If you touch one ever so lightly the whole body seems to shudder, and if you breathe gently in the direction of the opening, the cat at once wishes to change its position.

In this case touch and hearing are combined in a marvelous way. Indeed, may not hearing be said to be a kind of touch, seeing that it is caused by the impling of undulations on a sensitive surface?

Did you ever stroll out on a summer evening along the side of a wood and watch the rabbits come out to feed? It is laughable to see them sitting on their haunches, "with forest" in air, taking stock of the surroundings, before they venture to settle down to supper.

The long ears have not the same mobility as that which characterizes those of the horse. They appear to be too unyielding for that; but the animal makes up for that by hiserous changing his position until he has listened in every direction.

But, perhaps, the strangest fact connected with rabbits' ears is that they have a tendency to variation that they have been seized upon as a "fad" by "fanciers." Many a schoolboy is quite learned in "lops" and "half-lops," and other varieties of ear non-conformities.

One would imagine that a whole had not much use for an ear, but it possesses a very curious one. The drum of the ear lies at the end of a long, bony tube, which is rendered still longer by the fatty tissue lying around the entrance.

The tube is very narrow, a precaution against the intensity with which sounds are conveyed in water. Doubtless the whole would fall but little of the sound made in air, but the dip of an ear is loud enough to put his prey in motion, and the dash of a paddle wheel would sound like thunder to the inhabitants of "the great deep."

Fishes are not hear much that goes on on the bank of the river, but they are keenly alive to any sound made in the water itself. Let not the angler, therefore, presume on the deafness of fishes in making a splash as he casts his line.

In some fishes is one of the oldest known air arrangements of auditory organs. The air-bladder sends off fibers which are attached to membrane stretched over cavities in the skull, and from these cavities, which correspond to the chamber of our ears, the vibrations caught by the membranes are forwarded to the air-bladder.

Such is the case with the perch, while in the carp three little bones aid in the transmission of sound.

Birds are very sharp of hearing, as every wanderer in the woods and fields knows. You have only to turn back the feather at the side of a chicken in order to see the opening to its ear. That opening is most curious in an owl, and it is really worth while to try to get a sight of what cannot be described without technical terms.

But the tufts of feathers seen on what are known as the "eared" owls have nothing to do with the ears. They are merely decorations, like the crests of some other birds. It is easy to see that the elaborate opening of owls is well fitted for collecting sound, as the predatory birds fly so silently through the dark night.

Reptiles have ears, and in the crocodile there is a rudimentary external ear. Find a snake basking in the sun. Stand still a moment or two to let it get over the vibration of the ground caused by your approach.

Then clap your hands, and before the sound has died away the snake has rattled into the undergrowth.

In frogs and toads we find an approach to what is usually understood as an ear. It is doubtless rudimentary, according to the mammalian standard, but it is none the less sensitive.

The lowest forms of animal life do not appear to have any organs which can definitely be called ears, although, as in the case of the earthworm, they are very sensitive to the vibrations of solid objects.

Every angler who goes out at night to "dew" worms for bait knows this. As he turns his bull's eye on the ground, the worms do not seem to mind the light; but let his footstep be too heavy and every worm disappears.

Strangely, however, in the jelly fish, of which you may see specimens stranded on the seashore after every tide and what is very remarkable—so far as we know at present—there is no case where both organs for hearing and organs for seeing are developed in the same species among the medusae.

Taking the species which have auditory organs, we find, in some, spout-mouthed pits provided with sensitive hairs; in others the pits contain not a chain of small bones, but a lump, or series of lumps, of secreted lime which are called otoliths, or earstones; while in others again the pits are not open, but closed.

A crustacean not unlike a shrimp in form has its ears in its tail. If we may so call the terminal segment; while another—the crayfish—has them at the base of the feelers on the head.

In the crayfish the ear is open, but bristles prevent foreign matter from entering. The cavity is filled with a gelatinous fluid in which the otoliths float.

These are affected by the vibrations communicated by sound in the water; in their turn they convey the vibrations to certain hairs which line the cavity; these forward the message to the nerves, and finally it reaches the nerve center of the creature.

