THE INTERNATIONAL LONDON OLD BOYS ASSOCIATION

*"You must come home with me and be my guest;
You will give joy to me, and I will do
All that is in my power to honor you."*—SHELLEY.

ONCE again the London Old Boys have decided to revisit the beautiful Forest City and spend a brief period with the "Old Folks at Home." While the different branches of the Association and individual Old Boys are making preparations for and looking forward to the reunion of 1901, to no one does the tidings of their intended visit bring more pleasure than to the citizens of London, whose hearts, hands and homes are ever open to welcome back the wanderers, and to show them that however far they may roam, and however long the time since their departure, they have not been forgotten by their former associates.

London offers no apology for being proud of her sons and eager to do honor to those of them who have made names and homes for themselves in other places. From the Yukon to the Isthmus; from New Brunswick to California, and in even more distant parts, you will find the children of the little City of the Thames Valley occupying leading positions and commanding the respect of those among whom their lot is cast. Religion, law, science, politics, art, literature, banking, commerce and manufacture, each numbers among its most successful exponents one or more of the London "boys," and a glance at the intelligence and ability exhibited in the photographic pages of this Souvenir will explain to the stranger the pardonable pride which a Londoner feels in the city of his birth and the sons she has sent forth into the world.

Since our last happy reunion, the fame of the London Old Boys has spread far and wide; new branches of the Association have been formed in different places, and the rapidity and zeal with which the movement is being spread testifies to that love of home which is deeply implanted in the heart of each of London's loyal sons.

London again throws open its doors to you. Its shady streets, its beautiful parks, public buildings, cozy cottages and palatial palaces—all are yours so long as you choose to remain, and the prevailing wish of the Reception Committee, and citizens generally, is that your pleasure in visiting London may be equal to ours in receiving you, that the reunion of 1901 may be the means of renewing many old friendships and forming many new ones, and that the event may fully sustain the enviable reputation already achieved by the "London Old Boys."

THE HOME CITY

AND COMMERCIAL METROPOLIS OF WESTERN ONTARIO

LONDON is a pretty place and all that. Everybody says so, and every writer declares that it is. Those who have ever lived here, on returning exclaim with emphasis, "There's no place like home"—meaning London. They like its stately maples, its wide avenues, its grassy boulevards, its healthy atmosphere, its pure water, its moral people, its model educational edifices, its beautiful churches, its home-like homes, (it is a fact that more people own their homes in London than any city on the North American Continent,) and has long held the lowest death rate of any city in Canada.

Present and former citizens have visited the proudest and largest cities of Europe and America, but in all their travels they declare they saw none cleaner, more inviting, or more homelike than London. The stranger within our gates who sees London for the first time, exclaims: "What a pretty city!"

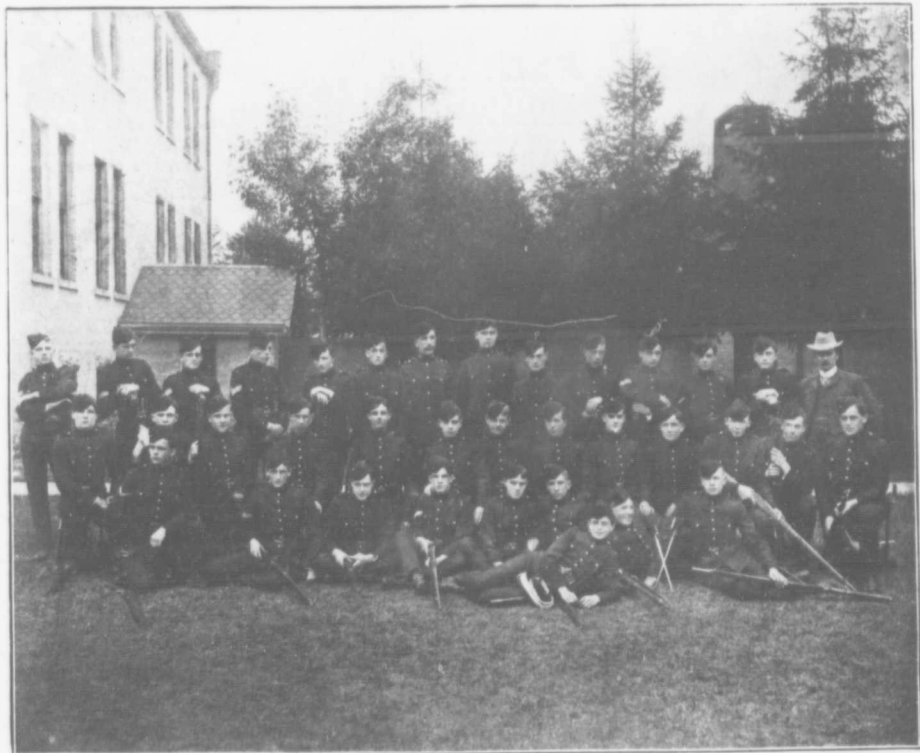

This is all true, all nice to know, and we like to hear it, but London does not stop at being pretty and attractive. It is a bustling commercial and manufacturing centre. It has some of the largest wholesales and some of the largest manufacturing concerns in Canada. These are here because of the central position of London, and because of the exceptional shipping facilities it affords. It has room for many more, and when English and American capitalists begin to place their money in Canadian investments, many more will come, because London will surely be one of the first cities to be considered.

London is not situated on a lake—it is none the worse off for that. Its nearest port is twenty-four miles to the south, on Lake Erie, but its wide-awake people have overcome any disadvantage that might accrue to an inland city by building a railway to the lake. This line of railway, together with stations, bridges and all necessary buildings, is owned by the city of London, but operated by the Detroit and Lake Erie Railway, which has facilities for ferrying coal from the mines across the lake, giving London manufacturers the advantage of cheaper coal than their competitors in other Canadian cities.

Owning this little twenty-four mile stretch of railway, besides giving the citizens a most beautiful summer resort, gives London shippers and manufacturers great advantages. It connects London direct with the Michigan Central Railway, the Wabash System, and the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway, which now has a complete system of its own from London to the Detroit River. In addition to these great commercial arteries, London has the main line of the Grand Trunk, with the Sarnia branch, the St. Mary's branch, and the London Huron and Bruce Railway; also the main line of the great Canadian Pacific Railway. Indeed no other Canadian city has greater shipping facilities than London, which makes it the thriving manufacturing centre that it is, and one most attractive to those seeking to establish new industries. Another fact worth noting is that more trains come into and go out of London in a day than any city in Canada. Surrounded by the very best farm lands in the world, with no city of any importance nearer than 110 miles, it makes London the chief market of the west.