Insects, like grasshoppers, crickets, locusts, have their ears in strange places—some on the middle of the body, others on the legs. Whatever other uses the creatures may make of these organs they are veritable auditory organs.

In them we find a membrane stretched across a cavity, with an opening to the external air, and within the cavity is a nerve-mass developed from the sensory nerve. It would be hard indeed if the chirping crickets, "the crickets on the hearth," and the querulous katydid could not be heard by their companions.

It is said that those pests of the house—the flies—can hear by means of some round of corpuscles on the knobbed threads which represent the blind wings of other insects. It is uncertain whether bees can hear. If not, then all the labor of the old-fashioned bee-keeper is in vain.

Some naturalists who have tried them with every kind of sound and noise deny that they can hear. Others, equally confident, assert that they are very sensitive to the calls of their queen at a distance.

Some of the mollusks have remarkable organs for hearing. A good instance is the garden slug. In its neck you would see under a microscope a pair of globular filled with a clear fluid.

In these are minute ear-stones which swing to and fro, rotate and start off, first in one direction and then in another, but in no instance striking the walls of the cavity. If the globules are ruptured the motions cease.

The imagination will ask whether shellfish or mollusks can produce sounds which can be mutually heard. Whatever may be true of the division of a whole, it is certainly true that some can emit sounds. Two sea-slugs were found by Professor Grant to make sounds which he compared to "the clink of a steel wire on the side of the jar."

Curiously, these, which follow the plan of the mollusk's organ; and, indeed, as one watches the uncanny-looking octopus in a corner of a rock cavity, it is easy to imagine that while looking at you with that glassy eye he is also listening to what you say.

SUCCESSFUL CASHIERS.

Siamese Merchants Use Apes to Detect Spurious Coins.

In that far-off, dried up little Oriental country, quite near China, you know, there are large quantities of counterfeit coin in circulation and the counterfeiters of Siam must be most proficient; for we hear that it is the hardest thing in the world to detect the bad from the good money.

The merchants are often deceived and frequently swindled. The smartest men they could employ were deceived, too, for the bad money was such a perfect imitation that the closest scrutiny often failed to find the difference between a good and a bad piece.

In this dilemma some Siamese merchants called to their help some one who was always thought not so smart as a man—a monkey. And these "large apes of Siam" proved such a success at their new avocation that the custom of employing them for the purpose of detecting bad money has become universal. The ape cashier of Siam holds his situation without a rival.

He has a peculiar method of testing coin. Every piece is handed to him and he picks up each bit of money, one by one, and meditatively stretches his mouth, and meditatively with grave deliberation. If the coin is good he declares the fact plainly. He takes it from his mouth and carefully places it in its proper receptacle beside him. He has pronounced judgment and every one is satisfied that the judgment is correct.

But if the coin is bad the cashier makes known his verdict in an equally unmistakable manner. He throws it violently from his mouth as much disgust as the merchant himself might feel at being imposed upon. With loud chattering and angry gestures he makes known his displeasure at being presented with a bad piece of money. The merchant himself could not express it better.

Now, how does a monkey know what a man cannot tell? Ah, that is his secret. He never reveals it. Perhaps he is afraid if he should make known all the mystery that his profession has accumulated might be gone, and people would once more prefer men for cashiers in place of the extraordinary apes employed by the merchants of Siam.—The Independent.

Surgery on a Lion.

One of the most unique as well as successful operations has just been carried out at Perugia, where an eminent professor operated successfully for a catarrh upon a young lion. This incident, according to a London paper, would have interested that famous artist, Rosa Bonheur, who made a particular study of lions and literally lived among them. A lioness actually died in her arms and she was greatly affected when the animal in its last moments licked her hand with its rough tongue.

AFTER EFFECTS OF FEVER.

Mrs. Angle, of Merrittton, Suffered so Severely That Her Friends Feared She was Likely to be a Permanent Invalid.

In the picturesque village of Merrittton resides Mrs. William Angle, who, after months of suffering, has found a cure from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. Angle relates as follows the experience through which she has passed: "Four years ago this spring, while a resident of Buffalo, I had an attack of typhoid fever and the disease left me in a worn out and extremely nervous condition, so that the least noise startled me. I could not sleep at times for a week on account of terrible attacks of heart trouble. Then again my head would trouble me and I had bad dreams. I had no appetite and lost twenty-two pounds in weight and had become so very thin that my friends were alarmed. While in this condition I was treated by two physicians but with no avail. I tried everything recommended by them, still found no relief. Finally a relative persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After I had taken the first box I continued the use of the pills until I had finished six boxes and the results were most gratifying. I now have normal sleep, there is no more twitching in my hands, the palpitations have ceased, and I have gained in weight and strength. My whole system seems toned up, and I feel entirely well. I feel grateful to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., and hope they will keep up their work of administering to the afflicted."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

When a man does not take your advice, he acts as though he had done you a great favor.

A BOOM TO BUSINESS MEN.

The man who from business pressure has to bolt his food, suffer mental worry over business and then lose his sleep, will find Merrill's System Tonic a pearl of great price. This medicine perfects the blood, builds up the system, strengthens the nerves and is the greatest bowel regulator known. One bottle is worth fifty dollars to an overworked man. 50c. Sold at the Central Drug Store.

It always makes a man mad to have a woman ask him whether he can drive, even if he can't.

A woman never really knows the meaning of happiness and contentment until she is the mother of a healthy, happy child. The health of the child depends on the health of the mother, both before and after birth. It is the mother's duty to protect the child from the weakness that most strongly influences the health of children, comes from some derangement or disease of the digestive tract. When a mother takes Dr. Williams' Favorite Prescription, it gives strength to all the organs involved, lessens the pains of childbirth and insures the health of both mother and child.

It is said that misery loves company but it doesn't entertain its company very well.

DOCTORS AGREE.

Every doctor who has been shown the formula of Merrill's System Tonic has expressed great admiration for it. It is a thorough blood purifier, a great muscle, blood and tissue builder, and an excellent and permanent cure for constipation. Pleasant-tasting dose of 50 cents. Sold at the Central Drug Store.

The individual who robs Peter to pay Paul usually strikes Paul for a larger loan, later.

THROW AWAY YOUR PILL BOXES.

Why take pills when every dose only makes you more nervous? Merrill's System Tonic tones the liver and restores the muscular power to the bowels, thus curing constipation. It is a development nowhere else obtainable. When a man takes it, he gets rid of dyspepsia and nervous troubles disappear. 50c. Sold at the Central Drug Store.

Uneasy lies the head which wears a bonnet in which a large-sized politician bee is continually buzzing.

FIVE VIEWS OF A MAN.

A healthy man, a man with a cough, a man with congested lungs, a man in consumption, a dying—now dead man. All from neglecting when the cough started, to take Four P's, the great guaranteed one-day cough and cold remedy. Price 25c. a bottle at the Central Drug Store.

Probably nobody but a baby knows all that it has to put up with.

As a rule, when a man has great stress thrust upon him it doesn't take him very long to get rid of it.

When a man has said anything that makes the woman he loves cry, he feels as if he had been caught kicking a little child.

The only way to distinguish between courage and foolhardiness is by the final outcome.

THE MODE OF ADDRESSES.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning the Origin of the Term "Miss."

A Word That Trampled Over Evil Associations.

"Miss" is commonly assumed to be an abbreviation of "mistress"—and this may be true; but it was not a corruption, nor a form unconsciously introduced. John Evelyn has left a record of the date and circumstances. In 1662 he goes to see the "fair and famous comedian called Roxalana, from the part she performed, and learns that she has 'been taken for the Earl of Oxford's mistress, as at that time they began to call lewd women.' In 1666 he speaks of the 'famous and undecent woman who 'bowles misses and sometimes wears of the young allants.' Again Evelyn witnessed a king attended by 'a miss, as they call those unhappy creatures.' Never did a word undergo a stranger revolution. It would have been the dearest of insults to call a young lady 'miss' at that time. But here is a very strong illustration of the rule that terms rarely wanted will gain a place in the language, be the objections what they may. Hitherto we have seen no example of a singular title for young girls, saving those ranks of life where 'mademoiselle'—more commonly 'demoiselle'—was current. Elsewhere, a married woman and her daughter had 'mistress' in common.

We do not recall any allusion to the inconveniences which must have followed, but the eagerness with which 'miss' was accepted, is the best proof that it was felt. An attempt had been made to call a married woman 'madam' as the title of a married woman, thus freeing 'mistress' for the use of the girls exclusively. But it never succeeded with the middle class, and it had become established in the title of the State; nevertheless, some of us can recollect old villagers speaking of the great lady of the neighborhood, in the days of their youth, as 'Madam So-and-So.' But there was little left to say, and the only alternative was to grow continually as social intercourse became more general.

It is not extravagant to suppose that the custom of designating a man's wife as 'Mrs.' was an effort to avoid the one must turn 50 pages of Evelyn's diary to find the name of a married woman, unless she had a title of nobility—always it is 'his lady.' But in the upper circles 'miss' was used slowly. We may venture to say that it does not occur in Lady Mary Stuart Wortley's correspondence, nor does 'madam,' applied to an English woman. Little girls and their grandmothers are 'Mrs.' alike. It is observed, however, that Pope uses 'miss' freely in the same era. Lady Mary and others of her rank may probably have learned of the shameful origin of the word in youth and shranked it on that account. But Pope would never have the story unless by chance.

Steele, in 'The Guardian,' addressed a girl of 15 as 'Mrs.' and Lady Betty left it on record that she, born in 1718, remembered some old ladies who always called her 'Mrs.' in the nursery. Under such circumstances it is no wonder that 'miss' triumphed over its evil associations. A word was never so badly wanted for the convenience of life and the removal of obnoxious associations.

THE MODERN SHEEP.

Is One of the Most Useful of Domesticated Animals.

Extracts from Book Issued by F. D. Co. burn, of the Kansas Board of Agriculture, Topeka.

"No useful animal on record antedates the sheep. No animal has a wider habitat, or has been from the beginning more an object of solicitude and care. Abel, an heir of Eden and son of the first couple, was a keeper of sheep. Early Jewish history is the story of a shepherd race; their flocks constituted the wealth and largely the cares of the Hebrew patriarchs down through the centuries. Abraham was the shepherd of his flocks; Isaac, the father of Jacob, tended his father's flocks, and Joseph was caring for Jacob's sheep when stolen and sold into Egypt; Job was owner of 14,000 sheep; Moses herded the flocks of Jehovah; David, the shepherd-king, was the greatest king of the Jews, was keeping his father's sheep when called to public life. It was the shepherds watching by night on Judea's plain to whom were first vouchsafed the good tidings of great joy, declaring a Saviour born into the world—the 'Lamb of God,' the 'Good Shepherd.'"

Their propagation, care and improvement have played a large part in the history of mankind. Common to every country, they have adapted themselves to every condition. Existing on Greenland's frozen mountains, they are at home on the Sahara and the scorched lanes of the Orinoco as well. Hungry, restless and gaunt on Switzerland's bleak Alps, they represent one extreme of sheep existence; on the plains of Kansas and their affluence of grain and grass attaining a development nowhere else discoverable, they represent the other.

Their flesh is both a staple and a delicacy wherever civilization exists; an appetizing and healthful nourishment to the languishing invalid and strength-renewing to those whose toil and burden are heaviest. From their wool have been clothed the armies of dominant nations in all times; by spindle, loom and needle it is fashioned to meet a wide range of requirements for the bodily comfort of humankind than any other fiber, animal or vegetable; infancy and age, the weak and the strongest, opulence and indigence rely upon it for comfort, service, adornment and surest protection from summer's heat and winter's cold. The sheepskins are through a thousand channels a large factor in manufactures, arts and commerce.

SAVAGES ATE HIM UP.

Fate of a Bridegroom in the New Hebrides.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 7.—A story of cannibalism was brought to Sydney, Australia, just before the sailing of the steamer Acorn. The victim was a native of Hawaii, named Amaru, who had married a native woman of Aoba, in the New Hebrides group, and went to visit his wife and her tribe, fell into the hands of savages who, after torturing him, tore him to pieces and roasted him with two sheep.
